MILLIKEN'S RECOMMENDATION TODAY

'U' expects 7% budget hike

By TIM SIMMONS and DEBBIE CREEMERS

MSU administrators expect to receive about 7 percent of the University's requested $42 million budget increase for 1980-81 in Gov. William G. Milliken's 1980 budget recommendation today.

The MSU Board of Trustees has asked the state Legislature for a 1980-81 general operating budget of $230.7 million — an increase of $42 million from 1979-80.

The governor's recommendations, which will be given at a 2 p.m. press conference, will mark the beginning of months of hearings, meetings, presentations and lobbying — culminating in the passage of the higher education appropriations bill this summer.

"The Legislature will spend two or three months reviewing requests," Patrick J. Keating, MSU budget officer, said Sunday.

KEATING SAID HEARINGS would be held with each university before the Senate and the House approved their versions of higher education appropriations for 1980-1981.

Although the Legislature trimmed Milliken's 10.5 percent budget increase for MSU to 9.3 percent last year, Keating said the Legislature traditionally appropriates more money than the governor recommends.

Keating said a 7 percent budget increase was "a reasonable estimate" of the expected appropriation. He also said the financial difficulties of the auto industry would have a large impact on the state budget.

In Milliken's State of the State address, he proposed "significant budget increases" for higher education.

However, Keating said with inflation running at more than 12 percent this year, "there is no question that a 7 percent budget increase is quite a drop."

KEATING PREDICTED a "difficult budget year" for MSU, noting that "already high" tuition costs will force the administration to consider cutting the operating budgets of some departments.

"The interest on the part of students in terms of tuition has made an impact at the Capitol," Keating said, referring to a November ASMSU tuition rally.

"The president won't be pleased publicly with Milliken's recommendation, because of the high inflation rate," said Fred Whims, of the Department of Management and Budget's education division.

But Whims predicted the increase would be considerably higher than the 5 percent the DMB considered recommending to Milliken in November.

Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance said in November tuition "would hold at its current level if the full $42 million increase was approved."

"Our chances of getting that are rather slim, but if we were to ask for less we would not be carrying out our responsibilities," Wilkinson said.

Carter appeals to world athletes for boycott of Moscow games

By FRANK CORMIER, Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Carter proposed Sunday that the world's athletes boycott the Moscow Summer Olympics, or move the games to another country, unless Soviet troops are withdrawn from Afghanistan within one month.

Declaring that "it is very important for the world to realize how serious a threat" the Soviets pose, Carter said that even if other nations ignored his appeal, "I would not favor the sending of an American Olympic team to Moscow while the Soviet invasion troops are in Afghanistan."

Appearing on the NBC's Meet the Press, the president suggested the Olympics could be moved to some other city or canceled entirely if the Soviet forces were not withdrawn.

"I do not want to inject politics into the Olympics," Carter said, explaining that he would "personally favor" the establishment of a permanent site for both the Summer and Winter Olympics. He suggested Greece would be an ideal summertime choice.

CARTER, WHO IS honorary president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, has no legal authority to dictate an American boycott. Instead, he said he was making recommendations in the form of a message sent Sunday to officials of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

As he left the NBC studio, Carter was asked if he expected a favorable response from the Olympic Committee.

"I think so," he said. Appearing at the same time on ABC's Issues and Answers, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said he would also support an Olympics boycott.

"But," he added, "I want to make it very clear that a grain embargo and a boycott of the Olympics are basically symbols, and symbols are no substitute for an effective foreign policy."

Kennedy is Carter's main challenger in the competition for delegates to the Democratic National Convention. The race begins in earnest on Monday at Iowa party caucuses.

AND ON CBS'S Face the Nation, Republican presidential candidate George Bush said he also favored cancellation of U.S. participation in the Moscow games.

Robert F. Kane, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said he was pleased with Carter's statement because the president asked that the committee take the issue to the International Olympic Committee.

"I was very pleased that he did not advocate a boycott," Kane said. "A boycott would take us out of the Olympic Movement and we would have no voice in deliberations... There is a great difference in deciding not to send athletes for a good cause than to undercut the Olympic movement."

Asked about the difference between a boycott and not sending a team, Kane said: "This has been difficult to make clear. We don't want to abdicate our position in the IOC. To boycott would take us out of that."

Presidential Counsel Lloyd Cutler was asked at the White House what would happen if the U.S. Olympic Committee refused Carter's request.

"I don't think that contingency should arise," he said.

Cutler added, however, that the government could use passports and its "powers to control financial dealings with other countries" to ensure a U.S. team did not participate in the Olympics.

ASKED IF CARTER expected other countries to go along with his action on the Olympics, Cutler said, "The best information that we can get is that there is a groundswell of public opinion in many sectors of the world that this is what should be done."

Cutler said the president informed U.S. allies of his plans during the night. He said he expected Canada, Great Britain and West Germany to go along for sure.

Appearing on the very day he began his fourth year in the White House, Carter also said:

• The United States is committed to help protect Pakistan, a nation that borders on Soviet-occupied Afghanistan, "involving military force if necessary."

• The Soviet intervention has added "a new element" to the situation in neighboring Iran, where 50 Americans have been held hostage since Nov. 4.

"MANY RESPONSIBLE OFFICIALS in Iran now see that this major threat to Iran's security and peace... is becoming paramount, and that there will be an additional effort on their part to secure the release of the hostages and remove the isolation of Iran from the rest of the civilized world," he said.

"The best thing," Carter added, "for Iran to do now is to release the hostages, to seek redress of their alleged grievances in the international fora and the courts of the individual nations and to begin to strengthen themselves against a possible threat by the Soviets..."

• He is not responsible for the current 13 percent rate of inflation, saying: "All of the increase in the inflation rate has been directly attributable to the increase in oil prices." He said 9 million jobs had been added to the economy under his stewardship.

• He feels he has "done everything possible to strengthen our own nation," morally and ethically as well as economically and militarily.

Hostages send letters to U.S. newspapers

By United Press International

WASHINGTON — The United States said Sunday the Moslem militants at the American Embassy in Tehran have apparently forced three of their hostages to flood U.S. newspapers with propaganda letters.

State Department spokesperson Merton Bland said the three Americans who read televised propaganda statements at Christmastime are now sending similarly propagandistic letters to American papers.

"It sounds very much like the material they were reading from in their televised press conference," Bland said in a telephone interview from his Washington area home. "It was almost word for word."

He said the State Department "can only conclude that much of what appeared in some 20 letters or more was probably written at the behest of the so-called students."

"Now, we don't know what carrot or stick (technique) was used to do this, nor do we know what was used to get them to speak on television," Bland said.

Earlier, Bland made similar comments to the Boston Herald American, which read him a copy of a hostage letter to the newspaper and asked for his comments.

The letter was one of 151 brought from Iran by Native American activist John Thomas last week after the U.S. press was ordered to leave Iran.

It was signed by the same three hostages who made the Christmas broadcast — Army Staff Sgt. Joseph Subic Jr., 22, of Redford Township, Mich.; Marine Sgt. Kevin Hermening, 20, of Oak Creek, Wis., and State Department aide Steven Lauterbach, 28, of North Dayton, Ohio.

The gist of the letter and the taped statements were the same: return the shah to Iran to obtain release of all 50 American hostages held since last Nov. 4 when the U.S. embassy in Tehran was seized.

Sent to at least 20 U.S. newspapers, the letter was dated Jan. 11. The shah left the U.S. for Panama last Dec. 15.

The first five paragraphs and the final one of the 11-paragraph letter are nearly propaganda free. The five paragraphs in between apparently could have been inserted without the knowledge of the three hostages who signed it, the Herald American said. (continued on page 2)

TEXAS PLANT EXPLODES

Gas refinery rocked

BORGER, Texas (AP) — Explosions rocked a gasoline refinery and sent flames 300 feet into the air near this Texas Panhandle community Sunday, damaging dozens of nearby homes and businesses and forcing 200 people to flee the area.

At least 34 persons were injured in the explosions that heavily damaged houses in the nearby community of Phillips and shattered windows here, four miles away from the refinery, authorities said.

"There was a big tremble and a roar, it was more like an earthquake," said Ada Westbrook, whose mobile home is located about one and one-half miles from the refinery. "All the stuff on the walls just shot right off and landed on the floor. We opened the door and saw a big ball of fire and black smoke. There are a lot of shook people here... It's just unbelievable," Westbrook said.

Dick Robinson, a spokesperson for Phillips Petroleum Co., said 29 persons were treated at a nearby hospital for minor injuries and released. Four persons were admitted for treatment, Robinson said, but the seriousness of the injuries was unknown.

ROBINSON SAID HE was unsure how many Phillips employees were injured. He said all employees had been accounted for.

One person hit in the eye by flying glass was taken to an Amarillo hospital, 40 miles away, said firefighter Timothy Richwhite. The trip was slowed by icy roads. A Red Cross shelter was set up for evacuees at a local junior high school, but officials said residents would be allowed to return to the homes later Sunday.

"Most of the residents have lived through this at least once. A lot of them go to friends or relatives that live in other parts of the city," said Al Hadberg, a spokesperson for the Red Cross in Borger.

Officials said the blast roared through two cracking units used to manufacture high octane gasoline at the plant about 8 a.m. CST. A natural gas processing facility adjacent to the plant continued to operate.

PHILLIPS OFFICIALS HAD feared the blaze could spread to a third unit before it was brought under control late Sunday morning at the plant, located between Borger and Phillips.

"The flames were 200 feet in the air when I saw them," said Hutchinson County sheriff's deputy Beverly McClure.

A small fire was still burning Sunday afternoon. "It (the blast) caused a lot of damage in Borger," McClure said. "A lot of glass is blown (continued on page 2)

Douglas to be buried in Arlington

By UPI and AP

WASHINGTON — William O. Douglas, who championed individual rights during 36 years on the Supreme Court, will be buried near Oliver Wendell Holmes at Arlington National Cemetery following funeral services on Wednesday.

Chief Justice Warren Burger was to read a short tribute Monday to Douglas at the first meeting of the high court since the retired justice's death.

Douglas, who served on the court longer than any other man, died Saturday morning at the age of 81 at Walter Reed Army Medical Center near Washington. He had entered the hospital Christmas Eve, suffering from pneumonia and was treated for respiratory and kidney failure.

His wife Cathleen and other family members were with Douglas at the time of his death.

DOUGLAS, AN OUTSPOKEN advocate of civil liberties and the right to dissent during 36 years and seven months on the court, retired from the bench on Nov. 12, 1975, after suffering a stroke.

His body will be on public view at the National Presbyterian Church in Washington starting at noon Tuesday. Funeral services will be conducted at 11 a.m. EST Wednesday at the same church by Pastor Emeritus Edward L.R. Elson and the chaplain of the Senate.

Among those giving eulogies will be Burger, former Justice Abe Fortas, former Defense Secretary Clark Clifford, New York law professor Sidney Davis and television commentator Eric Sevareid.

The nine justices and three former justices will be honorary pallbearers. Douglas' longtime messenger Harry Datcher and his former law clerks will be the pallbearers.

A choral group from the U.S. Army will sing selections specified by Douglas.

Douglas will be buried at the Arlington Cemetery on a hill across the Potomac River from Washington near the grave of famed Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. Presidents John F.

William O. Douglas

Kennedy and William Howard Taft are also buried at the cemetery for war heroes.

Later this year, memorial services are to be conducted by the Supreme Court bar at the red-velveted court and in Yakima, Wash., the boyhood home of Douglas, who was born in Minnesota.

President Carter Saturday called Douglas a "lion-like defender of individual liberty" and tributes flowed in throughout the weekend. Burger called Douglas "a particularly forceful champion of the individual."

President Carter ordered flags at federal institutions to fly at half-staff in honor of Douglas.

"Individual freedom in this country had no mightier champion," said the president of Douglas. "We mourn the loss of a friend and a colleague," said Burger.

It is traditional that the nation's chief justice pays tribute when the court meets the first time after a justice's death, and this time the duty falls to Burger, an ideological rival of Douglas, considered as much a conservative as Douglas was a liberal.

In death, he was praised by some past critics as well as by admirers.

Former President Gerald Ford, who in 1970 as House Republican leader launched an unsuccessful effort to have Douglas impeached, said, "The nation has lost an outstanding jurist who had a tremendous impact on our society and our government."

Justice William J. Brennan Jr., a close friend of Douglas, called him, "The only true genius I have ever known."

Sometimes praised as a legal giant and sometimes attacked as a dangerous radical, the outspoken Douglas consistently championed the rights of the First Amendment to the Constitution and an individual's right to speak his mind. He also became an articulate spokesperson for environmental protection, projecting his own love of the outdoors.

"Justice Douglas loved the outdoors with the same intensity he brought to his love of political liberty," Carter said. "On the Supreme Court or in the mountains, William O. Douglas breathed the bracing air of freedom."

In his court career, Douglas wrote 532 dissents, 181 during his last four years when more conservative justices were appointed to the court.

His fourth marriage, to Cathleen Curran when he was 67 and she 23, set off calls for an investigation of his character and for his impeachment.

His last public appearance was Dec. 6, when he was awarded an honorary doctorate by Columbia University where he had studied law and where he later taught. The award called him "a champion of individual liberties, protector of the environment... our nation's most ardent and effective crusader for human freedom."

Texas refinery rocked out of downtown businesses. There has been a lot of glass breakage in Phillips and some collapsing of houses. I do not know how many (homes) have been heavily damaged."

Eck Spahich of the Borger News Herald, said officials estimated the damage would soar to millions of dollars at the plant and in the two communities of Phillips and Borger.

Hadberg said most of the homes close to the plant suffered heavy damage.

"Most of the wood-frame houses shifted on their foundations. A lot of the garage doors were torn off and a couple of ceilings collapsed," Hadberg said.

Spahich said residents reported hearing three smaller explosions before the major blast that sent flames soaring 200 to 300 feet in the air.

Phillips officials said debris from the explosion could be coated with an acidic substance and advised residents not to pick up any of the material that landed in their yards.

The blast was the second accident at the plant in the last four months. Two persons were killed in an explosion last October while they were repairing a gas line at the plant.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration investigated the October blast, cited Phillips with four major safety violations and leveled a $15,000 fine against the company.

A Phillips spokesperson in Oklahoma said workers at the plant were not covered by an Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union contract and were not out on the refinery strike that idled 60,000 refinery workers Jan. 8.

It reads, in part: "We believe that the students' (the captors) demands for the shah's extradition is justified and we urge all Americans to write to their senators and congressmen and ask them to do all they can to bring about the return of the ex-shah to Iran and obtain our release... Do you really believe that the shah's remaining in the U.S. is more important than the lives of 50 American hostages?"

Other letters among the 151 delivered by Thomas were signed only by Subic and end with a plea that the hostages not "be forgotten as our POWs were during the Vietnam War."

Hermene's stepfather, Ken Timm, said he "saw right through" the propaganda.

Lauterbach's mother, Margaret, said she suspects her son and the other two hostages who signed the letter were given "some kind of arrangement or even a contract" in return for writing what they did.

Afghan insurgents plan unification

By The Associated Press

Moslem revolutionaries rejected conciliation with the Marxist Afghan government Sunday and announced plans to unite rebel factions into a single rebel front to fight a holy war against Soviet troops in Afghanistan, according to an Iranian state radio report.

An Afghan Islamic Organization official in Tehran said the revolutionaries never would accept offers of negotiation from the Soviet-backed Afghan government in Kabul or end their attempt to rid Afghanistan of Soviet troops, Tehran Radio reported. Most of the Afghan rebel groups have headquarters in either Iran or Pakistan.

"The Afghan revolutionaries' duty is to expel the Soviet forces from Afghanistan through Jihad (holy war), not through negotiations," the official was quoted as saying.

Discussions are under way, he was quoted as saying, among seven Islamic organizations to form a rebel alliance to fight the Soviet troops, which helped bring the government of President Babrak Karmal to power on Dec. 27 and are now battling insurgent units in the Afghan countryside.

Government leaders in Iran and Pakistan are expressing fears of movements by thousands of Soviet soldiers near their borders. U.S. estimates of Soviet troop strength in Afghanistan has run as high as 100,000.

IN AN EFFORT to assure the Pakistan government, President Carter said on NBC's Meet the Press Sunday that the United States would be prepared to use military force to protect Pakistan. He also said he would increase the level of U.S. naval forces in the northern Indian Ocean-Persian Gulf area.

The United States already has promised to give Pakistan $400 million to shore up its defenses, especially along its 1,200 mile border with Afghanistan.

Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua met with Gen. Mohammad Zia ul-Haq, the Pakistani president and visited Aza Khel, a camp for 6,000

Afghan refugees in Pakistan. Huang reiterated his government's support for the Moslem rebels, and told leaders at the camp, 60 miles from the border with Afghanistan, that China also would assist the 438,000 Afghan refugees believed to be in Pakistan.

Details of the discussions between Huang and Zia were not disclosed.

In an apparent new move toward conciliation with the rebels, meanwhile, the Afghan government announced it would change its communist-style, all-red national flag, which had been attacked by Afghanists as a symbol of atheism.

The flag was introduced in April 1978, when the country's first Marxist government came to power in a coup.

IT WAS WIDELY believed that green, the traditional color of Islamic pennants, would be part of the new flag's color scheme.

continue to seek economic sanctions against the Tehran government and to bring "concerted pressure" on an international basis to win freedom for the hostages.

The president also said he seeks a unified, stable and independent Iran, although the Tehran government's "abhorrent act" in condoning the seizure of the hostages cannot be ignored.

In his TV appearance, Kennedy said he would oppose stationing U.S. troops in Pakistan "at this time" but would support military and other aid. He accused Carter of "conducting an American foreign policy that has been lurching from issue to issue" without direction for the past three years.

There are better ways to handle a tough semester of math.

Choose the Texas Instruments calculator that's right for your major.

When you're working in a specialized field, you need a specialized calculator. That's why Texas Instruments designed the Slimline Business Analyst-II for business and finance... and the Slimline TI-50 for science and math. Each provides the tailored power and the reliability you'll need as you learn to solve the problems you'll face as a professional. And each has a price you'll appreciate as a student.

Slimline Business Analyst-II. Sleek LCD calculator with versatile business capabilities.

Solving financial problems with the Slimline Business Analyst-II can make working with your old calculator seem like pencil-and-paper arithmetic. The functions required to perform many common business, financial and statistical calculations are built in to help you make quick, accurate evaluations of many complex business situations.

Special financial keys are used to handle time and money problems such as compound interest, annuity payments, mortgage loans, investment yields, amortization schedules and more.

Statistical and linear regression capabilities provide the power you'll need to boil down data and automatically handle problems such as sales and earnings forecasts.

Profit margin calculations concerning cost, selling price and margin can be performed rapidly when any two of the variables are known. Other features include a four-function data register with Constant Memory™ feature that retains its contents even when the calculator is turned off. Two miniature batteries provide up to two years of operation in normal use. And TI's APD™ automatic power down feature helps prevent accidental battery drain.

The Business Analyst-II, with detailed owner's manual and suede-look vinyl wallet with pockets for notes, $45.00*.

The Slimline TI-50 packs 60 powerful functions into a handsome, compact package.

The pocket-portable Slimline TI-50 is a remarkably powerful LCD slide-rule calculator. Yet it's as thin as a pencil and weighs only three ounces!

Its 60 versatile functions can help you handle a wide range of college math problems. Capabilities include common and natural logarithms. Six trigonometric operations that can be performed in three angular modes (degrees, radians or grads). Two constant memories that retain their contents even when the calculator is turned off. And more.

Seven built-in statistical functions simplify the task of boiling down large sets of data points so you can perform accurate analyses and draw reliable conclusions.

The power of the Slimline TI-50 is made easy to use by TI's AOS™ algebraic operating system, which provides 15 sets of parentheses and accepts up to four pending operations. That means you can enter most problems just as they're written, left to right.

Two miniature batteries provide up to two years of normal operation. And TI's APD™ automatic power down feature helps prevent accidental battery drain.

The Slimline TI-50 includes a detailed owner's manual and a durable vinyl wallet, $40.00*.

Make sure your next calculator has the specialized power to handle the problems unique to your major. See the Business Analyst-II and the Slimline TI-50 at your college bookstore or other TI dealer today.

E.L. PROPOSAL DISPUTED

Realtors protest program

By MICHAEL VEH
State News Staff Writer

Local realtors protested a city-proposed fair housing program which they say will put East Lansing in the real estate business.

The protests were voiced at a public hearing Thursday held by the Commission on Housing and Community Development.

The commission, in an effort to meet U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development Block Grant recipient guidelines, conducted a survey during the summer and fall of 1979 to examine the extent of housing discrimination in East Lansing.

The survey found that some discrimination exists in the areas of sex, age and student standing.

The study also showed that because of discrimination along racial and marital lines, families are grouped in certain sections of the city.

Although the study showed that discrimination in East Lansing is slight, a fair housing program was recommended to completely eliminate the problem.

Realtors in attendance Thursday were most upset with suggestions that they make the Greater Lansing Board of Realtors multiple listing service available to the public under certain circumstances and that the city have a complete house listing service.

Marcia Jensen, of Moore/Jensen Associates, said she saw the city's efforts to establish its own listing service as an effort to by-pass the realtors.

Margaret Nera, 343 Charles St., said, "We (realtors) do not discriminate. We want to sell real estate and we will sell to anyone who wants to buy it."

Other agents showed concern for the legality of the city's proposed actions.

Spiro Tesseris, of Tesseris Realty, said the proposed listing service is against the law.

He pointed out that the city would be entering the real estate business and that a license was needed to sell real estate.

"You're taking our jobs," he said. James Thelen, of Hubbell Realty, said the government was trying to regulate real estate sales.

There were some people in attendance who supported the plan including one realtor who suggested that realtors could add their own listings in the city's multiple listing book.

Phil Green, president of the Michigan Organization for Human Rights, presented the commission with a letter recommending the elimination of housing discrimination.

The human rights group is a statewide organization dedicated to eliminating discrimination on the basis of sex, marital status and sexual orientation.

Green said his organization advised the addition of sexual orientation and marital status to East Lansing's non-discrimination ordinance as an important step toward fair housing.

Also included in the human rights organization's recommendation was the authorization of testing for compliance, a public awareness program, and strict enforcement of the ordinance.

The commission tabled the proposed fair housing program to allow for further discussion.

Ronna Benjamin, commission chairperson, said the city attorney would be consulted before any action was taken on the proposal.

Educators tour Japan

By ELYSE GOLDIN
State News Staff Writer

American educational and cultural traditions were exchanged recently when the administrative assistant of MSU's Asian Studies program toured Japan, along with 17 other Michigan educators.

Lillian Kumata led educators through schools in Shiga Prefecture, Michigan's sister state in Japan.

Shiga Prefecture has been Michigan's sister state since 1968.

Shiga has the largest lake in Japan and the interest in water recreation and conservation is similar to that of Michigan. In 1968 Shiga asked Michigan to share a sister state relationship.

Kumata speaks fluent Japanese and also worked as the delegation's translator.

The exchange marked the first time American educators from one state visited their sister state's counterpart, Kumata said. It was a pilot program aided by federal funds.

The six-week trip included one week of sightseeing in Tokyo. The majority of time was designated to touring 25 schools and their prospective city halls.

Kumata said the trip's purpose was to destroy false images American educators may have about Japan. There is more emphasis being put on international news today in schools and teachers themselves must understand what other countries really are like, she said.

"We wanted them (teachers) to experience first hand, things that they heard happened in Japan. This way they are better qualified to teach their classes about Japan," Kumata said.

She said that the group also established pen-pal and sister school relationships.

Kumata said she was most surprised to see that Shiga schools were taught on a totally equal level.

Japan's Ministry of Education budgets every public school uniformly, she said. All teachers must pass the same federal exam and follow similar curricula.

"Certainly it must challenge the teacher's creativity... and it would never work in the American system," she added.

She said that Japanese teachers were envious of the freedoms granted their American counterparts in choosing classroom curricula.

Japanese teachers tend to work more hours than American teachers.

can teachers because they visit with the families of their students at home, Kumata said. "They (Japanese teachers) feel more responsible for the upbringing of a child than teachers do in the U.S.," she said.

Kumata said that Japanese families cooperate with their teachers more than Americans do because there is a higher respect for the teaching profession in Japan.

"The true test of success will be seen in the future," she said, "when American educators apply the new education they learned in Japan."

Theologian criticizes cults

By MOLLY MIKA
State News Staff Writer

Religious cults trick people into a way of life they do not want, said an internationally-known scholar on new religious movements.

Speaking Friday in a seminar at Christ Lutheran Church, the Rev. Johannes Aagaard, professor of theology at the University of Aarhus in Denmark, said many people are recruited into cults on the basis of Christian beliefs that are later discredited by gurus. These gurus then teach what they believe is the "real truth."

To the Hindus, a guru is a god who enlightens those he teaches. To Aagaard, a guru reforms a person's thoughts within such cults as the Rev. Moon's Unification Church, Children of God, Scientology, Hare Krishna, The Way and Forever Family.

"I believe a guru ideology is against Christianity. To follow or to become a guru is not to respect the difference between God and man," Aagaard said.

Aagaard has traveled extensively to study the cultural context of new religious movements. He was one of 50,000 religious representatives from around the world who attended a religious conference in India last year.

"The Hindus said at the conference that Hinduism has become a world-wide religion," he said.

"They believe they've broken the neck of Christianity and it will disappear as Islam and Hinduism become the religions of the future."

Aagaard blames the Eastern religions for the personal growth movements and cults that have spread throughout the Western world in the past 20 years.

Aagaard is in the United States to ask all churches to educate their young people concerning the dangers of cults.

Cults tend to seek out idealistic youth who are above average intelligence, he said.

and that most cults operate on college campuses.

Youths who get involved in cults come from all religious, ethnic and family backgrounds, he said.

Psychiatrist John G. Clark listed the following characteristics of cults in his book All God's Children:

- all the groups have living leaders who are demonstrably wealthy;
- cults have a strong central leadership that demands total obedience;
- a cult's interest is very low in encouraging individual development;
- almost all of the cults emphasize money-making in one form or another;
- a few cults emphasize demeaning activities or rituals.

Aagaard told the 40 people in attendance to be especially wary of the Guru Maharaji. "Living within such a community for half a year would make one psychotic and unable to deal with the real world," he said.

"TM is not harmless transcendental meditation, either, when you realize it can change you into a non-thinking robot."

Rev. Johannes Aagaard

Aagaard also warned that all yoga classes prepare for the tantra ritual, a ritual based on fears of women and death. Sexuality is used as a means to send yourself out of existence in order to become divine and immortal, he said.

The audience asked if it were impossible to be a Christian and to follow a guru. Aagaard replied that he had seen attempts at Christian yoga and Christian kundalini and "they are no good."

In Friday's State News it was incorrectly reported that William Lammers is an MSU history professor. The article should have read that Donald Lammers is chairperson of the history department.

Competitors woo domestic buyers

In the grand arena of product competition, the name of the game has always been to build a better mousetrap. The idea of building products to last, touted as the fruit of American know-how, has steadily eroded in this century, ever since manufacturers learned that planned obsolescence was more profitable than designing goods to last for several years.

For all of its research and technological capacities, the auto industry is perhaps the most culpable party in churning out deficient products. Domestically, the auto companies have traditionally divided up the market, each producing a car of equally inferior quality. Now the foreign market is threatening domestic sales more than ever, prompting UAW President Douglas Fraser to demand that Japanese automakers, which now command 22 percent of auto sales in the United States, be forced to build their products here instead of abroad.

Fraser's demands should not be taken lightly. They represent what happens when consumers must choose between the declining quality of U.S. autos and the efficiency of cars produced in foreign countries. Since 1973, oil embargoes against the United States and worldwide fuel scarcity have dictated the production of smaller cars. The American dream of a big car went out the window along with 30-cent gasoline, yet domestic production changeover has been slow in coming. Chrysler Corp. blamed its financial woes to a great extent on the swiftly changing demands of the auto-buying public. But if conditions are to be placed on foreign car manufacturers because of their success in our market, the incentive for American manufacturers to produce autos that rate with the competition is lost.

Judging from the events of the past decade, it would appear that Detroit is finally paying the wages of its sins. In a belated awakening to the state of their industry, auto executives have bemoaned foreign encroachment upon their markets, the rising tide of regulation and labor's untiring crusade to gain a bigger voice in the operations of the Big Three. As if that is not enough for them to worry about, one of their number has been put on trial on the distinctly ominous charge of reckless homicide.

At this point, one can only hope that the landmark "Pinto case" will awaken U.S. automakers to the hard facts of industrial life. When three teenagers perished 1 and one-half years ago after their 1973 Pinto was struck from behind and burst into flames, the Ford Motor Co. lost a lot more than the public's trust. Pinto sales in 1978 were down 22 percent, and a handful of upcoming civil cases will undoubtedly cost the company tens of millions in damages and legal expenses. The indisputable gravity of Ford's action came to light recently when a California jury awarded a single plaintiff an unprecedented $128.5 million in damages, later reduced by the judge to $6 million. In the minds of many, Ford has only begun to pay for its negligence.

If the state of Indiana sees fit to find the company guilty on homicide charges, Ford executives will have much more to worry about than a $30,000 fine. Until now, the courts and the legislatures have regarded corporations as inviolably sacred bastions of immunity when it comes to distinctly criminal charges. In deciding the Pinto case, the Indiana jury will be deciding much more than a simple question of guilt or innocence; it will, rather, be passing judgment on whether a corporation, as an autonomous legal "person," must adhere to the same standards of morality as the rest of us.

To read the accounts of Ford's cover-up of the Pinto defects is to learn of a chilling sequence of events leading to an ultimate breach of corporate responsibility. There can now be little doubt that the company's engineers knew of the Pinto's defects in advance, yet neglected to remedy them because of the time and money that would have been required. Ford gambled; it lost. And the market system and the courts will ultimately impose the proper penalty.

As with the recent test case over release of the "H-Bomb Secret," to know how Ford executives covered their tracks in the Pinto case is to ask why they did it. Like the rest of the American auto industry, they may have felt that their lofty position exempted them from public scrutiny. Ten years ago, as the American auto industry basked in the light of its own domestic oligopoly, they may have been right.

The key word now, however, is competition — intense, worldwide, and unfettered by stifling trade restrictions. For the auto industry to retreat into isolationism and cries of "Buy American" would only be a denial of the fact that a shrinking world means a freer economy, in which exploitation of one country's market by another country is a natural by-product of efficiency. If there is anything the last decade has taught the auto industry, it is that no one holds a monopoly on innovation. But by producing an automobile which meets the needs of Americans as well as the world, Detroit should be able to hold its own.

An unwise mix

Once again, the emotionally charged battle over gay rights has thrust itself into the forefront of local issues, this time in the seemingly innocuous form of social dance. The issue at hand is not that Dan Jones and Ben Lowery want to dance in Delta Tau Delta's Multiple Sclerosis benefit; it is, rather, that they want to dance with each other. And that is precisely where the trouble begins.

While we find it hard to disagree with Jones' premises, his methods are subject to question. Although Jones has claimed that his actions are motivated solely by a desire to help those less fortunate than himself, his long history of activism seems to indicate that he sought to enter the event not so much out of altruism as a desire to establish a test case for civil liberties.

If this is so, he has made a very poor choice of testing grounds. Delta Tau Delta's dance marathon is the largest single fund-raising event in the area, having garnered $93,000 last year alone. Despite Jones' claims to the contrary, his participation is likely to be a deterrent to the event's drawing power and its fund-raising ability. The Miller Brewing Co., a long-time sponsor of the event, has already threatened to withdraw its funding in the wake of the controversy, and MS Society officials are understandably nervous about the flurry of statewide publicity.

The real issue at hand is not gay rights, but Jones' politicizing of a vital charitable event. While Jones is fully justified in his demand that society recognize his inherent civil rights, he seems to have placed his own ambitions above the interest of others.

TIM SIMMONS

VPs seem to lack initiative

Although it is virtually impossible for MSU's bureaucracy to grind to a halt, it seems as though a "gag order" is placed on University administrators when President Cecil Mackey leaves town.

Last Thursday Gov. William Milliken gave his annual State of the State address, which included his views on higher education.

Not understanding the implications of terms such as a "period of uncertainty" for higher education, I tried to contact Jack Breslin, executive vice president and vice president for administration and state relations.

Breslin seemed like a logical choice to interpret Milliken's address because he spends many days at the capitol.

After making a number of phone calls, Breslin's secretary contacted me a few days after my original request to talk to the executive vice president.

She informed me that "Mr. Breslin did not feel it was appropriate to comment on the State of the State address" until Mackey had commented first.

Mackey, however, was attending a meeting of the National Boating Safety Council in Florida and was not expected back until the end of the week.

This worked out very conveniently for Breslin, who either did not want to comment on the address, or could not comment until he had a cue from Mackey.

Prior to Breslin's refusal to comment on the address, Provost Clarence Winder, who is vice president for academic affairs, had said he, too, could not talk about Milliken's message.

Winder was somewhat more direct when asked to comment, saying "I have not had the chance to read it" because of a busy schedule. Winder claimed he also had not read any newspaper accounts of the message.

It seems we had incorrectly assumed the vice president for academic affairs could comment on how Milliken's message affected academics at MSU.

"While the state should not have control over the curriculum at each institution, it does have an obligation to . . . reduce overlapping jurisdictions and programs," Milliken stated in his address.

This could definitely affect academic programs at MSU, but Winder could not comment on its meaning because he had not read the address.

By the time Mackey is able to comment on Milliken's message, the budget appropriations for MSU will already have been announced. The fact that higher education has slipped on the priority list of state appropriations is no surprise and will certainly be taken into consideration when University officials evaluate the final budget proposal.

So why should vice presidents be apprehensive about commenting about the State of the State address?

Granted, the address was no thriller or cause for excitement, but it does seem as though top University administrators would have read it. It also seems as though the vice president for state relations would have received some feedback concerning its meaning.

Mackey has told the media he does not need to be contacted about every issue. That is why he delegates responsibility.

From the reaction of the vice presidents, however, it looks as though they need direction from the president before taking a stand on an issue.

The vice presidents in MSU's administration are intelligent people; intelligent enough to understand the implications of a message such as Milliken's. They are also intelligent enough to know when they should comment and when they should wait until a more "appropriate" time.

VIEWPOINT: OLYMPIC BOYCOTT

A dangerous precedent

By ALEC P. FRITSCH

I have never written a letter to a newspaper before because I have never felt the need to let everyone know how I feel — until now.

If President Carter pulls the United States out of the 1980 Summer Olympics in Moscow, we will not only be slighting ourselves and our athletes, but everything that the Olympics stand for.

I do not condone the action that the Soviet Union has taken in Afghanistan. Any military action by any country (including the United States) against any sovereign state is wrong and should be condemned by the world community. I do not feel that the Olympics should be used as a political pawn. It has always been my understanding that the ideal of the Olympics is that they were designed to be separate and distinct from political pressures.

We did not pull out of the Olympics during 1936 when they were held in Berlin under the auspices of the Nazi machine. The early and mid '30s were a time of intense global political turmoil — possibly exceeding that of today. When our athletes passed the grandstand and presented the Olympic salute, it was mistaken for Hitler's salute. But it did not deter our Olympic spirit. In fact, Jesse Owens turned out to be the wonder of the Games.

The blood of the Israeli athletes shed at the 1972 Olympics did not end their participation in the Games. They continued to participate in international competition even when their state was threatened more severely than we are threatened today.

In 1976 several African nations withdrew from the Olympics because of disputes with Great Britain and other African states. Taiwan also refused to participate in the games in protest to Mainland China. The U.S. government expressed concern and regrets to those countries, asked them to put aside their differences, and invited them to participate in the spirit of the Olympics. I fail to see how we can effectively rationalize a boycott in light of our past position.

The people that the boycott will hurt the most are our athletes. The Olympics Training Program in the United States leaves a lot to be desired. Many of the athletes must financially support themselves while training long hours. For most of them, the Olympics are the culmination of a lifelong dream. They are proud to be representing our country while striving for the elusive gold. Many athletes may not continue training or will be past their prime by 1984. As a country, we should not let them down. We should support them.

A boycott of the Moscow Olympics could be the beginning of the end of the Olympic games. By boycotting the Olympics we would be setting a dangerous precedent that could be followed by other nations in 1980 and in the future. If all of the nations holding international grievances boycott the Olympics, no one would show up. Even if only a few countries drop out, the Olympics could be damaged beyond repair.

I may be idealistic in my views toward the Olympics, but they should be separate from politics. I only hope that they continue to survive and get better in the future.

Case Hall RA's are not special

James Peters' viewpoint about the resignations of Case Hall resident assistants seems to imply, if not outrightly state, that violations of a seemingly insignificant nature should be overlooked. While the severity of this particular incident may be reasonably argued, the underlying principles are almost irrefutable.

Not only are we dealing with the question of legitimized stealing, but also the role of an RA at MSU. Disregarding the fact that an RA, upon accepting that position, enters into an explicit contract with the University and is supposed to serve as a role model, the assertion that "everybody does it" is an irresponsible justification based on ignorant resignation. I find such reasoning to be excremental.

I don't claim personal innocence of thought or deed, but I do hold myself accountable for my actions, especially those which are premeditated. Part of gambling is the likelihood of losing; part of playing with fire is the potential to get burned.

Dance exploited

I am writing this letter in response to the Jan. 15 article concerning the Delta Tau Delta Multiple Sclerosis Marathon and the gays. Isn't it a shame that an event which helps so many human beings is being "used" as a publicity stunt for another cause? It disgusts me to think that because of the gay issue this marathon could lose many of its sponsors and decline in popularity. How can anyone who considers himself a "human being" be so uncaring and selfish as to possibly cause the downfall and/or termination of this worthwhile event for his own purpose?

The dance marathon, the "largest non-professional fund raising event here at MSU," raised over $91,000 last year. It also provides a chance for non-greek and greek students, and area residents to learn more about one another while working together for a single cause. And in addition to allowing people to have a good time, it also allows people to help others less fortunate than themselves.

The issue should not be gay vs. non-gay, but multiple sclerosis. The gay issue is one which will have to be dealt with, but not at the expense of the marathon.

Delta Tau Delta has set the rules, so why fight them? We should accept and abide by these rules to show that we, as "human beings," really do have hearts. So let's give Delta Tau Delta and their marathon the support needed and make this the best year ever!

Undue credit

I found it disheartening that the original idea of 4 West McDonell's mural, depicted in the Jan. 14 State News, was not given its due credit. The original Pink Floyd-inspired wall graphic was first formulated last winter term (to the best of my knowledge) at Abbot Terrace, Abbot Hall. Furthermore, wasn't it Bill Holdship or John Neilson who said that most people pick Velveeta rather than the real thing? Anyway, if someone would like to see the real thing, stop by Abbot Terrace. We would enjoy your company.

Russians may get Latin grain

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Refusals by Argentina and Brazil to limit grain shipments to the Soviet Union over the Afghan crisis are another symbol of Latin America's growing economic nationalism, which is increasingly at odds with U.S. interests.

Both countries, run by right-wing military officers, joined Latin neighbors in calling for withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan. But they balked at promising Washington to block any deal that would replace a 17 million-ton U.S. grain sale halted by the Carter administration in retaliation for the Soviet intervention.

Argentina expects this year to harvest 12 million tons of sorghum, corn and soybeans that are not yet sold. Brazil will have 1.5 million tons of unsold soybeans. Whether any goes to the Soviets is a matter of conjecture because of ambiguous statements by officials last week after a meeting of grain exporters in Washington.

"Argentina will not go out of its way to offer the Soviet Union more grain," Argentina Grain Board president David Lacroze said.

"But if an importer comes looking for it, the question will be decided by Argentine exporters in the light of price, supply, etc. The Argentine government will not distort the natural working of the market."

Mayor invites city for cake

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — All 660,000 residents of San Francisco were invited to City Hall for cake, champagne and chamber music Sunday to celebrate Mayor Dianne Feinstein's wedding to business executive, Richard Blum.

A giant seven-tiered cake of three flavors, tables laden with cheese and fruit, and 160 cases of champagnes and white wines were carted in for the public reception.

In place of the traditional wedding rice, there was a huge supply of Riceroni, the advertised "San Francisco treat."

A motorized cable car waited to whisk the mayor and the groom away from City Hall for their honeymoon.

"There have been lots of people married at City Hall before — in the court — but no one like the mayor and not in the mayor's office," said city archivist Gladys Hanson.

Feinstein, 46, chose a cocktail length, jade green silk dress for her third wedding. About 30 to 40 close friends and family members were to attend private ceremonies in her wood-paneled office officiated by Rabbi Martin Weiner.

Colombia crash kills 147

BEGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Five sections of a crowded wooden grandstand at the bullring in Sincelajo collapsed Sunday and hospital officials said at least 147 persons were killed and about 500 were injured.

Witnesses reported some of the victims were impaled on splintered beams. Others were trampled to death by panic-stricken fans and many of the injured survivors were drenched in blood.

Municipal authorities said it was feared the death toll would exceed 200 as police, firefighters, and civil defense teams struggled to rescue persons trapped under debris.

"We were at the eastern-end grandstand when suddenly I noticed that one of the sections began to fall backwards and then the other four fell trapping thousands of persons," said Eduardo Ruiz.

He was one of an estimated 40,000 fans packing the bullring, which is the largest in Colombia.

Yugoslav president loses leg

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Doctors amputated the left leg of President Tito Sunday after a circulation blockage "jeopardized life," the official Tanjug news agency announced.

The 87-year-old Yugoslav leader and elder politician of the non-aligned movement "bore the operation well," said a three-sentence medical announcement, delayed some six hours beyond the usual advisory time. "The immediate post-operative course is normal," Tito's doctors were quoted as saying.

The news agency did not indicate how much of the leg was amputated and an official elaboration was not expected Sunday night. Details of Tito's condition, such as temperature and blood pressure, were also withheld.

The operation, at about local time, 6 a.m. EST, was performed in a hospital in the northern city of Ljubljana, where Tito had been undergoing treatment for circulation problems in his left leg over the past eight days. Tito had suffered "heavy damage of arteries" in the leg, Tanjug said.

Speculation about a possible amputation increased after doctors announced Monday that surgery performed a week ago had failed to correct Tito's ailment.

The announcement followed a week of speculation and rumors over the condition of Tito, who since the 1940s has held this turbulent nation together largely through the force of his own personality.

Kennedy wins Calif. straw vote

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy narrowly defeated President Carter on Sunday in a straw vote of California Democratic Party leaders.

The Massachusetts senator won the support of 42 percent of the delegates at the California Democratic Party convention. Carter came in at 29 percent, and California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. was a distant third in his home state with 14 percent.

The actual vote total was Kennedy 622, Carter 583 and Brown 207, with another 59 votes scattered among minor candidates and uncommitted.

Kennedy said in a statement he was "delighted" with the results.

Alan Fox State News Tony Dugal

Fox becomes non-student

By MICHAEL VEH
State News Staff Writer

Alan Fox, once the only student holding a seat on East Lansing City Council, has recently joined with the other council members in the ranks of the non-students.

After six years at MSU, Alan Fox has graduated.

Fox graduated at the end of fall term with a 3.897 grade point and received the MSU Board of Trustees Award.

But there's more behind Fox than simply a history degree and a high grade point average.

He graduated from East Lansing High School in 1973 and decided to attend MSU so he could be near the state Capitol.

It was during his last years of high school that he became interested in politics. It was during that time that he was working as an intern for state Rep. H. Lyn Jondahl, D-East Lansing.

Following his graduation from high school, Fox became a page in the state House of Representatives.

In February 1975, he became an aide for the House Consumers Council and in the following September it became a full-time job.

He changed his university status at that time and became a part-time student.

He continued to work at the Capitol until September 1978.

In 1977, he ran for East Lansing City Council . . . and won.

Fox said he ran for council because he saw things that needed to be done.

As a council member, he said, he would be able to tackle issues important to students, such as housing, and would also be able to deal with energy issues.

"It wasn't just one of those things that I woke up with one morning," he said.

Fox got his first exposure to electoral politics in 1972 while working on the campaign to elect George McGovern as president.

Since that time, political activity among students has moved from the streets (as in the 1960's) to electoral politics.

He said the political activity in the early 1970's showed that more could be accomplished within the system.

Fox is considering the possibility of law school and wants to try to remain involved in state politics.

City officials stress that it is

TO DEAL WITH the cost of updating the system, the city hopes to acquire 80 percent of the necessary funds through federal and state programs.

Lansing is currently facing a $300 million environmental mess created by an outdated sewer system.

A portion of the city's "combined" sewer system allows raw sewage to be dumped into the Grand River during heavy rains and during equipment malfunction.

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

The Lansing City Council will consider entering into a pact with the Department of Natural Resources to grapple with the city's multi-million dollar sewer problems at 7 tonight on the 10th floor of City Hall.

The council will contemplate entering into an agreement with the DNR in order to outline city plans to deal with the matter.

Lansing is currently facing a $300 million environmental mess created by an outdated sewer system.

A portion of the city's "combined" sewer system allows raw sewage to be dumped into the Grand River during heavy rains and during equipment malfunction.

imperative to obtain state and federal funds because the cost is far too expensive for tax payers to pick up the tab.

City attorney Stephen Sawyer said he recommends passage of the resolution because if Lansing does not cooperate with the DNR, the department may take the city to court.

Sawyer said the city could risk a court battle with the DNR, but added that chances are slim that Lansing would win.

Sawyer said if the city starts working with the DNR, it would be a "first and absolutely necessary step" in the attempt to lift a DNR mandate preventing any sewer extension permits in Lansing.

THE DNR BANNED the permits in August 1979 because of the environmental problems caused by the sewers.

LANSING SEWERS NEED UPDATING

City considers DNR pact

An extension permit allows sewers to be extended to areas that went without sewers before, such as new subdivisions and new industrial facilities.

Adding to the city's environmental woes is groundwater contamination from the Aurelius Road landfill project.

The DNR has stated that it wants the problem taken care of by the end of August.

Howard McCaffery, public service director said the site must be covered over with two feet of clay and the existing water pumped out from the area, to be treated at the city's wastewater treatment facility. Clean up costs have been pegged at about $2.4 million.

The city would have to pay the entire amount because there are no governmental funds available.

Fund raising solutions being considered include raising property taxes and a lay off of city employees.

The "Film Classics of Eastern Europe" film series is made possible by the support of the College of Arts and Letters and the departments of German and Russian, history, and humanities. This term they are presenting representative works of Eastern Europe's best post-World War II directors.

The first film in the series, to be shown Wednesday, Jan. 23, is Jan Kadar and Elmar Klos' The Shop on Main Street. One of the most acclaimed films of recent years and winner of the Academy Award as Best Foreign Language film, The Shop on Main Street is a haunting tragicomedy set during the early days of the Nazi occupation of Czechoslovakia.

Other films in the series are:

Knife in the Water: Roman Polanski, 1962; Jan. 30.

Loves of a Blonde: Milos Forman, 1965; Feb. 6.

Ashes and Diamonds: Andrzej Wajda, 1958; Feb. 13.

Kanal: Andrzej Wajda, 1957; Feb. 20.

The Round-up: Miklos Jancso, 1965; Feb. 27.

The Eastern Europe films are free and are shown in B-104 Wells at 7:30 p.m. All the films are subtitled in English.

Juilliard String Quartet back again

By WILLIAM BARNHARDT
State News Reviewer

It was a splendid and certainly provoking evening of Mozart and Beethoven as the Juilliard String Quartet returned to Fairchild Theater Friday for the second of three sold-out Chamber Music Series performances. As always, the quartet convinced its audience of its excellence—it becomes more undeniable each time I am favored to be in the audience for MSU's newly-acquired quartet-in-residence. Now that I have established my awe and admiration for these four gentlemen (assisted in the quintets by MSU's violist John Graham), I will express some trifling words of discontent.

The program was a Mozart sandwiched between two Beethoven's, or more precisely, a rather cerebral and technical Mozart of tenuous interest interspersed between two flashy, showy Beethoven pieces. Usually the JSQ selects pieces that balance the other pieces on the program, offsetting and complimenting. The match of Mozart and Beethoven seemed only to point out the lack of flair and theme in the Mozart selection—this theme often being little more than an extended arpeggio. To be honest—and most surely provocative to the Mozart lovers—it seemed the quartet imposed the exuberance and drama of the Beethoven transcribed Quartet in F for the "Storm Quintet" (Quintet in C) into the Mozart Quintet in D, a piece that seemed to ask for the prosaic precision and refinement that are Mozart's chamber works. Mozart is often too perfect, too excellent for audiences; his formulaic tying of musical loose ends and determined simplicity often leave little for the audience to discern, while—needless to say—these works are favorites of performing artists who more fully grasp the intention. To make up for that, perhaps the quintet did not reflect the differences in the two featured composers, it being far easier to communicate the Mozart quintet in the style of Beethoven.

Finally, I missed the modern selection the quartet usually brings on each visit. The Juilliard String Quartet has for years been enamored of modern quartet works and—forgive the pun—instrumental in making 20th century music an expected part of ensemble repertoire. Since one is not likely—unless one is informed, which I may not confess to being—to go out and purchase modern records, their inclusion of a modern work is always invaluable to my understanding of contemporary music.

But these comments seem quibbling and trifling. A recent trip to Cleveland to see the lacking Oberlin String Quartet reiterated to me the superiority of Juilliard's Robert Mann, Earl Carlyss, Samuel Rhodes and Joel Krosnick within their art.

ADAM TEICHER

A.D., coach:
you blew it

"It is one thing for Joe Kearney and Darryl Rogers to leave MSU for what they believe is, and might very well be, a greener pasture. That is the prerogative of these two men and if they wish to bid their farewells to this school of ours, that is fine.

"But it is another thing when they lie to us and leave the MSU football program in the position it is in at the moment, which is to say rather shaky.

Kearney told me no more than three hours before he accepted the athletic directorship at Arizona State University Tuesday that although he was always "examining options," he was "not interested" in going to ASU.

Then on Wednesday morning, in a meeting with his players, Rogers told the team that he was leaving, going to Arizona State. But at a press conference later that afternoon, he denied he had told them that. When asked why his team thought he was leaving, Rogers replied, "I have no idea." Sure, Darryl.

Wednesday evening, with his credibility already stained, Rogers apparently felt that it wouldn't hurt to tell the people, those who supported him through the years of probation, the truth. He said that indeed he had told his team he was going to become ASU's new football coach.

Why the lies? Who knows. They probably have their reasons. But the Arizona State fans must wonder about these guys now. Can they believe anything Rogers and Kearney say? I know this: I don't think I would.

I find it hard to believe Rogers actually accepted the Arizona State job after the way Kearney bungled the process of hiring him. Rogers was left looking like a fool in the 48 hours between the time Kearney was hired and Rogers was hired.

Kearney could have named his new coach as soon as he was hired, despite what he says. He said that because of red tape involved with the selection process, he would have to wait for a (continued on page 12)

Smith arrives, leads Spartans to 75-67 win over Hawkeyes

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

Kevin Smith finally arrived Saturday night in Jenison Fieldhouse and just in time to lead the MSU Spartans to a 75-67 victory over the University of Iowa.

Smith, a 6-foot-2 sophomore guard from Birmingham, Mich., scored a career-high 23 points, but even more impressive was the way in which Smith took charge. The Spartans have been looking for someone to take command ever since the departure of Earvin Johnson and it appears they may have found the solution.

So where was Kevin Smith until now? Well, he was there, the team's fourth leading scorer through the first half of the season. But the Smith story goes back a little further.

Three years ago, Smith was one of the most sought after high school players in Michigan. His team was defeated by Johnson's Lansing Everett squad in the state finals.

HE DECIDED to play at the University of Detroit. Smith spent a year at U-D and then transferred to MSU where he watched from the sidelines as the Spartans won the NCAA a year ago.

A lot of people feel that Smith made a mistake going to U-D and its undisciplined style of basketball. They say that Smith picked up bad habits with the Titans and that having to sit out last year didn't help matters.

"I don't really think I developed too many bad habits, it's just a matter of adjusting to a new style of play and learning to play it," he said after the win. "It took me a while to learn the things he (MSU coach Jud Heathcote) wanted me to do."

What Heathcote wants Smith to do is exactly what he did against the Hawkeyes.

"This is Kevin's best game of the season," Heathcote said. "It is the first game where he has played well offensively and defensively."

THREE STRAIGHT TIMES down the floor in the first half Saturday, Smith came up with a steal in Iowa's end of the floor and the last two times hit free throw line jumpers on the front end of fast breaks for MSU buckets.

Then there were his free throws, seven of eight down the stretch to keep Iowa out of range as the Hawkeyes futilely attempted to catch up. "I'm feeling more confidence in myself now and I think coach is beginning to get more confidence in me, too," Smith said.

Kevin Smith

The win lifts the Spartans into a tie for seventh place in the Big Ten with both Iowa and Wisconsin. The Hawkeyes were expected to challenge for the conference crown, but an injury to their All-America guard Ronnie Lester left them 23 going into the MSU game.

Lester started and played 22 minutes, but wasn't a shadow of his old self as he attempts to come back from a sprained (continued on page 12)

Icers split with Huskies

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

If hockey games can be compared to classroom situations, MSU received its formal education over the weekend against the Huskies of Michigan Tech University.

In a physically brutal and fast-paced series, the icers shocked the Huskies Friday night with a 4-3 win, before dropping a humiliating 6-0 contest Saturday afternoon.

The Huskies came into Munn ice arena Friday night ranked eighth in the nation and sitting in the fifth spot of the Western Collegiate Hockey Association.

The first few minutes of the game were indicative of the entire series, as action was a display of the kind of intensity good college hockey games are made of.

IT DIDN'T TAKE long for Michigan Tech to score its first goal, getting a power play tally early in the first period, after MSU goalie Mark Mazzoleni made three point-blank saves.

Three minutes after Tech's goal, the Spartans got a freak goal from sophomore Joe Omiccioli, as the puck skidded off his skate and past the bewildered Huskies' netminder. It was Omiccioli's fourth goal of the year.

The Spartans took a 2-1 lead near the end of the first stanza, on freshman Mark "The Hammer" Hamway's 12th goal of the year.

The lead didn't last long, however, as Tech scored a shorthanded goal to send the teams to the locker room tied at 2-2.

Two minutes into the second period, junior Paul Gottwald took a pass from sophomore Craig Lakian and converted on a backhander to stake MSU to a 3-2 advantage.

Women cagers on the road after weekend split at home

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

A drastic difference in the ability of its opponents and the discovery of the "killer instinct" sparked the MSU women's basketball team to a split in its two games over the weekend.

The cagers, severely outplayed — especially in the second half — dropped a Friday night contest to the University of Pittsburgh, 78-56, before coming back Saturday afternoon with a 81-62 win over Big Ten foe Purdue University.

"Pittsburgh has a very strong team," MSU head coach Karen Langeland said. "They played much better than we did, but we didn't play well in the second half. Our 15-to-17-footers were not going in for us at all."

Langeland noted the inherent difference in the performance of the MSU squad against the Boilermakers was the fact that they were up against a weaker team.

"WE NEEDED TO win big," Langeland said after the game. "We proved we can play with the kind of killer instinct that hasn't been there for us."

In Friday's game against the Panthers, the sparse crowd of 263 saw a Spartan record set, as senior co-captain Mary Kay Itnyre became the first MSU woman basketball player to score 1,000 points in her career.

Needing only five points to achieve the milestone, Itnyre went on to score 14, while pulling down 12 rebounds in the loss to Pittsburgh.

The other Spartan co-captain, junior Gale Valley, also had 14 points.

MSU led 36-33 at halftime in Saturday's game, but came out ready to play in the second half, going on a 25-4 scoring spree in the first seven and one-half minutes.

PURDUE THEN OUT-SCORED MSU 14-2 in the next six minutes, but the game was already out of reach, largely as a result of some strong end-to-end play by junior forward Annette Fowler, who came off the bench to score a season-high 10 points.

In addition to Fowler's output, MSU got 10 points from freshman guard Karen Wells and 11 points from junior Laurie Reynolds.

High scorers for the cagers were Itnyre and junior center Mary Vielbig with 20 points and 14 rebounds apiece.

The weekend action left MSU with a 7-6 record overall and a 4-1 count in the Big Ten.

"Our Big Ten play has gotten us into a good situation," Langeland said. "If we can continue to play this well in conference games, we should be seeded No. 2 in the championships later in February."

The Spartans take to the court again at 5:30 tonight, as they travel to Mt. Pleasant for a game against Central Michigan University.

Langeland noted the importance of the game against not only Central Michigan, but against all of their remaining in-state rivals.

"We've only seen Michigan and Detroit," Langeland said, "and how we do against teams like Central, Western Michigan and Oakland, will determine our state tournament seeding."

Fire injures two in Lansing apartment

Two men were listed in serious condition Sunday afternoon in the Sparrow Hospital burn unit following a fire in a second floor Lansing apartment early Sunday.

Stephan Smith, 29, the occupant of the apartment at 129 Woodland Ave., and William Dakin, address unknown, were taken to Sparrow Hospital with first and second degree burns on their faces, hands and the upper parts of their bodies, firefighters said.

Lansing firefighters responded to the blaze at about 5:12 a.m. Sunday, and estimated the damage at about $10,000.

Firefighters are unsure if other apartments were damaged. The cause of the fire is under investigation.

Icers taught a lesson in split with Tech

this time on a goal which Mazzoleni didn't see because of the screen set by defenseman Ted Huesing.

Nearly the entire second period was played in the MSU end of the rink, although Mazzoleni and the Spartan defense were equal to the challenge.

Both teams missed a number of scoring chances as the third period progressed, but MSU got the game-winner from senior co-captain Russ Welch on a pass from linemate junior Leo Lynett.

It was Welch's 16th of the season and it came of the 11:10 mark of the final period.

The Huskies pulled goalie

Frank Kriebler with :38 left, but could not come up with the elusive tying goal.

THE ICERS WERE taught a lesson in the second game of the weekend series, and it didn't take the Huskies long to put the game out of reach.

Fifty-four seconds into the game, Tech's Al Mickalich scored what turned out to be the winning goal. The Huskies then came up with two more goals in the opening period, and three in the second stanza.

Halfway through the second period, coach Ron Mason pulled Mazzoleni in favor of sophomore Bob Trosinski, the latter having never served a minute of ice time in a Spartan uniform.

Trosinski was tested 12 times in his duty, shutting out the powerful Huskies for the remainder of the game.

The brilliant play of Trosinski could not overshadow the ineptitude of the MSU power play unit, as the Spartans came up short on all nine of its opportunities throughout the series.

"We played a good checking team this weekend," Mason said. "I saw them stop Minnesota with a two-man advantage, and that's not easy to do. We always hope we'll get chances to score on power plays and we did, we also just missed the net a lot."

It had been 63 games since the icers were last shutout, dating back to a 2-0 blanking by the University of Notre Dame during the 1977-78 season.

"The difference between Friday's game and Saturday's game was the Tech defense's ability to move the puck out of their end," Mason said. "We just couldn't contain them."

The split leaves the Spartans with a 9-17-0 record overall, and 7-11-0 in the WCHA.

The icers will make their last road trip of the year this weekend when they travel to Madison, Wis., for a two-game series with the University of Wisconsin.

Good riddance, Darryl

couple of days before he was sure his man would be OK'd by the university president.

Nonsense. Arizona State had just hired itself a new athletic director and if they weren't going to OK Kearney's selection for head football coach, you would wonder why they offered him the job and why he took it.

So now MSU is left without a football coach, in the heart of recruiting season. I don't know how many high school seniors would sign to play for a school when they didn't even know who the coach would be. If Kearney had handled the situation correctly, MSU could possibly have a new coach by now.

Kearney should be commended for the job he did at MSU.

This school will have trouble finding a replacement for him. But Darryl Rogers had gone as far as he could have with this football program. If he would have departed two weeks ago, I would have thanked him for the job he did and wished him good luck in his future endeavors.

Now I have this to say: good bye, Darryl Rogers, and good riddance.

THE GAME WAS tied 34-34 at the half and was deadlocked at 52 each with nine-and-one-half minutes to go, but from there, MSU took a lead and never looked back.

"We got exceptionally good guard play," said Heathcote, who also cited Terry Donnelly for his play. "Constant pressure has always bothered us, but tonight we kept our poise and we even had a lead where we could make mistakes and it wouldn't kill us."

"I also think we played harder than we have played," he continued. "We are growing up a bit in that area. Thursday's win (over Wisconsin on a Smith layup with three seconds to go) was a lift we had to have."

It wasn't all rosy to Heathcote, though.

"Our glaring weakness was our rebounding," he noted. Iowa had an 18-8 edge on the boards in the first half and 34-27 at the game's end.

"Our defense was good in the zone, but every time they missed they got the rebound. No one rebounds in our zone and that has been our problem all year."

Forward Mike Brkovich had

17 points, Donnelly 13 and center Jay Vincent 12. Iowa was led by forward Vince Brookins and center Steve Waite, each with 16 points.

When does the training stop and the doing start?

At Scott, we believe that the best training we can give you is experience in putting your ideas to work. Since we know that personal growth is your goal, achievement of that goal is realized through doing. Experience comes from doing—putting your ideas to work, enjoying responsibility, and accepting accountability.

Each year, as determined, committed college grads join us, they bring new talents with them. We put these talents to the test immediately and willingly accept their challenges.

Because we recognize individual differences, our approach is to build on your existing skills—to enable you to start doing.

When does the training stop? It never does.
