Kelley, Hooker sign clean-up settlement

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

Attorney General Frank Kelley and Hooker Chemical Co. signed a $15 million cleanup settlement Wednesday which defuses a "toxic time bomb" caused by the chemical leakage in Muskegon County's White Lake.

The unprecedented out-of-court settlement was signed by Hooker Co. President Donald Baeder and Kelley at a press conference in Lansing.

Baeder also presented Kelley with a $1 million check as part of the agreement to cover the state's administrative costs in handling the suit against the company.

Kelley's suit stems from charges that Hooker Chemical's Montague plant is responsible for the seepage of several poisonous and carcinogenic chemicals into White Lake.

The chemicals allegedly seeped into the lake from a 900-acre dump site near the plant which contains about 20,000 44-gallon drums — many rusted and leaking the toxic chemicals C-56 and HCB.

THE DUMP SITE in Montague consists of sandy-porous soil which does not block seepage.

The fish in White Lake have been contaminated and are considered poisonous and unfit for human consumption. The lake should not be used for swimming or drinking water, said Fumio Matsumura, director of MSU's Pesticide Research Center which analyzed the lake water.

The Kelley-Hooker settlement still must be approved by the Ingham County Circuit Court. The agreement will be heard by Judge Michael G. Harrison next Monday.

Occidental Petroleum Corp., Hooker's parent firm, set aside $2 million which will be made available for 50 years to guarantee that Hooker complies with the agreement.

The agreement includes constructing clay vaults with 10-foot-thick walls which will hold chemical wastes from the Montague plant.

A ground water barrier well and purification system to charcoal filter the water of White Lake was also included in the agreement.

Department of Natural Resources Director Howard Tanner explained at the conference that a court monitored environmental system for White Lake would be put into effect.

HOOKER CHEMICAL IS forbidden to sell any of the company's land without the expressed consent of the Attorney General. Kelley called it an unprecedented "covenant."

"This is the best design (clay vaults) we can bring forward for the people of White Lake," Tanner said. "Twenty billion gallons of ground water will be purged to protect White Lake."

Hooker chemical faces no criminal charges or punitive damages as a result of the seepage because Kelley filed a civil suit and the company is settling out of court.

Kelley commended Occidental Chairperson Armand Hammer for settling the suit and not dragging it for years through a legal battle in the courts.

"He could have presented legal defenses that I could not have penetrated," Kelley said. (continued on page 16)

Residence hall rapes high, recent study reports say

By MOLLY MIKA
State News Staff Writer

Women are not protected from rape in their residence halls, apartments and houses, and must take precautions, a recent study shows.

The Saginaw County Rape Crisis Center reports that the highest percentage of rapes occur in the victim's residence, not in dark alleys.

Lt. Donald Cleaves of Department of Public Safety, said two of the 14 sexual assaults which have been reported to the DPS this year have occurred in residence halls.

Cleaves said one case of sexual assault occurred after a woman opened the side door of her residence hall to a stranger after the front doors had been locked for the night.

IN THIS CASE, the man followed her to her room and they chatted a while — long enough for him to see that her roommate was gone for the weekend. He left, only to return two hours later, when he knocked on the door and then raped her, Cleaves said.

"If the administration would purchase viewfinders and chainlocks for each door, these would be an excellent tool to prevent sexual assault in the residence halls," he added.

Some precautions to take, Cleaves said, include not admitting any strangers through the side door after the front doors are locked for the night.

He advises women to keep their doors locked and to know who is at the door before opening it.

Gary North, director of the campus housing program, said the residence halls are among the safest places to live when the residents exercise good judgment.

"People have to be responsible for themselves and be reasonably cautious in deciding who they will live with, entertain, and go out with," North said.

WOMEN WHO LIVE off campus are advised by DPS to check the safety of the apartment or house. Residents may petition the manager or landlord to provide lights at all entrances, and to trim or remove bushes if they cover a window or could hide an attacker.

Cleaves said women should use only a first initial, not a full name, on the mailbox and in phonebooks.

There should be strong locks on all doors, preferably dead bolt locks with chains, and viewfinders. The door should not be opened unless the caller is known, Cleaves said.

If a service person is expected, ask that identification be passed through the chainlock or slipped under the door, he said.

Women who live in apartments should know that a person with a key in his hand does not necessarily live in her building. The following procedure is suggested by Andrea Medea and Kathleen Thompson "Against Rape."

"Be a lady and wait until he opens the front door. If a man is coming into the building behind you, pull the locked front door shut after you enter, even if it will be obvious to him that you are shutting him out."

CLEAVES SUGGESTS THAT a visitor who has just "rung the buzzer" should be allowed to wait to see if his friend is home. Apartment dwellers can avoid admitting strangers through the front door by using the outside speaker system.

If there is a suspicious person on the same elevator, Medea and Thompson advise women to push the emergency button and all floor buttons and then get off at the first floor it stops at.

When returning home at night, a woman should have her keys ready before she reaches the door. Also, if someone is watching her, she should not show him where she lives by going straight home.

Be aware of places an attacker might hide, such as under stairs. Medea and Thompson also advise women to know which neighbors can be trusted in an emergency.

All windows should be in place and have locks. Window locks should be set so there is not even room for a small child to crawl through. Curtains or blinds should be on every window.

Medea and Thompson note that there may be a statute that allows a tenant to keep a dog for protection even though the lease does not permit it.

When you have safeguarded your home, go outside and see if there is not some way you can break in, they added.

together on a Middle East peace mission," he said.

That the future depends on the willingness of each group to meet the challenge of opening up the lines of communications, Jackson added.

AFTER HIS SPEECH Jackson met with various members of the Black, Jewish and Arab communities. One Jewish spectator became offended when he thought Jackson was trying to shake his hand before a photographer. Jackson said that he was not trying to offend the spectator nor was he seeking publicity. He said that he was simply trying to extend a "hand in kindness."

Jackson is the leader of Operation PUSH (People United to Save Humanity), a Chicago based activist group. He first became involved in the civil rights movement in the 1960s under the guidance of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. Jackson is now working on "Excel" an educational project of Operation PUSH.

Jackson's speech concluded the seventh annual conference on counseling minorities. The conference dealt with ways to provide mental health services to minorities.

Jackson asks for communication for understanding cultural needs

By PAMELA PENN
State News Staff Writer

The key to ending the Black English controversy lies behind making a firm commitment to understand the situation, the Rev. Jesse Jackson said at MSU Tuesday.

Jackson, speaking at the closing banquet of the seventh annual conference on Counseling Minorities at Kellogg Center, said that the impediment of Black speech stems from American society fragmenting the black culture.

The survival of the Black culture is not merely adapting to that which is," Jackson told panelists, guests and students, "but conquering that which must be."

Earlier this year a federal judge in Detroit ruled that 11 Ann Arbor children had been discriminated against when their instructors did not recognize their speech disability.

The ruling established that school districts must take into account problems that inner city students have with standard English. It also stated that school districts must establish special programs to correct these impediments.

JACKSON SAID THE issue of Black

English should create a challenge for those who assume that the problems that exist in the world cannot be changed.

"We must force a change of what is to that which must be," Jackson said.

An open line of communication is the only means of developing an understanding of cultural needs, Jackson said. One of his primary reasons for going to the Middle East was to establish that line of communication.

"I don't believe in isolation politics," Jackson said. Talking with people may lead to a change of mind or a change of heart.

The United States has too much at stake in the Middle East to just ignore the Palestinians' interest, Jackson said. The Palestinian Liberation Organization is a government in exile with top editors and communicators in the Middle East, he said.

"They cannot just be wished away or ignored."

"WE HAVE A lot to gain by talking and not ignoring each other," he said. "By talking we can modify the situation."

Jackson urged Blacks, Jews and Arabs to open their lines of communication here in the United States also.

"We ought to talk, we ought to go

Energy usage efficient at MSU

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

Editor's note: This is the third of a four-part series dealing with energy, its alternatives, sources, and implications for American society. The third part examines how MSU has been dealing with energy concerns since the turn of the century.

Concern over energy usage is usually thought of as a new problem, but energy conservation has been a practice at MSU for decades.

"The University has been interested in making prudent use of energy since the turn of the century," said Theodore Simon, assistant vice president of the MSU Physical Plant.

MSU's power plant uses a system known as co-generation, which allows it to use about 70 percent of all the possible BTUs in a pound of coal, Simon said.

Typical coal plants only get 35 to 38 percent efficiency out of the coal, he added.

Basically, the way MSU's co-generation system works is that steam produced in boilers is used to heat buildings on campus, but before the steam leaves the power plant, it drives turbines to generate electricity.

MOST POWER PLANTS use steam only to drive turbines.

If a conventional power plant was used here, it is estimated that an additional 500 railroad cars of coal a year would be needed to provide MSU's needs.

When a co-generation plant provides heat to more than one building via a linking system, it is known as district heating.

"There has been a district heating system here in some form or another since the turn of the century," Simon said.

"The University has built on that concept over the decades," he added. "Today we have one of the most efficient systems in the country, if not the world, in a university setting."

The first co-generation plant on the campus was built in 1905.

'Bag-house' reduces pollution output

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

Although MSU's power plant may be one of the most efficient coal plants around, for years it has been plagued with pollution problems, just as many other coal-burning plants.

In order to clean up its act, MSU has begun installing air pollution control devices in a project which will be completed next year, said Paul Nilsson, MSU director of Automotive and Utilities Services.

The problem surfaced in 1969 when MSU was warned by the Department of Public Health (now the Department of Natural Resources), that excessive pollution was coming from the power plant.

MSU's solution to the problem, Nilsson said, was simple enough — the plant switched from coal to natural gas.

AT THE TIME, Nilsson explained that gas was only two-thirds the price of coal, and with natural gas, there was no pollution problem.

"Unfortunately, the gas supply was interrupted, the plant was switched back to coal, an operation that takes about one half-hour to accomplish," he said.

However, in 1974, when the plant was again burning coal, the University was once more warned by the DNR about pollution from the plant.

By that time, Nilsson said, it was apparent by just looking at the smokestacks that something had to be done.

Solving the problem was not easy, however.

"We had a long session of meetings with the state and the DNR," Nilsson said. "The DNR said you absolutely must do it (clean up the plant), the state apparently did not want to make the funds available."

THE STATE, HE added, wanted to make sure the problem couldn't be solved by simple means, such as changing the type of coal used by the plant before they made a major investment.

Thompson's vice presidential duties undefined

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

Although Kenneth Thompson has been serving as vice president for operations since July, a formalized outline of his responsibilities is not expected to be approved until January.

The position of vice president for operations was created by President Cecil Mackey before he officially took office in August. Thompson, Mackey's candidate for the position, was then approved by the Board of Trustees at an annual salary of $58,000.

Thompson is currently working with Mackey to define his role in the newly created position. In addition to this Thompson also does "anything the president asks me to do." Specifically, Thompson said he has been working on budget placement, priorities for construction and a project to obtain more equipment for the computer science department as well as other assignments.

When Thompson's responsibilities are formally approved he is expected to be in charge of long range planning and finances. He also said he anticipates his duties will "be in the non-academic area."

ANALYSIS

THOMPSON'S APPOINTMENT to MSU marks the third administration he has worked on with Mackey. Previously he served as vice president for finance and administration at Texas Tech University and as vice president for administration at the University of South Florida.

Thompson said that when he was appointed to these positions he moved into "existing vacancies" which were later modified by Mackey to fit the administration's needs.

His appointment as vice president for operations at MSU has resulted in some tension among top level administrators.

"I can't say that I've felt it (the tension) but I would be surprised if there wasn't any," Thompson said.

When Thompson worked with Mackey in the two previous administrations his duties were similar to those of the vice president for business and finance at MSU.

These duties include University financing as well as management of campus housing and service, maintenance and the physical plant.

"UNTIL A PLAN (for Thompson) has been approved by the president and the Board of Trustees I am really in no position to comment," said Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance, about Thompson's responsibilities.

"You can't necessarily set a timetable for this type of thing," Mackey said.

Mackey said because he has also appointed four new administrators since he took office in August defining the responsibilities of the vice president for operations has taken some time.

Mackey added that as he becomes more familiar with MSU his view of Thompson's responsibilities sometimes change slightly.

If a formal outline of Thompson's responsibilities are approved in January, he will have been on the University payroll for six months without any formal duties in his position.

Imprisonment of dissidents produces protest

(AP) — Western Europeans, from arch-conservatives to Communists, joined in rare unanimity Wednesday to deplore a Prague court's imprisonment of five Czechoslovakian dissidents.

Many said Tuesday's subversion convictions were a gross violation of the Helsinki accords on human rights, and there were comments of outrage from Communists in France, Italy and the Netherlands.

The United States condemned Prague's action and said U.S. relations with the Communist government could be harmed. "It is a matter of serious concern to us that the Czechoslovak government has again punished some of its own citizens for attempts to exercise their fundamental rights," State Department spokesperson Hodding Carter said.

The only official Soviet word on the sentences was a report, without comment, by the news agency Tass on Wednesday. But dissident Soviet leader Andrei D. Sakharov said Czech activists were "unjustly persecuted" and appealed to Czech leaders to reduce their sentences.

In a statement distributed to Western reporters in Moscow, Sakharov said the dissidents were "groundlessly accused" of anti-state activities, slander and damaging the principles of detente.

Brezhnev surfaces after 16-day absence

MOSCOW (AP) — President Leonid I. Brezhnev stepped back into public view Wednesday, six days after rumors began circulating throughout the world that the 72-year-old Soviet leader was dead.

Brezhnev appeared at an airport welcoming ceremony for South Yemeni leader Abdul Fattah Ismail and then opened talks in the Kremlin with Ismail, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

Soviet television showed Brezhnev standing motionless on the airport tarmac, bundled in a dark coat and muffler. Temperatures in Moscow have dipped below freezing, and there have been occasional light snow flurries.

A 10-second television film clip of the arrival ceremony gave no clear hints to Brezhnev's condition because it did not show him walking or talking.

The television coverage also did not show Brezhnev greeting the hardline Yemeni leader. The traditional airport greeting for such a staunch ally normally would have included an exchange of kisses on both cheeks.

Rumors of Brezhnev's death or severe illness were sparked last week during a visit to Moscow by Syrian President Hafez Assad.

Old vaccination will do until new one found

BOSTON (AP) — A federal report recommends developing a new vaccine against whooping cough but says children should still take the shots currently available, even though they sometimes have dangerous side effects.

The report found that if vaccinations were stopped, the disease would be 71 times more common in the United States than it is now. Almost four times as many children would die from whooping cough than die from complications of the vaccine itself.

Whooping cough is a highly contagious disease caused by a bacteria. It is most dangerous among children under 2. They are plagued by fits of coughing followed by a gasping intake of breath that sounds like a whoop.

Until about 30 years ago, the disease was a leading killer of children in this country, and it still is a major cause of death in developing countries.

The study, directed by a doctor at the federal Center for Disease Control, concluded "that the benefits of vaccination outweigh the risks and that the savings outweigh the costs." But it added that there is a need for "development of a less toxic vaccine."

Natural gas explosion rocks Virginia building

STANARDSVILLE, Va. (AP) — A natural gas explosion leveled the Greene County government building Wednesday, injuring 15 persons who had fled outside moments before when a supervisor dashed in and "told everybody to get on out."

The resulting fire also gutted the adjacent courthouse building.

"We got all of the people out before it blew," Sheriff Harold Chapman said.

"I ran out with a pen in my hand. That's all I saved," said Alice Mooney, secretary to the county school board. About 25 to 30 people were in the building, she said.

No one was killed in the explosion that occurred after a backhoe working on an addition to the office building ruptured a gas line about 10:15 a.m.

A construction supervisor raced inside to warn workers. Minutes later, the two-story brick building that houses most county offices was reduced to rubble.

"We had somewhere around 10 minutes before it blew. They came in and told everybody to get on out" when the line ruptured, said Hunter Birchhead, vocational director for schools in the rural county in north-central Virginia.

Mother Nature fooling around with spring

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Spring returned to this old port city in October this year as hundreds of trees that were stripped of their leaves by Hurricane Frederic suddenly sprouted blossoms.

Acres of Japanese magnolias, plum, crab apple and other fruit trees are in bloom, thanks to the 130 mph winds of the September hurricane.

It's not unusual for trees stripped of their foliage to bloom again, horticulturists say. It just looks peculiar when such vast numbers are in flower in the fall.

Max McGill, assistant superintendent of city parks, said trees that lost 60 percent or more of their leaves are the ones in bloom. He said the trees were turning green to build up a food supply for winter.

"It's hard to predict for next spring since the new growth will fall victim to frost," said McGill. "I'm afraid the Oriental magnolias will not bloom in the spring."

McGill said the city, noted for its azaleas and shady oaks, lost approximately 15,000 trees to Frederic.

He said in one city park alone 250 to 300 trees were destroyed.

High doctors' fees result of no competition

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Medical Association has kept doctors' bills high by campaigning against competition among physicians, the Federal Trade Commission ruled Wednesday.

The FTC, in a decision likely to be appealed to the federal courts, said the AMA illegally restrained competition among its 200,000 members, a majority of American physicians.

It ordered the AMA to end "ethical" restrictions on member doctors — restrictions ruling out advertising and other ways of attracting patients through low fees.

"Consumers lack access to fee and other information necessary to make an informed choice of a physician," the decision by Commissioner David A. Clanton said. "Information obtained by word-of-mouth does not fill this need."

Clanton said it is impossible to say how much extra Americans pay physicians because of the AMA actions, "but we are convinced that the record in this case supports a finding of substantial injury."

EFFORT TO AVOID A TRAGEDY

Carter approves aid to Cambodia

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter committed the United States government Wednesday to providing $69 million in aid to Cambodia in an effort to avert "a tragedy of genocidal proportion."

Carter's proposal came little more than an hour after Sen. Edward M. Kennedy criticized the administration for moving too slowly to aid millions of Cambodians who face starvation.

The president's announcement and Kennedy's criticism followed approval by the House Foreign Affairs Committee of a bill authorizing the expenditure of $30 million to aid the Cambodians. Carter included that $30 million in the program he announced.

Carter, equating the famine in Cambodia with the World War II Holocaust, announced his plans in the White House press room, telling reporters:

"WE NOW FACE once again the prospect of avoidable death. We must act swiftly to save the men, women and children who are our brothers and sisters in God's family."

In addition to the $30 million approved by the House committee, the president's program for aid over the next year included

$3 million in existing refugee aid, $20 million in commodities under the Food for Peace program, $7 million that he promised last week and $9 million in refugee funds to be sent to Thailand where Cambodian refugees are gathered.

Carter said he was certain of getting congressional approval for the program. "We will do our share," he told a group of religious leaders before his announcement. "I can be sure Congress will go along with our request."

Meanwhile, three U.S. senators visited Phnom Penh on Wednesday and said only final Cambodian approval is needed to begin a massive aid effort.

SEN. JAMES SASSER, D-Tenn., John Danforth, R-Mo., and Max Baucus, D-Mont., briefed Cambodian foreign minister Hun Sen and said they found him "appreciative, generally appreciative." They said they were told it would be up to Cambodia's Communist Party Central Committee to give final approval to the relief plan.

Administration officials have said millions of Cambodians face starvation. After Carter's announcement, the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University and head of a private relief group, said Cambodia had a population of 8 million a decade ago, but that has been reduced now to 4.7 million. He said 3 million surviving Cambodians are "in dire danger of starvation."

In his speech to a Georgetown University audience, Kennedy urged a massive airlift of food and medicine to Cambodia and said the administration had been slow to support such a program.

Before Carter's announcement, the Massachusetts Democrat said the money the administration had proposed thus far "is only a first installment compared to the need that now exists."

Shah undergoes cancer surgery

By ARTHUR EVERETT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Surgeons removed the shah of Iran's gallbladder Wednesday and checked to see if his long-standing cancer of the lymph glands had worsened. A spokesperson for the deposed ruler said "recovery without complications is anticipated."

Outside his East Side hospital, as Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi went under the knife, about 150 demonstrators chanted "Death to the shah!" and waved banners that read, "A peaceful death is too good for the shah!"

The spokesperson for Pahlavi, Robert Armao, said following the 2-and-one-half-hour surgery that the shah would be hospitalized for two to three weeks.

Armao added that Pahlavi had suffered from lymphoma, or lymph gland cancer, for about six years, but that recently an intermittent jaundice had signaled that something was wrong with the gallbladder or the bile duct leading from the liver.

"HE DID NOT wish it to be known," Armao added of the lymphoma.

The demonstrators, mostly men, were kept behind police lines and their chanting and shouting was out of earshot of Pahlavi and members of his family and retinue.

By contrast, inside New York Hospital-Cornell Medical center, four Iranian women in American dress kept a prayer vigil for the shah. Said one of them, "The royal family is alone and I just wanted to lend my support."

The operation was begun during the morning with Dr. Benjamin Kean, personal physician of the former Iranian ruler, joining a team that also included Dr. Burton Lee, a noted lymphoma specialist.

Lymph glands are found throughout the body, and lymphoma takes various forms. Armao said that "analysis of the lymphoma is in progress."

THE SURGEONS FOUND stones in the shah's gallbladder and the bladder was removed. A stone also was removed from the common duct, the main tube carrying bile from the liver to the small intestine, as part of the body's digestive system.

The operation was completed shortly before noon and the shah was taken to a recovery room, according to a report relayed to Armao.

"He is far from breathing his last breath, but obviously he is an ill man," Armao said before the operation.

The shah was provided his own guards, augmented by security forces from the hospital.

HOUSE REVERSES ITSELF ON VOTE

Gas price controls kept

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bowing to the wishes of the Carter administration, the House reversed itself Wednesday and voted to retain price and allocation controls on gasoline through mid-1981.

The 225-189 turnout vote came amid expressions of dismay by congressional leaders over soaring oil-industry profits.

"It's a disgrace to the nation. It's just an absolute and utter disgrace," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said of the large third-quarter profits recently announced by some major oil companies.

The House action overturned a 191-188 vote taken on Oct. 12 for immediate and full gasoline decontrol — action some critics said might have sent prices at the pump soaring toward $2 a gallon.

The vote means the controls, which opponents claim have done little to check spiraling prices at the pump, will stay on until Sept. 30, 1981, when they are set to expire automatically.

Knocking price and allocation controls off gasoline would create serious confusion in the energy marketplace, said Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., who led the reconsideration effort.

He called immediate decontrol "not very well thought out."

But Rep. James A. Courter, D-N.J., author of the decontrol amendment, defended his proposal, claiming it would make gas lines less likely in the future by shucking the government's complex allocation system.

And, Courter argued, "controls don't stop prices from increasing."

Administration officials, siding with Dingell, contended abrupt gasoline decontrol would hamper the orderly phase-out of energy price controls sought by the president.

Wednesday's House vote leaves intact the president's decision to phase out price lids gradually on U.S.-produced crude oil by 1981. It also has no effect on heating oil or diesel fuel, which are already free from price controls.

SN photographers win recognition in competition

Two State News photographers have been recognized for photographic excellence in two recent contests. Also honored was Joseph P. Lippincott, photographic manager of The State News, the Best Sports Photo Award for July in the National Press Photographers Association competition. The results of the competition were announced in the October edition of News Photographer magazine.

Deborah J. Borin, a junior majoring in art education, was awarded honorable mention in the annual Inland Daily Press Association competition for her photograph of the MSU baseball team after its Big Ten championship victory.

Robert Stern, a former State News photographer, who graduated from Justin Morrill College in June, also received an honorable mention, in portrait personality for a photograph made during Reserved Officers Training Corps field exercises.

More than 1,500 entries were submitted from 511 daily newspapers throughout the United States and Canada. The competition was sponsored by the University of Indiana School of Journalism.

NINE FROM MSU

Students selected for Rhodes reps

By GERRY SKOCZYLAS

Nine MSU students have taken the first step toward the highest academic prize of all — the Rhodes Scholarship.

It was announced this week that the following nine students have been selected as MSU's representatives in the prestigious scholarship competition.

They are: Eric Berglund, theatre and computer science; Stephen Dull, James Madison College; Lia Gaggino, physiology; Ronald Gizzi, JMC; Barbara Greenfield, psychology; Michael Longaker, psychology; Gary Martin, botany; Thomas Morton, math; and Stephen Scherr, math.

These nine students were chosen from a field of 24 University applicants. Five of the nine will go on to the Michigan competition, with the other four competing in their home states of Ohio, New York, and Illinois.

ONLY TWO CANDIDATES are then selected from each state. They go on to regional competition where 32 scholarships are actually awarded in the entire country.

A Rhodes Scholarship is a two-year student program at Oxford University in England with all expenses said.

The scholarship program was established in 1902 by British politician and financier Cecil J. Rhodes "for the purpose of promoting unity among the English-speaking peoples of the world."

Rhodes is the man for whom the central African country of Rhodesia (now Zimbabwe-Rhodesia) was named.

MSU's nine representatives in the competition began applying last spring. It consisted of assembling letters of recommendation, grade transcripts, and a personal autobiography that each worked on through the summer.

THE 24 APPLICANTS then went through interviews earlier this month and that is where the nine University representatives were chosen.

The official criteria states that the University selection committee should look for students with "literary and scholastic attainments; truthfulness, courage, devotion to duty, sympathy for and protection of the weak, kindness, and fellowship."

"But quality of both character and intellect is the most important requirement for a Rhodes Scholarship."

James H. Pickering, director of the Honors College and MSU Rhodes Scholarship Liaison Officer admits that the criteria "sounds like the requirements for the Boy Scouts."

"What we're really looking for," Pickering said, "is students of outstanding achievement and potential leadership ability."

PICKERING ADDED THAT the criteria states candidates should be of sound character with some aptitude for athletics, so these students do not fit into the "egghead" or "bookworm" stereotypes.

The candidates are realistic about their chances, which are slim because of the fierce competition and the number of applicants involved nationwide.

But, MSU has had eight Rhodes Scholars in its history and five of those have been since 1972.

"It's not something I'm planning my life around," said candidate Stephen Scherr, "but it is an interesting prospect."

Scherr, along with Eric Berglund, Stephen Dull and Barbara

Greenfield, have been chosen as University candidates for the Marshall Scholarship program as well.

MIKE LONGAKER, A MEMBER of last year's NCAA Championship basketball team, added that the selection process is very exciting.

"It's an honor just to be among the University representatives," he said.

Many famous athletes and personalities have been Rhodes Scholars. Among them are former New York Knick Bill Bradley, Los Angeles Rams quarterback Pat Haden and singer-actor Kris Kristofferson.

Residents discuss new Dayton Hudson proposal at hearing

By MICHAEL VEH

State News Staff Writer

Increases in traffic from the proposed Dayton Hudson mall were weighed against increases in tax revenues by East Lansing residents at a public hearing Tuesday night.

The mall proposal, which will appear on the Nov. 6 ballot as proposal "C," features a two-level shopping mall and residential areas that will be built near U.S. 127 and Lake Lansing Road.

Daniel Swantko, project director of Dayton Hudson, also spoke Tuesday and attempted to counter some of the charges against the mall.

Increased traffic due to the mall was a major concern to many area residents.

Phillips Andersland, 901 Woodingham Dr., pointed out that the traffic situation in East Lansing is a "very real problem."

SHE SAID CARS often travel through the residential areas only because of heavy traffic at the roads and intersections.

James Anderson, MSU humanities professor and coordinator for Citizens for a Livable Community, a major mall opponent, said there are some "nasty traffic problems that will come from the mall."

Other issues raised by citizens were taxes and the effect the mall would have on existing businesses in the area.

COMMISSIONERS PAY UP 51%

Board receives pay hike

By SUSIE BENKELMAN

State News Staff Writer

Salaries of the Ingham County Board of Commissioners will be increased by an average of 51 percent in 1981, the board voted Tuesday night.

The pay hike will be the first the board has received in more than 10 years, said Commissioner Alfreda Schmidt, R-Lansing. Schmidt called the move a compensatory one, but also said this year is a "delicate time" to increase public officials' pay.

The most drastic increases affect positions of vice chairperson of the commission and chairperson of the finance committee. The vice-chairperson's salary will be raised from $6,000 a year to $11,000 a year, an increase of 83 percent.

The finance committee chair salary will be hiked from $5,500 to $11,000, an 81 percent increase.

THE STRAIGHT SALARY for commissioners will be raised from $5,500 a year to $7,500, a 36 percent increase.

The resolution was introduced by Commissioner Mark Grebner, D-East Lansing, who said the increases must be made to keep experienced people on the board.

"The board has burned out a lot of people," Grebner said. "People have to put in a lot of time here, and it significantly disrupts their full-time occupation."

Grebner said that compared to other Michigan county boards of commissioners, salaries for the Ingham County Board rank as poorly as other major counties.

Pay hikes for county judicial positions were also approved Tuesday. Circuit, Probate, and District court judges will receive 7 percent increases beginning in January 1980.

CERTAIN ELECTED OFFICIALS in the county will also receive 7 percent pay increases next year. Affected by the increase will be the county treasurer, register of deeds, drain commissioner, county clerk and the prosecuting attorney.

In other business, the board defeated a resolution to support the Dayton Hudson proposal in East Lansing.

Commissioner Carl Evanoff, R-Lansing, proposed the resolution, saying that the mall will have tremendous economic value to both East Lansing and Ingham County.

Grebner said that the commission would be taking a dangerous step if they supported the Dayton Hudson proposal, to be on the East Lansing ballot Nov. 6.

"It shouldn't be on the board floor," Grebner said. "It just causes us to spend time with issues that have nothing to do with the workings of county government."

Commissioner Gary Anderson, R-East Lansing, said the board should recognize the benefits the mall would have on the county, such as increased revenue and employment.

County board requires time cards; sheriff charged with 'corruption'

By SUSIE BENKELMAN

State News Staff Writer

Attempting to prevent alleged corruption by the sheriff, the Ingham County Board of Commissioners voted Tuesday to require county employees to fill out time cards.

The resolution was introduced by commissioner Mark Grebner, D-East Lansing, who charged the sheriff Sunday with "petty corruption," resulting from misuse of time cards.

Grebner claimed that Sheriff Kenneth L. Preadmore's wife, Jacqueline, has been getting paid for hours that she has not worked. Mrs. Preadmore is the jail Matron. Grebner charged the sheriff with pocketing about $19,000 a year since Preadmore took office in 1961.

"The resolution will enforce the present policy of filling out time cards," Grebner said.

"Nobody has ever passed the policy as a resolution, so now we have a situation where the use of time cards has been violated and we have nothing to refer to."

GREBNER SAID HE investigated time records at the sheriff's department and found that Mrs. Preadmore had been working only on Thursdays. "She may work a few other shifts," Grebner said, "but in the first six months of 1979, she didn't work more than eight weeks."

Grebner said he noticed a disparity in signatures on the time cards with Mrs. Preadmore's name on them.

"On some of her time cards, the signature precisely matches the sheriff's signature," Grebner said, "whatever that means."

He said there are no grounds for prosecution because until now there has not been action requiring county employees to fill out time cards.

"THE POLICY WILL have to be enforced with careful scrutiny," Grebner said.

Another resolution passed by the board will prohibit the sheriff from drawing on jail food stores and from using county gasoline money for personal use.

As of 1980, Preadmore will no longer have the privilege of using food from the jail stores unless he is in the jail building.

The removal of these privileges is compensated for with a 7 percent increase in the sheriff's 1980 salary and an amendment gives him $200 a month for car expenses.

Grebner said the increase is designed to encourage Preadmore to use his own money rather than county money when purchasing gasoline and food.

The sheriff is also no longer required to live on the jail premises under the amendment.

IN RESPONSE TO the commission's action, Preadmore said he has no problem with the resolutions.

Preadmore said his wife's salary is set by the union labor negotiating committee, and he has nothing to do with it.

"With her job, she is to be available 24 hours a day," he said.

Sen. Sederburg urges tuition protest at Capitol

The proposed rally to protest high tuition rates will be more effective if students walk to the Capitol, said state Sen. William A. Sederburg, R-East Lansing.

Sederburg, speaking at the ASMSU meeting Tuesday night, said the rally will have little effect if students march only to Beaumont Tower as planned.

The tuition rates, he said, were high at MSU.

Legislators are not aware that students are complaining about high tuition, and very few representatives have colleges in their district to please, Sederburg said.

Another problem is that about 6,000 bills are proposed every two years, and most of them are introduced to please the respective representative's constituency, he added.

Students are not behind the issue in enough force, he said.

There is a ratio ceiling pertaining to how much of a university's operating cost is to be paid for by student's tuition.

The ratio is somewhere between 27 and 30 percent, said Mike Bissett, ASMSU representative.

"The rest of the costs are paid by the Legislature," he added. "But this ratio is too high for students."

Sederburg also urged ASMSU to lobby for the decriminalization of marijuana laws in the state.

He added that the bill to lower the drinking age has little chance of being passed.

Bargaining continues between Chrysler, UAW and Treasury

By JAMES V. HIGGINS

United Press International

DETROIT — In attempts to meet a noon Thursday bargaining deadline, negotiators for the United Auto Workers union and Chrysler Corp. began a home stretch bargaining push Wednesday that some expected would last all night.

Union and Chrysler representatives closeted themselves in subcommittee sessions Wednesday morning, as UAW President Douglas Fraser and union Vice President Marc Stepp met in Washington with Vice President Walter Mondale and Treasury Secretary G. William Miller on Chrysler's request for federal aid.

When he returned to Chrysler headquarters, Fraser brought news that may improve Chrysler's chances to win sufficient federal aid to stay afloat.

Fraser said government officials decided against recommending a specific aid figure — meaning there was a possibility of a greater amount of aid than the $750 million limit set earlier by Miller.

"I believe the Treasury Department will not be going in with any specific amount," Fraser said. "I think that's a decided improvement."

Pizza delivery car hits deer on campus

A pizza delivery person hit a deer with his car early Wednesday morning near Birch and Wilson roads on the MSU campus.

The driver was not injured, but the deer may have been, said Brett J. Bean, Department of Public Safety officer.

East Lansing Police reported later Wednesday seeing an injured deer running north on Harrison Road. Bean said the deer ran towards the Fisheries Building on Kalamazoo Street and then into the Red Cedar Natural Area.

"We called the Department of Natural Resources, and they said to go ahead and shoot the deer because it is probably injured," Bean said.

"I have never seen anything like this in my 10 years here," Bean said. "In a dense population you don't usually see deer."

FRASER SAID, HOWEVER, the government did not specifically say it would approve a higher aid figure for Chrysler. The company originally asked for $1.2 billion in loan guarantees.

Fraser said the Treasury Department may introduce legislation on Chrysler aid as early as next week.

Wednesday's subcommittee talks centered on important, non-economic issues.

As the final bargaining push began, negotiators were optimistic an agreement could be reached before the noon EDT Thursday negotiating deadline. The bargaining target, however, does not carry the threat of a strike by 101,000 UAW workers at the ailing No. 3 automaker.

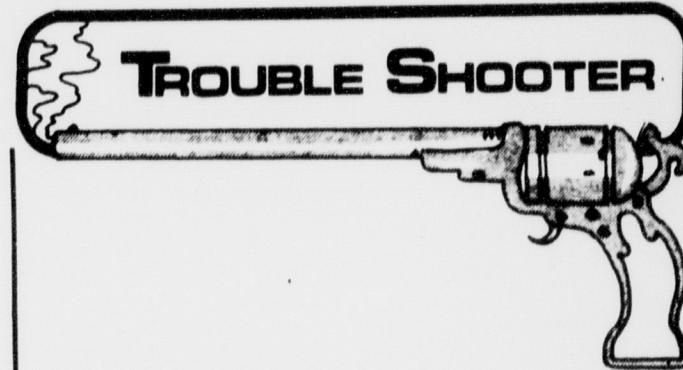

A new counter proposal offered by Chrysler on wages and benefits was "more reasonable" than an earlier offer, Fraser said, and made him hopeful a settlement would be agreed upon.

UAW LEADERS HAVE agreed to grant economic concessions to Chrysler as its part of helping keep the automaker afloat.

Fraser conceded many UAW members are not enthusiastic about getting less than earlier settlements at General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. but he said "they understand our dilemma."

OPINION

Oil tax can help to fuel the poor

A lot of us are pulling in our belts and making the dollar stretch a little more because of runaway inflation, specifically felt by rising gas prices. It seems as though the only people that aren't suffering are those in the oil industry. Third-quarter earnings for major U.S. oil companies have been released this week and show dramatic profit increases for the majority of the companies. Exxon, the world's largest oil company, reported a third-quarter gain of 118 percent over this time last year.

This phenomenon of oil companies prospering while the public is suffering from outrageous fuel prices has got to end. Oil companies, in the past, have employed the most sophisticated methods of insuring profits. Their tactics as of late have been to pump out fewer amounts of fuel at highly inflated prices, and hence wind up with increased profits. Exxon has counteracted these allegations by claiming that its profits from last quarter were gained from other countries and not at the expense of Americans. The fact that oil companies are "abusing" people abroad, and are actually "concerned" about the citizens in our country, does not merit them a halo. It is time the oil companies are forced to start paying back society for the injustices they have done them in the past.

The windfall profits tax plan designed by President Carter, can fit the bill for such a program. The title of the proposed tax plan is misleading in that it does not really include a tax on all profits of the oil companies. The tax would only take into account profits resulting from the de-control of domestic crude-oil that was initiated seven months ago.

These taxes certainly cannot hurt the prospering oil companies, and can prove to be a great contribution to the nation. The president said that revenue from the tax will be used in developing alternative energy sources and to assist poor families overburdened with high fuel costs. True — the president has promised us before development in alternative energy sources that we have not seen, but the government's commitment to fuel aid for the poor may be valid, in light of recent legislation to aid this cause. It will certainly be more beneficial to help heat the homes of otherwise freezing families than to give oil corporate executives a few extra martinis.

Community fears

Residents of a central Lansing neighborhood have justly complained to police and community leaders that their area is becoming a haven for prostitutes, pimps and other undesirables.

In response to complaints lodged by irate citizens who see the overall quality of their community rapidly declining, the Lansing Police force must take quick, decisive steps to get the situation under control. Prostitution is a problem that has destroyed a frightening number of this country's older neighborhoods. This kind of neighborhood destruction cannot be allowed to happen in Lansing.

Typical of most urban police forces, the Lansing Police force can only solve problems if they have the funds required to do so. The major problem facing these concerned residents is not one of funds, but one that involves the ranking of priorities the Lansing Police force has for addressing community issues. The citizens of the neighborhood affected cannot afford to sit around and let the problem deteriorate while the Lansing Police force thinks of the least expensive way to deal with the problem.

It is imperative that the police help these citizens in their battle to clean up the declining neighborhoods. Prostitution has not only a devastating effect on the real estate values in a community — most people would not choose to live in an area plagued by prostitution if a choice were available — but it also harms the local children. Young children should not have to be subjected to the horrors and improprieties that accompany prostitution. Raising children in this type of area makes the role of educators much more difficult, and it increases the possibility that these children will have a tainted view of the law and the morality of prostitution.

The Lansing Police force has to come up with the time and the money needed to correct this tragic problem. If they claim they do not have the money to enact a program like the crack down on prostitution in Grand Rapids, then its fiscal planning for the future is poor at best. It is much wiser to enact a valid program now than to take inadequate or token steps at eliminating the problem, only to find the prostitution worsening in the future.

VIEWPOINT: RACIST CAMPAIGN

Anti-Arab cartoons 'insulting'

By the Organization of Arab Students

The State News is partaking in an anti-Arab campaign by publishing outright racist and insulting cartoons: Arab cutting the throat of the West, Arab riding a camel and controlling oil source, and most recently on Oct. 15, Arab taking the world as a hostage at gunpoint.

It is outrageous and degrading for a student paper, which supposedly does not represent corporate interests but an intellectual and honorable community, to spread such distorted stories and promote anti-Arab racism for the benefit of corporate interests (oil companies, Zionist lobbies...) and at the expense of both American and Arab peoples' interests. Intellectual honesty and promotion of mutual understanding between the multi-racial and cultural community of MSU, and the true attributes of an educational institution have been perverted for an insidious and harmful campaign of racism.

The State News, consciously or not, is taking the side of the oil companies and Zionist lobbies which try to scapegoat the "Arabs" for all America's problems. This campaign is to fool and deceive the American people as to the real causes of their problems. Indeed the racist displays of "Arab cutting the throat of the West" through oil price increases is deeply racist, irresponsible and incorrect.

OPEC is not an "Arab" organization, it includes besides the Arab countries, Asian, Latin American and African countries (Venezuela, Ecuador, Indonesia, Nigeria, Iran...). Even so, the charge is still unsubstantiated. The OPEC was born only in 1972 to protect the producers oil riches of a Western hand — free exploiting since 1948.

The racist position deceives the American people about the real causes of their problems. Who is controlling "Saudi" Arabia? Obviously not the country's people but the United States with its 40,000 "advisors" and its oil companies. This is illustrated by the quick move by the Saudi ruling family to increase its oil production and shipments to the United States to compensate for the Iranian oil loss following Iran's revolution. A few powerful sheiks, princes and local puppets with the oil companies joined to exploit both the Arab and American people. While Arab people lack the basic requirements of life, sheiks spend billions of dollars on casinos and palace buildings. While American oil companies reap windfall profits, the American people pay higher and higher oil prices. Indeed Texaco increased its profits by 132.1 percent and Gulf by 65.3 percent during the second three months of 1979 in the midst of the so-called "oil crisis." Getty got a 149.1 percent profit increase, Shell 54.7 percent, Ashland Oil Co. 80.9 percent, and Exxon 20 percent (Exxon's profits for 1978 were $2,763 million). Moreover these companies do not pay taxes while Americans are overtaxed on any item or service. Who is raping who?

Why then all these racist campaigns? The American people who were and are being outrageously overcharged by the oil companies expressed their discontent and started addressing myth of the "oil crisis." The oil companies and related corporate interests, the real cause of the problem, diverted the American people's discontent and blamed the Arabs for all ills.

If the Arab oil is so expensive, why don't the oil companies increase the U.S. oil capacities of production which are tremendous. Indeed, according to the Ralph Nader project (consumer protection consultation) "There is, in the United States, enough oil to supply the needs of America for 2000 years at present levels of consumption..." The truth is that Arab and other countries' oil is still very cheap from the oil companies' viewpoint since they don't invest a dime and yet they reap great profits at the expense of both American and Third World countries' people.

This propaganda prepares the American people to support, or at least to tolerate a new US intervention in the Middle East. A special 100,000 man task force is being built and maneuvers of desert combat are taking place in Nevada and Utah. This is based on the lie that Middle East oil is "vital" to the United States so U.S. intervention is required to "protect" it. According to the same logic, Third World countries are entitled to send troops to America to protect the production of what and other foodstuff since the latter are "vital" to their survival.

Why is the price of manufactured and consumer goods massively produced by the West and imported by the developing countries never addressed, though it is skyrocketing? Why are supply and demand rules justified when benefiting the United States and denied to other countries? All those questions are carefully ignored and racism is enhanced instead.

The permanent propaganda of corporate interests News Media (and unfortunately The State News is joining them) is conditioning the American people by building up racist tendencies. As a result of this, a racist anti-Arab campaign is being orchestrated in different states. In this respect 60 Saudi students of the University of Wisconsin at Oshkosh have been transferred to other campuses following harassment, fights, assaults and insults. Fifty other Kuwaiti students in Oklahoma were besieged in their residence halls, beaten up, had their car smashed and thus are forced to transfer elsewhere.

VIEWPOINT: DPS

DPS instructed to ticket bikers

By ANN MARIE McINTIRE

I realize a lot of people complain about the Department of Public Safety and all the problems with parking tickets and towing, but I feel I should speak my mind as well.

Last Thursday I was on my way to an 8 a.m. class. As usual I rode my bike and had it timed so that I would walk into class at 7:59. However, such was not my luck that day.

The particular bike path I use runs parallel to West Circle Drive. I had to get to the Journalism Building and the bike path ends across the street from it. So I rode across the street but, to save my tires from damage, did not ride up the six-inch curb on the other side. Instead, I turned the bike to the right, stopped and picked the bike up over the curb and onto the lawn.

Believe it or not, a DPS car pulled up and told me to get off my bike. Being an obedient student I got off and handed him the identification he asked for. Then he went back in the car and checked out my student number over the radio as well as checking to see if my bike was stolen. (I told him I've had it since 1967 but he was just doing his duty of course.)

All this time I'm waiting to find out what I did wrong. When the officer returned, after turning on all the six red flashers atop his car, he said that I had been going the wrong way on a one-way street. I could only stare at him like "you've got to be kidding."

I didn't say a word.

LETTERS

An honest letter to not forget

I am writing in response to the letter printed in the State News on Friday, Oct. 19, written by the frustrated male. I direct my comments to him.

I found your honesty quite refreshing. You certainly paint an accurate picture of many college students today. In no way am I saying that a great deal of students are on the verge of raping someone out of sexual frustration. I am saying that in today's world of plenty, many of our basic human needs are easily left unanswered. We all need to be touched physically and mentally by other humans with sincerity and love. I have felt the desperation and loneliness you are feeling and I will probably have these feelings again.

Nevertheless, you do not have the right to take your frustrations out on other people. You state your desire for a loving relationship with a female. Rape will not alleviate this need. You are masking your other unmet needs as sexual frustration. Rape will only complicate your problems.

I suggest that you open your mouth and tell someone what you wrote here. Tell someone who will listen to you and be objective. You say you are a mature person. Whether you are or not will not change the fact that you are responsible for your life. Therefore, you are the one who must change your situation. There are people who care or will begin to care about you if you give them a chance. You must develop and nurture your relationships by responding to others in the way you wish to be responded to. It doesn't always work that way but it happens enough. It's up to you to take the first step.

Would-be needs psychiatric care

In response to the open letter of the would-be rapist on Friday, Oct. 19, the Women's Advisory Committee to the vice president of student affairs and services believes it has become a matter of extreme concern that pathological violence has once again been given preference in this public form.

It is difficult enough for women to live, work and study without the added element of paranoia generated by such a publication.

If the author of this article is in need of psychiatric care then it is our fervent hope that he will seek it.

However, the climate of sympathy that has been created for this would-be rapist through this article has once again caused women to become de facto victims. Let's face it, crimes of violence against women are generally classified as crimes of passion. Rape can get you life in prison. Isn't it time we stopped letting these criminals off the hook?

OVERTIME FOR PROTECTION REFUSED

Kennedy to be guarded in W.Va.

By DAVID GREEN

Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Refusal by the Kanawha County Commission to authorize $1,636 in overtime to protect Sen. Edward M. Kennedy during a visit here next month will in no way jeopardize the Massachusetts Democrat's safety, the Secret Service said Wednesday.

The commission voted 2-1 on Tuesday against appropriating the money to pay 23 sheriff's deputies to help city, state and federal authorities guard Kennedy during a Nov. 2 visit. He is coming to address the state Democratic Party's annual Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner.

The county historically has special responsibility for guarding dignitaries upon their arrival at the airport, which is operated by a county authority.

At the same meeting, the commission approved a measure to pay $2,352 for deputies to work overtime on Halloween.

Laurie Anderson, a spokesperson in Washington for the Secret Service, said the agency did not foresee any difficulty in protecting Kennedy.

She and the state police said their agencies would take up the slack if the sheriff's department could not provide enough help. And Sheriff Kemp Melton said he would ask deputies to donate their time if the commission did not change its mind.

"We wouldn't do anything to jeopardize our security," Anderson said.

After the number of threats against Kennedy's life increased, President Carter ordered the Secret Service to protect the senator even though he is not a formal candidate for president. Under federal law, such protection will be extended after Jan. 1 to any declared presidential candidate who qualifies for federal campaign aid.

At Shepard, the only Democrat on the commission, said the decision made the county look bad.

"I KNOW WE have some money problems, but New York City has their financial problems, too. But when a visiting dignitary comes into the city, they provide security," Shepard said.

He attributed the action to a Republican takeover of the commission at the beginning of the year.

"I know one of the Republicans is a strong supporter of Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn. I wonder what would have happened if the shoe was on the other foot," Shepard said.

The Republican to whom Shepard referred, Robert Silverstein, denied he was a supporter of Baker or that politics had anything to do with his vote. The county is low on money, he said, and he did not want to spend money on an unofficial candidate.

HE SAID HE would have voted for the overtime funds if Kennedy had been a declared candidate.

"What happens if we don't come up with the money to pay the overtime?" Silverstein asked at the meeting. Chief Deputy William Croyle, who made the overtime request, answered:

"If something happens to Kennedy, and we didn't provide the security, you'd be in trouble, commissioner."

Students at West Chester State College in Pennsylvania hold a rally to protest increases in tuition at state owned schools. Some 45,000 students in seven Pennsylvania colleges boycotted classes Wednesday over the increases.

Protestors take gov't hostages

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Armed protestors took a Cabinet minister and 30 other officials of El Salvador's new government hostage Wednesday in the Labor Ministry building and demanded the release of alleged political prisoners and witnesses, police said.

About 100 persons armed with revolvers, pistols and machetes, took over the building shortly before noon and 1,000 others milled outside the building — most of them armed with handguns, witnesses said. Labor Minister Gabriel Gallegos Valdes and Labor Undersecretary Maria Teresa de Aviles were among the hostages, a police spokesperson said.

Reporters on the scene saw no violence and there were no immediate police reports of any. Police did not intervene when the demonstrators seized the building.

Both officials took their jobs this week, sworn in by the new junta of two colonels and three prominent civilians, that replaced Gen. Carlos Humberto to Romero's rightwing regime after an Oct. 15 coup.

A spokesperson for the demonstrators identified them as members of the Popular Revolutionary Bloc, a leftist activist organization that opposes the junta and is seeking the establishment of a Marxist regime in the Central American country.

"We plan to stay in there indefinitely, until the government releases all political prisoners in the country and makes known the whereabouts or the fate of some 500 persons who disappeared while under police custody under the Romero regime," the spokesperson added.

Nuke waste dumps closed in three states

By H. JOSEF HERBERT

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — By deciding to stop or cut nuclear waste shipments into their states, three governors are signaling Washington they are unwilling to take the political heat for a national problem.

Nevada this week closed the second of the nation's only three low-level waste dumps.

A burial site in Washington state has been shut down for three weeks. Shipments to the only other site — in South Carolina — are expected to be curtailed next week.

Spokespersons for the nuclear power industry say the problem is not immediate for them since power plants have on-site storage capacity. But some officials say hospitals and research facilities will run into storage problems within a few weeks.

LEONARD FREEMAN, PRESIDENT of the Society for Nuclear Medicine, called it "an immediate crisis for nuclear medicine," which is used thousands of times a day to diagnose and treat diseases, including cancer and heart illness.

Some hospitals already have asked doctors to curtail the use of radioactive materials because of expected storage problems.

The sudden militancy by the governors of Washington, Nevada and South Carolina is an attempt to force the Carter administration to play a stronger role in the disposal of low-level wastes, an issue which could become crucial in an election year.

Almost daily, trucks have brought wastes from commercial reactors, hospitals and research laboratories around the country to the only commercial burial sites available.

"I'm just tired of having to assume the responsibility for having our people take the risks in a system that is not properly regulated," complained Nevada Gov. Robert List as he resisted attempts Tuesday to reopen the burial site near Reno.

WHAT ALSO GNAWS at the governors is that no dumps are located in areas where most of the wastes are produced — including most of the Northeast.

On Oct. 4, Washington Gov. Dixy Lee Ray, former head of the Atomic Energy Commission, closed the burial site near Richland, Wash., charging lax enforcement of shipping regulations.

On Tuesday, after List's action, Gov. Dick Riley made it clear he will not allow more waste to be diverted into South Carolina, where 80 percent of the nation's low-level radioactive garbage is already being buried. He predicted forced cutbacks in shipments next week.

The governors' specific complaints vary, but their anger is aimed at the federal government. They argue that while plans for a national program languish, the three states are becoming the dumping ground for the rest of the country.

About 60 percent of the low-level wastes are byproducts of commercial power reactors, including sludge, resins and contaminated clothing. Most of the rest comes from research laboratories and radiological treatment and diagnosis at hospitals.

FOR MORE THAN a year the Carter administration has had before it a unanimous inter-agency recommendation that the Energy Department set up regional low-level nuclear waste dumps to spread the burden.

The recommendation — part of an overall report on nuclear wastes — has awaited President Carter's decision for several months. One problem, an administration source concedes, is that the regional burial grounds are sure to spark opposition in the states for which they will be planned.

ROBERT BROWNING, DEPUTY director for waste management at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, said that the inability to dispose of wastes poses a serious problem, but he could not say how soon it might turn into a crisis.

In late 1977 the NRC urged the Energy Department to prepare a contingency plan which would allow the 14 federal waste storage sites to be opened for general use because of what the NRC said was a clear potential for interruption at the three commercial sites.

"They've been studying it ever since," said Browning. Oertel said he expects the contingency plan to be ready by January, but concedes the movement of commercial wastes to any of the government burial grounds may cause local problems as well.

DEVO advertising

Editor's Note: Welcome to the "Politics of Culture." This column will be a regular feature of The State News entertainment page, and it will deal with what its title suggests — meaning that it can deal with almost anything. The column will be an open forum — sort of the entertainment page's answer to the opinion page's "Viewpoint" — so please feel free to contribute any ideas that you may have. The times are full of possibilities, folks.

The Coca-Cola Company is planning to use talking robots to get you to buy Coca-Cola.

This is no joke, friends. I read it in the Oct. 5 Chicago Tribune, so naturally it must be true. "The 90 pound robots, or androids, as their developers prefer to call them, move on three rubber-tire feet, talk, sing, ('Have a coke and a smile'), whistle, and rotate their domes."

A Coca-Cola bottler, it seems, was interested in having a "physical mascot" for its local ad campaign. The result was a robot which comes up to you in the supermarket, waits to see what brand of pop you buy, and says "You have made a wise decision" if you buy Coke. If you go for another brand it says: "You have made an illogical decision," and attempts to persuade you to switch brands by offering to discontinue for you if you'll only buy Coke instead. These robots are being built for $3,500 each, and 41 of them are already in supermarkets in America and abroad.

Imagine it! Certainly there is nothing "illogical" about avoiding Coca-Cola, a poison which eats your stomach out and provides you with no body nourishment whatsoever to compensate for the damage. And while a decision to imbibe in this stuff is certainly my right, I am the first to admit that it is by no means "wise." But for anyone to even suggest that an ad campaign contain some semblance of truth would seem passe, hopelessly naive. Perhaps we would merely ask that advertising stay in its own place — namely someplace where we don't have to look at it, hear it, or deal with it at all — so that we could make our buying decisions based on factual information, not distorted advertising claims. But no, we have to be screamed at from our TV screens (turn off the TV), glared at by billboards and highway signs (close your eyes to work in advertising, it's much better if you have no moral character whatsoever. Then when little kids are sitting in front of the TV on Saturday morning instead of playing outside or playing with each other or reading or anything else, you can tell them that breakfast cereals and Burger King hamburgers are good for them, even though you might as well be telling them to eat Play-Dough.

But don't let me dissuade you, advertising major. Keep your nose to the grindstone, hit those books and maybe someday you can be in charge of developing the first Pepsi

I'm convinced that the advertisers won't be satisfied until they can get us to keep quiet and still while they strap us down to chairs, force-feed us their products, and then take our money out of our pockets for us. Given their nature, even at that point they still won't be happy or satisfied, but what else will they then be able to do? Kill us?

Politics of Culture

and miss the scenery too, harangued from the car radio in between every commercial pop song (switch to the public station that has to beg for funds because it doesn't sell ad time).

Everybody wants the money, the money, the money. Piles of students sign up for advertising classes, where they are told advertising performs a public service by informing potential consumers of the relative merits of this or that product. Can you believe they actually spew this hogwash here at MSU, in the name of education? It's nothing but lies, lies and more lies, and it's amazing that more advertising majors won't admit to themselves that they are being trained to be professional liars and cheats.

What else can you call it? One thing the advertising profession doesn't require of its members is a sense of moral conscience. In fact, if you want robot. Think of it: when the Coke robot tells a supermarket customer not to buy Pepsi, your robot can shout it down. If things get hot, perhaps the two can duke it out with tiny lasers. Meanwhile, the other companies will have all developed their own little robots too, all in the name of progress, and maybe they won't be the elaborate walking kind of robot, but something simpler: maybe just a mechanical hand that reaches out from the grocery shelf and sticks a can of beans in the customer's face as he or she walks down the aisle.

But this won't be enough. No,

Jay Ferguson to perform at Dooley's

Jay Ferguson and his band will be appearing at Dooley's for two shows Monday, Oct. 29 at 8 and 10:30 p.m.

Ferguson was one of the founding members of the '60s group Spirit, whose groundbreaking music combined jazz elements with intelligent rock music to create a sound that was unique and ahead of its time. Spirit recorded four albums and a number of classic songs — including "Nature's Way," "Mr. Skin," and "I Got A Line On You" — before pianist Ferguson and bassist Mark Andes left the band to form Jo Jo Gunne.

Jo Jo Gunne — the name was taken from an old Chuck Berry song — released their first album in 1972, and a single called "Run, Run, Run" became a major hit for the band. The group recorded three subsequent albums before breaking up, and Ferguson embarked on a solo career.

Ferguson first step in this direction was the album All Alone In The End Zone, which was released in 1976. This was followed by Thunder Island, the title track of which eventually went Top 10. His latest LP Real Life Ain't This Way is reportedly not so commercial as Thunder Island, yet still contains the spirit and humor of his earlier material.

Tickets for Monday's performances will be available for $7.50 at the door or for $6.50 in advance at Dooley's and both area Recordlands.

Sex and tyranny in the 14th Century

By WILLIAM BARNHARDT
State News Reviewer

What would you say to a performance that had music, burlesque, political content, moral messages, sex and poetry? For that matter, how would you like to sit there in Fairchild Theatre (as I did Tuesday night) and hear someone strum their saz and blow on their gemshorn? Well, welcome to the 1300s, folks! This is Le Roman de Fauvel.

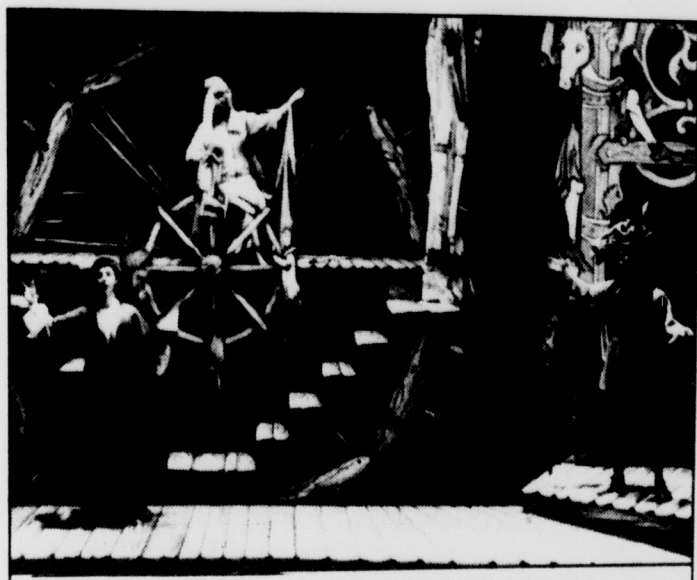

Le Roman de Fauvel is directed, researched, and to great extent performed, by Kay (a Lansing native) and Michael Jaffee and their group of 12. The Waverly Consort. The consort not only has mastered the Middle French and occasional English opretta and prose, but also the largely forgotten instruments of the Middle Ages. The local music store doesn't seem to have Fauvel: Then in the other direction?

Fortune: No way to my affection!

Even after telling her how old she's getting and that he's her "last chance," she still doesn't see the light. Since there were an abundance of graces, muses and allegories walking around back in the 1300s, Fauvel takes up with Vain Glory. (And talk about ugly . . .).

So Fauvel and Vain Glory get married and have this big festival with merriment and song and sucor and mead and all that Medieval-sounding stuff. You should see the guest list. Lechery, Avarice, Gluttony, Fornication — a good party crowd. Then the Virtues show up and cause trouble, challenging the Vices to a hearty joust.

Now you'd think Virtues would win, given the morality

Sex, vice, ribaldry, tyranny and beautiful music. It's all part of the medieval work Le Roman de Fauvel performed by the Waverly Consort in Fairchild Theatre Tuesday night.

Allan Fast is Fauvel, a not quite as wimpering and comic a donkey as perhaps intended. He sings counter-tenor, which is falsetto tenor, and outside of a few Gilbert and Sullivan opretas, it's not too common a range. He carries the trills and projection of the difficult high male register very truthfully — a perfect sound for the ass Fauvel. (In the 1300s, they used castrated boys, or "castrati," for that part. They don't do that now . . .)

Before the joust, Julianne Baird (a Virtue) sang a crystalline antiphon of faith in the eventual resolution of the world's troubles (little does she know . . .) against a background of handbells — perhaps the most beautiful moment of the Roman. The direction had complete respect for the music which is most worthy of applause, since the story could have been milked for a bawdy burlesque at the music's expense. Taste was a factor never absent Tuesday night.

Bestiality and tyranny. I tell you, those guys in the 14th Century knew how to live. But they also knew a little bit about politics and the way of the world, as well as plenty about music. The Waverly Consort have helped us know a bit about it too.

Bestiality and tyranny. I tell you, those guys in the 14th Century knew how to live. But they also knew a little bit about politics and the way of the world, as well as plenty about music.

many instruments like the shawm (close to an oboe), or the oud (rhymes with food, it's a kind of lute), or the saz (a big oud), or the rebec (an arm fiddle), or my favorites, the gemshorn (an animal horn like a flute with a haunting muted sound) and the hurdy-gurdy (a hand-cranked pipe organ with strings).

Now what's this Roman de Fauvel about? Well, it's the story of Fauvel, Fauvel being translated as an ass — a conceited, foolish, vice-filled ne'er-do-well mule. From the humble beginnings in the stable, Fauvel is elevated by the people of France to the rank of king — a definite shot at nasty old Phillip the Fair. Fauvel decides to take a wife for the purpose of breeding children, namely a lovely symbolic woman named Fortune who spends a lot of time spinning the Wheel of Chance and other fateful things. She wants nothing to do with poor Fauvel.

Fauvel: Lady, say what should I do!

Fortune: Try . . . a jump or two!
Fauvel: Up to your face so fair?
Fortune: You'll find no pleasure there . . .

Spikers host Big Ten tournament

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

The Big Ten volleyball championship begins tonight at the IM Sports-West and Sports-Circle arenas, as the Spartans spikers begin their quest for the title as tournament hosts.

MSU opens play with a 7 p.m. match against Illinois University at IM Sports-West, before taking on the University of Michigan in a 3 p.m. match Friday.

The Spartans continue pool play Friday with a match against the University of Iowa at 7 p.m. and conclude play Saturday with the University of Minnesota, the defending Big Ten champions, in an 11 a.m. match.

MSU ASSISTANT COACH Nancy Steel offered a few of her thoughts on the upcoming tournament.

"We've seen two of the teams in our pool," Steel said, "and we play better when we've seen our opponents in advance. We really want Minnesota though."

Steel, who believes the Spartans drew a very good pool, says that the Golden Gophers were justified in receiving the No. 1 seed in the tournament.

"They have a very good coach (Linda Wells) and they play a very good schedule," Steel added. "They took a trip to California earlier this season and received some tough competition from the California teams."

"THEY HAVE A lot of really good hitters and they are a very smart team as well. In the match we lost to them earlier this year, our serves and our serve reception was really bad."

Steel said that the spikers are remaining optimistic as the tournament gets under way, because both sides of their serving game are seemingly coming along well.

"Our serves could still come up a little," Steel said, "but I think we were about 91 percent in our last match."

THE SPARTANS HAVE been working particularly hard on defense and team serve reception this week in practice, as well as strengthening their technique of hiding the setter.

"If you can effectively hide your setter when you're receiving serves, it aids the receiving team because your setter is not taken out of the play by having to make the initial pass," Steel said.

Besides expected tough competition from Minnesota, Steel said that Iowa has been playing better and that Illinois is traditionally a tall, strong blocking team that is weak on defense. Michigan, a team the Spartans have beaten twice this year, has some strong players as well, but shouldn't pose a major threat to the Spartans.

Admission to this year's event will be $2 for general public and $1 for students. MSU students with a valid I.D. will be admitted free.

Big Ten volleyball: a company of sisters

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

Those who remember the old Bing Crosby and Danny Kaye movie "White Christmas" will no doubt remember the song about sisters.

This weekend's Big Ten volleyball tournament will have not only some very fine teams from around the Midwest, it also will bring together no less than six sister combinations from four different teams.

Defending champion University of Minnesota holds the record with three-and-one-half sister tandems, the half because Kathy Kraemer has a sister who competes on the Gophers' JV squad.

INDIANA UNIVERSITY'S SIBLING couple is named DeWitt, and hails from Muncie, Ind. Cindy is a sophomore, while Debbie is a senior.

The Fighting Illini from Illinois University have a pair from Orland Park, Ill., both of whom are among the tallest players on a tall squad. Liz and Margie Schwarz will be in the orange and white this weekend, with freshman Liz at 5-9 and sophomore Margie — the tallest Illini player — standing at 5-10.

The Bells, the Godwins and the Hagemeyers are Minnesota's dynamic duos, and should keep opposing players busy this weekend.

from St. Paul.

Getting a little bit closer to home, the other team which has a sister act is MSU.

THE SPARTANS OFFER Becky and Peggy Lukens of Park Ridge, Ill., and the popular Lukens sisters have provided an extremely strong back row this year. Peggy is a junior and Becky is a sophomore.

Loyal Spartan volleyball enthusiasts may remember the Hardy family of Bay City, Mich., which produced Mary Jo, Cindy and Andrea, all of whom competed for MSU.

Cindy will be back at MSU this weekend, this time donning the traditional black and white and calling points in some of the

Leading women continue to motivate runners

By CHRIS HANSEN
State News Sports Writer

Too often at major sports-oriented universities such as MSU, superb athletes are over-shadowed by those who participate in the more glamorous commercialized sports.

These superstar gladiators who will sign pro contracts with attached figures soaring into the mega-bucks, have flocking fans and constant media attention which no doubt helps motivate their performances.

By no means have they not earned this glory, but unfortunately it tends to pull recognition away from athletes who are just as dedicated and have achieved just as much success in their sports as any of those that are in the spotlight.

AND EVEN THOUGH the MSU women's cross country team has been nationally ranked in the top ten for three out of the last four years, sports fans do not seem to give them the support they deserve. Still, in the last four years, the women harriers have persevered through four different coaches and several injuries to continue to be one of the most successful varsity sports at MSU.

Two runners who have been around to see it all are seniors Cynthia Wadsworth and Lisa Berry, clearly the leaders of the women's cross country team. Wadsworth and Berry, both from Connecticut, came to MSU as high school rivals. Now, as seniors, they run in cooperative strategy.

Wadsworth appeared to be championship material as a freshman, taking second in the Big Ten championships and 17th in the nationals. Unfortunately, she then suffered a foot injury during her sophomore year which kept her out of cross country that season and most of her junior year as well. But, after three doctors, a lot of slow training and a coach that is around awhile for trust and support, Wadsworth has looked strong this season, taking fifth in last week's Big Ten competition.

Cynthia Wadsworth

Lisa Berry

TEAM CAPTAIN LISA BERRY took fifth in the Big Ten competition and continues to improve with the regionals only one week away.

Both women see the team's outlook as bright and give a lot of credit to first-year coach John Goodridge, whose relaxed style of coaching has contributed to the "working as a team" idea.

Although an apparent lack of attention from the student body doesn't affect the self-motivation and pride of Wadsworth or Berry in their sport, they would like to see people who care at the events. "I wouldn't want to be an Earvin Johnson," Wadsworth said, "but it's nice when someone recognizes your ability."

To these two women cross country running is more than a trophy that will collect dust after college. It is an inner-motivation that will keep them running in road races, which are growing in popularity and whose top contestants are being sponsored by companies like Nike, Frank Shorter Sports and other athletic equipment companies.

Ruggers win by five; two represent state

The MSU men's rugby team defeated a combined Fort Wayne-Grand Rapids squad by five tries in last Saturday's match.

Regular hooker Bruce McLaughlin played at stand-off and distributed well. Bill Harvey scored a spectacular try from a well-executed back break. Overall, the game was competitive with fierce tackling by both sides.

Varsity meeting

The Varsity 'S' Club will hold its second meeting of the year at 6:30 p.m. Sunday in the Varsity Room on the west side of the stadium.

Bowling tourney

MSU's women's bowling team is sponsoring a singles no-tap tournament at the Union Lanes at 7 p.m. Oct. 31.

No-tap means any nine pin count on the first ball is considered a strike. Each bowler will bowl three games and total pinfall will determine the winners.

Entry fee is $4 per bowler and any full-time student may enter. One out of five entries is guaranteed to win. First place is dinner for two at J. Ross Browne's Whaling Station. Sign-up will take place all day at the Union Lanes.

McLaughlin and Mike McNicolas have been selected to represent Michigan in the Midwest trials, being played in Chicago this weekend. The MSU Rugby Club had anticipated a number of players being at the trials but injuries have curtailed many plans. Captain Tony Tocco underwent surgery this week for a torn cartilage in his knee.

The ruggers will hold a seven-a-side scrimmage on the Veterinary Clinic fields at 1 p.m. Saturday. Their next official action will also be at home, against the Detroit Trademen, Nov. 3.

IM NOTES

Entry deadline for the IM wrestling tournament is noon Friday in 201, IM Sports-West. Jenison Fieldhouse is now open for jogging on Mondays and Wednesdays from 6:30 to 9 p.m. A valid I.D. must be presented in order to enter the building.

Sisters

Incidentally, none of the sister combinations in this weekend's conference championship is made up of a set of twins.

EXPLORATORY CAMPAIGN

Kennedy will be official candidate

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy will announce formation of an "exploratory" campaign committee Monday, an aide said Wednesday. That will make the Massachusetts Democrat an official candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Tom Southwick, Kennedy's press secretary, confirmed that announcement of the campaign committee will be made Monday after several sources in the movement to draft Kennedy for the party nomination said they had received indirect signals that the move was imminent.

Registration of a committee with the Federal Election Commission will make Kennedy a legal candidate, although he is not expected to formally announce his candidacy until later in the year.

Carter, who has registered a campaign committee and is expected to announce his candidacy Dec. 4, planned to address a dinner in Washington on Wednesday night. Carter campaigners said the dinner, planned as a show of strength, would attract about 500 prominent Democrats.

SEVERAL LEADERS of the draft movement, formed last spring to lure Kennedy into a race against President Carter, said they expect to convert their operations immediately to campaign status.

"We are ready to convert... from a draft to a campaign operation," said one source, who asked not to be identified.

FEC records showed 68 different Kennedy draft committees had registered as of Wednesday, but only 10 have filed financial reports showing how much money they have raised.

Those 10 committees reported raising $256,900 by the end of September and spending $164,025, mostly in Florida where Democratic party caucuses were two weeks ago.

Most of the draft committees are expected to disband after the exploratory panel is formed, but many of those who worked in the draft movement are expected to join the official campaign.

A source said Kennedy already has decided to use the mail fund-raising firm that raised money and solicited letters of support for the draft movement.

TOM MATHEWS, A partner in the mail firm, would not confirm the report but said test mailings for the draft committees indicated Kennedy "could set records" for raising money.

The draft committees were exempt from normal rules governing the amount of money that can be raised for a declared candidate.

Four largest U.S. oil companies have advantage over competitors

By MARK POTTS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Cheaper Saudi Arabian crude oil gives America's four largest oil companies a profit advantage over competitors who rely on more costly crude, industry officials say.

One of the four, Mobil Corp., said Wednesday that its third quarter profits had risen 131 percent over the corresponding period last year. Another, Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company, said Monday that profits had risen 118 percent for the quarter.

The other two companies, Texaco Inc. and Standard Oil Co. of California (Chevron), have yet to release third-quarter figures, but analysts expect them to rise by similarly hefty amounts.

Even companies without the advantage of the Saudi crude oil — which costs less than oil from other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — are turning large third-quarter earnings gains.

companies, said profits were up 64 percent and 58 percent respectively.

In Washington, the House, apparently upset by the huge profits being posted by the oil industry, reversed itself and voted 225-189 to retain price and allocation controls on gasoline through mid-1981.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said the profits were "a disgrace to the nation... an absolute and utter disgrace."

Mobil, the nation's second-largest oil company, said its profits in the third quarter were $595 million, or $2.80 a share, compared to $252 million, or $1.22 a share, in last year's third quarter. Sales rose from $9.2 billion to $12.1 billion.

For the first nine months of the year, Mobil had profits of $1.44 billion, or $6.77 a share, up 81 percent from $792 million, or $3.74 a share, last year. Sales for the first three quarters rose to $33.2 billion from $26.7 billion.

EXXON, MOBIL, TEXACO and Chevron are partners in the Arabian-American Oil Co. (Aramco), which runs the Saudi oilfields and gets the bulk of Saudi Arabia's 9.5 million barrel-a-day oil production — the most production in the non-communist world.

The four companies buy the Saudi crude oil for $18 a barrel and then either sell it unrefined for gasoline, heating oil and other products.

The average price of crude from the OPEC members is more than $20 a barrel, and Libya charges as much as $26.27 a barrel for its high-quality oil. Prices on the spot market, where oil not sold under long-term contracts changes hands, are even higher.

But while the Aramco partners are paying at least $2 a barrel less for their oil, their product prices in most places are the same as those of companies using higher-priced crude as raw ingredient.

Among the other oil companies announcing earnings Wednesday:

• Sohio said its profits rose 191 percent in the third quarter, from $125.7 million to $366.2 million. The increase was the largest so far reported by a major oil company.

• Sun said its profits in the third quarter were $174.3 million, up from $105.4 million last year.

• Cities Service said its third-quarter profits rose from $52.6 million last year to $86.1 million.

• Marathon said third-quarter profits rose from $50.5 million to $79.7 million.

Man arrested for kidnapping

A 22-year-old Lansing man was arrested Wednesday by Lansing Police in connection with the Wednesday morning abduction of a Lansing woman.

Michael Black, 919 W. Ottawa St., was arrested in connection with the kidnapping of the woman from her southwest Lansing home, police said.

Police said the woman was abducted at about 5:45 a.m. Wednesday, blindfolded and bound.

The woman was then taken to a house on Lansing's near west side and tied to a pole in the basement, police said.

Police say the woman worked herself free and escaped from the house unharmed. She contacted police soon after.

Police say the woman knew her abductor and provided a description.

Police are investigating the possibility that the woman was to be held in an extortion attempt.

NINTH MEETING IN TWO YEARS

Sadat and Begin to meet in Egypt

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP)—Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin will meet in Egypt in early December, Israel Radio said Wednesday.

There was no official confirmation of the report in Jerusalem. The state radio said Begin and Sadat would meet either in Aswan or Luxor in Upper Egypt. At their last summit, held in Haifa early last month, the two leaders agreed to meet again.

The report stemmed from a meeting held Wednesday at Mount Sinai between key advisors to Begin and Sadat to plan the early handover of the area to Egypt next month.

Sadat plans a ceremony at the site where Moses is believed to have received the Ten Commandments, on Nov. 19, the second anniversary of his historic trip to Jerusalem.

The summit would be the ninth time Begin and Sadat have met during the two-year peace process.

Elihu ben-Elissar, the head of Begin's office and his representative at the meeting Wednesday, was not available for comment after returning from Sinai. The Egyptian representative was Hassan Kamel, head of Sadat's bureau.

Meanwhile, Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil flew into London for talks with Israel about the Palestinians and told reporters that despite differences, "a lot could be achieved."

He said his government differs with Israel over details of elections and self-governments, leading to Palestinian autonomy on the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

Talks between Khalil and Israel's chief negotiator, Interior Minister Yosef Burg, were to start Thursday in a London hotel on the initiative of Robert Strauss, President Carter's adviser on Middle East affairs. Strauss will preside at the talks.

Sen. Riegle seeks 10-year federal loan guarantees for ailing Chrysler Corp.

By DONALD H. MAY

WASHINGTON — Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., Wednesday introduced legislation to allow federal loan guarantees of up to 10 years to keep Chrysler Corp., the nation's third largest automaker, from going bankrupt.

In the House, where similar legislation is pending, four Chrysler retail dealers said they and most of the nation's 4,700 Chrysler dealers and their 150,000 employees, will be out of business in a very short time if the company goes under.

Vice President Walter Mondale discussed Chrysler's request for $750 million in loan guarantees over breakfast with Treasury Secretary G. William Miller and Douglas Fraser, president of the United Auto Workers.

The administration recently got Chrysler to scale its request for loan guarantees down to $750 million from $1.2 billion, but it has not yet made up its mind what to propose to Congress.

An aide to Riegle said the senator has been "a little dissatisfied" with the administration's pace. Riegle is urging that legislation be approved before Congress quits for the year.

Under his bill, a committee composed of the secretaries of treasury, commerce and labor would have authority, until the end of 1983, to extend loan guarantees to Chrysler which would run for 10 years. He proposed Congress set a ceiling on the amount of guarantees after holding hearings.

The three member committee could extend the guarantees if it found that the company needed loans, that lack of such loans would adversely affect the economy or employment in the United States or a major region of the country, that credit is not otherwise available and that a lender would not make loans without a government guarantee.

'Dancing' horses perform at 'U' in equestrian show Saturday

In the age of John Travolta and the disco beat, even horses are getting into the act.

Ox-Ce-An, the dancing horse, will perform some disco steps as part of an act called "Ox-Ce-An and the Mane Event," at 7 p.m. Saturday at the MSU Livestock Pavilion.

The K & S Equestrians of Grand Ledge, a family who owns and trains the horses, will present the one-evening performance featuring circus horse acts and movements in dressage.

Ox-Ce-An, under the guidance of her trainer Shirley Moody, will do dressage movements, circus tricks and the latest disco steps.

Another horse called Falah, a dapple gray Arabian, will also

Lamaze method classes to begin

Lamaze method childbirth preparation classes will begin on Nov. 1 at the Association for Shared Childbirth, 1514 W. Saginaw St., Lansing.

Natural childbirth classes will meet once a week for eight two-hour sessions. Tuition is $30.

Interested persons are advised to take the class during the last three months of pregnancy.

Classes include background on the Lamaze method, anatomy and physiology of labor and birth, and exercises to strengthen muscles for childbirth.

In addition, participants are taught techniques of conscious relaxation during contraction, shown films on Lamaze and Caesarean births, and given basic information about breast feeding and parenting.

"Lamaze is a pattern of breathing which relaxes and comforts the mother during labor and delivery," said Nancy Kujawa, publicity director for the Association of Shared Childbirth.

"The father plays a major role in the childbirth process," she said. "He coaches the mother on breathing patterns during labor and delivery."

Class registration should be made early in the pregnancy by calling the Association for shared Childbirth.

Council candidates endorsed by NOW

The Greater Lansing Area Chapter of National Organization for Women has come out in support of certain Lansing and East Lansing City Council candidates.

Councilmember-at-large Richard Baker and Third Ward Councilmember Terry McKane were the only two Lansing candidates to receive endorsement from the group.

Paula Yensen, a NOW representative, said the organization is suggesting that voters not use their second vote on Councilmember-at-large Louis Adado, or Sid Worthington.

NOW is also not supporting either of the First Ward Candidates, Ted DeLeon or Pat Lindemann, because the two did not attend a candidate forum sponsored by NOW in September, Yensen said.

In East Lansing, incumbent Larry Owen received NOW's recommendation, and John Czarnecki and Ralph Monsma are also being supported.

The other three candidates for East Lansing are Julius Hanslovsky, Kim Thomas Capello and Tom Wilbur.

Wayne County prepares layoffs

DETROIT — Officials of bankrupt Wayne County began preparing layoff notices Wednesday for nearly all 5,300 employees, but half will be recalled immediately to carry on vital services in the nation's third largest county.

The layoffs are scheduled to take effect in two weeks — the time believed necessary to issue pink slips.

However, workers needed to operate four essential services — the county jail, youth homes, medical examiner's office and Wayne County General Hospital, will be recalled immediately, as will a skeleton crew to perform caretaker functions at other agencies.

Undersheriff Loren Pittman said Wednesday his office hopes to convince county authorities not to lay off deputies, because some out-county areas would have no police service if deputies are pulled off patrols.

THE LAYOFFS MEAN county employees — more than 3,000 of whom were victims of a payless payday last week — will be eligible for unemployment benefits. The county operates on a staggered pay system and the balance of its workers face empty pay envelopes Friday.

County officials plan to pay the recalled workers with promissory notes, but the legality of such a move was doubtful.

Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Irwin H. Burdick last week prohibited the county from paying its workers with scrip and said he viewed the promissory note scheme as essentially the same thing.

Four of six major banks in the area have agreed to consider exchanging the promissory notes for cash until the county can redeem them next year, when 1980 tax revenues begin trickling in.

A court hearing was scheduled for Thursday on attempts by an employee union to force the county to pay employees from $15 million set aside for construction of a new jail.

WAYNE COUNTY COMMISSION Chairperson Richard Manning said such a move would be illegal, because that money was earmarked by county voters for the jail.

Only $3 million of the fund has been used thus far for jail construction, according to county auditors.

The scheduled layoffs will not effect employees of the Public Works Department, which is supported by fees for water and sewage, or the county road commission.

The layoffs were ordered on a 15-6 vote Tuesday by the county board of Commissioners.

The county, which has failed to balance its budget for four years, faces a projected deficit of more than $18 million this year.

State officials have refused to bail out Wayne County, which has had chronic money problems for years.

Bicycle specialists urge safety courses

By MARY MICHAELS

Biking is the most popular and practical method, other than walking, for getting around campus. And, as bikers abound on all university campuses, bike-related problems arise, and MSU is no exception to this rule.

Bike safety is an area of major concern for bikers, pedestrians and drivers. Because the majority of accidents occur when a biker law has been violated, emphasis is being placed on educating bikers and drivers on safety measures.

Bonita Dostal Neff, state bicycle specialist, has been promoting her 4-H Youth Bicycle Safety Education program and expanding it throughout the state.

The goal of the courses is to increase knowledge and interest in bike safety as well as emphasize the benefits of cycling, Neff said.

"IT'S HARD CONVINCING someone that there's more to riding a bike than knowing how to balance it," Neff said.

She recounted the time she visited a student in a hospital after being involved in an accident on campus.

"I asked him if he would have taken a course in bike safety had he known about it before the accident. He admitted he wouldn't have, but now, of course, he will."

"Generating interest in the program is going to be a gradual process. So little is known about biking, as our studies have indicated, any biker should realize the importance of taking some courses."

One study conducted by Neff revealed a biking mishap or accident occurs once in every 22 trips. Susan Canaday, of the Bike Co-op, 547 E. Grand River Ave., whose bicycle is her means of transportation, said she has been involved in three mishaps in the past 11 years of riding, on the average, 250 miles per week.

In the drive for reducing bike injuries and fatalities, Neff and the 4-H Youth Programs are asking that one question appear on drivers' renewal examination pertaining to bicyclists' rights to the road. Neff said persons supporting this idea should write state Senator Richard Allen, R-Lansing, to show that support.

BICYCLE THEFTS ARE also a tremendous problem on this campus, Neff said. Since January 1979, $40,285 worth of bike frames alone have been stolen.

Bike thefts needn't be so frequent, however, if precautions are taken, Neff added. Around 50 percent of these were left unlocked or were locked with thin, inexpensive devices, she said.

"Locking the bike is just common sense. They should even be locked in well-lighted, high-traffic areas," Canaday stated. All loose objects should be removed from the bike before leaving it, also, she said.

As time is of the essence to the bike thief, good quality locks which are difficult to break or cut through are most advisable, Neff said. Thick coils should be secured around both wheels and the frame, and padlocks with keys are more effective than combinations.

"THE VALUABLE BIKE is the prime target for the bike thief. For just riding around campus, old clunkers are best," Canaday said.

Up military morale with Christmas mail

Mail call!

For thousands of men and women stationed in military bases everywhere, this can be the most welcome event of the week.

To maintain morale, the Armed Forces Mail Call, an independent, non-profit organization, is conducting its fifth annual Christmas Mail Call.

School classes, church groups, families and individuals are invited to send Christmas greetings to Armed Forces YMCAs, USOs and both U.S. and overseas hospitals and bases.

Participants should include a personal note in the Christmas cards, with their name and address on each card and envelope. A tax-deductible donation of 10 cents per card is requested to cover forwarding postage and other operating costs.

Anyone with friends or relatives in the Armed Forces may send their names and military addresses, and Mail Call will forward mail to them.

To participate, send any quantity of mail with tax-deductible donations by Nov. 27 to: Armed Forces Mail Call, c/o Armed Services YMCA, 500 W. Broadway, San Diego, Calif. 92101.

E.L. needs volunteers for survey

The Center of Handicapper Affairs needs volunteers to perform on-site surveys to be published in an access guide for the city of East Lansing.

Volunteers are needed to judge the accessibility of buildings and restaurants.

After an orientation session, volunteers will check buildings for the width of entranceways, the number of steps, the height of soap and towel dispensers in restrooms and the availability of Braille menus at area restaurants.

For more information, contact Vickie Miner at the Center of Handicapper Affairs in Lansing.

U.N. Day ceremony to be held

Sen. William Sederberg, R-East Lansing, and Mayor George Griffiths are among the guest speakers invited to commemorate United Nations Day at 3 p.m. today at the East Lansing Public Library, 950 Abbott Road.

Members of the Model U.N. Club at East Lansing High School will plant a tree near the library, a tradition in the observance of U.N. Day in East Lansing.

Free tickets available for movie

The ASMSU Programming Board will be giving out 100 free tickets Thursday morning to the movie "French Postcards."

The tickets will be available on a first-come first-serve basis on the second floor of the Union.

The movie is currently playing at the Campus Theater.

It's been re-typed, word for word, for greater legibility. Bold sentences are those used in our Citizens for a Better East Lansing (C.B.E.L.) tabloid. We believe the quotes we used in our tabloid reflect fairly his support for the new Dayton Hudson proposal, but we'll let you be the judge.

October 4, 1979

Mr. Wayne Williams, Chairperson
C.B.E.L.
305 Bessemaur
East Lansing, MI 48823

Dear Mr. Williams:

Thank you for this opportunity to discuss my position on Ordinance 477. It will take me some time and space to do so. As I know you appreciate, the development of the site is a complex issue.

As a councilmember, I intend to vote on the rezoning as directed by the outcome of the November vote on Proposal C. There is one circumstance in which I would not do so, and I want to give you a fair warning about that condition. If the ordinance is approved after a campaign in which the primary issue is not the new proposal but the warning about that condition, I will not vote to approve it. I voted to place right of some people in the community to participate in local decision-making I may conclude that the 1978 vote should stand. I voted to place the ordinance on the ballot with the expectation that the issue of city development policy would be the basis on which people would be called upon to decide. I expect that last year's opponents will be regarded as people to be persuaded, not as people with no right to decide, under attack because of their length of residency, economic status, choice of housing, or ability to pay taxes. I am encouraged by what I have heard over the last few weeks that the debate will be as it should be.

I opposed the 1978 proposal for two different types of reasons. The first set of reasons were specific to that proposal — problems which could be solved without changing the basic nature of the proposal. Most of those objections have been met by the new proposal. I am satisfied that we will be able to control strip development strictly, that drainage will be adequate, and that other community needs — housing and recreation space — are addressed properly. I remain concerned about the impact of the traffic the mall will generate on nearby neighborhoods and on major streets.

More important to my decision in 1978 and today is another, more basic, concern. I do not believe that constructing malls on the periphery of urban areas is the best way to build strong cities. Malls have been part of a development trend in American cities over the last 30 years which has proven disastrous. Automobile-centered transportation, sprawling housing patterns, and the location of shopping centers outside of city centers have all contributed to the flight of people, jobs, and capital from the cores of our cities. They have produced urban environments which waste land and energy. Cities around the country are crumbling because of a pattern of development in which the mall has been a key element.

It seems clear, however, that Dayton-Hudson is determined to build a mall somewhere near the intersection of US-127 and Lake Lansing Road, and that the corporation will develop a site in another jurisdiction if East Lansing rejects Ordinance 477. It appears that the only decision really left to East Lansing is where the mall should be located — not whether it should be built.

Wherever the mall is built, the traffic it generates through East Lansing will be similar. Shoppers from East Lansing and Meridian Township will use city streets in roughly similar numbers whichever side of US-127 the mall is located on.

I believe East Lansing is best equipped — politically and technically — to shape the proposal as it sees fit. The revisions to the plan eliminating strip development, expanding housing, and opening recreational areas indicate that ability. East Lansing is more likely to regulate development near the site to prevent strip development.

There are obvious benefits to the city and school district budgets from having the mall in East Lansing. Those benefits are most pronounced for the school district. The benefits to the city are not as great — they may serve only to compensate the city for additional costs and for the loss of tax base in the downtown. But these costs will occur wherever the mall is located. If it is in East Lansing we will have some revenue with which to offset those costs.

For those reasons I will probably vote in favor of Proposal C next month. My judgement is based on several assumptions — that there is a viable Lansing Township site for which Dayton-Hudson holds options; that voters and public officials in the township would probably welcome the development; that the effects of a development in Lansing Township are substantially as described in the preceding paragraphs. If information comes to me which seriously challenges these assumptions, I will of course reassess my position.

To summarize, I do not think malls on the edges of urban areas are the sort of development any city should encourage. But if a mall will be built near US-127 and Lake Lansing Road, I would support the proposed location and site plan as the best possible.

Thank you again for this opportunity.

Sincerely yours,

Alan Fox

Coretta King seeking reparations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The widow of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. disclosed Wednesday that the family of the slain civil rights leader is seeking reparations from the government for FBI attempts to discredit King.

Coretta Scott King told the Senate Judiciary Committee that "through a private attorney, we have explored the possibility of reparations to our family."

Mrs. King said, however, she has chosen not to "press charges or file suit" against the government because she felt such a case would not be "part of the theory of non-violence and reconciliation."

Later, Mrs. King told reporters that any money that would be obtained for FBI harassment of King would be used as endowments to the Martin Luther King Jr. Foundation for Social Change in Atlanta.

HOWEVER, SHE DECLINED to divulge how much money was being sought or discuss other details of the negotiations, saying the talks were still under way.

Such a payment apparently would require an act of Congress.

Justice Department spokesman Robert Havel said late Wednesday that, about two years ago, former Attorney General Ramsey Clark informally discussed reparations for the King family with then-Attorney General Griffin Bell.

But he said nothing came of the talks and he is unaware of anything going on now.

According to government files and statements by former FBI officials, the bureau conducted a secret campaign intended to discredit King during the 1960s.

BEGINNING IN JANUARY 1964, the FBI bugged hotel rooms where King was staying. Tapes implicating King in apparent extramarital sexual activity were made available to reporters, members of Congress and then-President Lyndon B. Johnson. A package of the tapes was also sent anonymously to Mrs. King.

Mrs. King told the Judiciary Committee that a proposed FBI charter setting guidelines on the bureau's activities should include "strong civil remedies" to citizens harmed by FBI abuses.

The Judiciary Committee is considering a proposed FBI charter that its sponsors claim would define and limit the FBI's authority so as to enable it to investigate crime while preserving individual rights.

Critics contend the safeguards are not strong enough to prevent FBI abuses.

Radiopharmaceutical manufacturing in danger

By KEVIN McKEAN
AP Science Writer

Doctors who work with radioisotopes — and the companies which make them — said Wednesday they would have to stop work in four to six weeks unless new radioactive waste disposal sites are found.

Sites at Hanford, Wash., and Beatty, Nev. — two of three in the nation that accept low-level wastes from medical sources — have been closed this month.

And South Carolina Gov. Dick Riley has said he will act next week to "significantly" reduce the wastes accepted at the third site, Barnwell, S.C. Riley said he would not accept any wastes that would usually go to the other sites.

With the closings, hospitals have been forced to stockpile the wastes they produce in diagnosis and treatment of disease. The makers of isotopes face an even more difficult problem, since manufacture of these radiopharmaceuticals, as they are called, produces more nuclear waste than their use.

THOUSANDS OF PATIENTS a year are treated or studied with isotopes, which are simply various forms of individual atomic elements, and 60 million radioisotope tests are performed annually that do not involve injecting isotopes into the body.

For example, doctors get a television picture of a beating heart by injecting radioactive thallium which collects in the heart muscle. The only test for detecting hepatitis virus relies on isotopes.

The problem is that these diagnostic tests often produce waste in a liquid form which cannot be solidified easily. The Washington site was the last in the country to accept liquid wastes before Gov. Dixy Lee Ray closed it Oct. 4.

"We have our own personal storage which will not be filled until Dec."

Clean-up settlement signed

KELLEY SAID THAT no corporate polluters have ever received a prison term in Michigan or in the United States for poisoning a lake.

"The sad facts are that the laws of the environment have not kept pace," Kelley said. It is up to the legislature to make stricter laws regarding the pollution of lakes by persons or corporations."

Baeder said he has a lot of "empathy" for the people in the White Lake area. "I've been there. It's a beautiful lake," Baeder said. "I don't believe it's been hurt by Hooker. It's been hurt by a lot of publicity."

Prison terms accompanying fines for convicted polluters would not make corporations any more cautious, Baeder said.

BAEDER SAID HOOKER has spent $9 million on environmental safety at the Montague plant.

"There has not been one suit by anyone claiming to be injured or damaged by any of our operations at White Lake," he said.

Tanner said the lake, which is really not a lake but a wide river that runs into Lake Michigan, will be near normal contaminate levels within 10 years.

But, Matsumura said in a telephone interview that some of the chemicals in the lake will remain for centuries.

"The amount of contaminated water that has already reached the lake cannot be cleaned," Matsumura said.

He added that it will take at least a year to determine what effect the chemicals might have on Lake Michigan and that MSU will continue to monitor fish and water at the lakes.

Energy efficiency at MSU

Simon said district heating is used in parts of Europe, where communities are more compact than communities in the United States.

"LANSING'S BOARD OF Water and Light cannot afford to build heat lines to the Meridian Mall," he said. "It's too far from the heart of town."

He added that even 25 years ago MSU was putting more effort into conservation than most places.

"We think we've done a better job of insulating our buildings than were done to most buildings in the '50s or '60s," said Simon.

MSU began putting Thermopane windows in campus buildings, beginning with the construction of the library in 1953, he said, although energy was still cheap and abundant at the time.

In addition, Simon said, in 1967 several physical plant staff members were assigned to see what could be done at MSU to cut energy use.

THAT EFFORT HAS been successful, he added, because energy demand levels on campus have remained the same since 1967 even though new science, research and medical programs — programs which have high energy demands — have developed rapidly on campus since 1967.

Energy conservation methods at MSU have attracted attention from all over the country, Simon added.

"We've had visitors here from many parts of the nation, from other universities, engineers from Ford, General Motors, Energy Task Force, (the Department of Housing and Urban Development, you name it, since the 1973 oil) embargo," he said.

The University is currently investing in a campus-wide centralized computer control system which will automatically do such things as turn lights on and off, and adjust temperatures and air supplies, he said.

The system costs about $6 to $8 million, but Simon said that it will be money well spent.

"TECHNOLOGY NOW PERMITS us to do this all with a machine, but it takes a big investment," he added. "That system will allow us to cut energy consumption some 20 to 30 percent."

Simon added that the campus could get by on half the energy that it uses today without any noticeable changes in comfort.

"We can get part of that reduction by controlling machinery," he said. "But the rest of that reduction must come from a change of habits."

"I get the feeling that a lot of people expect us to do it all for them," he added. "All I want is everyone to use a little common sense."

"Awareness of the energy situation has not hit home," Simon added. "I'm not saying that critically, it's just a fact of life."

People are not used to the energy crisis to remember to do things like turn off the lights when they leave a room, Simon said.

MEANWHILE, HERMAN KOENIG, director of the MSU Center for Environmental Quality, said MSU is in pretty good shape for the future and would make a good model for cities to follow.

"We're in as good of position as anyone could be because the plants are coal fired and we have the co-generation facilities," he said.

"This campus is a very good example of what we ought to have in all of our cities."

"If our cities were built the same way, we could be providing all our heat needs from the residual heat from power generation, and we wouldn't have a heating problem," Koenig said. "It would also hold down the cost."

"Unfortunately, it isn't that way."

Tomorrow: A look at what the cities in an energy-short world may be like.

MSU pollution production reduced

Meanwhile, a third boiler unit was added to the power plant. That unit, completed in December 1978, was equipped with an electro-static precipitator pollution control device.

This system, Nilsson said, was able to filter out 99.8 percent of the pollutants.

"When it was put into operation," he added, "there was absolutely nothing visible coming out of the stacks."

It was soon decided, however, that that type of pollution control device could not be added to the two existing boilers, Nilsson said. The major reason, he added, was major structural changes would have to be done before the roof would support them.

FINALLY, WHEN THE funding came through, it was decided the other two units would be equipped with "bag-house" devices, he said.

A bag-house is a house of 2,400 fiberglass bags which are 22 feet long and 8 inches in diameter. Nilsson said the exhaust from the boilers is piped into the bags, where more than 99 percent of the pollutants are trapped inside the bag.

The bags must be replaced every four years, he added.

The two bag-houses — one for each boiler — are the first in Michigan and far exceed the pollution control standards set by the DNR, Nilsson said.

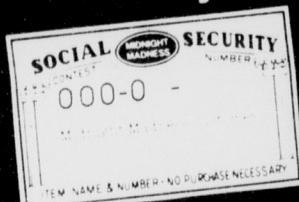

"If we just wanted to meet state standards," he added, "we could have designed something in the range of 95 percent (pollution control efficiency)."

The first of the two bag-houses went into operation at the end of September, he said.

Nilsson added that since all three boilers would be needed during the winter months, the second bag-house would not be hooked up until August 1980.

Student groups shown in library

The MSU Undergraduate Library will soon carry a new type of information.

The second floor display case will feature several student organizations and groups this fall.

"It's especially for freshmen to see what's going on," said Lee Cahow, display coordinator of the Undergraduate Library. "It will show them things they could enter."

Students who wish to loan pictures or flyers of their group's special activities for display may drop off the 8 and one-half by 11 inch articles to the Undergraduate Library office on the second floor by Oct. 30.

This is the first time the students groups have been asked to participate, Cahow said.

"Each year the display grows a little," he added.

Wayne County gets slight financial relief

The Senate Appropriations Committee Wednesday approved legislation giving Wayne County slight financial relief, but struck $230,000 from the House passed measure prior to sending it to the floor.

The bill appropriates about $4.5 million for operation of the Walter Reuther long term care facility from May 1978 through September 1979.

The state is in the process of taking over the facility and care of its mentally ill patients.

Sen. Jerome Hart, D-Saginaw, said he did not feel obligated to deliver the $230,000 — earmarked for care of physically ill patients at the center through Dec. 31 — because the state's responsibility is limited to the mentally ill.

The committee chairperson said, however, that if county officials could prove the money was justified, he would consider returning the funds to the bill.

Wayne County, facing a deficit estimated at about $19.5 million, already has missed one payroll and is out of cash.

County commissioners voted Tuesday to lay off most of the county's 5,300 employees, although about half will be recalled later on to operate essential services.

Proposal C

He said he didn't think that East Lansing could stop strip development by agreement with any corporation.

He added that the city should be able to control strip development with city control of the 18-acre parcel along Lake Lansing Road.

Dayton Hudson has agreed to donate the land between the road and the mall site to the city once the rezoning is approved.

Swantko said the city would not have been able to easily control strip development under the old plan but could control it under the new plan.

"There are still no absolute guarantees," he said.

Joanne Miller, CBEL secretary, said when the new proposal appeared she was delighted to see an "integrated community development."

"I don't look at this as simply a Dayton Hudson mall," she said.

Corruption

He said that his wife will work a 40-hour week, but if she is called to the jail after business hours, she will apply for time-and-a-half pay.

Preadmore also said he is the only sheriff in Michigan not provided with a county car.

PREADMORE CALLED GREBNER'S recent charges against him a "continuation of the attacks" Grebner has been making since he took office.

"It's nothing but free publicity for him," Preadmore said.

He added he does not favor recent action by a citizen's group to recall commissioners Grebner, Jess Sobel, D-East Lansing; Thomas Mitchell, D-Williamston; and Patrick Ryan, D-Lansing.

"I am not in favor of that," he said, "and I did not have anything to do with that action."
