Smydra resigns from Board of Trustees

Michael Smydra

By DEBBIE CREEMERS
and KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

MSU Trustee Michael Smydra delivered his letter of resignation to Gov. William G. Milliken at 10 a.m. Thursday.

John Bruff, D-Fraser, announced Smydra's resignation to the Trustees Thursday night.

Smydra, D-East Lansing, resigned amid controversy over expenses charged to the University. The Board of Trustees was prepared to take action against Smydra at today's board meeting for unauthorized expenditures incurred while attending a Dallas conference.

Trustee Barbara Sawyer, D-Menominee, said Thursday night the board was prepared to take "strong measures" against Smydra if he had not resigned.

STACK SAID Smydra "probably did the right thing."

Trustees may sue Rogers for breach of contract

"The effect of the resignation resolves the problem for us," he added.

MSU President Cecil Mackey had no comment on Smydra's resignation.

Smydra, who said he left his resignation with University Attorney Leland W. Carr Jr. on Tuesday, said he felt "great" about the decision.

"I added up the pluses and minuses and the minuses came out far ahead," he said, adding that he was out of the process now and wanted to keep it that way.

Smydra said the conflict which arose was a "question of style, not a question of substance."

WHEN ASKED if his resignation would signal guilt, Smydra laughed and said, "Obviously people don't understand me. No, I didn't duck for cover, I just didn't want to hassle anymore."

"The problem with a lot of old politicians is they don't know when to get out of the saddle."

An outside audit of all trustees' expenses was requested by the board at its December meeting after Smydra turned in expenses totaling $1,182 — $700 higher than any other trustee for the month of October.

Smydra later acknowledged that he took unauthorized side trips to universities in Houston and Galveston before attending a conference in Dallas.

AFTER A 1978 audit of Smydra's expenditures, board members voted to require authorization for all monthly expenses of more than $200.

Smydra said he thought he could "seek permission retroactively" from the board for the side trips.

Earlier this month, Sen. William Sederburg, R-East Lansing, said the Legislature might introduce a resolution urging Smydra to resign, calling him "no credit to the University."

Jack Stack, R-Alma, who introduced the resolution calling for an outside audit of trustee expenses in 1979, said earlier Smydra "should consider resigning as he has acknowledged violating board guidelines."

Sederburg said travel expenses for Lansing senators are $5,000. Smydra spent more than $8,000 while serving as a trustee in 1977.

Thursday night Sederburg said he was very surprised about Smydra's resignation, adding that he thought Smydra would "stay in" because he had not resigned after the first "financial skirmish" he was involved in.

"I THINK HE did the statesman-like thing. He seemed to have a vision of what a trustee ought to be doing that most of the people did not agree with," Sederburg said.

A replacement for Smydra will be chosen by Milliken.

Also at the Thursday night meeting, Bruff said that MSU football coach Darryl Rogers had not submitted a letter of resignation to the University.

Bruff said the board would talk the situation over with Mackey and Carr. Bruff did not rule out the possibility of a lawsuit against Rogers for breach of contract.

Opponents of draft vow to fight registration plan

By AP and UPI

WASHINGTON — Opponents of President Carter's plan to register draft-age youths vowed Thursday to "picket, teach-in, protest and demonstrate" in every major city, but acknowledged they will have a hard time stopping the program.

As student groups and others mapped campaigns to rally public opinion against registration, several members of Congress denounced Carter's action and promised to try to block it.

One idea being examined is an attempt to deny the administration the money it would need to take the Selective Service System out of mothballs, where it has been since 1975 when President Gerald Ford halted registration.

Carter already has authority under his executive powers to order registration.

BY LAW, THOSE aged 18 to 26 are eligible for the draft. Two million boys are born each year; so Selective Service has a pool of 16 million there.

In the same age group are about 17 million women, whose draft status would have to be determined by Congress.

An attempt was made last year in Congress to reinstitute draft registration, but it failed. Instead, Congress asked the president to report on various aspects of Selective Service reform. That report is due Feb. 9, but could be advanced.

Then-President Gerald R. Ford ended registration on March 29, 1975. A similar proclamation by Carter could reinstate it, but he chose to ask Congress to do it. He plans to get the agency $10 million extra for the job.

If Carter revives draft registration, many leaders of women's groups say they would oppose it. But most agreed that if registration becomes a necessity, women should be included.

CONGRESS ALSO would have to change Selective Service laws if Carter decided to compel women as well as men to register. In his State of the Union address Wednesday, in which he announced plans to begin registration for the draft, Carter did not say whether he intended to register women.

Administration officials have said that is an "open question."

Phyllis Schlafly, leader of forces opposing the Equal Rights Amendment, said she plans a petition campaign to gather signatures of men and women opposed to registering women for the draft.

"We are very much opposed to women registering," said Schlafly, who says her Chicago-based organization, Eagle Forum, represents 50,000 women. "It's been the plan all along of the Equal Rights Amendment proponents to draft women and put them in combat."

An official at the United States Student Association in Washington said that while she opposes draft registration, she doesn't think anyone should be excluded if there is one.

"If the government asked me to get my head blown off in some godforsaken sand dune so Texans can continue to drive around in their Cadillacs, I'd rather point my Toyota up towards Quebec," said Gary Langer, 21, of the University of New Hampshire.

BUT WHETHER it is a renewed patriotism born of the Iranian and Afghanistan crises, or the faded memory of the mass resistance to the Vietnam war, most said they would serve if called.

The difference in the draft question this time around is that registration could involve women as well as men.

"Guys should go first and if they need help, then women should go, too," said Tracy Stivers of Boston College. "We have just as much responsibility. I wouldn't protest over being drafted."

Susan Sherman, 19, of Staten Island, N.Y., said, "I'm a women's libber but I don't think women can handle combat. I wouldn't mind being drafted for other duties."

The president already has strong backing on registration from key congressional leaders, including Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, and it appears now that his plan would be approved.

HOUSE REPUBLICAN LEADER John Rhodes of Arizona said Carter has "overwhelming support" among Republicans on the issue and that he sees no effective opposition to it from any quarter.

Even so, representatives of various groups opposing registration went to Capitol Hill and declared they would fight an admittedly uphill battle.

Most of the spokespersons predicted that registration would lead to a draft. In his speech, Carter said he hoped a draft will not be necessary but that "we must be prepared for that possibility."

Barry Lynn, spokesperson for a coalition of 42 peace, student, civil rights and religious groups, said it "is absolutely committed to an all-out effort to prevent draft registration from being reimposed in this country now."

Lynn, who promised picketing and demonstrations, said that "if registration becomes a reality we will call for a massive national protest on the day registration is resumed."

The United States Student Association said it would hold anti-draft teach-ins on college campuses this spring.

number, 123, will be in use, DPS Maj. Adam Zutaut said.

Since 911 began operation in February 1979, all calls using the 123 campus emergency number have been routed through Lansing before being relayed to the DPS, Zutaut said.

Calls will now come directly to campus police, Zutaut said.

Zutaut said the 911 system didn't reduce the need for DPS dispatchers, and was therefore unnecessary.

He added 911 operators sometimes had difficulty identifying locations on campus to DPS dispatchers.

"You have to recognize that campus isn't like a typical city," Zutaut said, adding that there are no street numbers or other conventional means of identifying campus locations.

Last May a 911 dispatcher garbled

directions to a fatal accident on an East

Complex IM softball field, forcing East

Lansing and Ingham County paramedic units to obtain directions from campus police.

"We feel that we can do the job better ourselves," Zutaut said.

The Michigan State Police will also leave the 911 system when their agreement runs out at the end of January.

State Police Capt. William Voigt said the withdrawal will have little effect on the public.

"We weren't getting many emergency calls from 911," he said.

Both DPS and State Police sources said their agencies pay little or no money for 911 services, but contracted with 911 so the system could receive federal funding.

MSU has been awarded the largest research grant in its history for establishment of a National Superconducting Cyclotron Laboratory to be added to the present cyclotron facilities. The $25.7 million grant comes from the U.S. Department of Energy.

'U' energy dept. sign contract to build world's largest cyclotron

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

MSU and the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) have signed a $25.7 million contract for the construction of a National Superconducting Cyclotron Laboratory to be built on campus, MSU President Cecil Mackey announced at a press conference Thursday.

The DOE grant will be the largest research grant in MSU history, and the new cyclotron lab will be the world's largest.

The DOE is also allotting $4.3 million for contingencies, bringing the entire contract to $30 million.

"It is clear that Michigan State will be the national leader in nuclear physics," Mackey said.

"What will be discovered, we can't forecast," he said. "There is, however, the possibility that new sources of energy can be found by exploring the atom nuclei."

UNDER THE CONTRACT, MSU will develop and build the facility which will be operated by the University with advice from a national panel of scientists.

The new facility will help train scientists, provide research on nuclear power and nuclear medicine as well as help provide a better understanding of the properties of various materials, said James E. Leiss, director of the Division of Higher Energy and Nuclear Physics of DOE.

Nuclear research has a tremendous number of applications in medicine, Leiss said, because one in four people admitted to hospitals rely on some kind of nuclear medicine technique for diagnosis, "and that number is going to continue to grow."

The new cyclotron "will influence basic research at MSU quite favorably in the future," Leiss predicted, since it will bring an influx of people and ideas to MSU which is "always a very helpful thing."

Henry G. Blosser, director of the MSU Cyclotron Laboratory, said it was unknown exactly what would be discovered with the new cyclotron.

"TOMORROW'S TECHNOLOGY relies on today's basic research," Blosser explained. "This will be doing the basic research for tomorrow's technology."

Tomorrow's technology relies on today's basic research. This will be doing the basic research for tomorrow's technology. —Henry G. Blosser, director of the MSU Cyclotron Laboratory.

The new cyclotron would be the world's largest "atom smasher," Blosser said, and could improve the University's image as a leader in fields other than agriculture.

Although the cyclotron produces radiation, any sort of nuclear accident is impossible, Blosser said, because there are no fissionable materials at the facility.

When asked if the cyclotron research would be used for military purposes Blosser said: "There is always the possibility that anything that you do can be applied to a military purpose."

MSU's cyclotron has had an excellent safety record, Blosser said.

THE MOST SERIOUS accident at the facility occurred when a screw-driver was pulled out of an employee's pocket by a magnet and struck the employee in the back of the neck, he said.

Blosser said the new facility would have major economic impacts for the area since most of the federal funds for the project will be spent in the vicinity.

Cyclotrons accelerate the nuclei of atoms to speeds of tens of thousands of miles per second. The ions, as charged nuclei are called, are magnetically held in an orbit until they reach maximum speed and are hurled against other nuclei.

By studying the resulting collisions, scientists gain valuable information about the structure of the nucleus.

MSU's superconducting cyclotron system will be unique as it will be able to hurl heavier atomic nuclei than traditional cyclotrons.

THE NEW LABORATORY will consist of two cyclotrons operating in tandem.

One of the cyclotrons, rated at 500 million electron volts (MeV) — about 10 times more powerful than MSU's original cyclotron — is presently under construction through a grant from the National Science Foundation and should be completed this year.

The other cyclotron, rated at 800 MeV, will take ions which have been accelerated to high speeds in the first machine and propel them to still higher speeds. The second cyclotron will be completed in 1984.

MSU has also received two other grants for the cyclotron laboratory, both from the National Science Foundation, amounting to more than $2 million.

The NSF has funded the laboratory's operating and construction budgets over the past 15 years and plans to continue funding operations of the new laboratory.

City weighs alternatives for funding sewer system

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

Lansing residents will suffer either higher property taxes or higher sewer rates to pay for updating the city's aging sewer system, the public service director said Wednesday.

Howard McCaffery said Lansing will have to drum up $105 million to fund the massive modernization project which is estimated to cost about $310 million. The city plans to seek federal and state funds to help pay for the project.

The $310 million will be used to build an additional wastewater treatment facility, purchase equipment needed for the sewer system and renovate the system itself.

A portion of the city's combined sewer system currently allows raw sewage to be dumped into the Grand and Red Cedar rivers during heavy rains and when equipment malfunctions.

DNR OFFICIALS SAID they are concerned because the raw sewage harms water quality, but added that the situation does not present a health hazard.

Federal and state grants might fund up to 80 percent of a portion of the project, but will not cover any of the costs for sewer construction.

McCaffery said the city might request a 7.5 mill increase. If the mill increase occurs, homeowners will pay an additional tax of $7.50 for every $1,000 of property value as (continued on page 2)

Updating sewer system

assessed by the state. McCaffery said it would be up to the city council to decide when to schedule a possible election.

IF VOTERS REJECT the millage proposals, as they did last fall when all four ballot proposals to increase property taxes were defeated, then it would be up to the Department of Natural Resources to take the city to court, McCaffery said.

Lansing city attorney Stephen Sawyer has said that a court battle with the DNR would be unwise because chances are slim that the city would win.

The city council may be able to by-pass the voters, however, by raising the sewer rates. The rate increase would substitute a millage increase.

At a public hearing Wednesday, the city presented the rough draft it sent to the DNR. The council voted Monday night to enter into an agreement with the DNR to negotiate plans to update the system. City officials have said the agreement is the first step in lifting the DNR ban on sewer extension permits, which halt the growth of housing and industry in the city.

VALERIE HARRIS, a water quality specialist with the DNR, said the DNR issued the moratorium because Lansing had not moved fast enough in developing a plan to cure the environmental woes of the city.

Harris added the DNR still has the right to approve or reject the rough draft of the plan.

Harris said a final plan would have to be submitted by May 1. Harris said the DNR may not agree with the current draft of the program, citing that the waste water treatment facility would be nearly doubled in size. She said plans might have to be scaled down if it is determined that the present facility does not need to be expanded.

Raymond Smit, a representative of the consulting firm of McNamee Porter and Seely, said all sewage pumping stations would have to be improved while others would have to be replaced. Smit said he was not sure how much the final costs would be.

DOUGLAS MORTON, an engineer for Consumers Power Company, reminded the city his company would have to relocate and replace gaslines because of sewer construction.

Morton said Consumers Power would seek reimbursement for the work and noted that a similar project in Jackson had cost about $10 million.

Robert Corbit, assistant director of Public Service, said although a certain amount of money had been set aside to deal with utilities, he did not know how much had been earmarked for those projects.

DPS drops 911 system

Office of Criminal Justice Programs, all area police agencies were obliged to join the system, said Matt Winger, director of the 911 system.

Winger added that the agreements with certain police and fire agencies implied that they would leave the system after a year.

East Lansing dropped out of the system before it became operational and Meridian Township followed in December 1979, merging with East Lansing dispatch facilities.

Winger said agencies still participating in the system are Lansing, Lansing Township, Williamston, Webberville, Mason and Leslie police departments.

Fire calls are dispatched by 911 for Lansing, Lansing Township, Delhi, Leroy, Ingham Township, Mason and Onondaga fire departments, and 911 dispatches medical services county-wide.

The remaining agencies will likely stay in the system, Winger said, because only Lansing has independent dispatching facilities.

Sources from DPS and the State Police are quick to point out they agree with the concept of having one emergency number such as 911, but say a centralized dispatch system does not serve their needs.

Doctors treat Khomeini on eve of election

By The Associated Press

Iranian physicians ministered to the stricken Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in the intensive-care unit of a Tehran hospital Thursday, but both he and his doctors sought to reassure anxious Iranians that his heart ailment posed no immediate danger.

The 79-year-old revolutionary leader made a broadcast statement from his sickbed telling the nation his condition was "not bad" and his illness is "not important."

But its precise nature was not disclosed and his sudden hospitalization came on the eve of what could be a crucially significant presidential election in Iran. Tensions were already running high because of reports reaching Tehran that "mercenaries" had infiltrated from Iraq to "make trouble" during the election.

The ruling Revolutionary Council ordered the revolutionary guard militia on alert nationwide.

Khomeini himself, sounding frail and weak on the government radio, appealed to Iranians to be vigilant "against outside dangers" on election day.

Besides the alleged threats from across the borders, some anti-Khomeini leaders of Iran's restive ethnic-minority groups were calling for a boycott of the election. Factional violence erupted during a similar boycott against the constitutional referendum in December.

At the U.S. Embassy, meanwhile, the estimated 50 American hostages spent their 82nd day in captivity. At a Tehran news conference, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, a candidate in the presidential election, continued to insist — in the face of firm Panamanian denials — that the ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi was effectively under arrest in Panama pending a decision on extraditing him back to Iran.

The developments in Tehran were reliably reported by Western journalists there.

IT WAS ANNOUNCED Jan. 12 that Khomeini was suffering from fatigue and would go into seclusion for two weeks at his home in Qom, 100 miles south of Tehran. But his doctors decided Wednesday he needed hospitalization because of "some slight heart trouble," Tehran Radio reported, and he was taken to the capital, where he was admitted to the intensive-care unit of a hospital at 1 a.m. Thursday.

A crowd gathered outside the hospital, and political and religious leaders were seen coming and going.

The government radio, monitored in London and Kuwait, later quoted one of his physicians, Dr. Alipur, as saying Khomeini's condition was good, he was resting and doctors hoped to move him from intensive-care into a regular heart-treatment unit by Friday.

"As far as my condition is concerned, I am — praise be to God — not bad," the Shiite Moslem patriarch said in his taped, 10-minute message to the nation, played on the national radio. "My illness is not important," he was quoted as saying by the Yugoslav news-agency Tanjug in a dispatch from Tehran.

He called for a large and peaceful turnout in Friday's presidential election, cautioning Iranians "to assume vigilance and preserve national unity against outside dangers."

"Once the president is elected, the people must back him," he said.

The new president will still be subordinate to Khomeini. The ayatollah holds near-absolute powers under Iran's new Islamic constitution, including the power to dismiss the president.

Drinking age petition starts on campus

By MIKE CHAUDHURI
State News Staff Writer

ASMSU is initiating a petition drive on campus to put a lower drinking age proposal on the November ballot. If passed, the proposal would lower Michigan's legal drinking age to 19.

About 287,000 legally validated signatures are needed by July 17 to put the proposal on the ballot, said Tom Jaworski, ASMSU director of legislative affairs.

However, since petition signatures are usually invalidated at a rate of about 20 percent, he said that about 350,000 need to be collected state-wide. He added that ASMSU is hoping that as many as 500,000 signatures are collected across the state.

Jaworski said that, for pragmatic reasons, ASMSU will not begin to actually distribute petitions until the second week of February, after mid-term examinations.

QUITE A BIT of interest has been shown in the on-campus drive, he said.

"This is certainly an issue that is getting students up in arms," Jaworski said.

If students can put the proposal on the ballot by themselves, that might show that they are responsible enough to drink, Jaworski added.

The first step in the petition drive is getting students registered to vote, since about 40 to 50 percent of students are not registered, he said.

Jaworski said ASMSU is trying to get a deputy registrar in every residence hall to register students. ASMSU is sending groups of at least 10 people to East Lansing and Meridian city halls to become deputy registrars, he said.

To become a registrar, a person has to be a registered voter in Michigan and must attend a short class at a city hall, he said.

ASMSU ALREADY HAS residence hall coordinators in every hall except three. The coordinators will be responsible for designing a person on every hall floor to get floor residents to sign petitions. The residence halls without coordinators are Bryan, Case and Shaw halls, he said.

ASMSU is also looking for volunteers to collect signatures off campus, he said.

Steve Wachsberg, ASMSU executive director, said that ASMSU hopes to collect 30,000 to 35,000 signatures at MSU.

Jaworski said ASMSU is hosting a regional workshop for other schools around the state which are interested in organizing similar drives. The workshop will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday in 342 Union.

The workshop is open to the public and about 15 to 20 schools are expected to attend, he said.

For more information, Jaworski can be contacted in 326 Student Services Bldg.

The Senior Class Council drew many potential hot dates to Dooley's Wednesday night to play its version of The Dating Game. Ted Huesing (left), co-captain of the MSU hockey team, queries Andrea Surdacki, Michelle Maroussis and Kelly Karikomi about their personal habits.

Dooley's 'Dating Game' a success; may soon become a regular event

By JOHN PATTISON
State News Staff Writer

Something different happened at Dooley's Wednesday night. When the band left the stage for its first break, a large chalkboard was rolled onto the dance floor and spotlights focused on the black tuxedo of a tall blond man.

"Good evening ladies and gentlemen and welcome to the first round of the Senior Class Council 1980 Dating Game," said Wayne Smith, the council's publicity co-chairperson.

Smith then selected the names of three female MSU students from the box held by his "lovely assistant," Lawrence Taylor.

All students were asked to sign up as contestants when they paid their cover charge. They wrote down their names, majors, hometowns, interests and student numbers.

The three women chosen were Andrea Surdacki, an interior design senior, Michelle Maroussis, a Dooley's waitress and psychology junior and Kelly Karikomi, a pre-law sophomore.

SCC member Glenn Sugiyama, the master of ceremonies, introduced the bachelor, Ted Huesing, co-captain of the MSU hockey team. The chalkboard prevented Huesing from seeing the three bachelorettes while he asked questions.

Huesing asked the women to describe themselves in one word, starting with the letter "b." The responses were beautiful, best and brains. Huesing chose Maroussis as his date.

In the next game, MSU cheerleader Deena Green chose Marty Karabees, industrial design junior and Alpha Tau Omega member. Karabees is a waiter at Dooley's.

When Green asked the bachelors to sing a song about their possible date Karabees sang, "Go right through for MSU."

In the third game Cindy Sinen, a senior majoring in communications, was chosen as the date of former MSU basketball player Jamie "Shoes" Huffman.

The winning couples received free dinners at J. Ross Browne's Whaling Station, 1939 W. Grand River Ave., Okemos. Other contestants received consolation pizzas from Dooley's.

Kelly Karikomi said she was satisfied with her pizza, but her friend thought otherwise.

"I think she should have got a consolation man," said Laura Baylis, a senior in economics and management.

The game was a surprising success, Smith said and another has been scheduled for Jan. 30, with just two rounds. He said Dooley's manager Bob Merando was impressed with the game.

"Bob said he was extremely pleased with the turnout and the professionalism of the program. He said he would like to see it become a regular event."

The Senior Class Council received a percentage of the cover charges, Smith said, which would continue if Dooley's makes the game a regular event. The money will be used to help buy the 1980 senior class gift and other projects.

County govt. plan intended to increase efficiency

By MOLLY MIKA
State News Staff Writer

Plans to make Ingham County government more efficient may include reorganization, said the chairperson of a county subcommittee.

Since last fall, a county reorganization subcommittee has studied several forms for improving county government and plans to make recommendations to the full Ingham County Board of Commissioners by spring.

The reorganization subcommittee favors a county executive elected by county voters, said commissioner Steven Thomas, chairperson of the special subcommittee.

Thomas said there is very little accountability under the present system of county government.

Currently, the county is run by commissioners and department heads without any one person overseeing the entire executive branch.

"THERE'S NO ONE person to look to for guidance, political or civic leadership," Thomas said.

The election department heads are generally concerned about getting funds for their own department to make improvements that will help them to win another term of election, Thomas said.

Because department officials are going after "limited resources," Thomas said there is a need for a chief administrator.

An elected executive's duties would include proposing a budget and work plan and supervising all departments not headed by elected officials.

The executive would appoint, with board approval, non-elected department heads, and take care of day-to-day business which the board now must handle.

THE EXECUTIVE WOULD also be able to veto within 10 days any ordinance or resolution adopted by the Board of Commissioners. The board would be able to override the veto with a two-thirds vote.

If a county executive was chosen, the duties of the other elected officials would not be changed. Under present law, the county cannot cut those duties or eliminate those positions.

Counties across the nation are considering reorganization plans, Thomas said.

Neighboring Oakland and Bay counties are overseen by an elected county executive. Thomas said he has planned a trip to Bay County to interview county government employees concerning their new government system.

Another option for county government is the appointment of a county manager by the Board of Commissioners.

A COUNTY MANAGER'S duties parallel those of an elected executive. The position differs from that of the elected executive in that the county manager is appointed and has no veto power over the board.

Another option under consideration is expanding the controller's duties to give that department authority to supervise the accounting of every office and department in the county. The controller would also be able to make all purchases which are required by the county which are not otherwise provided by law.

Another alternative is the appointment, by the board, of three to five persons to a finance committee, replacing the present six-member Finance Committee. Such a committee would examine the accounts and accounting methods of all county officers and departments.

The committee would also audit claims, appropriate funds and control the courthouse, jail and all motor vehicles owned by the county, except those controlled by the county board or road commissions.

The fifth alternative would allow the board, by resolution and general election, to create a board of auditors, with no more than three members.

A board of auditors would have duties beyond a finance committee. The auditors would establish an accounting system for all county offices, prepare a detailed estimate of the necessary expenses for the ensuing year, and control county buildings and provide for maintenance.

The subcommittee, comprised of commissioners Steven Thomas, Gary Swartz, Donald Tavano, Jean Tubbs and William Sweet, plans to make a recommendation to the full board by Spring.

Public hearings would then be held to determine if the public would like to reorganize county government.

Any major change would have to be approved by the voters, Thomas said.

Self-image is handicapper concern; women face 'ideal body' stereotype

By LESA DOLL
State News Staff Writer

Concerns about body image and stereotyped expectations are major problems for today's handicapper women, said Judy Taylor of the MSU Office of Handicapper Services.

Taylor, director of programs at handicapper services, said the handicapper woman must confront and deal with many experiences each day, many of which are "educational or humorous."

Speaking at the Women's Studies Colloquium Thursday, Taylor explained the effect of the ideal woman's body image on handicapper women.

"Some of the obvious common characteristics of being a woman and a handicapper are the significance of body image in relation to self-concept and identity," she said. "Certain characteristics are expected. The media project the ideal woman's figure, and for many it's a lifelong frustration trying to achieve that goal."

TAYLOR SAID THAT although handicapper women may have a difficult time adjusting, it is harder for non-handicapper women to come to grips with their own body images.

"I've seen and learned from the experience of friends and relatives," she said. "No one is as different from the norm or ideal as I am. I think the closer you are to that norm the more you try to reach that ideal."

Taylor also compared the expectations for women in society and the place those expectations take in the life of a woman handicapper.

"Apart from body image, there are certain roles that a woman is expected to play in society," she said. "Likewise, with handicappers there are certain roles they are expected to fulfill."

Taylor said stereotype is the myth that a handicapper should or has to be dependent. She said it is doubly difficult in a society where women in general have been expected to be dependent.

"MANY (MEN) ARE afraid to make commitments to individuals that are handicappers," she said. "They might have to be 'more dependent on him' than he's willing to give."

Taylor said that despite these obstacles, it is sometimes easier for a handicapper to enter into a relationship once the "ice is broken."

"If you're a woman into feminism dealing with stereotypes, one of the things you try to do is get people to relate to you as a person, instead of a sex object," she said. "In the case of many handicapper women, it's easier for people to see the person in you, not the woman in you."

She said while women are often treated as sex objects, handicapper women are treated as non-sexual. She said handicappers are often removed from classes on sexuality and birth control in public schools as a result of these feelings.

Taylor said handicapper women who shatter these stereotypes are looked upon as "one who has really gotten there."

"Handicapper is not synonymous with inability or disability," she said. "The individual handicapper is a person — a noun — not a condition. (The stereotypes change) when you see an individual handicapper that has achieved something."

Interviews for federal summer internships

By ANNA BROWNE
State News Staff Writer

The federal government is looking for MSU students to fill positions within their agencies under the Federal Summer Internship Program, said Carolyn Diamond, placement assistant at MSU Placement Services.

"The Federal Summer Internship Program is a highly competitive program, but it offers invaluable experience," Diamond said.

She said college institutions are asked to participate in the program, and at the same time federal agencies are asked if they are interested in having summer interns.

The agencies contact only the schools they wish to participate, Diamond said. Each school nominates two students for the position offered by an agency. An agency usually contacts only five schools for each internship position.

DIAMOND SAID THERE are some basic requirements which students must fulfill before they can be considered for an internship. To qualify, students must:

- have completed their sophomore year,
- be in the top third of their undergraduate class or be in the top half of their graduate class,
- have demonstrated leadership ability through some kind of extra-curricular activity, and
- be returning to school in the fall.

"Each agency puts additional requirements on the kind of student they prefer," Diamond said, "such as a particular major or some exact courses. Mostly what they look at is the academic area."

"Any student who meets these basic requirements I will interview," she said.

Some of the agencies which participate in the program are the FDA, HEW, the USDA, U.S. Customs Office, and the National Institute of Mental Health, she said.

Diamond said MSU has been asked to participate in this federal program for the past several years.

"ONCE A SCHOOL is invited it always gets at least one agency contact," she said. "So far MSU has been contacted by 20 agencies."

"I'm really pleased with our performance," Diamond said. "Last year we had nine students accepted, and that was when 10 of the best students in the country were up for a position."

Diamond said the pay ranged from $193 a week to $327, depending on the amount of college education the student has.

Diamond said most positions are for graduate students. Most of the interns accepted work out of Washington, D.C., she added.

She said students interested in the program should watch the board in the Student Employment Office or contact their faculty advisor.

Diamond said she would be conducting interviews during the next three weeks, and possibly longer, depending upon the deadlines of the individual agencies.

Students interested in interviewing should contact Carolyn Diamond at the Placement Services Office, 110 Student Services Bldg.

For more than a year, Bernard and Rita Gallin woke up each morning without any real assurance of what was going to happen that day — and to them that was exciting.

The Gallins were living in Hsin Hsing, a small village on the west coast of Taiwan. They returned to their East Lansing home last month after a 13-month "adventure" in the Asian country.

"Every minute of every day was a new experience," Gallin said. "We never knew what was going to happen next. It was an adventure."

There was never a dull moment for the Gallins in Hsin Hsing. In fact, their last visit began with some tension-filled weeks.

GALLIN AND HIS son Peter, 18, arrived in Taipei, the capital city located about 130 miles from Hsin Hsing, some 13 months ago under trying circumstances. The United States had just officially recognized the People's Republic of China and Taiwan, which had broken free of mainland China and its communist rule, viewed this action as a slap in the face.

"It was not a very pleasant time to be in Taiwan," Gallin said. "It was very uncomfortable for Americans."

"The week after we arrived some rioting broke out and some Americans were beaten," he continued. "One or two Americans were killed during that period. It was very unpopular to be American."

Gallin, an MSU professor of anthropology since 1962, was on sabbatical to continue his ongoing research of the Taiwan village. The Gallins' two sons, Marc and Peter, accompanied them on the trip.

A CHINA SPECIALIST, Gallin has been making trips to Taiwan since 1956 when he first went as a doctoral candidate in cultural anthropology from Cornell University.

He has since become a well known face in the village of some 500 inhabitants where he and his wife have studied the people and the culture. Most of the Gallins' work has concentrated on understanding the people of Hsin Hsing.

Gallin contends that a major change has taken place in the village in the past six years. "Until six years ago, 80 percent of the income was from agriculture," he said. "Now, 85 percent of the income is from non-agricultural activity. It's a complete reverse."

Gallin was hard-pressed to find any one reason for the change. Yet he said the trend toward industrialization was taking place in and around the village.

RITA GALLIN, WHO has a doctorate in sociology from MSU, has worked closely with her husband on the Taiwan study.

"Even if a wife is not trained in a discipline," Mrs. Gallin said, "it's difficult to go into the field with an anthropologist and not become involved."

The Gallins have published several books together, including one entitled "Hsin Hsing, Taiwan: A Chinese Village in Change," which came out of a 17-month stay in the village during the late 1950s.

The Gallins described their daily routine during their latest visit as "a very active life, always moving."

"Most of the work is dealing with people face to face," Gallin said. "People don't want to give out information too readily. You have to work at it and make yourself known. Then, once they accept you and know what you want and what you are doing, you get what you need."

ASMSU scantily fulfills promises

A surprisingly high percentage of MSU students turned out at winter term registration's voting polls to cast ballots on three amendments to the ASMSU constitution. That could be good news in itself, if not for the disenchanting content of the proposals. Following a year that saw the ASMSU Student Board experience seemingly incurable student apathy, the board, through its ballot proposals, was asking us to decide punishment to fit the crime of poor attendance by board representatives.

The problem of absenteeism on the board should theoretically merit little consideration, if any at all. Since the resignation of former Student Board President Dan Jones a year ago, the board has promised to construct a new and better student government, one that would emerge from the past problems of misunderstanding and disagreement with its president, whom they attempted to oust for those very reasons. The board said the dissolution of the president's office and the establishment of an executive director and student board chairperson in its place would streamline operations, and create better communication between board members and their officers.

What has happened since the change, however, is a further sign that the problems in the student board's structure are rooted deeper. While apathy among the student body has remained constant, it has increased on the board. The idea of putting a recall amendment into the ASMSU constitution would never have surfaced had attendance been so poor. Yet the dilemma of whether to reprimand absent board members or simply boot them from the organization was one of the first problems to arise following the advent of the "new" student board. That we have to deal with such disorganization through a University-wide referendum is more evidence of the student board's slow progress.

And there has been intergovernmental bickering, plenty of it. The board attempted last year to make an issue out of the appointment of its first executive director, Steve Politowicz, former Programming Board chairperson, when it charged that his temporarily non-student status made him ineligible for office. Politowicz had already earned the reputation of a doer not a talker, and his appointment was perhaps the most promising aspect of last year's reorganization. He left after ten months, and with his departure went the hopes of increased board action.

After students overwhelmingly rejected a payment plan for board members, the proposal surfaced again early last year, taking up valuable time that could have been used for discussing other legislation. Outside interests marred the legislative process. The board lost scores of representatives through internships, workloads and threatened recalls. College of Education representative Kathy Wright did not even make an appearance at a meeting until the board decided to oust her. Her negligence was undoubtedly the basis for the proposal on which we voted a few weeks ago. Meetings barely reached quorums, members sometimes resorted to rousting one of its members out of bed. Cabinets were shuffled, councils dissolved, all for the purpose of making the sum of ASMSU's parts more effective. What started out, however, as an all encompassing revamp of ASMSU's structure has ended up an organization with a mere facelift.

A smattering of achievements student government has managed to rack up have indeed mustered a majority of student support, albeit the accomplishments have been few and far between. ASMSU did lobby against the draft in Washington, pushed for the decriminalization of marijuana and collected hundreds of signatures from residents in favor of repealing the drinking age hike law. The cumulative efforts of the student board and its officers helped to stage a moderately successful tuition rally, a project that can boast success in sheer number of participants. These issues, however, are still very much alive and kicking on the state and national level. Judging by the sporadic activity of ASMSU's Office of Information, it would appear they have all died a quiet death for lack of student board initiative.

The student board cannot be assigned the task of resurrecting activism singlehandedly. It has always been, and always will be, at the mercy of student input. While that input has evinced an overall decline as of late, the volatile issues that govern students' lives have a way of suddenly arousing the impetus for activity in us. ASMSU can act as an effective catalyst for those concerns, as they have sometimes in the past and, hopefully, will do in the future.

VIEWPOINT: SMOKING AND HABITS

Bad habits are to be broken

By DANIEL F. STEVENS

I quit smoking over a month ago. Bill and I were washing dishes in the MSU Union cafeteria and he offered me a pinch of Skoal chewing tobacco. I accepted, and it dawned on me in a matter of seconds that I could break a habit I've been meaning to break for months.

For the next several days, I kept large doses of Skoal, Copenhagen and Red Man chewing tobaccos in my mouth while trying to keep my mind off of Marlboro Reds.

It worked. Chewing tobacco gave me satisfaction similar to that of cigarettes, but with a different oral sensation. It proved healthier and cheaper.

"Breaking the habit" is a meager phrase for detaching oneself from cigarettes. It is turning one's back on an addiction carefully developed and encouraged by family, friends, advertisers and oneself.

I started smoking when I was 14 years old. My natural parents, step parents, brother and sister smoked. Adolescent smoking appeared to be a phase rather than a long range death sentence. My friends were determined in their habits. If they smoked, they liked to party and skip school. Non-smokers tended to lead a cleaner, academic life. When I started college, I could not fathom living without cigarettes.

Cigarette advertising was banned from television over 10 years ago, yet the government has not promoted any large-scale anti-smoking campaign. Joseph Califano, Jimmy Carter's former Health, Education and Welfare secretary, stood alone when he tried to make an anti-smoking campaign a priority.

The tobacco industry has managed to increase sales and manipulate the lure of the cigarette to people's tastes, while sidestepping the destructiveness of smoking noted in a warning on the side of cigarette packages.

Cigarettes have changed from being romantic (Kool, Salem, Marlboro) to liberating females (Virginia Slims) to advertising selfishness (Reals -- "I smoke to enjoy" or because I want to smoke). Advertising has convoluted smoking to an ethereal, natural level which implies a grand experience; a feeling that one is taking part in a certain movement every time a Merit, Fact, True, Decade, Vantage, or Multifilter is lit up. Some makers have come out with lines of light cigarettes with the possibility that smoking can be gentle. Now one can wake up with a mild cough and not a violent hack.

It will be a while until chewing tobacco becomes socially acceptable over cigarettes. The flowing, sensuous wafts of smoke have a definite advantage over the Nazi brown spit juice of Red Man. Smoking is quiet with only a mild scratching sound to put the butt out. Spitting is audible and, if done incorrectly, visibly disgusting.

Even using a discrete spit cup has disadvantages. I was at O'Hare Airport en route to Los Angeles over winter break. While I was holding a half-full spit cup and carrying an overnight bag on my shoulder, I asked an airport employee about my baggage. I reached for my ticket in my adidas bag. I tilted the cup so much that the gritty slime was oozing toward the floor. After settling my baggage claim, I looked down and saw myself surrounded by a brown colored putrescence. I scurried away hoping the employee wouldn't notice his dazzling, white floor marred by my new found habit.

Chewing is obviously an art. At first it is clumsy, but one develops a style. Aim is of most importance, and soon a spit cup becomes an natural as a cigarette.

I've gotten over my embarrassment of spitting in public. In a room with other people, I use the cup and keep my hand over it when not in use. I can chew at work and spit in numerous trash cans. I can control the sound of spitting when I'm at the library. I can chew when I cook, read, exercise and even jog. My room and clothes no longer have a stench, I don't burn furniture anymore and I don't hassle anyone else with smoke. I don't have chest pains and raw mouth. I spend my cigarette money on ice cream, books or a movie.

In those few seconds in the dish room in the cafeteria, I said goodbye to a complex physical and psychological problem. I cut an umbilical cord spanning 10 years and have become more aware and in control of my body. Chewing tobacco may be substituting one habit for another, but I feel better about it. All it took was a pinch between the cheek and gums.

Mural on the wall aids appearance

This is not an attempt to discredit any of the claims made by James Mulady in the Jan. 21 State News. Yes, the idea for the Pink Floyd mural in 4 West McDonell did come from a former resident of Abbot Terrace, but that resident, David Domke, was never mentioned in Mr. Mulady's letter. I would like to again congratulate the Gentlemen of Abbot Terrace for their fine efforts, as I did as an Abbot resident last year. In doing so however, I would also like to mention the commendable accomplishments of 4 West McDonell.

The efforts of McFourplay and McNieguys go beyond the aesthetic value of the project. The gentlemen of 4 West McDonell sought to remedy damages within the hall. By working diligently with the advisory staff and management of McDonell Hall, we gained enough input from more than two-thirds of the residents to finally receive permission to paint the mural. Through efforts by the residents, damages reduced significantly. During the weekend of Jan. 11 through 13, the residents of 4 West worked together as a solid community group to complete a project deserving a great deal of credit.

We, the residents of McFourplay and McNieguys, are proud of our work and appreciate the publicity via Kemi Gaabo and The State News. Perhaps our work in McDonell might inspire other groups to also take on similar projects, as the mural in Abbot Terrace inspired us. Thank you, Abbot, for your inspiration and please stop by and visit us. We too, would enjoy your company.

Delta Tau Delta stumbles on issue

I am writing this letter in reference to the Delta Tau Delta multiple sclerosis ordeal.

First, I am not gay. Let me make that perfectly clear. However, I do feel that Delta Tau Delta is handling the situation poorly.

What is the purpose of the marathon? As stated previously, it is to raise money for a "needy and well deserving cause." This is exactly what the fraternity should be doing. Instead, it has chosen to make the marathon an issue of gay rights.

The entire process does not have to be jeopardized simply because of Delta Tau Delta's inability to accept gay rights. I am defending Jones and Lowery's right to participate. The brothers of Delta Tau Delta should ignore Jones and Lowery if they find it hard to be in their presence.

VIEWPOINT: POLITICS AND GAMES

Don't forget our country

By CAROL KUZDEK

What's so special about 1980? Well, 1980 is, for one thing, a leap year, and leap years occur every four years. There's something else which takes place every four years. It's the event that many amateur athletes train and sweat for and struggle to be a part of. That's right. It's the Olympic Games.

But, as in past Olympics, this one also is overshadowed by political turmoil. President Carter is using the games as a political ploy to bully the Russian forces out of Afghanistan.

Many people feel, and Billy Mooney wrote, that a boycott is "necessary and proper as a reaffirmation of the principles of human and political dignity that this country claims to uphold." But then, isn't almost any type of sacrifice on the part of the American people, like sending food in which we could be over-indulging to starving Third World nations, upholding our pride in ourselves and our country?

Of course, one can look at a boycott of the Summer Games as the logical action the United States should take, but the question we should ask ourselves is "Will this bring about the cure for scaring the Russians home again?"

The answer is obviously no, it will not. Does our government honestly believe that by refusing to endorse our amateur athletes, the Russians will turn red and march right home again? The Olympics are not above world politics, but they certainly do not possess the heavy caliber required for a strong, influential push.

The idea of the boycott was extremely premature by President Carter. It seems like he was sitting in his office trying to come up with a solution to this crisis when the only type of "political" solution he could dream up was the boycott, something which would hit close to home for much of the population and perhaps give him a little extra time to think of something a bit more realistic.

The Olympics' direct dealings with politics is like a worn out cliché, having been used in Mexico City in 1968, Munich in '72, and Montreal in '76. It's a shame that whenever a nation wishes to prove its power, the Olympic Games happen to be just around the corner. No country has thought of a better event in which to show its power, and this year will be no different, except it is our country which is "using" the Olympics this time.

A much more sympathetic argument is to realize the helplessness many Olympic hopefuls are going through; how this has been their dream since childhood, and waiting another four years could snatch that medal away from them. But I'm sure this is realized by the great majority. What people tend to forget is that the Olympic Games are not for the individual alone; they are also for his/her country. For when one of our athletes wins that coveted gold medal, it is not his/her favorite pop tune that is played, it is our country's National Anthem. There are few higher political or human dignities our country can achieve.

Javits interested in Persian Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization should immediately begin to "show their flags" in the Persian Gulf area, Sen. Jacob Javits said Thursday.

The New York Republican also said the NATO allies should begin steps to revise the alliance's treaty to declare their interests in that area of the world.

If European nations fail to rally to America's side in the face of Soviet activity in the Persian Gulf, it will be a big step toward realizing "the wildest dreams of the most hard-line Russians," said Javits, the highest-ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Agencies share jurisdiction

WASHINGTON (AP) — By mutual agreement, government agencies will cooperate in areas where they share jurisdiction over protection of persons involved in the milling of source materials or minerals used to produce energy, it has been announced.

Involved in the agreement are the Labor Department's Mine Safety and Health Administration.

In a statement published in the Federal Register, the two agencies recognized that both have jurisdiction involving the protection of workers from safety and health hazards posed by the milling of these minerals. They agreed that coordination will increase administrative efficiency in dealing with the problem.

Kennedy prepares for NY

(AP) — Since the Iowa defeat, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and his aides have held an almost continuous series of meetings in an attempt to assess the senator's challenge for the Democratic nomination against Carter in New York City next August.

Kennedy himself conceded on Tuesday he must defeat Carter in their next two encounters — the Feb. 10 caucuses in Maine and the Feb. 26 primary in New Hampshire — if Kennedy is to keep his candidacy alive.

Aides said Kennedy intended to spend most of the next five weeks campaigning in New England. He had been scheduled to leave Friday on a four-day trip to Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island.

"He will not be doing the trip this weekend," Tom Southwick said. "He will be giving a major policy address on Monday."

Southwick refused to provide any further details, but there were reports from Kennedy staff members that the senator was running low on funds and that his campaign workers had been asked to forgo two weeks of pay.

Ex-convict joins board

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has named an ex-convict to the state Board of Corrections — the first appointment of a former prisoner to the board.

The appointee is Thomas V.A. Wornham, 50, executive director of Project J.O.V.E., the nation's largest ex-offender re-entry program. Wornham said he hopes to improve the criminal justice system, in which he says now "nobody gets what he should" — inmates, citizens or law enforcement officials.

A former Marine Corps captain who owned an investment company, Wornham was sentenced in 1972 to one to 10 years in prison after convictions on six counts in a stock purchase scheme that defrauded six investors. He served his time at the state Men's Institution at Chino, where he conducted orientation for inmates.

"I was absolutely appalled by the sterility of the whole situation, truly a warehousing of individuals," he said. "I'm a firm believer that you have to separate punishment and rehabilitation."

Carter attends conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will be among the speakers to appear at the 30th anniversary meeting of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, which begins this Sunday in Washington.

Others scheduled to address the organization are Moon Landrieu, secretary of housing and urban development, and former Sens. Muriel Humphrey, D-Minn., and Edward Brooke, R-Mass.

The opening session will feature addresses by David Tofel, former director of HEW's Office for Civil Rights. Carter will make his speech at the Hubert H. Humphrey Civil Rights Award dinner Sunday night.

Massey indicted for shooting

CHALMETTE, La. (AP) — A St. Bernard Parish grand jury has indicted Audrey "Ed" Massey on a charge of first-degree murder in the shooting death of a Tenneco Oil Co. refinery supervisor.

District Attorney Jack Rowley said an arraignment date for the 41-year-old Chalmette resident and refinery employee will be scheduled later in the Jan. 18 slaying at the strikebound refinery. Massey was indicted Wednesday, Rowley said.

Killed was John A. Hurst, 52, a maintenance supervisor at the refinery. Detectives said Hurst was killed by a single .30-30 rifle bullet as he stood by a gate at the refinery, which is being struck by nearly 400 members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union.

After the shooting, Tenneco won a seven-day U.S. District Court moratorium on strike activity. The moratorium expires Monday.

TV show still under fire

By ANNIE KNAPE

The East Lansing Cable Communications Commission decided Wednesday to stand behind its "no censorship" ordinance in the controversy surrounding the weekly talk show "Editorial Weiss Cracks."

The show came under fire recently with a complaint being filed by Lansing Police officer Greg McCouley, who viewed a recent episode and said it was "filthy and obscene."

The show in question featured the picture of a nude woman in a suggestive pose and commentary by the host that McCouley charges was filled with "vulgar" language.

McCauley sent his complaint to the Lansing City Council, the Ingham County prosecutor, the Lansing city attorney and the Federal Communications Commission. No copy of the complaint was sent to the East

E.L. Cable Commission supports 'no censorship'

Lansing cable commission.

"WE DON'T EVEN have a formal complaint yet," said chairperson Joey Reagan, who also acts as co-producer for "Editorial Weiss Cracks," which is East Lansing-based and broadcast on channel 26.

"Besides, we can't do anything anyway. Because of the censorship clause in the ordinance, we cannot take any action. Ultimately, someone would have to try to amend the ordinance."

Commissioner Liz Schwitzer was also in favor of leaving the censors out of public access television.

"One strength of our system is that we do allow a wide range of persons to use our public access studio. I don't think we should touch it ("Weiss Cracks")," she said.

A representative of East Lansing's National Cable, Ray O'Toole, sided with McCauley.

"I'M VERY PROUD of the East Lansing system. We don't want to censor, but we want to do things in good taste."

The program is broadcast from East Lansing to Lansing via an interconnecting cable, a line which may be in jeopardy if some form of agreement is not reached between the two companies.

Lansing's Continental Cablevision has talked with lawyers, said president Tim Neher, but no definite action has been taken.

"We don't want to end what's been a healthy interchange of shows programmed," Neher said.

"We're just trying to determine what control we have over our programs. We expect to talk to the (East Lansing) council and we want to talk to Weiss."

Host Ed Weiss was present at the meeting and commented afterward that he saw no problem with the content of his program.

"As far as I'm concerned, it's (the showing of the picture) the same as my crossing the street at the light. That's my choice," he said.

DISCUSS CAMPUS SAFETY

ASMSU attends Big Ten meeting

Four ASMSU officials will attend a Big Ten conference this weekend at Northwestern University to discuss various student government concerns including selective service and campus safety.

Steve Wachsberg, ASMSU executive director and one of the officials attending the conference, said he expects the group to bring back "a multitude of information that we can apply here."

The group will observe the ways other schools handle problems similar to those that exist at MSU, such as public safety, he said.

Representatives from student governments of every Big Ten school except the Universities of Minnesota and Wisconsin are expected to attend, he said.

Wachsberg said a personal interest of his will be an attempt to form an association of Big Ten universities, which he said could be more effective in lobbying at the national level than ASMSU alone.

Bob Carr, College of Business representative; Dale Schian, chief of staff; and Joe Sullivan, director of community affairs, will also be attending the conference.

Wachsberg said ASMSU will only be paying for transportation and food costs for the weekend. He said that those expenses are not expected to exceed $100.

Students translate driving exam

Don't be surprised if the next driver's license exam you take looks Greek to you. It just might be.

MSU romance language graduate students were recently paid to translate the written exams into 18 different languages for the Michigan Department of State.

The exams were translated into Arabic, Chinese, Finnish, French, German, Greek, Italian, Japanese, Korean, Laotian, Persian, Polish, Portuguese, Serbo-Croatian, Castilian Spanish, American Spanish, Ukrainian and Yiddish.

A Detroit firm has also translated the exam into Vietnamese with Cambodian being considered as a future language.

Michael D. Rudisill, project coordinator for the Department of State, said license applicants still must be able to read English traffic signs such as "no right turn," "stop" and "yield."

What is a Wazmo Nariz?

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Reviewer

Who or what is Wazmo Nariz? Well, in a phone interview with The State News Tuesday, Wazmo seemed reluctant to answer the first question. While he admitted that Wazmo Nariz was not his real name, he would not disclose this "professional secret."

The answer to the second question is much easier to establish. Wazmo Nariz is a new wave singer whose group, the Wazband, will headline the next "I Don't Like Mondays" concert at Dooley's. His debut album Things Aren't Right (I.R.S. Records SP005) proves him to be an eclectic and adventurous artist — albeit one who is decidedly weird.

As for the question of WHY he is, well, I'd better let him speak for himself:

"Well, before I was into rock I was — believe it or not — a lamp salesman. This guy owned a lamp company in France, and he hired me to import these lamp bases — they were ceramic lamp bases, the ugliest damn things — and I was supposed to put shades on them, get the packaging for them, set up the accounting, incorporate the company, do all this UNBELIEVABLY BORING stuff for these lamps which I absolutely hated. I had just gotten out of school, and I didn't know anything, and I started the whole thing out and proceeded to fail miserably. I never sold a one!

"I wasn't listening to much music at the time. I was so depressed that I just sorta walked around with my head hung down, going 'I don't wanna sell lamps, I don't wanna sell lamps...' Then my roommate brought home the first Talking Heads album, and I freaked out. It was great! I couldn't believe that there was something like that out there. All my life, actually, I had wanted to be in rock and had been in a number of bands, but when it came time to actually get out in the real world I thought 'well, yes, that's all very nice and good for dreams and whatnot, but people don't really do that.' But I soon realized, when you do have a job, you're going to eat, breathe, and excrete that job, so you'd better like it. Rock 'n' roll is the only job I can excrete at all..."

"Before I was into rock I was — believe it or not — a lamp salesman."

In desperation, it seems he soon organized the Wazband, which features Jeff Hill on guitar and backup vocals, Jeff Boynton on keyboards, James E. McGreevy III on bass and drummer Bruce Zelesnik. No power-chord heroes, the Wazband specializes in sophisticated arrangements with fluid guitar and keyboard lines intertwining in a manner that is reminiscent of DEVO, Talking Heads and other arty/intelligent new wave bands.

"I didn't know anything about anything at the time," Wazmo continued, "but I did have several theories about getting into the recording industry. I decided that the best way to do it would be to make a demo tape, and off that tape take two cuts and throw out a 45, because at the time (1977-78) 45s were just starting to happen. If it were back in 1974 and somebody put out a 45 they would have laughed at you — 45s were OUT. Fortunately for musicians today, because prices are so high, the 45 has become a viable piece of product again, and you can get exposure."

Wazmo's first single was "Tele-Tele-Telephone," which was released on a friend's record label, Fiction Records. One copy of the song eventually fell into the hands of a disc jockey on WNEW in New York, and when he played it twice back-to-back on his show it caught the ear of the local Stiff Records representative. Stiff re-released the song in England, where it made the charts and enabled the group to tour there with the Police.

Things Aren't Right is currently a big favorite with the FM rock stations in New York, but acceptance in the Midwest has been slower in coming.

Wazmo Nariz

"The fact that we're going to be playing in East Lansing Michigan, is great!" Wazmo exclaimed, "because the only place we could play in Michigan before was Detroit (Bookie's). Anyplace else you'd say new wave and everyone would think 'oh, yeah, PUNK...' It's only now that people are starting to turn around and go 'hey, this stuff is kinda interesting — it's different.'"

"Different" would certainly describe the music on Things Aren't Right. Wazmo's vocal style is eccentric in the manner of Lene Lovich, DEVO's Mark Mothersbaugh, Bryan Ferry, and David Byrne of the Talking Heads, although he claims that his inspirations have been from his choral and operatic experience as a child, Elvis Presley and Merle Haggard, while he admires Dolly Parton for her glottal stops.

So what would lead your otherwise normal college graduate to wear two neckties with his suits, appear on the back of his album cover with several weeks worth of laundry, and write songs with names like "Checking Out The Checkout Girl," "Luncheonette Lovers," "This Is Your Elbow," "Germ-Proof Cleaners," and "Stubbies"? What horrible childhood traumas lurk in the sordid past of the man who calls himself Wazmo Nariz?

"Mostly just total rejection," he confided, "from everyone! Definitely on the baseball field it was the worst. Have you ever gone up to bat and had the entire outfield yell in unison 'He's a Waffer — move in?' Boy, does that shoot your self-confidence!"

It goes deeper than that, however. "As a child I was tied to a water heater by my mother and kept away from anything that was interesting. Water heaters can actually be really soothing, you know — I mean they are warm, and if you drool on them long enough they actually develop a kind of fur. That helped me, that surrogate motherhood."

Call him demented, call him weird, or just call him collect, but if Things Aren't Right gets the attention it deserves Wazmo Nariz will never have to worry about going back to selling lamps (I can almost hear the lamp industry breathing a collective sigh of relief). It's a fascinating LP, and his concert Monday night should be a good time for one and all. Support your local Wazmo!

Opening the show for Wazmo will be Lansing's own Trainable, and it should be an excellent double bill as the bands have quite a bit in common musically. Trainable draws on everything from '50s "doo-wop" to the more avant-garde sounds of Pere Ubu, DEVO and Talking Heads and synthesizes it all into the unique sound of "micro-wave" rock. The band employs plenty of multi-media effects on stage, and their philosophical stance can be seen in such songs as "Nuke The Whales" and their version of The Munsters theme song. Since their first show last spring at Olds Plaza (even then they were better than the headline, Destroy All Monsters) Trainable has been constantly refining its sound, and should really be in its element Monday night.

Tickets for Wazmo Nariz and Trainable will be available the night of the show for only $3. Doors will open at 8:30 p.m.

Robert Altman's turn-of-the-century wild and woolly Western McCabe and Mrs. Miller comes to campus with the remarkable team of Julie Christie and Warren Beatty (7:15 and 9:30 p.m. Saturday and 8 p.m. Sunday in 100

NEW WAVE FUN TIME DEPT. The latest in a series of New Wave Dance Parties at Mayo Hall will feature live music by two local bands and taped new wave dance music Saturday from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. The Meltdowns and the Deceivers will provide the live rock 'n' roll in the '30s Room, and for only 50 cents it's the best deal in town.

'Hot Shots': best of the great

"And now, the greatest movie ever made..."
"Presenting, the world's most beautiful women..."

"Here it is! The most erotic film ever made!"
What is it? Cannes? A Hollywood premiere? A Paris debut? Well, not hardly. It's Hot Shots, a compilation of 25 previews of X-rated films from the past 10 years.

For erotic appeal, it's not exactly soft core. Previews often contain the most graphic, sexually-spectacular and gimmicky segments — the prime moments, if you will. There are as many conceits and metaphors as there are professions...

"Come see the Circus!" "Let these teachers teach you how to multiply!" "You've never been on a flight with stewardesses like these!"

Then some have social relevance...
"By the end of this film you'll know everything about Valerie... and maybe a little more about yourself too..." Sure.

There are low budgets, back-roomers, extravaganzas (Misty Beethoven), cult classics (Deep Throat), kinky films (Teenage Twins), and meaningful drama (Andy Warhol's BAD) — everything you want to see or not see from "101 positions" to incest to urolagnia — and no, we're not going to define that.

It's difficult — particularly after reviewing Fine Arts — to judge how successful a porn film is. It doesn't seem terribly erotic — how could it with no buildup or long seduction scenes? It's just clips, name of the movie, hi how are you?, oh yeah?, well just watch, then ZIP! Into the bed. There might be some evidence in this calvalcade of porn that if you've seen one you've seen them all. Porn films, that is.

The film is funny, go ready to laugh. The claims of "the greatest," the most this, the most that for these $50 made-in-a-garage specials becomes rather amusing. Porn fans should be pleased.

Eliot Feld Ballet on campus next week

The universally renowned Eliot Feld Ballet comes to the MSU Auditorium for 8:15 performances Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 30 and 31.

Feld, who organized his New York company in 1974, has been dancing since the age of 12 and was a soloist for the American Ballet Theater before he switched to a choreographic career.

Feld has been called "the greatest choreographic talent since Jerome Robbins," by critics. A Time magazine reviewer said of him: "At 33, with 22 ballets to his credit, Feld has entered the golden circle of U.S. classical choreographers."

In addition to choreography, Feld still performs in the company, partly to help in casting but mostly because dancing is still his favorite form of personal expression.

Feld's company of dancers is small and was carefully selected after auditions held as far away as Los Angeles. "I look for a very complete dancer who can go from a contemporary to a classic way of moving. One who is susceptible to seeing new things and picking up new ways of moving," he has said.

Among the works tentatively planned for the Jan. 30 performance is "Harbinger," Feld's first choreographed work, set to the music of Prokofiev, and two of the choreographer's later works, "A Soldier's Tale," set to the strains of Stravinsky, and "A Footstep of Air," accompanied by Beethoven arrangements of Scottish folk songs.

On Jan. 31, scheduled numbers are "The Consort," "Half Time," and "Intermezzo," a romantic piece set to the music of Brahms.

The company's MSU appearance is part of the Lecture-Concert season's University and Choice series. Tickets are on sale at the MSU Union box office, 355-3361.

The B-52's

NBC-TV leads the way in bringing new wave rock 'n' roll to the television masses once again this weekend when the B-52's make their "boob tube" debut on Saturday Night Live at 11:30 p.m. tomorrow. The band — famous for their de-evolved celebration of '60s junk culture — are favorites of the new wave intellectual elite. The B-52's will perform "Planet Clare" and "Rock Lobster," according to an NBC press release. Hosting the show will be actress-comedian Teri Garr, who played John Denver's wife and Richard Dreyfuss' wife respectively in Oh, God and Close Encounters.

More hospital 'fun' with 'House Calls'

By MATT OTTINGER

State News Special Writer

Something is unsettling about hospital comedies for me. Hospitals, after all, are not the most amusing places around. Yet the networks continue to throw the shows at me, mindless on the fact that with the notable exception of *M*A*S*H** (which may not exactly apply) hospital comedies have not worked.

House Calls (Mondays, 9:30 p.m., CBS), the latest entry in this field, has a lot more going for it than most. For instance, they conquer my personal apprehensions about hospitals by

"we have the best staff anywhere." It would be refreshing to see a television hospital that did not have "the best staff anywhere."

Scripts are routine and they tend to follow the theme of the movie and center more on Dr. Michaels's romantic involvement with Ann Anderson (Lynn Redgrave) than on the hospital activities. Rogers is fine as the handsome doctor, even though he still does not impress me as a leading man. Redgrave, supposedly the co-star, is little more than Rogers' romantic interest, but she is fun rarely showing sick people. A girl who seems to have appendicitis is suddenly and miraculously better. A boy who may have contracted smallpox is proven in the end to have only a mild fever. In fact, people stay so healthy, it's hard to see how the staff stays busy.

It would be refreshing to see a television hospital that did not have "the best staff anywhere."

House Calls is based on the 1978 Walter Matthau-Glenda Jackson movie, and although the characters and the setting remain the same, the series unfortunately breaks away from the film in some important areas. Charley Michaels, the Matthau character played by Wayne Rogers on TV, was a womanizer and a slightly better than average surgeon in the movie. In the mindless perfection of series TV, however, Dr. Michaels is a totally dedicated super-surgeon who, for example, can perform a tracheotomy in a gas station. It is this too-common TV attitude that main characters have to be flawless that severely damages the show's credibility.

Another bad transition from the movie is the hospital itself. In the movie, Kensington General was, simply put, a bad hospital. The building needed repair, the chief of staff was senile, and malpractice suits were coming in faster than patients. In the whitewashed TV version, the building is spotless, and everyone goes around assuring patients that to watch and fascinating to hear.

The show-stealer, however, is David Wayne as Amos Willoughby, the old chief of staff. As played by Art Carney, the movie's Amos was dangerously senile, but in one of the better transitions from the film to TV, Wayne's Amos is delightfully absent-minded, as witnessed in the following bit of dialogue from an early episode:

Amos: Aren't you new here?
Ann: I'm in my third month.
Amos: Well, stay off your feet as much as possible.

Preposterous non-sequiturs such as that make Amos an interesting comic character and Wayne's excellent deadpan delivery certainly helps. In more recent episodes, however, the writers have made Amos more cynical and straightforward, as if they cannot decide exactly what would be right for the character (the whole series shows this lack of direction to an extent). Hopefully they will go back to the original, absent-minded Willoughby.

House Calls follows *M*A*S*H** on Monday nights and so far it is getting excellent ratings, due in part to the popularity of its lead-in. It has some good qualities, however, and should be able to stand on its own merits soon. Who knows, House Calls might make hospitals fun again.

Former SN photographer exhibits photos at local shop

By MARY TINNEY
State News Staff Writer

For Ira Strickstein, photography is "a form of expressing my personality in a way that I can't verbally."

Strickstein, former State News photographer and 1979 winner of The General Manager's Award for News and Sports, is exhibiting 12 of his photographs at Quarry Photo, 403 E. Grand River Ave., until Monday, Feb. 4.

The exhibit, entitled "Man in Motion," includes some photographs published in The State News over the three years that Strickstein worked here. What the photographs have in common is a focus on faces and emotion.

"I like faces and eyes," Strickstein says. "Realistically, people only look at a newspaper picture for about three seconds. It's necessary in that three seconds to hit the person with impact, feeling and at the same time get some meaning across."

Strickstein began taking photographs a week before he applied for a job with the MSU yearbook in 1976. He worked for the yearbook for two terms before he went to Denmark on an overseas studies program. In Denmark Strickstein shot a slide program on the lifestyle of the people there. Soon after returning to MSU he began his job at The State News.

As a State News photographer, Strickstein was most involved in sports photography. He followed the Spartan basketball team to its NCAA championship in Salt Lake City.

"Joe Lippincott (manager of The State News photo department) told me that I'd have to outshoot AP and UPI in order for it to be worth going at all," Strickstein said. "I think that I succeeded. The 'We're No. 1!' issue is definitely my favorite." Several of Strickstein's sports photographs are included in the Quarry exhibit.

Currently Strickstein freelances for AP and UPI and has had pictures published in many of the country's major news publications, including The Detroit Free Press and Newsweek magazine. He also freelances for the United Cerebral Palsy Association, takes sports photographs for the yearbook, and is the staff photographer for Pop Entertainment.

Strangely enough, Strickstein has no aspirations toward a career in photography. He graduates this term with a degree in building construction and plans on getting a job in that field.

"Photography is just a hobby for me," he said. "But it's nice to have in case my other plans don't pan out."

Strickstein's photographs can be seen at Quarry Photo from 9 to 5:30 Monday through Wednesday, 9 to 9 on Thursday and 9 to 5:30 on Friday and Saturday.

Cagers win in O.T, 59-58 over Michigan

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Jay Vincent wasn't vintage Jay Vincent Thursday night in the University of Michigan's Crisler Arena, but MSU fans, Vincent's teammates and head coach Jud Heathcote didn't mind a bit.

Vincent didn't get his first point until four minutes were gone in the second half, but canned a free throw with three seconds left in overtime to give the Spartans a 59-58 win over the Wolverines before 13,318 fans.

The Spartans had a golden opportunity to win the contest in regulation. With the score knotted at 54-54 with 1:46 to go, MSU ran down the clock until four ticks remained, when Kevin Smith, the hero of last Thursday's last second win the University of Wisconsin, charged into U-M's Mark Lozier. Johnny Johnson got off a shot for the Wolverines, but after the buzzer had sounded.

Vincent missed the first try of a one-on-one situation from the line with 2:07 to play in the extra period and the score tied. This time it was the Wolverines who played for the last shot.

Smith came up with the big play when he knocked the ball out of U-M guard Keith Smith's hands with 43 seconds. Smith, who hit the winning free throw after time had run out a year ago in Crisler Arena as the Wolverines stopped the Spartans 49-48, stepped on the side line as he retrieved the loose ball.

Now it was MSU's turn to win it in the end. After an MSU timeout with nine seconds remaining, Vincent got the ball inside the free throw line and pulled up for a jumper. As he released the ball, he was bumped on the arm by U-M's Paul Heurman.

Vincent missed his first attempt, but the second one off the hands of the 6-foot-8 junior, a 64 percent free throw shooter on the year, was true.

Both teams were pathetic in the first half, but MSU was especially sad and trailed 34-23 at the intermission. U-M's Mike McGee had 18 points in the first half.

"For us to win we have to play with great enthusiasm," Wolverine coach Johnny Orr said. "We weren't very fired up right off the bat and I tried to fire us up at the half, but just couldn't do it. I don't think Vincent was fouled, but the ref called it."

McGee finished with 30 to lead all scorers, while Ron Charles led MSU with 24, hitting all 12 of his shots en route to setting an MSU record for field goal percentage.

What did Heathcote say to Vincent before the final shots?
"If he misses, he is off scholarship," Heathcote cracked.

Mason wants consistency from icers at Wisconsin

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

The MSU hockey team begins a two-game, weekend series with the University of Wisconsin tonight in Madison, and head coach Ron Mason said he will be looking for a few things from his club.

"Consistency in the net is what we really need," Mason said. "Goalie Mark Mazzoleni just was not as sharp in last Saturday's game as he was in Friday's game, and a fresh goaltender would have made a heckuva difference."

Sophomore netminder Doug Belland, injured in the Great Lakes Invitational over a month ago, is skating again, however, and could be ready to play again by next weekend.

"For once we missed not having him in there last weekend," Mason said. "It would have been a closer game if we could have come back with Dougie in the 6-0 massacre."

UNTIL BELLAND'S RETURN, however, sophomore Bob Troscinski will handle the backup goaltending duty for the Spartans. Troscinski played the final 29 minutes of the second game of last weekend's split with Michigan Tech, turning away 12 shots to keep Tech off the scoreboard.

Other areas of concern to Mason are the Spartan power play, and the ability of MSU to contain opposing defensemen.

"Our power play was non-existent last weekend," Mason said about the Spartans' shut-out on 10 power play chances. "We were just missing the net when we got our chances."

"We also need to be able to contain the Wisconsin defensemen better than we handled the Tech defense," Mason continued. "We played a rhythm-designed team last week in Tech, and when they got the rhythm going, we couldn't stop them."

Mason said the Badgers are a very dangerous team, and the Spartans cannot afford to give up bad goals.

"THEY SCORED FIVE poor goals against us in the Great Lakes tournament, and I imagine they're considering us to be a patsy coming in," Mason said, "but we'll be looking to put together at least one good game."

Wisconsin is blessed with all the things that make a good hockey team. It has its scorers, its checkers, its skaters and its goaltending is as sound as anyone's in the league.

The Badgers are led by junior defenseman Theron Welsh, who is fifth in Western Collegiate Hockey Association scoring with 33 points, while scoring five goals with 37 assists for 42 points overall.

In addition to Welsh, junior center Scott Lecy and senior left winger Ron Griffin have each accounted for 13 goals and 18 assists for 31 points overall.

The Badgers also boast one of the premier goaltenders in the WCHA in sophomore Roy Schultz, who is 11-8-1 overall this season with a 3.82 goals-against average.

The Spartans have squared off against Wisconsin three times thus far this season, losing twice, most recently in the Great Lakes tournament by a 10-4 count.

Wisconsin is 12-11-1 for all games and 9-9-0 in the WCHA. The Spartans now boast an 8-17-0 overall record, but have moved into eighth place in the league with a 7-11-0 mark.

19-YEAR WIN STREAK ON THE LINE

Wrestlers host two old favorites

By JIM MITZELFELD
State News Sports Writer

If the past is any indication of the future, the MSU wrestling team should have little difficulty winning its two Big Ten home meets this weekend.

In his 19 years as head coach of the Spartans, Grady Peninger's teams have never lost a dual meet to either the University of Illinois or Purdue University.

The Spartans host Illinois at 3 p.m. Friday, before a battle with Purdue at 3 p.m. Saturday. Both meets will be at the IM Sports-West.

The Spartans have won four of their last dual meets with the only loss to nationally-ranked Oklahoma State University.

The grapplers' win last Saturday at Northwestern gave them a 6-4-1 season mark and a 2-0-1 record in the Big Ten.

The Illinois meet has a special meaning for Peninger. The Fighting Illini are coached by one of his former athletes, Greg Johnson.

The meet will mark the first time the second year coach has brought his Illinois team to MSU. Johnson was a three-time NCAA and Big Ten champion for the Spartans at 118 pounds from 1970 to 72.

But the former student will have a tough time defeating his teacher when the two lock heads Friday.

The Spartans are currently on a hot streak and last year they beat Illinois 25-14.

The Fighting Illini are 3-4 overall and 1-1 in the Big Ten. Illinois beat Ohio State and lost to Purdue earlier in the season.

Purdue finished in last place in the Big Ten last year. The Boilermakers are 4-4 on the season and 1-1 in the Big Ten.

Harrel Milhouse will be looking for his fifth straight dual meet victory Friday at 118 pounds, while 126-pounder Chuck Joseph is coming off a 55-second pin against Northwestern.

A bandaged up Jeff Thomas will be wrestling with four stitches in his head at 134 pounds. Thomas sustained the cut in a 10-5 win last weekend.

Fencers host alumni

The MSU fencing team will host its annual alumni meet at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in the upstairs gym of Jenison Fieldhouse.

The 1980 Spartan squad will match its skills with former MSU fencing greats such as Richard Berry, 1952 All-America and two-time Big Ten champion, 1962 conference winner Robert Brooks and Charlie Schmitter Jr., son of the Spartans' head coach.

Tigers talk like champs

While the majority of the MSU community ate such delicacies as turkey tetrazini, grilled cheese sandwiches and other equally delectable dormitory delights, I had the distinct pleasure to dine with some new friends Wednesday afternoon.

Along with my assistant, I ventured to the Village Market restaurant on Trowbridge Road, for the Lansing area stop of the annual Detroit Tigers press tour and you know what? Besides a lunch of filet mignon and an open bar, all compliments of the Tigers, I got a lot out of that afternoon.

First of all, Sparky Anderson is a terrific man. He cuts no corners, he tells it like it is. Or at least how he sees it almost a month before spring training begins.

"This club can win 90 ballgames this year," the field boss said. "104," chided Tiger catcher Lance Parrish.

But the white-haired and tanned manager did not just say his Tigers would be winners this season — he nearly guaranteed it.

"The only way any team gets to the top is by having all its players striving for one goal — first place," Anderson added. "You've got to play just as hard in April and May as you do in September because one victory anywhere along the way just might be the one that puts you on top."

Anderson is a player's manager. He loves his players. All of them, and the feeling seems to be very mutual.

"He gets the most out of his players," shortstop Alan Trammell said. "He can build you up and he can kick you in the rear end, but he's a winner and we're gonna win."

Tiger newcomer Dan Schatzeder added, "I'm getting along with Sparky just great. I didn't get along with Dick Williams at Montreal all that well, because he didn't really want to be your friend. But Sparky's more than just a boss."

Schatzeder is the highly-acclaimed left-handed pitcher who came to the Tigers in the trade that sent Ron LeFlore to the Montreal Expos.

Besides being very confident about their chances this summer, the Tigers will miss the offense supplied by former centerfielder LeFlore. One player who will miss the speedster a great deal is former MSU football and baseball standout Kirk Gibson, who is the heir apparent to the cavity in center.

"He's one of my closest friends," Gibson said, "and he helped me a lot. He was important to the Tigers on offense and everyone will have to just pick up a little here and there to make up for the loss."

Anderson is extremely impressed with Gibson and has said repeatedly that he will start the 23-year-old slugger in centerfield this season.

"He's very fortunate that I'm giving him the job," Anderson said. "But I believe in him and I don't want him to have to fight for it. If he has to fight for it, I'm afraid he'll change himself somehow and I'd rather just see him out there working on getting better, 'cause that's what he's gonna do."

Gibson plays down Sparky's admiration a bit, realizing he still must prove himself to win the approval of Detroit Tiger fans.

"I haven't got the job yet, I don't care what he says," Gibson argued. "It won't happen until I've proven myself. But I will be ready to go."

There are no free agents on the team. Sparky Anderson won't manage a team that has them. He believes in his young players and he said it is sad that fans seem to want clubs to go out and enter into the professional baseball meat market.

So youth, confidence and a sense of true team spirit is to be the trademark of the 1980 version of the Detroit Tigers. All I know is if they play baseball this summer as well as they can speculate about their upcoming play, well, remember 1968?

Varsity club

The Varsity "S" Club will meet at 6:30 p.m. Sunday in the Varsity Club Room in Spartan Stadium. All varsity letterwinners are welcome.

MSU golf coach Bruce Fossum will speak on the rating of Big Ten basketball officials, a job which he performs for the conference.

Women tracksters host MSU Relays

By JIM MITZELFELD

State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's indoor track team will host the annual MSU Relays at 1 p.m. Saturday at Jenison Fieldhouse.

Nine different teams will compete in this year's meet, which will consist of five relays, the two- and three-mile runs, and three field events.

The only two Big Ten teams competing in the meet, the University of Michigan and Purdue University, should provide the Spartans with their biggest test.

The seven other teams competing will be the universities of Pittsburgh and West Virginia, as well as Central Michigan, Western Michigan, Eastern Michigan and Southern Illinois universities.

"Purdue will give us the stiffest competition. But overall it should be a very exciting meet," Spartan coach Nell Jackson said.

Purdue goes into its first meet of the season led by Peach Payne, last year's Big Ten Champion in the 400-meter run. Her teammate, distance runner Diana Bussa, is another threat.

Unlike most meets this one will not include any individual races lower than the two-mile, meaning the five relays will emphasize depth.

"We are stronger and have more depth than in the past," Jackson said. "This kind of meet builds team spirit. The relays really pull a team together."

Last weekend the Spartans bungled up their two relays, costing them a second-place finish at the Lady Buckeye Invitational. But Jackson insisted the team hasn't prepared much differently for this meet than usual, though they have practiced their handoffs.

Jackson said the Spartans best chances were in both the 880-yard and mile relays.

In the 880-yard relay MSU will enter Carol Charles, Desiree Pritchett, Diane Williams and Cheryl Gilliam.

The Spartan mile relay team will consist of Molly Brennan, Pam Swainigan, Judy Brown and Pam Sedwick.

The MSU Relays will also include the two-mile relay, sprint medley relay and distance medley relay.

MSU should produce a good showing in both the two and three-mile run with distance runners Lisa Berry, Kelly Spatz and Sue Richardson.

Women's soccer club sets meeting

The MSU's Women's Soccer Club will hold its organizational meeting at 1 p.m. Saturday in 208 IM Sports-West. The meeting, open to any interested women, will deal with the upcoming season and indoor practice.

The club made its initial showing last spring with an undefeated record and a state championship. It also competes regionally, traveling to Ohio last fall, and will be expanding its Midwest schedule in the spring.

Indoor practice begins Saturday, Feb. 9 at Demonstration Hall from noon to 2 p.m. For more information, contact coach Charlie VanNederpelt, 351-2615.

Ellis in spotlight again

By WILL KOWALSKI

State News Sports Writer

When the MSU women's gymnastics team takes on No. 2 ranked Penn State University and the University of Michigan this weekend, a lot of pressure will rest on the shoulders of all-around performer Bonnie Ellis.

That's quite a load for the freshman from Syracuse, N.Y., to handle. But being in the spotlight is nothing new to Ellis, and her past experience in gymnastics leaves her far from being a 'rookie' in tough competition.

Ellis began her career by joining a private gymnastics club in Syracuse as a youth and progressed so much that by the time she was 12 years old she was the New York state junior high gymnast champion.

Then last year, as a senior in high school, Ellis made the big times by being named "female athlete of the year" in Syracuse at a celebrity banquet honoring former Syracuse sports greats, including football's Ron Jaworski and basketball's Dave Bing.

"That was really an honor to receive such a prestigious award, and it helped me decide my future in gymnastics," she said.

THE FUTURE WAS not far off for Ellis, either. The University of Louisville, the University of Massachusetts and MSU were all interested in obtaining her services, but Ellis chose a scholarship at MSU after seeing the East Lansing campus for the first time last spring.

So far this season Ellis has been the Spartans top all-around performer and has taken more firsts and seconds in individual events than anyone else on the team. But Ellis notes that MSU wouldn't be doing as well if the whole squad was not talented.

"We're doing quite well this year because everyone gives it their best in meets as well as in practice," Ellis said.

Ellis is looking forward to Friday's competition at Penn State for a couple of reasons. First, she knows that the Nittney Lions will be hard to beat and a victory over them will shoot MSU near the top of the polls. Second, Ellis will be seeing an old friend who has done quite well for herself.

The friend is Penn State sophomore Margie Foster, 1979's NCAA uneven parallel bar champ. Ellis and Foster are from the same area in New York and have competed against each other many times.

"I haven't seen her since she lived with us for a while last summer," Ellis said.

"We're both the same age (Foster graduated a year early from the same high school) and have been competing against each other for a long time. Margie's really good, as is the whole Penn State team."

After returning from Penn State, the Spartans will host the Wolverines at 2 p.m. Sunday in Jenison Fieldhouse.

HOST EIGHT-RANKED MINNESOTA

Gymnasts in for tough weekend

When the University of Minnesota men's gymnastics team invades Jenison Fieldhouse at 8 tonight, MSU coach George Szypula knows the Spartans will have their hands full.

The Gophers are the defending Big Ten gymnastics champions and have much the same squad this season that rolled over opponents last year. They are also ranked No. 8 in the nation now, and have many performers listed in the top 10 places for high individuals scores in the Mideast rating statistics.

"I think we can beat them, but it's going to take an upset to do it," Szypula said.

MSU will be hoping for an outstanding meet by junior Marvin Gibbs plus a lot of help from freshmen Bart Acino, Pedro Sanchez and Pete Roberts. These four, along with junior Ivan Merritt, will do most of the all-around work and give the Spartans their best shot at the upset.

"Minnesota will definitely put a lot of pressure on the freshmen who don't have much experience, but I think maybe we've come far enough along for them to handle their responsibilities," Szypula said.

Roberts currently ranks first in the Mideast in the vault with a high score of 9.8 while Merritt isn't far away in third with a 9.45. Gibbs is eighth in the floor exercise (9.3) and 11th in the all-around with a 9.25.

Freshman Terry Olsen is also ranked as he is tied for fourth on the parallel bars with a 9.2, plus Sanchez holds down eighth place on the horizontal bars, also with a 9.2 score.

However, the Gophers have five performers (Brian Meeker, Dan Price, Reid Goldetsky, Peter Velguth and Joe Wickert) who also hold top 10 scores, and Minnesota as a team ranks in the top nine in all six individual events in total team scoring.

"Minnesota is scoring around a 260 total consistently now, and we've only been hitting around 250," Szypula said.

"We're going to have to perform the best we have all year if we're going to make it close."

Everyone is in a mad rush digging up anything made of gold or silver to exchange for cash, but there are those few hardy folks who continue to search diligently for that elusive aluminum can. Abraham Willye, 4, of Lansing, checks the big can for the little one that will net him a dime or two.

Board of Trustees convening

The MSU Board of Trustees will consider administrative reorganization involving four University vice presidents at 1 p.m. today in the Board Room of the Administration Building.

Additional items under consideration will include confirmation of a new athletic director and approval of a three-year contract agreement with Local 547 of the International Union of Operating Engineers.

Michigan is willing to join in discussions of the national nuclear waste disposal problem if the state retains veto power over the location of dump sites here, the Milliken administration said Thursday.

Testimony on Gov. William G. Milliken's behalf was presented to the subcommittee on Nuclear Regulation of the U.S. Senate Environment and Public Works Committee by William Taylor, chairperson of the governor's science and technology commission.

Michigan will be willing to talk with the federal government about the waste disposal problem only if a process of consultation and concurrence "is made national policy — and remains a national policy" — preferably by presidential action, Taylor said.

EPA may lead probe of Velsicol

By LANI WIEGAND
United Press International

The Environmental Protection Agency is "strongly considering" leading the probe into dumping of chemical and radioactive waste in Gratiot County by Velsicol Chemical Corp., a state Toxic Substance Control Commission researcher said Thursday.

Commission researcher Robin Harger, Assistant Attorney General Stewart Freeman and state Department of Natural Resources staff members urged EPA representatives to take charge of investigation and possible legal action against the firm.

"The ball is in the EPA's court," Harger said. "They intend to respond within a few days."

Velsicol Chemical Corp., formerly known as Michigan Chemical, manufactured PBB which was accidentally mixed with cattle feed in 1973. The state has ordered the firm to clean up residue of the fire retardant and other toxic chemicals at its St. Louis plant site, but Velsicol missed several deadlines for submitting the plan.

IT IS ALSO under fire for the discovery of 150 tons of radioactive waste at a dump site near Breckenridge in northeast Gratiot County. DNR officials also suspect radioactive waste is dumped at several other sites in the area, including the plant, a nearby golf course and the Gratiot County landfill.

The firm has said it only dumped material near Breckenridge and had necessary permits for radioactive waste disposal, but a lawmaker from the area said former plant workers believe materials were left at other sites.

Rep. J. Michael Busch, R-Saginaw, said truck drivers who took radioactive material to Breckenridge also recall taking similar substances to the St. Louis city dump.

Harger said EPA officials are treating the matter "very seriously."

If the environmental agency agrees to Attorney General Frank Kelley's request to lead steps against the Chicago-based firm, steps could range from intense investigation to severe legal action.

Meanwhile, the toxic substance commission, voted to take an oversight role in investigation into Velsicol's dumping habits, but complained about lack of information from state agencies and the failure of Gov. William G. Milliken's staff to get involved in the probe.

Safety design consultant is witness in Pinto case

WINAMAC, Ind. (UPI) — Byron Bloch, an auto safety design consultant from California, was certified Thursday as an expert witness at the trial of the Ford Motor Co. on reckless homicide charges.

Judge Harold Staffeldt, over objections raised by Ford defense attorney James Neal, ruled that Bloch, of West Los Angeles, could testify except in the areas of accident reconstruction and on cost of auto parts.

Staffeldt's decision came after a day-long hassle over Bloch's qualifications as an expert, including his educational background.

Bloch launched his expert testimony Thursday with descriptions of fuel system's on standard automobiles, including free-hand sketches on a blackboard in front of the jury.

He made three sketches, including one of a 1973 Pinto in which he described the placement of its fuel tank.

Ford is charged with faulty design of certain models of Pinto cars, making their fuel tanks susceptible to rupture in rear end collisions. The state contends Ford officials sell Pintos knowing they were unsafe.

The charges stem from a fiery crash involving a 1973 model in 1978. Three teen-age girls died in the accident.

Bloch demonstrated to the jury that the clearances for the fuel tank on the 1973 Pinto amounted to about six inches from the rear bumper and two or three from the differential, a part of the transmission.

He also demonstrated with the help of two other drawings that the Pinto gas tank was within what he described as the "primary crush zone" — a section of the car that collapses in rear end collisions.

He said engineers design such susceptibility in cars to help cushion certain type crashes.

He also explained that most gas tanks of cars are in two pieces and welded together.

State willing to talk about nuke waste

UPI — Michigan is willing to join in discussions of the national nuclear waste disposal problem if the state retains veto power over the location of dump sites here, the Milliken administration said Thursday.

Testimony on Gov. William G. Milliken's behalf was presented to the subcommittee on Nuclear Regulation of the U.S. Senate Environment and Public Works Committee by William Taylor, chairperson of the governor's science and technology commission.

Michigan will be willing to talk with the federal government about the waste disposal problem only if a process of consultation and concurrence "is made national policy — and remains a national policy" — preferably by presidential action, Taylor said.

AUTO LAYOFFS INCREASE CLAIMS

State unemployment fund gets loan

DETROIT (UPI) — The federal government has approved a $280 million loan for Michigan to replenish the state's unemployment benefits fund, nearly drained by burgeoning auto industry layoffs, U.S. Sen. Donald W. Riegle Jr. said Thursday.

The state has requested the funds from the U.S. Labor Department when it appeared the rising claims would empty the benefits account by the end of January.

The loan will allow the state to continue paying the benefits for the next three months.

"The fact that Michigan had to ask for this loan is indeed bad news, and indicative of the serious problems our state economy is going through," Riegle said. "But with the approval, we're getting some temporary good news."

Officials of the Michigan Employment Security Commission had no immediate comment on the loan, which had been virtually assured under federal provisions.

"We are pleased, of course," said Paula Holmes, a spokesperson for Gov. William G. Milliken. "We didn't anticipate having any trouble."

The MESC estimates the state is paying out about $4.4 million per day in benefits and accounts for 10 percent of the nation's jobless claims.

In December, the state's unemployment rate had jumped to 8.5 percent with nearly 370,000 persons out of work — largely a result of auto industry layoffs prompted by sluggish car sales.

The loan will cover the state's unemployment fund from Feb. 1 through April 30.

The state has until Nov. 10, 1982, to repay the loan, Riegle said. Although the loan is interest-free, Michigan employers could lose federal tax credits if the money is not repaid on time, Riegle said.

Any further request for aid must be made shortly before the loan runs out, said Riegle spokesperson, Mike Russell.

"The state can come back," Russell said. "It's like if you get paid Friday, you have to watch your pennies Thursday."

Earthquake rocks California

By JACK SCHREIBMAN
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An earthquake strong enough to crack buildings and sidewalks rocked Northern California for more than 20 seconds over hundreds of miles Thursday, swaying tall buildings and injuring several dozen persons.

The quake, recorded at 11 a.m. PST, measured 5.5 on the Richter scale according to the Berkeley Seismographic Station and was centered on the Calaveras fault near Livermore, 50 miles southeast of San Francisco. Most of those injured were in Livermore, including a man who toppled from a ladder in his apartment.

Buildings shook in San Francisco, in Monterey, 150 miles to the south; in Santa Rosa, 50 miles to the north, and in Sacramento, 90 miles to the east. The quake was felt as far away as Reno, Nev., more than 200 miles east of San Francisco.

The Lawrence Livermore Laboratory was evacuated because of leaking gas. Officials there reported some damage to buildings, but said no damage had been suffered by the nuclear research reactor.

"MY HOME IS a shambles," said Bill Tholke in Livermore. "Our two TV sets are totally demolished, our dresser was turned upside down."

"Wow! It moved my refrigerator 3 and one-half feet, and threw all my antique bottles off the fireplace," said Lynne Phillips, another Livermore resident.

A quake with a reading of 5 is capable of doing considerable damage in a local area, and one of 6 can do severe damage. Thursday's quake was one of the strongest to hit the area since the great quake of 1906 that leveled much of San Francisco. The 1st sizable quake in San Francisco was on Aug. 6, 1979, measuring 5.9 on the Richter.

Jeff Garber, a spokesperson for the Livermore lab, said,

"We experienced some cracks in windows and have had several minor injuries such as file cabinets falling over on people, but our research operations and the storage of our hazardous materials are intact."

Two schools in Livermore were also evacuated when gas began leaking from damaged pipes, officials said. Authorities said a section of the Greenville Road overpass on Interstate 580 near Livermore was closed after it dropped eight inches but did not collapse.

OFFICIALS AT PACIFIC Telephone and Pacific Gas & Electric said they had no immediate reports of major damage to telephone or power operations, but telephone service was reported out in Livermore.

The Bay Area Rapid Transit System immediately halted all service and trains remained stationary for about 45 minutes. Service resumed after it was determined that the system had suffered no damage.

The Richter scale measures ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

Planning commission approves highway

By SUSIE BENKELMAN
State News Staff Writer

Unable to avoid area homes and wetlands, the Tri-County Regional Planning Commission approved a recommendation Wednesday to the Michigan Highway Department to build a needed segment of I-69 south of Park Lake in Bath Township.

The plan for building the needed section has been argued by conservationists and homeowners in the area because the road will displace several homes and could have an adverse effect on area wildlife.

The commission approved a proposed route which would run east from U.S. 127, north of East Lansing, to the Clinton-Shiawassee county line. The area in Bath Township contains 40 to 50 percent wetlands.

Michigan Department of Transportation officials recommended the southern route and said that re-planning to build the alignment north of Park Lake would probably obstruct the whole project.

OPPOSITION TO THE recommendation to build the southern route came from Clinton County representatives to the commission. The Clinton County Board of Commissioners recently voted unanimously in favor of the northern alignment.

In 1974, the highway commission recommended building north of Park Lake, said Bill Gnodtke, R-Bath.

"Now they've done a one-eighty with it," Gnodtke said. "They've talked a lot about the sandhill cranes and the wetlands, but nobody's talked about the people."

The route chosen by the planning commission and the highway department would displace 49 single-family homes and one business and would not affect any parklands.

Had officials chosen the northern route, it could have displaced either 27 or 42 homes and might have affected 47 acres of Lansing's Priggoris Park.

"THE THING THAT bothers me is that the decision has already been made by the Department of Transportation that 2-W (the southern route) is the preferred route prior to a public hearing," Gnodtke said.

Larry Alber, resource specialist for the highway department, said the southern route is a compromise alignment because there is "just not a good way to go through this area" considering the wetlands and muck areas.

Alber said the southern route was preferable because its wetlands are less valuable and it avoids all public recreation lands.

Bath Township residents voiced opposition to the whole project, but said they would choose the southern route if the section must be built.

Bath resident John Jerome said most people in Bath are "in the dark on the whole subject."

"But we would prefer the southern route because routing north would interfere with the rural community of Bath," he said. "We don't want a vocal persuasive group encouraging urbanization in Bath."

Transportation director for the commission, Leo Bagley, said the project will begin around 1984 if approved by the Michigan Highway Commission and is expected to be completed by 1986 or 1987.

MSU enrollment up; 'good publicity' cited

Winter term enrollment at MSU has reached its second-highest mark in the history of the University, said Ira Polley, assistant provost for admissions and records.

The 42,710 enrollment for this term is 1,034 over the number of students enrolled last winter term. The largest enrollment was 43,038 in the winter of 1976.

Polley noted undergraduate enrollments have specifically increased in the colleges of Business, which is up 8 percent; Engineering, up 9.7 percent; Communication Arts and Sciences, up 10.8 percent; and James Madison College, up 7 percent.

Provost Clarence L. Winder said the good publicity MSU has received lately has helped bring the school to the attention of other students across the state.

"We had a large enrollment fall term and that trend usually follows throughout the year," Winder said.

There may be some decline in the upcoming number of students of college age he said. However, this would have little effect on the number of students enrolling for college, he added.

"I'm always happy when MSU is doing well and students are interested in coming here," Winder said.

Polley also said graduate enrollments showed an increase. The colleges with the greatest increases are arts and letters, up 13 percent, and business, up 9 percent.

The enrollment increase also showed a higher number of women students (808) than men (226).

Short of saying "bag it" to the art world, Glen Moriaki, a graduate student in art at the University of California at Berkeley, stands amid 3,000 opened brown paper grocery bags. Titled "Wheat Field," Moriaki says this is "installation art," the conversion of everyday objects into art by using a great number of the objects.
