Director resigns following investigation

James Lennon

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

The director of MSU's department of data processing has resigned following an investigation of his personnel practices. James J. Lennon, hired two years ago to strengthen the department, resigned from his position Dec. 6, less than one week after MSU President Cecil Mackey received a confidential report concerning the director's personnel actions.

Lennon resigned because of "personal reasons," according to Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance. Sources within the department, however, believe the resignation was prompted by results of the investigation.

Authority over the data processing department has also been taken from Wilkinson and given to Ken Thompson, newly appointed vice president for operations.

GERRY A. PETERS, assistant director of data processing since 1977, has been named acting director. Peters is the brother-in-law of MSU Trustee Michael Smydra, D-East Lansing.

The investigation began last fall after allegations against the data processing department were delivered to the University and the Board of Trustees, Wilkinson said.

"These matters included such things as being forced to work long amounts of overtime without compensation, violent verbal abuse and threats," said Glenn VanAntwerp, an employee who worked with Lennon until May 1978.

"The department's director (Lennon) even intimidated employees with grizzly stories of murdering people who had irritated him," he added.

Sources have indicated notarized statements, by employees who heard one particular war story, were prepared in June 1979 prior to the investigation.

The story recounted how Lennon escaped from a Korean prisoner of war camp and was refused provisions by an American unit. In retaliation, Lennon claimed to use his position in the artillery to direct fire at the American soldiers who refused him food, implying he killed them, sources said.

These matters included such things as being forced to work long amounts of overtime without compensation, violent verbal abuse and threats. — Glenn VanAntwerp, former employee

"WHERE DO RUMORS like that start?" Lennon said concerning the story. "In any organization there is a certain amount of noise and in some cases it may even be healthy. But if you have 99 people who work well and one that is bad, I can't spend time with that one person."

The story was told many times to employees, company representatives and employees' friends, sources said.

Although VanAntwerp said Wilkinson was told about these stories, the vice president denies the claim.

"No employee ever informed me about the war stories and Mr. Lennon never told them to me," Wilkinson said.

The investigation into Lennon's personnel actions was conducted by Arthur Staton Jr., an independent attorney from Kalamazoo. The investigation and confidential report cost the University $10,585, Wilkinson said.

"MR. STATON DID a very comprehensive examination of all the issues we were aware of in that area (data processing)," Mackey said.

He added that most of the testimony collected by Staton was "personnel oriented."

Testimony concerning overtime without compensation, threats and war stories were "definitely told to Staton," VanAntwerp said.

"My resignation had nothing to do with that (report)," Lennon said. "I came in to get things turned around and we got it turned around. I had excellent support from the top management," he added.

Lennon added that overtime was not forced upon employees. "We had to force some employees to go home," he said. "When other employees see this (overtime) they may feel threatened or forced to work because they are not working as hard."

Although the number of employees in the department increased from about 60 to 92 during Lennon's two years at the data processing department, 38 employees left during that same time period.

"WHEN EMPLOYEES ARE trained they become very marketable," Lennon said.

An investigation of the data processing department's hardware and software equipment was also conducted Nov. 4 and 5 by James H. Melton, director of data processing at Texas Tech University.

Melton was called in to look at the department's hardware and software as an uninterested party.

"Administrative Data Processing at Michigan State University must remember the lessons of the past as it plans for the future," Melton said in his report. "Management must be able to anticipate the problems and resolve them before they begin."

Thompson was scheduled to assume authority over the administrative data processing department after Mackey completed his administrative reorganization, Wilkinson said. Lennon's resignation provided a natural break for this transition, he explained.

"THIS CHANGE WAS contemplated from the time I arrived here," Thompson said. "It would have been accomplished at a later date anyway."

A permanent director is expected to be appointed by the beginning of March, Thompson said.

Peters, the acting director, has applied for the position which has now been posted.

MSU will fight reinstatement of John Hildebrand

By the STATE NEWS and UPI

MSU will appeal a federal court jury decision ordering the reinstatement of John R. Hildebrand, a former associate professor of social science.

The federal jury in Grand Rapids ruled last week that Hildebrand's first Amendment Rights were violated by his discharge from MSU in 1969. The jury ordered that Hildebrand be reinstated and awarded $249,292 in back wages and $100 in punitive damages.

Leland Carr Jr., University attorney and vice president for legal affairs, and Byron Higgins, assistant vice president for legal affairs, said the decision will be appealed to the Sixth District Court of Appeals in Cincinnati.

Both Carr and Higgins defended MSU in the case.

HILDEBRAND WOULD NOT comment about the University's decision to appeal the case, but his attorney, Kenneth Laing, said he was not surprised by the decision.

"I don't know what his status will be, but feel he should be reinstated during the appeal," Laing said. The hearing is scheduled to take place Jan. 22.

Hildebrand was denied tenure in 1969 and filed two unfair labor practice charges with the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC). The commission rejected the cases in 1970.

He then tried to file a suit in state courts, but was refused.

In 1971, Hildebrand filed suit in federal court against the MSU Board of Trustees and five University officials, charging denial of the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and due process of law.

THOSE NAMED IN the suit were: former MSU President Clifton R. Wharton Jr.; John Cantlon, vice president for research and graduate studies and then University provost; former University College Dean Edward A. Carlon; Clinton A.

Snyder, professor of social science, and Douglas Dunham, the chairperson of the Department of Social Science.

In October 1974, a jury was selected to hear the case. After a five-day hearing, the jury reached the verdict that Hildebrand should have been granted tenure and should be reinstated with back pay.

However, U.S. District Judge Wendell A. Miles decided the jury's ruling would be advisory and he would make the final decision.

Two and one-half years later, in March 1977, Miles ruled against Hildebrand.

Hildebrand then appealed to the court of appeals in Cincinnati and last year the court ruled he was not given a fair trial and sent the case back to Grand Rapids for a new hearing.

THE JURORS DECIDED Hildebrand's First Amendment rights had been violated by Dunham and Snyder, but not by the other defendants, Carlin, Wharton and Cantlon.

The court also ruled that Hildebrand's 14th Amendment Rights had not been violated.

Hildebrand's back pay was calculated by giving him the average salary a professor of social science was earning since 1969, when Hildebrand was dismissed. Snyder and Dunham were ordered to each pay Hildebrand $50 in punitive damages.

Brown, Kennedy escalate Carter attacks

(AP) — Edmund G. Brown Jr. and Edward M. Kennedy, still bristling over President Carter's refusal to debate them, escalated their attacks on his foreign policy Tuesday.

Brown accused Carter of retreating behind a "wall of silence," and demanded a congressional investigation into how the United States became involved in the Iranian crisis.

Kennedy, campaigning in Iowa, said Carter has reneged on a 1976 campaign promise that he would never support an embargo of U.S. grain shipments overseas.

Meanwhile, Sen. Larry Pressler of South Dakota dropped out of the Republican presidential race after not being invited to participate in Saturday's Iowa debate.

Stock market prices rise in heavy trading

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market shook off its worries over tensions in Afghanistan and Iran and surged to its largest gain in more than a year in heavy trading Tuesday.

The market had been ahead through most of the morning, but news early in the afternoon that the U.S. economy had performed better than expected in 1979's final quarter sparked a wave of buying.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials finished the session up by 19.71 points to 851.71, the largest gain since a 35.34-point advance on Nov. 1, 1978.

New York Stock Exchange volume jumped to 53.39 million shares — the heaviest since 81.62 million shares changed hands last Oct. 10 — from Monday's 44.50 million.

U.S., Egypt hold military exercises

ASWAN, Egypt (AP) — American and Egyptian air forces have held joint exercises testing the feasibility of Egyptian facilities to defend the Middle East, Defense Minister Kamal Hassan Ali said Tuesday.

In interviews with reporters covering the Egyptian-Israeli summit meeting here, Ali said the exercises took place two or more weeks ago in the context of the Iranian crisis.

The exercises, which Ali said took place "somewhere in our country," occurred before the Soviets sent troops into Afghanistan and added a new dimension to the turmoil in the Middle East.

Ali said the purpose of the trial runs was "to make it easier for the air force of the United States to cross our skies and land at our bases where they will get facilities." He said U.S. military aircraft were involved but declined to give other details.

Refinery workers go out on strike

DENVER (AP) — Oil refinery workers began walking off the job Tuesday in the first nationwide strike in 11 years by 60,000 members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union.

OCAW members left their jobs at the Texaco Co. refinery in Westville, N.J., about 3 p.m. EST, a union official said. The walkout at the end of each plant's day shift signaled the start of the union's first nationwide strike since 1969.

If crude oil supplies and demand continue unchanged, the walkout will not mean much to American consumers, say industry observers.

Council considers James Madison merger

By DEBBIE CREEMERS
State News Staff Writer

James Madison College should retain its independent status, a task force evaluating the college has recommended.

The task force was considering whether James Madison should remain an independent college or become a department within the College of Social Science.

However, the fate of James Madison College depends on Provost Clarence L. Winder, who will discuss the task force report with the Academic Council at its Jan. 15 meeting before issuing a decision on the future status of the school.

The task force, composed of faculty and student representatives from James Madison College, a representative from the social science department, a Steering Committee member and two at-large faculty members, concluded that the advantages of reorganization do not outweigh the risks and disadvantages to the college.

RISKS CITED INCLUDE: "The threats to Madison's mission, to its enrollments, to its ability to represent and defend its interests directly to the University, and to its faculty and student morale."

The task force, which voted 5-1 in favor of retaining Madison's status as an independent college rather than incorporating it into the College of Social Science, considered issues such as the protection of the Madison program, the flexibility of faculty resources, a loss of visibility, and the effect of such a loss on the enrollment of students in Madison and the wider University.

Although the task force concluded that reorganization would give Madison access to a larger resource base and might reduce the likelihood of budgetary cutbacks to the independent college in an era of fewer students and funds, several drawbacks to incorporation were cited as outweighing any possible advantages.

As a unit in the College of Social Science, Madison would lose its ability to represent itself in fiscal negotiations, and might even come out on the short end of the stick in internal competition over increasingly scarce resources, the report stated.

The task force also expressed the opinion that incorporation could pose the risk of greater control over the Madison program by other departments in the College of Social Science.

Madison would also lose direct representation in university-level governing bodies.

Although the task force recognized the possibility that faculty interaction could be easier if Madison were in the College of Social Science, members concluded that there are no "insuperable barriers" to faculty exchanges under the present system, and that Madison faculty are not isolated from the wider University.

THE FEAR WAS also expressed that faculty exchanges with the College of Social Science could conceivably reach a point at which they might conflict with the fulfillment of the "Madison mission."

A member of the task force, who declined to be identified, said faculty members could become caught between the demands of the two colleges.

James Madison College does not currently have any minority faculty, and the task force agreed that incorporation into the (continued on page 2)

Afghan regime continues executions of political foes

By The Associated Press

The new Soviet-backed Afghan government, which took power with vows to end official brutality, is secretly continuing the execution of political prisoners, Afghan sources and Western diplomats said Tuesday.

Anti-communist Afghan rebels, meanwhile, claimed to have captured a border post just south of the Soviet border after nine days of bloody fighting with Russian and Afghan government troops.

Horse-mounted rebels staged hit-and-run forays against white-clad Soviet troops in the snowswept northern hill provinces, witnesses reported. Sources in neighboring Pakistan claimed the rebels were successfully holding out against the Soviets and Afghan soldiers in other corners of Afghanistan.

But the mechanized, air-supported Red Army force — estimated at as many as 100,000 men — was reported in control of most major cities and towns.

The United States followed through Tuesday on retaliatory steps in protest of the Soviet involvement here — moving to restrict Soviet fishing in U.S. waters, ordering a reduction in U.S. flights by the Soviet airline Aeroflot and going ahead with plans to withdraw a U.S. consular mission from the Soviet city of Kiev while asking the Soviets to withdraw consular employees from New York.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT disclosed that Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher told the Soviet charge d'affaires that the Soviets would not be allowed to open a planned consulate in New York and that the 17 officials expected to staff the consulate should be expeditiously sent home.

At the same time, Christopher told the envoy, Vladilen Vasev, that the United States would not open a consulate under construction in the United States would not open a consulate under construction in Kiev, capital of Soviet Ukraine, and that the seven U.S. officials assigned there would be withdrawn.

The action, taken late Monday, represented continuing efforts to implement President Carter's response to the massive Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

In the most dramatic aspect of his response to the Kremlin, Carter decided Friday to embargo the shipment of 17 (continued on page 12)

Russian armored vehicles equipped with light weapons are seen manned by Afghan soldiers on the road from Kabul to Jalalabad. Western sources report that all major cities and highways in Afghanistan are in the hands of Soviet forces.

Identity of captors in doubt — Carter

By The Associated Press

President Carter's chief spokesperson said Tuesday that Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini may have lost control of the fate of American hostages in Tehran to Marxist terrorists who may seek chaos for their own political ends.

White House press secretary Jody Powell, obviously reading from prepared notes at a briefing for reporters, said the composition of the group holding the U.S. Embassy in the Iranian capital may have changed since the hostages were seized Nov. 4. He said that if any Iranian "students" ever were involved in the embassy takeover, their number and influence seems to have diminished.

Powell said those now holding the embassy take "a rather radical and certainly Marxist line." In response to a question, however, he said he did not mean to suggest they were acting at the behest of the Soviet Union.

MEANWHILE, KHOMEINI, WHO plans to go into seclusion to recover from "excessive fatigue," met with his negotiating team for Kurdistan on Tuesday and resolved to give the rebellious Kurds an ultimatum, the official news agency Pars said.

Fighting and violent demonstrations have escalated steadily in Iran's provinces, where ethnic and religious minorities have been agitating sporadically against the central government for months.

Kurdish cities were the scene last summer and fall of bloody battles between government forces and Kurdish rebels asserting their long-standing demand for greater autonomy.

A member of Khomeini's special negotiating team to the Kurds, Hashem Sabaghian, said after conferring with the revolutionary leader in Qom that the regime had prepared an ultimatum on the autonomy issue.

"This is the last chance for political groups and religious leaders together with the people of Kurdistan," Sabaghian told Pars.

Negotiations between the Kurds and the government broke down late last year when the Khomeini government balked at bargaining with two leftist organizations on the Kurdish side, the Fedayeen Khalq and Kumelh.

POWELL ALSO TOLD reporters that the administration's analysis has "raised rather serious questions as to who is actually in charge" in Tehran.

He said there is evidence that neither Khomeini nor the revolutionary council controls the fate of the American hostages.

The situation, Powell said, raises "equally serious questions about the motives of the terrorists, the kidnappers," adding that they may welcome chaotic conditions for their own purposes.

Asked if he was speaking on the basis of new evidence, Powell responded, "There's always new evidence."

But he quickly added that his statement was not prompted by any single piece of "dramatic" evidence.

Powell also was asked if his analysis did not make the situation of the hostages seem hopeless.

"I wouldn't choose that term," he replied, adding that "it is time for those in Iran who do care about their country" to review whether they want their national values undermined by "a small group."

Powell's comments came several hours after an informed official said the State Department also is beginning to believe that no one in Iran controls the militants holding the embassy and the hostages.

Madison

College of Social Science might increase the opportunity for minority faculty representation in the college.

The task force also identified several disadvantages to altering Madison's identification as a college, basing conclusions in part on the argument that many Madison students come to MSU because of the college.

MEMBERS AGREED THAT incorporation of Madison would make the residential college less visible and alter its image, risking declines in enrollment.

The Office of Institutional Research projects steadily declining enrollment figures for the University as a whole in the 1980s — a prediction which prompted Winder's reassessment of the organizational status of the college.

However, Winder directed that Madison's programs, as well as its existing personnel and budget, remain untouched. Based on these considerations, the task force concluded that administrative savings under reorganization would be small.

Winder said Tuesday he will make a final decision on the college's status "two or three weeks" after the Academic Council meeting.

The choice of Peters as the assistant data processing director in 1977 drew some criticism because of his relationship to Smydra and his ties to IBM. Peters worked for IBM for more than four years before coming to MSU, which primarily purchases IBM equipment.

MSU currently leases its equipment from OPM, Inc. of New York. OPM, Inc. supplies primarily IBM equipment, Peters said.

"IBM gets no benefit from us buying their machines," Peters said. "I work for the University and my loyalties are to the University."

FOR PORT OF ENTRY STUDY

City to contribute funds

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

Lansing will contribute $1,250 to examine the possibility of making Capital City Airport an international airport, the city council voted Monday night.

Fourth Ward Councilmember Jack Gunther said the funds are being contributed in hopes of inducing the expansion of business in the Lansing area.

The $9,000 study will be conducted by three Western Michigan University professors who will determine if business in the Lansing area could support a port of entry.

A port of entry is a permit required to make an airport an international facility.

Imports that currently enter the city must come via another port of entry in Michigan making it more expensive for other countries to do business with the city.

Gunther said the permit would be highly advantageous to Lansing because it would lower the cost of importing foreign goods to the city.

Lansing is the third municipality to contribute funds to the study. Last week the East Lansing City Council agreed to grant $1,000 to the study. Funds contributed so far total $5,500.

Delta Township and the Lansing Chamber of Commerce have also contributed funds.

The Chamber of Commerce was the group that originally made the fund request.

Rick McDonald, from the Lansing Chamber of Commerce, said the study would also examine the feasibility of creating a "free trade zone" within Lansing.

McDonald said the free trade zone would be beneficial to Lansing industry because it would reduce import taxes.

The port of entry would also allow international passenger flights to land at Capital City Airport, McDonald said. He added, however, that it would be up to airlines to establish flights in Lansing.

Russell Brown, Capital City Airport Manager, said Lansing should become a port of entry and that it is "something that we have wanted for a long time."

Brown said that establishment of the entry permit would not create an economic burden for the airport.

If the study were to indicate a need for a port of entry in Lansing, there is a "good chance" that the airport would receive the permit from federal authorities, Brown said.

The study, which is in need of additional funding, is expected to take from two to three months.

Conservation workshops set by E. Lansing team

A series of energy conservation workshops will be presented by the East Lansing Energy Consciousness Team in cooperation with the Adult Programs Division of the School-City Activity Program.

Elect is a group of volunteers interested in making "people conscious of their energy usage," said Wanda Haneline, energy coordinator.

Committees on energy conservation began in December, Haneline said, and set up the workshops.

The workshops already planned include:

- "Utilizing wood for energy." Instruction on the installation and use of wood-burning stoves and on retro-fitting fireplaces to save energy.

- "Weather-proofing your home or apartment." Do-it-yourself techniques for sealing residences at low or moderate cost.

- "Save energy dollars with appliances." Advice on how to buy the most energy efficient appliances.

- "Landscaping for energy conservation." How to plan now for spring planting.

- "Redesigning and remodeling houses for low energy consumption." Traditional and new approaches for low energy consumption based on Michigan weather.

- "Energy Tax credits." Methods on how energy conservation can save citizens tax money.

The workshops will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. on Thursdays from Jan. 17 through Feb. 21.

Each workshop will cost $1 and registration can be done by contacting the Community Education Office, Red Cedar School, Sever Drive.

Elect is planning other workshops which will vary with the seasons.

The group also arranges for speakers to talk to groups interested in energy conservation and is also setting up radio and television programs featuring local energy experts.

Membership in ELECT is open to all people interested in energy conservation, Haneline said. "We are fortunate in East Lansing to be this far ahead of the game," she said.

'79 gold prices available, customers get a break

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

The 1980s opened up with skyrocketing gold prices leaving just about everyone wishing they had invested in the precious metal at 1979 prices.

It's still possible. Many East Lansing jewelry stores are carrying the yellow karats in the form of rings, watches, necklaces and other trinkets at last fall's prices.

Because of the fluctuating world gold market, jewelers, especially small retailers, have been unable to keep their gold stock in step with market prices.

An informal survey of local jewelers revealed that much of their inventory is still marked at 1979 prices.

"IT HAS HAPPENED so fast," said Bud Bowen, president of Bowen and Co. Jewelers. "Gold has fluctuated so fast within the last 45 days that we haven't had time to monkey with prices," he said.

Bowen said most of their gold jewelry is being sold at the same prices it was last fall — despite the current world market price of gold hovering around $600 an ounce.

"It's terrible to sell merchandise for less than it will cost us to replace it," Bowen said. He is quick to concede however that much of his gold inventory was purchased at 1979 prices, with some bought as low as $300 an ounce.

Gold prices soared from $219 an ounce to $524 during 1979 and rose to $649 during the first week of the decade.

"PEOPLE ARE BUYING it at $400-an-ounce prices," said Dave Norman, manager of Fox's Jewelers at Frandor.

"The customer is really getting a break," he said. "Prices should remain stable until the new stock comes in in February."

In an effort to obtain some price guidelines in the unstable market, many gold dealers and jewelers are expected to attend the 24-Karat Club banquet at the Waldorf Astoria in New York City Saturday.

"Most of the principals in the industry will be there," Bowen said. "By being there, I'll get a professional view of what gold will do in the next six months."

But MSU Economics Professor Robert Rasche warns against "putting all your eggs in gold."

"I DON'T THINK I would go out and put my life savings in jewelry," Rasche said. "I don't think the price of gold will go up forever."

Rasche said the world crises of Iran and the Afghanistan takeover were largely responsible for the jump in gold prices.

"When people are uncertain about economic and political situations they buy gold," he said.

"People think it's safe, they can hide it themselves."

Rasche said the increase in the price of gold does not deflate the dollar but is part of a "general flight to commodities."

The rise in the price of gold in terms of dollars has been a result of continued inflation in the United States, Rasche said.

But, he said, dollars have not been greatly affected by gold prices.

Other precious metals, such as silver and platinum, rose in the wake of gold prices. Copper and tin also rose in the rush to commodities.

State News Staff Writer

Despite the gloomy economic forecasts, employment opportunities are expected to improve for 1980 college graduates, according to a survey conducted by MSU Placement Services.

John D. Shingleton, director of Placement Services, said that the national outlook is good for college graduates, although there are some soft spots in Michigan.

"Michigan is going to be soft in hiring because the state is geared toward the auto industry," Shingleton said. He noted that two of the large auto firms had canceled their scheduled visits to campus. "But this is made up for in the aerospace and the petroleum industry."

Shingleton's report, an annual study of national recruiting trends, was based on surveys of businesses and industries. According to the report an increase of 1 to 2 percent is expected in the number of college graduates hired this year over last year.

THE EXPECTED recession has not adversely affected the employment predictions because employers hire on a long range basis, Shingleton said.

"Hiring of college graduates is a reflection of the employers' outlook on the economy," he said.

The survey indicated that while college recruiting dropped during the recession period of 1973-74, most recruiters regretted creating a "dip" in their scale of middle management by lowering their hiring practices.

"Employers hire college graduates on a long-range basis," Shingleton said. "I think this is a good indication that employers are expecting a good decade. They're optimistic."

According to the survey, the academic majors that have increased in demand are petroleum engineering, computer science, electrical engineering, and mechanical engineering. Those in the lowest demand are social science, education, human ecology, and liberal arts.

"THERE IS A definite interest by students in the business curriculum because the demand is high for these graduates in the job market," Shingleton said.

"More and more students are taking that into consideration when they plan their curriculum," he said.

Shingleton said Placement

Services advised students not to pick a college discipline depending on the job outlook.

"But students are aware of it, and therefore they can make a better decision," he said.

Shingleton's survey was designed and distributed to show faculty and students what recruiters are looking for when interviewing on campuses.

The majority of employers listed the ability to write and speak effectively as the greatest need of college graduates for entry into full-time work. Other requirements of college graduates are an ability to accept more responsibility and to follow through on an assigned task, a greater concern for productivity, and more emphasis on quality of work performed.

"EMPLOYERS ARE looking for someone who will get the job done," Shingleton said. "Employers are very interested in results."

Shingleton also said employers stress work-related experiences as helpful in enhancing the chances of employment for graduates. According to employers, students with experience are better adjusted to the real world and better able to look into a career from personal experiences.

The survey also stated that employers, when recruiting new college graduates, are looking for persons with the ability to get things done, initiative, honesty, and integrity.

Dependability, common sense, oral communication skills, interpersonal skills, and adaptability, were also considered important.

When looking for career advice, the survey stated that employers encouraged college students to consult their placement services offices. Employers felt that students were better prepared for campus interviews through this service.

Although many students may think good grades are important when interviewing for a job, grades ranked 28 on a list of 51 factors reported in the survey.

Most employers checked references more often than grades. The survey stated almost 85 percent of employers check references when considering new college graduates for employment in their organizations.

Council sends permit request to development committee

A request for a special permit to allow construction of a house for handicapped persons was referred to the Lansing City Council Physical Development Committee Monday night.

The Cerebral Palsy Association of Michigan has selected a site in the 500 block of South Washington Avenue to build a group house that would accommodate up to 12 persons.

George Anderson, 1116 Gordon Ave., addressed the city council Monday saying he wanted the home constructed so his daughter, a cerebral palsy victim, would have somewhere to live when he and his wife were no longer able to care for her.

Anderson said the house would not degrade the neighborhood, as area residents had feared in the past.

Anderson said neighbors should have "no fears" about the home, because the facility would be a one-story housing complex and would not be an eye-sore to residents nearby.

Nancy, Anderson's daughter, whose speech was severely impaired, emotionally addressed the council members, asking them to give the go-ahead for construction.

"There are no housing complexes that cater to handicapped problems," Nancy said.

"If and when it is built, there will be no increase in traffic because most of us living there don't drive cars," she added. After the meeting, Roger Cochran, a representative of the Cerebral Palsy Association, said he hoped to have the house financed entirely with federal funds. He estimated the cost of the structure at $320,000 and said he was looking forward to opening the building by December 1980.

The council referred the permit request to the Physical Development Committee, which will make a recommendation to the council.

Jobs forum scheduled for grads

The Graduate Student Employment Forum will be discussed by the Council of Graduate Students today at 5:30 p.m. in the Con Con Room, International Center.

The forum, scheduled for Jan. 31, is sponsored by COGS and MSU Placement Services. This year's forum will emphasize opportunities for graduate students in non-academic fields, COGS president Sharon Cogdill said. There will also be workshops for graduate advisors and special efforts to include women and minorities, she added.

Also on the agenda is the proposed food service opportunities for medical students.

A public victory

Public opinion on the possibility of a nuclear future for Lansing's Board of Water and Light was made clear recently when the BWL released poll results showing that approximately 76 percent of its ratepayers disapprove of the proposed buy-in to one or two nuclear power plants. It was heartening to see the board move quickly to proceed with plans for a locally built, coal-fired plant to meet its future energy needs. The decision represents a victory for those who oppose nuclear power on moral or financial grounds. On a broader scale, it is a victory for advocates of responsive public utility management.

Public utilities historically have been a rather idealistic experiment. Taxpayer-owned and ostensibly politically autonomous, they attempt the Herculean task of bringing a complex, capital-intensive, energy industry into the realm of meaningful self-government.

This, unfortunately, has not always been the case. The BWL has occasionally fallen short of true public governance in its quest for financial and political solvency. In Lansing, public input has often been thwarted in favor of what is most expedient in the eyes of City Hall and the utility's ruling "elite." Until now, the BWL has tended to discredit the public voice, treating it as a nuisance instead of the omnipotent conscience of responsible management.

Hopefully, such public input will play a greater role in future utility decisions. The nuclear issue has largely been settled, but the BWL still faces a myriad of alternatives as it looks to coal for its energy security. The location of the new plant, its capacity and details of its financing should be discussed with the public. Moreover, ratepayers should be openly encouraged to determine how their money will be spent.

The board must also bear in mind that energy conservation is a feasible alternative to untethered expansion of generating capacity. A progressive rate structure, a widespread public education campaign and the employment of energy-use consultants are logical tools in curbing the growth of electric use.

It is tempting, when debating such complex, political issues, for the BWL to cloister itself in a tight-knit huddle of "experts" to seek their suggestions and ignore those from its own ratepayers. At this point, it is largely up to the ratepayers to ensure that the public voice will be heard. Only in a climate of close scrutiny will the BWL closely adhere to the model of receptive public governance.

A port of entry may aid economy

It seems as though the city of Lansing and the Regional Chamber of Commerce are taking some wise steps to combat the spiraling business costs of many industries here. Funds are now being solicited for a study to examine the feasibility of Lansing as a port of entry.

A port of entry means that the city airport will have international status and be able to directly receive goods from other countries. Currently, goods from other countries must first stop for inspection at Detroit or Flint before coming to Lansing. That extra stop helps push up transportation costs, which consequently push up the costs for area firms doing business with other countries.

All local municipalities should contribute to the study, since the benefits of having a port of entry here will aid the entire metropolitan area. Lower import costs resulting from the port of entry are necessary if the Lansing area is to see the commercial development necessary for the city's economic survival.

A port of entry here may also make travel to other countries easier for many area residents who have to deal with a limited number of flights.

Though the study will only determine the feasibility of a port of entry at Lansing, it is, nevertheless, a very important step in promoting the economy of the Lansing area. All options to improve that economy should be strongly considered.

GOP's attacks offer no solutions

As in every election year, the forum for political debate in 1980 will be more political rhetoric, and the Republicans have come out swinging.

The GOP is presently rubbing its hands with delight over the mounting crises that have more than tested the strength of the Carter administration's foreign policy. Resultingly, during Saturday's televised debate, every Republican presidential hopeful took the opportunity to tee off on what he considered the administration's ineffective handling of the Iran and Afghanistan crises. Their criticisms were irresponsible, strongly lacking in content, and did not include any solutions to the international problems Carter faces.

It is unfortunate for Carter that the events of the past few months have left him so politically vulnerable. In the past, incumbent presidents have been chided by their potential opponents regardless of how good or bad their track records were. But 1980 will probably shape up to be the crescendo of problems — internationally and domestically — that were building up long before the Republicans were unseated in 1976. With that in mind, the GOP candidates will do well to put away their slingshots and cease taking advantage of our present melee for their own gain. The problems we are encountering cannot be traced, as the Republicans would have us believe, to one administration.

If the GOP candidates are to have any say, then their views should be made clear in a thoughtful analysis that produces a viable alternative to the Carter plan.

Those views should not make a farce of the forum of political debate.

VIEWPOINT: TRADE RELATIONS

Trade picture not accurate

By LONNIE R. JANZEN

On Nov. 14, the Organization of Arab Students and the Middle East Awareness Committee co-sponsored a slide presentation to illustrate the connection between Israel and the Republic of South Africa. This presentation was followed on Nov. 19 by a viewpoint in The State News. Both the slide presentation and the viewpoint were ripe with overstatement and outright falsehood. I will try to present the facts of the discussion and correct some of the false and misleading aspects of the OAS's arguments.

One of the major points of error in both cases was the emphasis on the "sizeable trade exchanges" between Israel and South Africa. The facts are that Israeli trade with South Africa amounted to only $23 million or .4 percent of South Africa's total import trade (International Monetary Fund figures for 1978). South Africa's exports to Israel amounted to $66 million or .5 percent of South Africa's total exports. Contrast such figures with those for the Black African nations. Over $239 million in trade was exported to South Africa. Thus, while Black African nations condemn Israel for its trade with South Africa, they carry on a respectable level of exchange with the apartheid government in South Africa.

The reasons for such attacks are not difficult to find. The Black African countries, like everyone else, are dependent on Arab oil for their economies. Pressure from Arab states opposed to Israel has resulted in an African change of position in relation to Israel. Israel used to maintain close ties with African nations. The Israelis provided agricultural and technological assistance to these emerging nations. However, their dependence on Arab oil has led them to break such ties.

On the Arab side, while pressuring the Black African states to attack Israel for its trade with South Africa the Arabs have continued to carry on trade with South Africa. Before 1979, Saudi Arabia supplied 25 percent of South Africa's oil while all the Arab states provided over 90 percent of South Africa's needs. Since the boycott of 1974, South Africa's oil sources have been classified. Although it is known that Arab oil producing states have been buying large amounts of South African gold since 1974, presumably in exchange for the oil that enters South Africa from "unknown sources" at the rate of 400,000 barrels a day.

Another claim made in both presentations was that South Africa sent "mercenaries" to Israel to fight in 1948, 1967 and 1973. This claim cannot be substantiated from any sources available. If Mr. Sahbi has the sources available to substantiate these claims, he should produce them. The slide show also attempted to show that Israel currently is sending tanks and troops. To substantiate this, they showed a slide that was supposedly of Israelis driving a tank in South Africa. Having spent part of my Air Force tour of duty in Germany, I recognized the picture as one of a British Chieftain tank (not available to any nation in Africa) being driven by British troops of the Guards Armoured Brigade. (They were wearing black berets. Israeli tankers don't wear berets and South Africans don't either.)

During the presentation it was also claimed that Israel had sold Kafir jets to South Africa. Here again no proof or sources were offered to substantiate the claim. Nor was any proof offered for the claim made that South Africa sent mirage jets to Israel in 1973. It seems obvious that the Organization of Arab Students and Mr. Sahbi are throwing out claims that are either totally false or, at best, unsubstantiated.

Also covered in the presentation and the viewpoint was the claim that Israel and South Africa "have similar racist structures." One cannot deny the fact that the government in South Africa is racist. However, the same cannot be said for Israel.

Against whom is Israel practicing these supposed racist policies, the Palestinians? The OAS and other groups who support their policies continuously use the term "racist" to apply to Israeli policy toward the Palestinians. This is an example of the use of emotion-laden words being used more for effect than for the truth. Racism involves the oppression of one race by another. What the OAS neglects is that Palestinians and Jews are both Semetic people. You can't be a racist against your own people. This is not to say that there are Israelis who harbor deep hatred for the Palestinians. This is true. However, this hate is not racism, and the use of such an emotional catch word should be avoided.

I have tried to show that the connection between Israel and South Africa is not the sinister conspiracy that some people would have us believe. The Organization of Arab Students accomplished this by the use of lies and misleading information. If allegations are to be made, let's bring the true facts to light. The claims made by the Organization of Arab Students and Mr. Sahbi lack credibility due to their dearth of evidence and the use of misleading information. Such important issues as apartheid should not be degraded by such tactics.

Violence creates more tensions

There has been a lot of concern on campus about the kidnapping of Americans in Iran. Concern in itself is good, but the manifestation of this concern into violent thoughts and actions merely adds more violence to the situation. Perpetuating and escalating violence will never lead to a solution.

The public appears to want an immediate solution — get the hostages back alive! Even if this were possible tomorrow, the real problem and underlying rationality of the kidnapping would still exist. I am referring to the United States' protection of the former shah of Iran.

We were supposedly protecting the deposed shah for humanitarian reasons. We knew if the shah ever set foot in Iran again it would be the last step he took. What about all the inhumane actions of the shah when he was in power?

Abolhassan Bani Sadr, the current head of Iran's Foreign Ministry, has come up with the most intelligent solution yet. He has suggested an international trial. This would give the shah a slightly fairer trial than he would receive in Iran, but it still makes him responsible for his actions.

I find it interesting that the U.S. government has avoided the real issue concerning the shah, and instead focused on actions that placate the American public and alter the economic relations between Iran and the United States. I am referring to the selective enforcement of the illegal alien laws and President Carter's freeze on Iranian assets in U.S. banks. If the government attacked the actual problem as opposed to dreaming up policies that are totally unrelated to the issue, we could reach a solution much sooner.

I would also like to comment on the newly popularized slogan "Nuke Iran." If this is advocating the use of nuclear weapons on Iran, then we are worse off than I thought we were. I had always hoped that people

Foreign trade was misrepresented

In a recent article in The State News, Maissouni Sahbi discussed the "political, economic, and military" relations between Israel and South Africa. Our thanks to Mr. Sahbi for opening a forum on relations with South Africa, though it is curious that he ignores some of the facts, while misrepresenting others.

In the 1978 International Monetary Fund report, Israel ranked 17th in exports to South Africa and 23rd in imports from South Africa. In either case, the trade represented 0.5 percent of total South African trade, as compared with Black Africa's 4.1 percent, United Kingdom's 16.4 percent, and West Germany's 20.6 percent. In sum, it is a gross misrepresentation to focus on a special Israeli-South African connection, when more than 99.5 percent of South Africa's trade takes place with nations other than Israel.

As in trade, so too in the area of arms traffic, is Mr. Sahbi's article a clever misrepresentation. According to the figures published in the Yearbook of the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, France was, and is, South Africa's largest arms supplier; followed by the United Kingdom, the United States, and West Germany. From 1963 to 1977, when the United Nations Security Council passed resolution 418 imposing an arms embargo, Israel ranked lower than any of the above countries in arms sales.

What Mr. Sahbi regrettably failed to explore was that special relation between Black Africa and the Arab nations. This special relation was best put by an editorial in the Sunday Nation of Nairobi: "Among the members of the neck-strangling club called OPEC, are our 'brothers' from Arab countries and other African nations such as Nigeria. Whenever we meet their brothers in other forums, such as the Organization of African Unity, they do everything possible to make us support their cause of backing the Palestinians. But apparently when they meet in their other club—OPEC—they tend to forget our brotherhood." In fact, between 1973 and 1977, 77.6 percent of aid given by Arab members went to neighboring Arab countries, while only 7 percent went to Black Africa. Capital that may have been used for African development is being siphoned off to pay increasing fuel costs.

In sum, we feel a clear understanding of facts, not myths and propaganda, can have a major impact on American perceptions of the Middle-East conflict. It is clearly not enough to present biased data, nor do we did not really want to use nuclear weapons unless they absolutely had to. If people are suggesting the use of nuclear weapons in an issue that has not cost one human life yet, we are indeed in trouble. The other possibility is that the slogan is proposing that we have Babcock & Wilcox (of Three Mile Island fame) go build a faulty reactor in Tehran. I would not wish that upon anyone.

In closing, I have two last statements about the way MSU is handling this issue. I cannot understand why all the anti-nuclear slogans painted on the Wells Hall Bridge were painted over in one day and the anti-Iranian slogans were not touched for more than a week. What does this suggest about the U's politics?

I also cannot understand why we should even recognize a mentality that equates beer and international politics, much less glorify it (i.e. the front page article on a November issue of The State News showing a protest sign declaring "Deport Iranians-Import Heineken"). The protests on campus have created concern about the issue, but they have also created an anti-Iranian consciousness that can only make a solution that much farther away.

Lawmakers reconvene; Law submits resignation

State lawmakers are due back at the Capitol today for the first session since the Dec. 15 holiday recess.

A representative from the Livonia-Westland area will not be greeting his colleagues back from vacation, however.

Rep. Robert C. Law, a Republican, resigned from the state House Tuesday to return to private law practice.

Law submitted his resignation in a brief letter to House Clerk T. Thomas Thatcher.

The 32-year-old Appropriations Committee member was elected in 1976. He was also a member of the General Government and Higher Education subcommittees.

The surprise resignation, which occurred in the middle of the legislative term, is regarded as very rare. Once Law's seat is vacated, Gov. William G. Milliken is mandated to schedule a primary within 60 days and a special election 30 days later.

House Speaker Bobby Crim will welcome the House back with a speech on prospects for the new year. Senate Democratic Leader William Faust, Westland, is expected to do the same in the Senate.

Gov. William G. Milliken will deliver his annual State of the State message Thursday morning before a joint session of the Legislature in the House Chambers.

Once things settle down at the Capitol the lawmakers are expected to tackle the two big issues that remain from 1979: Blue Cross-Blue Shield reform and Wayne County reorganization. Both issues have already passed the House and will be taken up by the Senate. The House is expected to deal with a bill that would reform the state juvenile code.

A Senate-passed bill to allow adopted persons to have access to records identifying their natural parents will also be dealt with in the House.

Corporations considering plan to save downtown Detroit hotel

DETROIT (UPI) — Some of the city's top corporations are considering a $1 million rescue plan to keep the landmark Radisson Cadillac Hotel operating for the Republican National Convention, it was announced Tuesday.

The bailout effort being coordinated by the Detroit Economic Growth Corp. is a bid to prevent what Detroit business leaders fear would be a major blow to the city's image just months before the GOP gathering in July.

But officials of the Economic Growth Corp., a quasi-public business-booster agency, said assuring continued operation of the financially troubled hotel is vital to the city's overall downtown redevelopment plans as well.

"It would be a real setback to all of the billions of dollars we're spending on redeveloping downtown," said corporation vice president James Schaffer.

"It simply can't happen. It simply can't be allowed to happen — and won't."

The ornate hotel, built in the 1920s, has been in financial trouble for years, and is losing about $200,000 per month. The Economic Growth Corp. recently loaned the hotel $300,000 to cover winter operating expenses.

The Economic Growth Corp. has been studying the hotel's financial straits for about a month and on Thursday will present its rescue proposal to officials of more than a half dozen top corporations, Schaffer said.

Firms represented will include General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co., J.L. Hudson Co., Burroughs Corp., Bendix Corp. and the National Bank of Detroit.

The hotel, which has been undergoing a massive refurbishing program, is to provide at least 768 rooms for the Republican convention that opens July 14 at the new Joe Louis Arena on the city's riverfront.

Library to demonstrate energy simulator game

The "Energy-Environment Simulator Game" will be demonstrated at 4 p.m. Wednesday at the East Lansing Public Library, 950 Abbott Road.

The simulator game is an analog computer that is being brought to East Lansing by the East Lansing Energy Consciousness Team and will remain at the library after Feb. 2.

The game involves players' attempts to manipulate energy variables in order to maintain balance and to keep the world running for at least 500 years.

Workshops slated on career planning

Placement Services will be conducting several workshops in conjunction with MSU's 13th Annual Minority Career Program to be held Jan. 24 and 25.

To aid students in preparing for interviews, resume writings will be discussed at 6 p.m. Wednesday in McDonel Kiva.

Vernicka Biles, coordinator of the program, will show examples of resumes. Students should bring a copy of their resume to the workshop.

How to approach employers, appropriate dress and interviewing skills will be discussed Thursday at 6 p.m. in the West Party Room of Shaw Hall.

A discussion of the two previous workshops will be presented at 6 p.m. Monday in 335A Case Hall.

The career program will offer minority students an opportunity to talk to prospective employers and representatives of graduate schools.

The program will consist of an informal discussion session in the Big Ten Room of the Kellogg Center Jan. 24 from 7 to 10 p.m.

Representatives from business, industry, government and graduate schools will be available to answer questions and discuss career opportunities with their organizations.

Students will then be able to interview with potential employers in the Placement Services offices on Jan. 25.

Energy tips offered

Worried about those high winter heating bills? Turn those worries into action and learn some tips from a retrofit class offered by East Lansing's Energy Demonstration House.

The classes will cover all aspects of retrofitting a house for energy efficiency. Topics to be covered will include a basic knowledge of a house's construction, where to look for heat leakage, weatherization techniques, caulking, weather stripping and insulation, solar heating options, and heating with wood.

"Hands on" workshops, where students will actually work on conservation techniques, will also be included.

The class will be held on Wednesday nights at the Energy House, 135 Linden St. It will meet between 7 and 9 p.m., Wednesday, through Feb. 6. There is a limit of 20 persons per class.

Tuition is $30, which includes a $5 membership in Urban Options. Urban Options is a non-profit group formed to provide information and experience in energy conservation and solar technology. Members receive discounts on classes offered by the Energy House and may attend workshops for free.

ENTERTAINMENT

Midler's great, but 'Rose' ain't rock MSU hosts opera this week

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Reviewer

There are two sides to The Rose (20th Century Fox; at the State Theatre). As an entertaining motion picture — you know, the kind you enjoy for two hours and then tend to forget — The Rose works pretty well. But as rock 'n' roll — from a musical, cultural and political standpoint — The Rose is the pits, suffering from the Barbra Streisand A Star Is Born syndrome.

It's hard for even a hardcore rock fanatic like myself to reconcile this dichotomy since the film does manage to entertain, and most people who will see it don't give a damn one way or the other about rock music. Still, rock 'n' roll — the term and the idea — is saturated throughout the film. The most memorable sequence occurs when Rose (Bette Midler), very drunk and strung out, turns into a sobbing, hysterical neurotic mess on a plane en route to her hometown. Rudge (Alan Bates), her manager, looks at Dyer (Frederic Forrest), Rose's current lover, and sardonically states: "Welcome to rock 'n' roll." Maybe for some, pal. Maybe for some.

The film's plot is rather common knowledge by now. Much has been made of the fact that The Rose seems to be based on the life of Janis Joplin. (The producers claim that the film is a composite portrait of several '60s rock artists, but Bette Midler certainly doesn't resemble Jim Morrison, Jimi Hendrix or Brian Jones.) Actually, the film resembles Joplin's life in only the sketchiest sense.

Both Joplin and the Rose character grew up in small Texas towns, and both became rock superstars by singing blues in the tradition of past greats, such as Bessie Smith. Both had difficult times taking control of their own lives, and both died from heroin overdoses. But the similarities end there. Like the Rose, Joplin returned to her hometown shortly before her death, but it was for a high school class reunion and not a concert. She didn't die there. In fact, no rock star has ever died onstage from a drug overdose, especially after singing an excellent rendition of the old blues standard, "Stay With Me." The fact that The Rose includes such an incident demonstrates that the film is much closer to fantasy than it is to reality.

The blame lies mainly with scenarists Bill Kerby and Bo Goldman who have supplied an inept screenplay for The Rose. In their depiction of a '60s rock star on a self-destructive course, the writers have left too many questions unanswered and too many areas unexplored.

We see nothing of the character's past and background nor the alleged "wallflower" adolescence which left the character wanting for love and affection. Why is rock 'n' roll such an important high, not only to the Rose but to a generation of fans? And we see nothing of the '60s countercultural politics, the very thing responsible for the existence of superstars like the Rose in the first place. In fact, the only area the writers chose to explore is the exploitation of rock artists by big business entrepreneurs which began in the late '60s, and this facet is illustrated by Alan Bates' nasty portrayal of an unfeeling rock manager.

Director Mark Rydell (Cinderella Liberty, The Fox, The Reivers, The Cowboys) handles the screenplay fairly well for the most part, but the rock concert scenes are unfortunately straight out of A Star Is Born. As a result, the concert footage is closer to the Midnight Special mentality of the '70s than it is to 1969, the year the film supposedly takes place. And the fact that Rose performs two songs that were written during the '70s (Bob Seger's "The Fire Down Below" and Sammy Hagar's "Keep On Rockin'") totally destroys any credibility the film may have hoped to achieve. Although — with the exception of "Stay With Me" and the beautiful "When A Man Loves A Woman" — the film's soundtrack is weak, one can take consolation in the fact that Rose's band includes Steve Hunter and Penetti Glan, two former members of Lou Reed's

The Rose does, however, include two saving graces. The first is Bette Midler's stunning portrayal. She is so incredible that one often forgets that Bette Midler is on the screen and can only see her as the Rose. Let's face it: Midler's vocal chords could never hope to match Janis Joplin's, but — even though this reviewer has never particularly been a fan of her — Midler's future appears to be in the movies. An Oscar nomination seems inevitable.

Secondly, the movie has a certain charm and exuberance during its first hour. There are many moments of hilarity, including the Rose's rapport with her audience (especially concerning a certain twelve-letter word), a scene in a redneck diner where Rose and her newfound lover try to get served, and a scene where Rose chases the lover into an all-male New York bath. Another scene in a female impersonator club — complete with Mae West, Barbra Streisand and Diana Ross transvestites — can only be described as surreal, and it alone is worth the price of admission. The final hour, however, is one drag after another, leading to an ending that can only leave one drained and depressed.

The major disappointment I felt while watching The Rose is that several years ago there were plans for a film adaptation of Myra Friedman's Janis Joplin biography, Buried Alive, with Patty Duke in the title role. The Rose surely puts an end to such speculation, but the worst part is that the film resembles Peggy Caserta's trashy Going Down With Janis more than it does Friedman's excellent book. Someone should have informed the writers of The Rose that there's more to rock 'n' roll than excessive drugs and sex. Oh, well, we can keep our fingers crossed and hope for the release of The Jim Morrison Story starring Iggy Pop. Now, that would be a rock 'n' roll movie!

In the meantime, The Rose will suffice for those people who enjoy films which forsake authenticity for the sole purpose of entertainment. However, don't say I didn't warn you: the last 20 minutes are a total BUMMER.

The Opera Company of Greater Lansing and MSU present the well-loved Giacomo Puccini classic Madame Butterfly this weekend. The MSU Symphony, conducted by Dennis Burk, accompanies the lavish Patrick Tavernia stage direction to be performed at the MSU Auditorium this Friday and Saturday night (Jan. 11 and 12). The tragic Madame Butterfly, Cio-cio-san, will be played on Friday by soprano Pamela Myers and on Saturday by Korea's leading soprano, by way of Juilliard, Lee Kyu-do.

Puccini composed Madame Butterfly in 1904 and found no success with it at La Scala in Milan where it was booed off the stage. After revision and reorganization, the opera proved to be of enduring and endearing importance.

Madame Butterfly is the story of Cio-cio-san, a Japanese girl of Nagasaki, who is sold as a geisha-wife to the wild-living, carefree American lieutenant B.F. Pinkerton, played by Jacques Trussel. With the American consul, a man called Sharpless (played by Charles Long), Pinkerton professes his love of the adventurous life and his geisha-wife who he plans to wed for his amusement. Cio-cio-san is overjoyed, not aware that the lieutenant is reckless and intends to go back to America for a "real American wife."

The second and third acts grow progressively sadder as Pinkerton sails away leaving her to wait for his return. In time he does return, but with a new wife named Kate. Unable to face Cio-cio-san, Pinkerton rushes away leaving Sharpless,

Juilliard soprano Lee Kyu-Do

Kate and Cio-cio-san's servant to break the news to the hopeful Madame Butterfly. Cio-cio-san realizes what has taken place and agrees to give up their new-born son if Pinkerton will return for him. After years of waiting and turning away princes and suitors, Cio-cio-san takes the dagger and dies with honor rather than living in disgrace.

Conductor Dennis Burk says of the production, "It's going to be great. We've got an excellent cast, a fantastic custom-made set, and a stage director who's done the opera over 200 performances — all in all, it should be an exciting and excellent production."

Tickets for Madame Butterfly are $9.50, $7.50 or $5 with a 50 percent discount with an MSU I.D. Tickets are available at the Union ticket office, the Lansing Arts Council box office or at the door.

Gang War to debut Dooley's new wave night

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Reviewer

I don't like Mondays, and neither does anybody else I know, but that might change in the next few weeks. Starting Monday, Jan. 14, Pyramid Productions will be presenting a series of new wave concerts at Dooley's. The name of the series — appropriately enough — is "I Don't Like Mondays," and the first act will be the new Johnny Thunders/Wayne Kramer band, Gang War.

Johnny Thunders originally rose to fame as the lead guitarist in one of the supreme high-energy bands of the early '70s, the New York Dolls. The Dolls were tacky, crude, and outrageous, but their two blistering albums The New York Dolls and Too Much, Too Soon made it onto more than a few best-of-the-'70s album lists, and for good reason. At a time when rock was wallowing in self-pitying "mellow" rock on the one hand and leaden heavy metal on the other, the Dolls put on their trashiest Salvation Army/"Fredericks of Hollywood" duds, turned up the volume full blast, and delivered some of the freshest and nastiest rock 'n' roll around.

When personality crises finally caused the band to split up in 1975, Johnny Thunders formed a new band, The Heartbreakers (no relation to Tom Petty's band, obviously) who eventually released an album called L.A.M.F. (the initials summed up the band's style of playing, as in "They Rock Like A M... F..."). Aside from their raw rock 'n' roll, The Heartbreakers also gained notoriety for their indiscriminate drug usage, which they sung about onstage in "Too Much Junkie Business."

This band, too, had problems staying together, so just about every performance they did was billed as their last. When they did all manage to stagger to the stage they could put on a great show, however, as they proved at Bookie's club in Detroit last spring. The Heartbreakers' live set was captured on vinyl on their Live At Max's Kansas City LP, which came out as an import last year.

During one of the periods in which The Heartbreakers were separated Thunders also managed to record a solo album entitled So Alone, on which he was assisted by ex-Sex Pistols Steve Jones and Paul Cook, Small Faces/Humble Pie leader Steve Marriott, and Thin Lizzy's Phil Lynott. Included on that LP were great covers of "Pipeline," "Daddy Rolling Stone," and "Give Him A Great Big Kiss" (which was once a staple of the Dolls' live show), as well as his own new material.

Wayne Kramer, meanwhile, is no stranger to rock notoriety. Back when Detroit really WAS a rock 'n' roll town, Kramer was the lead guitarist for the infamous MC-5, a band that summed up Detroit rock for a lot of people. Along with Fred "Sonic" Smith, Wayne Kramer's blistering guitar set Detroit on fire at every appearance, a fact proven on their live debut album Kick Out The Jams. Kramer played on the MC-5's next two albums, Back In The U.S.A. and High Time, and then went his own way when the band eventually disintegrated in the early '70s.

For a while Kramer tried working with a band of his own called Kramer's Kreemers, but a drug bust for cocaine brought his plans to a screeching halt. His subsequent jail term took him out of action for years, but since then he has been working himself back into things. When Kramer came out to jam with The Heartbreakers on "Do You Love Me" in Detroit, it was easily the show's highlight.

Two MSU area writers publish new literary works

By MARY TINNEY
State News Staff Writer

A book of poetry and a novel have recently been published by two of East Lansing's most popular writers.

Poet Lee Upton is an MSU graduate, former writer for the State Journal, and the recent winner of grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Michigan Council for the Arts. Her most recent of three chapbooks, Small Locks, is a witty collection of poems laced with childhood memories and written with the sense of humor that has made Upton one of Michigan's most promising poets.

Upton was born and raised in the Lansing area and has participated in many poetry readings and workshops throughout the state. She recently began study on a fellowship to Amherst University in Massachusetts.

One Summer, MSU Professor Albert Drake's first novel and fourth piece of published fiction, is a collection of unified narratives showing the growth and development of a single character as seen over the course of a single transitional summer. It is the first in a quartet of projected novels dealing with the same central character.

Drake, who is on sabbatical this term in his native Oregon, says of One Summer: "The book began as extended notes for an orthodox novel dealing with a character, time, and the directions that character might take as he's influenced by those around him... Was it possible, I wondered, to write a novel that lacked conflict, cause-effect relationships, and certain unities; during the past five years I have tried to confront those problems." Drake has been a professor at MSU since 1966. He has written six poetry chapbooks, and three books of fiction: The Postcard Mysteries, Tillamook Burn, and In the Time of Surveys. Drake's book is available at Paramount Newscenter and Jocundry's. Upton's book is available only at Jocundry's.

Jacki has named the 12-week Winter Session "WINNERS!"

Aerobic Dancing
BY JACKI SORENSEN

The $1,000 homecoming.

You could win $1,000 just for doing what you should have done months ago!

That's right. Just for bringing your money 'home' (to your credit union) you'll have a chance to win $1,000 — and you'll start earning interest daily at 6½% annual rate. Both should make nice additions to your savings.

If you have a savings or checking account at a bank or savings and loan, all you have to do is stop by the credit union with your passbook or other proof of the account and fill out a Sight Draft. You'll receive a drawing ticket on the spot.

Your credit union will take care of all the details of closing your account at the other financial institution and transferring your money to the credit union. And for every $500 transferred to your credit union, another drawing ticket with your name on it will go into the drawing automatically.

If you'd prefer to close an account somewhere else in person and bring or mail your money to the credit union, you'll still be eligible for the drawing.

So do what you should have done months ago — transfer all your money to the credit union where it'll start earning more for you every day.

Hurry! Feb. 15th is the last day for a chance to win the $1,000 prize.

Play it again

It's been said a million times if it's been said once, "to err is human, to forgive is divine."

Some errors are easier to forgive than others. Some just take time to forget about and then there are those mistakes which change the uncertainty of history in the making.

Last Sunday, the world of professional football followers joined the ranks of the disenchanted, all because of human error. Or at least it appeared to be human error.

With the score standing at 17-10 in favor of the defending world champion Pittsburgh Steelers, Houston Oilers quarterback Dan Pastorini threw what appeared to be the tying touchdown, lofting his strike to receiver Mike Renfro in the right corner of the endzone.

WHAT HAPPENED THEN left Houston loyalists in a state of shock and the throng of hungry - to - win - it - all - again Steeler fans wiping their foreheads.

The way the play looked on the instant replay was that Renfro definitely got both feet in bounds and had possession of the ball on top of that. The way side judge Donald Orr explained it was that his feet were indeed down, but possession wasn't established.

The way Dick Enberg and Merlin Olsen of NBC sports explained the call was that Orr hesitated and then had to go talk things out with his colleagues. The way Commissioner Pete Rozelle tells the story is that he wishes the media would take a look at all the films before being so positive.

The ruling cost the Houston Oilers a tie in the AFC championship game, a game they eventually lost 27-13.

It has been suggested numerous times in recent years that professional sports be given the luxury of the instant replay for officials, and the Houston-Pittsburgh game should serve as a graphic case-in-point.

"ONLY ONE GUY can make a call and he didn't do it," Renfro said. "I guess they took the easy way out. He hesitated and it hurt us..."

With the instant replay, however, every official can be in good position. With all the angles, the slow motion and the stoppage of the film that technology has produced, it seems a shame that these things are not better utilized.

Not for every play, no way. Often times TV's instant replays prove the genius of officials' calls. But in a game which is already so infested with commercialism, so tainted by professional gambling, and so well received by the American public, why not do things right?

In two of the other playoff games, both involving the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, controversial calls played roles as well. The inherent difference in those games was that the team affected by the controversy won the game.

Tampa's Jimmie Giles and Los Angeles' Preston Dennard were denied touchdowns as well. Instant replays again showed that maybe the officials could have ruled differently.

The officials are the masters of their craft. The gods, rulers and dictators of what will be and what won't be. It's nice to see Rozelle coming out in support of his officials and saying that "TV cameras are not all-seeing," but then again, he's paid to support calls made by the men in the stripes.

Maybe the cameras aren't "all seeing." Maybe the call Orr made Sunday was correct. And maybe the touchdown would have shaken the unshakable Steelers into mistakes which would have cost them the game. Pleasant dreams, Oilers fans.

Bowlers roll up victories

MSU men's and women's bowling teams closed out their 1979 seasons on winning notes with victories in Bowling Green, Ohio, and Las Vegas, Nevada.

The women's team, ranked 14th in the country, won the Bowling Green Invitational tournament, averaging 165 for the three-game team event.

Junior Kim Arrigo and freshman Linda Painter combined for a six-game total of 1,078 to take the doubles title.

In the singles event, junior Libby Vander placed second with a three-game 591 series.

PAINTER ALSO CLAIMED the all-events title, averaging 178 for nine games.

The men's team did not compete in Ohio, but traveled to Las Vegas for the New Year's Collegiate Invitational tournament.

The 13th-ranked men's team placed fifth in the team event, averaging 198 for five games. High scorer for MSU was

SPARTANS HOST WEEKEND MEET

Gymnasts preparing for invitational

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer

As the MSU men's gymnastics team prepares for the Big Ten Invitational meet they will host Friday and Saturday, head coach George Szypula finds himself uncertain as to how well the squad will perform this season.

Szypula, now in his 33rd year as the Spartan's coach, encountered his first problem during Christmas break when star vaulting competitor Charlie Jenkins tore his achilles tendon. Jenkins, a senior, was the 1979 NCAA champion in that event and will be lost for almost the entire season.

Coupled with this, Szypula is training a very young team. It includes four freshmen, three sophomores, two juniors and only three seniors. And that poses a problem concerning experience.

But despite these drawbacks, Szypula remains optimistic and said that this weekend's invitational might just provide some pleasing answers to his uncertainty.

"SURE, WE'VE GOT a very young team," he said, "but with the excellent job the freshmen have done thus far, in addition to good depth, we just might be in pretty good shape after all."

"In the all-around category (which is the culmination of six events) we've got five-man depth where we only need four, so that helps tremendously. The only real weak spot we have is on the pommel horse, but we're hoping for senior Hubert Streep and sophomore Brian Walsh to give us the help we need in that event."

Leading the way in the all-around is junior Marvin Gibbs. He is one of the top performers in the Big Ten and one of the top ten in the Midwest region. Szypula cites his best events as the floor exercise, the vault, the parallel bars and the horizontal bar.

Junior Ivan Merritt and senior Dan Miller are also atop Szypula's list in the all-around.

"These two are very solid all-around performers," Szypula said. "They provide needed depth in all events."

TWO FRESHMEN, PEDRO Sanchez and Bart Acino, round out the all-around competitors. Acino, from DeWitt, was the 1979 Michigan State High School champion in the all-around, and excels in the floor exercise, rings and parallel bars.

Terry Olsen and Pete Roberts, the other two competing freshmen, are considered specialists. Last fall Olsen took first place at the Buckeye Classic on the parallel bars. Roberts, whom Szypula calls "one of the best young vaulters in the country," earlier scored a 9.8 with the help of his double-flip routine at another invitational.

On the horizontal bar, sophomore Rich Licata provides MSU with one of the top performers in the NCAA Midwest region.

"Rich does a daring vault over the bars that leaves a lot of people in awe," Szypula said. "He's really outstanding."

In ring competition, senior Tom Tomkow excels while Tom Morris adds back-up strength. Sophomore Greg Bosscawen is coming along and provides depth in the floor exercise and on the parallel bars.

Szypula sees the Spartans as one of the top five Big Ten teams, along with Ohio State University and the universities of Illinois, Michigan and defending champion Minnesota. He hopes to see his team better last year's 7-5 record.

IM building is a fullhouse

By DAVE VARGA
State News Sports Writer

Once again the Intramural basketball season is upon us, and once again the inadequacy of the men's facilities is obvious.

"It is my job to ensure every member of the University has the opportunity to recreate," said IM assistant director Dennis Mayer, explaining the new rule of each participant in the men's league playing on only one team.

The men's league maximum of 500 teams will play on 11 courts in Jenison Fieldhouse and the IM Sports-West.

Women's intramural basketball is expecting an increase in the 115 unisex and 30 co-recreational teams registered last year. No limit, however, has been placed on the number of teams a woman can play on or the number of teams that will play on the four courts in the IM Sports-Circle.

PLANS FOR A new IM building, discussed since the late 1960s, were shelved by MSU President Cecil Mackey last fall. A Facilities Committee appointed by Mackey to study the problem, is scheduled to make its recommendation on March 15.

"We badly need an all-events building to replace Jenison," said Bob Siefert, chairperson of the committee. "We want to find if it's compatible to combine the two buildings."

In the wake of a Magic-induced IM basketball boom, the 500-team limit will quickly be filled on a space availability basis. Siefert estimated that the committee would hold up construction for a maximum of six months during its study.

"The big delay is attempting to fund the building, which is estimated at $30 million," explained Siefert.

FUNDING FOR THE earlier proposed building was to come from the money set aside for payment on the current IM buildings or from student fees.

One site currently being considered for the building is near the Life Sciences Building, at the southeast corner of the campus.

Until a new building can be built, the only exception to the eligibility rule is playing on a co-recreational team while playing on a women's team also.

The IM season will last five weeks with a two-week playoff. A champion is then determined in each of three divisions: residence hall, fraternity, and independent.

IM NOTES

A Cross Country Skiing Open House is set for 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., Sunday, at the Forest Akers West Golf Course. The IM department is offering reduced rates and door prizes to help kick off the tour skiing season at the course. For more information call 355-5250.

The IM will offer its first skiing clinic from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., Sunday, Jan. 20. Students interested in this event should register in 201 IM Sports-West. Cost is $5 per person without equipment, $2.50 with own skis, poles and shoes. Only the first 30 persons will be accepted.

Women's basketball team managers who have not registered their teams should attend a meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in 137 IM Sports-Circle. Deadline for women's and co-rec basketball is noon Thursday in 121 IM Sports-Circle.

Deadline for co-rec water polo and floor hockey is noon today in 121 IM Sports-Circle.

Deadline for team handball is 5 p.m. Monday, Jan. 14, for fraternities and residence halls. Sign-up and further information is in 201 IM Sports-West.

Bo's critics grumble

From 1968 through 1975, the University of Alabama's Crimson Tide—coached by the estimable Paul "Bear" Bryant—compiled a post-season football bowl record of 0-7-1. In the jargon of sports, this means that the Bear was only a kiss from his sister away from a perfect losing slate. But no one ever referred to him or his players as losers. Teams that go to that many bowl games simply succeed too often during the regular season to be classified as such.

The fans and journalists who follow Bo Schembechler's University of Michigan Wolverines would do well to keep this in mind. While that 17-15 Gator Bowl loss to the North Carolina Tar Heels did not produce the customary hysterical harangues of previous years, there nevertheless was some grumbling—loud grumbling—about U-M being outcoached and U-M having no kicking game and U-M being unable to win the big ones; in short, the usual complaints. Left unmentioned, or at least unstressed, was Michigan's passing attack which produced 328 yards.

Until recently, Schembechler's critics often moaned about his disregard of aerobics. Seems that criticism has become a bit passe. The Gator Bowl game actually turned out to be what it logically should have been, a close contest. The Tar Heels were ranked 17th in the country, while Michigan was rated just slightly higher, in the 14th slot. There were fumbles and interceptions and a total of 161 yards in penalties, but all things considered it was a splendid little victory for North Carolina. And Michigan's showing, if not so splendid, was more than acceptable in defeat.

Not everyone saw it that way, though. At the post-game press conference Al Ackerman of WDIV-TV Channel 14 in Detroit, a man who apparently likes to irritate people, goaded Schembechler to the point where he jostled the television interviewer's arm. Oh yes, without question, one should keep one's hands to oneself, but Bo is certainly not the first person who has felt the urge to direct an unfriendly gesture toward Ackerman. Fairness is not always one of Al's fortes: There have been times when he has displayed as much of a lack of that virtue as Schembechler sometimes does the virtue of patience.

It must have been a disturbingly unsatisfying season for Bo Schembechler. His team's four defeats came by a total of only 10 points. His Wolverines whipped the Ohio State Buckeyes (ranked No. 1 in the country by some) to a virtual standstill, but ended up on the short end of an 18-15 score because of a blocked punt. In the Gator Bowl his starting quarterback exited because of an injury, and the Wolves ended up short again. And all these aggravations have been accompanied by the taunts and barbs of various members of the Michigan press corps who voice their convictions every season, on the air and in print, of the superiority of the U-M football program, and then react like rejected suitors when the team does not perform accordingly.

Lots of people think it's funny, but it isn't. It simply provides more emphasis to the "WIN! WIN! WIN!" philosophy that pervades major college athletics (and then everyone reacts with shock, followed by righteous indignation when somebody like Woody Hayes finally cracks). It publicly humiliates the young men who play the game, and for what reason? Why should losing a football game constitute such a disgraceful failure for someone who is 20 years old? Women participants in college athletic programs would be wise to keep this in focus. Should they ever attain the equality of recognition that many of them seek, this very same nonsense might be the castor oil that comes with the cake.

One of these years the University of Michigan will win a football bowl game. And perhaps during one of those years in the near future the Wolverines' record won't warrant their going to post-season play at all. Should that ever be the case, Schembechler and his players will then be able to spend a complete holiday season with their families and loved ones.

There was a time when this was considered to be the most fitting way for everyone to end the year, football players included. Still sounds pretty fine from this vantage point.

GRAND HAVEN (UPI) — The Michigan High School Basketball Coaches Association has announced it will hold its first post-season All-Star charity basketball games June 21 at Central Michigan University.

Key move in making the game feasible was the Michigan High School Athletic Association's lifting Nov. 28 of a long-time ban on All-Star games in basketball, football and hockey.

Such games are now permitted, but only in the summer.

Mazzoleni assumes a new role; takes over as full-time goalie

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

They call him "Mazz."

Mark Mazzoleni, the MSU hockey team's senior goaltender from Green Bay, Wis., finds himself in a unique position these days — he's a fulltime starter.

For two years, he played backup to Spartan great Dave Versical, mostly learning the craft and picking up playing time as it came about.

LAST YEAR, DOUG BELLAND arrived on the scene. He and Mazz soon became friends as well as two of the premier netminders in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association in the second half of the season.

Then, in the consolation game of the annual Great Lakes Invitational in Detroit, Belland severely sprained his knee in the first period, causing the Spartans to be without his services.

"They say he may be back as soon as the Wisconsin series," Mazz said. "He's supposed to see the doctor again soon."

But for now, Mazzoleni is No. 1 on coach Ron Mason's club, and although he is happy about it, there is a note of tainted joy.

"Oh sure, I like it," Mazz said, "but it's a bad way to have it happen. I remember when I was hurt earlier this year and how helpless I felt sitting in the stands."

MAZZOLENI CAME TO MSU by way of Premontre High School in Green Bay, where he lettered in hockey, football and basketball. After his graduation in 1974, he played two seasons of Junior A hockey with the St. Paul, Minn., Vulcans with present teammate Russ Welch.

In 1976, he was named to the Midwest Junior A league all-star team.

Named "Outstanding Rookie" in his first year at MSU, Mazz spoke of a couple of factors which influenced his decision to play hockey here.

"I didn't want to go out East, and that's where it would have been if it hadn't been here," Mazz said. "Plus, they were third in the nation the year before."

Mazzoleni's goals-against average this year is 5.79 for the just over 11 games he has played in, a statistic which does not make him happy.

"No, I'm not pleased at all with my play and I know I can do better, but I also try to keep things in perspective."

BESIDES QUALIFYING FOR the WCHA playoffs, Mazzoleni wants to see a couple of other things happen this year as well.

"I'd like to see a good foundation laid for next year, and leave seeing something to build on," Mazz said. "I saw some pretty lean years and this team can be back on top in a couple of years."

Mazzoleni has applied to graduate school, but relishes the thought of having a chance to continue in hockey.

"I've put so many years into this," Mazzoleni said, "and if I could get a tryout, I'd take it."

If the senior goaltender continues turning in performances like last weekend's against Princeton University when he kicked out 41 shots in MSU's 6-1 win, chances are hockey will not lose Mark Mazzoleni even if the Spartans must.

State News/Mark A. Deremo

Senior goaltender Mark Mazzoleni sprawls to make a save while teammates Mark "The Hammer" Hamway (27) and Dan Sutton (26) skate over to assist. The action came during the Spartans' 5-3 loss to Boston College last weekend.

USDA jobs available

Nature enthusiasts and physical or biological science majors may want to apply for jobs with the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Forest Service.

Applications must be submitted by Jan. 15. The temporary job includes seasonal and summer assignments. Seasonal jobs begin on or before May 12 and can extend beyond Sept. 30.

Applicants must be 18 years old by the time they report to work. Application forms are available at the Forest Supervisors Office, Huron Manistee National Forests, 421 S. Mitchell St., Cadillac, Mich. 49601.

The resumes must be returned to Temporary Employment, Forest Service, USDA, 633 W. Wisconsin Ave., Milwaukee, Wis. 53205.

The jobs are available in Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and West Virginia.

Temporary clerical positions may also be obtained by contacting the Civil Service Commission office in Lansing.

Youth Conservation Corps teacher or counselor positions are also available. Information is available at the Forest Supervisor's office of the National Forest in the area in which there is an interest in working.

Student chosen chair of council

Alta Perry, a senior in the College of Arts and Letters, was elected chairperson of the Student Council Tuesday.

Perry, who was elected for winter term, is the first student to hold the position.

Gordon L. Thomas, Secretary for Academic Governance, said Perry's election came as result of a request from MSU President Cecil Mackey.

Gays meet

The Lesbian/Gay Council will hold their first business meeting of the winter term today at 8 p.m. in Room 4 Student Services Building.

Carter pledges effort to help ratify E.R.A.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter pledged Tuesday to "heighten and intensify" his effort to help ratify the Equal Rights Amendment.

He made the promise to the President's Advisory Committee for Women during a 70-minute White House meeting, said Lynda Johnson Robb, chairperson of the group.

She said he promised to take specific actions as part of a new high-profile campaign to increase the administration's role in the ratification drive.

"He said he would heighten and intensify his efforts in this area," Robb told reporters afterward.

Libby Kooptz, a committee member, said, "The fact that he's going to heighten his activity among those that he's directly in contact with every day, politically, is to me essential."

At the meeting, the group formally presented Carter with a report outlining specific actions he and administration officials should take to help secure ratification of the amendment, which would ban discrimination based on sex. He had received a draft copy several weeks ago and said he read it cover to cover. The report was not released publicly.

Robb said Carter approved the committee's idea of distributing speech packets to Cabinet members so that they could speak about the ERA in their addresses to various groups.

Ann Ramsey, a committee member, said Carter promised that neither he nor Cabinet members would venture into the 15 states that have not ratified the amendment without mentioning the ERA.

The ERA has been approved by 35 states, but five have since rescinded their approval. The validity of that move still is in question. For a proposed amendment to become part of the Constitution, 38 states must approve it. Under an extension passed by Congress, the ratification effort has two and one-half years left.

million tons of grain to the Soviet Union and halt sales to Russia of high technology equipment by U.S. corporations.

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission, which had suspended trading Monday and Tuesday in wheat, corn, soybeans and soybean oil futures at centers in Chicago, Kansas City and Minneapolis, announced that trading would resume Wednesday.

COMMISSION CHAIRPERSON JAMES M. Stone said market traders "had time to assess the impact" of the embargo.

Futures are speculative investments in commodities that are delivered at a future date, but they can affect current prices.

The Senate Banking subcommittee on international finance plans to hold hearings on the embargo of food and technology in two weeks, its chairperson, Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill., announced.

In Moscow, the Soviet media intensified their charges that the United States, allied with China, Pakistan and Egypt, was behind the "military aggression" of Afghan rebels fighting the new government here. The newspaper Pravda charged the CIA had sponsored formation of a "broad alliance of forces hostile to the Afghan revolution" in 1978-79.

After putting the new government in power, the Soviet forces have rolled into the Afghan countryside in a bid to put down the lingering rebel war waged by fundamentalist Moslem tribesmembers against the Marxists in Kabul.
