Police arrest 9 students

By MARK FELLOWS
State News Staff Writer

Nine MSU students were among 17 area persons arraigned in Lansing and East Lansing district courts Thursday morning on drug delivery charges, following one of the largest drug-related arrests on campus.

Metro Narcotics Squad officers assisted by Department of Public Safety and Lansing Police made the pre-dawn arrests on campus and in Lansing acting on warrants issued Wednesday by the Ingham County Prosecutor's office.

Arraigned before Judge Daniel Tschirhart on charges of delivery of cocaine and/or LSD were: history junior Dennis P. Tiede, 20, of 338 W. Holden Hall; urban planning and landscape architecture freshman William B. Knapp, 19, of 340 W. Holden Hall; James Madison freshman Paul Bohn, 20, of 572 Case Hall. Also arraigned were: communication junior Kurt A. Johnson, 21, of 569 S. Case Hall; James Madison freshman Jerry J. Soupal, 19, of 560 S. Case Hall; James Madison freshman Paul T. Nelson, 18, of 560 S. Case Hall; and marketing and transportation administration sophomore Duncan E. Pea, 21, of 1534-G Spartan Village.

Another MSU student, John P. Gara, 19, business law and office administration freshman, A-203 Emmons Hall, was charged with two counts of delivery of methaqualone (Quaaludes).

BOND FOR THE students ranged from $1,000 to $9,000, police said. A sheriff's department spokesperson said most had met bail by Thursday afternoon but refused to identify who, if any, were still lodged in the Ingham County jail.

An East Lansing district court spokesperson said all had pleaded not guilty to the charges and some will face preliminary examinations within 12 days.

The arrests coincided with the arrests of eight Lansing residents at about 6:15 a.m. Thursday. Two Lansing suspects for whom warrants were issued were not located at the time, police said.

Metro Squad Lt. Gene Wriggelsworth said the arrests were made without incident with the campus arrests being completed in less than 20 minutes.

Wriggelsworth said Metro Squad undercover officers had investigated the cases for three months and recorded 32 separate violations of the Michigan Public Health Code, previously the Controlled Substance Act.

Faculty Council considers change to semester system

By ANNA BROWNE
State News Staff Writer

After 90 years of students attending classes from late fall until early summer, MSU is considering changing from its quarter terms to dual semesters, commonly referred to as the early semester system.

Provost Clarence L. Winder is proposing the change to the Faculty Council. It would switch MSU's schedule from three 10-week terms during the academic year to two semesters, each running about 13 or 14 weeks, by the fall of 1982.

Under the early semester calendar, Winder said, fall semester would begin after Labor Day and finish just before Christmas, while winter semester would run from early January until the beginning of May.

"It's a better calendar for academic purposes," Winder said.

HE SAID THE major benefit was students having the opportunity to study each subject in greater depth.

"Some other advantages to students are they will have more time to become better acquainted with their professors, and they will have better summer employment opportunities if we finish up in May," Winder said.

He added the faculty would have a longer summer break for pursuing scholarly work.

"The satisfaction of teaching might be greater, too," he said, "where there could be a more complete presentation of a subject."

The proposal is scheduled to go before the Academic Council for discussion on April 15. A similar proposal was considered in 1974, but was dropped after the faculty committees responded negatively. Winder said the proposal was reappearing to help MSU with its tightening budget.

Frederick Horne, professor of chemistry and member of the Academic Council said he prefers the semester system for teaching as well as learning.

"I'M ACTUALLY FOR the change," he said, "and the main reason is it would force us to overhaul our curriculum. People can learn to live with any system, but you need a shake-up every once in a while."

Horne said one of his concerns over the change is the summer session. "We have a good 10-week summer course and I feel it would be a big detriment if it were canceled," he said.

Horne said one feature of the semester system which students should consider is the extended drop and add time at the beginning of each semester.

"Students could shop around for classes," he said, "they would have a longer decision making period."

Bruce Studer, chairperson of ASMSU Student Board, said he was torn between the pros and cons of each system.

"THE CONS ARE there would be less flexibility and less class choice," Studer said, "and for the first three or four years they would just stretch 10 weeks of material into 13 or 14 weeks. The quality would really be shaky for the first couple of years."

MILLIKEN SAYS

Toxic waste disposal critical

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

Toxic waste disposal will be one of Michigan's most critical problems during the 1980s, Gov. William G. Milliken told members of the Michigan Municipal League Thursday.

Milliken made his remarks during the league's annual convention in Lansing. The league is composed of local government members from cities and villages in Michigan.

A "safe and sound" way to dispose of toxic waste must be found for the entire country, Milliken said.

"My own experience with PBB has sharpened my sense of what can happen," he said. "This state has already made a major commitment in terms of dollars to toxic waste disposal and more (commitments) will be made."

EARLIER THURSDAY, House Minority Leader William Bryant, R-Grosse Pointe Farms, told league members there may be as many as 50,000 toxic waste disposal sites in Michigan.

"The Legislature already knows it will cost hundreds of thousands of dollars to clean up these sites," Bryant said. "We don't know where we will get the money."

Bryant said violators of toxic waste disposal regulations should be the first people to pay for clean-up costs.

Milliken also suggested a "super-fund" to deal with the problem of toxic waste from a federal level.

Government members from the Michigan cities and villages were also concerned about the federal and state revenue-sharing programs which must be extended past the Sept. 30 deadline.

"WE ARE IN FOR some serious potential problems in dealing with the issue," Milliken said.

A bill has been introduced in Congress which would cut federal revenue sharing for this fiscal year by 10 percent, though some states have already spent the federal money.

"More than anything, this suggests some of the trouble that may lie ahead of us for federal revenue sharing," Milliken said.

Under the federal revenue sharing program, the national government collects money from states and then redistributes the funds to individual states.

IF STATE REVENUE sharing funds were eliminated, Michigan would have to increase state revenue about $170 million or reduce almost $100 million worth of state programs, House Speaker Bobby Crim, D-Davison, said earlier Thursday.

"It is a critical importance to win the battle of federal revenue sharing in Congress," Crim said.

Later Thursday, however, Senate Minority Leader Robert VanderLaan, R-Kentwood, said corrections are needed when governments have a "fatal dependency on someone else's money."

On Wednesday the House approved a bill which allocates revenue-sharing funds on the basis of 1970 census figures in an attempt to help older cities plagued by declining populations.

Any community which obtains less aid under the 1970 figures will receive the difference over a four-year period. The extra money is expected to come from yearly federal revenue-sharing funds.

Veterans form anti-draft group

Veterans Against the Draft, a new campus group, will hold its first organizational meeting at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in 336 Union.

Barry McGuire, the group's organizer, said veterans from the Vietnam War as well as other wars are invited to attend and to join the group.

He said the group will discuss taking part in the march on Washington, D.C., and rally planned for March 22.

Police officers in Bogotá, Colombia, fire into the Dominican Republic Embassy residence during a shootout with leftist rebels who took approximately 60 hostages, including 16 ambassadors. A Colombian Red Cross spokesperson said three wounded persons and up to 10 women hostages were freed.

Leftist rebels free 14 hostages; get mattresses, food, cigarettes

By TOM WELLS
Associated Press Writer

BOGOTA, Colombia — Leftist rebels occupying the Dominican Republic Embassy freed 14 hostages Thursday, including 10 women, three wounded men and a 16-year-old youth, the president of the Colombian Red Cross said.

Among the nearly 50 hostages remaining is U.S. Ambassador Diego C. Acensio, who along with the captive envoys of Mexico, Venezuela and the Dominican Republic, negotiated the release of the 14. Guillermo Rueda, president of the national Red Cross, said the organization delivered mattresses, food and cigarettes to the building, but did not say if the supplies were traded for the hostages' freedom.

Previously, the Colombian government had refused to bargain with rebels. However, President Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala said in a communique after the release that authorities would negotiate after the remaining five women are released. The communique said 46 hostages still were in the embassy.

Rueda said one of those released was Paraguay's acting ambassador, Oscar Gostiaga, wounded in a leg when two dozen rebels stormed the embassy Wednesday. Another Red Cross source, who requested anonymity, said one dead rebel was taken from the building.

The rebels, members of the Movement-19 organization, demand $50 million ransom, release of 311 alleged political prisoners from Colombian jails and safe passage out of the country. A Red Cross stretcher bearer said the rebels also want medical care for a woman member of the band wounded during the attack.

"WE ARE PREPARED to stay here one or two months if necessary," the rebel leader said in a telephone interview before the release. He identified himself only as "Commander No. 1" of Movement-19. Colombian authorities have said only they would study the demands.

Governments of the captured ambassadors urged Ayala to take no action that might endanger the hostages' lives. The centrist government has always refused to bargain with the Movement-19 rebels, who have been particularly dedicated in their underground war with the authorities, some killing themselves rather than be captured.

Asencio, contacted by telephone after the release, said five women hostages remained, but might be freed later. He also said 20 ambassadors were captured in the attack, rather than the 16 previously reported by the Foreign Ministry. He was not allowed to name all of them.

One of the women still in captivity was Costa Rican Ambassador Elena Chassoul Monge, who has been posted here a little over a month. Four of the women released were diplomats' wives.

Hundreds of police and troops armed with automatic weapons and tear-gas grenades and wearing flak jackets ringed the two-story building. Others were guarding government buildings, embassies, newspaper buildings and radio stations throughout Bogotá, apparently to prevent any further attacks.

The rebel chief had said early in the negotiations: "Tell the world that the hard-line position of the Colombian government and the army is putting the lives of the hostages in danger."

Mexican Ambassador Ricardo Galan, one of the hostages, told a reporter by telephone that the situation in the embassy "is one of complete calm. The rebels have treated us well."

Anti-draft groups will rally on Capitol steps in March

By NUNZIO LUPO
State News Staff Writer

A coalition of anti-draft groups will gather in the nation's capital next month to protest President Carter's plan to renew draft registration.

The National Mobilization Against the Draft is planning a march on Washington and a rally on the Capitol steps for March 22. Several nationally-known speakers are scheduled to speak at the rally.

"We're going to bring thousands of people to the seat of power," said Pat Lafield, coordinator of the March 22 protest. "The move of the 1980s is to say 'no' to President Carter."

Lafield said Draft foes hope the march and rally will persuade Congress to withhold the money Carter needs for his registration program.

THE PRESIDENT HAS asked Congress to appropriate $21.9 million in the current fiscal year for registration of young people, ages 19 and 20, beginning this summer.

The march will start at 11 a.m. at the Ellipse behind the White House. Protesters will march past the White House to a 2 p.m. rally on the Capitol steps.

Speaking at the rally will be Bella Abzug, a former Congress member from New York; Maggie Kuhn, a founder of the Gray Panthers, a senior citizen activist group; and David Dellinger, a Chicago Seven defendant who was chairperson of the National Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam.

Michael Harrington, author and chairperson of the Democratic Socialist Organizing Committee; Denise Levertov, one of America's leading poets; and U.S. Reps. Ted Weiss, D-New York, and Robert Kestenmeier, D-Wis., will also speak at the rally.

On-campus coordination for the march is being handled by the MSU chapter of the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan. PIRGIM is holding a meeting at 6 p.m. Wednesday in 4 Student Services Bldg. for students interested in going to Washington.

PIRGIM IS ASKING all people who are planning to drive to the rally to call now, so lists of rides can be organized before the meeting.

Carol Linteau, campus organizer for PIRGIM, said protesters should plan on bringing a sleeping bag and about $45 in cash to help share gas costs.

She also suggested that MSU students who plan to go south for spring break should consider stopping by Washington for the rally on their way back.

Sleeping arrangements will probably be made for church basements and school gymnasiums, she said.

In addition to the march and rally, two other anti-draft groups are planning a lobbying day for March 24.

THE LOBBYING EFFORT is being planned by the National Committee Against Registration and the Draft and the Coalition for a New Foreign and Military Policy.

Jean Carroll, disarmament coordinator of the Coalition for a New Foreign and Military Policy, said the lobbying day would help persuade federal lawmakers to refuse the president's request for funding.

"We plan to go up on the hill and kind of make the entire weekend a two-pronged approach to deal with the draft issue," he said.

He said a teach-in is being planned for the Sunday following the rally to help protesters learn how to lobby their legislators effectively.

Arrest

from several "hits" of LSD in pill form to a quarter-ounce of cocaine worth $500.

The nine campus arrests concluded that segment of the investigation, he said, "but that doesn't mean we won't be back soon."

Two scales, which can be used to weight narcotics, were confiscated in the campus arrests, one of which has been identified as being stolen from the University, said DPS Capt. Ferman Badgley.

Police said the arrests were made in the early morning to minimize the danger to the police officers and to ensure the suspects were home.

Police failed to locate one student, Kurt Johnson, in the initial arrests. However, upon learning there was a warrant for his arrest, Johnson surrendered to campus police shortly after the arrests.

Badgley said DPS personnel worked with Metro Squad officers from the beginning of the investigation, providing initial information for some cases.

The arrests will probably "tighten things up" on campus for a while, Badgley said, but he said he was unsure if the flow of drugs onto campus would decrease as a result.

Badgley said he hoped the arrests would discourage other campus drug dealers. Metro Squad personnel dubbed the investigation and arrests "Operation Education."

Gacy mentally ill — expert

United Press International

CHICAGO — Mass murder suspect John Wayne Gacy killed young men and boys because a mental illness convinced him they possessed the qualities he hated in himself, a psychiatrist testified Thursday.

The psychiatrist, Dr. Richard Rappaport, said Gacy harbored murderous feelings about his father, incestuous impulses and homosexual tendencies — all of which he hated.

When he brought young men to his house, Rappaport said, he psychologically reversed roles with them — him becoming the father, the youths becoming him.

"He's so convinced that these qualities exist in them and that he has to kill them," Rappaport testified.

"In a way, he rids himself forever of the qualities that are in himself . . . through projection, he gets rid of the hostilities and threatening figures that pervade his consciousness."

Gacy is charged with killing 33 young men and boys — most of them with a "rope trick" in which they were strangled and died in convulsions. All but four of the bodies were found buried on Gacy's property in the northwest Chicago suburbs.

The prosecution wants Gacy put to death for the 33 murder charges — the most brought against any individual in U.S. history. The defense is trying to show Gacy is insane, could not stop himself from killing and should be treated for mental illness.

Rappaport said Gacy began his repetitious killing "scenario" by acting tenderly toward the young men he seduced. He then began to "project" his own hated attributes onto them and saw them as "selling themselves as he tried to sell himself to his father," he testified.

Gacy also believed he had done things he would not otherwise have done in an attempt to please his father, who beat and ridiculed him for failing to live up to the father's image of masculinity, Rappaport said.

Hostage meeting OK'd

(AP) — Militants holding American hostages have agreed to allow a U.N. investigating panel and Iranian President Abolhassan Bani Sadr to meet with their captives, Tehran radio said. The report did not give a time for the meeting.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, speaking to reporters after a Revolutionary Council meeting, also said the U.N. commission would be able to meet the hostages, but gave no further details.

The commission, on the fifth full day of its investigation of charges against the deposed shah, toured a prison formerly run by the monarch's secret police and met with a representative of the ruling Revolutionary Council.

The U.N. panel visited the main palace of ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, then toured Evin prison where thousands allegedly were tortured by SAVAK, the shah's secret police, before the monarch was forced from the throne in Iran's Islamic Revolution last year.

Four commission members met with Hassan Habibi, official spokesperson for the Revolutionary Council. The fifth member — co-chairperson Andres Aguilar of Venezuela — was in Caracas on a previously arranged visit and was to rejoin the commission in Tehran soon, U.N. spokesperson Samir Sambar said.

A report from the commission, released at the United Nations, said the members went through a crowd of 1,200 alleged victims and examined individual cases of obvious physical mutilation.

"Co-chairman Mohamed Bedjaoui spoke to the victims, assuring them of the commission's compassion for the suffering. He stressed that this deeply moving experience would remain imprinted in the memory of the members of the commission," it said.

A U.N. spokesperson in New York said the regular reports from the commission to Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim had increased Waldheim's confidence "a satisfactory solution of the problem will be found." The spokesperson said Waldheim had assurances in writing that the commission would be permitted to see the hostages while in Tehran.

Tehran radio said the militants held a news conference at the embassy and revealed new documents they allege show links between "U.S. imperialism" and Adm. Mahmoud Alavi, whose arrest was reported Monday. An Islamic newspaper said Alavi, who has a degree from Harvard University, had helped members of the shah's regime escape last year.

The Tehran daily Kayhan quoted a spokesperson for the militants as saying the group was considering turning over some documents to the commission that allegedly show "the plots of U.S. spies (in the embassy) against Iran's Islamic Revolution."

Planners seek alternatives to Grand River

By SUSIE BENKELMAN
State News Staff Writer

A request for funds and the establishment of a committee to study alternative routes to Grand River Avenue will be made to the Michigan Department of Transportation, the Tri-County Regional Planning Commission voted Wednesday.

The commission's move was made in response to a letter sent Jan. 30 by MSU President Cecil Mackey, who indicated that the Board of Trustees approved of the study.

MSU's approval was needed before steps could be taken toward the study. The commission has received OK's from other local units of government involved, Lansing, East Lansing, Meridian Township and the Ingham County Road Commission.

The study will be used to determine what alternatives to the traffic-congested Grand River Avenue exist, said Bill Gnodtke, commissioner from Clinton County.

ONE OF THE alternatives which may be studied is the controversial cross-campus route. The cross-campus route would be a low-grade, four-lane freeway running from Trowbridge Street to East Grand River at Park Lake Road.

The request to the Department of Transportation will ask that the study include representatives from all entities involved.

"We are in no way taking a stand in favor of any one route," Gnodtke said. "The alternative could be anything from more bus service to a route north or south of the corridor (Grand River)."

"We want to take a fresh approach to the whole thing," he said. "We want to involve representatives from local units of government from the very beginning."

In other business, the commission voted to reconsider their approval last month of a southern route for a needed segment of temporary I-69 south of Park Lake in Bath Township.

THE SECTION RUNS from U.S. 127 to the Clinton and Shiawassee counties line. The area in Bath Township contains 40 to 50 percent wetlands.

The commission voted to reconsider their previous move because opposition to the southern route was voiced by residents of that area at a public hearing Jan. 31. More than 500 people attended the hearing.

Bath Township residents disapprove of the southern route because the Highway Department preferred the northern route in 1974, Gnodtke said.

"And Bath Township residents have proceeded in their planning on the basis that that is where the road was going to go (north of Park Lake)," he said.

The commission will reconsider the previously stated preference for the southern route because the Department of Transportation may come up with alternatives which would be north of Park Lake, yet would not harm the environment, Gnodtke said.

The northern route was opposed by conservationists because it would affect 47 acres of Priggoris Park and area wetlands. The southern route would displace 49 single family homes and one business.

'Legal drinking age of 21 no solution to teen abuse'

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

A legal drinking age of 21 cannot solve the problem of teen-age alcohol abuse, the administrator of the Michigan Office of Substance Abuse Services said Thursday.

During a press conference at the Capitol, Kenneth Eaton said the best solution to solving problems concerning teenagers and alcohol is through the example of adults.

"Michigan will never find a magical legal drinking age that will solve the problem of alcohol abuse by its young people," Eaton said.

"Rather, the real challenge to those of us who are sincerely concerned about our young people is to find the means to change adult drinking behaviors, to provide youth with skills which will lead to more responsible decision making in all areas of life and to alert youth to the hazards of mis-using alcohol."

EATON ADDED THAT opponents of a petition drive to place the drinking age issue on the November ballot are tempted to use "vulnerable and isolated" statistics.

"I am inclined to look with some sympathy on the reasons for lowering the drinking age to 19," he said. "I am reluctant to believe that moving the drinking age up and down whimsically will put a serious dent in the problem."

The Office of Substance Abuse will not aggressively seek to place the drinking age issue on the ballot, but the organization will support a move reducing the legal drinking age to 19, Eaton said.

A major problem of substance abuse, however, is the mixing of different drugs which include alcohol, Eaton added.

"A potpourri of drug use is now being used by teen-agers," he said. "Clearly coke is becoming a popular drug, especially among the affluent, but the mixing of alcohol, marijuana and coke has increased."

THE MICHIGAN OFFICE of Substance Abuse Services supports legislation which would reduce penalties for personal use of small amounts of marijuana, Eaton said.

The organization also supports the referral of marijuana offenders to a licensed prevention or treatment program.

"It is not unusual for a family with an 18 or 19-year-old in it to have a discussion comparing their marijuana to the parents' martinis. Teen-agers are looking for implied consent," Eaton said.

The Office of Substance Abuse administrator said he favors proposed legislation in the House which would ban sales of all smoking paraphernalia to anyone under 19 years old.

"I hope it (the legislation) will tend to deglamorize the use of pot," he said.

The sponsor of the bill, Rep. Richard Fitzpatrick, D-Battle Creek, said he believes paraphernalia manufacturers are purposely exploiting the elementary and junior high school market with pot-pipe fridges and comic-strip character stash holders.

Gays lobby to safeguard rights

By ELIZABETH BREVITZ

Decriminalization of homosexual behavior is the first step toward protecting the civil rights of gays, said the founder and director of the Gay Rights Lobby of Michigan.

Gene R. Martin, a 1979 MSU graduate, founded the Lansing-based organization last September to coordinate political activities by the state's gay community, which he estimates to be 10 percent of the total population, or about 900,000.

The lobby's first goal is the passage of House Bill 4842, which would change the Michigan Criminal Code and behavior between consenting adults.

The bill is being revised by the House Judiciary Committee and is unlikely to come up for a House vote before June, said a spokesperson for the bill's sponsor, Rep. Dennis M. Hertel, D-Detroit.

A STATE BAN on discrimination against gays is a second necessary step toward protecting gays' civil rights, Martin said.

Representatives of the Gay

Rights Lobby are working with the Family and Sexuality Task Force headed by Rep. David H. Evans, D-Mount Clemens, in hopes of amending Michigan's Civil Rights Act of 1976 to prohibit discrimination against gays.

Statewide programs are the only effective way to end discrimination against gay men and lesbians, Martin added.

"East Lansing, Ann Arbor and Detroit may have city ordinances prohibiting job and housing discrimination against gays, but that doesn't help people in Battle Creek or Traverse City," he said.

"Gay men and lesbians in non-liberal towns suffer constantly because they're gay. It's not just a matter of job discrimination — it's being told you're immoral, a 'bad' person."

AN UNDERSTANDING OF homosexuality as an orientation, not a choice or preference, is crucial to the gay rights issue, Martin said.

"We're gay because that's what we are, not because we choose to be," he said.

The Gay Rights Lobby, which is affiliated with the Detroit-based Michigan Organization for Human Rights, is primarily designed to give gays lobbying access to state lawmakers in Lansing, though the organization also lobbies on local and national levels, Martin said.

Some of the reforms sought by gays also have implications for heterosexual single persons, Martin said. He said the lobby is concerned with discrimination against all unmarried people in housing rental, insurance benefits and lending policies.

"Homosexual couples, who can't legally marry, and heterosexual couples — who don't want to marry — shouldn't have to pay higher rent or receive fewer insurance benefits for the same amount of money than someone who is married and has two kids," Martin said.

Legislation can't overcome public attitudes toward gays, Martin said. The Lansing-East Lansing area, however, is perhaps more liberal and tolerant than other areas in the state, he added.

"If an anti-discrimination bill came up for a public vote here tomorrow, I'd like to think it would pass," Martin said. "Isn't it at college that you're supposed to learn a more enlightened viewpoint toward alternative lifestyles?"

Ms. Black MSU Pageant set

The Ms. Black MSU Pageant will be held at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Erickson Kiva.

Nouveau Noire, a culturally and socially oriented Black organization, is sponsoring the production. The 19 women competing in the contest were selected by the organization. Of the women competing, 15 are from residence halls, two are from Black organizations and two are from sororities.

Included in the panel of 10 judges will be Zolton Ferency, an MSU associate professor of criminal justice. Other judges include members of the nationally recognized singing group the Dramatics.

"The contest is by no means a beauty pageant," said Vicki Greene, coordinator of the production. "The contestants will be judged on intellect, talent and poise."

Octopus, a local band, will provide entertainment in the contest. Following the pageant, at 11 p.m., a party-reception will be held in Erickson Kiva. Admission to the party is free for those who attended the contest and $2 for others.

Tickets for the contest will be sold at the door for $3.50. Everyone is welcome.

WISCONSIN POSES CHALLENGE

War declared on MSU

By MIKE CHAUDHURI
State News Staff Writer

The University of Wisconsin's student government told The State News Thursday they are declaring war on MSU.

Leon Varjian, vice-president of the University of Wisconsin Student Association, said they were declaring war on MSU because of "insolence," adding they plan to put the students into slavery.

"We want last year's basketball team, too," he said.

The call to Wisconsin was precipitated by communication between the student government at the University of Missouri and ASMSU. Missouri wants ASMSU to form an alliance of student governments to combat Wisconsin.

SUNDAY MORNING, FOUR students from Missouri dropped approximately a ton of cow manure on the Union Center steps, the home of Wisconsin's student government, said Dan Stouffer, ASMSU executive director.

Stouffer said ASMSU is considering joining the alliance, but nothing definite has been determined yet.

"There might be a principle to fight for," he said. "Wisconsin pretty much makes a joke out of student government."

Stu D. Baker, the "Field Marshall" of the Wisconsin government, said the war between Wisconsin and Missouri started when "they sent us a dumb survey asking how much money we made."

Wisconsin replied, saying "$8 million a year plus five grams of cocaine," Baker said. Missouri got upset over that response, and eventually "detente broke down between the governments," he said.

JOSH KURTZ, CAMPUS editor of the Daily Cardinal at Wisconsin, said most of the people in the school's student government are "clowns," who last year built a replica of the Statue of Liberty on a frozen lake.

The Student Board's policy committee will discuss possibilities of joining the alliance with Missouri, Stouffer said.

"I think it's a silly idea generally," said Bob Carr, College of Business representative.

He added, "If we can do it without spending money — great."

ASMSU Comptroller Terry Buckley said ASMSU might be able to finance a war against Wisconsin by selling war bonds to interested students, something Missouri has already

Prof says corporations dictate U.S. Latin policy

By MATT PERRY

The U.S. continues to support oppressive military regimes in Latin America because American multinational corporations dictate U.S. foreign policy, said an MSU professor.

Jose LaLuz, a Latin American activist and MSU professor of labor and industrial relations, said U.S. corporate support for oppressive dictatorships and their semi-feudal economies has caused much anti-American sentiment in Latin America.

LaLuz was one of a four-member panel who discussed Latin America and foreign policy Wednesday night.

The "chauvinism of the great nation" supported regimes in Cuba, Brazil, Mexico and Puerto Rico in the 1930s, much like it supported Nicaragua's Somoza until his recent fall, he added.

AMERICA'S INTERVENTIONIST HISTORY is a continuation of the 1823 Monroe Doctrine, he said, which outlined U.S. control over the Americas and opposed any outside interference.

The blame for anti-American sentiment should be placed on "the big business conglomerates who establish U.S. foreign policy on behalf of the citizens," he said.

LaLuz said the Carter administration, despite its support of worldwide human rights, has instituted a foreign policy that would isolate the influence of revolutions like Cuba's and Nicaragua's to protect American interests in Latin America.

Carlos Morales and Maria Torres, members of the Committee to End the U.S. Blockade of Cuba, spoke on the need to update views of Cuba and recognize it as a legitimate market for U.S. trade.

Morales, a University of Michigan student, said since the 1960 blockade of Cuba, which meant no travel or trade to the country, Cuba has overcome economic troubles and has proved itself a reputable market for trade.

AMERICANS VIEW CUBA wrongly as a Soviet satellite, Morales said, while it is an independent nation that trades with socialist and capitalist nations alike.

Domestically, Cuba's revolutionary government is strong, he said, and has proved it with low unemployment and good health care.

Torres, a Cuban immigrant, said despite a recent Supreme Court decision ending the prevention of travel to Cuba as unconstitutional, the U.S. should also lift trade embargoes against the country.

Satire of college life

Spotlight '80 will present a satirical musical comedy entitled "A Touch of Clash" this weekend in the Wonders Kiva.

The play, a satire about college life, is a take-off of Romeo and Juliet with the Montagues being portrayed as Greeks and the Capulets as non-Greeks.

The performances are today and Saturday at 8 p.m. A matinee performance will be held Sunday at 3 p.m.

Tickets are $1 in advance and can be purchased at the Wonders Cafeteria during dinner. Tickets are $2 at the door.

Investment policy mirrors morality

Money, by the very nature of its attractiveness, can be tainted. It can be tainted with greed and avarice, sometimes with scandal and deception. And as the MSU Board of Trustees discovered during the long fight over divestiture, it can even be tainted with human suffering.

The battle over South African holdings ended last month, when the University sold off its last parcel of tainted stock. But the question of mixing investments with moral sanctions arose again last week, when Scudder, Stevens and Clark, the University's investment firm, proposed that MSU invest heavily in the burgeoning defense industry. The University's stock portfolio, formerly awash with South African connections now contains stock in Martin-Marietta Corp., the chief developer of the MX missile system. More defense-related purchases are expected in the near future — and for good reason, if no one is to assume that the University's "bottom line" is profit and nothing but. The predominant view in Washington is that current defenses are inadequate and must be built up; consequently, the financial community is bullish on bullets.

The simplest and most expedient response to the trustees' acceptance of such advice would be condemnation. The board's action, in light of MSU's dissolution of its South African connection, could be viewed as hypocritical. In the purest sense, it was. But it would be cumbersome, if not impossible, for the trustees to sever MSU's connections with the defense industry, if only because the industry is so firmly entrenched in society and the University is so badly in need of money.

While financial divorce from the defense industry might provide some sort of moral cue to the people who manufacture the goods of war, it would undoubtedly engulf University administrators in a moral puzzle which could not fully be solved. Unlike the South African question, the University's involvement with defense is ambiguous and deep-rooted; the "villains" are not clearly identified. South Africa was a case of direct and atrocious human repression, and MSU's divestiture was an appropriate condemnation of American intervention. But weaponry is ingrained in American business to the point where any arbitrary distinction between "defense" and "non-defense" industry is practically meaningless. In attempting to limit itself to "untainted" investments, therefore, the University would effectively cut its own financial throat.

That, admittedly, is not a particularly lofty or idealistic point of view, but it is the only one which can be set down as a matter of policy. A university which collects and spends a quarter-billion dollars a year cannot expect to emerge with its face unsoiled by moral compromise. But whereas the South African question required a policy of "prudent divestiture," the defense question could certainly accommodate a policy of "prudent investment." Individual judgments on investment matters are made with profit in mind, as they must be, but there still exists a margin for moral discretion.

If stock in blatantly defense-oriented industries is profitable, other stocks may be just as profitable or more so. And despite the impracticability of divorcing itself from the military, MSU can, through its Board of Trustees, make at least a small statement about its perceptions of national priorities. Diverting its attention from the biggest barons of defense to the less-tainted organizations would be a rational means of making that statement.

A small sacrifice for state anglers

Gov. Milliken may have remained aloof last spring when U.S. District Judge Noel Fox ruled that the Chippewa Indian tribes of Michigan were entitled to fish with the controversial gill nets. But more recently, Milliken has cleared up any confusion about his views. At a Department of the Interior conference last week, Milliken vehemently defended the arguments of Michigan's commercial fishing industry, expressing outrage at the state's allowance of one rule for Indians and another for commercial and recreational anglers.

The whole argument against this double standard centers around the conservationists' concern over allowing the Indians or any other single group to quickly deplete the Great Lakes of fish through unrestricted fishing practices. The fear is justified, but the speculations of conservationists that the Indians will deplete the lakes very quickly has not yet been proven. The issue also raises an even more complex moral question: Should the state invalidate its treaties in the interests of a modern day approach to saving the fish reserves in the Great Lakes?

Judging by the past decade of problems the lakes have faced, the question of whether to allow the Indians unrestricted fishing rights seems the least of Michigan's worries. The state has dumped tons of pollutants into its waters; its industrial warfare against the ecology has already brought on the need to stock our lakes artificially. The whole idea of regulating catches and the argument for conservation has gone from the desire to preserve the riches of nature to preserving the supplies pumped in by the state.

In economic terms, the state could still uphold its treaty to the Indians. Sadly enough, it is no longer an issue of enabling the lakes to replenish themselves. The natural balance of fish in the lakes was upset long ago, largely because the state let the very same people who now want to deprive the Indians of their exclusive fishing rights used gill nets for years.

Allowing the Indians to continue using gill nets is a small sacrifice that will not cause the ecological problems gill net opponents claim it will.

MARK FELLOWS

Protection includes surveillance

From the time most of us were knee high to a deputy sheriff, we were told by parents and other trusted sources that the police are "our friend." Most of us probably never questioned this attitude until we were rudely shocked to find later that the police don't have to be friendly and can be sometimes brutal, sneaky and even criminal.

The resulting feelings toward police in general, especially for those of us who grew up with Kent State and Chicago, seems to be a hazy ambivalence. But because contact with the police is usually made in less than ideal circumstances, police are often regarded with fear and anger, even hate.

But inside us, the idea remains that we would rather than not have police around in this society. Remember that old pro-police bumper sticker: "The next time you're in trouble, try calling a hippie?" The schizophrenia resulting from our conflicting feelings ultimately forces us to make a choice.

This dilemma is painfully apparent when the subject of protest demonstrations surfaces. A letter to The State News Monday informed readers of the presence of plainclothes police from the Department of Public Safety at an anti-draft rally on campus Feb. 13. They were apparently taking pictures, the letter stated.

DPS Capt. Ferman Badgley confirmed the presence of plainclothes police at the demonstration, as well as their using a camera for whatever purpose. Badgley asserted that the camera, after all, didn't work, but that isn't what disturbs participants. The fact that police are snapping pictures at all, or trying to, is what is disturbing.

I don't want to enter a debate on the necessity of using cameras in "legitimate" police work. But in light of the abuses perpetuated by the old state police "Red Squad" when it snooped on anti-war demonstrations, you would think the police would leave the cameras home just to avoid "bad form."

Police defend their physical presence at such demonstrations as the one Feb. 13 on the grounds of violence potentially erupting, especially with an emotionally charged issue such as the draft. This defense is, I believe, commendable and consistent with their function of protecting innocent citizens. However, the apparent inability of police to identify the people or person responsible for the smoke canister incident at that demonstration calls this defense into question.

A police presence would have probably been welcome, however, at Monday's rally at the Union, where a counter demonstrator was assaulted. Badgley said police were not informed of the actual demonstration, but the fact that the media knew about it and police cars were seen by observers to drive by the Union, again makes one wonder.

My point is this: if police wish to justify their presence at demonstrations with the potential for violence, they should make efforts to act accordingly across the board. If an anti-draft rally is worthy of observation, surely an anti-Mideast peace accords rally merits the same, ahem, protection.

Secondly, civil libertarians must reconcile their abhorrence of police surveillance with their wish for protection from violence as they exercise their right to public protest. The problem is that some kind of surveillance is bound to occur while the police try to keep the peace. Like it or not, many police officers think of observation as part of their job of protecting not only those present, but others who might be hurt by a protest participant.

Another point is dealt with by Badgley. If police really wanted to covertly observe protest participants, chances are they won't be seen in the crowd with a camera. "You would never see me," Badgley said, and he's right.

Anyone not willing to be identified as a participant in a demonstration simply shouldn't attend. You have a better chance of making the 5 p.m. news than ending up in a police file. And if police wish to add their optical instruments to those already wielded by the media, there's not much you can do. The price of protection at a demonstration, assuming you get it, is the risk of being identified with your cause. Perhaps that really shows how much you value your right to dissent.

President isn't asking for war

I myself am a bit confused by the issue being raised over the call for draft registration, it seems to be a case for the most part of the blind leading the blind.

I'm no one to claim that I know-it-all, but, as I see it the United States of America is about the best country in the world in which to live. My peers seem to equate the draft with war, which makes some sense, but President Carter isn't asking for the draft, or war, just registration. Also, there is the problem of looking at all wars like they were Vietnam; this is a great mistake. True, "War is hell," and Vietnam was the worst and we should never have been there, but I don't believe we would let something like that happen again.

The all-voluntary force is not truly working as was hoped and we are short of troops, predominantly a standby force. The draft imposes a call for two years of service to your country — a small price to pay to live in a country such as ours.

In the '60s and early '70s, there was good call for protest but I can't see it today. It's time our country pulled together for a change and demonstrate the power we are capable of, before an emergency arises, that we may be too late to mobilize for.

We here in the United States can never go into isolation again, we have had "world power" status too long, and ignoring the outside world won't make it all go away. An awful lot of those living outside our country would give just about anything to have even half the opportunities we have been lucky enough to be born with.

proposal on the ballot.

The facts are that raising the age to purchase alcohol to 21 has only changed the location of drinking. The number of drinking drivers, ages 18 to 20, involved in fatal accidents has increased. This finding contradicts the theory that raising the drinking age would save young lives — a major argument of the Proposal D campaign. A law cannot stop people from drinking; Prohibition proved this.

Citizens for a Fair Drinking Age has won the support of the State Board of Education. It considers the resolution primarily a matter of civil rights. A 19-year-old drinking age can be considered a compromise to keep alcohol out of the high schools, which still entitles most of us a right which is justifiably ours.

Is it good public policy to have a law on the books that is unenforceable? The 21-year-old drinking age does not have the respect or support of any of those involved; the store or bar employees, the police forces, and least of all, those of us between the ages 19 and 21. Wouldn't it be wiser if the drinking age in Michigan were 19 and strictly enforced than 21 and mocked?

Don't stand idly by, hoping someone else will take on the responsibility. Let's prove to ourselves that when an issue within our grasp violates us personally, we will react. Work within the system; register to vote, sign and circulate a petition over spring break, and then remember to vote this Nov. 4th.

For more information, or petitions, stop by the local chapter of Citizens for a Fair Drinking Age, associated with ASMSU, in 326 Student Services Bldg., or call 355-8266. Let's give the support needed to gain back a right that was originally lost to apathy.

No reason to oppose registration

Wasn't it great when we Americans showed the world our united determination and will, proof that we are still a superpower, when the Iranian government supported, and implicitly participated in, the blackmail-hostage situation in Iran! Wasn't it great when we Americans again showed our strength and power of tongue in a united condemnation of Soviet aggression in Afghanistan! Isn't it great that we American youth are unwilling to support the symbolic gesture of peacetime registration in the face of Soviet military aggression! We Americans are great at rhetorical remarks, as long as they don't make us sacrifice anything; yet, the remote possibility of going to battle to protect the principles we hold so dear (so dear as to take for granted) abhors us.

Although I am opposed to a peacetime draft and opposed to war, I can see no reason to protest peacetime registration. Unfortunately, those considering the issue thus far have failed to see the difference between peacetime registration and peacetime draft. The two are separate issues and should be treated as such. At present, peacetime draft is not a rational fear of those protesting. Peacetime registration is all that has been proposed, this in order to ready ourselves in case we must go to war, and to show the Soviets our unified opposition to their military aggression. Those protesting registration have a case of '60s nostalgia mixed with a case of selfishness from the "me" decade of the '70s.

Draft setback temporary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress will reverse a House subcommittee's setback to President Carter's draft registration plan, House Democratic leader Jim Wright said Thursday.

Wright predicted the full Appropriations Committee and the House will approve Carter's request for funds to begin registration this summer.

An appropriations subcommittee turned down the president's request Wednesday, but Wright called that action "unrepresentative" of the mood in the full committee and in the House.

"We are determined that the president shall not be denied or embarrassed," Wright said.

"I have every confidence that funding for registering males will be approved next week by the full appropriations committee."

Students seize embassy

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panamanian leftists proclaiming sympathy with dissidents in El Salvador, seized the Salvadoran Embassy here Thursday and "detained" six persons, a spokesperson for the leftist students said.

Police said no one was hurt in the takeover. Both the police and the student spokesperson said Salvadoran Charge d'Affaires Manuel Aguirre was among those being held in the protest against alleged government repression in El Salvador.

The student spokesperson said his group was part of the Revolutionary Student Front, a leftist activist organization.

Rebels may be using U.S. arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown acknowledged on Thursday that rebels in Afghanistan may be receiving arms supplied to Pakistan by the United States, but said it is the Soviets who are causing "the deaths and the turmoil."

Asked if arms for Afghan rebels fighting Soviet troops are being financed by the CIA, Brown replied that he would not discuss CIA funding, either to confirm or deny it.

But, he said, "There are Afghan insurgents, there are Afghan refugees who do go back and forth across the border and they may very well get arms from Pakistan."

Trade deficit widens

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's trade deficit widened in January to $4.8 billion, the highest level in two years, the Commerce Department reported Thursday.

The deficit — based on a new, congressionally mandated method of calculation that overstates the total cost of imports and, consequently, the deficit — compared with a deficit of $4.1 billion in December.

It was the largest since the value of imports plus insurance and shipping costs exceeded exports by $5.2 billion in February 1978.

Oil supply test successful

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary Charles W. Duncan disclosed today a successful test of the nation's strategic petroleum stockpile, transferring 300,000 barrels of oil 42 miles in 16 hours.

Spokesperson Jim Griffin said Duncan ordered the test Wednesday with no advance notice, "like a fire drill, to see if the system works." It did.

Oil stored in an underground cavern called the West Hackberry site in Louisiana was pumped to the surface and through a pipeline to Sunoco storage tanks at Nederland, Texas, starting at 6 p.m. Wednesday.

Defectors slaying investigated

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Investigators said Thursday they had conducted tests on the son of two slain defectors from the Peoples Temple to see if he had recently fired a gun. They also said suicide, robbery and a crime of passion had been ruled out in the case.

According to sources close to the investigation, officers were awaiting the results of sophisticated tests ordered Wednesday on Eddie Mills, 17. The tests were aimed at determining whether he had recently used a firearm or was "stoned" on drugs during the shootings Tuesday night of his parents, Al Mills, 51, and Jeannie Mills, 40.

In official announcements, police would say only that the youth had been interviewed and released.

Detroit officials cleared

DETROIT (AP) — The state Department of Licensing and Regulation has cleared six Detroit officials of a charge that they improperly certified the new Joe Louis Arena for occupancy.

The arena will be the site of the 1980 GOP National Convention.

A former Detroit building inspector charged in the complaint filed last month that three officials violated state statutes by deciding the arena could be occupied.

Plant still radioactive

ATLANTA (AP) — A firm that used radium and tritium to paint glow-in-the-dark watch dials shut down in 1978 when the state found excessive radioactivity. But 15 months later, the plant site remains "hot" and no barriers exist to keep the curious off the property.

"I wouldn't go back there unless I had to," said an independent researcher who recently made Geiger readings on the property of the Luminous Processes Inc. plant in Athens.

State News/Mark A. Deremo

FILMS, DISCUSSIONS

Nuclear program slated

The Lansing Area Mobilization for Survival will be holding a conference, "Toward a non-Nuclear Future," this weekend in the Union.

A series of films will be shown at 7 tonight in 336 Union. The cost for the three films is $1.50. Two of the films involve a historical review of nuclear power and an analysis of the arms race. The other film, "Paul Jacobs and the Nuclear Gang," is billed as "the death of a journalist and his investigation into nuclear testing."

A day-long program on Saturday will include several speakers, discussion sessions and a film. A $2 donation is being asked for the program which will take place in the Union Parlors.

Judy Gorman-Jacobs, a political musician, will perform folk, blues and original music at 7:30 p.m. Saturday. The group is asking $2.50 donations for the concert.

One of the speakers is Andrea Chesman, a resident of Harrisburg, Pa., near the site of the Three Mile Island nuclear plant. Chesman organizes anti-nuclear activities from a feminist perspective.

Sidney Lens, author of The Day Before Doomsday, is a long-time political activist. His book is a condemnation of the nuclear arms race.

'U' Museum needs tour guides

The MSU Museum is looking for students interested in working as Museum tour guides spring term.

The Museum is usually busiest in the spring, hosting groups of grade schoolers or clubs, said Deb Roggin, coordinator of the tour guide program. Approximately 20 more tour guides, referred to as docents, are needed so tours of the Museum can be provided for the groups, Roggin said.

The docents will work on a volunteer-basis and no set number of hours is designated. Tours will be arranged around students' schedules.

Prior experience or knowledge is not a requirement for the position, as the Museum conducts its own in-depth training program, Roggin said.

The guides are taught basic information, how to obtain additional information, greet people and conduct special programs about specific topics, she said.

Students are also asked to observe two professional guides giving tours as part of their training.

The docents are not required to learn anything technical,

Roggin said. Yet, they are allowed to organize and plan their own course of the tours.

Experience in communicating with people is one of the advantages to guiding, Roggin said.

"Relating with a variety of people is another part of the job," she said. "Tourism is not the same for fourth graders as it is for first graders."

Business, tourism and environmental interpretation majors should be especially interested in touring, Roggin said, not only for the community (continued on page 16)

Lansing may get to vote on flouridation of water

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

Lansing voters may get a chance to vote on whether they want the flouridation of their drinking water discontinued, if the state OK's a petition to have the question put on the November ballot.

Martha C. Johnson, director of the "Safe Water Club" announced to the Lansing City Council Committee of the Whole Thursday that the city clerk had validated the petitions her organization circulated to bring the question before the voters.

Assistant City Attorney Chris Berkstrom said the council must send the petitions to the state, where either the governor or the attorney general will review it to make sure that the petitions are valid.

Once the petitions have passed state inspection, the issue can be placed on the November ballot, Berkstrom said.

If the question makes the ballot, voters will be asked whether they want the city charter amended to "prohibit the addition or the use of fluoride chemicals or fluosilicic acid in the public water supply."

Johnson failed to bring the issue before the Lansing electorate last November when she could not muster the 4,000 signatures necessary. She maintains that fluoride presents a major health hazard to those who consume it.

"It causes cancer," she said. "Don't you know that?"

Johnson said she is sure that Lansing citizens will vote to stop flouridation "because people are finally beginning to realize that fluoride isn't safe."

Flouride, which has been promoted as preventing tooth decay, was added to drinking water in 1962 by the Board of Water and Light.

The council also heard from the major's executive assistant, Robert Black, who informed the council that the city will probably get an additional $280,000 from its Community Development Block Grant.

The block grant, which is issued by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, is used by the city for various community restoration and development projects.

Black said HUD informed the city last week that they could receive the additional funds because of increased population within the city.

Mayor Gerald Graves has recommended that $210,000 of the additional funds be used to repair the sewers in the Capitol Commons housing project. Graves also requested that the remaining $70,000 be used to complete street work in the 100 block of South Washington Avenue.

The council will act on the major's recommendation in a few weeks, after exploring other possible uses for the money. Councilmember-at-large Sid Worthington said.

Comic books for grown-ups

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Reviewer

Somewhere inside each and every mature, sophisticated and responsible adult lurks a willfully immature 2-year-old who resents being held against its will in the body of a "boring old person." By definition the two personalities are in constant opposition — while one side reads Ulysses and Harold Robbins, watches 60 Minutes and scans the editorial pages every day, the alter-ego lives for Mr. Magoo re-runs, Marmaduke, and Ultra-Man, while dreaming of once more rolling in the mud and having its tummy tickled.

The beauty of the two books in question here is that they manage to appeal to both the young and old in each of us. While presented in the form of cartoons, both touch on a variety of the philosophical questions that boring old people use as substitutions for having their tummies tickled.

Tantrum
By Jules Feiffer
Alfred A. Knopf, $8.95

Feiffer's status is easy enough to certify. He wrote the plays Little Murders and Knock Knock and the screenplay for Carnal Knowledge, in addition to assorted novels and a syndicated comic strip which appears in the Village Voice and other papers nationwide. Feiffer is an excellent cartoonist, which suggests that his 2-year-old self is alive and well and to some extent in control of the writer's pen.

Tantrum would best be described as a cartoon-novel. In its 183 pages of sketches, Feiffer tells the story of Leo, a 42-year-old business executive who is undergoing various mid-life crises as the story opens. Tired of responsibility and danger in his upper-middle class lifestyle, Leo throws a kicking and screaming tantrum and SURPRISE!! reverts back — physically, at least — into a 2-year-old. While his wife, children, relatives and friends are alternately disgusted and pitying, Leo himself is delighted with the change until he discovers that being 2 does not automatically entitle him to limitless supplies of motherly love.

Leo's new status does, however, give him a perfect perspective from which to view both the young and old around him — and by implication the process by which the former become the latter. Leo is constantly frustrated by the fact that he no longer belongs to either group, and by the fact that his fellow 2-year-olds can't possibly understand his advice ("Don't tell them what you're thinking, they'll use it against you . . . don't mature, mature people do the s--- work . . .") while the adults around him seem to be acting out their deathwishes by crippling their own spirits.

Leo is also torn by his own split personality — a fact which can be seen as the newly rejuvenated child tells his own offspring "I, your father, have reverted to 2. That happens to be my private and personal choice. I will love and support you every bit as strongly as when I was middle-aged. That's all that matters as far as you're concerned. My age is my business, not yours . . . now carry me piggy-back!"

Feiffer manages to cram an amazing amount of thought and feeling into 20 minutes worth of reading material, and he follows Leo's one-man children's crusade with so much empathy that you'd almost think that Feiffer was Leo and vice versa (maybe they are). His sketches often border on the hilarious, and his tale contains roughly equal amounts of warmth and wit. Tantrum is for everyone who realizes that growing up isn't all it's cracked up to be.

Fungus the Bogyman
By Raymond Briggs
Random House, $4.95

If you were taught as a child to fear the bogyman — to see him in every shadow, to hear him in every creaking step, and to check for him under your bed before climbing in at night — then this is the book for you. By analyzing the life of your average blue- (green?) collar bogyman and holding the land and ways of Bogydom up to the light, Briggs manages to strip away the mystery and fear surrounding these much-maligned creatures.

Aside from some obvious physical differences (12 toes and fingers, three nipples, budding horns and a vestigial dorsal fin) and differences in lifestyle (bogeys need to kept wet and slimy, and their diet and sanitary habits are, uh, unusual, to say the least) bogeys aren't all that much unlike us surface people. They have their wives and families, history and culture — and of course, they have their jobs.

By sheer force of will, 42-year-old Leo reverts back to childhood and begins a hilarious series of adventures in Jules Feiffer's most recent book, Tantrum.

Briggs, comic book story follows Fungus through one average day of stair-creaking, window-tapping and raising boils on the necks of his victims — jobs which Fungus walks through without a hint of malice toward his targets. In fact, Fungus wanders through the day in a fit of existential ennui, constantly questioning the whys and wherefores of his appointed task. After work — over a mug of slime at his local out (bogeys don't have inns) — Fungus asks a friend "but what are we pestering and frightening them for?" The reply: "Why ask what for? You might as well ask what slime is for."

While Fungus the Bogyman is almost a non-story as far as plot is concerned, the book is of interest for the picture of the slimy world of Bogydom that Briggs presents. Those of you who have been plagued recently by runny noses, post-nasal drip, and other mucous-related diseases will probably find it all fascinating in a perverse sort of way, although some may consider the book irredeemably gross ("Are not your kisses then as filthy, and more/as a worm sucking an envenomed sore? What a poet! What vision!").

There aren't any real belly laughs in Fungus the Bogyman, only a dry wit, a strong sense of the absurd, and a feeling of pathos for the story's phlegmatic hero. By the time Briggs has fleshed out his picture of bogy life (much of which is simply a direct reversal of normal ways of thought) in almost excessive detail, Fungus and his peers — for all their strangeness — seem almost like us, which is no doubt the point in the first place. One thing's for sure — after reading this book the bogyman will never seem scary again.

Somebody, please help me. I am a poor, defenseless, type-writer being cruelly manipulated by a sad, neurotic writer. He keeps me in a dark closet and makes me do terrible things like spell obscene words and print degenerate philosophies. He is a cynical, sarcastic person. Once he said with a laugh that he would set me free if anyone could break through his cold, abrasive exterior. I guess that's my only hope. I think something bad happened to make him the way he is today. But right now, I am his prisoner. Oh no! Here he comes. His name is Johnny Wizard. Please do what you can, MSU. It's my one chance for survival.

The pulsating power of the Kenwood KR-3090 brings me back to Earth. And I raise my glass to toast the uplifting anthem of the Clash; "I've been beat up. I've been thrown out. But I'm not down. I've been shown up but I've grown up. And I'm not down."

A collage of disillusioning visions bombard my brain. I see Elvis Costello futilely explaining to the Beach Boys that new wave has nothing to do with surfing and I picture hordes of robots on the dance floor at Gables bouncing off each other like pinballs. The zebs look like they've spent the week going through Paul McCartney's luggage. One of them I remember

I peer intently out over the campus and see a generation dependent upon ego gratification; a generation where there is no right or wrong, there's just ME. And I detest it but I'm a part of it. My own emotions are hibernating for the winter.

I vow to stop answering the phone "Roman Polanski Babysitting Service" but decide not to relinquish my Linda Lovelace recording of Head Games. I remember the story of the dog that lost his head at the railroad tracks because he was too intent on retrieving a piece of tail. I swear it will never happen to me.

And I pass by the theater where Indra Gandhi and Aya-tollah Khomeini are starring in an updated version of Love Story. The tragically hip sons and daughters of the UMC are waiting in line and I catch the eye of a melancholy lady with a face that looks like it was trampled at a Who concert. I think of buying her a drink but quickly suppress the notion. Once, a long time ago, I enjoyed doing nice things for people but too many of them worried about non-existent motives. So I quit.

Life is simultaneously confusing and amusing in this plastic age of sleeping hearts. I know when armageddon arrives and I look to the east to see a mushroom cloud expanding over Detroit; I'm just going to grab a cold brew, a warm body, and go out laughing. Because mankind, like so many people I know, could've had it all but was too damn ignorant to realize it.

Well, fans and fannies. I have returned after a self-imposed exile from reality that has wrought many changes in me. Y'see, first I was apathetic. Now, I'm just pathetic.

It's been a disturbing year. A bizarre blending of old and new as knife-wielding former friends are cast aside in favor of new relationships. And one foot hangs perilously onto college life while the other is firmly implanted in the business world. I stand with a heightened consciousness of superficiality and accept the impermanence of all things in life including life itself.

I am at the threshold of existence; floating in a strange, starless limbo where nothing is significant yet everything is

I consider my upcoming vacation in Afghanistan and wonder why if Jimmy Carter wants a draft, he doesn't just unzip his fly. I envision an angel with two large silver dollars floating toward me and I ask myself if God is so great, how come he has never had a greatest hits album?

As I approach the lounge, a tall redhead sticks out her Gloria Vanderbilt jeans a little just to attract my attention. So I throw up my hands and acknowledge her splendor saying, "OK. OK! Give up. You're beautiful. You're wonderful. You're the greatest." And she raises her eyebrows and states matter-of-factly: "Thank you. I know."

THIS WEEKEND

It's mostly theater, home-work, or taking it easy this weekend — those are roughly the options. Yes, it's true, the entertainment capital of the Midwest, our own East Lansing, it winding down as the term draws slowly to a close.

CONCERT DEPT. Showcasejazz presents nationally popular jazz saxophonist Ronnie Laws in two back-to-back shows in the Erickson Kiva at 8:30 and 11 tonight. Tickets for this master of mainstream commercial jazz are available through noon today at the Union ticket office, Where-House Records, and Flat, Black & Circular for $7.50. Tonight it will be $8.50 at the door.

Ten Pound Fiddle presents cowboy-folksinger Steve Cormier at 8 tonight in Williams Hall Cafeteria; general admission is $3.

The Singing Statesmen and the Women's Glee Club perform in concert together at 8:15 tonight in East Lansing's University Church, 1020 S. Harrison Road. The performance, which includes Porpora's Magnificat, will be directed by Charles Smith. Admission is free.

On Sunday, assistant professor Edith Kraft will present an afternoon piano recital at 4 p.m. in the Music Auditorium. It's open to the public. Student recitals and music department information can be obtained at 355-3345.

THEATER DEPT. Boy, there's some good theater in town. For starters there's The BoarsHead Theatre's The Glass Menagerie, a fine rendition of the Tennessee Williams classic. It's being performed at the Lansing Center for the Arts (425 S. Grand). Tickets and information can be obtained at 372-4636 or 484-7805.

The Company's wonderful interpretation of the Tony-winning Michael Cristofer drama

The Shadow Box continues tonight and Saturday night in the Union Ballroom. For advance tickets call 355-3361.

Lansing Community College's production of David Rabe's Vietnam drama Streamers continues at Partington Auditorium (500 W. Lenawee). Shows are at 8 tonight, Saturday and Sunday. For tickets call 372-4636.

The Okemos Barn Theatre presents Oscar Wilde's The Importance of Being Earnest tonight, Saturday night, and Sunday afternoon at the Barn Theatre (4208 Okemos Road). Call 349-4340 for tickets, etc.

And finally... MSU Toybox Theatre presents The Jade Dragon, a collection of four Chinese folk tales, at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Saturday and at 1 and 3 p.m. Sunday. Call 355-0148 for ticket information.

The Department of Romance Languages is sponsoring a free performance of Ayer Es Nunca Jamas, a Spanish dramatic reading written by associate professor Lucia Lockert to be performed in 100 Engineering Bldg. at 3 p.m. Saturday.

MOVIES DEPT. Anne Bancroft (you know, Mrs. Robinson, hey, hey, hey...) has decided that her husband, Mel Brooks, isn't going to be the only one in the family to make films. Her first effort Fatso, with Dom DeLuise, opens this Friday at the Meridian 8.

On campus, RHA presents the Cannes-winning Slaughterhouse Five, based on the Vonnegut novel, and the syrupy The Champ remake, and the comedy The In-Laws. Call 355-0313 for times and places.

Classic Films presents Get Out Your Handkerchiefs, a universally praised romantic French film about a man who will procure anything for his wife to make her smile. It plays at 7:30 and 9:30 Friday and Saturday and 8 p.m. Sunday in 109 Anthony Hall. Admission $1.50, or $1 with RHA pass.

Other films on campus include Francois Truffaut's Bed and Board (7:30 and 9:30 tonight in B-106 Wells, and Saturday in B-102 Wells). Admission is $2, or $1.50 with RHA pass. It's back! Night of the Living Dead (admission $1.50) which follows Bed and Board at 11:30 both nights. Holden Late Show presents The Bad Seed (in G-8 Holding basement at 8 and 10 tonight). Admission $1.50 or free with RHA pass.

The porno films on campus are Maraschino Cherry and Barbara Broadcast — is that about TC majors? Both are tonight and Saturday, Cherry at 7:30 and 10:30 p.m. alternating with Barbara at 9 p.m. and midnight. It's at B-104 Wells, and admission is $3.50, $2.50 for students.

food for thought

Mystic Cantonese Atmosphere
Exists At Imperial Gardens

Imperial Gardens located at 2080 Grand River Okemos, offers an extensive variety of Cantonese style foods: the famous Peking duck from the north, Szechuan style, which is highly peppered food, and Cantonese style, lightly flavored dishes.

Szechuan style dishes, such as chicken with pea-nuts, governor shrimp or shredded beef, are popular choices. If your taste buds are on the lighter side try our Family Delight which is a mixture of chicken, shrimp, lobster and crabmeat with a variety of Chinese vegetables. Of course there's always the old favorites, chop suey, chow mein, or egg foo young.

We also specialize in exotic tropical drinks. We use only the freshest fruit for our daquiris, beer and wine are also featured.

Businessmen lunches are offered on weekdays at special prices. Group dinners for a number of people are also available. With these specials and the wide price range, you too can enjoy a truly unique experience.

If you're short of time, call first and your dinner can be ready to carry out. Stop in this Winter before or after enjoying your favorite winter sport and try our delicious Chinese cuisine.

'Hero At Large': much funnier than it looks

By MATT OTTINGER
State News Special Writer

Believe it or not, there is a lot of good comedy in Hero at Large (United Artists; at the Campus Theatre). Most of it is a lot better than it might seem from the advertising, and the good parts in the first half of the movie outweigh the really lousy stuff near the end.

John Ritter stars as Steve Nichols, a starving young actor whose only serious job was to hold a spear in a Shakespeare play. He gets work promoting Captain Avenger, a low-budget superhero flick. The job, embarrassing as it sounds, is to appear at local theaters dressed in the red leotards, yellow boots and blue visor of the title character and sign autographs for the kiddies.

Nevertheless, our hero perseveres and, in fact, takes his job seriously. A bit too seriously, it seems, for on the way home from an appearance he foils a hold-up at a small grocery, still clad in the Avenger outfit. Naturally, this sort of thing gets a bit of attention and suddenly the mysterious real-life superhero becomes something of a modern legend. So Steve Nichols becomes, according to the dialogue, "a crazy man who goes around in a comic book suit doing good deeds like an overgrown Boy Scout."

Don't get me wrong; I realize that is probably the most absurd plot line of the season. All I'm saying is, given the situation, the first hour of the movie really works. There are some genuinely funny moments as this costumed crimefighter finds that it's not as easy as it is in the comic books.

Ritter comes across on the big screen the same way he comes across on television: a good-looking likable klutz who always seems to be in over his head. He's certainly not going to become a film giant from this role, but few actors of greater caliber could have given that idealistic character the innocent charm he so desperately needed. Anne Archer, the love interest and the only one who knows Captain Avenger's secret identity, is charming and effective, almost as believable as Ritter. While the story is focused on the two of them, they take an improbable storyline and put just enough believability in it to make it interesting.

Then there are those last 40 minutes. Enter two grossly overused clichés: an over-eager PR man and a bitchy female TV reporter. The PR man tries to use Captain Avenger to get the mayor re-elected, and the reporter tries, for reasons unknown, to quell the public spirit generated by the good Captain. Both are partially successful, despite a rousing speech by our hero on the subject of hope, courage, freedom and all the other things for which superheroes stand. That speech and the totally unbelievable final feat of heroism destroyed all the simply fun and humor of the first hour.

A bad film is something that tries to be what it's not. Hero at Large was doing fine when it stayed a simply comedy with no overt meaning or symbolism. When they try to force in altruistic moralizing, the very problem that plagues the comic book characters they are satirizing, Hero at Large becomes no better than a second-rate TV drama.

Peninger predicts 4th place finish as MSU hosts Big Ten wrestlers

By JIM MITZELFELD
State News Sports Writer

Three of the nation's top four wrestling teams and a host of other fine individuals will invade East Lansing as MSU hosts the 66th Annual Big Ten Wrestling Championships.

The two-day tournament will begin at 2 p.m. Saturday with the preliminary and quarterfinal bouts, and continue at 7 p.m. with the semi-final round. The championships and consolation bouts will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. All the action will take place at Jenison Fieldhouse.

The University of Iowa, ranked No. 1 in the country, may have its toughest challenge ever in winning its seventh straight Big Ten title. The Hawkeyes, the defending NCAA champs and winners of four national titles in the past five years, will be given a run for their money by an improved No. 2-ranked University of Wisconsin and No. 4-ranked University of Minnesota.

The last time MSU hosted the championships, back in 1969, the Spartans won six of the 10 weight classes, marking the last time they won the Big Ten title. Although the Spartans would like to do the same thing this time around, their coach for the past 19 seasons, Grady Peninger, is more realistic about his teams chances.

"ON PAPER, IOWA, Wisconsin and Minnesota are neck and neck for first place," Peninger said. "Any one of the three could win it. Only one team point separates them."

"We're going to be fighting for fourth place," he continued. "We hope we can slip into third place like we did two years ago."

"If we do finish third it will be a tremendous upset," Peninger said.

Last year the Spartans finished fourth with 37.25 points behind Iowa (106.25), Wisconsin (90.5) and Minnesota (64.5).

MSU compiled an 11-8-1 overall record and a conference mark of 6-2-1 this season against some of the nation's best.

The Spartans' best chances for an individual champion rest with Fred Worthem, a 158-pound sophomore. Worthem, who had an 18-3 record during the year, recently beat nationally ranked Mike Terry of Wisconsin and tied the University of Oklahoma's Israel Shepard. But his toughest challenge will be to get by Minnesota's

No. 1 ranked 158-pounder Dan Zilverberg, whom he has yet to face this season.

PENINGER SAID TWO other Spartans are capable of winning their weight classes although they would have to pull off upsets.

Senior Jeff Thomas, who wrestled most of the year at 134 pounds, will slim down to the 126 weight class. Thomas will have to beat Wisconsin's Bruce Brotzman and Minnesota's Gary Lefebvre.

Defending Big Ten heavyweight champion Shawn Whitcomb is the third Spartan who has a shot at a title, but his weight class is much tougher than it was a year ago when he took first place in the conference meet at Iowa City, Iowa, as a junior.

Iowa's freshman heavyweight Dean Phinney pinned Whitcomb during the year, and is favored in that weight class. Wisconsin's Scott Jerabek and the University of Michigan's Eric Klassen, who beat Whitcomb during the season, are also considered contenders.

The top four place-winners in each of the 10 weight divisions will advance to the NCAA Championships, to be held March 13 through 15, at Oregon State University.

"OUR FIRST GOAL is to qualify as many people as we can for the nationals," Peninger said.

The rest of the Spartans lineup will include: 142-pound senior Jeff Therrian, who was 18-5 and named a Mid-Season All-American; 118-pounder Harrell Milhouse, 12-9; junior Chuck Joseph who performed almost all year at 126 pounds but who lost to Thomas in a challenge match and therefore forced to move up to 134; and senior Jim Ellis at 177 pounds, who is fourth on the list of all-time MSU winners with 68 lifetime victories and a third-place finisher in the Big Ten last year.

Rounding out the line-up for MSU will be freshman Greg Sargis, who defeated sophomore Dave Rodriguez during the week to wrestle at 158, junior Steve Foley, who compiled an 8-4 mark at 167 pounds, and freshman Scott Shepard at 190 pounds.

PLAYOFF HOPES RIDE ON U-M SERIES

Task made simple: icers must win

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

The task seems simple. In order for the MSU hockey team to qualify for the Western Collegiate Hockey Association playoffs, the Spartans must win one more game this weekend than the University of Wisconsin.

The Spartans have not made the playoffs in four years but have a home-and-home series with the University of Michigan while the Badgers are at home against league champion University of North Dakota.

MSU trails Wisconsin by .005 percentage points for the eighth and final playoff spot. Coach Ron Mason's Spartan club currently holds an 11-15-0 WCHA record and is 13-21-0 overall.

However simple the task may sound, successfully completing it may be a problem.

In their series with the Wolverines, the Spartan icers must play a team which has beaten them twice this season in three meetings.

TONIGHT'S GAME WILL be staged at Munn Ice Arena and will begin at 7:30 p.m., followed by the final game of the regular season for MSU at 8 p.m. Saturday in Ann Arbor.

Although realizing the importance of this weekend's series, Mason feels Michigan is the perfect opponent for MSU.

"I'm glad this big series is against a rival school like Michigan," Mason said. "The rivalry in itself will make the guys play their hearts out."

The Spartan coaching staff looks to tonight's home game as the key.

"We must win the Friday game to get us going for Saturday's game and to put some pressure on Wisconsin," assistant coach Shawn Walsh said.

THE WOLVERINES ARE currently in second place in the WCHA, with a 12-10-2 record. Michigan is 21-11-2 overall.

Coach Dan Farrell's club failed in its last chance to catch North Dakota for first place by dropping a pair of games to the Fighting Sioux last weekend.

Leading the Wolverines in scoring this year is sophomore Murray Eaves, who missed last weekend's series with a shoulder injury. Eaves is expected to return this weekend, however, and he currently has 35 goals and 41 assists for 76 points.

Other Wolverine players to watch will be left winger Bruno Baseotto and center Dan Lerg with 72 and 69 points, respectively.

Michigan's top two defensemen are Tim Manning with 46 points and John Blum with 43 points.

A KEY TO Michigan's one-year turnaround from last place in the WCHA last year to second this season, is freshman goaltender Paul Fricker. The 6-footer has played in all of his team's league games and boasts an 18-10-2 overall record with a 4.39 goals against average.

"Our coaching staff feels Fricker is the top goaltender in the league," Walsh said. "He's had to face a lot of shots this year game in and game out."

MSU will be without junior Paul Gottwald and sophomore Bill Shutt this weekend due to injuries they suffered last weekend against the University of Notre Dame.

Gottwald injured his knee on Friday, and Shutt tracked some ribs on Saturday. Freshman Dave Distel also hurt his ribs in Saturday's game, but is expected to play this weekend with a protective jacket around his chest.

Junior Ken Paraskevini, who sat out the entire series last weekend with a separated shoulder, is also expected to return to action this weekend against the Wolverines.

Itnyre honored

Senior center Mary Kay Itnyre of MSU has been named to the second annual Coaches' Division I All-State women's basketball team.

Selection was made by the coaches of the eight Division I schools in the state of Michigan.

Itnyre, a 6-footer out of Detroit, is a first-time selection. She received honorable mention last season.

MSU sophomore Nanette Gibson of Saginaw, who was an All-State selection last season, received honorable mention along with sophomore teammate Deb Traxinger of Wyoming.

Trackmen at Big Ten's

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer

All of the hopes and expectations of the MSU men's indoor track team will be on the line this weekend as the tracksters travel to Madison, Wis., for the Big Ten championships.

Gifted with its best all around squad in over eight years, according to Spartan coach Jim Bibbs, the team hopes to better its fourth-place finish of a year ago when MSU scored 57 points, 80 points less than Indiana University's first-place total of 137.

Bibbs and other members of the team know it is not going to be easy at the meet, and Bibbs realizes the entire Spartan squad is going to have to be at their finest to have a chance to finish in the top three.

"Indiana and the University of Michigan are definitely the co-favorites to win the meet, but if we have top performances from everybody there's no telling how well we can do," Bibbs said.

"A BIG MEET like the Big Ten's favors us because we have a lot of super-talented individuals who are specialists in their particular events. I'm sure that we can run with the best in the conference, and I'm hoping we prove that at the meet."

Other teams that have a chance to finish high are the University of Illinois, Ohio State University and the University of Wisconsin.

The Spartans have a couple of defending Big Ten champs who will be out to retain their titles in senior All-Americans Keith Moore and Randy Smith.

Moore won the 1,000-yard run at last year's meet, qualifying him for the 1979 NCAA meet where he eventually finished fourth. Last week he recorded his best time of the year in the 1,000 with a 2:09.9 mark that qualified him for this year's NCAA.

Smith took the honors at the Big Ten meet last year in the 60-yard dash, and since that time has lost only once in the event.

ALONG WITH MOORE and Smith, Bibbs is hoping for big days from Tyrone Williams in the quarter-mile, Calvin Thomas in the 600-yard run and Paul Piwinski in the high jump. Bibbs sees these individuals as the ones who can make or break the Spartans' chances of a high finish.

Also expected to make their presences known for MSU will be Ken Eaton in the 60-yard high hurdles (Eaton has taken over the No. 1 spot in the event due to the injury to Andy Wells); Tony Gilbert in the triple jump; Jerome Judd in the long jump; Jim Stewart in the pole vault; Michael White and Ted Unold in the mile; the mile relay team of Thomas, Williams, Smith and Gerald Cain; and the distant medley relay unit of Thomas, White, Moore and Tim Kenney.

"We have some real quality people on this team but we're going to be up against tremendous quality and depth in both Indiana and Michigan," Moore said.

"I can see MSU right up at the top of the pack, but we're going to have to have a lot of outstanding performances for a genuine shot at the Big Ten title," he said.

Invitational action for women netters

After defeating the University of Michigan last weekend for the first time since 1974, the MSU women's tennis team travels to Bloomington, Ind., this weekend for the eight-team Indiana and Penn Sporting Goods Invitational.

Besides MSU, other teams in the tournament will be the universities of North Carolina, Wisconsin, Kentucky and Iowa, as well as Vanderbilt, Indiana and Louisiana State Universities.

The Spartan netters will see their first action today in a match with second-seeded North Carolina.

MSU head coach Earl Rutz predicted his team would give the Tar Heels a battle, but does not expect an upset.

Should MSU win its first match, it will take on the winner of the Wisconsin-Kentucky match. It will face the loser of that contest should it also lose.

RUTZ WILL AGAIN start a lineup composed of nearly all freshmen, the lone exception to be senior co-captain Cindy Bogdonas.

Freshman Monty Gettys, fresh from her stunning upset of the Wolverines' premier singles player, Kathy Karzen, will again be in the No. 1 singles slot for MSU.

Freshman Jill Grinberg will play No. 2, as well as teaming with Gettys to make up the No. 1 doubles pair. The tandem combined to win at that position against Michigan a week

Big Ten wrestling

Iowa's No. 1-ranked 134-pounder Randy Lewis, who will be trying for his third straight Big Ten title, and second straight NCAA crown, has already pinned 15 opponents this season.

Dan Glenn, another Iowa standout at 118, is the holder of two consecutive Big Ten titles. Hawkeye teammates 150-pound King Meuller, and 177-pound Ed Banach are rated No. 3 and No. 2 respectively.

Wisconsin's 150-pound threat Andy Rein has a 32-0 mark this year, after winning the 142-pound class last season. Meanwhile, his teammate Mitch Hull will be trying to repeat at 190.

Jim Martinez, Minnesota's 142-pounder, is going to be one of the top contenders at that weight with a 29-6 record.

Tickets for the two-day championships are priced at $2 for adults, and $1 for students with special $9 passes being good for both days in special reserved seats. Tickets can be purchased at the Jenison ticket office today, or purchased at the door.

Varsity Club more than 'jocks,' involved in community service

By JULIE SERAPHINOFF

There's a side to the MSU Varsity Club that people are not always aware of, an aspect that makes hundreds of children feel special and sends the uncaring "jock" stigma down the drain.

Few people realize that this group of about 90 Spartan athletes is a community service organization that gears many of its efforts to children. These athletes willingly devote precious free hours and energy to creating activities for children who need support.

The Big Brother organization is one avenue the club uses to touch youngsters' lives. While many of the athletes are Big Brothers to individual boys, the entire club is involved in helping groups of children in Big Brothers.

One activity the Varsity Club sponsors is a bowling and pizza day for boys waiting to be placed with a Big Brother. This past month a group of boys spent an entire day with the athletes. They went bowling in the Union and later ate pizza in the Varsity Club room in the stadium.

"We wanted these boys to have an extra nice day," explained senior Alan Davis, Varsity Club president and Spartan defensive back. "We were hoping to make their wait not quite so bad. There just isn't enough guys to go around for all the boys who need Big Brothers."

The Varsity Club has also been responsible for bringing groups of children to various MSU sporting events. The annual Green and White football and basketball games are two events that have been attended by Big Brother and Big Sister kids since 1976 when the club first became involved with the organization.

Besides the Big Brother organization, the Varsity Club sponsors many other groups of children to Spartan games. Davis said the club brought more than 250 children from various youth homes and Christian groups to football games this past fall. On Feb. 15, the club brought 25 children and a number of sponsors from Camp Highfield to a hockey game. Russ Welch, a senior right wing for the team, arranged it so the entire group could get into the locker room after the game. The kids had an opportunity to get autographs and see their favorite Spartan players up close.

"We realize how valuable these outings are to the youth. Not many members complain about the work and most everyone wants to do more, so we keep bringing the kids in."

In the spring the varsity athletes sponsor the Celebrity Softball game. This game, which pits former Spartans against the varsity baseball team, is the club's biggest fund raiser. Kids from such places as the Beckman Center, a Lansing area home for mentally impaired children, the Lansing School for the Blind and Camp Highfield attend the game.

Profits made from selling tickets to the game are donated to various worthwhile causes such as the Ralph Young Scholarship Fund and remedial reading programs.

Such fund raising events are important for the varsity Club. "We have to keep raising money if we want to continue bringing kids to MSU," Davis explained. "Doing things like the bowling and pizza day can be expensive. These kids and the athletes together can eat a lot of pizza."

Neal Wilenski, representative from the Lansing branch of the Big Brothers and Big Sisters, has also realized the impact MSU athletes can have on kids in need of older male influence. A number of times each year, Wilenski speaks at Varsity Club meetings in an attempt to recruit individual Big Brothers. In the past three or four years he has seen about 10 Spartan athletes go on to become very active Big Brothers.

"I realize what a big commitment this is for athletes considering their busy practice schedules," he said. "As an agency, the Varsity Club has shown tremendous enthusiasm and dedication in being involved with the community. Their taking kids to activities such as bowling and many later going on to become Big Brothers is real beneficial."

The Big Brother and Big Sister organization recently awarded the Varsity Club with a Community Service Award in appreciation of their involvement.

Fred W. Stabley, MSU sports information director, displays momentos he received while working as a press liaison at the Winter Olympic Games.

Stabley glad to be home after Olympic trip

By JEFF HITTLER
State News Sports Writer

Although Fred W. Stabley said he would not trade his three weeks at the Winter Olympic Games in Lake Placid, N.Y., for anything in the world, he is glad to be home.

Stabley, MSU sports information director for the past 33 years, was one of seven media experts serving on the U.S. Olympic Committee's Press Services Staff during the Games. The function of the staff was to act as a liaison between the U.S. press and the American athletes, their coaches and officials.

"There is a vast difference between sitting home and watching the highlights on television and living with it 24 hours a day, seven days a week for three weeks," said Stabley as he sat in his office Thursday morning. "We (the staff and press) got 'cabin fever' and homesick."

But as Stabley reflected over his experiences in Lake Placid, he was obviously very happy to have been a part of it.

The press services staff was headquartered in a trailer next to the living quarters of the athletes in Olympic Village, some eight miles from Lake Placid.

Stabley said it was there that the press would come in and conduct on-the-spot interviews with many of the athletes.

"We spent a lot of time there," he said. "We had three phones and they rang day and night with requests for information on certain athletes."

The press staff also put out a daily bulletin for the media which contained results, coming events and features.

"The features were to stimulate media interest in a certain athlete," Stabley said. "The press would read something interesting about the athlete and say 'Hey, here's a good idea for a story.'"

But the "hub of the world press," as Stabley put it, was located in the large high school in downtown Lake Placid. The four-story structure, with some 30 to 40 rooms, was turned into a working press center.

Stabley said the classrooms were turned into private headquarters for individual operations such as Tass and Kodak. The center also had a cafeteria, two snack bars, three bars, a theater and a night club.

BUT THE MOST fascinating room to Stabley was the main press area. The former gymnasium was lined with tables and more than 200 typewriters.

"The typewriters had the names of the countries on them and the keys were set in that language," Stabley said. "That room was packed from midday to late evening. It was really something to hear all those typewriters going at once."

The press staff held its daily press conferences at 8 every morning in the auditorium.

After the Games were in full swing, it was there that the media met with the big stars of the day, such as an Eric Heiden.

Stabley explained why U.S. hockey coach Herb Brooks refused to allow his players to attend the press conference.

"Brooks' argument was that by bringing in individuals, it starts to build a 'star' system," Stabley said, "and our system was to build a team. And maybe that's why they did as well as they did."

EACH MEMBER OF the press services staff had a specific event to cover and Stabley was not without exception. He covered the cross country events, which included four races for men and three for women.

"It was interesting to me that in the eyes of the world press, particularly the Europeans, the cross country races were very important," Stabley said. "Photographers and reporters jammed Mount Van Hoevenberg."

Because the cross country races were in the morning, Stabley was able to take in some of the other events later in the day.

"I saw all the hockey, two of Eric Heiden's races, the figure skating and the finals of the 90-meter ski jumping," Stabley said.

Stabley said because it was impossible for a reporter to be everywhere, closed circuit televisions were set up in the press center and showed every event live.

Buses were another problem for the media as well as fans.

"The last week or so it went pretty well for the media," Stabley said. "There were buses designated for the press. But the buses were never really able to catch up with the vast crowds of fans."

STABLEY REMEMBERED the day before the Games ended, he was at the finals of the 90-meter ski jumping where a crowd estimated at 10,000 to 15,000 had gathered.

"At the end of that event, a line a quarter mile long and 10 to 15 abreast was formed to wait for buses," Stabley said. "It was that way every time a hockey game broke too. Many of those didn't stay in Lake Placid but traveled long distances every day to see the events."

Stabley said it is inevitable that with the Olympics being held in a different place every four years, there are going to be problems because there is no routine.

"We handle large crowds in a single afternoon for football games and have no trouble at all because we're used to doing it," Stabley said. "With Lake Placid as small as it is, it was inevitable that there was going to be a problem handling those kinds of crowds."

There were many special moments for Stabley during his stay, including a White House visit with the entire U.S. Olympic team after the Games were over. But the highlight was the United States' 4-3 victory over the Soviets in hockey.

Stabley, however, noted it was not THE most memorable moment in sports for him.

"Jenison Fieldhouse has been as loud and exciting as that hockey arena," Stabley said. "Our NCAA basketball championship was a great happening. The hockey and Heiden's races were moments I'll always remember but there has been just as exciting ones right here at Michigan State."

Tennis

Bogdonas will see action at No. 3 singles, with freshman Sue Kim expected to fill the No. 4 singles slot.

Bogdonas was also a winner last weekend against U-M's No. 3 player, and although Kim will no doubt play No. 4 singles this weekend, Rutz said he may team Bogdonas with freshman Diane Dunn at No. 2 doubles.

Rounding out the Spartan lineup will be either freshman Pam Pierce or freshmen Sue Varbedian and Jennifer Tewes at No. 5 and No. 6 singles. Rutz was unsure of these final spots as of Thursday.

Varsity Club aids Big Brothers

Davis is one of the athletes who has become a Big Brother; he has offered support and time to a 14-year-old East Lansing boy for the past two years.

"I've really enjoyed watching him grow," Davis said. "It's made me realize how much he has to learn and how much I have to learn." His Little Brother attends many sporting events and calls Davis on the telephone regularly. "We're real good friends now."

Football players Mark Brammer and Rodney Strata and basketball player Mike Longaker are other club members who are Big Brothers. Davis said these senior athletes are setting examples for the freshmen members of the club.

"We hope to keep the Big Brother tradition going and want freshmen to see seniors involved so they say, 'Hey, I want to be a Big Brother.'"

When asked why a person becomes a Big Brother, Davis replied that seeing a smile on a boy's face is plenty of motivation.

"Feeling as if you are really needed, does wonders for a person," he said.

The "Big Brother" to all of these athletes has been Dr.

Fred Tinning, club sponsor and assistant dean of planning for the MSU school of Osteopathic Medicine. Davis said that Tinning, better known as "Doc," is a mainstay to the club.

"The amount of time he gives up to help MSU students is a symbol for us. Doc and Mrs. Tinning are always the first ones there in times of need. They're parents away from home to many, especially those athletes from out of state. In 10 years, when I am long gone, Doc will probably still be there. Without him the club wouldn't be what it is."

HOW TO BREAK INTO BROADCASTING AND EARN UP TO $50,000 YOUR VERY FIRST YEAR

by ART RAYMOND

Frankly, I'm overpaid. This year I'll earn $50,000 for working on the air about 25 hours a week. I meet important, glamorous people all the time. In the New York area where I live, thousands of people know me. Best of all, I love my job. There's nothing else I would rather be doing. Would you like to be overpaid, too? Then my advice is: Get into broadcasting. It's easier than you ever imagined.

A BOOMING FIELD

Fact: There are more than 8,000 radio stations and nearly 1,000 television stations in America. No matter where you live... no matter what kind of broadcasting you're interested in... there's a place for you.

BUT YOU HAVE TO GET YOUR FOOT FOOT IN THE DOOR

That's where I can help. Step-by-step, I can show you how to launch a fabulously successful career in radio and TV. All the information is included in "HOW TO BREAK INTO BROADCASTING." This paper-bound volume unlocks the door to the high prestige job you've always wanted.

YOUR CHANCE TO ESCAPE THE RAT RACE

Broadcasting is totally unlike any other profession. Where else can you rise so far, so fast? The woman announcing the evening news may be making $150,000 or more. The man playing records on the radio may be earning $60,000 for just five hours work a day. Believe me, broadcasters aren't smarter than you and they probably don't work nearly as hard as you do. They simply had the good sense to go into a field that pays very, very well. There's an annual turnover rate of 33% in radio and TV. People are constantly moving from job to job, from station to station. As a result, there are always opportunities for new people like you to jump in. While watching TV have you ever thought to yourself: "I could do a better job than that!" Maybe you're right. But you'll never know if you don't decide to take action now.

OVERNIGHT SUCCESSES

My name is Art Raymond. For 38 years I have been a radio and TV personality. From first-hand experience I can tell you that broadcasting is the one field where there is such a thing as an "overnight" success. The next success story could be your own.

MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

"HOW TO BREAK INTO BROADCASTING" outlines a formula that has worked for others. And it can work for you, too. But don't take my word for it. You can find out for yourself without risking a penny. Send for my book today. Then, take up to 30 days to read my suggestions for breaking into broadcasting and getting to the top. If you don't agree that this is the program you need to launch a successful career—or if you're dissatisfied for any reason—simply return the book for a full refund. No questions asked. Fair enough?

If you've ever dreamed of becoming an announcer... a disc-jockey... an emcee... a talk show host... or a news broadcaster, I urge you to send in this coupon now. Try my methods for breaking into broadcasting. If I'm wrong, all you've lost is a 15c stamp. If I'm right, you're on your way to $50,000 a year or more.

Okay, Art... Rush my copy of your book, HOW TO BREAK INTO BROADCASTING. And don't deposit my check for 30 days. If I am not convinced this is the most exciting career I have ever heard about, if I am not totally satisfied for any reason, I will return the book and you will return my payment, promptly and in full.

On that basis, here's my $10 which covers the cost of the book, postage, and handling.

E.L. commission discusses cable

By ANNIE KNAPE

New revisions to a franchise agreement with the National Cable Co. and old complaints about talk show Editorial Weiss Cracks were discussed by the East Lansing Cable Commission Wednesday.

Reworking of the seven-year franchise, which expires in May, included discussion of possible refunds to customers should service, or part of it, be out of order; changes in the franchise fee; and updating of the contract language.

A 2 percent hike in the franchise fee, which is paid by National to the city for operation of the cable system, was suggested by chairperson Joey Reagan.

Presently, the fee is computed as a fraction of the total basic service paid for by customers.

REAGAN SUGGESTED THIS total include revenues generated from extras such as installation and Home Box Office.

The 2 percent increase would not affect customer rates, but would allow the city and the commission to collect a greater amount of funds, said Georgella Muirhead, East Lansing public information director.

Deregulation, an ideal National and the commission have discussed often in the past, would allow the company to increase customer rates without board approval. Those rates would not be allowed to exceed the Detroit Consumer Price Index.

The subject of refunds to customers for times when the system, or a part of it, is out of order took up a large part of the discussion.

Reagan suggested refunds be paid to customers for any time service is out of order.

Commissioners Tash Sogg and Michael Levine disagreed, however, saying that weather conditions or vandalism could cause outages and National could not be held responsible for those circumstances.

THEY ALSO ARGUED that most refunds would be small, making it impractical to process complaints and adjust billings when such a small amount of money was involved.

Suggestions for new services to customers included the addition of FM radio to the basic monthly subscriber fee and the use of "lock-out" devices for customers who do not want certain shows to be viewed in their homes. The lock-out box is equipped with a key and would be offered to the public by National at cost plus installation.

Discussion of the lock-out box lead to the board's problems with complaints from viewers about the talk show Editorial Weiss Cracks.

The show, hosted by Ed Weiss, is under fire for what some call obscene visuals and vulgar language.

The original complaint came from Lansing police officer

Greg MacCauley, and was followed by a letter from Lawrence and Ruth Thomson of East Lansing. They requested a censorship clause be added to the franchise and that Reagan, who is also a producer of the program, be removed from the board due to a "conflict of interest."

The commission voted 3-1 to stand by its "no censorship" ordinance. The opposing vote was cast by Commissioner Michael Gardyko. No mention was made of removing Reagan from his position.

The argument may not be over, though, if Tim Neher has his way.

Neher, president of Lansing's Continental Cable Co., has organized a committee within Continental to make a new list of rules regarding obscene materials — a list all programmers will be required to obey.

The programmers include MSU, Lansing Community College, the Lansing School District, Library and Public Access channels. Weiss Cracks is cablecast on channel 26.

Hemmings ends confirmation try

By LANI WIEGAND
United Press International
Ousted Insurance Commissioner Richard Hemmings ended his fight for renomination Thursday in the face of certain Senate rejection. It was a disheartening personal and political defeat for Gov. William G. Milliken.

The surprise move marked the end of a bitter squabble between Milliken and Senate Democrats which began with the rejection of Hemmings in December and the governor's subsequent renomination of Hemmings.

Hemmings, saying he felt his qualifications were overshadowed by "partisan politics," officially removed his name from consideration just minutes before Senate debate on the appointment was to have begun.

Hemmings' withdrawal followed a flurry of conferences Thursday morning as Milliken made a last-ditch effort to compromise with Senate Majority Leader William Faust of Westland.

LATER, IN A somewhat chaotic scene, the governor was forced to confer with aides on Hemmings' withdrawal while at the same time entertaining two members of the U.S. Olympic hockey team in his office.

Meanwhile, in the office of Milliken's counsel Peter Ellsworth, a visibly relieved Hem-mings and his wife reviewed the letter announcing he no longer wanted the job. He is expected to continue working on special projects for the state Department of Commerce.

Earlier Thursday the predominantly Democratic Senate Administration and Rules Committee reaffirmed its opposition to the nomination of the former Wisconsin attorney, a move which almost assured a defeat on the floor.

In a letter to Milliken, the 33-year-old Hemmings said he was "convinced" by discussions with several Senate Democrats that reconsideration "on the merits" would have resulted in his confirmation as insurance commissioner.

"Intentional misrepresentation of facts and misleading statements by a few senators . . . have been personally distressing and provide a sad commentary on the future of state service," he said.

He noted a possible court challenge of Milliken's power to reappoint a person rejected by the Senate "cast an additional air of uncertainty in terms of time and ultimate outcome."

Milliken said Senate Democrats "rejected a good man for the wrong reasons — narrow partisanship and special interest pressure."

NRC to lift nuclear moratorium; will issue testing license to plant

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission voted Thursday to issue a license for testing of a new nuclear power plant in Tennessee, ending a self-imposed moratorium in effect since the Three Mile Island accident nearly a year ago.

The NRC said it would allow nuclear fuel to be loaded into the reactor at the Tennessee Valley Authority's Sequoyah power plant near Chattanooga, Tenn. The commissioners gave staff experts authority to decide when to let the company conduct low-power generating tests at the plant.

In authorizing the license for the Sequoyah plant, the NRC opened the door to granting permission for several other completed plants to go on line. Many of the plants have been operational, but have not been allowed to generate power until the government investigations of the Three Mile Island accident were completed and new safety procedures initiated.

The decision to permit the fuel loading operation at the Sequoyah plant came several hours after NRC Chairperson John F. Ahearne said he did not expect Tuesday's nuclear plant accident in Florida to require a shutdown of other reactors by the same designer.

However, Ahearne told a Senate subcommittee he won't make a final decision until after he receives a full report on the Florida incident, which he said he expects next Tuesday.

Ahearne said the malfunction that caused the reactor at the Crystal River nuclear plant to shut down and flood the reactor containment with 43,000 gallons of radioactive water bore little relation to the near-meltdown at the Three Mile Island plant.

Contraceptive ads must be more honest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Makers of a relatively new form of contraceptive will have to tighten up their advertising claims under a government crack-down announced Thursday.

The Federal Trade Commission said all three U.S. manufacturers of over-the-counter vaginal contraceptive suppositories signed consent orders specifying what can be claimed in future ads.

The ads must say that the products are about as effective as vaginal foam contraceptives. In addition, if the companies compare their products to the contraceptive pill or intra-uterine device they must say their products are not as effective.

FTC officials said women generally know how effective the other contraceptives are because they have been on the market longer. This will make the comparisons meaningful, they said.

Named in the cases were Morton-Norwich Products, Inc., maker of Enclave; American Home Products Corp., maker of Semicid, and Jordan-Simmer, Inc., maker of S'Positive.

The FTC had charged the three with running ads that overrated the effectiveness of the products in preventing pregnancies.

"Our investigation revealed a number of instances in which women had become pregnant after using these products," said Tracy Westen, deputy director of the FTC bureau of consumer protection.

He said the subject was of greater concern to the FTC than most false advertising cases because of the possible result, unwanted pregnancy.

"There are few events which have such serious or far-reaching consequences as an unanticipated pregnancy. It is therefore essential that advertising for contraceptive products meet the highest standards of scrupulous accuracy," Westen said.

Contraceptives in suppository form were not marketed extensively in the United States before 1977 and the ad campaign began in earnest only in 1978.

Director's Choice Film Series WALT DISNEY'S SLEEPING BEAUTY

The Lecture-Concert Series will be presenting a special matinee performance of Disney's animated classic,
SLEEPING BEAUTY, on Saturday, March 1st at 2 p.m.
SLEEPING BEAUTY is the tale of a young princess, who, when struck by an evil spell, is taken into the forest to be raised by three good fairies. She meets a handsome young prince and falls in love, but the evil witch puts a spell on Sleeping Beauty, one which only the Prince can break. Don't miss the excitement when the Prince fights the fiery dragon in an attempt to save the lovely Sleeping Beauty.

SATURDAY, MARCH 1 at 2:00 P.M.

M.S.U. Auditorium

Admission: $1.50 for children and adults.

Tickets will go on sale one hour prior to performance time.

*NOTE: Season Ticket Holders may use their passes to substitute "SLEEPING BEAUTY" for
"THE JUNGLE BOOK".

Judge studies police bugging suit

An Ingham County Circuit Judge took under advisement Wednesday a lawsuit filed by the state troopers' union charging the state police bugged a conference room used in sensitive labor negotiations.

Judge James Giddings said he needs time to study the case and a request by the state police to dismiss the suit.

The Michigan State Police Troopers Association claims microphones were installed in the room and may have been used for eavesdropping.

Giddings gave no indication when he would reach a decision, but both sides seemed certain there would be little delay.

The state police admit the equipment exists but claim it has not been used for recording trooper activities and in fact does not even work.

MSPTA President Gordon Gots said, however, a second test on the equipment proved it would function if plugged in.

The microphones and other equipment were installed in 1974 at the request of a now-dead deputy state police director.

Later occupants of his office and adjoining conference room knew nothing of the devices, state police officials said, but they admitted six tapes of "citizen conversations" were made by connecting a recorder to telephones.

Assistant Attorney General

George Weller, representing the state police, told Giddings the case should be dropped because there is no evidence of eavesdropping. He also said state eavesdropping laws do not include state departments or officials.

"We have a lawsuit with no facts, a lawsuit with no conclusions," Weller said.

Weller termed the lawsuit "a sad action" because it coincides with the beginning of negotiations on the first state trooper contract. Trooper association attorney Donald Reisig said even if the equipment was never used, its presence is that of an "Orwellian big brother."

"This isn't some $39 piece of equipment - it's sophisticated," Reisig said.

The MSPTA also claims high-ranking officers used an intercom to listen in on troopers' locker room conversations at the Jackson post and possibly at other state police locations.

U.S. Rep. Bob Carr to speak at forum

U.S. Rep. Bob Carr, D-East Lansing, will discuss President Carter's call for draft registration and other issues during two Sunday night forums at MSU.

The first forum will take place in the Abbott Hall Cafeteria from 5 to 6:30 p.m. The second will be in Multi-purpose rooms C and D of the Brody Cafeteria from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Carr will make brief opening remarks at the forums and will then take questions from students. The forums are free and open to the public.

U.S. autos proven best

WASHINGTON (AP) - American-made models did better than foreign cars in recent crash tests, but the government said Thursday that the occupants of nearly all of them would have been killed or severely injured in 35-mile-an-hour head-on collisions.

Only nine of 25 U.S. models tested passed the occupant protection test, while all five foreign cars failed, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reported. Most were 1979 models, but two were 1980.

The agency's administrator, Joan Claybrook, said the test results "show that manufacturers have designed most of their cars to meet only the minimal federal safety requirements of 30 mph crash tests, and not much more."

But she said she was pleased with the performance of several of the newer U.S. small cars, such as the Chevrolet Citation, the Plymouth Horizon and the redesigned Ford Mustang, all of which passed the five safety tests to which they were subjected.

The only model to pass all five of the tests was the Dodge Magnum-Chrysler Cordoba. These cars are essentially similar.

MSU war

ONE POSSIBILITY BEING considered is to send paratroopers to Wisconsin, Carr said.

"If we could get the ROTC to air-drop it would be excellent," he said.

Steve Politowicz, Student Media Appropriations Board chairperson, said ASMSU should "take over the (Wisconsin's) student government office, take hostages and hold mock trials."

Meanwhile, the military junta at Wisconsin said they plan to retaliate against Missouri's manure attack within the next two weeks.

"The nature of our mission is highly classified," Baker said.

Stouffer said Missouri is posting guards at its student government center and "is on the look-out for all Wisconsin license plates."

Soviets, Afghans prepare for violence

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer

KABUL, Afghanistan — Soviet and Afghan troops were placed on full alert Thursday in readiness for possible new anti-communist demonstrations and violence as worshippers emerge from Friday prayer in Kabul's mosques.

Spokespersons for the Islamic rebel movement told reporters new attacks were planned for today despite a reign of terror in rebel strongholds by the 2,000-member militia of the ruling Khalq (People's) Party.

Reliable diplomatic sources said dozens of alleged rebels or rebel sympathizers have been executed since last week's fighting. Rebel sympathizers claimed the militia had executed "many hundreds."

Some Western diplomats expressed skepticism about the insurgents' ability to mount another citywide offensive so soon after suffering at least 300 killed and an estimated 1,000 injured in last week's street battles. The government has blamed the fighting on "imperialist agents and saboteurs" in the pay of Pakistan, China and the United States.

THE PAKISTANI NEWS agency PPI said rebels in Afghanistan shot down two Soviet helicopters Sunday in Ghazni and Kandhar provinces and killed 41 troops, including three Russian officers, in a night attack in Ikar province.

The news agency said demonstrations against the Soviet intervention had occurred in all the provinces in northern, central and southern Afghanistan. It also reported that Afghan troops are deserting in large numbers because the Soviets have forced the Afghan people to fight against the rebels while the Russians remain in background.

None of the information reported by the Pakistani news agency could be confirmed from other sources.

Although the shops have reopened after their week-long strike and most road blocks have disappeared from the city center, there was still a noticeable atmosphere of tension, particularly in districts regarded as sympathetic to the rebels.

Military observers said they believed the rebels suffered heavy casualties when they were fired on by Soviet tanks and helicopters, but most of the survivors went back into hiding with their weapons and were undoubtedly planning new attacks.

IN THE OLD CITY, in the nearby Maiwand district and in other known rebel strongholds, the military command appeared to rely largely on the Khalq militia to prevent a new rebel offensive or anti-communist demonstrations.

A brief tour of the city Thursday showed hardly any tanks or armored cars. But unkempt-looking civilians patrolled the streets in pairs with their Kalashnikov submachine guns cocked and held in firing positions.

The militia appeared to have replaced the civilian police in Maiwand, the Old City and other districts where the rebels were particularly active. Unlike the police, the militia has no clearly defined structure.

The Soviet-made Kalashnikov has become Kabul's ultimate status symbol. It is the symbol of authority of the militia, who carry no credentials other than their Khalq Party cards and who often cannot read.

'U' considers semester system

He said the advantages of the change would be only having to go through registration and drops and adds twice, and the weeding out of some faculty, since less would be needed.

"There is validity in both systems," Studer said, "but I think we will be forced to go with it because of the economics. But I hope they prolong the debate enough to consider the quality of the classes so we don't get just watered down versions of the 10-week sessions."

Bill Muzzall, 22, a senior majoring in engineering arts, said he would not like the change.

"If you have a bad prof, you're stuck with him longer," Muzzall said. "And with this system there's more turn over, more chances to take different classes."

Linda Murphy, 21, a senior majoring in criminal justice, said she would not like the change either.

"I enjoy the change of classes each term," Murphy said. "I know there are disadvantages to getting out late in the summer, but I like the long break at Christmas. I think I'd go crazy if I had to take the same class for more than 10 weeks."

Craig Simpson, 21, a senior majoring in economics, said he would support the change. "You'd only have to go through hell two times a year instead of three," he said.

Frozen Red Cedar not a safe shortcut

The University does not have a policy against people using the frozen Red Cedar River as a shortcut to classes, said an MSU Department of Public Safety Officer.

"You can't regulate common sense," said Lt. Dan Lap. "You know you shouldn't walk in front of a car," he added. "You should know not to walk on thin ice."

Bob Johnson, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service, said the ice covering the Red Cedar is probably unsafe for people to walk on.

"To freeze a river hard enough to walk on," Johnson said, "you need a prolonged period of sub-freezing temperatures." Johnson said although the ice may appear to be solid, it will probably break when a little weight is placed on it.

According to the Department of Natural Resources, ice must be at least three inches thick before a person can safely walk on it.

Lap said that even with this year's unusually warm winter the DPS has not received any reports of people falling through the ice into the river.
