Concerned students protest for hostages

By R.W. ROBINSON
State News Staff Writer

Protesters will return to the MSU International Center at noon today to show that they are still concerned about the American hostages held in Iran's U.S. Embassy, director of the Students for Basic Rights said Sunday.

Paul Schwartz, 19, a resident of Case Hall, said Friday's anti-Iran rally in front of the International Center was a comprised effort of two people initially, Schwartz and a fellow schoolmate.

The sophomore said after he and his friend planned the rally, about six other students from Case Hall followed them to the International Center, where an undetermined number of students joined later.

Also on Friday, three students were arrested for painting anti-Iran slogans on two pedestrian bridges near the Computer Center.

THE THREE STUDENTS, whose names have been withheld by the Department of Public Safety, were released without bail, but they will probably be fined for malicious destruction of property.

Schwartz said he did not know the three students arrested Friday, and he hopes that today's rally will be a peaceful one.

DPS also received a telephone call from an Iranian student living in Spartan Village, who told an officer he has been threatened with death.

SCHWARTZ SAID the demonstrations at MSU are not planned to threaten the lives of any Iranian students, but to show the hostility of many regarding the hostages in Iran.

"Not only is it (the rally) for our American brothers, but our Iranian brothers."

"An Iranian student called me today and told me to keep doing what I am doing," Schwartz said. "He (the Iranian student) said he hates the Ayatollah Khomeini regime as much as we do."

However, the student leader added he does not have any "feelings for those burning American flags right now."

Schwartz said he believes that 65 percent of the students on campus are aware of what is going on in Iran.

"THERE IS MORE resentment by the foreign students about what is going on," he added.

Schwartz said he has not tried to find out whether or not demonstrations are being held at all the schools within the state.

Schwartz also said the DPS is supposed to beef up their patrols by 30 percent. "I guess that means they may put another car out to watch for graffiti," he said jokingly.

The turnout for today's rally will be determined by the weather and what is currently happening in Iran, Schwartz said.

Lewis Hekus, director of student activities at MSU, said "if they continue to make progress with negotiations, then there probably will not be any problems. But if something happens to those hostages there may be some," he said.

MSU students showed their concern this weekend for the American hostages in the U.S. embassy in Iran. On Friday, a small cluster of students marched in front of the International Center, and at Saturday's home football game students sporadically displayed large signs during the event.

Iranian students invade U.S. Embassy in Beirut

By The Associated Press

Iranian students chanting "Death to the Americans!" scaled a fence and poured into the U.S. Embassy garden in Beirut, Lebanon, on Sunday in support of the 8-day-old embassy takeover in Tehran.

Meanwhile, Iran's new foreign affairs chief declared there would be "no compromise, no negotiation" to free the Tehran hostages.

It was believed that behind-the-scenes talks continued in the Iranian capital, however, with the Palestine Liberation Organization and Moslem diplomats as mediators. One Arab report said hostages might be freed by Monday, though an Iranian official said he saw no "omen" that this would happen.

The anti-American fervor in Tehran was unabated.

Some 200 uniformed air force men Sunday joined the thousands of Iranian protesters who have flocked to the U.S. Embassy each day since a mob of student militants seized it and about 100 American and other hostages Nov. 4. The airpersons demanded that all ties with the United States be cut and all foreign capital be expropriated.

ABOUT 40 IRANIANS invaded the Beirut embassy garden, burning an American flag and chanting protest slogans for about two hours until Syrian peacekeeping troops, swinging clubs, routed them in a bloody melee.

When the unarmed students jumped over the embassy fence, the U.S. Marine guards did not try to repulse them and instead took to the embassy roof with their light weapons and radios.

Armed Lebanese police reinforcements arrived at the scene but took no action, apparently waiting for the Syrians, the strongest armed force in faction-ridden Lebanon. Lebanese security sources reported last week that the PLO had thwarted an Iranian student plot to take over the American Embassy in Beirut.

Deportation of Iranian students who are in the United States illegally will not begin until December at the earliest, a Justice Department official said Sunday.

"We are certainly not going to see any actual deportations within the month," said the official, who requested anonymity. "It will take a little longer than that."

Apparently hoping to dampen Iranian student demonstrations out of fear for the safety of 60 American hostages in Iran, President Carter ordered the Justice Department on Saturday to deport Iranian students who have violated the terms of their entry visas.

In Tehran, Abolhassan Bani Sadr, recently put in charge of Iran's Foreign Ministry by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, told French radio interviewers that "no compromise, no negotiation, is possible," over Iran's demand that the United States extradite the ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran to stand trial for his life.

BANI SADR SAID he would not be satisfied if the deposed monarch, hospitalized in New York for cancer treatment, were merely expelled to another country.

Even if the shah dies in the United States or is expelled, Iran would still hold a trial, "because it is the Americans we want to judge for their misdeeds," he said.

The Iranian revolutionaries blame the shah's U.S. allies in part for the crimes they say he committed against the Iranian people during his 37-year reign. They contend, too, that the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was nothing more than a "spy center" actively seeking to overthrow Khomeini's revolutionary regime.

The Tehran embassy hostages "were arrested by the students, not by the government," Bani Sadr said, although they have Khomeini's support for their demands.

Bani Sadr, who is a member of the powerful Revolutionary Council that runs Iran, said on the French radio that the hostages would be well-treated "even in the event of military intervention." The students had said last week they would kill hostages if the United States mounted any military operation to rescue them, an option the Carter administration has publicly discounted.

Dump closures hinder research involving radioactive materials

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

Due to the closure of low-level radioactive waste dumps around the country, MSU researchers have been asked to reduce their use of radioactive materials.

A memorandum from John Cantlon, vice president for research and development, said the MSU Office of Radiation, Chemical and Biological Safety should be consulted before "conducting experiments which radioactively contaminate animals larger than rabbits."

"While commercial waste haulers continue to pick up Michigan State University's radioactive waste," the memorandum stated, "continued increases in MSU's quantities of waste materials will cause significant stress in our ability to meet disposal costs and temporary storage capacity needs."

Radioactive waste disposal is "a very expensive operation," Cantlon said.

When large animals are used in experiments the volume of material which must be hauled away is increased, making the operation even more expensive, he said.

"You can get a lot more mice or rats in a barrel (to be hauled away) than you can get cows," Cantlon said.

STORAGE CAPACITY in the building now used for radioactive wastes could be doubled if it becomes necessary, he added.

The problem of disposing of low levels of radioactive waste stems from the closing of all but one of the low-level radioactive waste dumps around the country. The one waste dump which is open in South Carolina, is accepting only 50 percent of their former capacity.

Meanwhile, the American Associated Universities, which consists of 48 research universities, is doing a study to determine what the radioactive waste picture is nationally, Cantlon said.

"The university is only one of several kinds of public agencies which will be severely handicapped if this situation is not resolved fairly rapidly," Cantlon said.

Radioactive materials are also used in hospitals to detect and treat cancer and other diseases. Treatment using those techniques may be in jeopardy if hospitals are unable to dispose of their wastes.

CANTLON SAID MSU is working with the state to identify possible disposal areas in Michigan for research wastes.

However, Michigan law currently prohibits disposal of radioactive wastes within the state.

The current law "needs to be re-examined," Cantlon said. The law was originally intended to keep the high level wastes of nuclear power plants from being disposed of within the state.

"The law did not really contemplate or consider low level wastes," he added. "It isn't even mentioned."

Most of the material used at MSU is no more radioactive than parts of many alarm clocks, Cantlon said, "and people throw (those) in the trash all the time."

It doesn't make sense to restrict the disposal of wastes that are no more radioactive than that, he added.

Kahn calls Chrysler pact 'outrageous'

DETROIT (UPI) — The stunned United Auto Workers union has denounced as "absolutely shocking" an attack by presidential anti-inflation chief Alfred Kahn on a scaled-down UAW contract with struggling Chrysler Corp.

The tentative agreement, including more than $200 million in economic concessions designed to bolster the financially ailing No. 3 automaker, currently is in the final stages of a ratification vote.

But Kahn told a Washington news conference Saturday the pact was "outrageous." He said it probably violates anti-inflation guidelines and could cost Chrysler urgently needed federal loan guarantees if not trimmed down.

Kahn, chairperson of the council on Wage and Price Stability, said President Carter agreed with his assessment.

KAHN SAID the autoworkers' contract exceeded guidelines permitting only a 22.5 percent wage hike during the next three years. He said the Chrysler pact, even without counting fringe benefits, amounted to a 30 percent increase during the three year time span.

UAW President Douglas Fraser and Vice President Marc Stepp took issue with Kahn in a sharply worded statement.

"When we met with Vice President Mondale and Treasury Secretary Miller in Washington, they had the details of our Chrysler agreement and they did not in any way express any unhappiness with that agreement," they said.

"In light of that meeting, Alfred Kahn's statements are absolutely shocking and I firmly believe the UAW-Chrysler contract does not remotely approach the kind of sacrifice the affected parties have got to demonstrate as a condition of being bailed out by the U.S. government. — Alfred Kahn, chairperson of the Council on Wage and Price Stability.

incomprehensible, as well as reckless and insensitive," the statement said.

A UAW spokesperson said Fraser already has ruled out reopening contract talks with Chrysler, which expects to lose as much as $1.5 billion this year and in 1980 and could face bankruptcy without federal aid.

CHRYSLER SPOKESPERSON DECLINED immediate comment, saying the company had not yet examined Kahn's statements.

Kahn said the wage and price council will issue a "notice of probable non-compliance" Monday to Chrysler, saying the contract apparently exceeds federal guidelines.

The administration expects "genuine contributions and sacrifices" from the UAW and Chrysler in exchange for $1.5 billion in loan guarantees, Kahn said.

"I firmly believe the UAW-Chrysler contract does not remotely approach the kind of sacrifice the affected parties have got to demonstrate as a condition of being bailed out by the U.S. government," he said.

JOINING THE UAW in answering Kahn's broadside were members of Michigan's congressional delegation, who have been at the forefront of efforts to secure federal help for Chrysler.

"He (Kahn) is way out of line and the administration had better start speaking with one voice," said Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich.

Rep. James J. Blanchard, D-Mich., raised the possibility Kahn was "shooting from the hip" or his statements were a response to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's criticism of administration inflation fighting efforts.

"Either they think the contract should be negotiated, or they don't have their act together, or they're responding to Ted Kennedy's criticism, or it's a case of temporary insanity," Blanchard said.

Derailed train leaking deadly gas

MISSISSAUGA, Ontario (AP) — Authorities began evacuating 100,000 residents from this town west of Toronto Sunday as fumes poured from burning tanker cars of a derailed train. One car was leaking deadly chlorine gas, officials said.

Some 10,000 residents had been moved by mid-afternoon to high schools and shopping centers in the area. No injuries were reported.

Flames flared from seven tank cars and threatened another that had ruptured and was leaking some chlorine gas, Ontario Attorney-General Roy McMurtry said.

"There is no serious leak of chlorine," he said.

The train derailed just before midnight Saturday at a level crossing in an industrial area. Canadian Pacific Railway authorities said the train's crew was accounted for. Besides the chlorine, the train was carrying styrene, propane and butane gas and furnace oil to Toronto from Sarnia, Ont.

Authorities said there were no major injuries from the fumes, but that nausea, headaches and watery eyes were common complaints from persons at the site. Government environmentalists were on the scene testing the air.

Peking police break up dissenters, arrest 4

PEKING (AP) — In a stern warning to dissenters, uniformed police marched to "Democracy Wall" Sunday and halted the sale of transcripts of a young dissident's trial. Four persons were arrested.

Police did not say what charges were filed against the four, but sources among the dissidents said they were accused of publishing a court document without permission. The dissidents maintain the transcript was made from a tape-recorded account of what had been billed as a public trial.

"We don't know what we'll do now," one dissident said. "We were totally unprepared because the transcript already is on the wall. Authorities said this was a public trial and this was an objective account of a public trial."

Posters put up on Democracy Wall are a key device for Peking's dissidents.

Sources said police arrested Long Chungqing, 19, a writer for a moderate literary magazine who was among those hawking the transcript. Two unidentified persons who bought copies of it and a man who objected when police tried to tear down a week-old poster on the wall were also arrested, the sources said.

Fire in nursing home kills 14, two missing

PIONEER, Ohio (AP) — A fire believed started by a 4-year-old boy gutted a home for elderly and mentally retarded persons in this northwestern Ohio town Sunday, killing at least 14 persons and leaving two missing, officials said.

Mayor R. Bruce Kidston said the victims, most in their 60s, were all "very badly" burned.

"We have 14 confirmed dead and two names are missing off our list. There's a possibility we may end up with 16 dead. I hope to God it doesn't run any higher," Kidston said.

"They got seven people out the other side of the building," he continued.

"We couldn't get anybody else out. We just could not penetrate."

Police Chief David Norris said 13 of the dead were from the approximately 23 persons, many of them mentally retarded, who lived in the boarding home. The residents "ranged in age, I would say, from 40 to 70," Norris said.

The 14th victim was Norris' mother-in-law, Gladis Coats, owner of the boarding house. Norris said she was 61 or 62. She had escaped the fire but returned to the burning house. Norris said she was found at the bottom of a flight of stairs, her arms around a female patient she was trying to carry out.

Nixon to choose N.Y. office location

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon is reviewing several possible locations in mid-town Manhattan for his government-paid-for office, which he plans to move from California to New York early next year, officials say.

Although details are not available, the cost of the office could range from $100,000 to $280,000 a year, based on Nixon's request for space and what sources say the bids are asking in the price per square foot.

The cost for moving the office furniture would be an additional $7,000 to $8,000, government sources say.

Nixon notified the General Services Administration on Oct. 12 that he would need office space in New York City when he moves into a $750,000 Manhattan townhouse he purchased last month.

The GSA, the government's landlord and supply agency, advertised for the space in the New York Times' classified ads, requesting 4,000 to 8,000 square feet of "first-class air-conditioned office space in mid-Manhattan."

GSA officials said several offers were received and forwarded to Nixon, who is expected to decide which one he wants — if any — within about a month.

Desert village fears population boom

DELTA, Utah (AP) — The mayor of Delta, Utah — pop. 2,100 — says he cannot recall that the desert village ever had a murder or bank robbery in all its 60 years of existence.

But he fears that will change if two enormous construction projects — the nation's largest coal-fired power plant and the MX mobile missile system — go ahead as planned.

Mayor Leland Roper predicts a 10-fold population explosion within a decade.

Sometime next month, Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus is expected to approve construction of the $4.5 billion Intermountain Power Project 10 miles north of Delta. That alone will triple Delta's population within eight years.

But Roper says that is nothing compared to the explosive growth that would occur if President Carter deployed the $33 billion MX system in Utah and Nevada.

Exact figures are not yet available, but Roper estimates the area population would boom to 20,000 within 10 years if both projects are built. Over the past 10 years, the city has grown a humble 6 percent.

Memphis may elect first Black mayor

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — When young W. Otis Higgs Jr. quit his teaching job to go to law school 15 years ago, some people warned him he was making a major mistake.

"I had people say 'Man, you are crazy,'" Higgs, now 42, recalled as he talked about his race for the Memphis mayor's post, which climaxes in a runoff election Thursday.

"In those days, a Black man who had a teaching job was said to be doing about as well as he could expect. But I have never allowed the way people think to dictate the course of my life,"

Higgs said.

Higgs' enrollment in law school was not the last time the grandson of a door-to-door produce peddler did something that amazed or shocked people.

Now Higgs figures he is in a good position to both shock and amaze a lot of people who do not think a Black man can be elected mayor of Tennessee's largest city. For the second time in four years, the onetime busboy, factory worker, teacher, lawyer and judge will meet incumbent Mayor Wyatt Chandler in a runoff contest.

Greensboro holds funeral parade

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
GREENSBORO, N.C. —

Chanting revolutionary slogans, banner-waving sympathizers helped bury four slain communist activists Sunday after marching 1½ miles through the streets flanked by police and combat-equipped National Guard members.

An estimated 500 marchers braved an all-day rain to join a peaceful procession that included the caskets, covered in red sheets, of five Communist Workers Party members killed during a shootout at a "Death to the Klan" rally last weekend.

Four men killed at the rally were buried Sunday. The fifth victim will be buried later in South Carolina.

Two widows, Signe Waller and Dale Sampson, were among a 10-member honor guard that led the march from downtown Greensboro to Maplewood Cemetery. Each carried an unloaded rifle and a poster picture of her husband. Five other women and three men, also carrying unloaded weapons, made up the honor guard.

THE HONOR GUARD and their weapons were checked by members of a 500-person

National Guard battalion before the march began. Police armed with shotguns lined each side of the march route, moving along with the procession toward the cemetery.

The march proceeded through the rain-slicked streets without any major incidents, but police arrested several persons, including a few who were armed.

The Communist Workers Party had urged sympathizers from around the country to come to Greensboro, and police had expected anywhere from 2,000 to 5,000 people to line the parade route.

However, police said that only about 100 onlookers were on hand to watch the approximately 500 marchers. They were greatly outnumbered by more than 900 law enforcement officers, including guardmembers, state troopers and local police. At the cemetery, caskets containing bodies of the four men were placed over their graves. Widows of the four men joined CWP representatives on a soundtruck nearby.

"IT MAKES THE cause of communism concrete for the United States people at a time when they really need it," said Phil Thompson, who identified himself as a spokesperson for the CWP-USA.

"We want to use the CWP 5 to expose all capitalist politicians, be they (President) Carter or (Sen. Edward M.) Kennedy. The five CWP martyrs died a glorious death, fighting the bourgeoisie and its agents, the FBI and the KKK," Thompson said.

Guardmembers, state Highway Patrolmen and city police stood by in the cemetery during the service. National Guard helicopters circled overhead.

A dozen guardsmembers strode in front of the procession, which was dotted with red flags, down Greensboro's Market Street, accompanied by the chant of "avenge the murder of the CWP 5" from the marchers.

The marchers carried huge banners proclaiming, "The whole world is watching, avenge the CWP 5." Some carried huge red, black and yellow banners saying: "Death to the Klan and the capitalist class."

Some arrests were made just before the march began. Officers delivered a group of prisoners to the city jail but declined to say how many were arrested or where the arrests were made.

Israeli army jails Palestinian mayor

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli army Sunday jailed without charge the Arab mayor of Nablus, an influential Palestinian leader opposed to Israel's settlements policy and limited autonomy plans in the West Bank of the Jordan River.

The arrest of Mayor Bassam Shakaa, pending legal procedures to deport him, touched off angry protests in the West Bank.

In another development likely to heighten tension in the occupied territories, the Israeli Cabinet adopted a general policy decision calling for more Jewish settlements and the enlargement of existing outposts in the West Bank, Gaza Strip and the Syrian Golan Heights. A Cabinet committee was left to work out details and no number was set for new settlements.

FOLLOWING THE DECISION, an organization of poor Israelis scuffled with settlers at Gush Etzion, south of Jerusalem.

The group, which calls itself the Black Panthers, complains the government is spending money on West Bank settlements that could be used to house the poor. Israel Radio reported that one of the settlers was beaten after he fired his weapon in the air, and troops disarmed two other settlers who shot over the protesters.

The compromise Cabinet decision, accepted unanimously, seemed aimed at heading off a showdown and possible resignations within Prime Minister Menachem Begin's fractured government.

The Cabinet also chose a new site for the Elon Moreh settlement a few miles from the campsite it now occupies overlooking Nablus.

THE ISRAELI SUPREME Court ruled Oct. 22 that private land for Elon Moreh was illegally seized and ordered the settlement evacuated within 30 days. The settlers, who have strong right-wing support in the government, have so far refused to budge, threatening a major confrontation within the Cabinet that could topple Begin from power.

Converting TMI 'unwise'

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Converting the crippled Three Mile Island nuclear reactor to coal would be expensive, difficult and unwise, according to a state energy expert.

"I think there are just a multitude of problems there," said Conrad Six, director of the Bureau of Conservation, Economics and Energy Planning.

General Public Utilities Corp., which owns Three Mile Island, is looking into the possibility of converting the reactor to coal.

One reactor at the $1.1 billion plant is idle but intact. The other was destroyed March 28 in the country's worst commercial nuclear accident.

PRELIMINARY STUDIES DONE for the utility by Gilbert Associates of Reading, Pa., indicate it would cost $750 million to convert the disabled reactor to coal.

"It's very difficult for me to accept that as a sensible investment," Six said last week.

He said constraints at Three Mile Island include the size and accessibility of the island, which lies in the Susquehanna River 10 miles south of Harrisburg.

"It's a very small island," Six said. "I don't know where you would store coal or how you would transport it."

While those problems are unique to Three Mile Island, Six said conversion of any nuclear plant to coal would require a new generator because "it's a whole different technology."

IT WOULD NOT be economically feasible to convert any of the state's existing nuclear plants to coal, he said. Plants now operating include Peach Bottom in York County and Beaver Valley in Beaver County.

Two nuclear reactors are now under construction in Pennsylvania, at Limerick in Montgomery County and at Berwick in Columbia County. Six said both are due to be dedicated within 18 months — too near the finish line to consider switching to coal.

"I think they're too far along to convert," he said. "Everything is completed. You have to make these decisions almost at the groundbreaking stage, because that's when you lay out your design."

W. Wilson Goode, chairperson of the Public Utility Commission, has said he believes Pennsylvania's existing nuclear plants will be phased out in time.

'Teach-in' educates area citizens of Lansing's energy alternatives

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

Proposed future energy alternatives were blasted in a "teach-in" at Lansing City Hall Thursday.

A group known as Ratepayers United was the most vocal opponent of the Board of Water and Light's proposed solutions for meeting future energy needs.

"We project the demands of the Lansing area will continue to grow, but at a reduced rate," said Joe Wolfe, assistant general manager and director of operations at the BWL.

Wolfe said the BWL, which supplies electricity for Lansing and nearby areas including most of East Lansing, anticipates demand for electricity will grow 4 percent a year during the 1980s. The figure was derived from a study done in 1976 and updated in 1978 and 1979 by R.W. Beck and Associates for the BWL.

TO MEET THOSE demands, Wolfe said the BWL will choose one of four possible options.

Those options are:

- rely solely on conservation to offset demand.
- add a 160 megawatt coal generation plant to the BWL's existing Erickson plant in Delta Township.
- buying into Consumers Power Co.'s Midland Nuclear Power Plant and Detroit Edison's Fermi II nuclear plant, in which BWL would purchase 50 megawatts from each.

• buying 100 megawatts from those nuclear plants through joining the Michigan Public Power Agency, a coalition of 18 municipal utilities.

The BWL favors the fourth option, Wolfe said, but the actual decision will be made by a seven-member citizens panel which sets policy for the BWL.

As of yet, Wolfe added, none of those people have made up their minds.

However, Marty Bakken, of Ratepayers United, said conservation is the best alternative for the time being, as it would defer the need for more power sources for several years.

Bakken, who is also being considered for a seat on the Board of Water and Light, added that if the need for additional power could be put off until the 1990s, better alternatives, such as solar, would then be available.

"THE DEGREE TO which we can conserve," he said, "may allow us to take advantage of much more cost effective measures in the future."

John Saul, also of Ratepayers United, added that BWL's 4 percent projected growth rate was probably too high.

"If we look at the past four years, 1973 to 1974," Saul said, "the growth rate has been less than 3 percent."

Countering the BWL arguments that the nuclear buy-in option would cost less, Saul advocated the addition of a coal generation power plant in Delta Township. He said coal was a reliable, well-tested technology.

"It is not an experimental technology which nuclear power still is at this point," Saul said.

THE PROPOSED 160 megawatt Erickson addition, he said, would produce more power than necessary so that the excess could be sold off, further reducing the cost of the coal plant.

Another Ratepayers United member, Steve Freedkin, said nuclear plants would not be cheaper as they were plagued with construction delays and cost overruns.

Freedkin cited a Nuclear Regulatory Commission report that said nuclear plants designed by Babcock and Wilcox, the designers of Con-

Chemical food additives effects are uncertain

By KAREN GOODWIN
State News Staff Writer

Mary Ellen tries to avoid an average college diet of a soft drink, french fries and other assorted munchies so she cooks what she believes to be balanced meals.

But what Mary Ellen and many others may not be aware of is the widespread use of chemical additives in commercial foods.

The fruit juice she serves contains chemicals such as Benzoic acid (a chemical preservative), dimethyl polysiloxane (an anti-foaming agent), and more.

Roast beef contains DDT and related compounds, stilbestrol (artificial sex hormone) and aureomycin (antibiotic).

Pesticides such as coal-tar dye and sulphur preservatives plague sweet potatoes.

Peas, tossed salad and rolls and butter all have their share of additives, too.

A FOOD ADDITIVE, as defined by the National Academy of Sciences, is "a substance, other than a basic food stuff, which is present in food as a result of any aspect of production, processing, storage or packaging."

But most dieticians and nutritionists disagree about the use of additives in foods.

Some nutritionists believe that any amount of additives is harmful.

William Longgood said in his book The Poisons in Your Food that chemicals, almost without exception, destroy the vitamins, minerals and enzymes in food.

"Virtually every bite of food you eat has been treated with some chemical somewhere along the line," he said. "Processing leaves a tasteless product that is made palatable only by the use of more chemicals."

LONGGOOD SAID THE use of additives in foods in the United States rose from 852 million pounds in 1970 to 1.03 billion pounds in 1975.

Of the chemicals used in 1960, he said, the FDA claimed that one third were known to be harmless, another third were considered safe in the amounts used and the remaining third were in use but had not been adequately tested.

"The consuming public is left to play the role of the guinea pig," Longgood said.

He said injuries from defective foods usually take a long time to develop and are difficult to pinpoint.

"It is difficult, in general, for people to appreciate the danger of consuming toxic chemicals when taken in small amounts," he said.

The oil industry is not controlled

Oil company profits have reached unprecedented levels largely because the federal government and President Carter have been unable to regulate the oil industry. If the energy situation is to be kept under control, President Carter must take a strong stand against the oil companies and their pricing guidelines.

It is obvious that the oil companies are getting quite out of hand — the excessive third quarter profits and the inability of the government to formulate an adequate windfall profits tax lead one to conclude that the oil companies are virtually free from government interference.

To combat the power the oil companies use to manipulate the American economy, Carter needs to establish a government body with explicit powers to regulate the activities of the oil companies. Whether this body should have the power to regulate prices is an issue to be dealt with separately, but the main issue is that the oil companies have seemingly engaged in a price fixing scheme. Any regulatory commission needs the power to make some decisions that concern the companies' operations. An agency limited to just making suggestions will be neither listened to nor effective.

A complete investigation of oil company affairs must be instituted immediately. The only way to solve the energy problem is to direct attention to the foundation of that problem. Though the windfall profits tax may help ease the stronghold the oil companies have on consumers, it will not affect the pricing guidelines the companies follow. The tax is a form of ex post facto regulation that handles problems after they arise — not before they are caused.

The cause of the alleged energy shortage is not known because the oil companies have not been thoroughly investigated. The government is not in a position to make judgments about the energy supply because the majority of the information it gets comes from oil companies' statements. Accordingly, the oil companies only tell the government what they want it to know.

Since the public has some disbelief of the alleged shortage, the public will not know how to deal with a shortage should one actually occur.

Moreover, the oil companies will be unable to manage the energy needs of the country without resorting to their questionable price fixing schemes. For these reasons, President Carter has to be assertive and demand that the oil companies cut their prices.

DPS must add night patrollers

The Department of Public Safety needs to immediately increase the number of officers on campus patrols. There are only three police officers patrolling the MSU campus at night, and that is certainly not an adequate number of officers needed at a University this large. People on campus cannot feel adequately protected with this limited personnel. University administrators should act quickly and decisively to increase the number of night patrollers, for it is partly the administrators' responsibility to increase DPS funding and designate those funds to campus patrollers.

Due to budget cuts, the DPS has been forced to limit the number of officers it employs. Budget cuts should not be made if those cuts decrease public safety, for one cannot compromise on public safety. The DPS is not efficient enough to survive budget cuts and at the same time provide adequate protective services.

An increase in funding is essential if the DPS is to increase the number of officers patrolling the campus, and University administrators should act immediately to increase that funding — immediately means now; not next term or the next fiscal year.

Many students do not feel safe when alone on campus at night. Fears of rape haunt many females, and those fears will not subside until women, and all students, can feel protected at MSU. The major role of the DPS is to protect the University community. Having just three night patrollers certainly will not work to alleviate those fears. Rather, an increased number of patrollers is needed to facilitate better protection and lessen fears for personal safety. The visibility of additional patrollers would allow more police officers to directly spot crimes and attempt to stop them. In addition, an increase in visible patrollers may act as a deterrent to prevent possible assaults and other crimes.

Tuition costs need not be raised to increase DPS funding. In a university this size, money for additional DPS funding may surely be found somewhere, if personal safety is given its proper priority. Personal safety is essential if the experiences students have at MSU are to be good.

'LASH' LAROWE

Troubled times for Iranians

I'm on my way into my building and there's this sign taped up on the front door: "IRANIAN STUDENTS GO HOME!"

I'm standing there looking at it when one of my former students comes up.

"Isn't that terrible?" he asks.

"What's wrong with it?" I snaps.

"You don't mean you agree with that?" he asks, looking bewildered. "I've heard you always stick up for the little man, Lash. In the dorm they say anytime you get pushed around by the 'U', if you can't find Dr. Ferency, go see 'Lash' Larowe; he'll go to bat for you."

"True enough," I says. "But what's that got to do with shipping these Iranian students back to where they came from?"

"What've they done to deserve that?" he asks.

"For starters," I answers, "let's take the way they invaded the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. They're holding 60 Americans hostage. Isn't that reason enough to round 'em all up and put 'em on the first plane back to Iran?"

"The Iranian students who are here in the U.S. are not the ones who took over the embassy," he says. "They didn't grab the hostages. How can you blame them for what some of their countrymen are doing thousands of miles away?"

"In class you told us that under American law guilt is personal, Lash. You said guilt by association was against the Constitution."

"I'm not talking guilt by association," I says. "Look at the way Iranian students here in the U.S. are protesting the Shah's presence in the country and burning our president in effigy. If you're any kind of American at all, that's gotta make your blood boil, yessir!"

"I don't say I approve of that," he admits. "But I learned in your labor class, Lash, the First Amendment protects their right to protest, have a march if they want to, so long as it's peaceful."

"That's just the point," I says. "You watch the TV news, you'll see these Iranian protests aren't peaceful. Look at what's happened in Houston, L.A., Seattle and lots of other places; fist fights, people getting hit over the head with picket signs. The Constitution sure doesn't protect violence like that."

"The Iranian students didn't start those fights, Lash," the kid says. "They were marching along peacefully, and some Americans started slugging them, the way the hard hats attacked peace marchers during the Vietnam War. You said in that case the police should have stepped in, protected the people's right to march."

"You ever stop to think how many cops you'd need out there to hold back all the real Americans who've had it up to here with these Khomeini-lovers of yours?" I demands. "And who do you think is going to pick up the bill for the cops' overtime? Not your Iranian pals, nosir. Me and you, that's who."

"You didn't worry about the cost when you and your friends in the ACLU defended those American Nazis who wanted to stage a march in Skokie a couple years ago," he retorts. "They had to call out a small army of cops to protect those Nazis, Lash. That cost a bundle."

"That was different," I tells him. "At least those Nazis were U.S. citizens. They weren't guests in this country, abusing our hospitality by criticizing the government that so generously welcomed them, opened the doors of the finest universities to them. They weren't parading around praising some weird dictator in another country."

"I say if these Iranians think this Ayatollah of theirs is so great, let 'em go back there and join him."

"That statement's unworthy of you, Lash," he says. "I remember in class you told us how awful the Palmer Raids were, where thousands of people were rounded up after World War I and shipped back to Russia when their only 'crime' was they admired Lenin and thought the Bolshevik Revolution was better than the Czar."

"You said that was almost as bad as the way the government treated the Japanese-Americans during World War II. Isn't making the Iranians go home now just as bad as what we the government did then?"

"If you'd read your history," I scolds, "you'd find out it isn't the same at all. The Bolsheviks weren't holding Americans hostage in the embassy in Moscow, and Lenin hadn't cut off our precious supply of oil, either."

AL YES! WHAT WILL THE AMUSING LITTLE CHAP THINK OF NEXT? LUCKILY FOR HIM, I NEVER PANIC IN A CRISIS, OTHERWISE I'D BE TEMPTED TO STOMP THE HELL OUT OF HIM, YES, INDEED!

VIEWPOINT: EQUALITY

Accomplishments not recognized

By DAVID Q. SCHWAB

I would like to pose a question to Reginald Thomas, who in a recent State News article has contended that the Rev. Jesse Jackson's much publicized trip to the Middle East was both misguided and ill considered.

Are events of little relevance or importance usually accompanied by as much fanfare as that which accompanied Jackson's trip? If Jackson's trip was meaningless — why the fervent reaction — both pro and con?

I would agree that Jackson's trip did, in fact, accomplish little in a concrete sense. I do not believe that Jackson felt he could succeed where diplomatic and political experts had tried and failed to reach solutions in this raging controversy.

Jackson's trip to the Mideast was and is consequential in that the trip was very symbolic. Jackson wanted to dramatically point out that nearly one million persons in Palestine have not been allowed to speak in their own behalf. He wished to shed light upon the fact that the Palestinians, much like the colonial Americans, were denied the right of representation in talks concerning their land, their people and their future.

In an impassioned and moving speech given before a minorities counseling conference at the Kellogg Center, Jackson reiterated the need for a "talk policy" between all major belligerents involved in the Mideast struggle. "Both sides are guilty of transgressions," Jackson said. "Someone must intercede to stop the endless cycle of terror that has developed. Each funeral is the basis for the next armed attack; and the next armed attack, the basis for the next funeral," Jackson continued.

When asked why Blacks should speak out, Jackson replied: "Who is better qualified to speak for oppressed peoples than the Blacks of America, who were slaves for 200 years, and victims of apartheid for the last 100?"

Jackson said that solutions can and must be reached for the Middle East. He said that Americans need not choose between morality and oil, for we can have both.

Reginald Thomas depicted Jackson as a demagogue — an opportunistic schemer willing to seize upon any issue which might lend itself to print. He would have us believe that Jackson's trip was merely one emphasizing good public relations for Operation PUSH.

I do not believe that Jesse Jackson is a self-seeker, any more than I believe that he represents all or even a majority of the voices of the Black community. What I do believe is that Jesse Jackson is a sincere man who has decided to take action and take the initiative needed to solve a complex issue.

I think that Jackson would agree that it is time for both sides in the conflict to stop denying the fact that the other exists. Specifically, it is time for the Arab world to stop denying the existence of the state of Israel. It is also time, as Jackson has helped to point out, for the state of Israel to stop denying that the Palestinians must be represented in some significant fashion in the negotiations, if peace is ever to be achieved in the Middle East.

LETTERS

An open letter to MSU students

My first few sallies into the job market did not leave me in the position I had envisioned. Rather than getting hot scoops for the State Journal or Newsweek and snapping pictures of fires and children with dogs, I'm typing. Yes, typing and filing and all that stuff; right here at MSU.

The job market for journalists is tight, as almost every prospective journalist knows. So while I take night graduate classes and check into every publication within 50 miles, I type. It pays the bills (almost).

But my career deviations are not the issue here. You are.

Most of the students I deal with (I'm the first one on the firing line in my department's office) are OK. I really enjoy helping them out of the snarl of red tape that so often trips up the unwary student. I'll do anything I can — get your folder, your permit to register, give you any information available on your major. But, geez, the last thing I need is for you to call the department office several times each semester for the advisor's phone number, your professor's office hours or for counseling with your scheduling problems.

Now the phone numbers and office hours I can help you with: the counseling is the advisor's department. Not only do I not know the answers to your questions, I am not in any position to be telling you what classes to take.

It sounds simple, but it is easy to think that anyone in your department's office must know more about its program than you do. Wrong. We just work here. It is not that we are unhappy to help you out. Maybe it will help a little for you to know what we can and cannot do. There is a lot you can do for yourself — like look up phone numbers and check your syllabus for your professor's office hours and telephone number (a major reason for making syllabi).

If you get a phone number you will conceivably need again during your time at MSU, keep it. Write it in your phone book, your address book or on your wrist. And check your Academic Programs book for any questions on University policies. You might also give your advisor a break by planning your own schedule before you go to see him or her. Please go before the major rush periods — early enrollment, registration, and drops and adds. Thanks.

Our football team merits support

First, I would like to say that I read The State News daily and find for the most part that I have either learned something about MSU issues and/or enjoyed the feature articles very much. For that, I give you the credit you deserve.

However, while reading the very amusing article by Gerry Skoczylas entitled "Road trippin' in Columbus," I was startled (to say the least) to find that the article ended with the sentence "But then the cheerleaders were the only ones in Ohio Stadium wearing green and white that performed with any kind of pride or precision on Saturday." Surely you remember that infamous line, Gerry.

I realize that the MSU football team is not doing what everyone is paying to go see it do; however, MSU athletics and academics are, and always will be, based on pride and hard work. Who gave you the right to declare that the Spartans were not playing with pride, especially after you were given a trip paid for by the University?

Oh, I know, I am just a girl who does not know up from down when it comes to football, right? Wrong. I know that the team, like all teams, works hard on the practice field as well as in the game. If you don't think there is any pride there, then you are the one with no pride, not the team or the rest of the fans. Think about that the next time you get a free trip to an away game. Some of us are proud enough of the green and white team to pay our own way to the games.

East Lansing's new wave rock 'n roll scene

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Staff Writer

Editor's Note: This is the first installment in a two-part story on East Lansing's growing new wave rock scene. Lansing's first new wave band (it was still called "punk" at the time) was Tool Box. The four-member group first appeared during the spring of 1977 — Talking Heads was an unrecorded house band at CBGB's, Bookie's was a gay bar, Blondie was a comic strip character, Elvis still meant Presley, heavy metal fans were asking "Patti who?", the Ramones were considered a joke, and the American media were first sensationalizing a "vulgar" British oddity called the Sex Pistols.

Needless to say, there were few venues open to the band at the time. Tool Box died a rapid and unfortunate death, although the band remains somewhat of a local legend to the few fortunate enough to have enjoyed the group's hard-edged rock and irreverent good time.

"Tool Box was way ahead of its time, and people in Lansing weren't ready for it," says Scott Slash (aka Forman). "Lansing has always been a victim of cultural lag, but we're still really surprised new wave took so long to hit the MSU area."

Slash is lead guitarist and vocalist of the Scott Slash Band, one of several bands at the core of Lansing's new grassroots rock 'n roll scene.

The band — comprised of Scott; Bill Breakdown (aka Alessi — keyboard and vocals); Peter Stougaard (guitar); Fred Hutchinson (bass) and Tom Edell (drums) — recently performed at Bookie's, Detroit's premier new wave club. The gig was certainly a long way from the first Mayo Hall "Punk" Party, for which the band performed rather spontaneously last spring.

"We heard they were looking for a band," says Scott, "so Bill, a drummer and I whipped up three songs and a rendition of 'Louie Louie.' We were well-received, and those three songs remain three of our favorites."

From the Mayo gig, the band slowly evolved into its present incarnation, with Scott and Bill handling the majority of the band's songwriting. Both agree that the group is trying to achieve a "commercial pop-rock sound," and they list some of their influences as Elvis Costello, the Police, the Clash, Joe Jackson, Blondie, Springsteen, the Ramones, the Romantics and commercial reggae.

"But I have to admit that Holly Near is probably my favorite artist," adds Scott.

The band performed with Your Mother at the Rainbow Ranch last August, and anyone who caught their set would have to agree that the group has "commercial potential."

The band's set is very power-pop oriented, and some of their better tunes include "French Lessons" (which they hope to record as a single), "Hot For A Minute" (which is literally a reggae version of "Heart & Soul" — TERRIFIC as absurd as it may sound), "Bothering You" (a teenage anthem complete with Ramones-like "Heys!") and "Jonestown Shuffle" ("It's an audience participation dance tune," explains Bill. "You just lay down on the floor and we pass Kool-Aid out to the kids.") In addition, the band performs several covers running the gamut from the Standells' "Dirty Water" to the

Police's "Next To You."

"Most of our songs are about sex," explains Scott, "but we're starting to think about writing songs like the Beatles did about raccoons and stuff. Seriously, we'd like to write more songs about the times, in general. We like to make people think a bit, and put some intellectualism into our lyrics."

An example of this might be the lines "You've been reading too much Nietzsche/Talking anarchy on the telephone" from the song, "I Don't Get Girls." ("Nietzsche didn't get any either," explains Bill.)

The Scott Slash Band did two shows for the local public access station, but the members agree that both were disappointments due to the lack of a good monitor system. The band also prefers "concert type performances" over bar gigs.

"I'm not saying our music is super-commercial because we like staying on the edge of it all," explains Scott. "We're not going to churn out product solely for mass America since I don't like to see bands that keep repeating themselves and don't grow. Blondie could eventually be the Chicago or Ted Nugent of tomorrow. But we do like songs the audience can sing along with — melody is the key."

"We're basically a rock 'n roll band," he adds. "Other bands in town are playing fairly experimental music — it's clever, it's funny — and that's good. But we basically like to rock."

One of these "clever experimental" bands is Trainable, perhaps Lansing's best known recent new wave group. Like Scott Slash, the first real formation of Trainable was the result of a band being needed for a local "punk" party gig.

This one was with Detroit's Destroy All Monsters at Olds Plaza in Lansing last February.

Prior to the Olds Plaza gig, Trainable had been a small "punk jug band," according to founding member, John Erskine. Erskine claims that he formed Trainable "out of frustration with acting and other creative outlets," namely the CETA-funded Lansing Arts Encounter, of which he is a former member. Following the Olds Plaza party, the band gained new notoriety by placing as "most original runner-up" in WMSN's Sound Challenge battle-of-the-bands contest last spring.

Although Trainable once included twelve members, the band has since been reduced to six (a seventh member — "Dr. Jazz" or Randy Samuels — is currently on sabbatical from the group). Trainable is currently comprised of "Butehy Marie" (aka Erskine — vocals); "Amber Marie" (aka Sherry Block — vocals); "Bum N. Out" (aka Mark Duffy — guitar); "Bo' Bro' Mo" (aka Glenn Hokey — bass); "Borgon" (aka Roger Gluckin — saxophone); and "Jonathan El" (aka Jonathan Lawniczak — drums).

Trainable is into avant-garde concepts more along the DEVO / Pere Ubu / Talking Heads school of thought, and the band has taken the idea of new wave/punk one step further by creating what the members term "microwave rock."

"It's the concept of trainability in the '80s," explains Duffy. "If you can be made to function in a specific way, then you're trainable. The training is more inward than outward. For example, I'm training to play guitar. I've only been playing for two and a half years, and this is my first time in a band on a serious level." (This comes as somewhat of a surprise, since Duffy is an excellent guitarist.)

Erskine elaborates: "We're trying to deal with our musical abilities the best we can. We explore musical directions we have very little knowledge of and learn them through exploration. It's like a quote I once read in the New Musical Express — 'We compose music we can't play and then proceed to play it.'"

"We're more concerned with musicianship than most new wave bands," continues Erskine. "We identify primarily with several new wave bands on the fringe, like Pere Ubu, which are currently bringing more musical influences into rock than has been seen since psychedelia. And it's much less pretentious than 'art rock.'"

The Scott Slash Band

Erskine adds that Trainable's recent primary focus has been staging, which also includes multi-media effects. "We believe in spectacle," he says, and informs this writer that the band's Halloween performance at Olde World (the first Trainable gig I saw) — which was WEIRD but enjoyable — was "nothing out of the ordinary."

Of all the Lansing area bands, Trainable would seem to be the most likely to lean toward a political persuasion, especially in light of the fact that every member was involved in radical politics at MSU during one time or another. However, Erskine claims that any political leanings the band might have would be classified as "anarcho syndicalist."

"We're not romantic," says Duffy, "but we're not cynical either. We'd rather come out (continued on page 6)

Leading voice teacher in MSU Arena tonight

Kristin Linklater, who is acknowledged to be one of the world's leading voice instructors, will discuss her method at 8 tonight in the Arena Theatre.

Linklater was educated in England, where she trained as an actress at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art. After teaching voice production there Linklater moved to New York and opened her own studio. In 1972 she received a Ford Foundation grant, which she used to write Freeing the Natural Voice, which was published in 1976.

Linklater has coached a number of major theatrical groups, including The Royal Shakespeare Company and the Lincoln Center Repertory Company. She is currently working in a three-year program called the Working Theatre, training actors to teach an integrated combination of voice, acting and movement.

Admission is $1.

Schaeffer one-acts in Arena tomorrow

Two one-act dramas by English playwright Peter Schaeffer will be performed in MSU's Arena Theatre tomorrow through Saturday at 9:15 p.m. The Private Ear and The Public Eye are companion pieces written in 1962 by the writer of the Tony-winning play, Equus. Admission is $1.

The plays are directed by Dennis Martin (The Private Ear) and Bruce Marr (The Public Eye) and both are sponsored by the MSU Department of Theatre. The Private Ear involves a classical music buff who can't relate to the world or women but can find comfort in his music. The second, more optimistic play, The Public Eye, concerns a husband who hires a private eye to spy on the somewhat liberated activities of his wife.

and say something in a humorous manner rather than a pessimistic one."

"Sarcasm and satire," elaborates Erskine. "I guess you could say we're political in that vein. A song like 'Nuke The Whales' is actually very political in its absurdity."

Overall, Erskine explains Trainable as "a total antithesis of current popular culture." However, the band is accomplishing this by blending together the great popular culture elements of the past and — in the process — helping to create the popular culture of the future.

In this respect, Trainable takes what the B-52s appear to be one step further by toying the line between accessibility and the avant-garde. For example, the band's "Smile Button Baby" sounds like a de-evolved Jefferson Airplane Grateful Dead classic. On the other hand, "Acceptable Risk" is a trainable-sized '50s doo-wop, complete with Elvis Presley-like vocals. Into this forte, the band blends exploratory free-form music from the Roscoe Mitchell school, but they're not too proud to include a satirical, straight C&W tune entitled "Tribute to the Duke" in their set.

MSU runs over Gophers, 31-17

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

Believe it or not, MSU won a football game Saturday without the benefit of a forward pass.

The Spartans threw just four passes and didn't complete any, but they grounded out 385 yards in steamrolling the University of Minnesota, 31-17, in the season's final home game.

Their offense is explosive and our plan was to keep them off the field," MSU coach

Darryl Rogers said. "Once we started running, we could've passed, but we were going so well we stayed with it. And we accomplished what we wanted to do. Minnesota had only four possessions in the first half."

DEREK HUGHES WAS the big gun for the Spartans, gaining 213 yards and scoring all four MSU touchdowns. Almost overlooked by Hughes' effort was Steve Smith, who picked up 96 yards. Smith now needs 142 yards in the season finale next Saturday at the University of Iowa to get 1,000 yards for the year.

MSU quarterback Bryan Clark didn't mind taking a back seat to Hughes. "I would have liked to complete a few passes, but I knew we would have to beat them by controlling the ball," said Clark, who took over the signal calling duties at midseason from the still-ailing

Bert Vaughn. "There were a few times at the line when I thought about passing, but I decided to stick with the run."

Although the passing of Minnesota quarterback Mark Carlson posed a problem for the Spartans at times, MSU came up with several key sacks on the quarterback that killed Gopher drives.

"WE BLITZED MORE today because we had them in certain situations where we knew they were going to throw and went after them," MSU linebacker Danny Bass said.

"They seemed to get to our guy (Carlson) more than anyone else has this season," Minnesota coach Joe Salem pointed out. Carlson was sacked five times.

Hughes scored his first touchdown early in the second quarter to give MSU a 7-0 lead. It came on a one-yard run around left end.

After the Gophers marched right back to get their only points of the half on a 23-yard Paul Rogind field goal, Hughes broke loose up the middle on a 22-yard draw play to give the Spartans a 14-3 lead.

WITH JUST TWO seconds to go before intermission, Morten Andersen nailed a 53-yard field goal to send MSU into the locker room with a 17-3 lead. The kick marked the fourth time this season that Andersen had booted a three-pointer right before the end of the first half, and all four came from at least 50 yards out.

Minnesota quickly erased the deficit, scoring on its first two possessions of the second half. MSU's Steve Smith fumbled the opening kickoff of the half and three plays later the Gophers cut MSU's lead to 17-10. Tailback Marion Barber ran one yard for the score. (continued on page 8)

Hughes turns year around with big day

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

Until Saturday, Derek Hughes had been somewhat of a disappointment for the MSU football team this season.

As a freshman last season, the Spartan tailback showed brilliant potential, averaging almost 10 yards a carry and picking up more than 400 yards rushing despite being MSU's fourth-string tailback.

HOW TO HIT MOM AND DAD UP FOR YOUR HOLIDAY TRIP HOME.
It's easy.
All you have to do is cut out, sign and send the letter below.

Dear Mom and Dad,

How are you? I'm fine, and the doctor says I'll feel even better when I get a few days' rest and a couple of home-cooked meals. But with the condition of my wallet, it looks like I'll have to hitchhike home for the holidays.

My roommate just made plans to go home with Greyhound and says Greyhound is a great way to fight inflation because their fares are so reasonable.

Greyhound even makes it possible for someone to prepay a ticket in one place so someone at another place can just pick up the ticket and come home. You can even send along a small cash advance with the ticket. Greyhound will take care of everything for just a small fee. Boy — is my roommate lucky.

Well, I have to run to pick up some more of that expensive medicine. I miss you all very much and hope to be home next weekend.

Love and kisses,

Icers split with Huskies

By JEFF HITTNER
State News Sports Writer

Proving that it is indeed a club to be reckoned with, the MSU hockey team gained a split of its series with Michigan Tech in Houghton over the weekend.

The Spartans stunned a highly-regarded Huskies team with a 5-4 overtime victory Friday before dropping a 6-2 decision Saturday.

It was the 1-2 scoring punch of Leo Lynett and Russ Welch, the Western Collegiate Hockey Association's top two scorers going into the series, along with the fine goaltending of Mark Mazzoleni, that carried MSU to its second league win of the season Friday.

Lynett scored three goals for his second hat trick of the season, including a shot that knotted the game at 4-4, while Welch provided the game-winning goal in overtime.

MAZZOLENI, WHO WAS starting his first game since injuring his ankle two weeks ago, staved off 38 shots by Michigan Tech — including 17 in the first period to keep the Huskies off the board.

WCHA Standings

Team	W	L	Pts
Michigan	5	1	10
Minnesota	4	2	8
North Dakota	4	2	8
Michigan Tech	3	3	6
Wisconsin	3	3	6
Notre Dame	3	3	6
Colorado Col.	3	3	6
MSU	2	4	4
Denver	2	4	4
Minn.-Duluth	1	5	2

The Spartans took a 2-0 lead in the contest on power play goals by Lynett early in the first and second periods.

The Huskies collected the game's next four goals to take a 4-1 lead. Todd Scott, Per-Ake Johansson and Steve Murphy connected on shots in the second period while Greg Hay concluded Michigan Tech's scoring with a strike early in the third period on a power play.

But the Spartans weren't finished yet. Frank Finn scored his second shorthanded goal of the season less than two minutes later to pull MSU to within one.

Lynett tied the score with his third goal of the night and 11th of the season at 11:15 of the period.

THAT SET THE stage for Welch's game-winner at 6:51 of the overtime period. With Michigan Tech's Brent DeNat off for elbowing, Welch netted his eighth goal of the season off the power play.

Mark Hamway provided assists on all three MSU power play goals in the game to give him a team-leading total of 10 for the season.

B-ball ticket info

Students who have not yet purchased basketball tickets still have a chance. Tickets will go on sale at a price of $12.50 per six-game series ticket from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. today — and, if necessary, Tuesday, at the south end of Jensen Fieldhouse. Students should bring a fee receipt and an I.D. in order to purchase tickets.

If all tickets are still not sold, the remainder will be available to any students, from 1 to 3:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Mazzoleni held off the Huskies when he had to and made some of the big plays MSU coach Ron Mason has been looking for from his goaltenders.

"Mazz played very well, especially in the first period when he saved 17 shots," Mason said. "He re-injured his ankle early in the game but not seriously. He fought it off and went on to play a fine game."

Mason was particularly pleased about the way his club fought back from a 4-2 deficit.

WE PLAYED the second and third periods as well as the overtime the way we had to," Mason said. "Lynett and Welch had fine games for us again. We deserved to win."

Michigan Tech was the aggressor Saturday, jumping out to a 3-0 lead with two goals in the first period and one midway through the second. The Huskies were never headed the rest of the way.

Nick Schwartz, Al Mickalich and Mel Pearson collected the Huskies' goals.

MSU got on the board with Ted Huesing's fifth goal of the season off a power play at 14:09 of the second period.

But Jeff Wylie netted a goal late in the period and Murphy added his second of the series early in the third to give the Huskies a 5-1 margin.

THE SPARTANS CLOSED the gap to 5-2 on Paul Gottwald's second goal of the season at 5:57. His strike was MSU's sixth power play success of the series.

Rodger Moy added a goal with just under seven minutes left to play to make it a 6-2 final.

Doug Belland could save only 26 shots in the MSU net as he suffered his fourth loss against one win.

"Michigan Tech is one of the top teams in the league," Mason emphasized. "For us to get two points (one win) up there is quite an accomplishment."

The Spartans, whose record is now 2-4 in the WCHA and 3-5 overall, travel to the University of Notre Dame next weekend.

National tourney beckons MSU stickers

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's field hockey team qualified for the national tournament to be held later this month by finishing second in regional competition in Mt. Pleasant over the weekend.

The stickers, representing Michigan as the state champion, beat the University of Wisconsin, 2-1, and Central Michigan University, 1-0, en route to the finals where they lost to Davis and Elkins College of West Virginia, 7-2.

In the Wisconsin game the Spartans missed a number of shots in the early stages of the game, contributing to a scoreless first half.

IN THE SECOND half, Jennie Klepinger passed the ball out to Marie Herman, who stopped it for Doreen Roud-bush. Roudbush slammed it home for a 1-0 MSU advantage.

Wisconsin tied the game ten minutes later, but with a minute-and-a-half left to play in regulation time, Klepinger fed a pass to Barb Oakley, who converted it into the game-winner.

About the CMU game, MSU head coach Sam Kajornsin said, "Like always, it was a back and forth type of game."

Fifteen minutes into the contest, it was Oakley again for the Spartans as she scored the only goal of the game on a rebound off the Central Michigan goalie.

"CMU played a lot in our territory in the second half," Kajornsin said, "but our defense was just too tough."

SCHULIST ADVANCES TO NATIONALS

Harriers fifth in district meet out of 20 teams in the District IV Championships.

But the big winner was Spartan harrier Martin Schulist, who finished fifth individually in 32:21.

The MSU team missed a fourth-place finish and a chance to go to the national championship by just three points, but will be represented there by Schulist, who placed first out of those runners not on one of the first through fourth place teams, which automatically qualified for the nationals.

"We ran the best race of the year," said country coach Jim Gibbard. "We really improved over the last race at the Big Ten championship." And improve they did, finishing ahead of the universities of Minnesota and Illinois, two teams that beat MSU last week at the Big Ten meet.

First place finisher in Saturday's contest was the University of Indiana led by All-American sophomore Jim Spivey, who placed second in 31:56, contributing to an Indiana team score of 84. The University of Wisconsin placed second with 85 points, boasting the first place finish of Badger Jim Stintz, who conquered the course in 31:32.1.

Cleveland State placed third with 106 followed by U-M with 124, MSU with 127, Illinois State University with 135, the University of Minnesota with 166, the University of Illinois with 190, Western Michigan University with 224 and Notre Dame with 232.

Individual third place honors went to Don James of Cleveland State University with a time of 32:09. Dai Heikkinen of U-M placed fourth in 32:16, followed by Schulist.

Other individual finishers for MSU were Michael White, who placed 23rd in 33:03, Keith Moore, 25th in 33:34; Mark Messler, 41st in 33:26; and Ted Unold, 51st in 33:39.

Next Saturday Lehigh University will host the NCAA national men's cross country championships where Schulist will compete.

for the defensive corps, enabling the stickers to move into the finals.

In qualifying for the final game of the tournament, the Spartans were also assured of a berth in the national tourney in Princeton, N.J., Nov. 28 through Dec. 1.

"Last year against Davis and Elkins, we lost 4-0," Kajornsin said. "We knew coming into the game that they hadn't lost anybody from last year's team and that they had an excellent recruiting year as well."

In the game, MSU attacked well and often, but could not come up with a goal until the second half.

Trailing 2-0 at halftime, MSU came out for the second stanza and scored twice, but as Kajornsin put it, "They scored five."

KAJORN SIN FURTHER NOTED that the Spartans looked almost too loose in the finals and played a very slow game, while realizing all the while that the stickers lost to a very fine team.

Spartans run past Gophers, 31-17

After moving 91 yards in eight plays and having a touchdown pass called back by nullifying penalties, fullback Garry White knotted the score with a nine-yard touchdown run.

On its next possession, Minnesota missed a chance to go ahead when Rogind missed a 46-yard field goal. After this it was all Hughes, MSU, and its fans.

ONE PLAY AFTER the missed field goal, Hughes busted a 71-yard touchdown run around left end that put MSU on top for good. Early in the fourth quarter, he scored again, this time on a 22-yard run.

"That touchdown gave us the bigger lead and they couldn't be patient on offense anymore," Rogers said.

Finally, with about a minute left, the MSU fans, who had been pelting the player with snowballs throughout the game, stormed out on the field and began to destroy the goal post in the south end zone and delayed the finish of the game.

Hughes has finest day

bothered by bumps and bruises. He had been moved from tailback to wide receiver by coach Darryl Rogers because injuries had decimated MSU's pass catching corps.

BUT SATURDAY WAS Derek Hughes' day. He carried 31 times for 213 yards and scored all four MSU touchdowns as the Spartans beat Minnesota, 31-17.

"I think this turned my season around because I did what I do best — run the ball," he said afterwards, a big smile across his face. "I got a chance to run the ball today."

Getting a chance to run the ball is something new to Hughes. Because of his move to split end earlier in the year and because when he does play he alternates with Steve Smith, Hughes had carried only 80 times in MSU's nine games before Saturday's.

His four touchdowns tied an MSU record for most scores in one game and his 213 yards is the fourth best one-game total in Spartan history. One of Hughes' touchdown runs went for 71 yards.

"(MSU quarterback) Bryan Clark audibled at the line of scrimmage to an off-tackle and we caught them in a different defense," Hughes explained. "The cornerback was blitzing and I dipped in so (wide receiver) Jimmy Williams could pick him up, which he did beautifully and I cut around end."

WHEN HUGHES IS on, like Saturday, he is awesome. Some people feel that if he could put everything together, Hughes could be a Heisman Trophy candidate.

"It's a possibility, but that's all," the 6-foot-3, 194-pound Hughes said. "I'm just going to do my best. It would be great to bring the Heisman to Michigan State, whether it's me or someone else."

While Saturday's performance won't win him this season's Heisman, it has turned the season around for Derek Hughes.

Roses picture

(UPI) — Despite Michigan's 24-21 loss to Purdue on Saturday, the Big Ten title and Rose Bowl bid still will be on the line when the Wolverines host fifth-ranked and unbeaten Ohio State University Saturday.

Ohio State, which assured itself of at least a tie for the Big Ten title by defeating Iowa, is the likely participant from the Big Ten in the Rose Bowl.

All OSU must do is either tie or defeat Michigan. Ohio State could still lose to Michigan and go to the Rose Bowl if Purdue defeats Indiana.

If Purdue defeats Indiana, Michigan will be out of the Rose Bowl picture regardless of the OSU-Michigan outcome. But if Purdue loses and Michigan wins, the Wolverines would go to Pasadena.

Purdue won't be going to the Rose Bowl regardless.

EXPECTS TOUGHER PENALTIES FOR CRIMINALS

Parole board official retires proud

By MARK FELLOWS
State News Staff Writer

Michigan, the first state to outlaw capital punishment, may soon return to the death penalty by force of popular opinion, says a 26-year member of the Michigan Parole Board.

Leonard R. McConnell, recently retired chairperson of the Michigan Parole Board and one of the most distinguished corrections professionals in the country, said the state is moving towards more harsh punishment for criminals.

In 26 years of corrections service in Michigan, McConnell has seen the pendulum of public opinion swing to the right and left, but, he says, it never stops in the middle.

That is why he is proud of the Michigan Parole Board. As professional civil service employees, board members remain consistent and non-political in discharging their duties, McConnell says, and are less likely to be swayed by public opinion.

A BRIEF LOOK at McConnell's 39-year career explains his familiarity with the state and national correction systems.

A graduate in social work from Indiana University, McConnell started his career as a parole officer at the Indiana Boy's School in 1940, and then in the Marion County Juvenile Court in Indianapolis.

In 1943 McConnell set up a community recreation program in the war boom community of Muskegon which saw a large influx of mostly southern immigrants seeking work.

The program was a preventative measure to help familiarize the new residents to the community and to each other. The program still remains as the Muskegon Urban League.

"That is one thing I left to posterity as an ambitious and energetic young man," he says with pride. "I get a great deal of joy and satisfaction from having helped and directed those people's lives on constructive paths."

McCONNELL RECALLS THAT both the current chief of police and the superintendent of schools participated in his programs. He came to Lansing in 1946 to supervise counseling services at the Boys Vocational School, an institution for delinquent young men.

Chemical additives in food

"For this reason, it often is assumed a product is safe because it has been in general use a long time," he said. "Repeatedly it has been shown that long term use is no guarantee of safety."

Longgood said many additives were never designed specifically for use in foods, but had other purposes.

"Piperonal, an inexpensive substitute for costly vanilla flavoring, is also fine for killing lice," he said. "A nutty flavor may be imparted by butyraldehyde, an ingredient of rubber cement and synthetic resins."

"That cherry taste probably is aldehyde C-17, a flammable liquid often found in aniline dyes, plastics and synthetic rubbers."

Processing and adding chemicals to food is big business, he added.

"FOOD IS TREATED like any other commodity of exchange; something to be produced as quickly and cheaply as possible and sold for maximum returns," he said.

"It's good business but, almost invariably, bad nutrition."

But dietitians, while knowing additives are not always safe, do advocate their use in small amounts to retard food spoilage or add nutrition.

"Not all additives are bad," said Marilyn Mook, MSU instructor of Food Science and Human Nutrition. "Iodine, a nutritional additive, is added to salt to prevent diseases such as goiters."

Additives are chemicals, but so is food, she said. Water is a chemical, and too much of it (gallons) can kill a person. She said all chemicals should be used in moderation.

MOOK AGREED THAT scientists don't know the long term effects of additives in human beings.

"But you can't just pick out one thing and say it causes cancer," she said. "One person may be affected by a chemical while another may not."

"Ninety percent of cancer patients have telephones," she said, "but does that mean telephones cause cancer?"

Mook said that no additive is perfectly safe. "Scientists can only go by the information they have available now," she said.

Parole official proud of board's work

McConnell was selected for the Michigan Parole Board in 1953 on the basis of his score on a national competitive examination.

He was the first and only

Black on the board for twenty years, he said.

Since 1953 he has chaired and served on many national parole associations and currently serves on the Governor's Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice.

McCONNELL WAS NAMED the first permanent chairperson of the seven-member parole board in 1974, a post he held until his retirement Nov. 2.

McConnell estimates he has heard over 100,000 cases in his parole board career. All prisoners seeking an early release must be interviewed by the board.

"Our primary job is to protect the public, but just as important is making sure you are fair—you must balance the two."

McConnell has no regrets.

"Nobody has bought me yet," he smiles.

He expects prisons to become even more overcrowded with prisoners who have no incentive to improve their behavior, making an "impossible" problem for prison personnel.

Of the death penalty, McConnell says he wouldn't be surprised if it passed overwhelmingly if put on an election ballot.

He does see some good trends in criminal justice, however.

The trend toward due process and more humane treatment of prisoners is a good sign, he says.

Energy symposium tonight

The British representative for Friends of the Earth, an American environmental organization, will speak at an energy symposium in B-108 Wells Hall at 7:30 tonight.

Amory Lovins, a lecturer and author who has written anti-nuclear and soft energy books, will talk about soft energy forms.

He is a consultant physicist on energy matters whose clients include several United Nations agencies, Canada and the U.S. Office of Technology Assessment.

Responding to Lovins' comments will be Herman Koenig, director of the MSU Center for Environmental Quality; Claybourne Mitchell, assistant vice president of planning and research for Detroit Edison; Gordon Heins, vice president of systems operations for Consumers Power; and Daniel Demlow, chairperson of the Michigan Public Service Commission.

The symposium is sponsored by the Michigan Department of Commerce's Energy Administration and Global Issues of MSU.

Dept. of Commerce has available new listing of minority businesses

A directory of minority businesses has been published by the Michigan Department of Commerce.

The directory lists approximately 1,000 minority businesses across the state in various classifications such as name, location, product and industrial classification code.

The directory was printed to provide purchasers of goods and services with a list of minority businesses, said Thomas Johnson, Office of Economic Development.

Johnson said many governmental agencies and private businesses have been searching out minority businesses.

It is common policy of government and private enterprises to support minority businesses, he said.

More than 1,000 copies of the directory have been mailed to major businesses and organizations, Johnson said.

Copies of the directory are free and may be obtained by writing the Division of Minority Business Enterprise, Office of Economic Development, Department of Commerce, P.O. Box 30225, Lansing 48910.

"A KNOCKOUT ADVENTURE DESTINED TO BECOME A CLASSIC."

Nick Nolte... comes roaring back like a champion achieving cinematic immortality. Moviegoers may feel as vowed by Nick Nolte in this role as their counterparts were by Brando as Stanley Kowalski!

Far and away the best new movie of 1978.

—GARY ARNOLD, WASHINGTON POST

"Who'll Stop The Rain"

"As taut, terse and powerful as John Huston's 'Treasure Of The Sierra Madre,' Nolte demonstrates a subtle, masculine sexuality that is rare."

—JUDY STONE, SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

HERB JAFFE and GABRIEL KATZMAN present a KAREL REIZZ production with NICK NOLTE, TULLIO VILDI, MICHAEL MONTAGNA, "WHO'LL STOP THE RAIN," starring ANTHONY ZERRE, MARY ELLEN BENTLEY, ROBERT STONE, and ROBERT STONE. Music by LAURENCE ROSENTHAL. Screenplay by JUDITH RASCOE and ROBERT STONE. Directed by KAREL REIZZ. Produced by HERB JAFFE and GABRIEL KATZMAN. United Artists

FACE TO FACE

starring Liv Ullmann, Gunnar Bjornstrand, and Erland Josephson

Directed by Ingmar Bergman

FACE TO FACE portrays Liv Ullman's Jenny, as a happy capable, well-adjusted psychiatrist, surrounded by "the good things in life." With her husband abroad for three months, and daughter at camp, Jenny decides to leave their suburban home, and return to her maternal grandparent's home, who raised her after her parent's death. It is soon after that Jenny begins to slump into a series of dark fantasies, hallucinations, and strange occurrences begin. Face to Face is about a life-and-death struggle in which neither of the alternatives has commanding force. See Ullman at her very finest - hers is an intelligent, and devastating performance...

mers' Midland plant, will need many changes costing hundreds of millions of dollars.

Plants of the Fermi II type, he said, typically are capable of producing 50 to 55 percent of their capacity.

Decommissioning costs of nuclear plants are largely unknown, Freedkin said, with estimates running from 10 to 20 percent of the original construction costs.

"I wonder if the fuel for nuclear power plants will be available at all," Freedkin said, explaining that the uranium needed to operate those plants is being depleted in the United States.

Not everyone at the meeting opposed a nuclear buy-in by the BWL, however.

Chihro Kikuchi, of the Michigan Educators Forum, said the BWL's 4 percent growth prediction could also be an underestimate.

There is a limit to conservation, Kikuchi said, calling nuclear power the "one sure thing" in the future.

A representative of the Michigan Chapter of the American Nuclear Society, George Pickering, said nuclear power has been relatively harmless and was consistently cost competitive with coal.

Pickering called oil "the most dangerous fuel in the world today" due to political implications associated with it.

WILL 'CHANGE BALANCE OF POLITICAL POWER'

Liberals form new lobbying organization

DEARBORN (UPI) — About 150 liberal activists have formed a new statewide organization designed to "change the balance of political power" through consolidated lobbying efforts in Lansing.

Organizers said the group, called the Democratic Citizen's Caucus, was formed in an effort to counter the political beating liberals have been taking on a variety of issues in the legislature.

"We have to put our concerns on the public agenda and then make that agenda public policy in Michigan," said Rep. Jeffrey Padden, D-Wyandotte, an organizer of Saturday's founding conference.

"We have to change the balance of political power in the state of Michigan," Padden said.

Padden and Sen. Douglas Ross, D-Oak Park, another conference organizer, said the new group will press state lawmakers on issues such as wetlands protection, land use planning, utility rate reform and political ethics.

"Those of us who are concerned with these issues are losing," Ross said. "We don't win those fights. What we are trying to do is to rebuild the progressive non-labor wing of the Democratic party."

Padden said there are lawmakers in Lansing who are sympathetic to the liberals on a number of matters, but are "drifting to the right because the only pressure they feel is from the right."

The new organization will attempt to reverse that trend, lobby lawmakers on specific issues and try to influence the Democratic party's direction at its August 1980 state convention, Padden and Ross said.

State party leaders know of the group's intentions, and so far have expressed no opposition, the two lawmakers said.

But another conference participant, Bob Alexander, an aide to Sen. Edward Pierce, D-Ann Arbor, said Democratic conservatives likely would resist the liberals' new political assault.

"What we are doing will be perceived as a threat to the status quo," Alexander said.

"The people in power will not welcome us. If we don't expect that, we'll be in for a bloodbath."

Organizers admitted they will have to improve Black involvement in the new group.

Senate confronts committee budget savings issue

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Senate, taking one more look at the long-overdue 1980 budget, must decide whether to insist on its demand that congressional committees achieve $3.6 billion in savings.

The savings issue has become the one remaining obstacle to passage of the 1980 budget, which covers the fiscal year that started Oct. 1, a full six weeks ago.

A Senate vote on the budget is expected this week. The House deleted the proposed savings order — known as "reconciliation" — when it approved the $547.6 billion budget last Thursday.

The Senate had approved the spending package on Wednesday with reconciliation included.

The House vote gives the Senate a choice between accepting removal of reconciliation or shipping the budget back to a House Senate conference committee for a new round of negotiations.

President Carter's "windfall profits" tax is also ready for Senate floor action this week.

THE SENATE FINANCE Committee recommended a tax less than one-half as tough as the president proposed last spring when he announced the lifting of domestic crude oil price controls.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who is challenging Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination, is expected to work with other Senate liberals to toughen the tax.

Carter wants a so-called "windfall profits" tax to accompany his program for gradually ending price controls on domestically produced oil. Technically, the tax would be on the extra revenue, not profits, from decontrol. Without the tax, oil companies would keep more of the revenue as profits.

Kennedy has urged Carter to veto the windfall tax and re-impose controls unless Congress approves a tax that reclaims at least half of the revenues resulting from decontrol.

The Senate Finance Committee's version sets a tax rate of 27 percent, although oil companies would also have to pay income taxes on their decontrol-related revenues.

IN THE HOUSE, a vote is scheduled Tuesday on establishing Jan. 15, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday, as a national holiday in honor of the slain civil rights leader.

The King birthday proposal has the support of the House Democratic leadership.

Meanwhile, the delay in approving a budget is unprecedented in the five-year history of the congressional budget process, which was designed to force Congress to set priorities within an overall spending ceiling.

"Ways to cope and future programs for single parents living in University Apartments will also be discussed," she added.
