Water, Light member is asked to resign

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

Ratepayers United, a group critical of recent actions by the Lansing Board of Water and Light, called for the resignation of Earl Brush, the utility's general manager, Tuesday.

In a letter to the BWL board members, the group said Brush's "latest action in manipulating the market opinion research poll . . . without knowledge of the polling committee chairperson Jack Sebolt, is a blatant act of insubordination and an arrogant act of power, and what should be the last straw for the Board."

The board had commissioned a poll to be taken of 800 Lansing residents on Nov. 14 before a decision as to which energy option to take was made.

One of the three members of Ratepayers United who signed the letter was Marty Bakken who unsuccessfully attempted to get a position on the board.

ALSO SIGNING THE letter were Dick Holmes, editor and business manager of the Lansing Labor News, and Tracy Dobson, a lawyer for PIRGIM.

However, Lane Jessop, a member of the board, called the letter "a silly thing."

Jessop said Brush was nationally recognized for his engineering abilities and "you don't fire the best man you can get."

"It's a bunch of lies," Jessop said. "But then that's typical of the people that signed the letter. That's all they come up with."

Other members of the board either could not be reached for comment or had not seen the letter.

THE FOUR OPTIONS being considered are conservation; more power from coal; buying into the Midland and Fermi II nuclear plants or purchasing power from those plants via joining the Michigan Public Power Agency — an agency made up of 18 small municipal utilities.

Brush has supported joining the Michigan Public Power Agency, while Ratepayers United have supported conservation or coal.

BWL's citizen board has not reached a decision as to which option it will take. At its last meeting on Nov. 14, however, one member proposed that BWL join the Michigan Public Power Agency, Holmes said.

Another board member asked how the BWL could have credibility with people if a resolution were adopted before the poll was taken, Holmes said.

At that point, according to Holmes, Brush said he had been confident the proposal would pass and had contacted the pollsters who assured the poll would not be affected by the BWL vote.

HOLMES ADDED THAT Brush's contact with the pollsters had been made without the authority of Sebolt, the BWL polling committee chairperson.

Furthermore, Joe Wolfe, assistant general manager and director of operations at the BWL, had said at the Nov. 7 meeting that the poll had already been "locked in" and could not be changed, Holmes added.

Both Sebolt and Brush were out-of-town Tuesday and could not be reached for comment.

"He takes too much power," Holmes said of Brush. "He forgets what's administration and what's policy setting."

Brush's job is purely administrative.

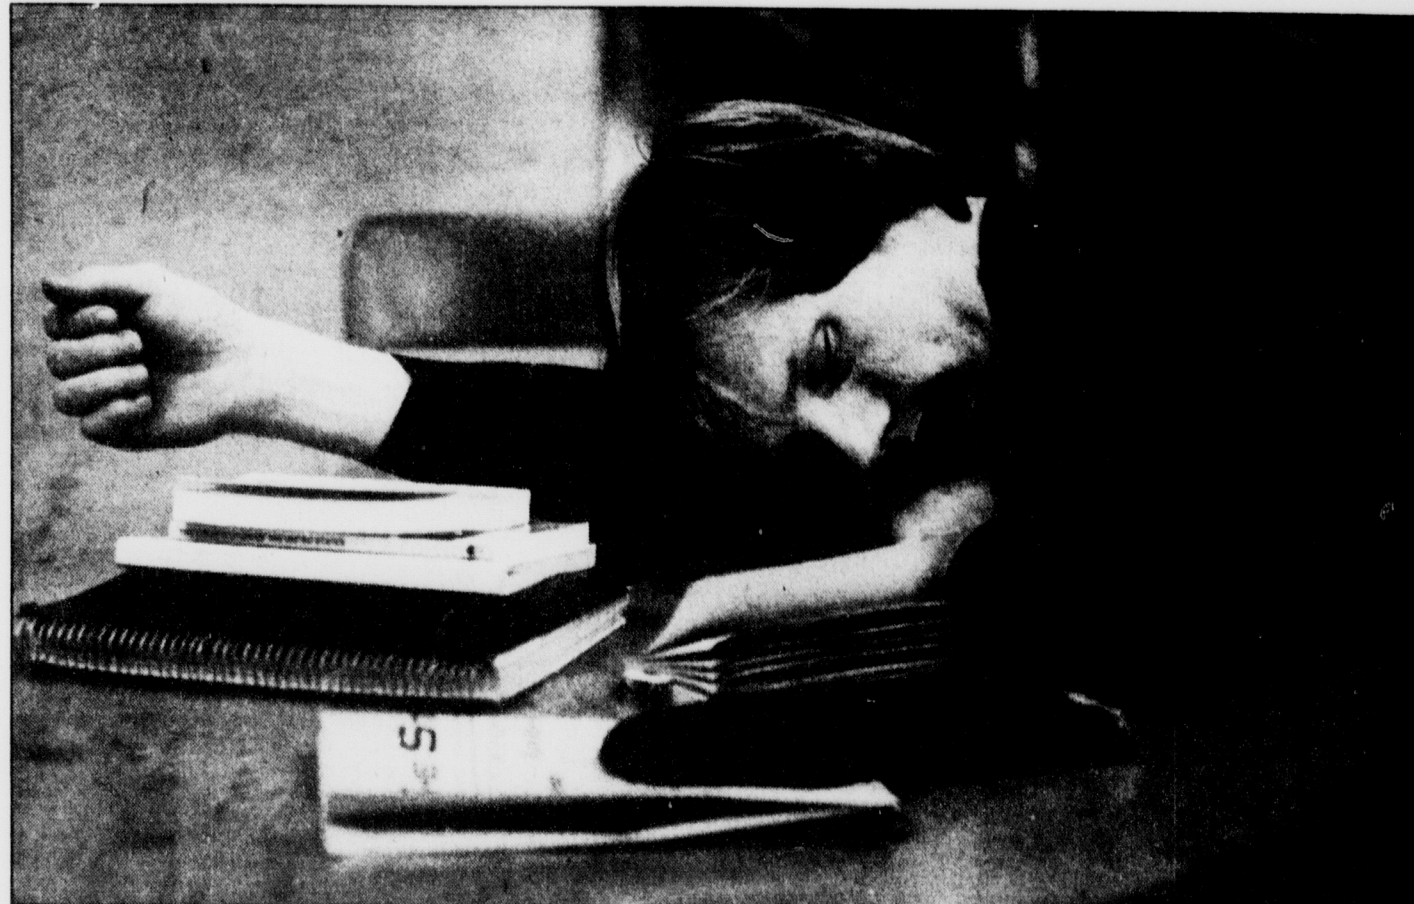

Holmes added.

THE RATEPAYER'S UNITED letter said that although Brush "may be a top notch engineer, his administrative ability is sorely lacking. His attitude toward coal as a fuel source is pessimistic."

"We feel Lansing deserves better and recommend that Mr. Brush be replaced with an expert that wants to keep our BWL local."

Holmes said the BWL would lose local control if they bought into a nuclear power plant or joined the Michigan Public Power Agency.

"We think that's wrong," he added, "to join an agency and have one-nineteenth of a voice and spend millions of taxpayers dollars."

Catnaps are on the rise around campus as many students bear down in preparation for final exams next week. Business major Dale Barnett takes an unplanned break while studying for his finals in the Library.

IRAN'S MILITARY READIES DEFENSE

Iranians say mines set in embassy

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran — Islamic militants said Tuesday they have rigged the U.S. Embassy to blow up on command, and the Iranian armed forces went on alert as Tehran seethed with rumors of an impending U.S. attack and warnings that American agents were plotting to infiltrate the embassy.

The U.N. Security Council met for only 16 minutes at its headquarters in New York in response to Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim's urgent call for a session on the crisis. The meeting was limited to two speakers — Waldheim and Council President Sergio Palacios de Vizzio of Bolivia — and the session then adjourned until 9 p.m. EST Saturday when Iran's acting Foreign Minister Abolhasan Bani Sadr is expected to be present.

Waldheim appealed to the United States and Iran "to avoid any action which could inflame" the situation over the holding of 49 American hostages in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. Palacios de Vizzio reiterated an appeal to Iran he made on behalf of the 15-member Council on Nov. 9, asking for the immediate release of the hostages.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, convinced the United States had the council on its side, rejected in advance any decision it might make as "dictated" by Washington.

THE IRANIAN LEADER also raised anew the prospect that the American hostages will be put on trial as "spies."

In Washington, White House press secretary Jody Powell announced President Carter would hold a news conference in the White House at 9 p.m. EST Wednesday because "The president felt the American people deserve an opportunity to hear from him."

At New York Hospital, the man at the heart of the 25-day-old international confrontation — the exiled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi — underwent an operation Monday in which a team of doctors removed a gallstone from his bile duct.

A hospital spokesperson said Pahlavi would remain under observation for a few days. But it was believed the deposed monarch would probably be able to return to his exile home in Mexico after that.

UAW signs $203 million for Chrysler relief

By JAMES V. HIGGINS
United Press International

DETROIT — United Auto Workers union President Douglas Fraser signed contracts Tuesday providing $203 million in cash relief to the ailing Chrysler Corp. and rebuked critics seeking greater concessions from workers.

Fraser said it is "a bit disappointing" that the sacrifices Chrysler workers approved in the contract "are little appreciated in some quarters."

"I get awful weary of people calling on workers to make greater sacrifices . . . particularly people who have done absolutely nothing," Fraser said at a news conference after participating in formal contract signing ceremonies.

Yet Fraser said the UAW is willing to consider additional forms of financial help to Chrysler outside of the contract. Two possibilities he raised were stock purchases by the union and allowing Chrysler to defer additional pension payments.

HE ALSO SAID he has not completely ruled out the possibility the contract would be reopened for negotiating additional cash breaks for Chrysler. But that would require "the most unusual circumstances" — such as the imminent collapse of the company.

"I can't conceive of a situation where the survival of the Chrysler Corp. is going to depend solely on the workers giving still more," Fraser said.

The contract has drawn criticism from several quarters in Washington, where Chrysler is seeking Congressional approval for a $1.5 billion in loan guarantees.

Critics have charged that the $203 million in cash relief — funds Chrysler would have to pay if it had followed auto industry contracts at General Motors Corp. and the Ford Motor Co., — does not really amount to a sacrifice by workers and that additional cuts in wages and benefits should be negotiated.

The Ford and GM pacts represented 33 percent increases in overall compensation.

WHAT THOSE CRITICS are overlooking, Fraser said, is that 30,000 hourly Chrysler workers are permanently laid off and thousands more are working reduced schedules.

It is now up to other parties with a stake in Chrysler's survival to come forward with financial help, Fraser said.

The delay in enacting federal loan guarantees is damaging the company, he said. "With each statement we're making, it's more difficult for Chrysler to survive," Fraser said. "The more we agonize . . . the more difficult it is to sell cars."

"The delay is so damaging. It just costs sales every day and jobs every day."

COPIES OF THE three-year agreement were passed around the bargaining table at Chrysler headquarters and signed by negotiators for both sides, unless there is a renegotiation, it marked the final formal action in 1979 auto industry contract talks.

The $203 million in cash concession were in the form of delayed wage, pension and other benefit increases and reductions in paid holidays as compared with the GM and Ford pacts.

The UAW also agreed earlier to let Chrysler defer for one year a $200 million pension fund payment.

The company expects to lose $1 billion this year, but says it can regain profitability if the federal government guarantees loans it needs to keep tooling plans on schedule.

Campaign launched to lower drinking age

By MICHAEL VEH
State News Staff Writer

A "grass roots" campaign to lower Michigan's drinking age was officially kicked-off by Rep. Richard Fitzpatrick at a press conference Tuesday.

"The 21-year-old drinking age is a sham. It is not being enforced; it cannot be enforced," Fitzpatrick said.

"I believe it is better that the legal drinking age in Michigan be 19 and strictly enforced," he said, "than be 21 and mocked."

The Battle Creek Democrat said petitions will be circulated by a group called Citizens for a Fair Drinking Age in an effort to gather 350,000 signatures and have the issue placed on the November 1980 ballot.

R. DOUGLAS HARGETT, a Battle Creek resident and executive director of the organization, said the group can be successful with good organization and strong support for a lower age.

Hargett said the group already has representatives on 40 college campuses around the state, including MSU, who will be organizing students to help fight for the lower drinking age.

The organization expects additional support because they are attempting to lower the legal age to 19 and not to the previous age of 18, he said.

"Many feel that 18 is too young, but that 21 is too old," Hargett said.

He pointed out that the main reason for raising the drinking age was to keep alcohol out of high schools and that reducing the age to 19 will accomplish the same thing without penalizing young adults who are no longer in high school.

"To punish the majority of the 19 and 20 year olds because a few in their age group abuse alcohol is wrong," Fitzpatrick said.

HE SAID THAT arguments can be presented to support raising the drinking age to 19 but he can find "no rational reason for having it above that."

"There is no reason to discriminate," Fitzpatrick said.

Hargett said his group wants to have a campaign organized by college students and other young adults.

"We intend to coordinate everyone interested in the issue in one united campaign," he said.

Fitzpatrick said the effects of 1978's Proposal D are not what they were expected to be.

IN SPITE OF the overall decrease in the number of drinking drivers involved in automobile accidents the number of drinking drivers between the ages of 18 and 20 has increased, he said.

"Young people have left the bars, but have taken to drinking in their cars," Fitzpatrick said.

Fitzpatrick said the present 21 law does not work because it lacks the support and respect of the young people, bar and store employees and police forces influenced by it.

Mackey and Thompson — an 'inseparable' team

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

Editor's Note: This is the first in a three part series on MSU President Cecil Mackey's past and present administrative policies.

LUBBOCK, Texas — At almost every university today there is an administrator who is considered by the president to be second in command.

Officially, MSU President Cecil Mackey has seven vice presidents who serve in various capacities with approximately equal responsibility.

However, the man who is considered by many to be Mackey's second in command is Kenneth Thompson, vice president for operations.

Thompson has worked with Mackey in three administrations covering almost 10 years and is now considered "inseparable" from the president by some administrators who have seen the team work.

"MACKEY AND THOMPSON are like Batman and Robin," said J. Knox Jones Jr., vice president for research and graduate studies at Texas Tech University. "Neither would be as effective without the other."

Mackey served as president of Texas Tech from 1976 until August when he was named MSU's 16th president.

Thompson's association with Mackey through three administrations was described as a "logical progression" by Charles Hardwick, vice president for academic affairs at Texas

ANALYSIS

Tech.

"If Mackey were to leave Thompson, he (Thompson) would really have to prove himself," Hardwick said.

Despite his seemingly preferential treatment in obtaining his administrative positions, Thompson was well liked by the administrators he worked with.

"THERE WAS SOME resentment at first about Ken Thompson coming here," said Jack Baier, assistant vice president for student affairs at Texas Tech.

"He is rather young (31) for the pecking order of higher education," Baier said. "He did not have a doctorate and is opinionated which makes him seem like he comes on strongly. But he can handle budget problems 99 percent better than anyone else in the country," he added.

Thompson's position at MSU was created by Mackey this past summer at an annual salary of $58,000. Since that time there has been some speculation as to his official job responsibilities.

A formal outline of his duties is not expected to be approved by the Board of Trustees until the end of January.

THOMPSON'S PAST ADMINISTRATIVE experience has focused on budgets, physical aspects of the university and computer systems.

Much of this type of work is now done by Roger Wilkinson, MSU vice president for business and finance, and his staff.

"The president must have 100 percent trust in his financial officer," Baier said. "Many problems arise because of minor misappropriations of money. With Thompson it may take only 15 minutes for him to explain a complex problem with Dr. Mackey because they have worked together."

Baier said Thompson would probably "oversee" business operations until he became familiar with the procedures. He would then report back to Mackey, Baier explained. Thompson has already been selected by Mackey to do much of the groundwork for reorganizing MSU's executive branch.

"A FEW SHIFTS will probably appear within a year or so," Baier said.

"Thompson is a good soldier and will become Mackey's advisor on all matters," Jones added.

The conservative atmosphere which prevails at Texas Tech University gave Mackey time to implement his programs. The patience of the South, however, does not generally

Russian grain harvest lower than expected

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced Tuesday a 1979 grain harvest of 179 million metric tons, about 47 million tons short of the year's target figure and 58 million tons short of last year's record crop.

Figures were disclosed in a speech by President Leonid I. Brezhnev carried by the official Tass news agency.

The Soviet plan for grain production this year had called for the vast Soviet farmlands to produce 226 million metric tons. Western agricultural analysts attributed the bad harvest to wet weather during the harvest and a record cold winter.

The figures would make this year's grain harvest the worst since 1975, when Soviet farmers produced only 140.1 million metric tons.

So far, the Soviet Union has bought 8 million metric tons of corn and 4.4 million of wheat from the United States for delivery in 1979-1980. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds — equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

Protestors storm Michigan National Guard base

MOUNT CLEMENS (AP) — Pro-Iranian protestors stormed into Selfridge Air National Guard Base on Tuesday and demanded that the commanding officer tell the Pentagon to "keep your bloody hands off Iran."

While about 25 others burned an American flag and demonstrated outside the gates, five unarmed protestors barged into the office of Col. Raymond Even and insisted he call Washington and read a statement.

The five, four of whom claimed to be members of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War, were taken into custody for questioning by the FBI.

Even said three men entered his office while two other persons stood outside holding Henry Verrot, his civilian aide.

The colonel said he told the demonstrators he could not make a call to Washington because the two men outside his door had cut the telephone lines. He said he and his aide were freed after about 40 minutes when he told them he had to go to lunch.

The statement the protestors wanted read said, "U.S. keep your bloody hands off Iran; return the shah to face the wrath of the Iranian people; and no U.S. military action in Iran."

U.S. Steel announces plant closings

PITTSBURGH (AP) — U.S. Steel Corp. said Tuesday it would permanently shut down 16 steel and cement plants in eight states — throwing 13,000 employees out of work.

The company said the operations were no longer profitable because of the government indifference to the industry's problems, competition from imports and high operating costs.

No timetable was announced for the shutdowns, but U.S. Steel said several plants will operate well into 1980 to fill contracts.

"The operations being terminated at this time have become noncompetitive for a variety of reasons, including operating cost, unfairly priced imports or excessive environmental spending requirements," said company Chairperson David Roderick.

The decision was made at a board of directors meeting in New York.

"I didn't really expect it. I'm shocked," said Andy Sopko, president of United Steelworkers Local 1270 at the American Bridge plant in Ambridge, Pa., one of those affected.

Rise in housing costs pushes up inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sharpest rise in housing costs in three decades pushed consumer prices up another 1 percent in October, all but guaranteeing the worst inflation rate for a single year since 1946, the government said Tuesday.

Rapidly rising prices for energy slowed significantly during the month and food price increases showed a modest slowdown. But moderation in those areas was offset by a 1.5 percent jump in housing prices — the steepest monthly increase since 1947, the Labor Department said.

So far in 1979, consumer prices have risen 11 percent, and government economists predicted inflation was certain to top 13 percent for the year, the highest rate since war-time wage and price controls were lifted in 1946.

"You can say with certainty . . . that the inflation rate will be about 13.5 percent or higher for the year," said Theodore Torda, a senior economist at the Commerce Department.

Torda and R. Robert Russell, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, said they see no signs that inflation will slow in the coming months. In fact, the rate could accelerate when new consumer prices figures are reported next month, they said.

Road section collapses killing four in New York

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — The bodies of four persons, including a world class bobsledder, were pulled from a flood-swollen Adirondack Mountain stream Tuesday after a road collapsed and at least three cars plunged into the water.

Troopers said a 200-foot section of Route 9N just west of this tiny Essex County village was undermined by a raging tributary or the Bouquet River and collapsed into the stream about 7 p.m. Monday.

"It was like a nightmare," said Timothy Marvin, 32, one of two survivors.

N-plant saboteurs receive prison terms

SURRY, Va. (AP) — Two men convicted of deliberately damaging a nuclear power plant where they worked were sentenced to two-year prison terms Tuesday by a judge who called a jury's recommendation for such sentences "fair and not unduly harsh."

William Kuykendall, 26, of Newport News, and James Merrill, 24, of Hampton, each remained free on $10,000 bond after sentencing, pending appeal of their Oct. 16 convictions in Surry County Circuit Court.

Both admitted in June that they had poured sodium hydroxide, a caustic soda, on 62 stored fuel rod assemblies April 27 at the Surry nuclear plant of the Virginia Electric & Power Co.

They said they did so to dramatize what they called unsafe conditions and lax security at the two-reactor plant, which at the time was shut down for repairs and renovation.

Their trial in this rural southeastern Virginia community was believed to be the nation's first involving damage to a nuclear plant.

The sentence recommended by the jury was the minimum it could have given for the offense — damaging a public utility with intent to disrupt service. The maximum was seven years and a $10,000 fine.

CARTER SIGNS LEGISLATION

Poor get aid for winter fuel bills

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer

Washington (AP) — President Carter promised Tuesday to speed $1.35 billion into the hands of millions of poor Americans to help them pay higher fuel bills this winter.

Benefits and eligibility will vary widely from state to state, but are expected to average roughly $200 for each of an estimated 7 million or more eligible families.

"We will expedite the distribution of these funds," Carter said at the White House as he signed the new program into law.

Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare predicted that some states would be distributing their share of the money under the new program next month. She said the federal government will mail its share of the money Jan. 7.

THOSE ELIGIBLE for the aid include those receiving federal assistance for the blind, aged and disabled. State plans yet to be formulated will determine who else is eligible; most plans are expected to be based on who receives welfare assistance.

Colder, northern states receive the bulk of the money but even balmy Hawaii and Florida will get at least a little. Among those receiving the highest benefits are Iowa and New Hampshire, where Carter faces two early contests in his soon-to-be-announced campaign for renomination and re-election.

Checks for $400 million will be mailed by the federal government Jan. 7 to about 4 million recipients of Supplemental Security Income, which is federal welfare for aged, blind and disabled persons.

Under this portion of the program, benefits will range from $34 per person in Hawaii to $250 per person in Iowa, New Hampshire, North and South Dakota, Alaska, Connecticut, Idaho, Minnesota, Montana, Utah and Wyoming. No family may receive more than $250, even when two or more persons receive SSI payments.

About $800 million will be parceled out to state governors under plans which they must submit to the federal government for approval.

MOST ARE EXPECTED simply to distribute the funds to welfare recipients, those getting Aid to Families with Dependent Children. However, governors may opt for more exotic plans including payments directly to fuel suppliers or payments to food stamp recipients as well as those getting AFDC.

Kuwait may drop oil production

KUWAIT (AP) — An official of the Kuwaiti government said Tuesday that Treasury Secretary G. William Miller may have a difficult time persuading his government to keep up its oil production.

The official, who asked not be identified, said oil production is "decided by market considerations."

"The market has a logic of its own," he said. "If we fail to appreciate it, we will be just giving away handouts."

Kuwaiti officials have announced their intention to cut back on the country's oil production, now about 2.2 million barrels a day. However, they have not said when the cutback would occur, or how much is planned.

Estimates of the amount of a possible cutback range from 200,000 barrels a day to 500,000, although diplomatic sources say the lesser figure is the most likely.

Miller arrived in Kuwait on Tuesday on the third and final spot of a tour of Middle East oil nations, aimed at encouraging Saudi Arabia, Abu Dhabi and Kuwait to maintain current high levels of oil production. He also has been urging price restraint.

The oil minister of Abu

Dhabi, which produces about 1.4 million barrels a day, told Miller on Monday his country will maintain maximum production, although a slight cutback is necessary for technical reasons.

Saudi Arabian officials earlier had declined to commit themselves to continuing to produce at their current level of 9.5 million barrels a day. But officials traveling with Miller were hopeful they would decide to do this.

Before leaving Abu Dhabi Tuesday, Miller said statements by Oil Minister Mani Al-Otaiba, in favor of high production and price restraint, are "a contribution toward more orderly markets and pricing."

Al-Otaiba is also the outgoing chairperson of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which will meet on Dec. 17 in Caracas to decide on price increases for next year. Al-Otaiba said he thinks a slight increase is likely, but not the major increase that Miller wants.

In each country he has visited, Miller has used the same argument that high production levels are necessary to offset the slowdown in Iranian oil production.

Pope to meet Church leaders on Turkish trip

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — The government on Tuesday canceled a planned papal motorcade in Izmir, the scene of recent violent anti-American demonstrations, and announced heavy security measures for Pope John Paul II's three-day Turkish visit, which begins Wednesday.

Officials say there will be a minimum of contact between the pope and citizens because authorities are concerned about the political violence that is taking about five lives a day in this nation.

Government sources said 1,000 sharpshooters will be on guard in Izmir along with "assault squads" and Premier Suleyman Demirel said "all security measures" have been taken to protect the pontiff.

The pope is coming to Turkey to talk with leaders of the Eastern Orthodox Church's 200 million members about reunifying it with his Roman Catholic Church, now 700 million strong. It is his fourth visit to foreign lands this year, but this time there will not be the millions of cheering throngs.

Turkey's 45 million residents are 98 percent Moslem, and because of the growing violence and animosity in the Moslem world against the West, particularly in Iran, this NATO nation's welcome will probably be low-key, except for a few small crowds of Christians.

Newspapers of various ideological persuasions have questioned the timing of the visit. The right-wing Ergun Goze wrote: "This state (the Vatican) has committed crimes against humanity by organizing the crusades against the Moslems, slaughtering them by the millions . . ."

The official papal itinerary published by the Turkish government does not mention the pope's meeting with Eastern Orthodox Patriarch Demetrius I or other Eastern Orthodox leaders.

Crisis intensifies in embassy ordeal

The Iranian crisis has intensified over the last few days, and the possibility that the United States must take military action cannot be ignored. President Carter and his staff have waited patiently for Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to release the 49 American hostages. But the Iranian leader has yet to act responsibly to the request of our government.

Because of this, the United States must take actions necessary to guard the safety and lives of its citizenry — at home and abroad. We feel that at this time military action is not warranted, but it cannot be ruled out. This country cannot afford to become the victim of international blackmail. American citizens have the right to travel throughout the world without the constant fear that they will be used as pawns in a senseless game of political chess.

Carter has acted both calmly and diplomatically, but this has proven futile. Apparently Khomeini does not understand diplomacy. We do not proclaim that the United States wage war against Iran, but we do suggest that this country continue economic sanctions to induce the Iranians to free the 49 American hostages.

Carter is in a precarious situation. He cannot allow Americans to be manipulated by foreigners, but he also cannot risk a confrontation with Russia. Russia has agreed to help Iran if any military action is taken against the Iranian people. For this and other reasons, Carter must be careful how he handles this crisis.

Khomeini has proclaimed America to be a "satanic" nation full of devils. He has tried to wage a religious war against this country. He has preached a dogma that cannot be tolerated. One has to question the mentality of a man that chooses to wage "holy war."

Khomeini's recent announcement that Iranians should arm themselves and mobilize is seemingly asinine. But Khomeini is apparently serious and he should be treated as such. His citizens have proclaimed themselves martyrs, and they are prepared to die for the Iranian cause. America cannot tolerate the senseless capture of Americans by foreign countries.

The president must stand strong in this crisis, and the American people must stand behind him. The United States has made human rights an issue in world politics and we cannot go against our philosophy by returning the shah to Iran.

The shah has stated he will return to Mexico when he is fit to travel. We feel that he has the right to go there, and should be allowed to do so. If Khomeini wishes to continue holding the hostages once the shah leaves America, then Khomeini and the people who support him must be dealt with effectively and swiftly.

Arena required

There have been fewer concerts by leading, big name entertainers at MSU because the University does not have adequate concert facilities.

Jenison Fieldhouse has the largest auditorium on campus but it is inaccessible most of fall and winter terms because of Spartan basketball practice and intramural sports. Moreover, Jenison can only seat 10,000.

Students at MSU should have access to as many types of entertainment as possible, including concerts in large and small facilities. The MSU community is certainly large enough to support big name entertainers who now opt to perform in larger arenas in Detroit and Ann Arbor.

MSU unquestionably needs an on-campus arena which is bigger than Jenison and more suitable for concerts. A new arena could be used for many purposes in addition to concerts — specifically, for Spartan basketball games.

Jenison is not large enough to seat the number of people wishing to see MSU basketball games, and its limited seating capacity also places Pop Entertainment at a disadvantage in attempting to book large concerts. Major acts generally do not want to perform in an arena as small as Jenison. Its poor acoustics also make it undesirable as a concert facility.

A new arena would alleviate much of this space problem — it would provide more space for the Spartan basketball fans to enjoy the games, as well as better facilities for local concert-goers.

1979: The year in perspective

As 1979 comes to a close, I wonder what the future holds for the United States. Although there is another month remaining before 1980 arrives, this is the last column I will write this year. It seems appropriate that I take a look at a few things that concern me. Granted, this column may not say much but it may, by chance, raise a few interesting questions.

One of the first questions I have is how long will President Carter threaten to initiate military action against Iran before he actually sends troops there? As the situation now stands, there is little chance that the American hostages will be freed. The Ayatollah usually speaks in religious overtones, and whether one believes that is good or bad is not important. But what is important is that we realize that the Ayatollah is serious. Through his religious beliefs, he speaks with a confidence that leaves no room for compromise.

That leaves the United States in a precarious situation. This country has to decide whether to send troops to Iran, further risking the lives of the hostages or to try continuing with diplomatic negotiations. In the past, the government has relied on direct and covert action to solve some political and international problems. Covert action was used in 1957 when the American government put the shah back in control of Iran and again in 1960 when we tried to oust Fidel Castro.

One has to wonder if Ayatollah Khomeini's comments that Americans backed the takeover of the Grand Mosque in Mecca are valid. Although the comments may not seem rational, the thought they raise is conceivable.

Often wonder if this country will attempt a new Bay of Pigs operation with the Kurdish people as the new American-trained resurgence forces. Once again, the thought is not inconceivable. This country has been involved in numerous coups, and an attempted one in Iran would not be inconsistent with past American policy.

There are some countries that vehemently fight American rule. This country was booting out of Vietnam, and is currently being attacked by some sections of the Arab community. The American rhetoric of self-determination is being felt in many Third World countries. Because these countries are looking for some levels of self-sufficiency, many are breaking their economic dependence on the United States. That should be of no surprise.

Much of the economic instability in Third World countries is related to the inconsistency of the American dollar. The American dollar has significantly decreased in value over the past decade. Consequently, economic troubles are rampant. This country continues to import more goods than it exports, and one of the leading automakers is falling by the wayside. If Chrysler Corp. is allowed to fail, the problems that will result in Detroit (and other cities) will be catastrophic. Can you imagine all of Chrysler's workers unemployed and on the streets? Not only will Chrysler's employees suffer, but so will those of related businesses.

Chrysler does not supply all of the materials it uses. The companies that do a large amount of business with Chrysler will falter, and this country will experience one of its most debilitating debacles. The thought of foreign unrest focused at the United States becoming worse is frightful, although perhaps somewhat exaggerated. It is possible that the moves by the Ayatollah are only isolated moves that will not be duplicated by other nations. It is also likely that the government will step in to save Chrysler. But the mere thoughts of the Ayatollah's actions and of Chrysler's failure are enough to make one wonder about the '80s.

Political and economic concerns are not the only question marks of the future. There are many social problems that need to be dealt with. One has to wonder what will become of the Ku Klux Klan marches, the anti-Klan marches, the fight to secure effective affirmative action programs and future reverse discrimination lawsuits.

In spite of all the problems that loom over this country, the future still holds some bright spots. What they are has yet to be seen. But there are some — I hope. In 1970, this country had many problems, and now that 1980 is just around the corner, the country has even more. Is the United States capable of surviving the '80s? There is an old prophecy that says: "The first will become the last, and the last will become the first." I wonder if that is happening now.

VIEWPOINT: UNDERSTANDING

Informed citizens benefit community

By DEBRA AMAIRE BONJEAN

These past few weeks have created an aura of anguish among residents concerned over the emphasis placed on the issue of violence in our community. A great deal of attention has been directed to the subject of rape, with the underlying message pointing to the topic as one for concern of both men and women.

Women on the MSU campus have had their awareness sharpened about the extremely high incidence of violence they are subjected to. Once again, anger and fear are at peak levels in our community.

I would like to direct attention to the rape seminar that was conducted last Tuesday at MSU. The seminar ended in a rather heated debate, leaving those who attended a "little hot under the collar." I felt angered by one gentleman's comment when he stated "I think men are tired of being blamed . . . I think they are tired of being told that they did it."

To the gentleman who made the comment, my response to that cold and calloused viewpoint is the following: Women do not want to be raped, nor do they necessarily desire to blame men for the misfortune that accompanies such an ordeal. The facts are clear that in this particular type of situation (one of rape) men assume the role of the aggressor. Your statement raises the thought in my mind about just how little "real awareness" you have with respect to the subject of rape. I think women would like men to better appreciate the extremely difficult circumstances that accompany its occurrence. For a woman, the trauma, psychological, physical and emotional implications are severe and very often do permanent damage.

I question your ability to deal with a rape situation where the victim is a member of your family; your wife, a close friend, or perhaps even your daughter. Would you be able to deal with such a situation? Could you furnish the support that the victim would require? Your lack of objectivity on the issue greatly limits your ability to do so. I must stress the importance of this key issue to every man in the East Lansing community.

This is the time for men to become more empathetic and more knowledgeable on the subject of rape. Now is the time to utilize that new learning in an effective manner. Women want your support and your efforts. They want the strength to help reduce to a minimum the incidences of physical violence.

There are numerous ways for persons to become actively involved: rape education seminars, literature on sexuality and personal relationships, etc. All these steps require are your time, concern and perhaps sincere efforts to care. I encourage all persons in the community to look into some of these steps; if not for yourself, then for someone you love . . . someone close to you.

Bonjean is an East Lansing resident.

Diplomatic priorities should change

I would like to respond to everyone of you angry students who demonstrated on Nov. 12. I wonder how many of you understand the reasons behind the embassy takeover. Maybe if you did, you wouldn't be so quick to run around condemning Iranian people and their actions. I am just as concerned as you are for the safe return of those American hostages, but I am also concerned about the reasons these hostages are being held. Are they being held because the U.S. government insists on harboring the shah, a man responsible for the bloody murders of 70,000 people in one year? Is this man more important than the lives of American people?

Think of how angry you and I are over the hostage situation, and then imagine how you would feel if thousands of your brothers and sisters were murdered by a man like the shah. (Maybe you think Iranians are not human and don't have feelings.) The fact is that the Iranian people have made it clear since February 18 that the shah is wanted to stand trial for political crimes in Iran, yet the U.S. government welcomed him into this country with open arms. It is perfectly logical for the Iranians to want the man responsible for so many murders. The U.S.

government, by not reporting the complete story, has created a blind hatred among Americans toward Iranian people. Their response to this government's protection of the shah is the same human response we would have if the tables were turned.

Back to the question of why the U.S. government insists on protecting this criminal at the expense of American lives? All it shows me is that the government approves of the murders committed by the shah! Maybe the government doesn't want to admit to its long support of the shah and his terrorist regime. Perhaps that is why it refuses to recognize him as the criminal he is. Do you think that saving our government from a little embarrassment is worth the lives of the American hostages? Even the hostages are appealing to Carter over national television and asking him are not their lives more important than the life of one political criminal? The government is so concerned with being the No. 1, all powerful, not to be pushed around country that it is willing to sacrifice the hostages' lives today as it was to sacrifice 50,000 lives during the Vietnam war.

Business restrictions are unfair

After reading the November 15 editorial on why United Airlines should not be allowed to move out of Lansing until a replacement airline is found, I feel that some defense of United is in order.

Just as any corporation can drop a product that it manufactures whenever and however it wishes (to maintain a strong, profitable position), United should be allowed to drop any low revenue route. Almost all transportation companies in this country are privately owned, profit-seeking companies, but are unfortunately prevented from acting as such because they must operate under the undue regulation of government agencies.

Moving to other routes where monetary returns would be greater is good basic business sense, and United should be allowed to do so whenever and from wherever it wishes. That Lansing would lose air service to Detroit is false. Republic covers this route quite extensively. United, in fact, does not fly between Lansing and Detroit anyway. Republic also serves Chicago, and United would continue to do, as our editorial stated.

For years the railroads have had to haul selected freight below cost, provide service on unprofitable lines, and maintain money-draining passenger service, thus weakening the economy for the public's supposed benefit. Now, the automakers are finding out how crippling government regulations can be. So, if United wishes to go elsewhere to pursue higher profits, I would rather they do that, than have citizens subsidize them later.

An odd duo plays the blues

By RENALDO MIGALDI
State News Reviewer

A PROBLEM: Sonny Terry and Brownie McGhee hate each other, and their music suffers for it.

I
Y'see, here I am at Lizard's Monday night sitting way in the back by the pool tables. Somewhere up there, Sonny Terry and Brownie McGhee, the famous old blues duo from down South, are playing but I can't hear beans thanks to the Lizard's sound system. The music sounds like a slightly structured chaos; although a funky chaos, mind you. They're not exactly bad. They just seem . . . disorganized. Can't put my finger on it. Maybe another beer will help me get this thing figured out. It is absolutely necessary that I get a seat directly in front of the stage for the next show. You can't let an inadequate PA get in the way of your critical judgment.

Waiting for the second set to begin. The stranger sitting next to me asks if I've ever seen Sonny Terry and Brownie McGhee before. "Nah," I tell him, "I've heard their records here and there and I sure dig the blues but I must say I've never seen them live or even followed their careers much."

This said, the guy leans over. "Well I see you have a pencil and paper there so I know you're writing this up for the paper. Let me fill you in on these two."

III
When Brownie McGhee was just a kid, he caught polio and it left one of his legs all twisted. That's why his right shoe has a sole three inches thicker than the other. But he gets around fine. Here he comes up on stage. Nobody applauds. They must not know who he is.

Here comes Sonny Terry. Listen to that crowd! Sonny's an old man (so is Brownie) and his eyes can't see a thing, so he's being led on stage by the drummer. Sonny sits down on his stool, stands up and smiles to take the applause. He's wearing a big wide leather belt with pockets for all his harmonicas.

Brownie McGhee turns toward him and yells something.
IV
"Ain't got a dime/Can't save a cent/Pay my bills/Can't pay my rent/My poor woman/She mad all the time/Don't want me to go/On no welfare line/I'm gonna die/Like I live/In poverty."

A living blues legend reflects on the past

By NORMAN HAJJAR

Editor's Note: Norman Hajjar's boyhood idol was Sonny Terry. Monday night, he got to jam with his idol backstage.

Sonny Terry expresses his genius through the unlikely vehicle of a harmonica or "blues harp" — a lousy little 10-hole, $8, nickel-plated noisemaker. A noisemaker, that is, in ordinary hands. Sonny can do things with this "noisemaker" that has astonished audiences around the world.

In a way, Sonny is the Segovia of the blues harp. Before Segovia, no "serious" student of music would have ever considered approaching the guitar. The guitar was an instrument for minstrels and troubadours. Segovia, through his total mastery of the instrument, brought respectability to the guitar. Likewise, Sonny Terry was the first to bring virtuosity to the blues harp. Although there were a few capable blues harp men in the 1920s (notably George "Bullet" Williams) who preceded Sonny's first appearance on a recording (in 1936), none of these early artists comes even close to having the profound effect on the instrument that Sonny had.

Sonny, now 68, is the last of the first wave of blues harp musicians still active. He is a living musical artifact. It would be a mistake, however, to confuse Sonny with a dusty museum dinosaur; Sonny still plays with the same joyful abandon that marked his early recordings. Amazingly, he still seems to be learning his instrument, continually adding stylistic embellishments to his imitable style.

Sea Level's music at stylistic crossroad

By ROSS BOISSONEAU

State News Reviewer

Originally an offshoot of the Allman Brothers Band formed by former Allman members Chuck Leavell and Jaimoe, numerous personnel changes and the reformation of the Allman Brothers Band have left Sea Level at a musical crossroad.

Initially more original than the other Southern boogie outfits, Sea Level as yet has not had the commercial success of groups such as the Allmans or the Marshall Tucker Band. Perhaps looking for more commercial acceptance, the performance at Dooley's Monday evening showed the band to be getting away from its jazz influences and returning to a bluesier, down-home sound. But with a reformed Allman Brothers Band, is their continued existence really a necessity?

Well, the crowd Monday night would certainly say so. Featuring guitarists Davis Causey and Jimmy Nalls, the band's sound was at once pleasing and exciting, if rather derivative. The sax playing of Randall Bramblett was competent, if uninspired, while his vocals, along with those of Leavell, were one of the high points of the evening.

The band was well received throughout the show. Most of the tunes were familiar to the Sea Level aficionados in the audience, including the brilliant "Grant Larceny," from their first album. But even on this tune, Leavell's jazz-flavored keyboards were kept to a minimum.

Therein lies the problem. Leavell's keyboards have always been the strength of the band. With the addition of a percussionist, another keyboardist, and another guitarist, his impact on the band seems to have been lessened. If he's once again take charge and give the band a direction to go, they would be much better off. They're too good to be lost in the backwater of Charlie Daniels-Dickey Betts Southern boogie blues rock bands, but until they find their own style and direction, they won't be commercially or artistically successful.

Opening for Sea Level was a local band, Tour de Force. A five piece featuring mostly original compositions, they are somewhat in the Steely Dan-Eagles tradition of sharp, laid-back rock. They played a 40-minute set of originals of varying quality. With some work on their vocals and some editing of their too long tunes, they could easily move forward in the music world.

'THE ONION FIELD'

Wambaugh's input doesn't save film

By MARY TINNEY
State News Reviewer

The Onion Field (Avco Embassy, at the Spartan Triplex) is the true story of the 1963 kidnapping of two police officers and the subsequent murder of one. In the tradition of Truman Capote's engrossing book turned film, In Cold Blood, the film is taken from the 1973 book, The Onion Field, by Joseph Wambaugh. Sadly, Wambaugh's film version carries none of the impact of Capote's — the film is uneven, uninspired and generally uninteresting.

Wambaugh, an ex-police officer known for such books as The Blue Knight and The Choirboys, wrote the screenplay for The Onion Field. After years of seeing his works hacked up by rewrite men (he refused to allow his name to be attached to the film version of The Choirboys), he was determined that the film version of The Onion Field would be true to the book.

This may, in fact, be the ultimate reason behind the failure of the movie. The Onion Field worries so much about being literal and true that it becomes a mass of almost incoherent faces and situations. It skips and jumps from circumstance to circumstance until the viewer isn't sure who has what information or how much time has passed since the murder.

The story is essentially a simple one. Karl Hettinger (John Savage) and Ian Campbell (Ted Danson) are two young officers who run into a couple of suspicious-looking characters one night on the streets of Los Angeles. The two thugs, Greg Powell (James Woods) and Jimmy Smith (Franklyn Seales) are out to rob a liquor store. Panicking, they pull guns on the cops and take them out to an onion field where they intend to dump them and make their get-away. Powell goes a little berserk and kills Campbell. Hettinger gets away, and Powell and Smith are picked up the next day and charged with murder.

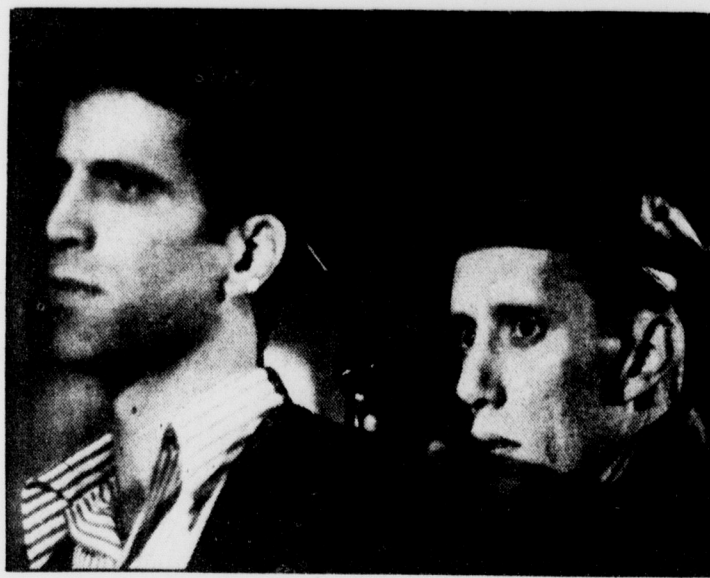

It is here that the story divides into three stories and gets hopelessly tangled up in itself. We follow the arrest of Powell and Smith and are shown the confusions over who fired what shots, who is actually to blame, etc. Ronny Cox is introduced as a potentially interesting character. Pierce Brooks, the compassionate and concerned officer in charge of investigating the crime. Cox disappears after about ten minutes and by the time he pops up again in the last few minutes of the movie we've forgotten that he's even in the cast.

Suddenly we realize that Hettinger is acting a little strange. As a matter of fact, he's shoplifting and is forced to resign from the police force. Later in the movie, at an appeal six years after the crime, we hear the prosecuting attorney tell the judge that Hettinger has been depressed, suicidal and has become a kleptomaniac because of his guilt over the death of his partner. We are never shown this transition from grief to guilt. We are never, in fact, shown any particularly strong displays of grief. What motivates Hettinger is simply lost in a movie trying to do too many things at once.

The last sub-plot involves the trial itself, which is confused, mismanaged, and generally a mess. Enter District Attorney Phil Halpin (David Huffman) who gives a little speech on why he's quitting the law (I'd like to let Powell and Smith free and send the lawyers and judges to the gas chamber instead.) and then disappears in the tradition of Ronny Cox.

What we end up with is a confusion of names, faces and intentions. The moral of the story is that the judicial system stinks, guilt can drive you crazy and crime doesn't pay, none of which we're really convinced of and all of which seem pretty trivial by the time the movie finally manages to wrap itself up.

The performances in The Onion Field are as confused as the movie itself. John Savage is an interesting actor. His restless energy is absorbing at times, but his character is lost, incompletely developed and inaccessible. (This, I believe, through no fault of his own — Savage was brilliant in both The Deerhunter and Hair.) Hettinger's wife Helen is played by the infamous Diane Hull.

Gregory Powell (James Woods) holds plainclothes police officer Ian Campbell (Ted Danson) at gunpoint in the Avco Embassy production of Joseph Wambaugh's The Onion Field.

previously seen in the dismal hit, Aloha Bobby and Rose. Hull, whose character prefaces everything she says with, "I know I'm not very smart," or "I don't know a lot," puts so much wide-eyed sweetness and self-effacement into the role that one begins to wish Savage would just step on her and put her out of her misery. If this is an accurate portrait of Hettinger's wife, it's a wonder he didn't go crazy sooner.

Franklyn Seales, a newcomer to the screen, fares the best as the thief who never planned on hurting anyone. His whimpering gets irritating after a while, but all in all he manages to add a little believability to an otherwise generally uninspired cast.

James Woods, previously seen in Holocaust, seems as if he should be a college frat boy rather than a murderous punk. His character is too slick, somehow too intelligent.

The film has an ending that drags on forever and pulls at every heartstring available. None of it is effective at all by this point. The next time that Wambaugh thinks of making one of his books into a film, it might be advisable for him to limit his influence. The Onion Field is proof that literal translations from literature to film don't always work.

Terry &amp; McGhee

Sonny's singing now, and doing incredible things on the harp. But Brownie won't back him up. Instead of playing rhythm (as he does for his own singing), Brownie's playing lead lines, sometimes so loud you can't hear Sonny. And there's no bassist to hold things together, so what we have here is CHAOS... almost. Fortunately, Sonny doesn't really need anyone else. He's GREAT.

The guy says to me, "Look! Here's one of the greatest blues harp soloists alive, and Brownie won't let him take a solo!"

Brownie finishes his tune, but the crowd is applauding for Sonny, who's standing up and waving. Brownie gets mad. "Lissen folks," he says, "Lemme thank you before I go, I'm just a guest up here, that's all. I been put outa better places. I got no business bein' here. I been up here too long anyway..."

Stevie turns introspective on new LP

By CHRIS RIZIK

When Stevie Wonder's music is on, it can be breathtaking; and when it's off, well, it still causes a gasp or two. Before being touched by a needle, Stevie Wonder's Journey Through The Secret Life Of Plants (Tamla TI-37C2) has two strikes against it.

First, it is a soundtrack, and thus is created to play a supporting role in the movie The Secret Life of Plants. This secondary position is unusual for Wonder, who's overpowering music stands alone among insightful and enjoyable LP.

On Journey, Wonder turns away from the pop commercialism of Songs towards a far more introspective array of cuts. Besides the topic of brotherhood so evident on Songs, Journey deals with creation, ancient mythology, corruption, simplicity, and death, using plants as its messengers. Stevie also covers a much greater variety of styles, borrowing elements from swing, Eastern Oriental, Tribal African, American jazz, and even funeral marches. These many

The problem with many of these songs is that though they may be very effective as background music in the movie, by themselves they are meaningless. The thunder, rainfall and other special effects used in "Earth's Creation" and "Voyage to India" wear thin after a few listenings, and the foreign flavor of "Ai No Sono," "Kesse Ye Lolo De Ye" and the morose "Ecclesiastes" dies soon after.

Wonder is most effective when leaning on his R&B background. On "Same Old Story," "Power Flower," "The Secret Life of Plants," and the beautiful "Black Orchid," Stevie matches the soulful brilliance so evident in Songs In The Key Of Life. He also diverges successfully into a jazz/swing style in "Send One Your Love," the album's most infectiously delightful song. These cuts are quintessential Stevie Wonder, and thus make the album worthwhile.

The main problem with Stevie Wonder's Journey Through The Secret Life Of Plants is that Stevie Wonder attempts to combine an enigmatically sensuous soundtrack with a much lighter, happier pop album. "Earth's Creation" contrasts "Send One Your Love" too much to be on the same LP. Journey could make two very good albums if each considered in its proper vein. But together, the opposing forces make neither a convincing soundtrack nor a very powerful R&B disc.

However, amidst this confusion, traces of genius can be seen. Stevie Wonder shows an insight and grasp of music unequalled by any other contemporary artist. His ability to excel at nearly any style of music he attempts is awesome. Though Journey may seem incohesive at times, the three year process of creation is very evident and enriching. And while Stevie Wonder may not click perfectly on this LP, the album's raw power leads him out of the '70s still atop popular music, and into the '80s as modern music's premier performer.

Album courtesy of Discount Records.

On Journey, Wonder turns away from the pop commercialism of Songs towards a far more introspective array of cuts.

pop/soul performers. Secondly, the LP is limited to the theme of plants, a subject not usually dwelt upon in popular music. Theme albums often tend to sink into monotony (with the exceptions of such notables as Jesus Christ Superstar or the Who's Tommy), and it is indeed a task for the composer to keep his material fresh. A possible third strike is in attempting to follow up Wonder's pop/soul masterpiece, Songs In The Key Of Life, by far the most exciting and definitive R&B album this decade, in which Stevie drew from every element of rhythm and blues to form a truly styles work well to keep the album from sinking into a dull homogeneous sound, but in themselves cause another problem.

Though Wonder performs all these types of music accurately and fairly convincingly, he never connects them properly, and they end up a mish-mash of styles with no unifying factor. Stevie randomly puts these songs in order, not seeming to follow any specific pattern. Thus a song such as "Ai No Sono" — with its 17 Oriental singers — strangely follows the humorously jazz-flavored "Venus Flytrap and the Bug."

Sonny Terry discusses the blues

Throughout the '20s and '30s, Sonny made a living playing in the streets of southern cities, especially Durham, N.C. Nearly blinded at age 16 by two separate freak accidents, Sonny found that the occupational avenues normally open to Black men in the South during that period were all closed to him. He took to playing in the streets. "I'd start playing and people would crowd around me," Sonny remembers. "I'd take off my cap, lay it down, and people would throw quarters and dimes in it. The police would run me off of one corner and I'd pop up at another one... they'd run me off again, I'd pop up again. I always was hassling with the cops."

It was in the streets of Williamsburg, N.C. that Sonny met his first partner — guitarist Blind Boy Fuller. Sonny made several recordings with Fuller before the guitarist's death in 1940 from kidney failure. He teamed up with his present partner, Brownie McGhee, in New York City during the early '40s. It was in New York that Sonny shared an apartment for two years with the famed 12-string blues guitarist, Leadbelly. "We used to gather in Leadbelly's backyard every Monday, when all the clubs were closed. Blue Monday we'd call it. Me and Brownie would be there."

So would Memphis Slim, Big Bill Broonzy, Burl Ives, Pete Seeger, Woody Guthrie, Josh White... everybody. We'd all chip in on beer and play until it got dark." This small cadre of musicians were to form a central pool from which countless contemporary rock, blues, jazz and country artists have drawn inspiration. Sonny Terry was very much a part of that tradition.

It is disconcerting, though not surprising, to find that Sonny Terry remains — in spite of his enormous talent — relatively obscure. Although blues fans everywhere instantly recognize Sonny's name, he is still accorded the same degree of relative insularity from the mass culture accorded countless other latter day musical geniuses, such as Charlie Parker or Meade Lux Lewis. The average listeners have never heard of these people, yet their radios are jumping with their legacy.

Sonny Terry is humble. He knows what he has contributed, and he is justifiably proud. To Sonny though, the glory and the crowds are secondary. He'd be blowing his harp no matter what happened. I believe him when he says, "just because I'm getting regular work now don't mean nothing. If I had to blow harp in the street again, I wouldn't be afraid to do it. I'm a harp player, man."

MSU whips AIA sans Magic, Greg

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

Earvin who? Gregory who? The MSU basketball team will be just fine without Messrs. Johnson and Kelser this season, thank you.

The Spartans opened up a 39-23 halftime lead and coasted to a convincing 85-67 victory over a travel and battle weary Athletics in Action squad in Jenison Fieldhouse Tuesday night in the season opener for the defending NCAA champions, albeit a non-counting contest.

At times it looked like Johnson and Kelser were playing for the Spartans. MSU fast broke to countless baskets in rolling up its big halftime bulge and although AIA severed the margin to 10 in the second half, it really never got back into the game.

MSU never trailed. Jay Vincent hit a base line jumper to give the Spartans the game's first bucket and from there, MSU spurred to leads of 7-1, 13-3, 29-15 and 39-17.

The second half was rather lethargic on MSU's part, especially early. But after AIA whittled its deficit to 53-43 with nine minutes remaining, the Spartans went on a 13-6 spree to ice the game.

The Spartans got big nights out of their two big men. Forward Ron Charles poured in 17 points, several of them on rim-jarring slam dunks en route to hitting all of his seven field goal attempts, pulled down 11 rebounds and blocked five shots. Vincent, who showed no apparent signs of the foot injury that has plagued him throughout pre-season practice, scored 15 points. AIA's Brad Hoffman was the game's leading scorer with 22 points.

"I think the whole team had confidence in each other," said transfer guard Kevin Smith from a jubilant Spartan locker room. Smith sat out last season after playing as a freshman at the University of Detroit and in a starting assignment, scored four points and had three assists.

"It was sort of like a challenge to the team. We wanted to show we could play without Earvin and Greg."

MSU forward Ron 'Bobo' Charles scores two of his 17 points in the Spartans' 85-67 win over Athletics in Action Tuesday night. Charles hit seven of seven from the field and three of three from the free throw line in the game.

'Hammer' is real knockout for icers

By JEFF HITLER
State News Sports Writer

Athletes are nicknamed for a variety of reasons. It is usually because of their style of play, the way they look or something unusual they have done.

But Mark Hamway, the MSU hockey team's gifted freshman right wing, can only shrug his shoulders and grin sheepishly when asked why he has the nickname "Hammer."

Of course, it could simply be a revised version of his last name. But it is also an appropriate way to describe Hamway's uncanny ability to hit an open teammate for a goal that knocks out the other team.

THINK OF IT as the Spartans putting the "Hammer" on their opponents.

Hamway, a 6-foot, 178-pound Detroit native out of Bishop Borgess High School, has made 11 assists in the Spartans' 12 games this season, including two on game-winning goals.

His season point total of 15, which includes four goals, is fourth on the MSU squad.

Although the "Hammer" plays a regular line shift, he also joins Russ Welch and Leo Lynett on the ice whenever the Spartans have a power play opportunity. And the results have been impressive.

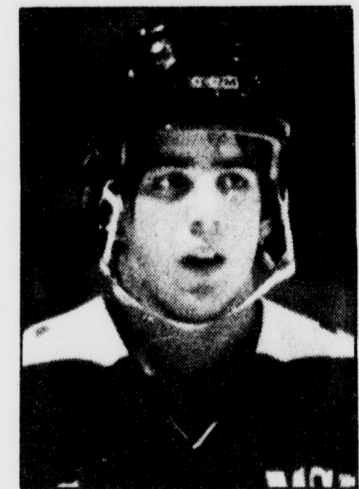

WELCH AND LYNETT have combined for 13 power play goals this season with Hamway assisting on eight of them.

"Usually I play forward on the right side and move the puck out of the corner," Hamway said of his responsibilities on the power play. "But I played the point last weekend."

Hamway drew an assist on Lynett's overtime shot that gave MSU a 5-4 victory over the University of North Dakota Saturday night.

He actually had taken a shot

Mark Hamway

himself but Fighting Sioux goalie Mel Donnelly bounced it out in front of the net and Lynett fired in the rebound.

MSU HOCKEY COACH Ron Mason calls Hamway the best freshman in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association.

"He's an excellent freshman," Mason said. "He shows confidence and poise. We need 10 more of him. He's a dynamite player."

But Hamway doesn't seem surprised at his early success.

"I'm just happy with my ice time," Hamway said. "I really didn't know what to expect this season. I'm in a new system and a new league."

The competition for playing time on the MSU squad was a battle Hamway won rather quickly. His experience in Canada's tough Major Junior A League last season can be attributed to that rapid advancement.

THE "HAMMER" SCORED 27 goals and made 42 assists playing for the Windsor Spitfires of Ontario's most difficult junior league.

Hamway admits there are some major differences, however, between junior hockey and the college brand.

"The college game is much faster," Hamway remarked. "The quality of players in the WCHA is much better, too. That should help me become a better hockey player."

When asked about his goals as a Spartan, the "Hammer" said simply and seriously that he wanted MSU to win the NCAA hockey title before he graduated.

Here we go again, another athlete with a catchy nickname putting thoughts of national titles into our heads.

Women harriers look to future

By CHRIS HANSEN
State News Sports Writer

With the quality of women's cross country teams increasing each season, the MSU harrier squad will be depending heavily on this year's juniors to lead next year's team.

"The development of our juniors will be vital to our success next year as we have scheduled ourselves against the best competition available," said John Goodridge, women's cross country coach.

"In the Big Ten alone," said Goodridge, "we will be facing the University of Wisconsin, which finished fourth in the nationals and Purdue University will be very strong, losing none of its runners. Ohio State University was a young team this year and will also be powerful next season."

The harriers have made strong progress throughout the season and will continue to build during winter and spring. Unlike football or basketball, the season never really ends for a runner.

THE CROSS COUNTRY season is followed by indoor track, which is followed by the spring track season. The only possible gap in training is during the summer. This will be an important time for the development of the women harrier squad, especially for Kelly Spatz.

Spatz peaked rather late in the season due to lack of summer training caused by other commitments. And although she was a key performer for the Spartans, finishing fifth in the regional championships, that extra summer training will affect her early season performance and the leadership value that will be expected of her as a senior next fall.

Goodridge will also be looking toward Sue Richardson as a harrier pacesetter. As a senior, Richardson will have to apply her strong commitment and desire to win in order to key the Spartan women to a successful season.

These two women will be replacing this year's seniors, Lisa Berry and Cynthia Wadsworth, who consistently fired up and led this year's team. Both women will be greatly missed by the next harrier squad.

Junior Mary Ann Opalewski has come a long way this season in working on her mental attitude during races. She will also be depended on to run strong in her last year as a Spartan harrier.

TWO OTHER JUNIOR runners vital to next season's success that were somewhat over-shadowed during this season, are Candy Strobach and Kathy Irwin. Both runners were very often in the top seven MSU finishers, Strobach just missing a chance to travel to the national championships.

Irwin suffered injuries early in the season which kept her out of the starting squad. She did, however, finish third in the women's division of this year's East Lansing State Bank 10,000 Meter Run.

"Kathy seems to run better in the 10,000 meter races," Goodridge said. "She'll have to work more on the 5,000 meter races for next season." (5,000 meters is the length of women's cross country races.)

Freshmen harriers Ann Pewe and Jill Washburn have had a lot of experience this year which will pay off for the cross country program next year," Goodridge said.

This has been the fifth season that the MSU women harriers have gone to the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women national championships, a tradition that will continue if the next season's harriers rise to the occasion. There are few MSU varsity sports that can boast such a record.

CHERYL FISH

Fencing: sport of body and mind

Editor's Note: Fish is a former State News Sports writer.

In days of old, a man had to be a good fencer or he might get his head cut off. It was a matter of protection, dignity, and proof of manliness. Women didn't have to worry about it; they would sit back and await the triumph of the brave and true victor.

Perhaps those who decide to take up fencing today have this romantic picture. It was sort of there for me, but I wanted to be a participant, not a mere spectator. It looked exciting and dazzling and I had visions of Three Musketeers movies in my head.

At the time, I didn't realize that fencing is a sport that requires a whole set of competitive rules; you must coordinate your body and mind with new movements that come naturally and smoothly. You cannot simply outmuscle your opponent, you must out think him.

CHARLES SCHMITTER, MSU's fencing coach who has been fencing for 51 years, starts classes off slowly. He tries to gradually get each person to learn the short, precise movements that eventually become habit. No foils are used for the first few weeks of class — the basic movements of the lunge, the advance and the retreat are polished. In this period, the roommate of a fencer is treated to views of his novice friend darting around the room with knees bent, behind stuck out and hand outstretched with an imaginary weapon.

Soon masks and half-jackets are donned in class, with Schmitter teaching the different attacks and defenses. When I first felt the rounded tip of the foil go in to my chest, I was glad the middle ages had ended.

When bouting between class members began, it was hard to believe that the two masked figures jerking wildly at each other were using the elegant movements practiced in class. That's when I realized this sport takes practice — hours in front of the mirror getting down form, practicing attacks and basic movements that must be accurate or they will be ineffective.

I DECIDED TO observe the

Charles Schmitter

men's varsity team and women's club practicing and learned how dedicated to the sport they really are. The women can't get varsity status until Title IX is interpreted and the status of non-revenue sports is examined. "In the meantime, the club pays its own way to meet."

Schmitter is not required to give equal coaching time to the club and the men's team, but he does. "The women are a bunch of hard workers hooked on fencing," he says, which is enough to convince him.

Schmitter is committed to fencing, and will work with anyone who desires to learn. His one peeve is working with "jerks," whom he says, "I won't fool with."

Part of Schmitter's charm is in his wit and the stories of his great career which gives students ideas. "It's fun to even an opponent if it's legitimate. The body is only an instrument of the mind," he says with a sparkle in his eyes.

SCHMITTER'S FAVORITE STORIES are about opponents who not only thought they were better than him, but thought they could outsmart him as well. "I like that — they'll tighten up and I can take them apart," he says.

With these words of wisdom in mind, fencers will have to work hard to avoid becoming the types that Schmitter laughs about.

In fencing, it seems the more you work at it, the more you like it. "There's always something to learn," says Megan Bramer, a three-year member of the club.

Kris Dittmer, a photography student at Lansing Community College, wanted to try fencing and has been working out with the club all term. "It's a fascinating art form and Schmitter is a good teacher," she says.

SCHMITTER IS PROUD OF the team and club because the members are mostly developed from scratch, not recruited as they are at Wayne State University, one of the premier fencing schools in the country. He also feels that other non-revenue sports at MSU go overboard in recruiting. "If everyone is reasonable in recruiting and developed plays from scratch, we could all survive," Schmitter said.

But he realizes that whatever happens to the status of the team and the club, most of the members would still go on, already possessing their mentor's love of the sport.

BILL TEMPLETON

Memories and inspiration remain for MSU stickers

Athletic programs at major universities often base successes or failures on new recruits mixed with seasoned veterans, combining the talents to produce victories.

Another important aspect of athletics at any level, however, is the presence of a strong and supportive coaching staff, a staff that can offer advice, criticism and sometimes, just an understanding ear.

MSU women's field hockey coach Sam Kajorsin, a man who exhibited all the characteristics of the "players' coach," was called back to his native Thailand recently, following a four-year stay in the United States.

The stickers, however, qualified for the national tournament in Princeton, N.J., to be held this weekend, and they will be making the trip minus the man they credit for much of their success.

State champions a year ago, the team lost seven seniors, and returned to MSU on Sept. 4 anticipating a rebuilding year.

With its sights set on capturing the state title again, the team accomplished its goal and won the tournament, along with the right to compete in regional play, an event which produced a second-place finish.

By finishing second, the stickers earned the right to travel to New Jersey this weekend, but unfortunately, Kajorsin will not accompany the team.

Kajorsin came to MSU on a grant from Thailand in 1975 to receive an education so he could return to his country as a top educator.

It was in 1975 that Kajorsin joined the MSU field hockey program as an assistant coach. It was also a time when field hockey at MSU began to enjoy major improvements.

It was because of Kajorsin's love for the team and determination to achieve success that he began his fight for such things as better equipment, better transportation, a larger budget to allow for more scholarships and recruiting and a more competitive schedule.

Kajorsin completed the education he had sought and knew that he would be returning to Thailand soon, but kept the news from the team when he learned the date would be Nov. 15, 1979.

Because of their love and respect for Kajorsin, the members of the team submitted a letter to The State News which was the basis of this column.

In the letter, team members stated that they, along with new coach Nancy Reed, want to do the only thing they feel they can.

"We want to play our best with our hearts and souls to honor Sam Kajorsin at the national tournament," the letter said.

If inspiration can be used as a weapon against opponents, MSU will crown another national champion at the end of the week.

JENKINS STARS ON VAULT, BARS

Gymnasts successful in Chicago

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

Competing as individuals, the MSU men's gymnastics team enjoyed a successful Midwest Open in Chicago last weekend, its final tuneup of the pre-season.

"Charlie Jenkins came through again for us," said coach George Szygula about his senior co-captain. "He took a third place in the vaulting finals and a fourth in the parallel bars."

In the preliminary round of competitions, Szygula said the men did quite well as the Spartans just missed qualifying a number of gymnasts in the individual events.

"There were approximately 180 men in each event in the prelims," Szygula said, "and they took the top eight into the finals."

JUNIOR STANDOUT

MARVIN Gibbs finished 11th in the all-around competition, followed by a 16th place by freshman Pedro Sanchez.

On Sanchez's performance, Szygula noted that it was quite a feat for a freshman.

In floor exercise, Bart Acino captured a 14th place finish, with Gibbs placing 18th and Sanchez 19th.

After winning his event in the previous weekend's Buckeye Invitational, newcomer Terry Olsen missed the finals with an 11th place finish in the parallel bars.

In the horizontal bar event, Sanchez took ninth place in the preliminaries with a score of 9.2, narrowly missing the finals.

RICH LACATA AND Gibbs finished 11th and 13th respectively in that same event, to give the Spartans their strongest showing in any one category.

"I really think we're starting to gel," Szygula said. "MSU showed very well in this tournament, but we've still got a few problems to work out."

"By competing in a pre-season like we've had, it gets the guys ready and this is the third year we've done it."

Szygula also said that he took just six or seven performers to the Midwest Open and all did well for themselves.

With the completion of the pre-season, the gymnasts now look forward to the January Big Ten Invitational.

The event will be in East Lansing and will be an excellent chance for the Spartans to prove themselves as a top-notch team.

New sports channel begins on cable TV

National Cable Company, which serves more than 9,000 subscribers in East Lansing and Meridian Township, will join the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network (ESPN) today at 6 p.m. The ESPN service will be available only to National Cable's customers at this time and will be of no extra charge. Subscribers can watch ESPN on cable Channel 16.

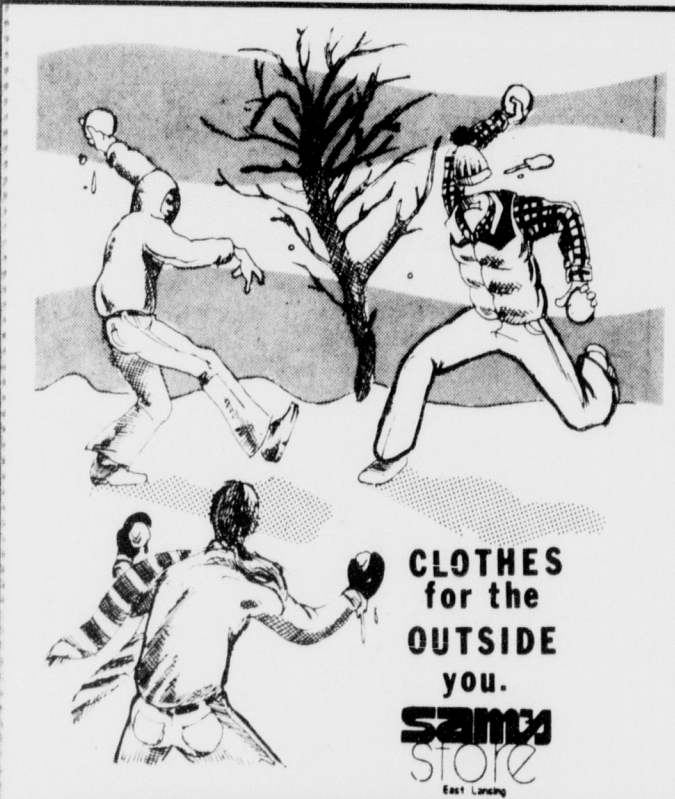

Beginning Friday, ESPN will broadcast the Joe Lapchick Memorial Basketball Tournament live from St. John's University. This tournament, in which MSU will participate will continue through Saturday.

ESPN will also videotape Friday night's University of Michigan-MSU hockey game in Ann Arbor, for showing Saturday at 6:30 p.m.

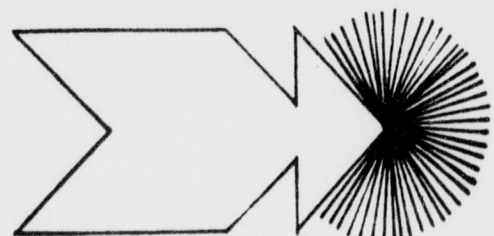

ESPN will soon be a 24-hour per day programming source for cable TV. Currently it runs 24 hours on Saturday and Sunday and about 10 hours of weekdays.

Shops offer unique gifts

By MICHAEL VEH
State News Staff Writer

Finding a unique gift for someone special can add excitement to the otherwise painful experience of Christmas shopping and there are many shops in the MSU area that carry unusual items.

Miscellaneous, in the Lansing Mall, carries a new variation of popular kinetic action statues.

The Magnetic Kinetic is a table top with an action figure that, unlike its predecessor, is suspended from a metal rod connected to the base.

The special feature of the Magnetic Kinetic is that the figure and the base are both magnetic which keeps the figure moving in irregular patterns. The Magnetic Kinetic sells from $9.95.

A WICKER KANGAROO is available from Knapp's.

This small, table top figure stands nearly 10 inches high and has a baby kangaroo woven into its stomach pouch. The handcrafted Kangaroo is available for $25.

Stuffed animal lovers will like the 25-foot snake available at Circus World for $29.95.

This snake is made of soft, plush cloth and comes in a variety of colors.

For the chess player who has everything, Hudson's in Lansing Mall has something new.

HUDSON'S CARRIES A solid chocolate chess set made from light and dark chocolates. The set, including a chocolate board, costs $75.

Wicks and Sticks in Lansing Mall is a shop that specializes in candles.

The shop is filled with many types of candles but, for the shopper without a budget, the 18-inch-tall owl for $198 might round out the Christmas shopping.

Animal figures lend themselves to unique gifts and Hudson's carries one that is out of the ordinary.

A silver rhinoceros statue for $225 is a gift that will please any animal figure collector.

LEONARDS WESTLAND, 3800 W. Saginaw St., has the ideal alternative energy artform.

They offer a solar oil pump made of solid brass and copper, which is powered by a tiny solar cell, for only $100.

For truly unique gifts, a Dallas (Texas) based firm is the place to shop. The Neiman-Marcus company allows customers to order their products by mail.

Ron Foppen the senior vice president and director of mail orders, pointed out two of the company's products as the most unique.

Another unique gift idea from Neiman-Marcus is a hand-made Devin Carriage made exclusively for Neiman-Marcus.

The framework of the carriage, which sells for $9,950, is completely hand-forged.

There are many other shops in the Lansing and East Lansing area that offer unique gifts at varying prices.

Prime lending rates decrease; dollar drops on foreign markets

By FLOYD NORRIS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Chase Manhattan Bank reduced its prime lending rate to 15 and one-quarter percent Tuesday as interest rates continued to decline throughout the economy.

The Chase reduction, from 15 and three-quarters percent, exceeded reductions announced by some other major banks on Monday, when they dropped the rate to 15 and one-half percent.

Many interest rates have now fallen significantly from the peaks reached early this month, which means loans are available to businesses and some home-buyers at rates below previous levels.

The declines also mean that persons buying money-market certificates from banks and savings institutions will be earning a lot less, starting Thursday.

THE INTEREST RATE on the six-month certificates, which corresponds to the rate at this week's auction of six-month Treasury bills, will be 11.022 percent. Last week's rate, which will remain effective through Wednesday, was 12.035 percent. The certificates are sold in minimum denominations of $10,000.

Despite the declines, uncertainty remains as to whether interest rates will keep falling. Some large banks have held back from lowering their prime rates at all, despite the fact loan demand has fallen in the last two weeks and the cost of funds to banks has also slipped.

Interest rates rose sharply in October after the Federal Reserve Board tightened credit in an effort to fight inflation and support the dollar.

The recent decline in interest rates has come despite the lack of any apparent slowing in inflation and has hurt the dollar, which dropped Tuesday to its lowest level since early October against the West German mark. It is possible the Federal Reserve might take more tightening action, although that is considered unlikely by most economists.

Even with the declines, rates are still far higher than was once considered normal. The record prime rate before August was 12 percent, set in 1974.

Mortgages have become very difficult to get in some parts of the country, partly because of statutory ceilings on mortgage interest rates and partly because savings institutions have lost regular deposits as investors sought higher yields.

Committee accepts applications to fill social services vacancy

Applications are being taken to fill a vacancy on the Ingham County Board of Social Services.

The three-member board hires a county Social Services director and helps in determining eligibility for county funding for social service programs.

Application forms are available at the Board of Commissioners office in the courthouse in Mason, or in the county clerk's office in Lansing City Hall.

Interviews will be held on Dec. 10 by the Human Resources Committee, who will make a recommendation to the Board of Commissioners at its Dec. 11 meeting.

The deadline for applications is 5 p.m. Dec. 5. The term expires Oct. 31, 1980.

Emergency personnel pull 37-year-old Gwendolyn Irwin (covered in a blanket on the stretcher at right) to safety in LaPlace, La., on Monday. Irwin fell 30 feet into a swamp while she was walking from her stalled car. She is listed in stable condition at a hospital in Metairie, La.

College camping

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — Students at the University of California at Irvine are decamping from residence halls and setting up at a campus trailer park.

It's cheap ($70 a month, including utilities), convenient and kind of an adventure, they say.

Students began moving in Saturday at the 80-space trailer park and school officials say there's already a waiting list.

"I'm really excited about this," said Marty Rigby, a 31-year-old graduate student setting up house in his 1947 camper.

'BOY WONDER' OF MICH. POLITICS

Former Detroit mayor dies at 51

By JOANNA FIRESTONE

DETROIT (UPI) — Jerome P. Cavanagh, mayor during Detroit's darkest hours — the riots of 1967 — died of a heart attack Tuesday in Lexington, Ky. He was 51.

Once called the "boy wonder" of Michigan politics, Cavanagh served as mayor from 1962 to 1970. He was just 33 when he scored an upset victory over incumbent Louis G. Mirani in his first bid for elective office.

He suffered a heart attack while visiting a friend and died later in a Lexington hospital. Funeral arrangements were not immediately known. Cavanagh is survived by his wife, Kathy, and eight children.

Cavanagh was described by magazines as the "mayor who woke up the city," who "glows with the engaging freshness of the young, new politician."

His political career, however, crumbled in the 1970s after a meteoric rise the previous decade.

"EVERY DETROITER SHARES a deep sense of loss at the death of former Mayor Jerome P. Cavanagh," said Mayor Coleman Young. "Each of us gained inspiration and strength from his courage, his dignity and his personal warmth. As mayor, he displayed a deep devotion to the needs of every citizen."

"He gave Detroiters the determination to rise above strife and laid the foundation upon which the city's renaissance has been built."

In the years following his tenure as mayor, Cavanagh practiced law in Detroit and Ann Arbor.

His political fortunes began to slide in 1966, when he was defeated by former Gov. G. Mennen Williams for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination. Williams subsequently was defeated by Republican Robert P. Griffin.

Cavanagh drew nationwide attention as mayor during Detroit's 1967 riots, when 43 died and scores were injured.

He lost the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, in 1974 following treatment for kidney cancer and allegations — which Cavanagh staunchly denied — that he had underworld contacts. Reactions began pouring in within an hour after his death became known.

"I knew Jerry as a bold and imaginative young leader and a hard-working public servant," said Republican Gov. William G. Milliken.

"HE SERVED THE people of Detroit during some of that city's most traumatic years — the years of unrest and rebuilding that immediately followed the 1967 riots. He met all the challenges that came his way — from the challenge of being an underdog in a political contest to the challenge posed by cancer on the eve of an important primary race."

Chrysler Board Chairperson Lee A. Iacocca said Cavanagh "brought excitement to Detroit and showed us that the city had a future."

Senator fined and given probation on impaired driving charge

By United Press International

Sen. Basil Brown emerged Tuesday from another in a series of scrapes with the law over his drinking and driving with a $150 fine and 18 months probation on an impaired driving charge.

Brown assured a Lansing district judge who sentenced him on the 1978 impaired-driving charge he would continue his treatment for alcoholism.

The fiery lawmaker could have received a year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Probation officials had recommended a two-year probation and suggested a six-month jail term be imposed if Brown violates his probation. Judge William Collette said, however, it was not his policy to stipulate a specific sentence for breaking probation.

BROWN WAS ARRESTED more than a year and a half ago when he was caught driving down one of the city's major roads at night with his car lights off. He failed the pass police-administered tests for intoxication.

He pleaded guilty to the charges last month.

Last spring, the dean of the Senate admitted he had a drinking problem and was undergoing treatment at Brighton Hospital for alcohol abuse and had joined Alcoholics Anonymous.

"I think based on what I've read in the report about your activities involved in the Brighton program and AA . . . you've realized you were at the end of the road," said Collette.

Collette also sentenced Brown to two days in jail, but gave him credit for the 48 hours he served when arrested.

THE HIGHLAND PARK Democrat must pay $200 in court costs.

Brown was sentenced in East Lansing district court two years ago after pleading guilty to the same charge. At that time he was severely reprimanded and ordered to pay a $500 fine and court costs.

He also faces jury trial Dec. 20 in Livingston County on charges of driving under the influence of liquor. Police discovered him slumped behind the wheel of his car beside a county road last spring.

He said he expected the Livingston County charge to be dismissed.

Monte Mohr of the state's driving improvement division said the impaired driving conviction could mean Brown will be called in for a hearing on a possible suspension of his operator's license.

"The main thing we're concerned about is whether they are working on the problem," Mohr said.

HE SAID BROWN'S participation in alcoholic treatment programs would weigh heavily in his favor.

Brown, who said he considered his sentence reasonable, told Collette the Brighton program has taught him to "accept the disease I have."

"It makes me believe my action in the past 10 years to control his alcoholism was unsuccessful," he said.

Prior to the court session Brown, who suffered a heart attack last spring, said he has not had a drink since he publicly acknowledged his alcoholism last spring.

"I believe my experience in Brighton this year is the most significant thing I've done in trying to control by problem," he said.

Christmas gifts sale benefits peace and justice projects

Christmas gifts will be featured at the 4th Annual Gifts for Peace and Justice Sale from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today and Thursday in the lobby of the Union.

Among the gifts available are non-sexist children's books, political art calendars, feminist stationery and posters, and Third World craft items.

Approximately 15 different groups are participating in the sale, including Greenpeace, the United Farm Workers, the East Lansing Book Co-op and the Southern Africa Liberation Center.

The gifts range in price from $1 to $10. Proceeds from the sale will be used to benefit the participating organizations.

"The sale offers an alternative to buying into the Madison Avenue Christmas habit by putting money into more financially deserving human need and peace projects," said Barbara Thibeault, coordinator of the Peace Education Center, 1118 S. Harrison Road.

The center provides resources and acts as a clearing house for peace and justice activities in the greater Lansing area, Thibeault said. It is comprised of various task forces, many of which are taking part in the sale.

The sale is sponsored by the Peace Education Center and the Lansing Star.

Inexpensive travel rates offered by 'U' travel office

By ANDRA SCHIFF

Need a break? The MSU travel office provides students with year-round travel opportunities throughout the world at discount rates.

The travel office, located in 333 Union, is operated by the ASMSU Programming Board and is directed by MSU sophomore Terri Eve.

Currently the office is planning a Toronto weekend, Dec. 8 through 12, with trips starting at $47. Cost includes round-trip train fare and accommodations in the downtown Sheraton Centre.

A future trip to Cancun, Mexico, during winter break is in planning stages.

COST FOR THE Mexico trip will be approximately $450 to $500 for seven days and nights, Eve said.

Anyone may use the services provided by the office. However, a deposit is required to reserve a space on all trips. Reservations are usually accepted up to the departure date.

About 200 people have used the travel services so far this year, Eve said.

"Anything that students want to know about a trip, I can direct them. We're a functioning office as well as a service for students," Eve said.

The travel office is not affiliated with a travel agency but works through a tour company.

The travel office is one of the top college travel offices in the country but not many students know about it, Eve added.

$900 tape deck borrowed or taken

A $900 reel-to-reel tape deck missing from the Agricultural Engineering Building has staff and campus police wondering whether it was borrowed or stolen.

The four-track Teac tape deck was reported stolen from 104 Agriculture Engineering Bldg. between Nov. 21 and Nov. 26, police report.

The confusion over the nature of the disappearance arises because there were no signs of forced entry into the room and there were no other items taken, police said.

The room is used to store audio and visual equipment used in production of in-house media, such as instructional films.

"I sent a memo to the staff asking if anyone borrowed it, and if so, to return it," said Patrick Erancek, supervisor of media resources.

Lansing man flees Pakistan following U.S. Embassy attack

By United Press International

James Thompson, who fled troubled Pakistan with all his remaining possessions tucked in a borrowed suitcase, says anti-American riots there were an experience he and his family are not likely to forget.

The Lansing man, a Communications specialist for the U.S. State Department, and his wife and four children were among 390 Americans ordered home after an attack on the U.S. Embassy last Wednesday by a Moslem crowd.

"There was no forewarning, it just happened," said Thompson, who was visiting a doctor at the time of the attack and was not among about 100 people trapped for hours in an embassy vault before being rescued.

"The people there are very friendly. We never thought it would happen," Thompson's wife said.

The Thompsons, who might be in Lansing up to six months before being reassigned, were close friends of two American marines who died in the embassy attack.

The ordeal was "an experience we'll probably never forget," said Thompson, a veteran of 14 years in the foreign service.

The family lost of its possessions, including a collection of items from around the world, taking with them only what they could carry on the plane back to the United States.

"I guess there's a lot of serious thinking ahead," said Thompson. "We have to think a bit about onward assignments."
