Passengers run from a burning Taiwanese jetliner that caught fire and exploded on landing at Manila Airport Wednesday. All but three people aboard the China Airlines Boeing 707 escaped from the plane by sliding down emergency chutes and jumping out doors.

Plane burns: 132 known to survive

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — All but three of 135 persons aboard were known to have survived a fire and explosion aboard a Taiwanese jetliner Wednesday after it landed at Manila International Airport, officials said. Seven Americans were among the survivors.

The pilot said the China Air Lines Boeing 707 dived unexpectedly as he landed and he could not regain control.

"The plane descended too fast," said pilot Wu Hung, 50. "I could not lift it up. There should be no reason for that."

"Somebody said there was fire on the wings, but there are no instruments for that and I didn't know it."

Airport and CAL officials said there was a good chance that three passengers listed as missing survived but did not report to rescue workers.

CAL airport manager Richard Yu said 74 of the 124 passengers and seven of the 11 crew members escaped injury. Ten passengers were treated for minor injuries, and 37 passengers and four crew members were hospitalized, some in critical condition with severe burns, he said.

The airline said 93 of the passengers aboard Flight 811 were Taiwanese. It said there were at least seven Americans aboard, and all survived.

Airport director Luis Tabuena said a watcher in a fire tower at the end of a runway reported seeing a fire in two of the plane's four engines.

"The pilot undershot the runway," Tabuena said. "He almost hit the highway (just outside the landing strip)."

"The (control) tower had no indication that there was anything wrong with the plane. It had given the pilot clearance to land," CAL officials said. Wu has more than 30,000 hours' flying time and is a veteran of 30 years with the Nationalist Chinese Air Force.

Survivors and witnesses said the plane landed hard, with its nose down, and bounced at least twice.

Tabuena, who said the plane's "black box" or in-flight recorder was recovered, said the plane lost two of its engines after the second bounce.

A heroine of the episode, airline officials said, was purser Wang Wen-hua, 26, the last person to leave the plane, who stayed behind to help move out passengers despite serious burns over much of her body.

COGS approves ethics resolution at special Wednesday session

By LOUISE WHALL
State News Staff Writer

In less than one hour of debate, the Council of Graduate Students unanimously approved the proposed Resolution for Professional Ethics at a special session Wednesday.

The resolution directs the COGS president to pursue matters pertaining to the violation of student rights by faculty members at appropriate levels within the University. The nature of the violations concern the alleged unauthorized use of graduate student's work by faculty members.

"I think it is very important that we as a body take a strong stand on this," Catherine Adams, College of Agriculture and Natural Resources representative, said.

The resolution will be added to the agenda of the Graduate Council meeting Monday. The Graduate Council is a standing committee of the Academic Council.

COGS President Sharon Cogdill said Herbert Oyer, dean of the graduate school, and other members of the administration have indicated their support for the resolution.

A STORY APPEARED in The State News on Feb. 22 which said that six students had contacted COGS with concerns that a particular professor had used their work without authorization.

"More than one department chairperson has recognized themselves and contacted me," Cogdill said. "They have told me that it is not appropriate for me to be working at this level."

Cogdill also said "a handful of students" have approached her anonymously with similar concerns that their rights have been violated.

"Their overriding fear is one of retaliation," Cogdill said.

Charles Goeke, chairperson of the University Committee on Student Affairs, said he discussed the resolution with Ombudsman Carolyn Steiber. Steiber feels the problem is adequately covered in other documents such as the Code of Teaching Responsibilities and the Academic Freedom Report, Goeke said.

SEVERAL MEMBERS SAID the adoption of the document may encourage other students to voice their concerns with less fear of retribution.

"There are informal understandings in various departments in regard to making a change in committee," said Steven Miller, College of Education representative. "A student could get snowballed by the entire department for alienating members of committee."

One student, who asked to remain anonymous, spoke to the council about a particular situation. The student said a professor "had sent in 90 percent of my work" which was recently published in a report without attribution.

"People who do legwork should at least be acknowledged if in nothing more than a footnote for having put their energies into it," Goeke said.

The resolution was amended to state that the president will report the effects of the resolution to COGS at their first meeting in May 1980.

Opponents of registration hailed the House Appropriations subcommittee action as a serious setback for the Carter administration.

However, administration officials and backers of Carter's program predicted the president's plan will be approved in the full Appropriations Committee at a later date.

Carter had asked Congress for $21.9 million in the current fiscal year to begin registering men and women, aged 19 and 20, beginning this summer. The committee did not even consider the issue of registering women, and first struck $8.5 million from the bill. That left about $13.3 million in the bill.

IN THE KEY VOTE, the panel deadlocked 6-6 on whether to recommend approval of the $13.3 million. A tie vote traditionally kills a measure, but Carter's supporters tried to argue that the bill should be sent to the full committee for action, anyway.

In the end, the committee decided to approve legislation appropriating $4.7 million — an amount that would not allow for registration this year. But it would finance a program proposed by Selective Service — and later discarded

Diplomats seized in embassy takeover

By TOM WELLS

Associated Press Writer

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Rebels shot their way into the Dominican Republic Embassy during a reception Wednesday, seizing Diego C. Asencio of the United States and at least 15 other ambassadors hostage. They demanded $50 million, release of all political prisoners and safe passage from the country.

A spokesperson from the attackers, members of the leftist M-19 organization, conveyed the demands in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. He said the attackers held "about 60 hostages," including 20 ambassadors. The Foreign Ministry said 16 permanent and acting ambassadors had been captured, along with other diplomats.

"We demand the liberation of all political prisoners, not only of M-19 but of all groups that fight against the regime, $50 million and guarantees that we will be allowed to leave for a foreign country," the spokesperson said.

He allowed Asencio to come to the telephone and confirm the hostages were being well treated. The spokesperson, who refused to be identified by name, said the charge d'affaires of Paraguay, one of the guerrillas and one other person were wounded during the takeover. He did not elaborate.

The group refused "for the time being" a government proposal that an end to the takeover be mediated by the Colombian Red Cross, which the rebel leader claimed was infiltrated by government agents.

Intelligence sources said M-19 is one of the most active leftist rebel groups in Colombia. At least five persons outside the embassy were reported wounded during the takeover.

Earlier, military intelligence sources which asked not to be identified, speculated that the attackers could have been members of the Workers Self-Defense Movement.

RADIO BROADCASTS PUT the number of hostages at about 30 and said a Colombian soldier was killed in the shooting. There was no indication that any of the ambassadors or other hostages had been injured.

The ambassadors taken hostage were from the United States, the Dominican Republic, Brazil, Venezuela, Costa Rica, Mexico, Uruguay, Austria, El Salvador, Egypt, Guatemala, Haiti, Switzerland and the Vatican, the ministry said. Also taken hostage were the acting ambassadors of Paraguay and Bolivia who hold the title of attaché, the office said.

Some of those who seized the embassy shouted from windows that the diplomats would be killed if the police tried to enter the embassy, witnesses reported.

About 500 police officers surrounded the embassy and brought an armored car into the area. At one point a police officer could be seen on the roof of the embassy.

WITNESSES SAID ABOUT a dozen rebels, wearing orange and blue sweat-shirts, started shooting when a Mercedes Benz limousine pulled up in front of the embassy with one of the diplomats attending the celebration of the Dominican Republic's independence day.

U.S. Embassy spokesperson Cindy Fox confirmed that Ambassador Diego C. Asencio, 48, was being held at the embassy. She said she had determined Asencio was not wounded, contrary to an earlier radio report. Asencio has been ambassador to Colombia since 1977.

IRAN'S PARLIAMENT MEETS IN MAY

Hostage decision delayed

By The Associated Press

Iran's new parliament will not be ready to decide the fate of the U.S. Embassy hostages until May at the earliest, a top Iranian official said Wednesday. It would mean at least 10 more weeks of captivity for the estimated 60 Americans.

The official, Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti, first secretary of the Revolutionary Council, indicated only a change of heart by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini could lead to an earlier release of the hostages, held by Iranian militants since Nov. 4.

Khomeini, leader of Iran's revolution, said last weekend the decision on whether to free the Americans would be up to the Majlis, or parliament, which will be elected in March and early April.

Reacting to Beheshti's statements, a high-level U.S. official said in Washington, "It would be of grave concern if the process dragged on that long."

OUTSIDE THE OCCUPIED embassy Wednesday, several thousand textile workers staged an anti-American demonstration, shouting "We are ready to revolt against imperialism!" and "The criminal shah will be punished here!"

The U.N. investigative commission on Iran, continuing its work in Tehran, met for two hours with Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh and discussed the commission's plans for visiting with the hostages, U.N. officials said in New York.

Rudolf Stajduhar, U.N. spokesperson, did not say whether final plans had been agreed to, but he said Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim "hopes the hostages can be seen soon."

A source close to the panel said its members probably had met with three U.S. diplomats, including Charge d'Affaires L. Bruce Laingen, held inside the Foreign Ministry since the embassy takeover. The report could not be confirmed.

As part of its probe, the commissioners paid an evening visit to the sprawling Beheshti Zarya cemetery south of Tehran where the revolutionaries say thousands of victims of the shah's alleged repression are buried.

A five-member commission was established to hear Iranian grievances about alleged brutality and corruption during the rule of the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and alleged U.S. interference in Iranian affairs, as well as U.S. grievances over the hostage-taking.

The last outsiders known to have met with the hostages — Khomeini's son and a Greek archbishop — visited them Feb. 8. Before that the last to have visited them was a delegation of American clergy during Christmas.

U.S. OFFICIALS SAY it is important for the commissioners to see all the hostages to determine whether or not they are in the embassy and in good condition.

Officials at the United Nations have said it was the Iranians who wanted the panel members to speak with the hostages, apparently in the hope it would produce evidence bolstering the allegations of U.S. interference during the shah's regime. But Iranian authorities apparently have been unable to persuade the embassy militants to allow such a meeting.

It had been assumed in Washington that the U.N. inquiry would lead to the release of the hostages, but the Iranians insist there is no such link.

Committee denies funds for draft registration

By TERENCE HUNT

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's draft registration plan failed its first test in Congress when a House committee refused Wednesday to approve funds the administration had sought for the program.

Opponents of registration hailed the House Appropriations subcommittee action as a serious setback for the Carter administration.

However, administration officials and backers of Carter's program predicted the president's plan will be approved in the full Appropriations Committee at a later date.

Carter had asked Congress for $21.9 million in the current fiscal year to begin registering men and women, aged 19 and 20, beginning this summer. The committee did not even consider the issue of registering women, and first struck $8.5 million from the bill. That left about $13.3 million in the bill.

IN THE KEY VOTE, the panel deadlocked 6-6 on whether to recommend approval of the $13.3 million. A tie vote traditionally kills a measure, but Carter's supporters tried to argue that the bill should be sent to the full committee for action, anyway.

In the end, the committee decided to approve legislation appropriating $4.7 million — an amount that would not allow for registration this year. But it would finance a program proposed by Selective Service — and later discarded — for a registration program only after the president signed an emergency proclamation to mobilize recruits in an emergency.

Earlier, the committee had voted 6-5 against an almost identical proposal.

However, even supporters of registration joined in later and voted for the lower amount, merely as a means of sending something to the full committee and in hopes that the full committee would approve $13.3 million.

Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., chairperson of the full Appropriations Committee, told subcommittee members that "there's no way for any subcommittee to keep the full committee from acting on any request from the president of the United States."

OPPONENTS OF REGISTRATION argued that the administration had failed to show that registration would save any time in mobilizing recruits in an emergency.

Rep. Edward Boland, D-Mass., arguing for the administration, said rejection of Carter's request would send a signal of U.S. weakness to the Soviet Union.

In two days of hearings on the president's request, congressman after congressman questioned whether registration would save any time in mobilizing recruits for an emergency.

Executions in Afghanistan follow anti-Soviet uprising

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan authorities resorted to large-scale repression and executions after last week's anti-Soviet uprising in the capital of Kabul, according to a report published here Wednesday.

The report by the Associated Press of Pakistan, which could not be independently confirmed, quoted diplomatic sources as saying an Islamic scholar was among those killed by authorities in the aftermath of the bloody street fighting.

Mass arrests also were made, the report said.

Medical sources said at least 300 civilian and an undetermined number of Soviet and Afghan troops were killed in the fighting that led to the imposition of martial law in Kabul. That, in effect, made the Soviet commander there the head of the Afghan government.

The Pakistani news agency, quoting reports from Afghanistan, said Moslem Afghan rebels and government troops "sustained heavy casualties and losses" in "bitter fighting" the past few days.

IN ONE INCIDENT, the report said, rebels ambushed a caravan of government troops on a road between Jalalabad, in eastern Afghanistan, and Kabul and "killed 400 troops and destroyed a number of armored vehicles."

Western diplomats in New Delhi said the general strike by shopkeepers that prompted the uprising showed only small signs of letting up.

One diplomat in New Delhi, quoting reliable Afghan sources, said 20 to 25 percent of the shopkeepers in Kabul opened for business Wednesday but that the strike was still crippling the economic life of the city. Underground organizers of the strike have given no indication when it will end, and the Afghan sources described the city as "very tense."

There were indications, meanwhile, that Soviet leaders were softening the conditions under which they might withdraw their troops.

In Moscow, American business executive Armand Hammer said Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev told him during a meeting the "problem could be solved" if the United States and Afghanistan's neighbors "guarantee they would use their influence" to end interference in Afghanistan's internal affairs.

Last week, Brezhnev said the Soviets would be prepared to withdraw their estimated 70,000 troops in Afghanistan since late December only if the United States and the other nations guaranteed an end to such interference.

HAMMER ALSO SAID Brezhnev liked his suggestion that talks on the foreign minister level begin "immediately" between the United States and Soviet Union in an effort to solve the crisis. "He made a note of it," Hammer said.

In London, a Foreign Office spokesperson said British officials read "with interest" a report attributed to "high-level sources close to President Brezhnev" saying the Soviets might consider "the possibility of U.N. troops being used in Afghanistan."

Observers suggested the report carried in the Evening News might have come from Victor Louis, a Soviet citizen who occasionally writes for the newspaper from Moscow. Soviet experts say the Soviets have long used Louis to leak their intentions or ideas to the West.

Clinics need not disclose contraceptive dispensation

By MOLLY MIKA
State News Staff Writer

Clinics throughout Michigan can continue to dispense prescriptive contraceptives to minors on a confidential basis following a federal appeals court ruling Tuesday.

The U.S. 6th Circuit Court in Cincinnati unanimously ruled that parents do not have a constitutional right to be notified that their children are receiving birth control pills and intrauterine devices.

A suit was filed in April 1975 by the Lansing area parents of an unnamed 16-year-old girl who had been given contraceptives without their knowledge by the Family Planning Center at 701 N. Logan St., Lansing.

In the suit, the parents asked the courts to prohibit the clinic from dispensing contraceptives without notification, said Peter Cohl, attorney for the defense.

Cohl, an attorney for Ingham County, represented the Family Planning Center, which is run by the Ingham County Health Department.

In March 1977, U.S. District Judge Noel

Fox in Grand Rapids ruled that clinics must notify parents prior to dispensing birth control devices to minors. Without such notice, he ruled, the constitutional rights of the parents are violated.

His order that the clinic begin to notify parents was blocked that same year following an appeal to the 6th Circuit Court, said Marie Kingdon, chairperson of the Ingham County Board of Health, which runs the center.

The case was remanded to Fox, who was asked to reconsider his ruling in light of a 1978 U.S. Supreme Court decision. That decision nullified a law prohibiting the sale of non-prescriptive contraceptives, such as condoms and contraceptive foam, to minors.

Fox then issued a second ruling reaffirming his initial stand.

The case was appealed again to the 6th Circuit Court, where the plaintiff argued that the dispensing of birth control devices without notification violated constitutional rights based upon freedom of religion and that parental rights were superior to

Embassy overtaken

A police officer outside the embassy, who did not give his name, said Asencio's bodyguard was wounded. A military hospital said the bodyguard was being treated there.

Spokespersons at the embassies of Uruguay, Austria, Switzerland, Egypt, Venezuela, the Vatican, Mexico and Haiti confirmed by telephone that their ambassadors were among the hostages.

THE RADIO STATION said others being held hostage were the ambassadors of Guatemala, Israel, Brazil, Costa Rica and Nicaragua and a United Nations representative, and that Paraguay's ambassador was wounded. Those embassies were either not answering their telephones or spokespersons declined comment. There was no indication whether others inside the embassy were wounded.

Witnesses said the rebels barged into the embassy with guns blazing.

M-19, whose formal name is the April 19 Movement, was the most active urban rebel group in Colombia until the military arrested more than 1,000 alleged members and put more than 400 on trial earlier this year in courts martial.

minors' rights regarding this matter.

The defendant argued that the Family Planning Center did not violate First Amendment freedom of religion because the clinic staff did not address religious questions when the contraceptives were dispensed. The defense also argued that minors have a right to privacy, which encompasses the right to receive contraceptives.

Notification, if required, would have a chilling effect on minors' right to privacy and prevent minors from obtaining contraceptives, Cohl said.

A key fact presented by the defense, Cohl said, is that 90 percent of the minors who go to the clinic are sexually active anyway.

The federal court of appeals reversed the lower court.

The plaintiff has 60 days to appeal the ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court, which may or may not agree to hear the case, Cohl said.

Cohl said he believes the decision is the first ruling in the country on the issue of notification in regard to contracep-

The lawsuit was the first one in Michigan to test a practice that has been common in government-supported family planning centers, Cohl said.

Michigan has no statute permitting or prohibiting the dispensing of contraceptives to minors without parental consent, he added.

Kingdon said she and the county board of health care were very pleased with the decision.

"We always felt this was a major health issue," Kingdon said. "We're a citizen board and we're parents who feel very strongly about the ties between parents and children."

"Minors who go to the center are encouraged to talk to their parents," she said. "We don't feel we've interfered with parents' rights."

Contraceptives need to be provided because there is a higher risk of premature birth, infant mortality and child abuse among younger mothers, Kingdon said.

One million teen-age girls become pregnant every year, and two-thirds of those pregnancies are out-of-wedlock, she added.

Stations pricing gas by liter, half gallon

By GARY PIATEK
State News Staff Writer

Gasoline prices shot up so fast because of rising oil prices that many service stations were caught with their pumps down.

Gasoline is now being priced at the pump by the liter, the half gallon and the gallon.

Many of the area service stations are selling gas by the half gallon until the necessary conversions to a new system can be made, and station owners say they are having problems.

"Everyday we have problems," said Bud Barlow, a mechanic for Duke's Shell Service, 720 Michigan Ave.

BARLOW SAID CUSTOMERS often do not have enough money because they do not realize they have to double the price on the pump, even though it is clearly marked.

"We just let them go," Barlow said. "About 10 percent come back to pay."

He said that Duke's, which sells gas by the half gallon, will be changing over to liters shortly.

Benda's Little Freeway Service Station, 1301 E. Grand River Ave., was selling gas by the half gallon but has changed back to gallons.

"People don't like that (half gallons)," said John Lietzke, day shift manager of Benda's.

LIETZKE SAID BENDA'S usually sold between 2,700 and 3,200 gallons of gas in an eight-hour shift, but sales went down to 2,200 gallons when they changed to half gallons.

"We're back to gallons now," Lietzke said. "We won't change."

Adcock's Campus Standard 1435 E. Grand River Ave., is in the process of changing to computer pumps that are priced by the gallon.

"It's just an inconvenience," said Bob Rutan, a mechanic at Adcock's. "Everybody gets confused."

Jack Boehlke, owner of Frandor Shell, 3024 E. Saginaw St., said he didn't feel gasoline pump conversions were any problem. His station has sold gas by the liter for more than a month.

"IT'S NO PROBLEM," he said. "People get used to it."

People will have to get used to it because soon all service stations will have pumps that compute the price by the liter or gallon.

Attorney General Frank J. Kelley has ruled that service stations can sell gas by the half gallon until they can make the necessary conversions to gallons or liters, which are required by Michigan law.

Three-digit gas prices are a fairly common sight in this area, but Frandor Shell, 3024 E. Saginaw St., sells gas by the liter. A liter is 1.8 ounces more than a quart.

Director wants authority for equity in city hiring

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

Despite progress in the advancement of affirmative action at Lansing City Hall, the human relations director said his office needs the authority to give more than just advice if hiring is to become totally equitable.

Richard Letts, who has been human relations director since 1965, admits that his office does not "have the power to stop a hiring" if he feels it is discriminatory.

Letts said his duty is to review hiring policies of the department heads and point out inconsistent policies.

"I have no enforcement power," Letts said. "It is an unwritten policy that we give them (department heads) our advice, but that doesn't mean they have to follow it."

LETTS SAID HIS office must have more power if minority employment in all city departments is to equal the minority population of Lansing.

Job areas where minority employment falls below the 13.9 percent minority population in the city include upper level jobs, such as administrative, professional and skilled craft.

Minority employment exceeds the minority ratio in "blue collar" jobs such as technical and maintenance areas, plus office and clerical, Letts said.

Minority employment in lower level jobs is not unusual, Letts said, noting minority employment statistics are similar across the United States.

An employment survey of City Hall notes a 3.24 percent increase in minority employment in 1979 over 1978.

LETTS WARNED, HOWEVER, that the figure can be misleading.

Many minorities retained by the city are hired on a temporary rather than permanent basis, Letts said.

Seasonal and federally funded jobs are often only short term, and it is these jobs that are often given to minorities.

The actual increase in full-time city-funded jobs was 1.71 percent, the report noted. City-funded minority employment for Lansing is 11.99 percent, meaning City Hall minority employment falls short of the 13.9 percent minority population in the city.

LETTS SAID ALTHOUGH he is not satisfied with the current statistics, he said the affirmative action program is making progress.

"We shouldn't cry because minorities are getting jobs. You can't criticize progress."

The human relations department deals with other hiring practices in addition to affirmative action.

Former State News reporter found dead in New York City

A former State News reporter and assistant editor of Ebony magazine was found shot to death Monday night in a rented car parked at New York's La Guardia Airport.

Michele Burgen, 26, was discovered dead by police with a bullet wound in her head and locked inside her car.

Burgen's body was not identified until Tuesday because her purse along with her identification and car keys were missing from the site. No weapon was found by the car.

According to an article in the Detroit Free Press, the dead woman was still wearing a diamond ring and expensive earrings and watch when discovered.

She arrived in New York on Saturday from Chicago, where she was living. According to the article, detectives said she may have been killed that same day.

Burgen was born in Detroit and went to Huron High School in Ann Arbor. She graduated from MSU with high honors in 1976.

Burgen was a State News reporter from 1974 through 1976.

Diane Silver, MSU journalism instructor and campus editor of the State News from 1974 to 1975, said she recalls Burgen as having been a "very nice, very good and clear reporter. She had a lot of hustle," Silver added.

Burgen also worked for the Lansing State Journal and WKAR radio in East Lansing before graduating from MSU.

Leaving East Lansing, she worked as a summer intern for the Chicago Tribune and was later hired by Ebony magazine as an associate editor and then promoted to assistant editor.

Burgen was a half-sister of the television actress Denise Nicholas who starred in Room 222.

PREDICTS 3% INCREASE

Senator sees tuition hike

By MIKE CHAUDHURI
State News Staff Writer

Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Detroit, told the ASMSU Student Board Tuesday that MSU students will face at least a 3 percent increase in tuition next year.

Faxon, the chairperson of the Senate Education Committee, said a 1968 decision by the Michigan Legislature to make students pay a certain percentage of the overall costs of their college education has contributed to higher tuition.

"This means the cost of tuition is controlled by what OPEC charges for fuel," he said.

The senator said Michigan's middle class will suffer the most from rising tuition costs because eventually only students who are on scholarship or are affluent will be able to afford college.

HE SAID IN order to get legislators to reverse tuition increases, students have to "stir them up — see if you can get them excited over it."

After Faxon's discussion, the Student Board decided to support continuation of the PIRGIM-MSU registration tax check-off.

The tax check-off is essential in order for PIRGIM, the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan, to be an effective organization, said Jess Kozman, College of Natural Science representative.

"We've got to work with them (PIRGIM) — we're supposed to be working with them on selective service," said Dennis Jones, College of Social Science representative.

PIRGIM has been funded at registration for the last two years by less than 20 percent of the student population — falling below guidelines set by the University.

CHAIRPERSON BRUCE STUDDER, the only board member to vote against the bill, said PIRGIM had previously agreed to try to raise the percentage of people funding the organization to above 20 percent, but had failed.

"I don't think they fulfilled their obligation," he said. The Student Board will now (continued on page 14)

'U' dean chancellor candidate?

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

Robert L. Green, dean of MSU's College of Urban Development, is being considered as a candidate for chancellor of the University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee, an aide to him confirmed Wednesday.

However, Terry W. Canup, a specialist in the College of Urban Development, said Green still "has a lot of commitment to MSU."

Canup refused to comment

any further on the matter, though, saying Green "thinks it is inappropriate to comment while a search is underway."

The University of Wisconsin Milwaukee, which has an enrollment of about 25,000 students, has been looking for a chancellor since Werner Baum left the position vacant when he retired Sept. 1, 1979.

MEANWHILE, JOHN BIBBY, chairperson of the search and selection committee of the university, said the list of candidates had been narrowed from about 100 names to less than eight.

Bibby, who refused to say if Green's name was on the list, said they are "looking for someone who has appreciation for urban communities," since many of their students are from urban sections of Milwaukee.

Bibby added they were also looking for someone with "significant administrative experience." (continued on page 12)

Students arrested for theft of banner

Campus police arrested two MSU students Wednesday in connection with the theft of the NCAA basketball championship banner that hangs in Jenison Fieldhouse, police said.

Police said the students, who both gave East Lansing addresses were caught with the 6-by-12-foot green and white banner in their possession at about 1 a.m. Wednesday.

The students were released on their personal recognizance, police said.

Officials investigate fire on Olds Hall roof

Fire officials are investigating the cause of fire Tuesday night on the roof of Olds Hall.

Occupational Safety Supervisor Carl Eigenauer said the apparent cause of the fire was the spontaneous combustion of a tar mop used in retarring the roof this week.

Campus police said the building was evacuated at about 7:52 p.m. Tuesday with the East Lansing Fire Department responding to the alarm.

Eigenauer said about $400 worth of tools and roofing material were destroyed. He said the fire could have easily spread to the rest of the building if it hadn't been detected when it was.

Campus police said the fire was reported over a green light emergency phone — the first genuine emergency to be reported over the system.

Are you aware of the opportunities and benefits available to you as an Air Force scientific or engineering officer? Are you a degree candidate looking for an opportunity to gain experience working with some of the finest equipment in the world? The Air Force can provide you with greater initial responsibilities as a young engineer or scientist than can be found in industry. You will often find young officers managing projects valued in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. ## 'U' trustees need expense guidelines

An external audit of MSU trustees' expenses is, at this point, mere "frosting" on the cake. Jack Stack, R-Alma, said after the last Board of Trustees meeting. And the trustees who initiated the audit resolution which led to former Trustee Michael Smydra's downfall seemed more than pleased by the turn of events.

The final chapter of the "Smydra at MSU saga" began Friday when a resolution to bill him $1,834.50 for inappropriate expenditures received unanimous approval at the board audit committee meeting. As Smydra has defaulted on bank loans before, we wish the University luck in any effort to collect the refunded Amtrak tickets and extra football passes which Smydra took MSU for in his two-year, $16,147 odyssey as a trustee.

Smydra is gone, but the trustee expenditure guidelines which allowed him to milk the University for all he could get are as loose as they ever were. The apparent holes concerned trustees enough that they spent the better part of an hour Friday discussing trustee functions and accountability. The debate was prompted by the submission of a $260 bill by Trustee Carol Lick, D-Kalamazoo, after she had taken a trip to Madison, Wis. Lick had contacted Trustee John Bruff, D-Fraser, before going, because a 1978 amendment to trustee bylaws requires they receive prior board approval for monthly expenses exceeding $200.

The amendment, written because of Smydra, was apparently not read by him. After the audit resolution and before his resignation, Smydra acknowledged that he took unauthorized side trips to universities in Houston and Galveston before attending an American Governing Board conference in Dallas, and had billed MSU for the extra travel expenses. Smydra said then that he thought he could attain board approval "retroactively."

Lick's trip to Wisconsin, where she represented the University during the Big Ten Women's Basketball Championship, is obviously uncontested. But the $200 limit written for Smydra's benefit is not a realistic one for board members in certain circumstances. For it is difficult enough to get all the trustees together for their monthly meetings, much less to approve funding for extra expenditures. Propriety instead of the amount of money spent should be the issue, and it is on this point that trustees definitely lack guidance.

MSU President Cecil Mackey has told trustees he would like to see them attend more University events, and encouraged board members to participate in a wider range of activities than they have in the past. More representation would result in higher trustee expenses, but their knowledge as governing board officials is critical to the University. Stack maintains he is uncomfortable with "individualistic" side trips and approval after the fact. We wholeheartedly agree. The trip late MSU Trustee Kenneth Thompson made around the world with the Office of International Studies and Programs near the end of his term in office exemplifies the need for guidelines to determine who goes where, and how trips should be paid for. Although the money for Thompson's trip came from a Ford Foundation Grant to the Mid-West Universities Consortium for International Activities, and Thompson did inspect several University overseas projects on his whirlwind tour, it is questionable whether the knowledge he gained from the excursion benefited MSU, occurring as it did near the end of his trusteeship.

Now that Smydra is gone, trustees could one-up the 96th Congress, which failed to come up with any viable ethics legislation after Richard Nixon resigned. Although Smydra was an exception to the rule, revised guidelines for trustee expenditures would do more than "frost" a successful effort.

Paraphernalia bill

Rep. Richard Fitzpatrick, D-Battle Creek, has probably never seen a 19-year-old or older adult throwing a frisbee. If he had, he might realize that youngsters are not the only crowd that use such toys, or for that matter, use the sort of drug paraphernalia he is presently trying to ban because he thinks it appeals only to youngsters. Actually, the supplies he speaks of appeal to pot smokers of all ages, even the more outrageous instruments such as frisbees with built-in pipes.

Fitzpatrick says he wants to put a lid on the sale of pot pipes, bongos, roachclips and all other paraphernalia, including cigarette papers, to persons under 19 because its manufacturers are appealing heavily to youngsters as well as legal adults. He is correct that making the sale of paraphernalia available to anyone has less than discouraged the use of marijuana. But we wonder if the problem stops there.

Statistically, it is evident that a lot of people smoke pot, many of them in the high school age bracket. This is mostly the result of peer pressure, curiosity and generally relaxed public attitude toward marijuana. It is not the result, however, of a paraphernalia industry that manufactures "toys" that only a young person would buy. People who smoke marijuana do so by choice, and will continue to do so whether or not they are able to purchase paraphernalia themselves.

Controlling the drug problem in high schools does not begin with outlawing paraphernalia. The factors that make the use of pot so readily available must be addressed first, and the fact that they have not, points to the actual complexity of a widespread drug problem. Fitzpatrick's bill, while it will not solve the problem, will drive a lot of paraphernalia shops out of business, stores that also cater to persons who may find themselves smoking pot legally if Michigan's pot bill ever becomes law.

But to address the issue of aiming paraphernalia only at the young, we wish the issue was that clear cut. The fact is, the gimmickry in paraphernalia appeals to everyone, which may account for the reason why sales are high enough for some to warrant a crackdown.

VIEWPOINT: SN COVERAGE

Reader opposes 'pro-gay' stance

By DOUGLAS A. WILSON

Ever since fall term 1976, I have been intrigued by the pro-gay coverage in The State News. The pro-gay material has been presented in an increasingly favorable light, especially since the election of Dan Jones and castration of Ira Combs in 1978. Initially it annoyed and repulsed me, now I would not be surprised if some of The State News staff members said they were "gay."

It obviously is no longer a joking matter. I do not hate homosexuals or advocate "killing a queer for Christ" (or anybody), neither am I ignorant of the homosexual scene. I have been exposed to it from many angles. I simply think homosexuality is sickening and wrong.

My initial exposure to this subject began rather crudely. When I was 7, two of my friends and I were held captive by a homosexual who began sexually abusing us. A rescue party ended his fun. I suppose because of this incident I could have hated all homos, but I don't. In fact, eight years ago I was definitely a nonconformist by proclaiming it was all right for them to "do their thing." Remember, eight years ago Anita Bryant was still popular and homos really weren't. However, since then my stand, as well as much of the public's has changed.

As time has passed, I have become sick of the glassy-eyed stares of homos in the Union bathroom stalls watching others urinate. They sit there with their legs, mouths, and other organs advertising their desire — the message is clear. I know it's true; some of them have told me they are "gay." One of my roommates had a homo look up underneath the stall and even caught one peeping through his stall door. Once while cat-napping in the Union reading area I overheard two homosexuals discussing the attractive legs of a certain male. Perhaps the most repulsive incident occurred when I walked into a Berkeley Hall bathroom one Friday night to discover one guy giving another "head" in one of the stalls, yes, our hallowed halls of Berkeley. Once even an older man — a homo — tried to grab me after picking me up when I was hitchhiking (no, he never got that far). Yes, I even had one admit to me he was sick, but he said all he really wanted was to have sex with me. Instead, I offered to help him, but he was too afraid to give me his number after picking me up hitchhiking!

No, I don't believe homosexuals have to be or were born that way; who was ever born from a homosexual couple? Regarding this matter, David Charles Craley wrote a fantastic and revealing autobiography, The Hope of Glory (In Search of the Light). He unfolds his life story and deliverance from homosexuality. In one section he says:

I was gay for most of my life until I was 27. I've been to the wildest gay spots in the country. Night after night I lived in the bars. I even had a handsome lover for a year and a half. Deep inside of me, even as I was living it, I knew I could not possibly come out right — that there was something fundamentally wrong about my way of life.

What is fundamentally wrong with it? I ask you, is it natural for the male sex organ to enter another male's anus or mouth? The same question applies respectively to women.

The book many homosexuals loathe says in Romans 1:26, 27 that homosexuality is "vile affections," it is "against nature" it is "leaving the natural use," it is "burned in lust one toward another," it is "unseemly," it is "error," it is "not convenient," it is of "a reprobate mind." Many won't accept this. Fine, I didn't write the book, but I know what it says, and what I have seen and read in my life.

God is love; he does not hate homos. For those who want it, God offers life, and that eternal. A person can be delivered from homosexuality. I know some who have been. For those who are they do not need to cry for "gay rights." Why? Because God through His son, Jesus Christ, gives people ability to truly love. He can help people change so that they can be right.

LETTERS

'U's investment is inconsistent

In the three years I have spent at this University, some pretty debatable policies have been formulated and from all appearances, another one is in the making. As recalled, the University has sold all its stock holdings of companies that do business in South Africa, to protest the government's policy of apartheid. Just this move seemed senseless to me, as a corporation the size of General Motors probably would not be too concerned about a few thousands shares of already purchased stock changing owners. But the best part is that the University has allowed an investment in the Martin-Mariette Co., which is developing the MX missile system. Further, as reported in Monday's State News, it is felt that money in the future would be best invested in defense-oriented corporations. The University is proud of taking action to protest the policy of a racist government, but has no qualms in investing in a company that produces weapons capable of killing hundreds of thousands.

The inconsistency of this latest action makes one wonder whether to take the University's protest of discrimination seriously, when the administrators show a desire to indirectly support a company that produces lethal weapons. Maybe they feel that it is OK, as the missiles do not discriminate like South Africa does.

Pacifists should reconsider draft

I'm fed up with all these anti-registration and anti-draft articles which have appeared in the paper the last few weeks. Practically every day there is a meeting, demonstration, or yet another pacifist condemning the draft. There are plenty of us who are sick of this timid whining and are anxious to hear your answers to the defense problems.

Just how do you radicals plan to defend yourselves if serious problems develop? The people who work in the military tell us the volunteer army doesn't work. But, of course, you know what they're really trying to do: they're just trying to get you cowards out of class and onto that awful battlefield where you'll be left to die...die?

Now wait just a minute. That does sound pretty heavy. Maybe you boys have something there. I wouldn't want to participate in anything that violent. Since when did the government get the right to ask me to help out? Why can't it fight its own battles and leave me alone?

I guess you boys are right after all. Now I understand. If I were you, I wouldn't go, either. I'm just going to stay home and get an education, crank up my stereo, join an "anti-group" (any one will do), and enjoy the gracious life I deserve. I know plenty of kids who enjoy fighting and hunting and football, and they'd probably like to go. After all, it's not my responsibility to serve others if I can't feel at peace with my soul.

So stand tall. Hold to your guns. Fight for your personal rights. Don't be lured by society's propaganda of "national interest" or "military security." Brothers and sisters, we must rally together, paint buildings, hold hands, harass the National Guard, and let our elders know we're serious about peace.

I'm sorry if I might have sounded a bit narrow-minded at the beginning. I feel a lot better now about myself. And love. And flowers. Oh, isn't everything beautiful. I think I'll buy a puppy.

Rodeo not a harmless sport

In regard to the MSU Rodeo held last weekend, let me provide a few facts about rodeos in general, which should help determine if we should support such a "sport":

• The animals buck, not because they are wild or untame, but because methods such as spurs, electric prods or the popular bucking strap are used on them. The bucking strap is a leather strap that is cinched tightly around the animal's flanks — tormenting it to make it buck and appear wild.

• In calf roping, the calves travel an average of 27 mph, and the resulting force which occurs when it is roped injures the animal in some way, sometimes severely.

• Steer busting and team roping also result in injury to the animal, usually in the form of broken horns, torn ligaments, and injured muscles. (Facts from the Humane Society of the United States.)

Since the majority of the public is unaware of these facts, it continues to support rodeos, which have grown into a huge, profit-making business. No sport which causes needless pain and torment to an animal should be allowed, especially as a money-making venture.

Rodeos are not the glamorous and "romantic" sport they are portrayed to be — they are a cruel, inhumane practice which should not be supported by our society.

Don't trust those Wolverines

Usually it's the news and editorial pages that have me rolling in the aisles when I pick up my copy of The State News. But today it was a modest display ad with big fat black type for the words, "Radiation Protection." (The small type said, "at the University of Michigan.") With a heading like that, how could I help but be hooked? I eagerly read on. I discovered that there are "high-paying interesting jobs," first of all, but that didn't stop me. After all, if I can be protected from radiation, it might be worth my while to take a job even though it violates all my principles. I continued to read. I found that there is "a growing profession" — and this, I'll admit, did slow me down a bit. I mean, there are people who profess to protect you from radiation? I've known professors and I've known professors, but these must be the biggest con artists in history. But I kept on reading.

And here at last came the punch line: "It's a profession in which the demand for graduates far exceeds the supply." Suddenly visions of handsome young MSU graduates trooping down to Ann Arbor and lining up to be fitted into lead-lined boxes, shoved onto a conveyor belt and dumped into nuclear reactor cores at Fermi II. And there's a shop manager shouting, "More, more! We need more graduates to protect us from the radiation! Get some more, quick!"

Beware, Spartans! Don't let those nasty Wolverines trick you! Always be sure to read the small type.

Saudi's King Khaled recovers

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — King Khaled of Saudi Arabia, who reportedly suffered a mild heart attack last week, is in good condition and his health continues to improve, Riyadh radio said Wednesday.

Khaled received royal princes, cabinet ministers and a number of Saudi citizens at the modern King Faisal Hospital in the Saudi capital, added the broadcast, monitored in Cyprus.

Reports indicated the king may have been allowed to resume limited activity following his reported heart attack Feb. 18. The radio said he received a message from Kuwait's ruler, Sheikh Jabir al-Ahmad al-Sabah. Other reports from Riyadh said Khaled even got out of his hospital bed to pose for pictures.

New tests detect death syndrome

BOSTON (AP) — New tests may tell parents whether they are likely to have children who are susceptible to sudden infant death syndrome, the mysterious disorder that is the nation's biggest killer of infants.

The tests show that parents of susceptible babies often do not inhale powerfully if their breath is cut off. And even though this is not a serious problem for grownups, researchers theorize that it may be a fatal defect if passed on to children.

The new study, conducted at Rutgers Medical School, was published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Ceiling put on interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal banking regulators on Wednesday set a temporary ceiling of 12 percent on the interest that can be paid on 2 and one-half-year savings certificates at the nation's thrift institutions.

A cap of 11.75 percent was put on the rate that can be paid at commercial banks.

The action was taken because the rate on the certificates available starting Monday was expected to surge to more than 13 percent from the roughly 10.5 percent available this month.

"This action is necessary because the federal regulatory agencies believe that a sudden increase of this magnitude would be disruptive to many financial institutions, particularly those holding a high proportion of longer-term, fixed-rate loans," said a statement issued by banking regulators.

Frats reject Penthouse offer

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Stanford University fraternities have rejected an offer from Penthouse magazine for an all-expenses-paid party, featuring four Penthouse "Pets," 100 kegs of beer and a band.

The Stanford Inter-Fraternity Council took the action Tuesday after campus feminist groups argued that the university might appear to be supporting the magazine, which features photo layouts of nude women along with fiction, interviews and articles.

Inter-Fraternity Council president John Kinney said Penthouse told him they would allow fraternity members to sell $3 raffle tickets to Penthouse-supplied prizes, including stereo equipment and a trip to the Bahamas. The money from the raffle and from a car wash would go to a charity selected by the fraternity.

Rabies reported in Boston

BOSTON (AP) — Rabies has killed a cat in Boston, the first such case in Massachusetts in 67 years, according to the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Dr. Gus Thornton, chief of staff of the MSPCA's Angell Memorial Hospital, said the cat was born and raised in the Hyde Park section of Boston, and had never been immunized.

Thornton said the cat died at Angell Memorial Feb. 12. He said there was no way to determine how the cat contracted the disease.

All persons who had close contact with the cat are undergoing rabies immunization shots. "And there's quite a number of them," Thornton said.

Soviets congratulate Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Olympic hockey team's upset victory over a veteran Soviet squad resulted in an unusual gesture of good will between American and Russian forces in the Indian Ocean area.

Defense officials said two Soviet IL-38 patrol planes radioed congratulations to a U.S. A-7 fighter that had intercepted them while they were flying near the U.S. carrier Coral Sea.

The Soviet Flyers switched their radios to an international frequency and, speaking in English, congratulated the Americans on the Olympic triumph.

Last weekend, after the American hockey team had won 4-3 at Lake Placid, N.Y., the U.S. aircraft carrier Nimitz flashed the news by blinker light to a Russian intelligence-gathering ship steaming nearby.

Men sentenced in killing

OROVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Two White men, who admitted murdering a deaf Black man because they found no game to kill on a drunken hunting expedition, were sentenced to the maximum 25 years to life in prison Wednesday by a judge who said they should never be set free.

"Marvin Dean Noor and James Thomas McCarter have demonstrated for some time their total disregard for the rights of others," said Butte County Superior Court Judge Jean Morony.

"Their action in this case was callous and malicious with a total wanton disregard for the right of another to live... It is my recommendation that their terms be fixed at life and that they be kept in prison for life without any parole whatsoever at any time."

Third World growth threatens women

By LESA DOLL
State News Staff Writer

Rapid growth and development have a negative effect on women in Third World countries, Perdita Huston, a regional director of the Peace Corps said Tuesday.

Huston, speaking to a small crowd on women and world development, said many of the problems resulting from rapid change in developing countries are taking their toll on women.

"They know how rapid change is affecting their lives, and they're scared," she said.

Huston, an accomplished journalist and author, said in her recent book, Third World Women Speak Out, that shifts from barter system to cash economies often "leave women behind."

Huston said the traditional roles of women in these countries are not income producing roles. As men become more dependent on cash they may leave home for the cities, leaving the women to raise the children, she said.

"I think the family is becoming more vulnerable because of progress, development and so on," Huston said.

"They (the women) said 'I've been left behind, but I will do anything so my children won't be left behind,'" she said.

It is difficult for women to leave children behind, Huston added, because they do not have the money to provide for clothing and education. Many women attempt to hold on to their "support systems" — their husbands — and try to please them so they will not be abandoned, she said.

"You won't find many women trying to buck the system if their whole family and peer group would fall apart," she said.

Traditionally, women in developing countries have had one child a year, because it proved "the man was a man," Huston said. However many children died at an early age because of insufficient health care and nutrition.

Now due to improved health care in Third World countries, the infant mortality rate has decreased and women are raising more children. To please their husbands however, women must keep giving birth, Huston said.

"When a woman's security is based on pleasing that man, she is going to go along with his wishes, because her whole security system will fall apart if she doesn't," Huston added.

During her stay on campus, Huston also presented a plaque to MSU President Cecil Mackey commending MSU for recruiting the highest number of Peace Corps volunteers among American colleges and universities over the last five years.

Addressing Mackey, members of the administration, and many MSU Peace Corps volunteers, Huston praised the University for its recruiting program, but told them the Peace Corps will continue to expect "more in the future."

"Peace Corps is a people-to-people organization. Those thinking they want to enter Peace Corps and change the world should stay home. You might touch 20 or 30 lives, but you will change those lives," she added.

Senate votes down privacy amendment

By LANI WIEGAND
United Press International

A proposed amendment to the state Constitution guaranteeing privacy rights met a final defeat in the Senate Wednesday amid arguments it could lead to legalization of prostitution, pornography and homosexuality.

The proposed amendment fell four votes short of the 26 necessary for Senate approval. It met a similar defeat last fall, but sponsor Sen. Basil Brown requested reconsideration of that vote.

If approved, the voters would have been asked whether the state should specifically guarantee the right to privacy on the November ballot.

"It's an attempt to put into our Constitution what I believe may already be there, but is not well stated," Brown, D-Highland Park, said.

"In present day life and times, it's one of our most cherished rights."

Brown warned individual rights, including abortion, could be endangered without the constitutional guarantee.

Others said the amendment could "undo what we have attempted to do in recent years" by undermining recently enacted open meetings and freedom of information laws.

"What about rules concerning prostitution, homosexual acts — would these be wiped off the books by this amendment?" said Sen. Stephen Monsma, D-Grand Rapids.

Brown criticized Monsma and other reluctant senators for fearing "hockeymen and Halloween specters."

"If you'd like to have your wife's and your sister's womb opened up to the public, vote against this bill," Brown said.

Fire fighters rescue man from burning house trailer

A 78-year-old Meridian Township man was rescued from his burning house trailer Tuesday night by Meridian firefighters.

Edward Weiber, of Mobile Home Manor, 2756 E. Grand River Ave., was listed in critical condition Wednesday at Sparrow Hospital from smoke inhalation.

Meridian Fire Marshal Phillip Johnson said the blaze apparently started in an electrical outlet in the living room of the trailer.

He said a neighbor reported the fire to the Meridian Fire Department, which responded at about 10:57 p.m. Tuesday.

Johnson said the fire was brought under control in about 10 minutes.

It helps to prepare for the future, and these children get a preview of what to expect in the way of residence hall food at Shaw Hall Wednesday. The kids, who are from Sandhill Cooperative Preschool, toured the Shaw kitchen as well as the rest of the hall.

'Shadow Box' is stunning

By WILLIAM BARNHARDT
State News Reviewer

It may be that The Company, a group of local dramatists under the direction of Dennis Martin, has put together the finest local production thus far this year. The Company has successfully tackled the Michael Cristofer drama The Shadow Box, the still controversial Pulitzer and Tony-winning 1977 play, that even yet swims amid mixed reviews and variable audience reactions. Some felt the play was a collection of exploitables — escapism, homo- and heterosexual decadence, senility, and the main theme of dying and accepting death — all sheathed in essay vulgarities and street talk. When I saw it at Northwestern University, I agreed with that description. What transforms this unconventional drama into impressive theater is skillful direction, deliberate and committed portrayals, and a production focused on exploring death with insight and intensity.

There are three cottages in this California resort, and three dying people have come to spend their last days with family and friends. The set-up is intentionally unclear, and the source of the interviewer's voice (played offstage by Estelle Goda) is never more than metaphorically known.

In the first cottage is Joe (Edward J. Mills), just a working-class guy from Newark, everybody's next-door neighbor. He tells the interviewer he feels all right despite all, he's looking forward to the arrival of his wife (Susan Karsnick) and his young gutter-mouthed son (Gabe Labovitz) whom he is sure his wife has told of his dying. He's wrong. She didn't have the nerve to tell him, she doesn't even have the nerve to face it herself.

In the second cottage, there's Brian (John Stimson). Brian's talk with the interviewer gives him away as an artist, a writer prone to fits of high-pitched effusion about life and its wonder and its fullness and its nearing finale. He's living with Mark, (Gregg Schulte) his newly-acquired lover, ex-San Francisco prostitute turned imprisoned intellectual. Both are in store for a visit from his ex-wife Beverly (Susie Breck), a beautiful, sharp-tongued shrew who dances into the cottage proclaiming it a "coffin." And she and Mark naturally don't hit it off, but when the bottle gets passed around things get a little more out in the open, like Mark's disgust of Brian's death, and Beverly's disgust with her own life.

In the third cottage, there's the debilitated wheelchair-user Felicity (Polly McGurran), senile and crabby, and her nurse and daughter Agnes (Margaret Ingraham), the daughter that got stuck with Mama now that she's dying, but of course she doesn't mind. Felicity gripes and complains, curses most everybody, and calls for her other daughter, Clare, asks for Clare, speculates about Clare's impending visit. Even Agnes supplies her mother with letters from Clare. But as where Clare died a long time ago, Mama's death seems a long time off and they're both just waiting and wanting for the whole thing to get over with. It would be impossible to say which woman is more pathetic.

I didn't comment on individual performances, for I can say collectively that they all are extraordinary. The difficulty level is high too. Consider John Stimson's artist romancing death to hide his fear, or Edward Mills's down-to-earth working man reminiscing about the repossessed washer and dryer while his wife waits for some last benediction on their marriage, or Margaret Ingraham's dutiful daughter keeping her mother's delusions alive while wanting her mother's will to live to terminate. Susan Karsnick and Susie Breck explode and confess in two so distinct female characterizations, there's not an alike gesture between them. Gregg Schulte convinces us Mark is off the streets, Polly McGurran convinces us Felicity and her convolutions are near their death, and Gabe Labovitz as Joe's son and Estelle Goda's interviewer bring the compassion to this balanced and thoroughly professional performance.

In case one is worried about the play engendering a case of lasting depression, it doesn't. It is remarkably uplifting, for in these characters' resolution to accept their deaths there is also a commitment to the fullest application of their remaining lives, making the best of what they have. Cristofer's play is also a message to not be caught in his characters' struggle of "what have I done with my life?" The Shadow Box, which continues its run in the Union Ballroom through this Saturday, is not so much a play about death and the dying as it is a message to the living. The play is NOT suitable for children or prudish adults.

Risk: ready-for-war games

By MARK FELLOWS
State News Staff Writer

It seemed like an innocent enough invasion. Fifteen red armies blitzkrieg through Afghanistan from their base in the Ukraine. Only China stands in the way of Asian conquest. Tension runs high as general contemplate their now-vulnerable positions. Who will be next — India? The Middle East?

As Big Supreme Commander of the Red Mance I eye the green hordes in China and the yellow threat in the Middle East with suspicion, anticipating a counter-attack against my exposed southern flank. I realign 12 armies back to the Ukraine and exit to war room to fetch another Stroh's. Napoleon was right; an army travels on its stomach.

Fantasy games have been getting a lot of attention since Egbert split. Especially Dungeons and Dragons, a game allowing players to assume their imaginary role. But another popular game has been virtually ignored, a game more realistic than D 'n D but still suitable for role playing.

It's called Risk, a delightful board game from the same running dog capitalists who sold us Monopoly. But instead of escaping a nasty old dungeon with your elfin life, this game allows the repressed Alexander or Attila in all of us to — that's right — conquer the world. Think of it. Here's your chance to fulfill your will to power, to boldly attempt what has never been done before, to enter the world of geopolitics! Great guns!

Here's the set-up: up to six would-be generals choose the color of their armies and the country or continent from where they wish to begin their conquests — North America, Africa, anywhere except Antarctica. Bonus armies are awarded for holding continents (kind of conscription) and the larger continents provide more armies per turn. Players attack each other and defend themselves until one player remains

Cuban folk group on campus tonight

The National Folk Ensemble of Cuba (Conjunto Folclórico Nacional de Cuba), currently on its first tour of the United States, comes to the MSU Auditorium tonight for an 8:15 performance.

Organized in 1962 to preserve the folk song and dance tradition of Cuba, the group has toured extensively in eastern and western Europe and Central and South America. It has also performed in international folk festivals in Cuba and abroad. Approximately 60 of the group's 110 dancers, who train anywhere from two to seven years in the ensemble's school in Havana, are on the U.S. tour.

The dances, often performed in bare feet and colorful costumes to the beat of 13 drums, are part of the island's Afro-Caribbean heritage. The origin goes back to Iberia, Nigeria, the Congo, Dahomey and Sudan, where many of Cuba's slaves came from in the 19th Century. Many of the dances are narrative in style, telling the story of the slaves' liberation or the arrival of French fugitives from Haiti, who introduce dances from the courts of Europe.

The ensemble's MSU appearance is part of the Lecture-Concert season's Lively Arts and Choice series ticket package. Individual tickets are on sale at the MSU Union ticket office, 355-3361. The price range is $6 to $9.50 for the public, half price for all students.

Blitzkrieg symphonies with the Ramones

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Reviewer

"The definition of rock 'n' roll is: Daring. Exciting — catchy and melodic tunes. The kids are now being deprived, cheated and brainwashed bad. It's not their fault, most of them just don't know better. Rock 'n' roll is dying 'cause the media and corporate radio are trying to kill it as they've always been trying since the days of Elvis and Gene Vincent."

— Joey Ramone, 1979

When rock 'n' roll legend Phil Spector decided to produce the Ramones' fifth studio LP following his work remixing the band's tracks for Rock 'N' Roll High School, the pre-release publicity about "the two walls of sound finally meeting" became so overwhelming that it seemed the record itself would be an anti-climax.

After all, while Spector's claim to rock immortality has never been at stake, most of the producer's spare work throughout the '70s — beginning with Let It Be and continuing with artists as varied as Cher, Harry Nilsson, Dion and Leonard Cohen — was less than great. (The only real exceptions might be George Harrison's All Things Must Pass or Spector's early work with John Lennon, but even those didn't match the genius of his past achievements.) Secondly, while the Ramones owed a great deal to Spector's original "wall of sound," the band owed just as much to early (pre-death) heavy metal, the mid-'60s garage bands, the Beach Boys and even Herman's Hermits. Although the catchy pop tunes began with their second LP, the Ramones never exactly sounded like Ronnie Spector or the Crystals.

And so the cautious Ramones fan has no idea of what to expect when the long-awaited LP, End Of The Century (Sire SRK 6077) finally arrives and she or he drops it on the turntable . . . radio static. An Alan Freed-like announcer: "This is rock 'n' roll radio. C'mon let's rock 'n' roll with the Ramones." And suddenly there is that unmistakable atomic drum beat behind a literal army of electric guitars, acoustic guitars, pianos, organs, bass guitars, strings and horns, as Joey Ramone begins chanting a standard Ramones slogan: "Rock it! Rock 'n' roll radio! Let's go."

A battalion of saxophones begin playing a rock 'n' roll riff so catchy, so irresistible, so perfect that it almost dares the listener not to smile and shake some part of the body. And suddenly the listener is caught in a time warp. This is definitely the Ramones, but it's also one of the grandest rock productions since . . . well, since the days when Phil Spector coaxed some angels down from rock 'n' roll heaven, named them the Ronettes, and helped them record a piece of love called "Be My Baby."

"Do You Remember Rock 'N' Roll Radio?" is a perfect song. Joey Ramone has never sang with more emotion as the song reaches its Spectorish crescendos, and the lyrics are great — "Do you remember lying in bed/With your covers pulled up over your head/Radio playing so no one can see/We need change, we need it fast/Before rock's just part of the past/Cause lately it all sounds the same to me." And any song that pays tribute to Hullabaloo, Shindig, John Lennon, Jerry Lee Lewis, T-Rex and Moutly (the drummer in the mid-'60s punk band, the Barbarians, who had a hook instead of a hand) already has a lot going for it.

The song is perfect in that it is a clear example of the type of music from rock's golden age that Joey is singing about. Despite what one may think of End Of The Century as a whole, it can't be denied that "Do You Remember Rock 'N' Roll Radio?" is a genuine classic, if for no other reason than it is Spector's best production work in over 10 years. The fact that he accomplished it with the granddaddy of punk/new wave/power pop bands makes it all the more classic.

End Of The Century has spurred some controversy among Ramones fans who feel the band has sold out to commercial acceptance with the slicker sound of the new LP. The biggest complaints seem to be the symphony string-oriented cover of the Ronettes' "Baby I Love You" and "Danny Says," the latter being as close to a traditional Beach Boys-like ballad as "Sheena" was to psychotic Beach Boys. (Just for the record: Johnny Ramone recently said that the boys left the studio when Spector added strings because it may have been "too painful.") Nonetheless, both songs are fun and they work if only for this one time.

The commercial accusations may also be over-reaction. Spector builds an '80s equivalent of his "wall of sound" orchestra on the LP, but the center of that wall is always the Ramones — the same Ramones we've known and loved for years. In fact, most of the music here doesn't strike me as nearly as commercial as some of the tunes on Road To Ruin. (Remember the C&W oriented "Questioningly")

In addition, there are numerous examples of standard Ramones four-chord lunacy on End Of The Century. Although Spector toys with sporadic echo on the great "I'm Affected" and it's both strange and fascinating to hear a nostalgic Spector glockenspiel mixed in with the hard rock of "I Can't Make It On Time" (this is a great "headphones" album!), Spector lets the band rock out with raw power on "Chinese Rock" and "Let's Go," both of which would be right at home on any Ramones LP except the first. The latter song is a tongue-in-cheek look at war handled with true Ramones subtlety — which is none at all — while "Chinese Rock," a sardonic look at heroin, was originally credited to Dee Dee Ramone, Johnny Thunders, Walter Lure and Richard Hell, and it was included on both the Heartbreakers' studio and live import LPs. The Ramones' version is better.

End Of The Century isn't the Ramones best LP. (Rocket To Russia may always hold that title.) Several weak songs on the second side prevent it from being a perfect record. But when the album is good, it's GREAT, and these moments place it way above the typical rock 'n' roll releases of this or any given year.

I, for one, am glad to see the Ramones — the closest thing '70s rock had to the Fabulous Furry Freak Brothers and perhaps the single most important catalyst in the new wave explosion — grow and experiment. Hopefully, End Of The Century coupled with the cult success of Rock 'N' Roll High School will grant this band the superstardom it so richly deserves.

As for Phil Spector — rock's first "boy genius" and "Tycoon of Teen," one of the only people to ever work with both the Beatles and the Stones, the man who portrayed the archetypal Hollywood coke snorter in Easy Rider, the man who was the biggest single influence on Bruce Springsteen's sound, and the man who created teen dream after teen dream with songs like "Da Doo Ron Ron," "He's A Rebel" and "You've Lost That Lovin' Feelin'" — he's currently in the studio with the Flamin' Groovies who plan to recreate Spector's "River Deep, Mountain High" on their next LP. This rock fanatic can hardly wait!

AWARD-WINNING SAX

Ronnie Laws returns to MSU Friday

Showcasejazz is bringing ever popular saxophonist Ronnie Laws back to Erickson Kiva for two shows this Friday at 8:30 and 11 p.m. Tickets for both shows are $7.50 in advance and $8.50 at the door.

Few people have come from as musical a background as has Ronnie Laws. His brother Hubert is a noted jazz/classical flautist, his sister Eloise is an accomplished actress/singer, and his mother Miola is a gospel pianist. With an environment such as this, it's no surprise that Ronnie has picked up an alto saxophone at the age of 12. He was friendly with the members of a local group who later became the Crusaders, and began gigging around with the rich Houston musical scene when he was still in high school.

Laws turned down scholarship offers from Berklee School of Music and Juilliard to attend Stephen F. Austin University, which he left after two years to gain actual playing experience. He joined various bands, including Van Ryan's Express, Quincy Jones, and Walter Bishop, before joining Earth, Wind and Fire. He left EW&F after their first Columbia album and enjoyed a short stint with trumpeter Hugh Masekela before striking out on his own.

His first Blue Note release, Pressure Sensitive, was the largest selling debut album in the label's history. He garnered a number of awards as a result of his initial success, and his second album, Fever, did as well as the first, crossing over onto the pop charts, as had Pressure Sensitive.

Laws continued to add funk and pop influences to his jazz roots, and his subsequent albums, Friends and Strangers and Flame, were even more pop oriented and received substantial airplay. His newest album, Every Generation, has only been out for a few short weeks, and has already leapt into Billboard's No. 4 slot. Another strong recording, it places him even more firmly into the mainstream of today's commercial jazz.

Advance tickets are available until noon Friday at the

Ronnie Laws

Union Ticket office, Where-House Records and Flat, Black and Circular.

Yes, even you can conquer the world with Risk

Eurasia or East Asia and trade off non-aligned territory when it suits them. I wonder if he ever won, 'cause 1984 gets closer every day.

But the real fun starts when the barstool generals begin to identify with their armies. After three hours of attrition, drink and God-Knows what's-in-that-stuff you begin to think you're, well, name your own hero. No time for pacifist liberals here, no sir.

For example the commander of the Green Slime now sports an Aussie-style bush hat, sunglasses, tan shorts and a fairly large machete.

Another would-be Hannibal in North America wears Herman Survivor boots, baggy o.d. green pants and conceals a nasty looking 9 mm. automatic pistol in a shoulder holster. He fidgets with the clip between moves, making me glad we're out of ammo. I think.

I opt for a sensible cast-off U.S. jacket from Nam that holds two 12-ounce cans in each pocket. I slide a .308 rifle that hasn't been cleaned since World War I under the table as insurance.

The armaments are optional, of course, but serve to swiftly resolve the inevitable arguments ensuing from some dullard who miscounts his bonus armies, or something equally trivial. This is called "Deadly Serious Risk," a variation not recommended for bleeding hearts who are frightened of guns. It's kind of like massive retaliation with a healthy dose of brinkmanship thrown in just for fun.

A game will usually end by: 1) one player winning according to the rules, 2) everyone nodding out, leaving one semi-conscious player who couldn't care less at 4 a.m., or 3) someone overreacting to a turn of events with the moral equivalent of nuclear annihilation.

But, as hard-core players will testify, Risk is an addicting pastime. The insights it offers into behavior and morality compel one to compare it to, yup, world politics.

Like I said, Carter could learn a few lessons from Risk while he's dodging snowflakes in the rose garden. I wouldn't mind teaching him to play in his own right. Then I'd whip his ass.

UNIVERSITY OF DETROIT FAVORED

Women cagers host state tourney

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

This year's State of Michigan Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (SMAIAW) basketball tournament gets under way at 2 p.m. today in the IM Sports-West arena, with the MSU cagers seeded second.

The No. 1 seed is the University of Detroit, which enters this year's event with a 20-6 overall record, and is defending state champion.

In addition, the Titans are 8-0 against in-state opponents, including wins against the Spartans, and Western Michigan and Central Michigan universities, the other three seeded teams.

The tournament is scheduled to begin with four games today, and will conclude with the consolation finals and championship finals at 2 and 4 p.m., respectively, Saturday.

IN TODAY'S FIRST game, CMU meets Wayne State University, followed by WMU vs. Oakland University at 4 p.m. MSU sees its first action at 6 p.m. against Eastern Michigan University, while Detroit faces the University of Michigan at 8 p.m.

Winners of today's games will qualify for Friday's semi-final round. The semi-finals are slated to begin at 6 and 8 p.m., with the victors of today's 2 and 8 p.m. games set to meet in the 6 p.m. semi-final contest.

The winners from first-round 4 and 6 p.m. games will be matched-up in the 8 p.m. semi-final game.

The champion, along with winners from Illinois, Indiana and Ohio tournaments and the lone Division I schools in Wisconsin and West Virginia qualify for regional play next week at Indiana State University in Terre Haute.

The host ISU Sycamores receive an automatic berth as regional host, and one or two at-large berths remain, pending the outcome of the Indiana tourney.

About this year's state of Michigan championships, MSU head coach Karen Langeland believes "this state tourney is the strongest our state tournament has ever been. We're (MSU) seeded No. 2 and WMU is No. 3, and it could've gone the other way."

"The semi-final games are going to be very good basketball games," Langeland added, "and the finals will be hotly contested."

LANGELAND ADMITS the seeding could have gone the other way on the basis of the Bronco's 66-56 win against MSU earlier this year.

But following a fourth-place finish in the Big Ten tournament three weeks ago, the Spartans have won four consecutive games and bring a 14-10 overall record into the state classic.

The Spartan cagers are 5-2 against in-state opponents.

"We've played good basketball in our last four games," Langeland said, "and if we can play up to our capabilities, we can win it."

"One thing that has haunted us is our lack of consistency, but we've gained some consistency in our last four games. We need a lot of things to happen in order to win, but one thing we could really use is continued balanced scoring."

Langeland said her Spartans are not looking past EMU because the school has given MSU numerous problems in the past.

"We haven't played them yet this year," Langeland said, "but all this week at practice we've been preparing for that game. We're not looking past them at all."

ADMISSION CHARGES for the tournament are $4 for adults and $3 for students (high school and college) per day. All-session tickets are available for $10 per adult and $7 per student.

A group rate is available for groups of 10 or more, with advance arrangements. Group rate is $2 per person in the group.

All games will be played in the IM Sports-West arena, and the 1980 tournament marks the third time in its eight-year history that the state champion has been crowned on the MSU campus.

IM NOTES

Several women's intramural basketball teams will compete for championships tonight in Gym 127 of the IM Sports-Circle.

The co-rec finals will begin at 7 p.m.; the residence hall finals are slated for 8; the sorority finals are scheduled for 9; and the independent finals will be staged at 10 p.m.

In addition, the co-rec floor hockey finals will be at 3:30 p.m. Sunday in Gym 127 of the IM Sports-Circle.

The co-rec water polo finals will be at 2 p.m. Sunday in the upper pool at IM Sports-Circle.

MSU CLOSES OUT SEASON ON THE ROAD

Cagers just 'playing out the string'

By ADAM TEICHER

State News Sports Writer

The Big Ten basketball championship will be decided this weekend and for the first time in three seasons, the MSU Spartans won't be in the chase.

While Indiana, Ohio State and Purdue universities will be scrambling for the title, MSU closes out its season with a pair of road contests. The University of Minnesota provides the opposition at 9 tonight. The Spartans move into the conference spotlight Saturday as they travel to Purdue for a 1 p.m. game that will be telecast live over WILX-TV Channel 10 in the East Lansing area as the Big Ten's game-of-the-week.

MSU is 12-13 on the season. The Spartans, with a sweep, would end up with a winning record.

"Now that we're out of the running for an NIT bid, we're pretty much just playing out the string," said MSU coach Jud Heathcote. "We are still trying to salvage what we can."

Three Spartans will be trying to keep their Big Ten leads in three categories.

CENTER JAY VINCENT, averaging 21.9 points per game in the Big Ten, leads the University of Michigan's Mike McGee by 14 points. McGee is averaging 21 per outing.

Forward Ron Charles and guard Terry Donnelly will be playing their last games as Spartans this weekend. Charles is tops in the Big Ten in field goal percentage with a 67.7 accuracy mark from the floor while Donnelly is hitting 87 percent of his free throws, a clip which also leads the Big Ten.

While MSU is just playing for statistics, both the Gophers and the Boilermakers have tournament bids pending on the outcome of their weekend bouts.

Minnesota is 8-8 in the league and 15-10 including non-conference games. The Gophers were once in contention for the Big Ten crown, but have lost three straight, the last two on the road, and are looking forward to playing in their own Williams Arena.

"We still have a chance for a post-season tournament bid, but we have to win our final two games," Minnesota coach Jim Dutcher said. "The overtime loss at Illinois (a week ago) hurt us badly, both mentally and physically, and we were not able to bounce back from that loss when we had to go to Wisconsin two days later."

THE GOPHERS WON the earlier meeting between the two teams, 93-80 in Jenison Fieldhouse. Minnesota waltzed to a 40-15 halftime margin and their lead was never challenged during the second 20-minute period.

Purdue, which also beat MSU earlier this season in East Lansing, has not lost before their home crowd in Mackey Arena. The Boilermakers are 10-6 in the Big Ten, one game behind the co-leaders, Ohio State and Indiana. Before MSU gets to West Lafayette, Ind., the Boilermakers host Ohio State Thursday night.

Elsewhere around the Big Ten, Indiana will host Wisconsin Thursday and in what may be a showdown for the league championship, Ohio State on Sunday in a nationally televised game.

MSUings: Senior guard Mike Longaker was named to the Big Ten's All-Academic team as an honorable mention selection.

Weight lifting great for women

Beads of perspiration collect and stream down the young woman's face as she vigorously pedals the bicycle. She shows total determination as she concentrates on moving her legs. Patsy Chapman is completing her workout. It is a task that she began three hours earlier in MSU's IM Sports-West weight room.

Dressed in gray sweats, with her hair pulled back in a pony tail, Chapman doesn't look like a professional bodybuilder and current world title holder in the sport. Nor does she appear to be the female counterpart to Arnold Schwarzenegger.

Chapman continues her own private training program, and is trying to promote the sport in her own way, through example. "What I want to do is to promote bodybuilding for women in a positive sense, giving it more recognition," Chapman said.

Chapman, 21, an MSU junior, is "Miss Best in the World" in female bodybuilding. She obtained the title at a competition held in Warrington, Pa., in August.

The competition, sponsored by George Snyder's Olympus Gym and the Women's Bodybuilding Association netted Chapman $2,500. She also pulled off an upset victory over five-time winner April Nicotra.

"I thought she was very good," said Nicotra, who finished second in the competition. "She was very feminine with musculature without going overboard."

The co-sponsor of the contest, George Snyder, also stresses the point that Chapman developed a feminine, attractive figure through training and working out with weights — not in spite of them.

"She's (Chapman) a good example of women's bodybuilding. When she entered the contest here she had a good figure,"

Snyder said.

Snyder has been working with women bodybuilders for 25 years. His emphasis on gaining an attractive figure, through weight training, is exactly what Chapman is trying to prove to other women.

The bodybuilder is working to dispel the old myth that pumping iron will result in bulky, ugly muscle mass. According to Chapman, that doesn't have to happen.

"I want people looking at me and saying they would like to work toward that kind of body," Chapman said.

Chapman has already begun helping other women firm up and trim down in the IM Sports-West weight room where she works. Though she has undertaken the challenge, she realizes her aid alone cannot achieve other women's goals.

"They are going to need that will and motivation to actually do something to improve their bodies, because otherwise, it's a waste of time," she said.

She should know. Long before Chapman ever stepped into MSU's weight room, she was searching for some form of exercise which would work best for her.

Five years ago, as the bodybuilder puts it, she was a chunky 11th grader. Having been an athlete all of her life, she decided to combine two goals: the improvement of her endurance and strength for sports, and toning up and trimming down her figure.

At 5-foot-3 and almost 150 pounds, she had nothing to lose but fat. So she entered a weightlifting class offered in her high school.

The class, and her courage to enroll in it, paid off — a little over a year ago she won the title of "Miss Blue Water" in her home town of Port Huron.

Despite having been so successful with her high school weight training program, Chapman still found it difficult to take that first step into the MSU weightroom last April.

"It was hard to take that first step with all of the guys around," Chapman said. "Mostly because I didn't know what they would think and I didn't know if we (women), were supposed to be in the weightroom."

The competition in August was not the first one Chapman entered. Her first contest was last June in Canton, Ohio. She withdrew from that competition because it stressed muscle, she said, rather than tone.

"The people involved in it, whether male or female, have to keep in mind that these are women exercising with weights and not men," Chapman said. "That's the only way it's going to stay feminine."

Which is just what Snyder had in mind for his competition. Judges for the contest were looking for a woman who had a feminine, attractive figure. They were searching, Chapman said, for someone who had toned up her body through the use of weights.

When Chapman arrived at the competition, her 5-foot-five-and-one-half frame was a trim 130 pounds and her measurements were 38-24-36.

Not only did the audience love her, but she acquired an important and very influential friend in the bodybuilding business — Schwarzenegger.

"Patsy Chapman is a good representation of the woman's bodybuilding field," Schwarzenegger said. "She has a great combination of well-developed muscles and a strong physique, with an added combination of femininity. Patsy looks like a true winner and will win many more competitions."

MSU WOMEN TANKERS HOST BIG TEN'S

Parks hoping for fourth

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

The best women swimmers in the conference will gather in the McCaffree Pool of the IM Sports West as the MSU swimming team hosts the Big Ten championships. The three-day meet begins today and runs until Saturday night.

The University of Michigan will be out for its fifth straight conference title, but those around the Big Ten feel this will be the most exciting and competitive meet since its inception.

"The group of women swimmers in the Big Ten has improved tremendously in the past 10 or 11 years," Indiana University coach Pat Barry said. "The competition is so very intense that no one can walk away with this thing any more. I think this is the kind of meet that is going to be very, very close," she added.

The Spartans don't realistically fit in to the championship picture. "Fourth place, that's what we're shooting for," MSU coach Jennifer Parks said. "It will be a great big fight anywhere between third and eighth places."

But Parks made it clear that she won't be happy with anything less than a sixth-place finish, one place ahead of the spot the Spartans finished in a year ago in Ann Arbor.

"I'll be real disappointed if we end up any lower than that," she said. "I think we are better than a seventh or eighth place team."

MSU HAS THREE individuals seeded in the conference meet. Freshman freestyler Laurie Thompson is rated second in the 200, 500, and 1,650-yard freestyle events. Thompson is seeded behind Indiana's Jennifer Hooker, a member of the 1976 United States Olympic Team.

Spartans Linda Mrosko and Keli Emerson are also seeded. Mrosko is second in the 50-yard butterfly and fourth in the 100-butterfly and Emerson is second to fellow freshman Sally Johnson of Purdue University in the 100-yard individual medley.

MSU's 200-yard freestyle is seeded second to Indiana's squad. Michigan is still the favorite. The Wolverine's strength lies in their diving corps. Julie Backman was the conference winner a year ago in the one-meter event.

Other defending Big Ten champions from U-M include Marie Palko in the 200-yard individual medley and Barb DonCarlos in the 200-yard backstroke.

INDIANA'S HOOSIERS will be the Wolverine's top challenger. Wendy Lee of Indiana returns to defend her titles in the 200, 500, and 1,650-yard freestyle events, but her performances this season have been overshadowed by those of teammate Hooker.

The Hoosiers have two other defending conference titlists in Lindley Peterson (100-backstroke) and Kathy Conroy (100-butterfly).

Expected to round out the first division in this season's meet are Minnesota, Ohio State and Northwestern, but as Barry said, it's going to be close and it's anyone's meet.

Fencers to duel for Big Ten title; Peterman is defending epee champ

By JIM MITZELFELD
State News Sports Writer

Hoping to improve on last year's fifth-place finish, the MSU fencing team travels to Madison, Wis., Saturday, for the Big Ten Championships.

The Spartans will be led into battle by senior epee specialist Bryan Peterman, the defending Big Ten champion. Peterman, who was 35-4 on the season, has the confidence of his coach.

"I think he has a good chance to repeat," coach Charlie Schmitter said. "He has been training well, and he keeps his head on."

Schmitter added that he thought Peterman has a good chance to win a medal at the NCAA Championships.

IF PETERMAN DOES

repeat in the epee, he will be the third Spartan fencer in six years to win the Big Ten championship two years in a row.

Coach Charlie Schmitter's fencing team compiled a 9-6 dual meet record this season, its best mark since 1977. Despite the improvement, the Spartans beat only one of the Big Ten's four other contenders during the season.

The universities of Wisconsin and Illinois, and Northwestern and Ohio State universities are the only other Big Ten schools entering teams in the competition.

Wisconsin has taken Big Ten honors the past two seasons and is favored to finish near the top again.

The Badgers are led by sophomore sabreman Joe Kroeten, who has won 55 of his 62 bouts this season.

Illinois, a team Schmitter called a "perennial powerhouse," has the defending sabre champion Kevin Cawley.

THE BADGERS BEAT MSU earlier this season 17-10. Both Ohio State and Illinois finished ahead of the Spartans 18-9 in their regular season confrontations. The fencers only conference victory was a slim 14-13 victory over Northwestern, last year's fourth-place finisher.

"I don't see anyone running away with it," Schmitter said. "It's going to be a dog fight."

Other Spartan fencers include Peterman's brother and fellow epee standout Barry Peterman, along with foilists Dominic Marazita and Chris Young, both of whom were 27-19 for the year.

Men gymnasts in final home appearance

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer

The MSU men's gymnastics team will make its final regular-season appearance of the year at 7:30 tonight when the University of Michigan invades Jenison Fieldhouse.

The Spartans are coming off a pair of losses to Indiana State and Illinois State universities, but at the same time the squad posted its highest team score of the season, 259.6, against the two schools.

That keeps Spartan coach

George Szypula guessing as to how well MSU will do against the Wolverines.

"Last weekend was by far our best overall performance of the year, but on that particular day Indiana State and Illinois State had superb outings as well," Szypula said.

"All of our all-arounders were super and our specialists came through too. I'm just hoping that the momentum we had going last weekend stays with us when we face Michigan, because by upsetting U-M we would be in great shape for the Big Ten meet next weekend."

THE WOLVERINES, who carry a 10-5 overall record compared to MSU's 6-5 mark, have a couple of premier specialists but do not have great strength in the all-around. The U-M performers who will give the Spartans the most trouble are Darrell Yee on the rings and Jim Valiek in the floor exercise. Both are defending Big Ten champs in their events.

Another wolf, Marshall Garfield, is the top man in the Midwest region on the parallel bars, averaging 9.6 every time he performs. Another fine specialist is freshman Mike McKee, who is U-M's best vaulter.

MSU's Marvin Gibbs, Bart Acino, Ivan Merritt and Pedro Sanchez plan to compensate for Michigan's specialists, though.

Gibbs is ranked fifth in the region in the all-around with a top total of 54.05. Acino's best score this year is 52.15.

Sanchez and Merritt are also capable of hitting above the 50-point level, and the Spartans will definitely need the best scores possible from each.

"We have the momentum behind us, so if we just keep on rolling the way we have been and hit the 260-point barrier, I think we can beat Michigan," Szypula said.

"We need the upset to give us confidence when we go to the Big Ten's, and I believe we have the talent to come through."

Smith accepts changes

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer

As a freshman on last year's MSU women's gymnastics team, Colleen Smith led the squad in all-around average with a 32.70 mark and was also the Spartans best vaulter and uneven bar specialist.

But with the coming of three excellent freshmen this year, Bonnie Ellis, Alice Hagan and Pam Swing, Smith now finds herself taking a back seat in all-around scores and individual events.

Bitter? Disappointed? Not Smith.

"The addition of Ellis, Swing and Hagan to the team has helped us greatly," says Smith, who hails from Buffalo, N.Y. "We now have a team with great depth, and I can't say enough about the contributions they have made to our team performance."

At last week's State of Michigan championships, where the Spartans captured their sixth consecutive title, Smith finished second in the all-around behind Ellis with her highest score of the season, a 34.85. Additionally, she set a new State of Michigan scoring record in the vault with a 9.25 mark, and credits her strong performance to confidence and a new vault routine.

"I WAS REALLY psyched to do well at the meet because in practice I finally got my vault down pat and I had a lot of confidence in myself," Smith said.

"But even more so I was psyched for the team to do well, and I'm really happy that we came out winners."

Smith started in gymnastics at age 11, when she began falo. The coach there was Kathy Gleason, a member of the 1968 U.S. Olympic team, and Smith gives Gleason a lot of credit for smoothing out the rough edges of her routines.

While at the Niagara club, Smith competed in the U.S. Amateur Athletic Union nationals for three years, taking second and thirds in the all-around in 1977 and 1978, respectively. She also participated in the AAU Junior Olympics for four straight seasons.

Many universities were interested in her talents, including Ohio State, Duke and Indiana State universities, and the University of Colorado, but Smith chose MSU because she was impressed with Spartan coach Michael Kasavana's gymnastics program and because of the quality of the MSU team at that time.

With the fine season the Spartans are having this year as well, Smith feels excited about MSU's chances of going to the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women Championships (the equivalent of the men's NCAA's) to take place April 4 and 5 in Baton Rouge, La. By winning the state meet last week MSU was automatically given a spot in the regional meet which is March 21 and 22 in Ypsilanti, and with a little luck the meet should be a stepping-stone to the nationals for MSU.

"I THINK WE'RE capable of finishing in the top eight in the nation, but teams like Penn State University, Cal State Fullerton and the University of Massachusetts are really going to be hard to beat," Smith said.

"The only other thing that I'm hoping for is that my roommate Kit (Bunker) will be well enough by then to compete in the nationals." Bunker injured her leg after twisting it on her dismount against Indiana State two weeks ago.

Smith and the Spartans will find out just how good the University of Massachusetts is when they take on the Minutemen Saturday. Before that, though, MSU will tangle with the University of New Hampshire tonight.

The meet against the Minutemen has a lot of meaning to three members of the Spartan squad. Head coach Kasavana and assistant coach Jodi Hitt Brandon are both graduates of Massachusetts, while senior captain Diane Lovato is also from the area.

WILL STUDY TRANSPORTATION

County applies for grant

By MOLLY MIKA

State News Staff Writer
An application for a $10,000 state grant to study the county's transportation systems was approved Tuesday by the Ingham County Board of Commissioners.

By an 18-3 vote, county officials approved taking the first step toward coordinating 20 transportation systems within Ingham County.

Commissioner Don Tavano, D-Lansing, said the county's transportation system needs to be studied to determine how it can be improved.

Concern has been voiced by the community as well as some commissioners, over duplication of transportation services and dwindling energy resources.

The impetus to study how to consolidate services comes from the availability of state grants. "The board has a choice of spending county funds or state funds to get more information on our transportation needs," Tavano said.

Tavano urged the board to vote to apply for the grant and said he was not willing to make a judgment on the needs of the county until a good transportation study was done.

"If we were voting on whether to spend our own money, I wouldn't vote for it," said Commissioner Frank Guerriero, R-Mason.

"We have to make sure we don't go overboard in using tax money," Guerriero said.

"But once the state provides the grant, I'll make sure we poor folks out in the sticks get a fair share," he said.

The resolution to apply for a grant from the Michigan Department of Transportation was opposed by commissioners Tom Mitchell, D-Williamston, and Mark Grebner and Jess Sobel, both D-East Lansing.

"We're talking about services for the handicapped and elderly in the out-county area," Mitchell said. "If you believe in a noble idea and fiscal irresponsibility, vote for it."

"But the result of this will be an attempt to get all these volunteer agencies to provide urban services to a rural area, which will never work," he said.

Senate speeds up PBB testing

By LANI WIEGAND

United Press International

The Senate approved Wednesday a bill accelerating the state's PBB cattle-testing program and setting procedures for cleanup on 30 farms still contaminated with the fire retardant.

The upper chamber also voted 33-4 in favor of a bill funding the state takeover of probation services in Wayne County and 44 other counties.

That measure — which will provide ailing Wayne County with a $4 million financial transfusion — already has won House approval and now awaits Gov. William G. Milliken's signature.

The PBB testing and cleanup bill was approved on a 33-4 vote and now faces House action.

"LET'S TAKE MICHIGAN

agriculture out of the PBB era altogether," said Sen. John Hertel, D-Harper Woods, the bill's sponsor.

The bill calls for the speed-up of state Department of Agriculture tests for the toxic chemical on several hundred cattle. PBB was accidentally mixed with Michigan cattle feed in 1973.

Hertel managed to reattach to the bill cleanup procedures for 30 farms which have been "recontaminated" despite efforts to rid them of PBB. Although they originally were part of the bill, the Senate voted earlier this week to strike the procedures from the measure.

But Sen. Richard Allen, R-Ithaca, argued outlining methods for cleansing the farms was needless because the estimated $5 million for the cleanup would not be appropriated for at least a year.

Even if the money was available, the state has more pressing chemical problems to spend it on, Allen said.

THE PROBATION SERVICES funding won speedy approval from the upper chamber which has passed similar measures several times in the last year. Milliken repeatedly vetoed the funding, saying he would not release money to Wayne County until it implemented a government reorganization plan.

This time the bill stipulates Wayne County will not get $3 million of its share until its board of commissioners votes to place the recently adopted reorganization law before county voters. That action is expected soon.

The remaining $1 million to Wayne County is a grant to pay the county for probation expenses from Jan. 1 to March 31. State takeover officially begins April 1.

Other counties will share in $2.5 million for their probation services.

ASMSU to buy in treasury bills

ASMSU will invest $30,000 of its carry-over money in treasury bills, the ASMSU controller said in a report to the ASMSU Student Board Tuesday night.

The carry-over, almost $72,000, comes from money allocated to ASMSU groups or Registered Student Organizations which was not spent for various reasons, Terry Buckley said.

He said he became aware of the carry-over in January, but did not determine the exact amount of it until last week.

Another $8,200 will go the ASMSU Legal Services, to ensure it does not show a deficit this year, Buckley said.

The remaining carry-over of $33,000 will either be used to fund RSO's or to establish "emergency reserves" for the Student Media Appropriations Board and the Student Board.

"It's a good use of finances," said Bruce Studer, Student Board chairperson.

The treasury bills will gather 13 to 14 percent interest, Buckley said.

In the future, the treasury bills could be used to help finance the Student Board's special projects fund, if it becomes depleted, he said.

Studer said Legal Services needs the additional $8,200 to hire additional law clerks, which would enable it to explain the services it offers.

The Student Board will contribute 75 percent of the $8,200 from its carry-over, with SMAB and the Programming Board contributing the other 25 percent, according to Buckley's plan.

All three boards must approve the transfer of funds to legal services, but, Studer said, "that won't be a problem at all."

Buckley said because of the carry-over money, ASMSU will not have to ask for a tax increase for at least two years.

Doctoral candidate gets research grant

An MSU doctoral candidate in criminal justice has received a Woodrow Wilson Research Grant in Women's Studies.

Susan M. Hunter was one of 12 students selected from 200 applicants to receive the $1000 grant on Jan. 29. Hunter will use the money for research expenses connected with her dissertation on "The Impact of the Mother-Child Relationship Upon Women's Success on Parole."

The grant, from the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, reflects the excellence of Hunter's preparation and her ability to make a significant contribution in women's studies, a foundation spokesperson said.

Collins gets new trial

By United Press International

A woman convicted of killing an allegedly abusive husband won a new trial Wednesday from a judge who said the public felt aspects of her first trial were unfair, even though they were legally proper.

Ingham County Circuit Judge Thomas Brown said he made a mistake in not excusing two jurors who knew the family, and cited potential new evidence in ordering a new trial on the manslaughter charge.

Brown's ruling was a victory for a loose coalition of local organizations which had rallied around Cora Lee Collins, but it drew a strong response from Ingham County prosecutors who promised an appeal.

Collins claimed she acted in self-defense last May in shooting a man who had beaten and abused her for years. Her attorney approved the December 1979 manslaughter conviction on several issues, most of which were dismissed by Brown.

"Society, especially contemporary American society, with its ingrained sense of fair play, perceives that the jury should be entirely free of acquaintanceship with the litigants and not possessed of some peculiar knowledge," Brown said in his ruling.

"The public perceived having jurors who knew the family as being unfair, which legally it is not," Brown later explained.

"I feel they were fair, impartial jurors. The problem is that the public since that time has not perceived them to be, or has perceived that this procedure had something defective in it," Brown said.

"If that's the perception there's nothing unfair in trying it again," he said.

Assistant Prosecutor Dan McLellan, who prosecuted Collins, said he was "absolutely amazed" by Brown's ruling.

Collins' attorney "packed that courtroom for the purpose of putting political pressure on the judge. It appears at first blush that he was successful," McLellan said.

He said if the case is retried the prosecution will seek to move it to an area where there is less public pressure.

Mother of 5 charged in slaying of husband

GRAND RAPIDS (UPI) — A young mother of five children, charged with killing her husband out of fear for her physical safety, has been ordered held without bond on a charge of open murder.

Devora Geneva Carter, 34, stood mute to the charge during an arraignment Tuesday. She was charged with the killing of her husband Jake W. Carter, 39, early Monday.

Police said the couple had been arguing about two hours before the shooting.

The woman reportedly grabbed her husband's .38 caliber revolver from him and fired two shots, police said. Carter told police she shot the gun because she was afraid her husband would hurt her.

Police said there were no indications of physical domestic abuse except for the shooting.

Get those arms in shape because Frisbees are flying your way. Linda Garcia, mail order supervisor of the International Frisbee Association, said the Frisbees were sent to your member, Tim Starr, in June. The Frisbees came back to her June 27. It seems Frisbees were sent to Starr's old address. Trouble Shooter gave Garcia the correct address and she promised to send them out immediately. United Parcel Service should be knocking on your door by the end of this week.

I have been trying for five months to get my Hudson's charge bill sent to my new address. After numerous phone calls and letters to both the Lansing and Detroit Hudson's credit managers, I finally got a bill. However, the bill had a past due amount for the five months I didn't receive a bill. When I called the credit manager at the Detroit Hudson's, she said I'd have to pay the past due amount or my charge would be placed on hold.

I feel I should only have to pay 10 percent of the balance because it was their fault I didn't receive a bill.

Trouble Shooter contacted the manager of customer credit relations at Hudson's in Detroit who said he would "take care of all the paper work on this end." You will only have to pay the required 10 percent of the bill. However, he suggested you pay 10 percent of the bill which is due before March 7.

Carter, Kennedy plot out strategies

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — President Carter's campaign is mapping a cross-country effort to eliminate Edward M. Kennedy as a presidential contender, but the senator said Wednesday he'll fashion a comeback around voter wrath over the soaring cost of living.

That issue didn't do much for Kennedy in New Hampshire, and he needs a comeback, badly, after Carter's comfortable victory in the keynote Democratic presidential primary election.

Ronald Reagan, the runaway Republican victor in New Hampshire, said that showing enhanced his prospects against rival George Bush in two more New England primaries next Tuesday.

Bush, the former United Nations ambassador who came to New Hampshire as the Republican campaign leader and left trailing Reagan, said he is still convinced he can win the nomination.

For the record, Carter and his spokesperson said it is Kennedy's business to decide whether the challenge to the renomination of the president should be pursued after three defeats, plus a virtually uncontested victory for Carter in Minnesota.

Democratic caucuses Tuesday night. But around the Carter camp, there are suggestions that it would be better for the party if Kennedy did quit. Kennedy said he has no intention of doing so, and offered no concessions or compliments after Carter beat him in New Hampshire, 49 percent to 38 percent.

Instead, he delivered what amounted to a campaign speech Tuesday night, and said that "roaring inflation" will be a dominant issue to his advantage in later primaries like those in Illinois, New York and Pennsylvania.

These were the final returns in New Hampshire: Democrats

Carter 53,586 or 49 percent, for 10 Democratic nominating votes. Kennedy 41,540 or 38 percent, for 9 delegate votes. Brown 10,727 or 10 percent, 0 delegate votes. Two minor candidates got the rest.

Republicans Reagan, 72,940, 50 percent, and 13 delegates. Bush, 33,471, 23 percent, and 5 delegates. Howard Baker, 18,832, 13 percent, for 2 delegates. John Anderson, 14,706, 10 percent, for 2 delegates. Philip Crane, 2,628, 2 percent, 0 delegates. John Connally, 2,241, 2 percent, 0 delegates. Gerald R. Ford, write-in, 380, 0 percent, 0 delegates.

Carter clear winner in Minn. caucuses

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — There were polls aplenty but only one clear victor Wednesday in Minnesota's precinct caucuses — a Carter-Mondale ticket.

President Carter and Vice President Walter F. Mondale won the lion's share of support at Democratic-Farmer-Labor caucuses.

As usual, there was no complete tally of either straw votes or delegates elected to the second step of Minnesota's four-step delegate selection process.

A CBS-Minneapolis Star poll indicated Republicans Ronald Reagan and George Bush tied at 33 percent among delegates actually elected Tuesday night. This was a shift from the 33-30 margin held by Reagan over Bush in a GOP straw vote.

The CBS-Star poll involved 99 representative precincts. Republicans had intended to take a straw vote in all 4,024 precincts, but their counting system collapsed early today with about half the precincts tallied.

The party poll had John Anderson in third place with 13 percent but the CBS-Star poll had Anderson and Howard Baker tied for third with 10 percent. All polls showed John Connally running poorly in Minnesota, even though he campaigned here often.

Democrats and Republicans elected delegates to county-unit conventions. They, in turn, will choose delegates to congressional district and state conventions.

Chancellor candidate

ience." If chosen for the job, Green would become the first Black chancellor at the university.

Herbert Grover, president of the regents board of Wisconsin, said a decision on the new chancellor would probably be made in the next week or two.

GREEN, 46, RECEIVED his doctorate in educational psychology from MSU in 1963.

In 1973 he became the first Black dean at MSU when the Board of Trustees approved him as dean of the College of Urban Affairs — a college which he helped to develop.

Green previously had been acting director of the college for a year and a half. Before that, he was director of the MSU Center for Urban Affairs for four years.

During the 1960's, Green, a strong advocate for social change, and supporters walked the streets of East Lansing protesting racial and housing discrimination.

More recently, Green was named to President Carter's Urban Policy Working Group in 1979.

In October 1978 Carter appointed him to serve on the U.S. National Commission on the International Year of the Child.

Tuition hike expected

 recommend to Moses Turner, vice-president of student affairs that the check-off be continued. The Council of Graduate Students approved a similar recommendation last week.
 In the middle of the meeting, the board appointed two new board members. Denise Kirby, senior in Arts and Letters, was appointed to the Arts and Letters seat, and Timothy Bundrys was appointed to the University College seat.
 The board voted to table, until next week, a bill approving amendments to the proposed Academic Freedom Report.

Student Affairs, said it was important that ASMSU make no changes in the proposed report.
 The board also voted to support an analysis of the "potential health hazard" at Kresge Art Center, and to request that a "non-University affiliated agency assist in analyzing and eliminating the health hazard."
 In other action, the board:
 • allotted $300 to advertise the upcoming ASMSU election on radio stations WILS and WFMK;
 • allotted $200 to help fund a spring term orientation workshop for newly elected board representatives.
 • passed a bill to fine Student Board members $25 the second time they fail to submit an activity report to the executive director.

KIRBY SAID SHE wanted to get the input from RHA on the bill before voting on it.

Hiring equity

 tive action, Letts said. The office also works to prevent "reverse discrimination," he said.
 "One thing we must realize," Letts said, "is when you try to overturn past evils, you may end up creating new evils."
 "We want to make sure that all people have an equal opportunity — that's affirmative action."
 A second branch of the human relations department is the contract compliance unit, which makes sure that businesses entering into contracts with the city do not practice discriminatory hiring.

requiring excessive amounts of detailed information in initial employment applications.
BODWIN, HOWEVER, QUICKLY defended the operation of his department.
 He said that in every complaint filed with the equal rights commission during his 26 years at City Hall, the city had been found innocent, or the complaint had been dropped.
 Baker and Bodwin butted heads again when Baker criticized Bodwin for using an "outdated" exam to screen job applicants.
 The Pressey Service Classification test, written originally in 1922, was designed to keep women and minorities from getting jobs, Baker claimed.
 Baker eventually read the answers to the test at the televised City Council meetings in an attempt to render the test useless.

THE FUTURE of affirmative action, Letts explained, lies partly with the personnel department.
 Although personnel does not hire for the other departments, it screens job candidates and could keep minorities from ever being considered for certain jobs, Letts said.
 The personnel department checks the job applicants' employment records and basic job skills and qualifications, then submits a list of the "best" candidates to the department heads, said Daniel Bodwin, director of the department.
 Bodwin said the city's employment practices are all in order, and blames the educational system for not providing enough qualified minorities to fill jobs.
 Mayor Gerald Graves agrees with Bodwin.

BALDWIN CALLED BAKER'S action "highly irresponsible" and said he was armed with other versions of the Pressey test if Baker destroyed the security of the first.
 Third Ward Councilmember Terry McKane was not overly pleased with certain hiring practices at City Hall either.
 In January, McKane ordered Internal Auditor Louis Klimecky to investigate the hiring policies of the public service and Finance departments.
 McKane insisted that the investigation is not a "witch hunt," but said he wants to know if there are any specific guidelines for those departments to follow.

"IT'S NOT AN easy task to find minorities to fill jobs," Graves said. "A good education is a necessity if they are to find good jobs. Once they do, they've got it made," he said.
 Graves said he is pleased with the progress in the hiring of minorities and stressed that a "diligent" effort must be made to continue that progress.
 Not everyone in Lansing paints an optimistic picture of city hiring practices, however.
 Last fall, when Richard Baker was on the City Council, the abrupt council member lashed out at city officials, accusing them of being discriminatory.
 He charged that the personnel department discouraged minorities from seeking jobs by

Although the report has not been made public yet, Klimecky said that a lack of written records and procedures delayed completion of his report.
 While there has been measurable improvement in affirmative action, the fact remains that Lansing has fallen short in some areas. Mounting inflation, coupled with an upcoming tight city budget, may spell trouble for minorities.
 The future of affirmative action, some officials agree, hinges largely on the mayor's commitment to an aggressive program for minority employment.

Peoples Temple defectors shot

By JACK SCHREIBMAN
Associated Press Writer

BERKELEY, Calif. — Two defectors from the Peoples Temple who warned of "hit squads" organized by the late Rev. Jim Jones were found shot to death in their homes. Police said Wednesday they had no suspects and would not speculate on a motive.

The bodies of Al and Jannie Mills were found along with their critically wounded 15-year-old daughter, Daphne, by a relative Tuesday night in a small cottage in back of a rest home. They had been shot in the head with a small-caliber weapon.

Authorities at Alta Bates Hospital where Daphne was taken said she was not expected to live.

Another daughter, Diana, who was not home at the time of the shootings, said the family had often received threatening letters and phone calls. On one occasion she said she saw "eight or nine men standing in the yard with their hands on guns in holsters."

THE COUPLE'S SON, Eddie, about 17, was home at the time of the shootings but told police he did not see or hear anything. He was released after questioning, but authorities said they could not explain why he did not hear the shooting.

Mills, 51, and his wife, 40, had fled the Peoples Temple and set up a halfway house to help others escaping religious cults before the November 1978 mass suicides and murders that left more than 900 people dead in the Temple's commune in Guyana.

Sgt. Michel deLatour said police had no suspects and did not know if the shootings were related to the couple's affiliation with the Temple. He refused to discuss details of the shootings.

The Mills defected from the Peoples Temple in 1975 and formed the Human Freedom Center three years later. They asked for police protection after the mass deaths at the Jonestown commune.

The Mills and other former member said they were afraid of "hit squads" organized by Jones for revenge after his death.

A FAMILY FRIEND, Ken Dagenais, 17, described the Mills as "very open," saying they often left their door unlocked so the children's friends could come and go with ease.

A neighbor, Barbara Perry, said her family was home at the time police estimate the shootings took place. "We didn't hear a thing," she said. Perry said she had seen Mrs. Mills on Tuesday evening and nothing appeared out of the ordinary.

"It's hard for me to imagine them not living," she said.

The victims were found in the master bedroom. Investigators said there were no signs of a struggle, forced entry or burglary.

They were found by the children's grandmother, who lived next door. Police would not further identify her.

THE MILLS COTTAGE is about 40 feet from a building identified as the Elmwood Rest Home. The buildings are a few blocks away from the Human Freedom Center which disbanded last year.

Almost from the moment the horror of Jonestown became known, Temple defectors at the center claimed Jones had set up death squads to get them.

"Our entire family still lives under the conscious awareness that every member of the church would feel justified in killing any of us because we are considered to be traitors," Mrs. Mills said about a month after Jones led the death ritual at the Guyanese commune.

Former Temple administrator Terri Buford also said a hit list existed, including the names of prominent politicians such as Sens. Barry Goldwater and John Stennis.

According to Buford, Jones told the assassination squad "to kill as many people as they could until they were killed themselves or took their own lives."

However, other surviving Temple members steadfastly denied such a list ever existed and no documents have been found proving them wrong.

The Mills were named Elmer and Deanna Mertle when they belonged to the Temple but changed their names when they left to avoid harassment and legal problems.
