Carter leads Maine caucuses

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — President Carter led Sen. Edward M. Kennedy Sunday night as Maine Democrats voted their presidential preferences in political town meetings, and the president declared he had won in the challenger's own New England territory.

With 73 percent of Maine's town Democratic caucuses reporting, Carter had 44 percent of the vote to 39 percent for Kennedy, the Massachusetts Democrat. California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. was third with 13 percent.

Carter, spending the weekend at his Camp David, Md., mountaintop retreat, issued a statement saying, "I especially appreciate the hard work and dedication of the thousands of supporters and volunteers in the state whose efforts made this victory possible."

"I regret that international circumstances made it impossible for me to travel to Maine during this campaign and I look forward to the time when I am able to once again personally and directly seek the support of my fellow Democrats around the country," the statement said.

"BOTH SEN. KENNEDY and Gov. Brown ran strong, well-organized races, and I congratulate them on their campaigns," the Carter statement said.

In Maine, White House press secretary Jody Powell said it was a major setback for Kennedy.

However, Maine Gov. Joseph Brennan said the outcome was a victory for the challenger because Carter was not getting a clear majority. Brennan, Kennedy's state campaign manager, said the contest was too close to call and then declared, "Tonight is a great victory."

Brennan contended that anything short of 50 percent of the vote was a setback for Carter.

Powell scoffed at that and said a victory by one percentage point or one delegate was good enough for him. "Close doesn't count except in horseshoes," he said.

"IF HE CAN'T WIN here where he has everything going for him... then where do you win," Powell said of Kennedy.

Kennedy, in Boston, said, "I think we're doing very well" in Maine.

His state campaign managers said the final count would be close and Carter would be held below expectations. "For us, in a way, it was a fight for survival," said Peter Meade, the senator's Maine coordinator. Vice President Walter F. Mondale had claimed overwhelming popular support for the president in Maine.

But the caucuses were less a test of popular support than of political organization.

POWELL SAID THE margin didn't make any difference. He said the Carter camp estimated that the final margin would be about 8 percent.

"We've all known all along that a win by Carter on Kennedy's home court would be a major setback for the loser," he said.

Powell said the same thing would be true in reverse were Kennedy to defeat Carter in one of the southern primary elections one month away.

He said Kennedy was able to pour organizational manpower into Maine.

"He's sort of had the field to himself with the president locked up in the White House," the press secretary said.

KENNEDY PROTESTS THAT at every campaign stop, demanding that the president come out and debate. But Powell said there is no prospect of a change soon in Carter's insistence that he must remain in Washington to deal with foreign crises.

While he questioned where Kennedy could win if not in Maine, Powell said it would be presumptuous of him to suggest that the challenger should withdraw. Kennedy has said he will not.

Steven Smith, Kennedy's national campaign manager, said the Kennedy organization was conducting a count of its own and that it showed the senator from Massachusetts narrowly ahead of the president.

However, with 355 of the 486 city and town caucuses reported, the Democratic State Committee count stood this way:

Carter, 11,550 or 44 percent, for 684 local delegates, or 47 percent of the delegates elected so far.

Kennedy, 10,234, or 39 percent, for 568 delegates, or 39 percent.

Brown, 3,516 or 13 percent, for 196 delegates, or 13 percent.

Uncommitted, 385 or 4 percent for 22 delegates or 1 percent.

In Boston, Brown declared that "Maine is the first place where my campaign has really begun to take off."

The formal opening of the 1980 Winter Olympics is just days away, and the peak of Whiteface Mountain in Lake Placid, N.Y. is still without snow Sunday. Ordinarily snow would be covering the peak but the area has had very little snowfall and the temperature is running about 60 degrees above the same period in 1979.

IN HILDEBRAND ORDER

'U' to define reinstatement

By LOUISE WHALL
State News Staff Writer

Despite a federal judge's ruling that MSU reinstate John R. Hildebrand in the department of social science, the former associate professor's ordeal is not yet over.

U.S. District Judge Wendell A. Miles released an order Friday specifying that Hildebrand be reinstated spring term, but left questions unanswered regarding rank, tenure, and salary.

The University plans to continue the appeal process which started on Jan. 21, MSU Attorney Byron Higgins, said.

Hildebrand is very optimistic over the latest development in his case.

"IT'S ANOTHER BIG step forward," Hildebrand said. "I've always been optimistic that I would win in the long run."

"The two jury verdicts have indicated that the facts are on my side," he said.

Miles awarded Hildebrand $249,392 in back pay plus simple interest at the rate of 6 percent. Hildebrand's attorney, Kenneth Laing Jr., had originally requested compounded interest, which would almost double the amount of the simple interest. No social security contributions were added to the award.

Miles also ruled Douglas Dunham, former chairperson of the department of social science, and Clinton A. Snyder, professor of social science, must pay $74.94 each in punitive damages instead of the original $50 each.

If any future verdicts are reached in the appeals process, Miles' orders would be negated.

Although Miles stated at the hearing last Thursday that MSU should find temporary employment for Hildebrand until spring term, no mention of it was made in the written decision.

IT NOW REMAINS for the University to decide at what rank and salary Hildebrand will be reinstated, as well as the question of tenure.

C. Patric "Lash" Larowe, MSU Faculty Grievance Officer, said the University could use the formula usually employed by the National Labor Relations Board and the Michigan Employment Relations Commission.

"If Hildebrand had been fired for union activity instead of for exercising his First Amendment Rights, the NLRB or the MERC would order that to make him whole, he'd have to return at the salary he'd be earning now if he hadn't been fired," Larowe said.

"As to tenure and rank, if Hildebrand had been reappointed in 1969 instead of being (continued on page 2)

JMC to retain independent status — Winder

By LOUISE WHALL
State News Staff Writer

James Madison College will retain its autonomous status, Provost Clarence L. Winder announced Friday to members of the JMC faculty and administrative staff.

"The conclusion is reasonably clear that I take no action," Winder said. The independent status of JMC is retained, he added.

Winder's announcement came four and a half months after he originally requested a review of the college's organization structure.

Winder's announcement was greeted with applause from the JMC faculty and staff. Katherine See, an assistant professor in JMC made a motion "to express appreciation to the provost's office for the seriousness to which they gave the concern." The motion was seconded with further applause.

"I'm overjoyed," John Paynter, acting dean of JMC said. "Our autonomy is in fact crucial to doing our business."

Paynter added that he would like to see informal ties developed with the Colleges of Social Science, Business and Arts and Letters that would not undermine the autonomy of JMC.

On Sept. 24, 1979, Winder asked for a review of the structure but not the programs of JMC. He noted some advantages that could accrue as a result of reorganization.

"The focus of concern has been and is on problems I see being related to an academic unit that is small and limited in academic focus," Winder said. Another problem is the probability of increasing isolation from core disciplines and limited internal flexibility, he added.

A six member task force was appointed to study the problem and submit a report to the Academic Council for review in a consultative and advisory mode. The task force considered six major issues in its evaluation.

Its major concerns were with the protection of JMC faculty in the event of a general decline in enrollment, faculty flexibility, cooperative liaisons with the College of Social Science. Other concerns of the Task Force were the loss of students attracted to JMC programs and environment, the amount of JMC representation in academic governance and whether the JMC budget would be affected by incorporation.

The task force voted 5-1 to retain the autonomous structure of JMC. Winder submitted the report to the Academic Council on Jan. 7. After a short discussion at its meeting the following week, the Council voted overwhelmingly to accept the recommendations of the task force.

Winder has also submitted a third option to the Council on Jan. 9 suggesting "semi-autonomy" for JMC. He said that semi-autonomy would allow for the long term utilization of scarce resources.

The final decision on the future of JMC rested in the Provost's office.

"In my judgment, some of the issues you face could be attenuated by a relationship with the College of Social Science," Winder said.

Paynter met with Gwen Andrew, dean of the College of Social Science, to discuss conditions for a semi-autonomous incorporation of JMC with the College of Social Science.

"The two Deans looked very carefully and did not find a way to work out conditions which both of them can endorse," Winder said.

Winder said he based his final decision on the Task Force Report, the Academic Council discussion and the meetings of the two deans. All recommended the status quo prevail.

Rebels recapture 2 towns from Soviets, report says

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Moslem rebels recaptured two towns in Badakhshan province in northeast Afghanistan on Sunday and laid siege to the capital city of Faizabad in bitter fighting with Soviet troops, a Pakistani newspaper reported.

The daily newspaper Jang said the rebels seized the towns of Tashkan Arbo and Bagh in the Kasma district of Badakhshan, and that fighting continued in nearby Zebak. It said they seized arms, ammunition and food from the fleeing Soviet troops.

In Moscow, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda charged that the United States — with the backing of Pakistan and China — is striving to step up offensive operations by the Afghan guerrillas.

The Soviet news media made no direct mention of Western reports that in coming weeks Moscow may withdraw some of the estimated 90,000 Russian troops now in Afghanistan.

U.S. OFFICIALS have said they expect the Soviets will make only a "cosmetic" withdrawal in an attempt to defuse Western opposition to the intervention.

A Pravda commentary repeated the Kremlin's previously stated position that if outside "interference" in Afghanistan ceases, "the limited Soviet military contingent... will return home."

But Pravda indicated that Moscow does not foresee any significant reduction in rebel fighting against the Marxist government (continued on page 2)

Debate rages over registration of women for draft

Courts will have final say on registration of women

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — While Congress seems cool toward registering women for the draft, legal scholars say no matter what happens on Capitol Hill, the courts most likely will have the final say on whether women join men in registration lines.

And in the courts, those advocating the registration of women as well as men, including President Carter and his advisers, are expected to carry the upper hand, say many legal experts.

"Whichever way it goes in Congress, there will be a suit filed," says Thomas Emerson, a professor of constitutional law at Yale University. "There's no way that the courts can avoid it."

The American Civil Liberties Union already has said it will challenge any attempt to register only men. "The day that the president signs male only registration, we will be in court," vowed David Landau, a staff attorney in the ACLU's Washington office.

Phyllis Schlafly, a leading opponent of the Equal Rights Amendment and harsh critic of women's registration, said she will focus her efforts on Congress, which must approve such registration.

"THERE'S NO WAY Congress will register women," she insisted in an interview. But if unsuccessful on Capitol Hill, she does not rule out some court action, although the basis of such a suit on constitutional grounds is not clear.

After Carter announced Friday that he wants to register both men and women 18 and 19 years of age, White House officials said a major factor in the decision was the prospect of court challenges if women were excluded.

If the president had decided to register only men, said Sarah Weddington, a lawyer and presidential adviser on women's issues, "there was a feeling that a lawsuit against Carter would be successful" in light of a number of recent Supreme Court rulings on women's equality.

Carter said in a statement his decision to include women "is a recognition of the reality that both men and women are working members of our society... There is no distinction possible, on the basis of ability or performance."

A number of experts on constitutional law agree.

THEY NOTE THAT when the all-male draft was in effect, various court challenges were rebuffed on the grounds that military necessity and national defense outweighed consideration of sexual equality.

But "the whole court position on differentiation of men and women has changed... the court now is looking much more carefully at discrimination," said Emerson. He added that it also has become clear "that women in the modern army are capable of doing many kinds of jobs that men do."

Andrew Kaufman of Harvard Law School said the courts in recent years have required that there be "substantial justification" for discrimination — a much stricter view than the "reasonableness" standard which prevailed when the last draft cases were heard.

The Supreme Court has yet to hear a draft case.

President's proposal to register women has groups grappling over equal rights

By LESA DOLL
State News Staff Writer

President Carter's announcement last week on the inclusion of women in draft registration has set a historical precedent which has left many people grappling over the question of equal rights.

Women's groups in the Lansing area have taken different stands on the issue, but many contend that if men should be drafted women should be also.

"We have to realize people who are participating in the women's movement have a wide range of feelings," said Patricia Leuzzi of the Michigan Women's Commission. "We feel safe in saying when and if congress requires men and women to register that is fair and equitable."

The Michigan Women's Commission recently approved a statement saying women should be included in the draft, but also included in the passage that the draft should only be implemented in cases of serious national threat.

THE NATIONAL ORGANIZATION of Women has taken a definitive stand against any registration. Paula Yenson, director of the greater Lansing chapter of NOW, said their stand is not contradictory to the quest for women's rights that the group is acclaimed for.

"Historically, the draft has been unfair," she said.

Many individuals also contend no one of either sex should be drafted.

"I'm very glad that Carter has brought it to the attention of all people regardless of sex that they have no choice," said Sue Cocciarelli, of the Lansing Women's Bureau. "It's imperative for men and women to unite (against the draft)."

Students at MSU, also differed in their views of women and the draft.

"I PERSONALLY DON'T want to be drafted," said Robynn Resler, an MSU sophomore. "I think it should be more on a voluntary basis."

Resler said that mandatory conscription should only be implemented according to "the severity of the situation."

Cyrus Johnson, a freshmen, said only women involved in the women's movement should go. "I think women's libbers should go," he said. "I think the women who are hollering 'equal rights' should go. It would be good for them to prove they are competent with men."

"IF YOU WANT EQUALITY, you should go all the way," said Randy Jacobs, a junior. "I suppose they should be in combat if they're physically capable."

"I would be for it (the draft for women) if I could be assured ERA would pass," senior Maureen Mayr said. Paula Yenson added that ERA is needed — especially now.

"One of the arguments against ERA had been that it would get women drafted." "We can get drafted without ERA," she said.

Vance's speech irks olympic committee

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Members of the International Olympic Committee reacted angrily Sunday to Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's appeal for a boycott of the Summer Games in Moscow. One member called the appeal a "gross discourtesy."

Monique Berlioux, the IOC's salaried director, said members were shocked by Vance's remarks at the opening of the IOC session Saturday night. Vance declared the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan made Moscow an unsuitable place for the Olympic Games, calling for the Games to be moved or canceled if Russian troops are not withdrawn.

"In the history of the IOC, this was the first time a purely political speech had been made at the opening of a session," she said.

David McKenzie of Australia said, "I considered it a gross discourtesy."

Some IOC members, including those from South America, were talking of possibly deferring a decision on the Moscow Games and calling another session later to review the situation.

Juan Antonio Samaranch of Spain, the IOC chief of protocol and an executive board member said: "Some members are considering putting the matter off for a month or two, if that is the best way to save the Games."

The Ingham County Board of Commissioners approved a plan Thursday to make the budget preparation process easier this year.

A majority of the board voted to give the county controller more input in preparing a recommended budget.

In the past, the controller never got involved until after the board had made its recommendations. Now the controller will work with the various departments in preparing a budget recommendation for board approval.

Another problem with last year's budget process was inter-committee bickering, said board Chairperson Tom Hoisington, D-Lansing.

HOISINGTON PROPOSED THAT the plan involve the county controller to avoid controversies similar to those that arose last year. Controversy concerning the motives of commissioners for approving certain funds and for attempting to cut other wasted valuable time, he said.

Under the Uniform Budgeting Act, effective April 1, the controller prepares a recommended budget unless the board provides for another method.

Commissioner Jess Sobel, D-

East Lansing, one of the two commissioners to vote against the recommendation, said the board should be making all the decisions rather than delegating them to an unelected county controller.

"If we allow the controller to submit a recommended budget, we are giving a lot of power to him," he said.

Commissioner Gregory Neff, D-Lansing, who also voted no on the recommendation, agreed the decisions should be made by the board, because only the board members have to answer to their constituents' requests.

BUT FINANCE CHAIRPERSON Bill Sweet, D-Holt, said the controller's recommendations are not binding. The board retains the power to overrule the recommendations and change the budget.

Commissioner Frank Guerriero, R-Mason, also favored the new plan. "We should put the budget in the hands of professional people," Guerriero said, "and allow the full board to establish a timetable and the percentage allocations for each department."

ment in Kabul. "Facts go to show that they in Washington do not want to part with their designs," Pravda said.

"Zbigniew Brzezinski's trip to Pakistan, his talks with Pakistani authorities and backstage collusion with Peking — all this clearly shows that they intend, despite everything, to broaden their thrust into Afghanistan," wrote commentator Yuri Zhukov.

The Pravda commentary added: "It is not fortuitous that now they are talking loudly in Washington about bringing together the rebel gangs smuggled into Afghanistan and turning them into some sort of army."

Zhukov said the United States has been exerting pressure with "unceremonious rudeness" on its North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies in an attempt to gain support for countermeasures against Moscow.

unlawfully fired, his reappointment would have carried tenure with it," Larowe said.

Hildebrand was dismissed from MSU in August 1969, before an official faculty grievance procedure existed. No reasons were given at that time to non-tenured faculty members who were dismissed.

HE SPENT THE year following his dismissal appealing the decision through the University judiciary system. In 1970, he filed two unfair labor practice charges with the Michigan Employment Relations Commission which were rejected.

Hildebrand then filed suit in the Federal District Court in Grand Rapids in 1971, charging denial of his constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and of due process of law.

A jury ruled in October 1974 that Hildebrand should be granted tenure with back pay. Miles said the decision of the jury was advisory and subsequently ruled against him in March 1977.

Hildebrand appealed Miles' decision on grounds that he did not have a fair trial to the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals.

In January, a federal jury ordered reinstatement, back pay and punitive damages. They decided his first, but not fourteenth, amendment rights had been violated by his discharge.

MSU General Counsel Leland Carr Jr. then filed the current motion to appeal with the U.S. District Court of Western Michigan in Grand Rapids.

Fight continues over drinking age

By NUNZIO LUPO
State News Staff Writer

A petition to lower the legal drinking age in Michigan from 21 to 19 is now being circulated across the state as the battle for young people to consume alcohol continues.

The petition, begun circulated by ASMSU and a statewide coalition called Citizens for a Fair Drinking Age, is already available in MSU residence halls and will soon be available at tables in other campus buildings.

Supporters hope to get as many as 350,000 signatures on the petition by the July 7 deadline in order to put the question before Michigan voters in the Nov. 4 general election. The petition would partially reverse the effects of Proposal D, a referendum approved by Michigan voters last November that raised the legal drinking age to 21.

The petition would lower the legal drinking age to 19 — the drinking age Michigan would have had if Proposal D had not passed.

The 19 year old limit, signed into law in April 1978 by Gov. William G. Milliken, was an effort by state lawmakers to keep alcohol out of Michigan high schools.

Tom Jaworski, director of ASMSU Legislative Affairs, said the petition is only going for the 19-year-old drinking age because "it's politically realistic."

"At 18, you have too many people worried about alcohol in the high schools," he said.

Jaworski said 18 year olds will probably sign the petition, though it will not give them drinking rights immediately.

"I think they're going to look at it in the sense that it's only going to be one year instead of three years before they can drink," he said.

Citizens for a Fair Drinking Age joined with ASMSU after the student government group filed the wording of the petition with the Secretary of State's Office last spring.

The two groups need 286,000 signatures to garner a spot on the November general election ballot.

"We're looking more toward 350,000 signatures to get because of the invalidation rate," Jaworski said.

Petitions will be available at tables this week in the Union. People who want to help circulate the petitions should stop by 326 Student Services Bldg.

Jaworski said volunteers are needed to circulate the petitions in student neighborhoods and apartment complexes.

Petitions are also being circulated on about 40 other college campuses in Michigan, said Douglas Hargett, executive director of Citizens for a Fair Drinking Age.

In order to sign the petition, people must be registered voters in the state of Michigan. Out-of-state students are eligible to sign if they are registered in Michigan.

Students can register in 326 Student Services Bldg. or the East Lansing City Hall, 410 Abbott Road.

Jaworski said that because of student attitudes, he is confident ASMSU and Citizens for a Fair Drinking Age will be successful in their efforts to get the proposal before voters.

"They're having a lot of their rights stripped and they're getting p----- off about it," he said.

Couple seeks 5th win in MS dance-a-thon, prepare for months

By NUNZIO LUPO
State News Staff Writer

Couple No. 12, familiar to followers of the Delta Tau Delta MS Dance for Strength, will step on the dance floor in Meridian Mall again on Friday when the 7th annual dance-a-thon gets underway.

Rick Young, an insurance agent, and Denise Gazzarri, a speech and language pathologist, plan to dance together to raise money for multiple sclerosis for the fifth time.

Young and Gazzarri, who raised $63,339.54 of last year's $91,178.10 total, have won the who gather one weekend a year to raise money to fight MS, a disease that handicaps the nervous systems of adults between the ages of 18 and 35.

The dance-a-thon is sponsored by Delta Tau Delta Fraternity and the Miller Brewing Co.

Delta Tau Delta will be registering couples until 3:30 p.m. Friday, a half-hour before the dancing begins. Pledge sheets and registration forms are available at the Delta Tau Delta house, 330 N. Harrison Road.

The couples will dance from 4

At noon Sunday I will have danced 500 hours for multiple sclerosis — Rick Young, an insurance agent dance-a-thon every year since they began dancing together.

"At noon Sunday I will have danced 500 hours for multiple sclerosis," declared Young, who danced in the marathon twice before Denise became his partner.

But this year, their yearly 50-hour partnership, which began when they were MSU students living in Wonders Hall, is a little different. Rick and Denise have plans to make their partnership permanent on May 31, when they get married.

Young said he and Denise had not planned to dance this year, but decided they would after they received calls from veteran dancers who wanted them to participate again.

More than likely, Young and Gazzarri, who spend months preparing for the annual event, will also win again.

With the exception of last year, however, Young and Gazzarri have never accepted their prize money. Instead, they have donated the prize money to MS.

Young said they accepted the two $500 scholarships last year to pay for expenses — mostly telephone bills — that they incurred trying to get sponsors.

The color television they also won last year will be one prize given away in a raffle to raise money for multiple sclerosis.

A 1980 Outlass and a trip for two to Toronto will also be prizes in the raffle.

But Young and Gazzarri are only two of the 45 or so couples p.m. Friday to 7 p.m. Sunday, with a half-hour break every four hours and five hours to sleep Friday and Saturday night.

Besides getting blisters and aching feet, the dancers will be fed by local restaurants and will have a chance at one of the many prizes.

First prize, which goes to the couple who raises the most for MS, will be the choice of two $500 scholarships or a Caribbean cruise.

Participants from past MS Dances agree, however, that a person can get something else out of being in the dance-a-thon! It's a way to have fun and do something good.

WORKSHOPS THROUGH FEB. 28

Financial aid workshops begin

Workshops to facilitate the confusing process of applying for financial aid are being offered to MSU students beginning today.

The workshops will continue through Feb. 28 and will be held in various campus buildings.

The workshops are sponsored by the Office of Financial Aids. The entire Financial Aid staff will participate in the sessions.

The program is designed to give students general financial aid information. Applications forms will also be provided.

The first workshop will be held at 7 tonight in the Red Cedar School Library. A workshop will be held Tuesday in Brody Complex at 7:30 p.m. in the Bryan TV Lounge.

Other workshops will be conducted on:

- Feb. 18 at 7:30 p.m. in Mayo East Lounge, and at Akers Hall in East Complex.

- Feb. 19 at 7:30 p.m. in the Bailey TV Lounge.

- Feb. 20 at 7:30 p.m. in Classroom 134 of Hubbard Hall and in Wonders Kiva.

- Feb. 25 at 7:30 p.m. in McDonel Hall.

- Feb. 26 at 7:30 p.m. in McDonel Hall and Snyder Hall Cafeteria.

- Feb. 27 at 7 p.m. in Room 10 Spartan Village School.

- Feb. 27 at 7:30 p.m. in Shaw Hall.

E.L. businesses fight check bouncers

Law enforcement agencies, banks work together in combined effort to slow increase in white collar crime

By GARY PIATEK
State News Staff Writer

So you've written a bad check that your bank account can't cover. You'll take care of it next week, no big deal, right? Wrong.

With the rise in the amount of bad checks being written in the area, local businesses are taking a firmer stand against this type of white collar crime.

Although a local bank official said most students who write a bad check do so because of bookkeeping errors, he said he believes check fraud is on the rise.

"This is the way today (bad checks)," said Jerry Willis, branch administrator for East Lansing State Bank. "As money gets tighter, people resort to these kind of things."

Willis said area bank officials are now working with local police officers to combat the problem of bad checks.

A CHECK IS considered bad is the check writer doesn't have sufficient funds to cover the check, if the account doesn't exist, or if the checks are stolen or forged. Willis said bank officials meet informally once a month with police to discuss current checking problems facing each bank.

"We're never going to stop it," Willis said, "but we are slowing it."

Another method used by all area banks for slowing the problem of bad checks is a service called Comp-U-Check.

Comp-U-Check, which operates out of Detroit, keeps a list of all bad checks that have been passed to its customers. The service also lists closed and fraudulent accounts.

COMP-U-CHECK CUSTOMERS call the service when they suspect a check may be bad and Comp-U-Check checks its list. If the check is found on the list, the Comp-U-Check customer usually doesn't accept the check.

Although East Lansing merchants disagree as to whether there is a rise in bad checks or not, many use a similar checking service.

Town & Country, 411 E. Grand River Ave.; Savvy, 309 E. Grand River Ave.; and His Lady, 321 E. Grand River Ave., use Check Reporting Service.

CRS, a Lansing based service, supplies each client with a list of possible bad checking accounts. If a merchant finds a check listed, the merchant has the option of accepting the check or not.

If the merchant decides to accept the check, the check is sent to CRS and CRS pays the merchant 96 to 98 percent of the amount of the check, good or bad.

"If we cash the check, the check is ours," said Tom Gerlach, a partner in CRS. "We absorb the loss if it turns out to be a bad check."

Hosler's, 203 E. Grand River Ave., doesn't use CRS but has taken unique precautions against bad checks.

"WE REQUIRE A THUMBPRINT for every check written over $20," Judy Hosler, manager of Hosler's, said. "We've been doing it for four years and it has helped a bit."

Hosler said the number of bad checks her store has received has almost doubled over recent years.

"We require a lot of identification, but we still have lost about $400 over the last year," Hosler said. She said that is about $300 above normal.

Like most merchants that find the check you gave them has bounced, Hosler's will notify the person or their parents by phone.

If there is no response, the store is then required to send the customer a registered letter explaining the problem and asking them to pay the bill within five days. If there is still no response, the police are alerted.

"We're not a collection agency," said East Lansing Police Detective Ray Carter. "If we are alerted, we generally submit it to the prosecutor and issue a warrant."

He said the offense is considered as a misdemeanor when the amount is less than $50. If found guilty the person could have to spend 90 days in jail and pay $100 fine.

IF A BAD CHECK is written for $50 or more, the check writer could be charged with a felony and be sentenced to a year in jail and fined $500.

Carter said if a person writes three bad checks in three days, the check writer could get put in jail for up to two years and fined $500.

The penalties get progressively stiffer, all the way to 14 years in jail for forging a check.

'Thumbs down'

When it comes to bad checks, Hosler's clothing store says thumbs down. Freshman Brenda Calfin and other customers are required to affix a thumb print on the back of any check used at the store.

Petitions submitted for council positions

Sixteen students have submitted petitions to fill the six representative-at-large positions open on Student Council.

The Student Council members are full voting members on the Academic Council, the All-University academic governance body.

The representative-at-large positions are divided into three categories. The first section is three non-white male or female students, the second section is two non-white female students and one position is undesignated.

Three students petitioned for the first category, Morgann L. Jackson, freshman, natural science; Frederick Gaddy, junior, business; and Chuckie Eaddy, freshman, religious studies.

In the non-white female category, six women petitioned for the two positions. They are Patrice R. Kelley, freshman, communication arts and sciences; Pamela G. Miller, sophomore, agriculture and natural resources; Alivia Moss, freshman, no preference; Stephanie A. Robb, freshman, communication arts and sciences; Sharon L. Seaward, sophomore, communication arts and sciences; and Kelly Shaw, sophomore, social science.

The largest response was in the undesignated category where seven students petitioned for one position. The students are Larry A. Brunink, sophomore, communication arts and sciences; Lynn R. Clay, sophomore, engineering; Dennis G. Jones, junior, social science; Thomas Mannisto, freshman, Lyman Briggs; Amanda Mitchell, sophomore, communication arts and sciences; Ellen M. Riedel, freshman, Lyman Briggs; and Hershael York, sophomore, arts and letters.

Last year only two petitions were received for the six representative-at-large positions. Earvin "Magic" Johnson was elected by a write-in campaign but refused the position which went to Alta Perry, a senior majoring in English.

The at-large elections will be held during spring term registration. The members will serve for the 1980-81 academic year.

Assault on the 'national malaise'

Now that the United States has taken a firm stand against the Soviet Union, attention has been diverted from our domestic problems and redirected at staking our claim in the West's oil lifeline. A tenuous access to energy has spawned a sort of paranoia, rooted in the fears of Soviet expansion in vital areas and subsequent western economic collapse.

Fears of such possibilities have drastically altered the mood of the nation from the optimism of a peaceful co-existence to a defensive strategy aimed at securing American holdings at any cost. Ingrained in the idea of military reprisal is the notion that alternatives will not suffice, and that some resources are worth having in exchange for the worldwide cooperative efforts that characterized Soviet-American relations throughout most of the '70s.

It has become popular, almost chic, to speak of the "national malaise" as if it were an irreversible phenomenon. When conversation turns to Soviet intentions, the failures of detente, or the lessons to be learned from Vietnam, the easiest response is to sink into a quagmire of hazy catchphrases which can do little more than obscure the problem at hand. American influence, we lament knowingly, is on the wane, as it has been for the last 30 years. Soviet intentions are clear and unmistakable. Detente is dead.

Not surprisingly, indulgence in such rhetoric soon gives way to a search for scapegoats, and regardless of the targets we may choose, fingers are pointed hastily and with little regard to the consequences. The subjects of our scorn are selected to square with our predetermined frames of reference; a clear-cut, good-and-evil approach to world affairs minimizes dissent within our own minds and assures us that we are unmistakably infallible. Depending on one's predilections, the sorry state of the world is due either to a lack of cooperation or an overabundance of blind faith; to American imperialism or the Soviet drive for world domination. On an individual basis, it is comforting, undemanding mode of thought, its only drawback being that it offers no real solutions to anything.

When individual opinions agglutinate, they become throw-away trends. A scant two months ago, "co-existence" was the catchword and arms control seemed a reasonable means to an end. Enter Afghanistan, and the idea of co-existence is berated as naive, foolish and condescending, and arms control gives way to breakneck military escalation. Rumors of war are tossed about with little concern for their impact on governmental decisions, and if the substance of those decisions is any indication, the intensity of the present public fervor is only exceeded by its omnipotence.

To be sure, this latest American uprising also has its roots in history. Talk of war is rife with allusions to Nazi Germany, Korea and Vietnam, three markedly different arenas of conflict in which American responses varied widely. Taken at face value, those three conflicts have been naively interpreted as being indicative of the decline of American influence and willingness to fight. If we scored a stunning victory in Europe, we only compromised in Korea; we lost in Vietnam. Simple-minded as this comparison might be, it has given rise to the present atmosphere of frustration and aggression. Americans, or so the latest polls would tell us, are sick and tired of being pushed around.

What tends to go unheeded in the heightening intensity of global conflict is consideration of long-term outlook. Cries of futility in co-existing with the Soviets are fashionable right now, yet they blindly accept the present chilling of relations as an inflexible precedent, the result of mistakes the Soviets made and now must live with. Such beliefs do more to erode East-West relations than any acts of aggression, and indeed make it more difficult to reproach nations with whom we are at odds.

The United States has already resorted to the method of restrained reason during the crises of the last few months, and is probably in a better position because of it. Rather than flexing our military muscles, a strategy that sadly enough garnered a fair amount of support, America put its bargaining power to work in the hostage crisis and abstained from reprimanding countries in which our embassies were overrun. When President Carter froze Iranian assets, he was undoubtedly seeking to avert harsher measures he may have been pressured to implement. But our temperance has paid off. We are closer to a settlement with Iran over the hostages and have not lost any ground with Muslim allies in countries that, strategically speaking, are more important now than ever.

In reflecting on the path to peace the United States has charted so far, it would be inconsistent to overreact toward the actions of the Soviet Union. Too many are willing to drop detente like a hot potato, send aid to countries that are less than favorite sons and admonish our adversaries with military ultimatums. Soviet tampering with Afghanistan has alarmed the nation to the point of favoring the resumption of covert CIA activities with public support. In the midst of world turmoil, the country has forgotten how the role of world police once soured on us, and prompted the nation to reform its ways of meddling in the internal affairs of others. While the Soviet invasion warrants a Western response, it should not open the door to whirlwind strategies, all of which we will have to stand behind for years to come.

Could it be that our energies are all channeled into the wrong areas? The country unites behind the President when he talks of defending interests abroad, but equally tough talk about conservation, less dependence on foreign oil and the formulation of an energy policy is nowhere to be heard. If we react strongly to world ills, are we to forget the domestic problems that spur such feeling? We think not.

A restraint in the military attitude currently pervading our nation may help us to be more introspective, and ponder why we are so willing to fight, yet reluctant to conserve. The issues are inextricably entwined; the nature of decisions on our domestic plight will ultimately put our interests overseas in the proper perspective.

VIEWPOINT: ASMSU

Student Board deserves abolition

By HENRY SOSA

They are cruelly irresponsible and I underestimated their capacity to cause pain. I refer, of course, to the ASMSU Student Board.

How did I get myself in this mess? It goes back to the spring term elections last year. I made a promise to the arts and letters students that if elected, I would do my very best for the full year term. They elected me over no opposition and unanimously.

I've been in student government for a long time. Because of that I didn't take any time to rest, no weekends, no term-end breaks, not even summer term. This worked fine the first three terms in office, winter, spring, and summer. But in the fall, my health collapsed.

The cards were on the table; my doctor informed me I needed three separate operations and complete rest, which meant no class winter term, no nothing.

I decided before dropping all classes to continue my obligations to the arts and letters students. As I understood it, there would be no difficulty. After all, ASMSU's biggest problem is resignations — only four of the originally elected ten college reps remain. My work did not decline. I'd been on the Board longer than any other representative, I chaired the policy committee, and I never missed a meeting.

I know ASMSU inside out; where achievement ranks versus paperwork. I was thoroughly disgusted, especially with the concern ASMSU showed for needs of the arts and letters students. I actively supported and endorsed the petition drive to abolish the Student Board.

The next thing I knew Bruce Studer, ASMSU chairperson, informed me that I had not paid the ASMSU tax, all $3 of it. It was his sad duty therefore, to strip me of all ASMSU offices, open petitioning for the last five weeks remaining in my term, hold all back wages (after all, the work I'd done was illegal and therefore not subject to payment), and block my payment of the tax. It is well within imagining, that I looked hard at this one rule among the thousands ASMSU has and constantly revises.

The lack of $3, a crime comparable to the attack on Pearl Harbor, I felt the least I could do was to apologize for not knowing of the tax rule. Mr. Studer, with infinite humanity (or was it glee?), said it was nothing personal, he would do it to anyone.

Next I asked, noticing a loophole wide enough for several semi trucks, how could I be in violation of a rule that only requires the tax be paid "during a given term" and what authority did he have to block my paying it? He pored over the rules. To make a long story short, I got to pay my tax.

However, I was still stripped of my offices because they were vacant. I felt a chill. Did this mean for the last five weeks I've been getting up, stumbling into the bathroom only to face a vacancy in the mirror? Studer told me this was his interpretation, and only the board could overrule it.

Off to the circus (Board meeting). Every dirty trick in the book was tried: time limits on speech, two attempts to close the meeting, a generous sampling of mud, and badgering supporters of the petition drive. Eventually, the Board voted to back the chairperson.

One of the reasons was that I am reputed a stickler on rules. That's absolutely correct. Yet rules serve only two purposes: to be general guidelines and to insure fairness. Anything else is a perversion, because rules are not constructed to destroy.

Forgotten in the ASMSU constitution is a lonely little rule: "No project shall be undertaken by ASMSU or by any division of ASMSU unless that project shall benefit the membership (MSU undergraduate students) of ASMSU." What benefit is there for the arts and letters students in all this? For a $3 tax actually paid, they lost the rep they elected. Time was tied up and wasted in Legal Services, the Executive Staff, the Business Office, and the board meeting. The paperwork alone cost more than $3. It will cost $43 just to advertise open petitioning for the arts and letters seat (which I will not give up on). When asked where, where does this benefit the students? The response was that this is not a "project". If this is ASMSU's idea of rules, they can have them for cold comfort. I prefer people.

Referring to the matter, a sympathetic business major told me, "That's insulting! It's like being evicted from a leper colony." There's truth in this because this is just one way the board benefits the students. The Student Board doesn't only deserve abolishing, it needs it.

VIEWPOINT: FOREIGN INTERESTS

U.S. gearing up

BY PETER J. OHREN

I am writing out of a growing sense of concern over the troubling political developments today in our country and abroad. More and more I feel a sense of helplessness as America forgets its historical lessons and takes steps toward increased militarization.

It's not uncommon in political discussions today to hear people say: "... well, I don't want to fight but, it's either them or us," or "the Russians have got to be stopped today in the Middle East or we'll soon be fighting them in California". What frightening ideas! Their basic fallacy lies in the failure to recognize that there are alternatives. To charge forward, before it's too late, without giving serious thought to the political, economic, and social conditions that shape the international situation, is foolish.

At their heart these beliefs fail to recognize the right of every people, no matter how large or small, to their own autonomy. America's foreign policy has been to support any political group in a country consistent with our "vital interests", then to arm them to the teeth to keep them with "us". These rulers too often used this military might to suppress "communist" insurgents in their own countries, who turned out too often to be a majority of the citizens of that country. This myopic view of world politics must not continue! We must learn, and so must the Russians, that it's not "them or us". That attitude inevitably leads to violence, and to the suppression, both politically and economically, of all other peoples.

I do not attempt to defend the position of the Russians in Afghanistan. Their actions are an affront to all people struggling for freedom and the right to self-determination in the world. My primary concern is with the growing reaction in my own country, and the failure of Americans to recognize their own country's culpability in repressing this struggle for self-determination (which is clearly shown by our continued consumption of an enormous amount of the world's resources).

We must never forget that in war political structures and philosophies don't die, people do! It is a grave question whether killing is ever justified. Hopefully, from Southeast Asia, we learned that it is never justified thousands of miles from our country in order to protect "our interests" abroad. Gearing up for war may be stimulating to the economy, but, I fear, it inevitably leads to the outcome of war.

This brings me to the question that has been uppermost in my mind as of late. The reinstitution of registration for the draft. It's such a small... seemingly innocuous decision. After all, it's not the draft, it's just registration for the draft. America is not fighting abroad, only a possibility exists. The United States must be prepared, or be sorry if something happens. The basic problem is, as I stated above, that gearing for war may be stimulating to the economy, but historically, it seems to inevitably lead to that outcome!

I could not, in good conscience, fight for "our interests" abroad. In order to be politically consistent, neither would I allow myself to be drafted, nor to register. I'm afraid the time is fast approaching when Americans will again be dying overseas. Now is the time to think, to examine our history books, and to question the very basic political, economic, and moral issues involved.

It is not "them or us" ...!

DPS, an outrage

Last week I made the serious mistake of parking near the MSU Union in the metered "4-5:30 No Parking, Violators Towed" zone. Misjudging the time, I arrived back at the parking space at 4:20 p.m. to find my car gone, towed to the Dept. of Public Safety, clear across campus. Obviously, they meant business! What kind of business was to be seen very shortly; the cost of recovering my car was $20 plus a $4 ticket, making a grand total of $24 for a crime against the State.

You might be tempted to call this deterrent fining or a sanguinary revenue-maker, but I'd prefer to call it what it really is — a damnable outrage.

MSU inconsistent on concerts, porn

A question occurred to me after reading two unrelated articles in the State News this week.

An article by Mark Fellows in the Monday, Feb. 4th, issued entitled "Porno and sexual assaults: Is there a connection?" reports that two sexual assaults occurred last fall in the immediate vicinity of Wells Hall 20 minutes after porno films in Wells Hall ended. State Police Lt. Darrell Pope explains in the article that he feels there is a link between pornography and sexual assault and is quoted: "Porno may be a catalyst that pushes them over the edge. I haven't found one sadistic killer that wasn't heavily into porno." DPS Capt. Ferman Badgley is also quoted: "Porno attracts persons who are not a desirable part of the community."

An article by Mike Chaudhuri in the Tuesday, February 5th, issued entitled "MSU officials discourage having 'hard rock' shows reports that the University administration does not want "hard rock" concerts at MSU because facilities might be damaged. Dean of student affairs, Louis Hekhuis, explains in the article that it is largely an off-campus audience that is drawn to this type of entertainment and that these are the people who are causing the problems and damage.

My question is this: If the University administration and the DPS block one form of entertainment because it attracts outsiders who may damage MSU facilities, why don't they block a form of entertainment that, as law enforcement officials state, attracts outsiders who may sexually assault MSU women? I hope the answer is not, as these articles seem to suggest, that the safety of folding chairs comes before the safety of MSU women.

I call on the University administration to explain this brutally inconsistent policy and ask that they move porno films off campus.

The new draft

To my son:
To my daughter:

To whom it may concern:
When I grew up I missed by a couple of years getting drafted with 14 year olds to stem the tide of the barbaric forces of the Americans who were intent on annihilating us (so we were told).

After things had sorted themselves out, the ruling elite, which had helped Hitler to power, was again making large profits with their weapons factories — most ordinary folks were rotting in graves or offered work in those factories.

When you get to travel you will find out, just like I did, that most people do not want war. Most people want their government to manage things so that there is no war. When these managers have mismanaged things so badly that armed conflict occurs, they send in the common people to die for them.

During the recent atrocity of the Vietnam war, most of the rich people, the managers, kept their young out of the draft. I am not one of these managers and will therefore not be able to keep you out of the new draft.

So you will be on your own and I can only share with you what I have learned: When the managers of a society are starting to talk of national honor, sacrifice, duty, etc. it means that they have seriously mismanaged things and are getting desperate and dangerous. At that point it is your last chance to stand up for your own ideas of what your life is about. If you do not speak up right away it will shortly be too late. You must speak out while you can. Perhaps you can still stop the next holocaust.

News Briefs

Teachers agree on contract

CHICAGO (UPI) — Striking teachers and the Board of Education agreed on a contract Sunday following nearly 15 hours of negotiations in City Hall, tentatively ending a two-week work stoppage by teachers in the nearly bankrupt system.

In the city's other labor dilemma, the Fire Fighters Union and city officials agreed to mediation to settle that month-long dispute in which firemen have threatened to strike unless they are granted a written contract.

Mayor Jane M. Byrne, who had called all sides together Saturday in attempts to resolve the festering dispute that has closed down the nation's third largest school system for nearly a half-million students, said she was hopeful classes would be held Monday.

The Chicago Teachers Union's Executive Board voted unanimously to accept the settlement and return to school Monday. The House of Delegates also affirmed it by a 607-2 vote. The proposal must be ratified by the union's nearly 25,000 members in voting Sunday afternoon.

Quintuplets born in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Quintuplets, born Saturday to a 27-year-old North Side woman, are listed in stable condition at Prentice Women's Hospital, a spokesperson said.

The four boys and one girl were delivered nine weeks premature by caesarian section to Patricia Moeller. Mrs. Moeller, who was in good condition, had known since October that she would give birth to quintuplets, said Curt Thompson, a hospital spokesperson.

The heaviest of the five babies weighed 3 pounds, 2 ounces at birth and was named Allen. The other children were not immediately named. The other boys ranged in weight from 2 pounds, 15 ounces to 2 pounds, 4 ounces. The baby girl weighed 2 pounds, 3 ounces, Thompson said.

Thompson said the babies have "good body color" and they were in stable condition Saturday night, breathing with the assistance of ventilators. However, he said, it usually takes about 48 hours before more complete information is known about the babies' conditions.

Thompson said the odds of having quintuplets are one in 57 million.

Soviets condemn boycott appeal

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's appeal for a boycott of the Moscow summer Olympics amounted to "crude political interference" in the affairs of the International Olympic Committee, the official Soviet news agency Tass charged Sunday.

Vance's speech Saturday to the IOC meeting in Lake Placid, N.Y. was "unprecedented in the history of the International Olympic Committee's sessions," Tass said in dispatch from Lake Placid.

"Juggling with Cold War phraseology, the secretary of state — in the name of the U.S. president — again made provocative demands to move the Olympics from Moscow or cancel them altogether," Tass said.

Vance's speech "was in effect another example of crude political interference in the affairs of the IOC," the agency said.

Assassination attempt misses

FORT VICTORIA, Zimbabwe-Rhodesia (AP) — Zimbabwe-Rhodesian rebel leader Robert Mugabe narrowly missed death Sunday in a second assassination attempt within a week, when a remote-control explosive device was detonated beneath his vehicle convoy, police said.

Four members of his party were slightly injured when 88 lbs. of TNT ripped open a four-foot-deep hole in the road to the airport in this central Rhodesian city, police said.

Last Wednesday, unknown assailants hurled a grenade at Mugabe's Salisbury home as he was sleeping. Mugabe escaped uninjured.

In Sunday's blast, which took place after the rebel chief had addressed a political rally here, police said the TNT was detonated just after Mugabe's car, the first in the convoy, passed over it.

The second car in the three-vehicle convoy was hit. Police said the device was detonated from a point 22 yards on the bush side of the road.

Business calls for guidelines

WASHINGTON (AP) — An official of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce says the federal government must give business executives a better idea of how to comply with laws on paying bribes in foreign countries.

John L. Caldwell, chamber international vice president, said business will be pressuring the Carter administration to "develop clear guidelines" on the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act at a time when improving the U.S. balance of trade calls for expanding exports.

Many business executives have complained the law puts them at a competitive disadvantage with other countries in exporting goods.

Tito's recovery slowed

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Josip Broz Tito of Yugoslavia, recovering from amputation of his left leg, now suffers digestive and kidney troubles, his doctors said Sunday.

Doctors amputated the 87-year-old Tito's leg three weeks ago because of a circulatory blockage.

A medical bulletin, issued by his doctors at Ljubljana Hospital, said Tito's recovery slowed in the last few days because of "digestive disturbance and the appearance of certain difficulties in connection with the function of his kidneys."

"Essential measures of treatment are being undertaken," the bulletin said.

It took a team of oxen to do it, but Frankenmuth, Mich. finally has its famed wooden covered bridge in place on the west bank of Cass river there. The 230-ton, 239-foot structure was built on dry land and pulled by the oxen four hours a day for 12 days. The bridge is expected to be open to traffic this summer and dedicated in the fall.

AMERICAN TEACHER'S VIEW

Chinese students 'distrust' West

By ELYSE GOLDIN
State News Staff Writer

"The Chinese are suffering from residual paranoia of the cultural revolution," an American teaching English in Beijing, said Friday afternoon.

Speaking to about 60 students in the International Center, John Swaner said Chinese school administrators have made students fearful and not trusting of Westerners.

Chinese students are discouraged from befriending foreigners in their country, he said.

Swaner has taught English at the Beijing Institute for Foreign Trade since 1978. He was among the first Americans hired to teach English in that country.

ORIGINALLY CONTRACTED to teach in China for two years, Swaner said positive experiences in that country persuaded him to remain there.

He said the only major disadvantage to being an American living in China is it takes an extremely long time to make native friends.

The Communist victory over China in 1949 introduced a nationalistic, anti-Western foreign policy to that country which dissuades natives from closely associating with Americans, he said.

Swaner said although many of today's Chinese students oppose that policy, they are hesitant to socialize with Americans for fear they will be seen or reported to government authorities.

"The administration worries that close ties between Chinese and Americans will cause something anti-Chinese to show up in the foreign press," he said.

China's foreign policy has created a great social gap between native students and teachers, he said.

Swaner said although he has many close Chinese friends, the country's policy has forced most of those relationships to be concealed.

HOWEVER, ONCE A Chinese student befriends a Westerner, the student is likely to remain critical but amazingly more frank and honest than would be the case with a native instructor, he said. Students realize they are politically threatened by their own government and not by Americans, he added.

Swaner explained although the Chinese government is suspicious of foreigners, it hires Westerners because they can teach English more comprehensively than their native counterparts.

He said the growing emphasis on learning English has allowed many students to speak the language more fluently than their Chinese instructors.

National entrance examinations to universities also require students to be knowledgeable in the English language, he said.

SWANER SAID CHINESE universities traditionally consisted of a middle-aged student body in contrast to its current trend of attracting pupils directly out of high school.

About five percent of China's high school graduates go on to college, which is fully paid for by the government, he said.

Swaner said the most unique aspect of the Chinese university is that there is no grading system.

"Nobody flunks in China... they take some tests just for the fun of it," he said.

Swaner was able to speak at MSU while the university at which he teaches is on vacation celebrating the Chinese New Year.

Before moving to Beijing, Swaner was a documentary film editor in Chicago and eventually intends on doing the same in China, he said.

Swaner's presentation was sponsored by the Asian Studies Center, English Language Center and College of Arts and Letters.

Right to privacy problems discussed

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

Although Big Brother may not be able to watch everyone directly, all the vital information "he" needs is available at the touch of a computer button.

And an individual's right to seek that information is now being recognized by some states, the author of the Privacy Journal said at the Capitol Friday.

Robert E. Smith, who also wrote Privacy: How to Protect What's Left of It, discussed problems of government and privacy during a seminar sponsored by the privacy subcommittee of the House Civil Rights Committee.

The subcommittee is currently discussing right-to-privacy laws in Michigan.

The right to privacy often conflicts with governmental and law enforcement needs to collect information for efficient operation, Smith said. This conflict then leads to individuals demanding government disclosure of information contained in their files, he added.

"IN THE CASE of the FBI, their attitude was, 'we are just disseminating the information, we don't vouch for its accuracy,'" Smith said.

Recent legislation which holds agencies accountable for the accuracy of released information has solved most of those problems, he said.

Coalitions such as the Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit, however, still trade information throughout states and cities on certain individuals, Smith added.

"Probably the greatest protector of individual privacy used to be dust," he said. "Records would be left in the bottom of a drawer or in the courthouse basement and no one would every try to dig them out."

COMPUTERS ARE ABLE to store information for an indefinite period of time, however, leading to problems of outdated information on a person's file, Smith said.

"One of the problems is what comes out of a computer looks credible," Smith said about outdated information.

"All the welfare records in Michigan could be stored on a chip and would fit on the tip of my finger," he added.

Smith, who used to be a reporter for the Detroit Free Press, cited a recent opinion poll by Lou Harris and Associates showing 51 percent of the public felt "we will have lost much of our ability to keep important aspects of our lives private from government" within ten years.

"As a reporter it was necessary for me to invade people's privacy," Smith said.

"Although it was for newsworthy items, I don't think the public realizes it's difficult for the reporter. The intrusion sticks with you."

Don McLean: a folk-rock musical enigma

By MARY TINNEY
State News Reviewer

Editor's Note: Mary Tinney is the only person we know who owns every Don McLean album.

A long long time ago/ I can still remember how the music used to make me smile

Don McLean is a mysterious artist and an even more mysterious human being. In 1972 he wrote a song called "American Pie" that became a huge commercial success, and then he was virtually never heard from again. The song was about rock 'n' roll — the death of jump-up-and-down-and-be-happy, Buddy Holly American idealism and the birth of the painful, gritty realism exemplified by Dylan, the Rolling Stones and the Beatles.

McLean sang "American Pie" at both shows in his Erickson Kiva appearance Saturday night and each time he seemed to sing the song with the same kind of passionate involvement that he must have felt when he wrote the song almost ten years ago.

I talked to McLean for almost two hours between shows, trying to figure out why the man who could have had everything if he would have made any effort to capitalize on his storybook over-night success had allowed himself instead to slip into relative obscurity.

"I don't choose to write or perform commercially," McLean tells me. "I'd rather move the way I want to. The fact that 'American Pie' was such a success was an incredible surprise for me — sometimes it seemed an unpleasant surprise."

The 34-year-old McLean

Don McLean — Mr. 'American Pie' — delighted two sold-out audiences in Erickson Kiva Saturday night.

slouches in his chair, occasionally munching on taco chips and guacamole dip. He's a quiet, considerate man who doesn't like to talk to reporters. He's moody, sometimes defensive, often intimidating, articulate, intense and frivolous somehow in the same breath — most of all distressingly distant.

I ask him if he tires of singing "American Pie."

"No. Each time I sing the song I remember all those things that went into creating it. I'm grateful to that song and very proud of it."

There we were all in one place/ a generation lost in space/ with no time left to start again. McLean's main musical influences were Buddy Holly and Pete Seeger. He traveled with Seeger on the Hudson River Sloop, Clearwater, in 1969, hauling ropes by day and singing songs at every port. Out of that experience came McLean's first album, Tapestry, the one that is his favorite.

"Tapestry is a strong album because it's political without being overtly political. It talks about basic things, communication and survival. The album is effective in the same way that a song like Elvis' "Don't be Cruel" is effective. That song was handled so perfectly because it wasn't overt and demanding. At the same time it was subtly political. I feel that the protest music of Dylan, and the music of Phil Ochs is almost irrelevant. The music has no longevity. We admire it as a relic of the 60's but it has no immediate significance. The Beatles on the other hand managed to be political without being locked into their time period."

McLean's music is often poetic and romantic, often subtly cynical. Ask him about the contradictions and he becomes a little defensive. He doesn't want to have his music categorized. The fact is, though, that much of what he writes is very critical — even contemptuous — of the American way of life.

We had to burn the city cause it wasn't free/ and things go better with democracy.../ This is life/ This is prime time/ This is living the American way

He's witty on stage, making fun of everyone from Johnny Carson to Ted Kennedy. But when he starts to sing — well, you can disagree about the value or importance of some of his material — but when he starts to sing, Don McLean is captivating. His voice is rich and emotional, his lyrics — romantic, realistic or indifferent — are always gut-level wise.

In the streets the children screamed/ The lovers cried and the poets dreamed/ but not a word was spoken/ the church-bells all were broken/ And the three men I admire most/ The father son and the holy ghost/ They caught the last train for the coast/ The day the music died.

After hearing McLean sing six years ago, a woman named Lori Lieberman went to songwriter's Gimble and Fox (who represented her) and told them of her experience with McLean's music. Gimble, Fox and Lieberman wrote "Killing Me Softly With His Song," a tribute to McLean which obviously moved him very much. But he seems a little uncomfortable talking about it and the subject changes.

The audience in Erickson Kiva Saturday night loved McLean. He was easy and witty on stage. He has, over the years, developed a stage-presence, and a rapport with his audience that manages to be both professional and intimate at the same time. Talking to him off-stage, it is immediately apparent that that stage presence is... not insincere, but carefully constructed — distant.

"I'm not trying to fit into any image. I don't like people bothering me," McLean states bluntly, and I feel, at once, an unwelcome intruder.

As I watch and listen to the man — alternately evasive, direct, controlled and uncomfortable — I understand his identification and fascination with the troubled, frantic life of Vincent VanGogh... the fascination that led to McLean's most perfectly styled and perhaps his most personal composition...

Now I understand/ what you tried to say to me/ How you suffered for your sanity/ How you tried to set them free/ They would not listen, they're not listening still/ Perhaps they never will

'EUBIE!'A ragtime musical treasureBy WILLIAM BARNHARDT
State News Reviewer

Thursday night's performance of Eubie! in the University Auditorium may have been the bright spot of this February. What a show! Eubie Blake's resurrected 1921 Black vaudeville Broadway extravaganza made for an evening not to be missed. They sang the blues, wailed the gospel, danced to the ragtime, tap-danced to the Dixieland, and celebrated the soul and swing of the American popular music pioneer, Eubie Blake.

The production was out of the 20s, the costumes sequined and lacy, the women surrounded in long strings of beads, the men under top hats. From the sets to the ragtime band, few changes were made in Julianne Boyd's revival-renewal of Eubie Blake and Noble Sissle's fore-running all-black revues. Since the show was just a series of well-performed and diverse musical numbers, the audience was treated to the full range of Blake's talents.

Blake's trademark, "I'm Just Wild About Harry", was an example of Eubie at his Broadway best. The performers acted a silent-film skit to the background of Eubie's first-class ragtime "Baltimore Buzz." In "Daddy", we witnessed a slyly beguiling coquette atop a piano singing a Eubie torch song. In the riotous "My Handyman Aint Handy No More", we hear Eubie at his raciest, proving himself the raucous vaudevillian. We heard jazz in "I'm Just Simply Full of Jazz", the blues in Eubie's "Low Down Blues", the backwoods revival-tent gospel in "Roll Jordan", and of course the romantic swooning ballad in his timeless "Memories of You."

Susan Beaubien performs a vampish number from Eubie! in the MSU Auditorium Thursday night.

There is no phase of American music — particularly the black-rooted music — where Eubie and his myriad lyricists did not excel. The 70s revival of Black-oriented shows on Broadway — The Wiz, Raisin, Your Arms Are Too Short to Box

With God, to name a few — has given this decade a chance to reacquaint itself with the contributions of Black music to American music. Thursday night's reacquaintance with Eubie Blake could not have been more enjoyable.

Sun Ra's 'concert' was MSU's loss

"This is a sign to go to Europe," Sun Ra said about the events surrounding his February 1 non-concert at MSU. Those events were a bit sad, and more than a bit weird.

Sun Ra and his band (15 members strong) materialized in East Lansing on Friday, Feb. 1. "This time, I was traveling light," Sun Ra said. They thought they were going to do several concerts for Showcasejazz, but Showcasejazz thought not.

Neither side can really be blamed for the screw-up. Sun Ra, of course, never would have shown up if he thought the concerts were canceled. And Showcasejazz people have a healthy respect for jazz musicians. They never would have intentionally booked Sun Ra and then canceled it without telling him.

The Showcasejazz worker in charge of making the preliminary arrangements with Sun Ra told me he feels partially responsible for the lack of communication between the band and Showcasejazz. He said he wants to get back in touch with Sun Ra and personally pay him for the expenses involved in coming to East Lansing. I respect him for that, and I do hope that he makes that offer.

I hope just as much that Sun Ra turns him down. The problem last Friday involved more than just a lack of communication: it went deeper than that.

Jazz has been largely ignored in this area. The way this community "opened up its arms" to Sun Ra that Friday is a reflection of this. MSU did very little to accommodate the group. If MSU were as progressive as it should be, it could have worked out an artist-in-residence program with the group. I wonder if the University would have let Isaac Stern leave, if somehow he mistakenly arrived on campus for a non-existent concert?

Scott Hanson, a co-director of Showcasejazz, called the local bars to try to arrange a concert, but predictably, could work nothing out. About the only way a local concert could have been scheduled on such short notice considering the artistically regressive aspects of this area, would have been for Showcasejazz to do it. Showcasejazz was unable to do that partially because of its financial status, which was one of the main reasons they canceled the Sun Ra concert in the first place (or thought they did).

Showcasejazz lost a good deal of money last term, despite the fact that they put on several outstanding concerts. Their Betty Carter/Sonny Fortune concert was one of the best local concerts in recent memory, and yet was attended by a relatively sparse crowd. Because of that lack of support, Showcasejazz lost money — and that left them in a situation where they could do very little for Sun Ra when he arrived.

So "Mystery" (which Sun Ra told me some people call him now), doesn't specifically blame anybody from Showcasejazz for what happened. But he has a right to blame this area in general for the way he was treated. I hope his basic survival as an artist does not necessitate a permanent move to Europe, where he is better appreciated.

Hanson, incidentally, did finally arrange a concert for Sun Ra that night in an Ann Arbor loft. Amazingly enough, considering the day's events, the band played for three-and-a-half hours. I was with Danny Thompson, a bandmember, after the concert ended.

Several people walked up to him and thanked or complimented him on the evening.

"See what East Lansing missed?" he asked.

I know, Danny, I know, and thank you, too — but East Lansing has been missing it for a long time.

Spartans dealt crippling blow; Ohio State buries cagers deeper

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio — It was a make-or-break weekend for the MSU basketball team and after Thursday's overtime loss at the University of Iowa, the game with the Ohio State University Buckeyes Saturday became all the more important for the Spartans.

This time though, the results were quite a bit different from when the two teams met in Jenison Fieldhouse 11 days ago. Herb Williams, the Buckeyes' 6-foot-10 center, dominated, pouring in 26 points, grabbing 11 rebounds and blocking four shots to lead Ohio State to a 71-59 win over the Spartans before a sellout crowd of 13,591 in Ohio State's St. John Arena.

And a crippling blow it was to MSU. The Spartans fell from a tie for fifth place with Iowa and the University of Michigan to eighth place in the Big Ten with a 5-7 record. Overall, MSU is now 11-10.

The Spartans themselves have conceded that a bid to the NCAA tournament, the post-season classic that they won so easily a year ago, may now be out of reach.

"IT IS UNREALISTIC to say we can get to the NCAA so we have to put forth the effort towards an NIT (National Invitational Tournament) bid," MSU guard Kevin Smith said.

"It is a 'must' to win the rest of our games for the NCAA bid to come our way," MSU center Jay Vincent said. "If we win four or five of our remaining six, we should go to the NIT. We're not giving up though. We can still win the rest of our games and we just have to get ready for Wisconsin (in Madison) on Thursday."

Ohio State's inside game, lead by the imposing Williams, was the key. "They beat us inside, especially in the second half," MSU coach Jud Heathcote said. "They played tough defense, took our inside game away and put on constant pressure. They weren't able to dominate inside at Jenison Fieldhouse (in MSU's 74-54 win) but they were able to tonight and that was the difference."

"The main difference was that they really played well inside," Smith explained. We put a man and a half on Herb and then (forward) Jim Smith kills us. Kelvin Ransey also had a good game and he controlled the offense better than he usually does."

WILLIAMS WAS DEADLY within 12 feet. "This might have been my best offensive game," the junior from Columbus said. "They got the ball to me a lot and I was hitting my shots and getting fouled."

The Spartans held a 25-23 lead with 5:36 left in the first half when Heathcote sent his team into its three-guard spread offense. MSU turned the ball over four times in that last part of the half (continued on page 9)

STUN POLISH OLYMPIC TEAM, 5-4

Goaltending sparks icers' victory

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

Four second-period goals and the brand of goaltending the MSU hockey team has lacked all season gave the Spartans a 5-4 victory over the Polish Olympic team Friday night in Munn Ice Arena.

The Spartan icers, who received a break in their rugged Western Collegiate Hockey Association schedule by way of the exhibition contest, thrilled the 4,743 fans with one of their best games of the season.

In the first five minutes of the game, senior netminder Mark Mazzoleni kept MSU from falling behind by coming up with numerous saves on potential scoring opportunities by the Polish squad.

Junior Ken Paraskevin took advantage of Mazzoleni's play at the opposite end of the ice, and gave the Spartans a 1-0 lead with just under six minutes gone in the first period. Frank Finn and Gary Harpell assisted.

JUST OVER A minute later, the Polish captain, Stefan Chowaniec scored the first of his two first period goals. Chowaniec's first tally came on a rebound after Mazz had made the initial save, while his second came just nine seconds after MSU junior Paul Gottwald was called for a tripping penalty with one minute left in the period.

The Polish team led 2-1 after one period, but the second stanza belonged to the Spartans, as MSU notched four goals en route to a 5-2 lead after 40 minutes.

Junior Leo Lynett started the scoring barrage just 31 seconds into the period, as he skated around a Polish defenseman and slammed a slapshot into the upper right hand corner of the Polish net. Freshman Mark "The Hammer" Hamway assisted.

A little less than four minutes later, Hamway made his move around a Polish defenseman and scored to stake MSU to a lead it never again relinquished. Lynett and Welch got the assists.

Freshman Ken Leiter then got his first goal as a Spartan, as he scored on a slapshot from the point. Welch and Lynett were again credited with the assists.

LYNETT CONCLUDED THE Spartans' scoring 35 seconds later on assists by Leiter and senior co-captain Ted Huesing.

While MSU was scoring four second period goals, Mazzoleni continued to excel in the Spartans' net. Through just over a period and a half, Mazzoleni stopped 24 shots. (continued on page 10)

BONNIE ELLIS TAKES INDIVIDUAL CROWN

Women gymnasts win Big Ten title

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer

Spartan coach Michael Kasavana saw his dream come true over the weekend as his MSU women's gymnastics team captured the Big Ten title for an unprecedented third year in a row at the Big Ten meet held in Champaign, Ill.

And as an added pleasure, freshman Bonnie Ellis became the first Spartan woman gymnast to become an individual Big Ten champion in two years by taking the honors on the balance beam with a two-day scoring total of 18.1.

The Spartans were hotly pursued in the meet by the University of Illinois, but MSU finally edged out the Illini 138.35 to 138.25 for the trophy. The competition was so close between the two schools that the title was determined in the final event, the floor exercise. But the Spartans last performer in that event was none other than Ellis.

"Bonnie was just spectacular at the meet and came through when the team needed her the most," Kasavana said. "But it wouldn't even have been close if all of the eight performers on the team hadn't done so well leading up to Bonnie's routine on the floor."

ELLIS FINISHED SECOND individually in the floor exercise in the two-day totals and additionally placed third in the all-around with her highest total of the year, 34.85. Robin Heubner from the University of Minnesota was first with a score of 35.85 and Mimi Eberle from Illinois was second at 35.70.

Kasavana cited Beth Eigel, Colleen Smith and Kit Bunker, along with Ellis, as the catalysts for retaining the conference title, and added that Lori Boes, Pam Swing and Diane Lovato were also at their best. The only name missing from the list is Alice Hagan, but the freshman came down with the flu last Thursday and competed while under the weather at the meet.

"Alice was slightly ill but she still wanted to perform, and I think the fact of her being out there helped the team try that much harder," Kasavana said.

Following MSU and Illinois in the top five of the final team standings were Minnesota (137.05), the University of Michigan (135.00) and Ohio State University (134.05). The final four consisted of Indiana University, the University of Iowa, the University of Wisconsin and Northwestern University. Purdue University does not have a women's gymnastics program.

The Spartans dedicated the meet to team captain Diane Lovato, who has now been a part of all three championship seasons. Lovato does not compete as much as she has in previous years, but Kasavana credits the senior with helping assistant coach Jodi Hitt Brandon teach the squad poise and the finer points of competing.

ASIDE FROM THE team's and Ellis' titles, another first for the (continued on page 9)

Men swimmers romp past Central Mich.

The MSU men's swimming team upped its record to 6-4 by defeating Central Michigan University, 77-36, at Mount Pleasant Saturday.

Sophomore Chris Rock led MSU with first place finishes in the 100-yard freestyle and 200-yard individual medley.

Two Spartan freshmen, Kevin Hook and Greg Sluke, won the first races of their college careers. Hook won the 200-yard freestyle with his best time of the year in 1:46.5. Sluke won the 200-yard backstroke in 2:02.6.

Other first place finishers for the Spartans included: Terry Inch in the 1,000-yard freestyle, Mark Lancaster in the 50-yard freestyle, Pat Picard in one-meter diving, Pete Saggau in three-meter diving, and Bob Lundquist in the 200-yard breaststroke.

MSU's 100-yard medley relay and 400-yard freestyle relay teams finished in first as well.

FOUR SPARTAN WOMEN IN RECORD BOOK

MSU relay team sets world mark

By JIM MITZELFELD
State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's indoor track team went down to Louisville, Ky., this past weekend to compete in the Mason-Dixon Games and did something that has never been done before.

Judy Brown, Molly Brennan, Diane Williams and Pam Sedwick combined to set a new women's indoor world record Friday night in the sprint medley relay with a time of 4:00.8.

The Spartan relay team came from behind on the last lap of the race to finish five full seconds ahead of last year's world record-holding squad from the University of Wisconsin to break the old mark of 4:05.4.

The sprint medley, a race which is not run very often, consists of a 400, 200, 200, and 800-meter runs, in order.

When Williams handed off to the Spartan anchor runner Sedwick, MSU was behind Wisconsin by 10 yards. But by the time they got to the first turn Sedwick was ahead of Wisconsin's Ellen Brewster. Brewster and Sedwick have been neck and neck before in the half-mile. Last time it was Brewster who nipped Sedwick in the 880-yard run for a first at last year's Big Ten meet, but this time it was to be a different story.

On the 200-meter track the last leg of the race was to consist of four laps. Sedwick jumped ahead at first but said she knew Brewster would pass her in the third lap.

"We were running kind of slow and I had this feeling she was going to pass me," Sedwick said.

"But when the bell sounded for the last lap I just took off ahead of her," she added.

Sedwick said the referee ran up to her after she crossed the line and told her of the new mark.

"I was in a daze," she said. "It was really weird. I was so tired and all the other three were jumping up and down. It was like a dream."

"It was kind of hard to believe," Brown said. She added that she had no idea she would be a world record holder in her fifth week of collegiate competition.

"Everybody was on cloud nine," Sedwick said.

It was the first time since Herb Washington ran a 5.8 60-yard dash in 1972, that the MSU men's or women's track teams had set a world record, and the first time ever for the women's team.

Jackson said she knew the team had a chance of winning but that she never thought they would break the mark. Wisconsin set the old record at the same Mason-Dixon games last year. That meet being one of the few times all year the sprint medley is run.

Brennan, Sedwick and Brown teamed up with Pam Swainigan to win the mile relay as well Friday night, in a photo finish over a relay squad from the University of Tennessee. Both teams finished the race in identical times of 3:51.2, but the photograph gave MSU first place.

The Spartans Barbara Douglass and Diane Williams finished second in the 1,000-meter and 60-meter dash respectively.

Brennan, Williams, Carol Charles, and Kathy Miller teamed up for a third place finish in the 880-yard relay of the Open Individual competition Saturday, giving Williams her third medal in two days.

Fencers take three on Wisconsin trip

MSU fencing coach Charlie Schmitter said that if his team were lucky, the Spartans could win three of their four matches over the weekend.

Well, the Spartans must have had their rabbit's foots and four-leaf clovers in hand Saturday as they put together their most impressive showing of the season in Kenosha, Wis.

MSU handled the University of Wisconsin at Parkside, 18-9; Lawrence University, 15-1; and Northwestern University, 14-13. The Spartans only loss of the day was to the defending Big Ten champion University of Wisconsin at Madison, 17-10.

Senior Chris Young came up with what was the biggest individual victory of the day for MSU.

With the score tied 13-13 against Northwestern, Young won his bout in foil to allow the Spartans to edge the Wildcats by a single point. Young finished the meet with an 8-5 record.

MSU senior Bryan Peterman posted a 7-1 showing in epee against the four-team field.

Junior Brian Morrow led a strong outing by the Spartan sabre group with a 7-2 mark for the day.

Juniors Jon Thomas and John Chambers each finished with 6-3 records in sabre for MSU.

NCAA tournament hopes dim for Spartan cagers

and when Ransey hit a 15-footer at the buzzer, the Buckeyes went off at the intermission on top 30-27.

MSU took a brief 31-30 lead at the outset of the second half, but from there, Ohio State went on a 12-2 spurt and MSU never got within six points.

The Buckeyes were effective in keeping the ball away from Vincent, the second leading scorer in the Big Ten, early in the second half when MSU went over five minutes without a basket.

"They look for Jay a lot underneath because he's great with the one-on-one moves with the ball," Williams pointed out. "If you play him tight when he's got the ball under there, he will go around you. So I let him have the ball and backed off a step and hoped the guards would take it away."

"I USUALLY HAVE either a man in front or a man in back of me, but tonight they put a man both in front and back," said Vincent, who still led all MSU scorers with 25. "We hit a couple from the outside, but when we started missing, they pulled away."

The Spartans stayed close for most of the second half. "We cut it to six in the second half, but we just couldn't maintain our consistency or get a break and from there, their lead went to 12 or 13 and it was over," Heathcote said.

The victory pulled the Buckeyes back into a share of first place with Purdue. Ohio State won its first five Big Ten games, but won just one of its next five to slide from the top of the Big Ten.

However, the Buckeyes beat Michigan Thursday and then MSU and now appear to be back on track.

"Every team hits a slump somewhere along the line," Ransey said. "Last year we got it at the end of the year. This season, I think we are past that now."

And Ohio State is tournament-bound, something the Spartans can't say for sure right now.

Fourth in Big Ten for women cagers

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's basketball team beat both its sixth-ranked seeding, as well as itself in finishing fourth over the weekend in the Big Ten championships in Madison, Wis.

After opening with a 54-47 upset win over third-seeded Indiana University, the cagers dropped a 64-59 contest at the hands of second-seeded University of Minnesota.

The loss to the Golden Gophers sent MSU into the consolation finals where it fell again, this time in a 63-58 game to the University of Iowa.

The win against the Hoosiers in Friday's first-round came after an impressive 93-76 win last week against Oakland University. MSU head coach Karen Langeland's squad could not come up with its third consecutive victory against Minnesota, however.

"We have a hex on winning three games in a row," Langeland said. "I was very disappointed with the way we played against Minnesota. We didn't play well, but there's no reason why we couldn't have beaten them."

Against Indiana, the Spartans were led by sophomore Deb Traxinger's 15 points. Senior co-captain Mary Kay Itnyre added 10 points. Eight of Itnyre's tallies came in the second half.

In the Minnesota game, the cagers got 11 points each from junior Laurie Reynolds and sophomore Nanette Gibson, but three straight steals by the Golden Gophers produced crucial second-half baskets midway through the period.

In Sunday's consolation final, the Spartans lost at the free throw line, as the Hawkeyes meshed 21 of 30, compared to just four out of five for MSU.

Although none of the Spartans fouled out of the game, Gibson and Itnyre had four apiece.

Three players scored in double figures for MSU, as Reynolds and senior Mary Vielbig each tallied 12 points. Itnyre added 10 points.

The Spartans were strong on the boards, however, as they outboarded Iowa 49-35, led by Itnyre and Reynolds who had 11 and 10 respectively.

Gymnasts win Big Ten

Spartans was the fact that they sent five of the eight team members to the individual finals. U-M sent four performers, the Gophers and the Illini had three apiece, while the Buckeyes two and the Hawkeyes one.

Of the eight performers on the uneven bars, MSU had three competitors in the event. Bunker placed fourth, Eigel fifth and Smith eighth. And in the floor exercise, four of the eight finalists were Spartans. Ellis came in second, Eigel was fifth, Smith was seventh and Swing finished eighth.

Kasavana acknowledged consistency and team togetherness as the keys to the title.

"In 20 of the 24 routines we were involved in there were no misses — you can't ask for better consistency than that," he said.

SWEEP U-M, PITTSBURGH

Wrestlers are perfect

By JIM METZELFELD
State News Sports Writer

The MSU wrestling team moved up a notch in the Big Ten standings with its impressive 26-7 win at home over the University of Michigan Friday night, upping its conference mark to 5-1-1.

The Spartans made it a perfect weekend by coming back Saturday night to destroy the University of Pittsburgh, 50-3.

MSU proved its dominance over a Michigan team it tied 18-18 earlier in the year at Ann Arbor, by taking the first eight matches of the night. Going into freshman Scott Shepard's match with the Wolverine's top wrestler Steve Fraser at 190 pounds, the Spartans were ahead 26-0 and had the meet clinched. But Fraser beat Shepard 13-4 to spoil a Spartan shutout.

"We never knew what to expect," MSU coach Grady Peninger said after the easier than expected win.

"We were really aggressive," he added. "I think our team is in a lot better condition than U-M, we were really pressuring them."

Peninger said heavyweight Shawn Whitcomb's 6-1 loss to Eric Klassen was the only disappointment of the meet.

ALL EIGHT SPARTANS won their matches by decision. Jim Ellis's 13-4 win at 177 pounds over Bill Petosky was the first since his injury on Dec. 12 showing that he is back in form.

MSU won five of the nine matches against Pittsburgh by pins, with the Spartans loss at 190 pounds the only thing between MSU and a shut out. The 50-point victory was the highest point total Peninger's wrestlers have amassed all year.

Harrel Milhouse continued his hot streak by pinning his opponent at 118 pounds in 59 seconds. Chuck Joseph won by a pin at 126 pounds in 3:13, and Jeff Thomas won by decision making all three double winners for the weekend.

Fred Worthem won by a decision at 158 for his second win in two days upping his record to 16-3 for the season. Steve Foley won by a pin at 7:19 making him another Spartan double winner.

The Spartans 150-pounder Greg Sargis pinned his opponent in 6:42. Whitcomb bounced back from his loss to Klassen with a pin in his Pittsburgh match at 2:55, for the fifth MSU pin of the meet.

Both Gary Crump and Jim Ellis won their matches.

Thomas, Lindsay top MSU Relays

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer

Sophomore Calvin Thomas' first place finish over former Spartan great Bob Cassleman in the special 600-yard invitational race was but one of many fine MSU performances Sunday at Jenison Fieldhouse, as a total of five Spartan firsts were accomplished at the 57th running of the MSU Relays.

Twenty-four schools were represented at the meet which sported over 475 athletes and drew upwards of 2,500 fans.

Thomas, normally a quarter-mile specialist, beat Cassleman by one-tenth of a second, 1:10.6 to 1:10.7, marking the first time Cassleman has lost on the Jenison track since performing for MSU from 1971 through 1974. In 1973, Cassleman set the MSU indoor record in the event with a time of 1:08.2.

In the regular 600-yard run, the Spartans' Tyrone Williams was first with a time of 1:12.3.

In the other featured race, the two-mile invitational, another former Spartan star, Herb Lindsay, ran eight straight 33-second laps before winning the event in a time of 8:41.6. Lindsay is a prime candidate for the 1980 U.S. Olympic team as a distance runner, and currently holds the MSU records in the two-mile (8:39.2, set in 1976) and the three-mile run (13:16.4, set in 1977).

In the mile run, MSU's Ted Unold took top honors with a time of 4:10.1, edging out the University of Tennessee's Pete Markel by two-tenths of a second.

The Spartans other firsts were by Paul Piwinski in the high jump, where he cleared 6-foot-10 and three-quarters of an inch, and by the distance medley relay team made up of Thomas, Tim Kenney, Mike White and Keith Moore in a time of 9:52.5.

Kenny, Thomas, White and Moore also placed second in the two-mile relay.

The only disappointment at the Relays was senior All-America Randy Smith's second place finish in the 60-yard dash. Smith, who had never been beaten at a Big Ten or MSU Relays meet, was nosed out at the finish line by Tennessee's Mike Miller. Both recorded times of 6.2 in the race, but Miller touched the wire first.

A big surprise occurred for MSU in the triple jump where Tony Gilbert placed second and set a new Spartan record with a mark of 50-foot-2 and three-quarter inches, surpassing the old distance of 49-foot-one set by Delbert Gregory in 1971.

Andy Wells was third in the 60-yard high hurdles with a time of 7.3, while another third was taken by Jeff Lewis in the 1,000-yard run in a time of 2:14.1.

Icers, goaltending sharp

"Mazz" was relieved by sophomore Doug Belland a little past the midway point in the second period, and Belland's performance was equally as impressive as the one turned in by Mazzoleni.

By the game's end, the Spartan goaltending tandem had turned back 52 shots on goal by the Polish team. MSU got just 29 shots on the two Polish netminders.

GIBBS HAS ROUGH MEETS

Gymnasts split in Ohio

The MSU men's gymnastics team had its problems on a couple of events Saturday and wound up splitting a double-meet in Columbus with Ohio State and Ball State universities.

The Spartans were able to beat Ball State 253.30 - 250.50, but the Buckeyes' Randy Hairston and Rick Wickstrom proved too much for MSU's Marvin Gibbs, and Ohio State won with a score of 263.20.

Gibbs had problems on the parallel bars and on the horizontal bar which cost him a shot at first place in the all-around and cost the team a shot at beating the Buckeyes. He scored high on all the other four events, but his misses in the final two events kept him away from his usual eight-point-plus scores.

Against Ball State, Gibbs had firsts in the floor exercise, pommel horse and the vault and as well as tying for second on the rings with teammate Bart Acino. Despite his misses on the last two events he managed to place second in the all-around with a score of 51.20 behind Ball State's Bill Cazal, who had a total of 51.50.

Acino also tied for fourth with Ivan Merritt in the floor exercise, placed sixth on the horse, was sixth in the vault and parallel bars and tied for fifth on the high bar to place third in the all-around with a score of 50.45.

Other strong Spartan finishes were by Pedro Sanchez, who took second on the horse and high bar and third on the high bar and parallel bars, and Rich Licata, who was third on the high bar.

Against Ohio State there were no MSU firsts while using the same scores as were used against Ball State.

The closest MSU came on any of the events was Gibbs' seconds in the floor exercise and the vault.

Prodigy displays work in Union give way to form and in time, the lily, sitting several feet away, blooms on the blue-green background. In a final, precise flourish, the artist signs her work.

The signature is that of Barbara Matheson, a sensitive, intelligent, 15-year old artist, who turned professional at the age of 11.

Matheson's work is on display at the MSU Union Gallery through Feb. 16. The Union exhibition is the 48th show that Matheson has shown her work in since she began drawing at the age of seven.

She works primarily in ink, pencil and charcoal mediums, but has recently started working with oils again.

"I've touched on oil throughout, but I wasn't really comfortable with it," Matheson said. "But now I am and I really like it."

The show at the Union is a history of Matheson's art which includes her early figure drawings as well as her more recent nature and wildlife work.

Matheson has recently become very interested in architectural drawing. She did a drawing of Frank Lloyd Wright's Robie House in Chicago, Ill. and since then has received three commissions for other architectural drawings.

She said she likes architectural drawing so much that she is thinking of eventually working for an architect. She said she would like to do perspective drawings from architectural elevations to give prospective buyers a better idea of what their house will look like.

Matheson is a sophomore at East Lansing High School. She also takes classes at Lansing Community College and has accumulated 79 credits to date. If her plans go according to schedule, Matheson will receive her associate's degree from LCC the summer before she graduates from high school.

Matheson is saving the money she makes from selling her prints for a trip to Paris after she graduates from high school.

Her artistic style is realistic, with meticulous attention paid to the fine details of her subject.

"If I'm doing a picture of a plant, I'm trying to show that plant, not just some plant," she said.

Now that she has developed a competency at this kind of realism, however, she is working with a little more abstraction.

"I use it as a freer style where a couple of lines will indicate the object," Matheson said.

Bill and Natalie Matheson, Barbara's parents, both work in photography and film producing. They work with a film production company that takes the game films for the Spartan football and basketball teams.

Barbara has developed an interest in photography as a result of her parents work and uses it, mainly as a tool for her artwork. She photographs subjects that cannot sit still for her as models. But she has also been on the sidelines of the basketball games shooting still photographs while her father films from the press box.

The Matheson's are firm believers in Zen Buddhism. This far eastern religion exerts a heavy influence in Barbara's work. Matheson says Zen Buddhism defines her relationship with everything around her.

"In a pinball game the ball is going around and you're not thinking about you or the person next to you," Matheson said. "You are the ball. You get rid of yourself. It's just being totally absorbed in one thing."

"In my art it's the same thing. I just have my model in front of me and my paper and that's all there is."

DPS tows less

By MARK FELLOWS
State News Staff Writer

Although the Department of Public Safety authorized the towing of 6,219 vehicles in 1979, statistics indicate the parking problem on campus is getting better, campus police said.

The towing program started in fall of 1978, police said, so 1978 statistics include only the last four months of that year to compare with those from 1979.

From September to December 1978, 2,444 cars were towed, compared to 1,784 in the last four months of 1979.

DPS Maj. Adam J. Zuta said ticketing illegally parked cars used to take care of the problem, but eventually many people ignored the tickets, so campus police turned to the towing program.

"Parking conditions are better than in many previous years," Zuta said.

Other statistics released by campus police indicate a general increase in reported crimes and ordinance violations.

Campus police changed this year to a yearly reporting system starting in January from a system beginning in July and many statistics from 1978 are unavailable due to the changeover. For this reason, comparisons of some crimes and other statistics are presently impossible.

TOTAL NUMBERS OF reported crime and ordinance violations increased from 3,128 in 1978 to 4,532 in 1979.

Rape and other criminal sexual conduct crimes rose to eight occurrences compared with four in 1978. Two persons were arrested in 1979 in connection with sexual assault.

Police also reported 13 criminal sexual conduct cases not counted as first degree sexual assaults — 23 cases of molesting with seven related arrests and 17 window peepers, of which four were arrested.

Arson cases increased from 13 in 1978 to 36 in 1979, which police said may reflect increased reporting of fires by residence hall personnel.

Bicycle thefts increased from 351 in 1978 to 423 in 1979. Bike accidents also increased from 45 to 57 and traffic summonses rose from 36 to 93, indicating increased police enforcement of bicycle traffic laws.

Burglaries rose from 289 incidents in 1978 to 387 in 1979, while car theft stayed about the same at 14 occurrences.

FIFTY-THREE MARIJUANA arrests were made by campus police, mostly during traffic stops. Eight occurrences of sale of controlled substances were known of, with no arrests in 1979.

The arrests last week of five students and former students were part of the drug sale statistics for 1979.

Broken parking lot gate arms top the list of malicious destruction occurrences. In 1979, 113 gate arms were broken at a cost of $2,892.

No suicides occurred in 1979 compared to two in 1978, although 11 attempts were reported.

IRA LEVIN'S DEATHTRAP

Scenery by WILLIAM RITMAN Costumes by RUTH MORLEY Lighting by MARC B. WEISS
Original New York Production Directed by ROBERT MOORE
Restaged by PHILIP CUSACK

"SEEING 'DEATHTRAP' IS LIKE A RIDE ON A GOOD ROLLER-COASTER WHEN THE SCREAMS AND LAUGHS MINGLE TO FORM AN ENJOYABLE HYSTERIA!"
— Jack Kroll, Newsweek

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 25 — 8:15 P.M. in the University Auditorium

Playwright/novelist Ira Levin is an old hand at producing thrills and terror, with past credits including "Rosemary's Baby," "The Stepford Wives" and "The Boys from Brazil." With "Deathtrap" he continues that tradition. A has-been middle-aged playwright envies a newcomer. He plans to kill the young man and steal his new script, but there are plenty of surprises in the rapidly-paced plot. Broadway actor DONALD BARTON stars, supported by CLIFFORD ANDERSON, PATRICIA GUINAN and other New York actors.

Work on rights document continues

By KY OWEN

State News Staff Writer

The proposed Student Rights and Responsibilities document may become a reality by the end of the year, the chairperson of the University Committee on Student Affairs said Friday.

Chuck Goeke told committee members he hopes to get the document out of committee within the next two weeks. It could be implemented by the end of the year, he said.

The proposed document is a compilation of the Academic Freedom Report, the Graduate Rights and Responsibilities document and the Medical Student's Rights document.

The committee began working on the document in January 1979 after the Steering Committee of Academic Council directed UCSA to begin work on the report.

The document must be approved by UCSA, the Council of Graduate Students, the ASMSU Student Board, the Student Council, the Academic Council and the Board of Trustees.

If any of these groups wishes to amend the document, it must go back to the UCSA and go through all of the groups again. The only major point yet to be agreed upon is the judicial structure, which will be discussed at this week's committee meeting.

Moses Turner, vice president for student affairs and services, has presented a judicial system proposal which the committee is currently considering.

The committee ironed out several problems Friday which were voiced earlier by Dorothy Arata, assistant provost for undergraduate education.

One of Arata's main concerns was that the Code of Teaching Responsibility which is included in the document, would be open to amendment through a process not including the University Committee on Academic Policy, which originally approved the document.

The committee voted to stipulate in the document that any amendments dealing with the code would also go to UCSA.

Grand Rapids man to be arraigned

A Grand Rapids man who armed and barricaded himself in a Dewitt house Saturday is being held in the Clinton County jail pending arraignment on charges of breaking and entering, felonious assault and attempted car theft.

Alonzo Lonnie Thomas, 27, was arrested at about 9 p.m. Saturday after a State Police emergency squad fired tear gas into the home of Wallace Bailey, 4214 Turner St., where Thomas had barricaded himself for five hours.

Police said Thomas had allegedly broken into the Bailey house when he was surprised by Bailey's daughters coming home from visiting friends. Bailey and his wife were reportedly out shopping at the time.

Police said the man tried to escape in the family's car but couldn't get it started.

The girls ran next door, police said, and Thomas refused to leave the home when police arrived.

After attempts to communicate with Thomas failed, police said, State Police troopers fired tear gas into the house and arrested Thomas as he ran from it.

Easing the insecurity and problems that arise from the transition to college or to any change in life is the purpose of Adaptive Life-lab, a new workshop developing at MSU. "People in a new situation often find it is not what they expected it to be. Life-lab helps them to readjust those expectations," said Ron Cadieux, head advisor in Fee

Hall and director of coordinator of Life-lab.

"Life-lab is a positive experience. You find that you're not alone and people in a similar situation share your same doubts and worries. Also, other people see qualities in you you don't see yourself," he said.

A Life-lab for freshmen is currently being offered at the Brody Complex and is geared primarily toward new students. The workshop is being conducted in a four-part program. The first three sessions were held last week and the last session will be conducted Sunday.

Cadieux said that Life-labs will probably be offered to freshmen next fall, but that it is not definite as of yet.

The transition from high school to a campus as big as MSU leaves many freshmen feeling lost, which is where Life-lab is often times necessary, he said.

The participants in Life-lab pay $3 for the cost of a manual which is used during the workshops.

Participants are divided into groups of six to eight members with sessions being conducted by a "focalizer" who gives participants direction.

"We are not leading, but helping group members to focus on themselves," said Marti Middlekauff, focalizer and graduate assistant in the Service-Learning Center.

Life-lab is composed of several exercises which involve group support and sharing. The exercises help the participants arrange their priorities in the order of what is important to them.

Another aim of Life-lab is for every participant to arrive at a realistic goal for themselves.

One exercise involves a bidding process. Each member is allowed 10,000 "energy units", which they use for bidding on goals they would like to achieve — such as increasing self-confidence or choosing a suitable major.

"Life-labs are relevant for anybody in a new situation," Middlekauff said. "I'd like to see one for women newly divorced."

The Life-labs are especially useful for males," said Scott Chesney, director of Brody Complex and Staff Development Coordinator, who co-organized the present Life-lab with Cadieux. "Men don't usually feel free to express their feelings and Life-lab gives them the chance to be more open," he said.

MSU alumni receive honors at vet medicine award banquet

Three native Michigan veterinarians have been selected as Outstanding Alumni by the MSU College of Veterinary Medicine.

The three recipients are each involved in different fields of veterinary medicine.

Dr. Edward F. Sterner is a large animal veterinarian from Ionia, Mich. Sterner graduated from MSU in 1943 and is highly regarded as an expert in the treatment of young cattle and bovine medicine. He has served on Governor William G. Milliken's Toxic Substance Loan Committee since 1978. Sterner is well known in Michigan for his efforts to minimize the effects of the PBB contaminant.

Donald L. Piermattai is a professor of veterinary surgery at Colorado State University. Piermattai has also taught at MSU, Texas A and M University, and the University of Minnesota since he graduated from MSU in 1954. He has published numerous articles and books on orthopedic surgery. Piermattai is president of the Veterinary Orthopedic Society.

Winston Max Decker is the Washington, D.C. representative to the American Veterinary Medical Colleges. Decker graduated from MSU in 1946 and has served in the Michigan Department of Public Health before joining the U.S. Public Health Service. Decker has been a spokesperson for the veterinary profession in Washington D.C. for the past ten years.

The three men were honored at the College of Veterinary Medicine's award banquet on Jan. 20.

Police seek two men for armed robbery

Police are searching for two men in connection with a Friday night robbery of more than $1,000 from an Okemos service station.

Police said an employee of Van Atta Mobil, 743 W. Grand River Ave., reported the robbery at about 8:46 p.m. Friday. The employee told police two men pulled a shotgun and demanded money.

The suspects then fled in a dark colored car. Area police agencies blockaded local thoroughfares shortly afterwards, but removed the blockades within a few hours when the suspects failed to appear.
