'Muddy' Waters chosen as football coach

By JEFF HITTNER
State News Sports Writer

If the appointment a week ago of Doug Weaver as MSU's new athletic director was a surprise, then his selection for the Spartans' new head football coach rates as nothing less than a shock.

Frank "Muddy" Waters, athletic director and head football coach at Saginaw Valley State College since 1973, was named Tuesday night to take over the position left vacant by former MSU football coach Darryl Rogers.

Waters, 57, was hand-picked by Weaver with the approval of MSU President Cecil Mackey and Ken Thompson, vice president for operations. The appointment is now subject to approval by the MSU Board of Trustees.

The appointment finally brings to a close two weeks of speculation and drama that began when Rogers and athletic director Joe Kearney left MSU for similar positions at Arizona State University.

LIKE WEAVER, WATERS is a former MSU football player. He starred from 1946 through 1949 under coaches Charley Bachman and Biggie Munn. His son, Frank Waters III, lettered for the Spartans' football team from 1966 through 1968.

During his 30 years of coaching, Waters' teams have compiled an impressive 180-78-7 record. The bulk of that record was built at Hillsdale College where Waters served as head coach from 1954 to 1973. He also served as athletic director during that time after taking the post in 1953 while an assistant football coach.

His coaching experience prior to Hillsdale was at the high school level where he enjoyed success at Albion and Walled Lake.

Waters spoke to reporters Tuesday night at Thompson's home in Okemos and was obviously overjoyed with his appointment. "I'm happy to be back at my alma mater," Waters said. "It's the epitome of my coaching career. There is no job like MSU."

Waters said he would begin immediately on recruiting players and choosing a new assistant football staff. He added both tasks would probably go hand-in-hand over the next few days.

WATERS INDICATED he definitely wanted longtime Spartan aide Sherman Lewis to stay on the staff. Lewis, who also applied for the head coaching position, was the only member of Rogers' fulltime staff who did not leave with him for Arizona State.

Waters added the rest of his assistants would probably be made up of Michigan high school coaches, his own Saginaw Valley staff and coaches from areas out of the state.

Al Fracassa, another MSU alumnus and longtime head coach at Birmingham Brother Rice high school, is the second person Waters said he will call to join his staff after talking to Lewis.

On recruiting, Waters said although he has been out-state before, he feels "MSU can get enough good athletes right here in Michigan."

Weaver said he had reached a decision on the new head coach Monday. He added all the interviews were finished by that time and he had simply to discuss it with Mackey and Thompson.

"WATERS WAS ONE of the first people I thought of when I flew up here from Georgia last week," Weaver said. "When I was thinking of candidates, he came to mind first. There were three or four other candidates but I won't say who they were because it's done now."

George Perles and Rollie Dotsch, currently assistant coaches with the Pittsburgh Steelers, and Tampa Bay Buccaneers' assistant coach Wayne Fontes were considered likely candidates. All three are former Spartan players and expressed interest in the job.

"I think we got a big name coach," Weaver said. "People who know football know we made the right decision."

Asked if he thought Waters might have a difficult time making the transition from small-college football to that of the Big Ten, Weaver took the defensive.

"My experience has been that a prominent assistant coach from somewhere else would be new to the Big Ten too," Weaver said. "The only way we could have someone step right in without an adjustment would be to get somebody with an 8-3 or 7-4 record from the Pac Ten. And that's not what we wanted."

WATERS EXPRESSED HIS views on the subject a little differently.

"There is no more pressure in the Big Ten to win than in small-college football," he said. "If you're going to be in football, why not the best?"

Waters is widely respected among high school coaches in the state of Michigan, which should help recruiting.

"When I was at Saginaw Valley, the blue-chip players would tell me that they wanted to play somewhere bigger," Waters said. "Now they don't have any reason to say no to me."

"I can't imagine there has been a problem recruiting at MSU," he added. "This is the greatest school in the country."

Waters, who celebrates his birthday today, called his appointment something he has dreamed of for 30 years.

Six Americans diplomats escape from embassy

By The Associated Press

Six American diplomats who escaped capture when the U.S. Embassy was seized Nov. 4 slipped out of Tehran after 12 weeks in hiding, helped by the Canadian Embassy and an elaborate ruse of false identities and forged documents, it was disclosed Tuesday.

Word of the dramatic flight from Tehran came as ailing Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini went on national radio to make an emotional appeal for Iranians to support their new president, Abolhasan Bani Sadr.

The 79-year-old revolutionary leader, in an apparent allusion to his heart ailment, called on Iranians to remain "without fear, no matter whether a person comes or a person goes." The last medical report on the hospitalized Khomeini listed him in satisfactory condition.

There were new signs Tuesday of friction between Bani Sadr and official backers of the Moslem militants holding some 50 American hostages at the U.S. Embassy, but Tehran radio later broadcast a message from Khomeini urging support for Bani Sadr.

THE BOLD ESCAPE of a half-dozen U.S. diplomats from central Tehran caught the embassy militants off guard Tuesday.

"That's illegal! That's illegal!" one of the militants cried to a Western reporter when told of the ruse.

State Department officials said the six diplomats would be kept at an undisclosed European location, which a Canadian official said was in West Germany, for a "decompression period" of several days. The officials said that during this time, the six would rest, tell their stories to government officials, and be briefed about what topics to avoid when talking to reporters.

They said the families of the six would be allowed to telephone them shortly, but that they would not be reunited until the six returned to the United States.

The State Department sources, who asked not to be quoted by name, said the six were not in the U.S. Embassy when a mob of students stormed and captured the building last Nov. 4.

THEY TOOK REFUGE initially in a variety of friendly embassies, which the officials refused to identify. But shortly after the siege began, they went to the Canadian Embassy.

The United States knew of the six Americans' plight but said nothing publicly, said White House spokesperson Hodding Carter.

Canada began to withdraw its diplomats from Iran as an expression of displeasure with the failure of the Iranian government to obtain the release of the 50 Americans held at the U.S. Embassy.

Finally, last weekend, the six Americans were spirited out of the country, using false Canadian passports, the sources said.

On Monday, Canada announced that the remaining embassy staff had left. The official said Tuesday that the Americans had left before the last embassy personnel, which included the ambassador.

SHE SAID CANADA felt it had to close its embassy for fear of reprisals for harboring the Americans. At the time the embassy closing was announced, questions were raised about the reason for the action since there seemed no change in the Iranian situation to warrant it.

Decision-makers in Washington and Ottawa decided to act when they did because "we knew everyday that the danger was becoming greater," Canadian Foreign Minister Flora MacDonald said at a news briefing. "It was only a matter of time before the Iranians came to know about this."

U.S. Senate passes Olympic resolution

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to urge all Americans, not just athletes, to boycott the 1980 Summer Olympics as a protest against the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan if the Games go on as scheduled in Moscow.

The resolution offers an alternative to a boycott by urging the International Olympic Committee to cancel, postpone or relocate the Games. But IOC members have already indicated they will reject this request.

The vote was 88-4. The four votes against the resolution were cast by Sens. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn.; Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.; Ted Stevens, R-Alaska; and Paul Tsongas, D-Mass.

SEN. EDWARD M. KENNEDY, D-Mass., a Democratic presidential hopeful, did not vote although he was in a Senate office building conducting a news conference.

Kennedy has said in the past that he supports President Carter's position on the boycott but considers it a symbolic gesture of little value.

Unlike a similar measure adopted 386-12 last week by the House, the Senate resolution does not set a timetable for a pullout of Soviet troops from Afghanistan. No further action is expected on either resolution because each is advisory and does not have the force of law.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance is asked in the Senate resolution to redouble efforts to convince America's friends and allies to cooperate in supporting the U.S. policy on the Olympic Games.

The resolution also urges the IOC to give urgent consideration to moving the Summer Olympic Games to a permanent home in Greece, "the country of their origin." And it calls for the Winter Olympics to be moved to permanent quarters in the future. Some senators are suggesting Switzerland or Austria as possible neutral locations.

THE KEY PARAGRAPH specifically urges "that, should the International Olympic Committee fail to adopt the proposal of the United States Olympic Committee or a comparable proposal, no American team should participate in those games and no American should attend them in any capacity."

The U.S. committee has said it would follow the president's lead and ask the international committee to move, postpone or cancel the games.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairperson of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee noted that the resolution, approved in a 14-0 committee vote Monday, includes a vote of confidence in America's athletes who are being asked to give up the goal of a lifetime by foregoing participation in the Olympics.

He noted that unlike a House resolution passed 386-12 last week, the Senate measure does not set a Feb. 20 deadline for Soviet withdrawal.

Church said it would be "unrealistic" to believe the Soviets would pull out of Afghanistan by that date. He noted that under Olympic rules the United States Olympic Committee has until May 24 to enter a team with the International Olympics Committee.

"FOR THE PRESENT it is enough to stand on the principle that Soviet aggression must be resisted by whatever useful means we can command," Church said.

He said that while the resolution urges all Americans to stay away from the games "no one contemplates coercing or compelling Americans to stay away from Moscow."

Church said that would be "repugnant" and contrary to American tradition.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., the only member of the present Congress to have won an Olympic gold medal, said boycotting the Games was justified in the interest of maintaining world order.

He said the boycott could re-emphasize the athlete, and eliminate much of the politics and commercialism that he said have surrounded the Games.

Moslems condemn Soviet military action

By MOHAMMED AFTAB
Associated Press Writer

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Islamic foreign ministers concluded an emergency session Tuesday night condemning "Soviet military aggression against the people of Afghanistan" and denouncing any sort of pressure on Islamic nations.

A joint declaration opposed the use of force or imposition of economic or political sanctions against Iran by the United States, and condemned Egypt's establishment of relations with Israel.

The three-day meeting was attended by ministers from 35 of the 41 member nations of the Organization of Islamic Countries and the Palestine Liberation Organization. The declaration incorporated the resolutions adopted by the closed-door plenary sessions.

The conference chairperson Agha Shahi of Pakistan, addressing the final session, said the decisions taken by the ministers demonstrate the cohesion and unity of the Islamic world and would have far-reaching impact on the future course of events not only "in our immediate region but far beyond."

IN MOSCOW, THE Soviet news agency Tass said the Islamic foreign ministers' call for withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan was a "crude interference" in Afghanistan's internal affairs.

Tass said the Islamabad session acted "under the influence of imperialist forces, and first of all of the United States."

"The United States, while applying crude, arm-twisting tactics and leaning on the support of those Moslem regimes which depend on it, is trying at all costs to distract the attention of the countries of this region from the real threat coming from the forces of imperialism and Zionism," Tass said.

In Washington, State Department spokesperson Hodding Carter said the strong anti-Soviet stand taken by the conference "reinforces the international outrage" was expressed recently by the United Nations General Assembly.

State House passes boycott resolution; supports Michigan as site for Olympics

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

The Michigan House passed a resolution Monday night supporting President Carter's call for a boycott of the 1980 Summer Olympics in Moscow.

The House also supported an amendment saying Michigan would sponsor alternative games for as many sports as possible in case of a boycott or cancellation of the 1980 Summer Olympics.

"Despite the understandable desire of many American athletes to participate in the next Olympiad, these athletes are first and foremost American citizens, who can be expected to accept personal sacrifice in the pursuit of reasonable national goals," the resolution reads.

The resolution was sponsored by Rep. Leo Lalonde, D-East Detroit, along with 51 other co-sponsors of the bill, as a substitute for an Olympic boycott resolution introduced last week.

"THE ORIGINAL RESOLUTION was just poorly written," Lalonde said.

The United States Olympic Committee agreed Sunday to support Carter's demands on the Olympics and began laying groundwork for its own sports festival should a boycott or cancellation occur.

Although the U.S. committee did not name an alternative site for its proposed sports festival, possible choices such as Colorado Springs, Montreal and Philadelphia have been reported.

Colorado Springs is the home of the Olympic training center and has been the site of two previous summer events.

Michigan's amendment to sponsor alternative games in case of a boycott is not intended to place the state in competition with other possible sites, said Rep. Steve Andrews, R-Wolverine, who co-sponsored the resolution.

"I DON'T BELIEVE the amendment was meant to take an adversary position," Andrews said. "All states should offer to do their share in supporting alternative games if the Olympics are boycotted."

Facilities at major universities as well as professional sports facilities could be used to host games, said Rep. William Bryant, R-Grosse Pointe Farms, who sponsored the amendment.

Bryant suggested the possibility of the University of Michigan hosting soccer matches and Lake St. Clair hosting sailing events.

"It would be inappropriate for the United States to participate in an event lending legitimacy to a regime that has just flaunted all accepted international law," the resolution also states.

Hundreds of Chicago schoolteachers carrying S.O.S. signs (Save Our Schools) endured seven-degree temperature weather to stage a rally at the Daley Civic Center. The teachers refused to report to work at the start of Monday's second semester until they receive nearly $50 million in back pay the Illinois Board of Education owes them.

Six escape from Iran

The State Department identified the six who escaped as Mark Lijek, a consular officer; his wife, Cora Amburn Lijek, who was employed by the embassy as a consular assistant; Roger G. Anders, a consular officer; Henry L. Schatz, an agricultural attaché from Couer d'Alene, Idaho; Joseph D. Stafford, a consular officer; and his wife, Kathleen F. Stafford, a consular assistant, whose relatives are from Chattanooga, Tenn.

A dispute between Bani Sadr and the Iranian radio and television system was the latest sign of potentially serious discord between the president-elect and the embassy militants.

The chairperson of the five-member radio and television commission, Mosawi Khoeini, is the Moslem cleric closest to the embassy militants, acting as liaison between them and Khomeini.

BANI SADR HAD accused the state-run radio and TV of "malpractice, bias and enmity" during the campaign that ended with last Friday's presidential election, and he vowed to conduct a "purge" of "elements hostile to the country's values."

Spokesperson Carter said the escape of the six Americans did not resolve the discrepancy between the number of hostages the State Department believes are held — 50 — and the number seen by clerics who visited the compound at Christmas — 43. He said the department still believed there are 50 hostages.

Carter said he saw no reason why the hostages' captors would want to take reprisals against them.

meeting ended, Shahi, the conference chairperson, said the question of the Americans held hostage at the U.S. Embassy complex in Tehran, Iran was mentioned by some of the foreign ministers in their speeches during the closed-door sessions. But, he said, no one made a suggestion to incorporate the problem in the body of the resolution that was adopted regarding foreign pressures against Iran.

Shahi said "everyone wishes that this question should be settled on honorable terms."

Shahi was asked why the conference did not favor giving financial or material aid to the Afghan rebels fighting against the Soviets and the pro-Soviet Babrak Karmel regime in Afghanistan. He said, "If the rebels were provided with financial assistance and arms, it would have meant a total backing of the rebels, which is something in which we do not want to get involved."

Students urged to influence African policy

By REGINALD THOMAS
State News Staff Writer

The Carter administration is apathetic toward African policy because students are apathetic toward it, the executive director of TransAfrica said here Tuesday.

Randall Robinson said students must cause "ripples" on college campuses in order to bring about change in foreign policy toward Africa.

TransAfrica is an organization founded as an attempt to effect change in American policy toward Africa. The organization is represented by various members of the Black community.

"Young people must make the political leaders change their policy toward Africa," he said. "Michigan State University is in a unique position because of its divestiture program."

Robinson said United States policy toward Africa displays an ignorance of the true needs of the African people. United States involvement or support of the South African government is a clear example of that ignorance, he said.

Robinson said blacks cannot afford to let the South Africa issues explode and surprise the Americans. He added the same liberation wars that have affected other parts of Africa can be expected in South Africa within the next 10 years.

The issue in South Africa represents two forms of apartheid, he said. One form is petty apartheid, which deals with integration of restaurants and public facilities. The second is grand apartheid, which deals with the right to vote and land ownership.

Petty apartheid is similar to the problems Blacks faced in the civil rights movement, he said. But the major Black South African situation is different from civil rights.

"The struggle isn't that, (access to public facilities) he said.

"Once you conquer grand apartheid, you can end petty apartheid," he said. Grand apartheid disallows Black political power, and once you have power you can change the system.

Robinson said one problem is that the United States continues to support South Africa. He said the United States lashes out at White South Africa in a theatrical game used to the advantage of America and South Africa.

Robinson said the United States must realize its role in African policy must change. He added that Americans must force that change to occur.

This can be accomplished by making politicians accountable to the people that elect them, Robinson said.

For example, Blacks must organize in their congressional districts and show their views toward African policy, he said. If ten people wrote to their legislators it would seem like a crisis situation, he added.

Robinson said TransAfrica is trying to establish a communications network which would allow more than 250 telegrams to be sent to a political figure or leader at any time concerning any issue.

"If Black politicians can't work for policy change then they should alter their political future," he said. "We want to organize Black Americans in all congressional districts with large Black constituencies."

American foreign policy toward Africa is controlled by White Anglo-Saxon Protestant elitists, he said. These White elitists are ignorant about Africa.

This ignorance of Africa is displayed in America's political alliances in Africa.

Robinson said America's relation with Morocco is a good example of this. The United Nations and the Organization of African Unity have said Morocco does not need to take over a neighboring Sharian people. Yet the United States continues to help arm Morocco, he said.

"We have another shah (of Iran) in Morocco," he said. "It's a jingoistic response that we won't let down old friends."

America continues to challenge the history and right of Africans to self determination, he said. But Americans cannot afford to do so.

"We have seen the United States try this (fight history and right) too often and lose," he said. "History and right are on the side of Black nationalism."

"We have seen no serious commitment by the American government to apply pressure to South Africa."

Robinson's speech was sponsored by the African Studies Center.

Lansing faces tax hike or city employee layoffs

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

Lansing taxpayers will probably face a tax increase this coming year, Mayor Gerald Graves said Monday night.

If taxes are not raised, Graves warned, layoffs of city employees would be inevitable. Steve Dougan, the mayor's administrative assistant, said Lansing taxpayers would not stand for a substantial increase and the mayor's office would keep the tax hike request within 1 mill.

A raise of 1 mill would consist of a $1 tax on every $1,000 worth of property value as assessed by the state.

The state assesses property at one half its actual market value.

AFTER GIVING HIS State of the City address at the city council meeting Monday, Graves said there would be no "new frills or ideas" in City Hall because of a tight budget for the next fiscal year.

"Let us complete these projects already on the drawing boards, and hold off the new, unless a corresponding reduction can be made elsewhere," Graves said.

During his hour long address, Graves spoke of several problems facing the city.

He reminded the council of the Department of Natural Resource mandate that will force the city to stop groundwater contamination at the Aurelius Road landfill project.

Clean up for costs for the problem have been pegged at about $2 million.

GRAVES ALSO WARNED of the sewer system and wastewater treatment facilities which will need updating to prevent future pollution of the Grand and Red Cedar rivers.

Taxpayers will face either a tax increase or sewer rate hike to obtain $105 million, which is the city's share of the total project cost.

Costs of the total project have been estimated at $310 million.

Federal and state funds are needed to pay for the rest of the project.

Graves also cited the defeat of the ballot proposals that would have allowed the city to borrow money for construction of a new asphalt plant. Graves said that Lansing citizens should expect to pay more money for less road repair because the city must buy its asphalt from private contractors.

GRAVES SAID THE city may enjoy a "record breaking construction year," noting that the Capitol Commons housing project will soon be started.

The housing projects to be located near downtown Lansing will consist of a variety of housing structures for both low and high income living.

He also said that the city may soon announce the advancements that have been made in the "100 Block Project." The convention center project will include a large hotel, a sports arena, a shopping center and office building.

Graves may have trouble getting the tax increase approved, however, because the city council must approve the hike.

After the council meeting, Third Ward Councilmember Terry McKane said that Lansing taxpayers are not ready for another tax increase right now, and city layoffs would probably be necessary.

Councilmember-at-Large Louis Adado said he anticipated a request from the mayor to increase taxes slightly, but said he would lean toward raising taxes rather than layoffs of city employees.

A detour is a detour, but this is ridiculous! Motorists encountered an unusual obstacle during a good part of the day Tuesday as this house crept 2 and one-half miles up Haslett Road between Hagadorn and Okemos roads, finding its own new home at the corner of Okemos and Haslett roads.

DNR seeks to buy land for recreation

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources is seeking to buy land which could provide recreational opportunities for Michigan residents.

A 1976 law set up the Michigan Land Trust Board for the purpose of buying recreational land with money obtained through leasing state lands for oil drilling.

"Land is a non-renewable resource," said Edward Hagan of the DNR's Office of Budget and Federal Aid. "We want to save some for future generations."

"What we want to avoid is having to have our kids or our grandkids go to California just to see vacant land or forests are," he added.

During the next fiscal year, the DNR expects to receive about $4.5 million from leasing state lands, which will be used to purchase recreational land, Hagan said.

The DNR is particularly interested in lands for urban recreation, hunting and fishing, scenic or fragile areas, lands that protect endangered or threatened species, areas that would provide access to the Great Lakes and land in the Pigeon River Country State Forest.

All sites the DNR considers for purchase originate from proposals submitted by members of the public, Hagan said. People who would like to suggest possible sites for the DNR to purchase can obtain the necessary forms from the Department of Natural Resources.

VICE PRESIDENTS REPORT TO HIM

Mackey clarifies reorganization

By LOUISE UHALL
State News Staff Writer

The vice president for academic affairs is clearly the second highest position in the University administrative structure, MSU President Cecil Mackey told the Academic Council Tuesday afternoon.

Mackey's remarks were intended to clarify the recently proposed administration reorganization in regard to the provost's position.

"I want to make it clear that the academic vice president is the No. 2 officer in keeping with our role as an academic institution," Mackey said.

Mackey stated that the reorganization consisted of "relatively minor changes and responsibilities" for the vice presidents of operations, finance and business. He added that all vice presidents would report directly to him as opposed to reporting to another vice president. It is important for the president to be in direct contact with the vice presidents, Mackey said.

Mackey also said Gov. William G. Milliken is responsible for making the appointment to replace former trustee Michael J. Smydra, who resigned last Thursday. Smydra's replacement will serve until Dec. 31, 1984.

Provost Clarence L. Winder told the council that he is currently holding deliberations with Gwen Andrews, dean of social work, and John Paynter, associate professor of James Madison College, regarding the possibility of linking JMC with the College of Social Science.

"On Feb. 8, I will inform them of how I plan to act," Winder said. In other business, the Council discussed proposed changes in the General Education Policy document.

"The changes are a clarification to take in the effects of the reorganization of University College," said Julia Falk, chairperson of the University Committee on Academic Policy.

The biggest change in the document is the addition of amendment 1.2 proposed by Douglas Dunham, chairperson of the committee on General Education.

Woman dies after crash with paramedic unit

A 20-year-old East Lansing woman died Monday from injuries sustained when her vehicle collided with an Ingham County paramedic truck Jan. 12.

Ruth Ann Rice died in Sparrow Hospital about 11:45 a.m. Monday, a hospital spokesperson said.

Rice had been in the hospital's intensive care unit in critical condition since the accident.

Rice's Chevrolet collided with the paramedic unit at the intersection of Hagadorn Road and Grand River Avenue as the paramedic unit was making an emergency run, police said.

Tito's health is key to stability

Strategically speaking, the leg of Yugoslav President Joseip Broz Tito may turn out to be the most important appendage in the issue of possible Soviet advancement to the West. Coming on the heels of an almost uncanny sequence of potentially explosive historical events, Tito's country, as a result of the Marshal's illness, has suddenly become the next link in a chain of countries experiencing internal unrest. The state of Tito's health is currently being watched as closely by the United States as is the state of affairs in Iran or Afghanistan.

Yugoslavs are dismissing the idea of a Soviet move to overrun the country and claim it as part of the Soviet Bloc. Such an attempt was thwarted by Tito's agile forces in 1948, at a time when the Soviets shocked the West with the assertion that border state satellites were necessary to ensure Soviet security. Today, the geopolitical chessboard encompasses Eastern Europe as much as it ever did, especially in light of rising American skepticism toward any hope of cooperation from the Russians. That the United States could shrug its shoulders at the death of a man whose country contains no structure for a successor is a response that might have sufficed had American trust not been eroded. But as Yugoslavia eyes the Kremlin, and our NATO allies are eyeing Washington, possibly wondering if we will let Yugoslavia lose its independence the way we let the shah lose his throne.

As disturbing as it may seem, an American response to the precarious state of Yugoslavia will probably be evaluated on the basis of commitment: will we forewarn the Soviets that a violation of Yugoslavia's non-aligned status shall be considered crucial to peace as is tampering with the Persian Gulf? It is a stance we are almost forced to take, if not for the preservation of Yugoslavia's self-determination than in dispelling any Soviet calculations that once you get around denunciations, the rest is easy.

We owe a lot to Tito's leg. It enabled him to march in and claim independence of Yugoslavia, proving that not all tiny nations were at the mercy of the superpowers. His country has been a shining star in the plight of oppressed Eastern Europe. Hopefully, Yugoslavia's independence will not meet the same fate as Tito's leg.

'Public access' means freedom

When a Supreme Court justice remarked several years ago that "one man's vulgarity is another man's lyric," he might have been speaking prophetically about the present dilemma facing the East Lansing Cable Commission. Confronted with a rash of complaints and possible severance of interconnections with Lansing in the wake of a brief scene of nudity broadcast over the local public-access channel, the commission is grappling with the question of whether to impose standards of content for locally produced programming. Thus far, the commission has held fast to its "no censorship" policy, an action we feel is fully justified given the premises of cable television and the public-access channel.

Conventional broadcasting, due to the limited availability of frequencies, has never been granted the broad freedoms extended to other media. Regulations requiring TV and radio stations to broadcast a given amount of news and public affairs programming and to refrain from obscenity have been premised on the fact that airspace is a public commodity which has been parceled out to private owners.

Cable television, however, presents a different set of circumstances, which have been met accordingly with a different set of rules. Cable television systems are smaller, more accessible versions of conventional broadcast giants, and while one cable company may hold a monopoly in a particular city, no company can hold a monopoly over the mode of transmission. Public access channels, which until recently were required elements in all commercial cable systems, were designed to provide a free and open means of public discourse which might not be provided by conventional broadcast media.

The inherent danger of censorship lies in concentration of power. If the cable commission, the city council or any other group is given the power to determine what is "obscene" and what is not, then free public discourse will give way to a pre-established idea of what is right or wrong. This, unfortunately, is what has happened to conventional broadcast media, and the result is often a bland and pre-digested version of the day's events.

Certainly, the exercise of First Amendment rights must be tempered with a reasonable sense of public responsibility. But in the case of cable television, the power to determine the subject matter for public dispersal must ultimately rest with the originator of the program. The aim of the public-access channel is to provide just that — public access to a traditionally untouchable medium — and to set any sort of arbitrary standards would undoubtedly restrict this new-found means of discussion.

VIEWPOINT: OLYMPIC GAMES

Boycott a dangerous precedent

By MAUREEN TSCHIRHART

I am writing in response to Alec P. Fritsch's viewpoint concerning the Olympic boycott, "A dangerous precedent" (The State News, Jan. 21).

Fritsch stated "If President Carter pulls the United States out of the 1980 Summer Olympics in Moscow, we will not only be slighting ourselves and our athletes, but everything that the Olympics stand for." And now I must ask myself for what the Olympics stand.

They stand for excellence; not merely an excellence of physical ability, but in a far more significant sense — that of spirit. Every athlete participating in the Games, or in any competition, is motivated by much more than the "elusive gold," as is suggested by Fritsch.

I feel that the supreme award results in pride and the personal satisfaction of achievement. These people have attained excellence through their efforts, the relentless discipline, drive, and determination. The attitude, held by many fine athletes I know, far exceeds competition. It is a way of living.

For me, this is what the Olympic Games represent — the highest state of competition equalled only by the highest level of ability and freedom.

Yes, the games represent freedom to achieve, to accomplish, to attain the highest level of greatness within one's reach. And just what form of freedom does the Soviet Union preach? The armed invasion by the Soviets into Afghanistan is a good indication. Such actions are intolerable. The freedom of life, spirit, and ability (the foundations of the Olympics) is totally disregarded by the very country hosting the games this year.

I ask for what reasons the United States or any other country in the world should honor the Soviet Union's right to hold this event in obvious contradiction to the original intentions.

This would be a farce, and our participation would be the most vile of double standards.

I most certainly wish to protect and praise the fine efforts of our American athletes, and this is precisely why I feel they should not participate in the Games held in Moscow. What meaning could an athlete or his/her represented country gain from the awards offered in a country that does not have any values or standards attached to them? At least, none that I can see.

I would prefer the upcoming Olympic Games to be held at an alternate site (several have been suggested in the past few weeks). Let's choose a site in a different country having an atmosphere that would not reek with antagonism and military oppression.

In the present state of the world we must maintain some basic principles. Human rights, just as the Olympics, are some which can not survive Soviet indifference.

Alec Fritsch may feel that politics and athletics should not be mixed. I feel they are inseparable. In principle they both represent the same goals — the enhancement of human existence. And if humans are not ruled by their principles, by what then shall they be guided?

Tschirhart is a sophomore majoring in engineering.

An open letter to Alec P. Fritsch

Dear Alec:

Write on! Let's get politics out of the Olympics! As a first step, will you support me in getting a firm rule established for the 1984 Olympics (1980 is too late, I'm afraid) that:

- no national flag shall be displayed at any Olympic sporting event;
- no national anthem shall be heard at any Olympic sporting event, and
- participants in the events shall be identified to the public solely by alphabetical letters — assigned by lot — such as "400 meter runner K is running just ahead of runner W?"

If you like the idea, Alec, then let's start with you and stop calling these fine athletes, "our" athletes. OK? You are not idealistic in your views, you are just unaware of some of their implications.

Misfortune of losing my card

On Jan. 14 I had the misfortune of losing my card case containing all three pieces of picture identification issued to me and $6 in cash that was to last me until payday. The identification cards lost included my Michigan driver's license, MSU identification card and residence hall meal card. After checking all possible places it could have been turned in, and not recovering it, I resigned myself to replacing the contents.

When a temporary meal pass is issued to the person who has lost the original meal card, a time limit is imposed of four meals, during which time the student must attempt to locate the lost card. Since I had to eat, and my four meals were used, and all the cash I had was in the lost case prohibiting me from purchasing individual meal tickets (the money expended for these would be refunded later), I went to replace my meal card.

The cost to replace said card is $15, a price somewhat steep for most college students and almost punitive in nature. When I inquired as to the reason for such a fee, the woman issuing the replacement card informed me that this was to deter students from removing the card from the dorm. This reason is not valid.

Anyone residing in a residence hall must present this very card to gain entry to the residence hall after the building closes, midnight on weeknights and 1 a.m. on weekends. Also, this card must be presented to be admitted to RHA movies shown on campus. I am not trying to justify my losing the card, for I did lose it outside the dorm, but I do feel the cost of replacement is ridiculous, considering that the justification given me is invalid.

VIEWPOINT: INVASION

Russia's policies

By ROBERT M. SLUSSER

James A. Hamilton's article on the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan which appeared in the Jan. 18 State News provides me with a welcome opportunity to state my views on the subject a little more fully than was possible in my brief interview in the State News Jan. 8. In doing so I hope I can straighten out some of the misconceptions Hamilton has formed.

The threat to world peace posed by the Soviet action is too serious to permit any of us the luxury of reckless and ill-considered personal attacks on those with whom we happen to disagree. Since space is limited, I will confine myself to the points raised in Hamilton's article.

• Hamilton claims to know the specific nature of the illnesses from which Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev is suffering. I doubt that this claim has a solid foundation.

• I agree with Hamilton that the military side of the invasion was handled expertly. In calling the operation bungled, I had in mind the diplomatic preparation which should have provided a cloak to the naked act of aggression. But it was so poorly planned and executed that it fooled virtually no one.

• I do not hold the belief attributed to me by Hamilton that "there is a pro-detente constituency within the Soviet government with sufficient power to topple an uncooperative leadership." My forecast of Brezhnev's eclipse was based on my conclusion that the decision to invade Afghanistan represents the triumph of men like defense minister Ustinov who speak for or support the point of view of the armed forces.

Whether or not Brezhnev went along willingly with these adventurists in the Politburo (where such decisions are made, not, as Hamilton would have it, in the government) is immaterial. The decision represents the defeat of the policy of detente with which Brezhnev has been identified. Having given his name to the decision, Brezhnev has lost his credibility as an advocate of detente. He is therefore of no further use to Russia's real rulers. Whether he is kept on as a figurehead, given a pension and retired, or allowed to cut his wrists in the approved Soviet style for a member of the ruling clique whose policies have been discredited is a matter of comparative unimportance.

• I bear no responsibility for the defense policies pursued by successive administrations in Washington. Over the past 10 years I have consistently called attention to the Soviet military buildup and its implications for the world strategic balance.

• There is no need for Hamilton or anyone else to provide me with a copy of The Gulag Archipelago — it is part of my working library. For my part, I will be glad to furnish Hamilton with copies of my reviews of Solzhenitsyn's great book. While he is engaged in catching up on my publications, he would do well to look at The Soviet Secret Police, which I co-edited in 1957. It was the first fully documented study written in English of the KGB and its forerunners.

In my view, public discussion of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan should continue. It is to be hoped that those who take part in the discussion will learn to keep their emotions under control, get their facts straight, and avoid imputing views to others on the basis of misunderstanding or carelessness.

Divers search ship wreckage

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Divers searching the flooded compartments of a sunken Coast Guard cutter found the bodies of five more sailors Tuesday, raising the death toll to six. Hope was running out for 17 others missing following a collision with an oil tanker.

"As time goes by, the hope grows less," said Coast Guard Capt. Marshal Gilbert.

Twenty-seven of the cutter's crew members were rescued and one was found dead shortly after the Monday night collision. Some were found clinging to pilings of the Sunshine Skyway bridge, which soars over the bay's entrance.

The Coast Guard began assembling a formal board of inquiry to try to determine why the 605-foot tanker SS Capricorn slammed into the 180-foot cutter Blackthorn on a calm and moonlit night just outside Tampa Bay.

Divers fought vicious currents and poor visibility in the 50-foot-deep water where the cutter lay with a hole in its side to recover the five bodies Tuesday.

The loss of the cutter is the third sinking of a Coast Guard vessel since the end of World War II.

Judge rules on grain boycott

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal judge told officials of five dockworker unions Tuesday that they cannot sanction or encourage a boycott of a Greek freighter chartered to load grain for the Soviet Union.

The ruling came in the first court test of a protest by dockworkers in the East and Gulf coasts of the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan. The boycott imposed earlier this month was intended to tie up Russia-bound ships and cargo at ports from Maine to Texas.

Union lawyer Victor Hess said he was uncertain whether the temporary restraining order signed by U.S. District Judge Veronica Wicker imposed any prohibitions against boycotting by individual members of the International Longshoremen's Association.

It also was not immediately clear whether the judge ordered that grain must be loaded aboard the Greek-flag Julia L. Hess said.

Wicker scheduled a hearing for Friday on whether her temporary restraining order would be converted into a preliminary injunction against five locals of the international union whose members work at the nation's second-busiest port.

General warns of conflict

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet use of its growing power against Afghanistan significantly increases the danger of U.S.-Soviet military confrontation during the next five years, a top defense official said Tuesday.

Gen. David Jones, chairperson of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Secretary of Defense Harold Brown said events in Afghanistan show the Soviets may be willing to threaten vital U.S. interests in the Middle East.

"The possibilities of a military confrontation with the Soviet Union will increase significantly in the first half of the next decade," Jones told the House Armed Services Committee.

"I do not believe that means a bolt-out-of-the-blue nuclear attack on the United States," Jones added later. "But I think it is more likely that they will try to intimidate us — make us blink."

U.S. trade deficit improves

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's merchandise trade deficit totaled $24.7 billion in 1979, a $3.7 billion improvement over the previous year, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday.

The value of imports had exceeded exports by $28.4 billion in 1978 and $26.6 billion in 1977. The U.S. balance of trade was last in the black in 1975.

The improvement in the trade balance in 1979 occurred despite a record oil import bill of $56.7 billion for the year, 44 percent higher than the $39.5 billion paid by the United States for oil in 1978.

This jump occurred even though the volume of petroleum and oil product imports rose only 2 percent, to just over 3 billion barrels for the year. Prices rose considerably more than volume because of the doubling of prices for crude oil charged by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Overall imports in 1979 were valued at a record $206.3 billion, up 20 percent from the previous year.

At the same time, U.S. exports rose 27 percent to a record $181.26 billion.

New cancer cure fund formed

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Houston men have pledged to raise $20 million to help study interferon, believed to be a potential anti-cancer agent.

The bulk of the donations will go to Dr. Jordan U. Gutterman of the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute.

Leon Davis and Roy M. Huffington said Monday they had established the Interferon Foundation to conduct clinical trials of the substance.

Interferon is a body protein that occurs naturally to provide defense infection. It is difficult and expensive to produce artificially.

Coal sales to Japan explored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. Dick Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, who is leading an American trade delegation to the Orient in a month, says he hopes to sell tons of his state's coal to Japan.

"The Japanese are already looking for coal in the western part of the United States and will probably welcome coal from the east, too, due to their energy problems," Reubin Askew, President Carter's special trade representative, said after meeting briefly with Thornburgh.

"We hope to sell to the Japanese a resource we have in abundant supply," Thornburgh said. "We're looking at export markets that haven't been explored before."

AID CAMBODIAN REFUGEES

Students, faculty form relief committee

By ELYSE GOLDIN
State News Staff Writer

Responding to the needs of Cambodian refugees, a group of MSU students and faculty have organized a committee to aid the threatened populace.

The Health Professions Indo-China Relief Committee (H.P.I.R.C.) is comprised of students, faculty and staff in the colleges of human medicine, osteopathic medicine and department of nursing. There are approximately 15 active committee members.

Tom Broderick, a graduate student in the College of Human Medicine and one of the committee organizers, said the group has three main goals.

First, Broderick said, H.P.I.R.C. is currently collecting money for relief efforts in Thailand and Cambodia. Approximately $500 has already been raised by the group and sent to Southeast Asia via Oxfam and the International Relief Committee.

THE SECOND GOAL of the group is more difficult and will require much time and cutting through red-tape, Broderick said.

The committee is trying to organize a group of Michigan physicians and nurses interested in doing medical volunteer work in Southeast Asia.

The organization of such a medical group could be handled in one of two ways, Broderick said.

The team may consist of one physician and five nurses, working together with the International Red Cross. Otherwise, the medical team will include only MSU faculty, students and staff.

Broderick said the latter route is the more difficult of the two because it will re-

MSU professor wins major French award

A major French award, the Ordre des Palmes Academique, will be given to Jean G. Nicholas, MSU associate professor of romantic languages, today.

The honor is bestowed upon French citizens and foreigners who have demonstrated excellence in teaching or fine arts related to French culture.

The award will be presented to Nicholas by Yves Coffin, Detroit-based Consul General of France, at a ceremony in the Romance and Classical Languages Library in Wells Hall.

Georges J. Joyaux, chairperson of the Department of Romance and Classical Languages, nominated Nicholas for the award.

"I just can't believe it because the award isn't very commonly given," Nicholas said. "It didn't even occur to me that I would get it."

Nicholas began teaching at MSU in 1957. She currently teaches French composition and advises all undergraduate French majors. She received her master's and doctorate degrees from MSU and her bachelor's degree from Pennsylvania State University.

Nicholas is a member of the American Association of Teachers of French, Phi Beta Phi, Phi Beta Kappa and Alpha Lambda Delta, scholastic honoraries, and Phi Sigma Iota, a Romance Language Honorary.

Energy workshop offered

A workshop dealing with energy-efficient appliances will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Thursday in the East Lansing High School faculty center.

The workshop, offered by the East Lansing Energy Consciousness Team and the School-City Action Program, will feature Anne Field, an MSU associate professor of family ecology, who will discuss how to buy energy-efficient appliances and how to use them effectively.

The cost of the workshop is $1 with registrations being taken by the East Lansing Community Education Office at the Red Cedar School, 1110 Narcissus Drive.

Abuse shelter gets city council OK

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

A shelter for abused women and their children will soon be opening in Lansing following the Lansing City Council's OK of the project Monday night.

The council voted unanimously to grant the Council Against Domestic Assault a special use permit which allows them to operate the shelter.

Marcia Macomber, CADA executive director, said the structure, which will be the only one of its kind in the Lansing area, would house as many as 20 women and children escaping violent family situations.

Macomber said the shelter, which meets all city housing codes, will be ready to open as soon as the house is furnished.

CADA HAS SECURED federal, state, city and county funds along with private donations that will insure operation of the house for at least one year, she said. Macomber added that CADA is confident that funds for operation in the future will be easily attained.

Macomber said victims will be picked up at a pre-arranged point and then be transported to the shelter in order to keep the location of the house secret.

In other action, the council voted to transfer $327,000 from the sewer funds to pay for a study to determine the repairs that are needed to update the city's ailing sewer system.

Howard McCaffery, the public service director, said the study would cost about $1.6 million.

Although state and federal agencies are contributing funds to help pay for the study, McCaffery said the city must also contribute in order to obtain the governmental monies.

A PORTION OF Lansing's outdated sewer system currently dumps raw sewage into the Red Cedar and Grand rivers during heavy rains and when equipment malfunctions.

Total costs for revamping the system have been estimated at $310 million.

Federal and state dollars will pay for part of the project, but the city must drum up $105 million to pay for its share.

The city is considering raising property taxes or increasing sewer rates to pay for the massive project.

Wazmo wails at Dooley's

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Reviewer

After the drunken (and drug-induced) free-for-all of the Gang War concert and the glorious rock 'n' roll party atmosphere of the Romantics' show, Wazmo Nariz and Trainable turned the third "I Don't Like Mondays" bash at Dooley's over to the more cerebral/artistic side of new wave rock.

Both groups are pretty uncompromising in their unique approaches to music, with the result that there were more than a few people who loathed one or both bands, but at the same time the bulk of the audience seemed to genuinely appreciate what they had to offer.

Trainable was up first, and it was quickly apparent that the members have really gelled as a musical unit over the past few months. Monday night they were as tight as I've ever seen them, and while the chaotic exuberance of their early incarnations was missing, their increasing technical virtuosity indicates that this band should be headed for big things in the near future.

For once the P.A. at Dooley's ensured that most of Butchy and Amber Marie's vocals on songs like "High Heels Can Kill" and "Acceptable Risk" could be heard and enjoyed to their fullest, adding a dimension to the show that hasn't always been there in the past. The biggest surprise of their set came during the instrumental breaks, however, when guitarist Bum N. Out, bassist Bo' Bro' Mo, saxophonist Borgon and drummer Jonathan El cut loose on some high energy jams that turned a lot of heads around. (So why haven't you guys put out a single yet?)

Wazmo Nariz conceded on the phone last week that his band's music was definitely of the "love it or leave it" variety, and this was borne out by the fact that his set provoked both reactions Monday night. While a few people did leave (or stuck around to vocalize their distaste for the show) many more people came out of sheer curiosity and ended up as Wazband fans.

The group got off to a great start with a potent rendition of "The Heart Is Willing But The Flesh Is Weak" that showed off the band's talents to the fullest. Bassist James E. McGreevy III laid down an intricate backbeat with drummer Bruce Zelesnik, while Jeff Hill and Jeff Boynton fleshed out the sound on guitar and keyboards, respectively.

Wazmo, meanwhile, was the main visual focus as he gestured, pantomimed, and screwed himself up into frenzy at times imitating the playing of the guitar and drums. His voice — which combines David Byrne's phrasing and stuttering with Bryan Ferry's operatic depth and range — was simply amazing; swooping, bleating, and wailing as if it were another instrument in the band.

Unfortunately, the set lost some of its intensity during the next few songs, most of which weren't on his album debut Things Aren't Right. As long as the band pushed things along at full tilt everything was fine, but during these songs the pace was much more slack, and the result was Wazmo's singing became more mannered and mock-operatic.

As the set progressed things started picking up again. Songs like "Plunger," "Who Does It Hurt," "Tele-Tele-Telephone," and "This Is Your Elbow" were all delivered at a blistering pace while the guitar and synthesizer bobbed in and out of the muscular rhythms. The audience, which had been simply watching the show (in bewilderment, maybe?) took advantage of the opportunity to do some bobbing of their own.

Wazmo Nariz performed with his Wazband at Dooley's Monday night.

After leaving the stage Wazmo Nariz and his band were called back for a pair of encores, and they responded with "Germ-Proof Cleaners/Al's Radiator" and a fine version of "Checking Out the Checkout Girl." The latter song was hilarious as Wazmo blurted out "I like to shop I like to shop I like to shop I like to shop" and proceeded to pick imaginary cans off of imaginary shelves and put them into his imaginary shopping cart.

Jimmy Durante dies at 86

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jimmy Durante, the honky-tonk comic with the outsized nose whose artful mix of clowning, fractured English and heart-warming pathos endeared him to generations of Americans, died Tuesday at age 86.

Thé famed "Schnozzola," as he was known to friends and fans alike died alone in a hospital room where he had been confined for three weeks for treatment of a lung ailment.

Upon learning the news, comedian George Burns, 84, a longtime friend, said: "What can I say that the world doesn't already know? He was a fine man and a wonderful artist."

Red Buttons, another old friend, said: "I loved him. We all loved him. I am sorry to hear the news. But I am almost glad he is out of his misery."

Durante was admitted to St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica on Jan. 7, suffering from acute lung congestion. The cause of death was listed as pneumonia complicated by the effects of previous strokes, said Chris Thomas, a hospital spokesman.

None of Durante's family was present when he died, Thomas said.

After a stroke in November 1972 left him partially paralyzed and confined to a wheelchair, Durante was forced to say good night to Mrs. Calabash for the last time and retire from show business.

Throughout his career, one of his trademarks was to end his performances with, "Good night, Mrs. Calabash, wherever you are." He once confided he was referring to his first wife, who had died.

Durante's routines were a show business staple for 64 years, and he was a leading star on radio and in early television. He made nearly 30 movies and until 1972 played regular engagements in Las Vegas and on television.

He found retirement hard to accept, remaining at home with his wife, Marjorie, and their adopted daughter, Cece. They rarely went out.

So in April 1974, Durante went to New York for a Banshee luncheon attended by newspaper editors and publishers. He received an award from the Banshees and responded with a faltering rendition of his longtime trademark, "Inka Dinka Doo."

In one of his last interviews before his illness, Durante remarked after a Las Vegas performance: "I love it out there. It ain't work. To hear those people out there laugh and enjoy themselves... When you're out there, you pray to God that it'll never end."

Durante was hospitalized for several weeks in May 1978 with an upper respiratory infection and complications of the earlier stroke.

Although paralyzed, Durante continued to receive guests regularly at his Beverly Hills home. And fans continued to write and send gifts, including "Mrs. Calabash" pillows and copies of his fedora.

Durante starred in virtually every branch of show business, including vaudeville, Broadway, nightclubs, radio, television and movies.

He became a headliner in a 1928 Ziegfeld show in which he had the line: "Be nice to people on the way up. They're the same people you'll pass on the way down." That, he said later, "is a nice line to live by."

Durante loved show business, entertaining and audiences, which he said did not change much with time. (continued on page 7)

'Goodnight Mrs. Calabash, wherever you are ...'

"You put a joke in a modern dress," he said, "but the substance is the same, just as people are the same although the clothes they are wearing may be a different style. People like to laugh, and I like to make 'em laugh. That makes me happy, makin' them happy. That's my life."

Early in his career — his first job was as a razzmatazz saloon pianist on Coney Island — Durante was afraid people would laugh at him. His parents wanted him to be a more serious pianist.

But at his second job, at Terry Walsh's, Durante met a pop-eyed dancing waiter named Eddie Cantor, who advised:

"There's no future in just playing the piano. People like you, Jimmy, you ought to be telling jokes while you're playing, and maybe sing once in a while."

After playing other local clubs, Durante formed his own Dixieland band and they opened their own bistro, which was called the Club Durant because the sign painter left out the 'e' in Durante.

Durante later teamed up with singing waiter Eddie Jackson and veteran soft-shoe entertainer Lou Clayton, both of whom remained with Durante the rest of their careers. Clayton persuaded Durante to use his nose as a stage prop.

One of Durante's earliest and most popular songs was "I'm Jimmy, That Well Dressed Man." But at the time, he was not well dressed.

After the Club Durant was closed by Prohibition agents, the act played several other clubs until it broke up in 1931 when Durante got a bid from Hollywood.

Clayton became Durante's business manager until his death in 1950, and Jackson still appeared with Durante in night clubs and on television.

Friends said Durante made a lot of money in Hollywood, but he could not seem to hang onto it. He insisted on paying Clayton a third of his income, and his staff and taxes took a big bite. He was a sucker for a hard-luck story, but the fact that he was often taken did not seem to bother him. He said, "I only wish that I was a Rocking-fellow."

His first wife, Maude Jeanne Olson, whom he married in 1921, died in 1943. He married Jimmy Durante, the famed "Schnozzola," with his adopted daughter, Cecilia, in 1962. The beloved comedian died Tuesday morning after a long illness.

Marjorie Little on Dec. 14, 1960, after a courtship of 16 years. In 1962, when he was 69, the couple adopted a 6-month-old daughter, Cecilia, whom he called Cece.

Itnyre keeps opponents honest

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

The "senior citizen" of the MSU women's basketball team wants to enforce the law after graduation, but for now she is doing quite a job at keeping opponents honest.

Mary Kay Itnyre, a senior criminal justice major who wants to be a police officer, has already proved she can be an influencing force on the basketball court.

Itnyre is spending her third winter as a member of coach Karen Langeland's squad, and has led the team in scoring in each of her first two years.

A graduate of Detroit Bishop Borgess High School, Itnyre spent her freshman year at Arizona State University before coming to MSU to capture Michigan Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (MAIAW) honors as a sophomore.

THE SIX-FOOTER is averaging 13 points and 10 rebounds a game this season, but is unhappy about the Spartans' 8-7 record as well as her own play.

"We're not winning," Itnyre said. "We're doing a lot of fundamental things wrong. It's definitely not due to a lack of talent, because we have all the talent we need."

"Individually, there's not much at all to be happy about," Itnyre continued. "Overall, there has been no sense of satisfaction for me because I know I can play better. I'm still waiting to put it all together."

In a recent loss to the University of Pittsburgh, Itnyre, also known as "MK", set an MSU career scoring record by becoming the first woman basketball player to score 1,000 points.

"It really doesn't mean that much right now," Itnyre said. "But I know in a few years, it will. I guess I haven't thought that much about it."

EVEN MORE IMPRESSIVE about the record is that she did it in three years, and continues adding to it every game.

"I wouldn't mind getting 1,000 rebounds," Itnyre added, "but I don't know how close I am to that."

She had 742 caroms going into Tuesday night's game.

As far as team goals for the rest of this season are concerned, Itnyre talked about the upcoming Big Ten and State tournaments.

"I'm thinking about the Big Ten's (conference tournament) right now, and I love to play in that tournament," Itnyre said. "Then I'll start thinking about State's (state of Michigan tournament), and I'd love to see us beat the University of Detroit in the finals."

Itnyre said she has not even thought about playing in the women's professional league after graduation, but that she would give it some thought if contacted.

"I don't even know what they look for in a player," Itnyre said, "and right now, my career is more important to me."

"MSU has a very good criminal justice program, and looking back, I think I did the right thing when I came here."

Itnyre admits that the cold Michigan weather has been hard to take at times, but that playing and going to school at MSU is something she would never trade.

"When I came here, I was young," Itnyre said. "It was an older team back then and I never thought I'd see the day when I'd be the old one on a young team. But I've learned a lot."

State News/Mark A. Deremo

Reaching to take the ball away from the University of Pittsburgh's Anne Rehm is MSU senior Mary Kay Itnyre. The Spartan co-captain topped the 1,000-point plateau for her MSU career in the game played earlier this month.

TALKS TO ST. LOUIS

Gibson to play football?

By ROB RAINS

United Press International

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Kirk Gibson may be wondering what a pro football career would be like after all.

Gibson, a former All-America football wide receiver at MSU signed a baseball contract with the Detroit Tigers out of college and has been penciled in to the Tigers' starting outfield by manager Sparky Anderson.

But a spokesperson for the St. Louis Cardinals confirmed Monday that Gibson and his agent, Doug Baldwin, were to meet with team officials Tuesday to discuss the possibility of Gibson signing a pro football contract.

"He and his agent are coming into town and we're going to discuss his future," said Joe Sullivan, Cardinals' vice president for operations.

Gibson was drafted in the seventh round by the Cardinals last year even though he already had signed with the Tigers.

"We drafted him knowing that we couldn't do anything about it immediately," Sullivan said.

Gibson and his agent were not available for comment.

However, Jim Campbell, president and general manager of the Tigers, said Gibson was under contract with Detroit and could not sign a football agreement while the contract is in effect.

"I don't know anything about it and I can assure you I'm not worried," Campbell said.

The Tigers made room in the outfield for Gibson, also an All-America baseball player with the Spartans, by trading Ron Leflore to Montreal during baseball's winter meetings.

Anderson has said Gibson will be his center fielder against right-handed pitchers even though spring training is more than a month away.

The Cardinals, however, may be looking for help at wide receiver because Mel Gray, a nine-year veteran, had only 25 receptions last year — his fewest since 1972 — and scored only one touchdown in the team's 5-11 season.

Gibson spent most of last season with Evansville in the American Association, hitting .245 in 89 games with nine home runs, 42 RBI and 20 stolen bases. In 12 games with the Tigers at the end of the year he batted .237.

Relief committee

(continued from page 5) quire University cooperation. H.P.I.R.C. hopes that MSU will sponsor faculty members, either by paying them their regular salaries or by considering the time abroad as a sabbatical program.

THE COMMITTEE IS currently writing a proposal regarding faculty members, which it will submit to the university. The group hopes to receive a response from the university within the next three months so it may actively begin sending medical personnel to Southeast Asia.

So far, the group has received one medical volunteer and several inquiries into working abroad.

The third interest of H.P.I.R.C. is to encourage discussion among Michigan health professionals regarding diseases which may be unique to Cambodian refugees immigrating to the East Lansing area.

Broderick said malaria, diphtheria and tuberculosis are among those diseases more common to refugees than to Americans.

About 500 Cambodian refugees enter Michigan each month, he said.

Although the committee's interests in Cambodia spawned in October when the government and mass media put heavy emphasis on the problem, Broderick said the crisis is a continuing one - even when it is not publicized.

He said that nearly half of Cambodia's native population of seven million has died since the mid-1970s.

In 1973, Cambodia had about 2,000 native physicians; today there are only about 40, Broderick said.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported in Tuesday's State News that no college deferments will be granted if registration for a draft is approved.

Carol Lintean, PIRGIM-MSU

campus organizer, said if Carter's plan is approved, there will probably be only limited college deferments, possible for students in medical programs, for example.

Crim says no work-study violation

By SUSIE BENKELMAN
State News Staff Writer

MSU Placement Service officials have been assured that work-study students in state representatives' offices are not doing partisan work, resolving a grievance filed earlier this month.

James Bowling, assistant director of student employment said Tuesday MSU Placement Services has been told by House Speaker Bobby Crim and work-study students that the students are not doing political work, which would be a violation of federal work-study rules.

Brett Dreyfus, a junior majoring in political science-public administration charged Jan. 14 that Rep. Dana Wilson, D-Hazel Park, was assigning him political tasks such as mailing Christmas cards and letters to constituents.

Dreyfus worked as a work-study student for Wilson during November and December.

Bowling said the office checked out Dreyfus' charges with work-study students working with representatives and none said they were doing partisan work.

"Wilson said he (Dreyfus) couldn't really be relied on to do work for the standing committees and so he was given menial tasks," Bowling said. "All of the students we talked to said the jobs they had were worthwhile."

Wilson was "bending over backwards" to keep Dreyfus working at the Capitol, Bowling said.

After the grievance was filed, Wilson denied that Dreyfus was doing partisan work and said he assigned Dreyfus with "nit-pick" work because the student was unreliable.

Wilson also said that he believed Dreyfus made the charges to draw political attention to himself because he is running for Ingham County Commissioner in the 19th District.

Wilson said Tuesday he had no further comment on the case.

Dreyfus denied the charge that he was trying to politically advance himself with the grievance.

"If this thing was politically motivated, I'd still be pursuing it and I'd want to see punitive action taken against Wilson," he said. "The point of this thing was to correct illegal work-study procedures."

Dreyfus said he was never assigned to a committee and was not doing work directly related to a committee.

"I had admittedly been late for work, but I thought that it had been resolved at the time with Wilson," Dreyfus said.

"I will continue to pursue it even if I lose the election," the 18-year-old Republican said.
