Rain clouds should continue to hang over mid-Michigan today with temperatures in the 40s.

Cuban exiles living in "Little Havana" in Miami began a hunger strike Wednesday in support of the reported thousands of Cubans seeking refuge in the Peruvian embassy in Havana. The signs in Spanish read, "For our Cuban brothers we are on a hunger strike" and "10 million in Cuba want to be free."

Iran, Iraq battle escalates

By The Associated Press

An Iranian Phantom fighter and three Iranian military helicopters duelled Wednesday with Iraqi helicopters near the border between the two countries, Iranian television reported.

No planes were shot down in the battle over the Iranian border town of Baveisi, the broadcast said. But it said there also were artillery barrages and rocket attacks, and 15 Iranian Revolutionary Guards were wounded.

Despite an ever-escalating war of words, prior to Wednesday's reported air battle, fighting between the two countries had been limited to minor ground skirmishes near their 800-mile border.

In one such skirmish Wednesday, according to Tehran Radio, Iraqi forces attacked the Qasr-e-Shirin area of Iran's southwestern Kermanshah Province with light and heavy weapons, but an Iraqi border post was destroyed.

IN TWO PREVIOUS DAYS of fighting reported by Tehran Radio, Iraqi artillery pounded an Iranian border position at Bay Beyti, and Iranian troops returned fire, smashing Iraqi positions across the frontier.

None of the reports of fighting could be confirmed independently.

Earlier Wednesday, Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh was quoted as saying, "We have decided to overthrow the Baathist regime of Iraq." The statement, carried by Tehran Radio, also quoted the foreign minister as saying Iran would defend itself against Iraqi military attacks and sabotage.

"Any country supporting America in practice must face action similar to that (which) Iran has taken against America," the foreign minister was quoted as saying. Iraq's pro-Soviet government is widely regarded as strongly anti-American.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's revolutionary leader, also vowed to overthrow Iraq's government and to relegate its leaders "to the dustbin of history." His comments were monitored in London.

In Baghdad, the official Iraqi news agency said Iraqi security forces had uncovered a plan for subversion backed by Iran but also involving local elements.

THE PRESIDENT OF Iraq's revolutionary council, Moslem Hadi, was quoted as saying members of an Iraqi extremist party had confessed to meeting in Qom with Khomeini and to agreeing to a plan "for cooperation to carry out broad subversive acts in Iraq."

The two countries have been disputing Iran's occupation of three small islands at the entrance to the Persian Gulf which Iran seized in 1971 from what soon thereafter became the United Arab Emirates.

Iraq wants control of the islands returned to the Arab side of the gulf. The Iranian leaders say the islands are Iran's and the islands will not be given back.

Observers said the threats by Khomeini and Ghotbzadeh to overthrow the Iraqi government did not necessarily mean Iran was planning a major attack, but there were fears the fighting would escalate further after the reported air battle.

Iran said Tuesday it had ordered a full military alert at its Persian Gulf naval and air bases.

OBSERVERS NOTED Khomeini had called on Egyptians to overthrow President Anwar Sadat, without taking action, and that neither he nor Ghotbzadeh said how Iran expected to overthrow Iraq's ruling Arab socialist party. Sadat has given asylum to the deposed shah.

Diplomats in Beirut, Lebanon, predicted Khomeini, leader of the Shiite Moslem sect, could arouse Iraq's Shiite majority against Iraqi President Hussein Hussein. But they said the Iraqi army is firmly behind the country's predominantly Sunni Moslem leadership.

Iraq gave Khomeini asylum for 14 years but expelled him in 1978 at the request of the deposed shah. Iraq is opposed to the theocratic rule Khomeini has established in Iran and reportedly has been arming ethnic minorities in Iran battling Khomeini's regime for autonomy.

Tehran Radio reported that the total of "deportees" from Iraq to Iran reached 6,700, apparently referring to previous Irania claims that the Iraq's Sunni Moslem minority has been persecuting and expelling Shiite Moslems. The Shiites are an overwhelming majority in Iran.

Iran on Monday pulled its diplomats out of Baghdad, the Iraqi capital, and on Tuesday shut down the Iraqi news agency office and the office of Iraq's diplomatic representatives in Tehran. It also ordered Iraqi employees to leave for home.

U.S. presses allies to support sanctions

By ROBERT B. CULLEN

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance called the ambassadors of two dozen countries to the State Department on Wednesday as the United States pressed its allies to support new sanctions against Iran.

Department officials said the initial reaction of U.S. allies to the new sanctions, announced Monday by President Carter, has been supportive.

But they could not yet cite specific cases where other governments have joined in any of the sanctions, intended to pressure Iran to release 50 Americans held hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

U.S. officials said they felt it was still too early to expect action from the allies, but predicted that responses would come by the end of the week.

The United States has been asking its allies to take "parallel steps" to match the Carter administration's four-point sanctions program, which included severing diplomatic relations with Iran and an embargo on all trade except food and medicine.

BUT THERE IS NOT "a checklist" of countries willing to cooperate with the United States, said State Department spokesperson David Passage. He said U.S. officials prefer that each ally decide on the basis of its own circumstances what actions to take.

Complicating the position of many U.S. allies is their reliance on Iranian oil. The Iranians have hinted they will cut off oil to any nation that cooperates with the U.S. sanctions. Several key U.S. allies import large amounts of Iranian oil. Japan, for example, buys 10 percent of its oil from Iran.

Following Wednesday's 45-minute meeting between Vance and the group of allied diplomats, Canadian Ambassador Peter Toews told reporters: "The suggestion was made that we should try to be as supportive as possible, but no specific proposals were made. All of us will be reporting to our governments."

Toews said Canada already is doing all it can. Its embassy in Tehran has been closed since the February escape of six Americans who took refuge there. "We're no longer importing Iranian oil and our trade is insignificant," he said.

Canada is nearly self-sufficient in oil. For other allies, Iran is a more vital trade partner. Japan imports about 10 percent of its oil from Iran, and in Western Europe the percentage ranges from 4 percent to about 9 percent, according to State Department officials.

THE IRANIANS HAVE hinted they will cut off oil to any nation that cooperates with the U.S. sanction.

Meanwhile, the militants who have held the American hostages since seizing the U.S. Embassy in Tehran Nov. 4 threatened Wednesday to kill their hostages and burn the embassy if the United States tries "even the smallest" military move against Iran.

In a statement reported by Iran's official Pars news agency, the militants said they would "burn into ashes the spy hostages and the building they are living in if we see any suspicious military move or the least military attack by the U.S. against the territory of Iran."

The Carter administration is hinting at a possible naval blockade of Iran or a move to mine Iranian oil ports if the hostages are not freed.

But Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, interviewed by American television networks, said he doubted the Iranian government would be "in a position" to stop the militants if they decide to kill the hostages.

MEANWHILE, U.S. SOURCES who asked not to be identified said Algeria has agreed to be Iran's "protective power," taking responsibility for protecting Iranian property and citizens in the United States now that diplomatic relations have been severed.

The sources said the arrangement has not yet been formally approved by the United States, which has the right to reject specific terms.

They said Algeria is interested in reopening the Iranian Embassy as a diplomatic "interest section," which is a commonly used method of discharging diplomatic functions without formally having diplomatic relations. Iraq and Cuba, for instance, maintain interest sections in Washington under the auspices of India and Czechoslovakia. They function much as embassies do.

The source said the Algerians would like to hire Iranian citizens who are already in the United States to staff the interest section. But they added that the State Department has not decided whether it will permit that arrangement.

State Department officials evinced little sympathy at the prospect that Iranian students, whose demonstration in front of the State Department have plainly infuriated many American diplomats, might face financial hardships.

MSU Iranian students face money problems

By ELYSE GOLDIN

State News Staff Writer

The president's recent retaliation against Iran will be more of a financial problem than a legal one for local Iranians, MSU's advisor to foreign students said Wednesday.

Although Iranian students faced financial woes in December when President Carter announced a partial freeze on Iranian assets, their problems will be greater now than in the past, August Benson said.

"Transferring funds from Iranian families or government will be more difficult now because they will not have any Iranian embassies here to represent them as they did then," he said.

Legally, Benson said Carter's actions will affect only those Iranians wishing to temporarily leave this country or students anticipating the arrival of a spouse or family member.

CARTER'S ANNOUNCEMENT MONDAY, calling for a break in diplomatic relations with Iran, a halt to all remaining U.S.-Iranian trade and expulsion of all Iranian diplomats from this country once again triggered "apprehensive feelings" among MSU's Iranian populace, Benson said.

"They are concerned about the next steps that may be taken," he added.

Benson said, of the 220 Iranian students enrolled at MSU, none is currently considered eligible for deportation.

He said all Iranian students characterized in December as being "potentially deportable" have since been restored to current student status. Following interviews conducted at all U.S. universities and colleges at the Nov. 10 request of Carter, federal immigration authorities classified 22 MSU Iranian students as being in violation of federal regulations concerning their student status.

Benson acknowledged that the status deficiencies of the 22 students were due to "administrative oversights" which have since been corrected and the students are now in good standing with the University.

Several MSU Iranian students, characterized in December as "potentially deportable" are now seeking political asylum in the United States. Their cases are pending.

N.Y. bus and subway strike turns violent

By ARTHUR EVERETT

Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — New York's bus and subway strike turned violent Wednesday with vandals sabotaging more than 20 private buses while rain helped stall commuters in the worst traffic jams yet.

"We will look back on it as one of the days that tested us and the day that we came through," said Mayor Edward Koch on the ninth day of the strike that is taxing the stamina of millions of people.

At least two police officers were assaulted by angry commuters.

Strikers, vowing that $1 million in fines assessed against their unions would not force them back to work, took to the streets to harass motorists and try to stop private buses from rolling.

The judge who imposed the fines Tuesday and ordered the strikers back to work, John Monteleone of state Supreme Court in Brooklyn, hauled the unions back into court Wednesday and threatened new punishment for violating his back-to-work order. He set a hearing on the matter for Thursday.

MONTALEONE WAS GOING to hold the hearing Wednesday. (continued on page 14)

Israelis enter Lebanon to patrol for terrorists

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli troops moved into three positions in southern Lebanon Wednesday and appeared to be digging in along routes used by Palestinian terrorists to reach Israeli border villages. Israel said the move was to fend off insurgent attacks.

The three positions, reported by U.N. spokespersons and diplomats in Beirut, would put several hundred Israeli soldiers in an arc extending about 10 miles southeast from Misgav Am, the Israeli border village where three Israelis, including a baby, were killed in a raid Monday by Palestinian terrorists. The five insurgents, who were killed in the attack on the village nursery, belonged to the Iraqi-backed Arab Liberation Front, one of eight major insurgent groups that make up Yasir Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.

In Tel Aviv, the army issued a one-line announcement saying the Israeli troops were patrolling in southern Lebanon "as a precaution against possible terrorist activities."

The army command revealed nothing about the strength or location of the Israeli patrols and declined any elaboration on the action, the first Israeli ground attack into Lebanon in almost eight months.

BUT U.N. SPOKESPERSONS and foreign diplomats in Lebanon said the troops, armed personnel carriers and bulldozers were deployed near the villages of Kounin, Markabal and Shakra.

In Washington, State Department spokesperson Joseph Reap said "We've seen these reports. We're seeking clarification. We have been expecting an explanation momentarily from the Israeli defense forces."

Some form of retaliation had been expected following the attack on the kibbutz. Officials in Tel Aviv said the commandos had infiltrated the border through the Irish and Nigerian-controlled areas manned by the 6,000-member U.N. peacekeeping force.

The United States had urged restraint, especially because of talks President Carter is holding in Washington with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat on the stalled Palestinian autonomy negotiations with Israel. Prime Minister Menachem Begin arrives in Washington next week for similar meetings with Carter. (continued on page 14)

MSU offers 'enhanced' housing

By LESA DOLL

State News Staff Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a four-part series on issues facing handicapped at MSU. This installment deals with handicapped housing.

Handicappers coming to MSU for the first time next year may find it easier to get enhanced living space, according to Lou Anna Simon, assistant to the president for affirmative action at MSU.

The enhanced room, said Theresa Grates, a junior and wheelchair user, includes a larger doorway, a raised bathroom, with a fully enhanced bathtub, lower shelves and a lower phone. Most of the campus residence halls are not designed this way.

Responding to a recently conducted self-evaluation of campus accessibility, the University has targeted South Complex as a viable location for the expansion of handicapped-modified living areas.

The decision to enhance more rooms, possibly in Wilson Hall, is part of "looking at needs and demands for handicappers who need enhanced housing," Simon said.

Simon said the expansion plan would offer enhanced housing "without the concentration of handicappers in one dormitory."

"ALTHOUGH HANDICAPPERS can live in partially enhanced rooms in several campus residence halls, a small concentration of those students, primarily wheelchair users, are located in fully enhanced rooms in Case Hall and Owen Graduate Hall.

Penny Metcalfe, a senior and a handicapper, said many halls, such as Shaw Hall, are not acceptable for handicapper living even though they are termed accessible.

Metcalfe said although handicappers might get into a room in Shaw Hall, the stairways make the person unable to visit any other part of the building, including the downstairs grill.

"You can't do anything but come to your room," she said.

Robert Underwood, residence halls manager, said he has "every reason to believe" the expansion of enhanced rooms would not take place in halls, such as Shaw, because they have community baths. Wilson Hall is being considered for enhancement, he said, because "most of the space already used is ramped or easily ramped."

UNDERWOOD SAID WILSON has few interior barriers, with the exception of the second floor dining area. He said a special elevator is being considered to remedy that problem.

Future expansions may be considered on East Campus, he added.

Sharon Mikrut, a junior and wheelchair user, said the residence hall is one of the few options handicappers have.

She said most of the apartments off-campus are not accessible. But even enhanced apartments are off-limits to the handicapper transportation service at MSU, which must stay within campus boundaries.

Mikrut, now living in one of the enhanced rooms in Cherry Lane Apartments, said it was difficult to get a Cherry Lane apartment because married students with a handicapper in their family have priority.

"As students we need some kind of option in housing and if they take us out of here, we have two dorms," she said. "Who wants to live in a dorm all their college years?"

Soviets launch 2 cosmonauts

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union launched two cosmonauts into orbit Wednesday and there was speculation they will extend greetings from a space station to athletes and spectators at the Olympic Games in Moscow this summer.

The official Tass news agency said a record-holding adventurer and a rookie cosmonaut were launched to make repairs on Salyut 6, the station that has been in orbit 2 and one-half years. The launch of the Soyuz 35 craft followed a record-breaking 175-day manned mission aboard the space station last year.

The last American manned space flight, by contrast, was in July 1975, when Thomas Stafford and Donald Slayton docked their Apollo 18 craft to the Soviet Soyuz 19 in a dramatic big power space linkup.

Homebuilders protest tight money

(AP) — Thousands of homebuilders wheeled their bulldozers and backhoes through city streets across the nation Wednesday to demonstrate their anger over tight money policies and a depressed housing market.

"We've got nothing else to do with the equipment. We might as well put it on parade," said John Mahan, president of the Fargo-Moorehead Home Builders Association in North Dakota.

"We are small people on the brink of no work," said the head of the Maine association, Bud Waycott, during a demonstration in Augusta.

Spiraling housing prices and record costs for borrowing money have sharply cut the demand for housing and threatened their livelihood, builders said as they staged a score of protests Wednesday.

Racial unrest in Georgia town

WRIGHTSVILLE, Ga. (AP) — State troopers moved in to help restore peace Wednesday in this rural Georgia community where civil rights leaders claim the sheriff led a "mob of Whites" in a club-swinging attack on Black demonstrators.

Gov. George Busbee ordered about 30 troopers into the town of 2,100 when Black leaders vowed to stage another demonstration in their months-long protest over jobs and political representation.

Busbee said troopers would be on hand Thursday to accompany deputies to Johnson County High school, which was closed Wednesday as a result of the unrest.

Bill requires gas price posting

(UPI) — Gas station signs advertising pump prices, which seemed to have disappeared when prices began skyrocketing, would have to reappear under legislation being prepared for introduction in the Michigan Senate.

Sen. Phil Arthurhultz, R-Whitehall, said Wednesday he will soon introduce a bill requiring gas station operators to post their prices at entrances nearest the road or highway.

Prices would have to appear in numbers at least two feet high and the grade of gasoline in letters one foot high.

"Many gas stations don't post the price of gasoline at all, and when they do, they post only the price of one grade or type of gas, leaving us motorists to guess what the others cost," Arthurhultz said.

Hijacked plane lands in Cuba

A man armed with an automatic pistol scaled a wall at a California airport Wednesday, commandeered an American Airlines jetliner waiting to take on passengers and forced its crew to fly him to Cuba, authorities said.

The jet with only the hijacker and the seven crew members aboard first flew to Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport in Grapevine, Texas. It refueled and took off 47 minutes later for the 2 and one-half hour flight to Havana, authorities said.

The plane landed at the Jose Marti Airport in Havana at 5:18 p.m. EST, Federal Aviation Administration spokesperson Fred Farrar said in Washington. He said the crew would be allowed to leave Cuba for Miami, but it was not known when the return flight might be made.

Police crack burglary ring

DETROIT (UPI) — The wealthy residents of Grosse Pointe, Birmingham and other fashionable Detroit suburbs were a little less worried about their worldly possessions Wednesday.

Police said they have cracked a burglary ring that preyed on the rich with the arrests of three Detroit men believed responsible for stealing $1.25 million worth of gold and silver items from 45 homes since Christmas.

At least two more arrests were expected, police said. Investigators said a five-member gang — operating out of Detroit — specialized in stealing gold and silver coins and dishes, flatware, jewelry and gold items from homes in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

Pope to visit France

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II announced Wednesday that he will visit France, the first pope to do since the humbling experience of Pius VII who went there in 1804 to crown Napoleon I on orders of the French emperor.

Speaking to a crowd of 10,000 gathered in St. Peter's Square for his weekly general audience, the pope said he will make a three-day pastoral visit to the "beloved and noble nation" beginning May 30.

University groups withdraw funding from 'Every Woman's Weekend'

By LESA DOLL
State News Staff Writer

University funding has been withdrawn from the Every Woman's Weekend project following the denial of access to the event to two special interest groups, said Ralph Bonner, director of the department of public relations.

The departments of Human Relations and Family Ecology, the University College and the Honors College have withdrawn support. Two private groups, the Lansing Community College Women's Resource Center and the Ingham County Women's Commission, have also elected not to support the event.

Bonner announced Wednesday that the denial "violates University policy with regard to the First Amendment which guarantees universities serve as a marketplace for the free exchange of ideas."

The withdrawal culminates tension that has been growing since the Michigan Right to Life and Stop ERA groups were excluded from the May event following a Feb. 19 meeting of the Every Woman's Weekend coordinating committee. The committee decided at the meeting to exclude the groups from participating in the event.

Mary Gilson, co-coordinator of the weekend, said the decision to exclude the groups resulted from a revision and clarification of the Every Woman's Weekend "pro-woman" policy.

"(WE'RE) ADVOCATING FREEDOM of choice for women in taking complete control of our bodies and our lives," she said. "I believe those organizations deny women the right to choose the way they would like to live their lives. I think the right to choose is a very basic right."

The issue concerning groups which have withdrawn support is also a question of rights, said Joanna Stark of the Ingham County Women's Commission.

The commission contends the deliberate exclusion of two organizations would not allow them to support the event, Stark said.

"If it really is every woman's weekend then all points of view should be presented so everyone would have a choice," said Rosemary Hamilton of the commission. "That's the point that has to be made. If they want to be exclusive they can call it something else but don't call it Every Woman's Weekend."

In a letter to the co-coordinators of Every Woman's Weekend dated April 4, Women's Resource Center Director Mary Laing expressed similar concerns.

"OUR CENTER DOES serve women of many different backgrounds, ages, levels of awareness and political persuasions," the letter stated. "To be a part of a program which then in turn excludes some of the population we serve indicates to those women that we think less of them for their individual view."

Nancy Boik, a member of Stop ERA, said if the committee was accepting any kind of tax money to fund the event, every group should be allowed to participate.

"I'm sure our opinion is opposite of many of those who are planning the weekend," she said. "I don't feel we are not a pro-choice group. I know their definition is different than mine."

"If anyone is eliminated I don't think it represents 'every women,'" she said. "It doesn't represent me at this point."

"I think that generally speaking an event that purports to be for all women ought not to selectively exclude certain groups if that event is being sponsored by general fund dollars," said Moses Turner, vice president for student affairs.

Gilson said the title "Every Woman's Weekend" implies that every woman is able to attend.

"THE TITLE MEANS every woman is welcome to come to the weekend and participate in discussion," she said. "It does not mean that every issue and every viewpoint is represented."

Gilson said the question of exclusion is one of "academic freedom."

A University provision allows "the right of a student group to present a project from a particular point of view" she said.

"Our point of view is pro-woman," she added.

Lou Anna Simon, an affirmative action official, said although that provision applies, the use of University funds for the event in this situation would be "inappropriate."

"What we are saying is that they as a student group may control the weekend as they please," she said. "The general funds, that are in a sense state funds, is what we are concerned about."

Simon said the weekend may be sponsored by student or private funds, and will still receive the same University prerogative as any student organization in providing facilities for the event.

Gilson said she has not been notified of any other intentions to withdraw.

Walking tours offer casual campus view

By DON CALDWELL
State News Staff Writer

By the end of their stints at MSU, many students are no longer impressed by such University landmarks as Beaumont Tower, the ducks on the Red Cedar River and room B-108 Wells Hall.

But for prospective students and their families, a campus tour of these and other sites can alleviate fears about life at a big university.

Daily walking tours sponsored by the MSU Student Alumni Association are scheduled to leave the Union, rain or shine, at 11:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Monday through Friday for the rest of the term.

No reservations are required for the one and one-half hour tours, and they are open to high schools seniors, their parents, alumni and guests.

Dale Tremblay, a senior finance major and chairperson of the SAA, said the student volunteers who guide the tours are well informed about the history of MSU and aware of the concerns incoming freshmen have about residence hall living.

FROM THE UNION, the members of the tour journey to Campbell Hall, where guides explain what typical residence hall living is like. Tremblay said the guides are asked to relate personal experiences and encouraged to continually ask for questions throughout the tour.

"If the parents are on the tour, the questions are practical," Tremblay said. "If it's just students, they're of a more personal nature."

"The parents always ask about security at night and the students ask about the dorm food," he said.

The tours also pass by the president's house, the intramural facilities and the library.

"A lot of their high schools are smaller than the Library, so they're always impressed," Tremblay said.

LAST YEAR, MORE than 1,500 visitors participated in walking tours.

While the orientation programs and meetings with admissions officers give incoming students an academic look of MSU, the walking tours attempt to give the visitors a more informal, student's eye view of campus, Tremblay said.

"It really gives the students an idea of what MSU's about," he said.

Students interested in guiding tours this term should contact the SAA office in the Union.

Lansing sirens fail during downpour; city searches for cause of problems

By MIKE CHAUDHURI
State News Staff Writer

Although MSU had no problems with its tornado warning system, several Lansing sirens failed Tuesday, the Lansing fire department reported.

Department of Public Safety Capt. Ferman Badgely said MSU's sirens — which are used in cases of tornado warnings in Ingham County — worked fine early Tuesday evening when the campus was hit by a storm.

But there was a "general failure" of the siren system in Lansing, where it was reported many of its 18 sirens did not go off.

The fire department said the exact number of defective sirens was unknown, but reports put the figure at at least five.

LANSING WAS CHECKING all 18 of its sirens Wednesday and trying to determine the cause of the failure, the fire department reported.

The sirens had been checked Saturday, when several were found to be defective. But they were supposed to have been repaired by Michigan Bell, said James Holcomb, Lansing's Emergency Services director.

The sirens at MSU are intended to advise people to immediately seek shelter, Badgely said.

He said the sirens are one way the DPS warns people about possible tornadoes. The DPS also uses a "fan-out" system, which consists of calling five residence halls which in turn are each supposed to call other halls, he said.

Badgely said Spartan Stadium has been designated the shelter for residents of Spartan Village, and Jenison Fieldhouse is the designated shelter for University Village residents.

HOWEVER, HE NOTED that only about 25 people from Spartan Village showed up Tuesday at Spartan Stadium, a figure which he said was "frightening."

In case of a tornado Spartan Village "would have bricks flying all over the place," he said.

People in the Cherry Lane apartments are advised to seek shelter in the South Complex residence halls, he said. People in married housing should receive tornado warnings via the sirens and by radio and television, he said.

People in residence halls are advised to move away from windows and to go to hall basements, he said.

Rehabilitation programs combine to save administrative costs

Two rehabilitation programs in the Ingham County Jail, the alcohol program and the corrective assessment and treatment service program, will soon be united.

The Eaton-Ingham Substance Abuse Commission voted Monday to merge the programs in order to save money in administrative costs, said commission chairperson Jess Sobel.

Sobel said the new program will be implemented in one or two months, after the commission notifies the state Office of Substance Abuse Services.

A study of the merger program was approved in January when Sobel proposed the commission look into merging the programs to save money.

After a split vote on the merge in March, the commission sent the program back to the program development committee to gather more information.

Opponents of the merge claimed that the two programs function best separately and boasted that the program should not be changed because it is a nationally proclaimed model program and has a good cure rate, Sobel said.

"But they have an interesting way of figuring their statistics," Sobel said. "Everyone who doesn't stay in the program for 30 days is not counted as a failure."

"That means if you get arrested and get thrown into the Eaton County Prison — as long as you don't get thrown back into the Ingham County Jail — you are counted as a success," he said.

The alcohol program claims an 85 percent success rate and the correctional assessment and treatment service program figures are "something like" 70 percent, Sobel said.

The two rehabilitation programs, soon to be one, are agencies of the Eaton Ingham Substance Abuse Commission who deliver substance abuse services to the area.

The actual proposal will save the commission roughly $9,000 to $10,000 as well as increase the services of the program, Sobel said.

The program will delete one clerical worker and will rehire one worker as full time who now works part time for each program.

"The one person who's working both programs shows that nothing will be hurt to have the two programs working together," Sobel said.

Abortion issue won't go away

The state Supreme Court hit a low point in judicial history last week with its refusal to settle the Medicaid abortion controversy once and for all. Although the court let stand a state Court of Appeals decision upholding Gov. William G. Milliken's right to order continued funding of Medicaid abortions, it ducked a hot issue which will not just disappear.

The Medicaid abortion battle surfaces with almost every budget bill Milliken is asked to sign. The governor has repeatedly used his veto power to strike from legislative welfare budgets those provisions which attempt to deny use of state funds for elective abortions.

The fight has turned into a battle over pennies, with leading abortion foes inserting language limiting abortion funding to a token one or two dollars. In two 1978 budget bills and this year's budget, Milliken used his line-item veto power to strike those provisions. Because a predominantly anti-abortion Legislature has never been able to muster the two-thirds vote needed to override Milliken's vetoes, two Congress members won their case in Ingham County Circuit Court, arguing that Milliken cannot, by vetoing a specific appropriation, order funding to continue.

Although those who would legislate morality won their point at the circuit court level, the Ingham decision was reversed last year by the Michigan Court of Appeals, which upheld Milliken's action. But because the Supreme Court has skirted the issue, the abortion funding controversy will probably resurface with the next budget bill Milliken signs.

Milliken's term in office expires in 1982, and if there is any truth to talk of him as a possible vice presidential running mate, he may be gone much sooner. The next governor may not be as strong an advocate of free choice on the abortion issue, which would make the Legislature's fears of its inability to round up enough votes to override line-item vetoes moot.

Because a federal district judge struck down as unconstitutional a portion of federal abortion law which prohibits the use of Medicaid funds to finance abortions for the poor three months ago, we wonder why the state Supreme Court is so reluctant to touch the issue.

The Hyde Amendment prohibited Medicaid funding for abortions except in cases where a woman could prove rape, incest or the pregnancy was an immediate danger to her life. The stringent standards had far-reaching effects: Medicaid-funded abortions dropped from 300,000 a year when the bill passed in 1976 to less than 2,000 last year.

But the amendment was grossly discriminatory against the poor, who should be entitled the same access to vital medical procedures as the rest of society. The state justices' refusal to hear the admittedly controversial but recurring issue has only prolonged the debate.

Federal gas tax small, but smart

Federal taxes on gasoline have always been met with stiff opposition, be they slight increases or much steeper increments designed exclusively to restrict consumption and encourage conservation. But with an economy heading toward $2-a-gallon gasoline, price increases must be more substantial than in previous years to even make a dent in fuel consumption. President Carter's 10-cent gas tax imposed last week may fall short of achieving that goal. But it is a step in the right direction.

The tax is designed to deter motorists from buying too much and conserving too little. If the tax had not been added to gasoline, it would have been attached somewhere else, probably home heating oil. In fairness to those families dependent on oil to heat their homes, applying the tax to gasoline is a better assurance that everyone will do their part to use less fuel.

The 10-cent tax will undoubtedly have less effect on consumption than if it had been implemented in times of 75-cent-a-gallon gas. OPEC price increases have made drastic price rises the norm. But higher prices for gasoline have already proven to be one way of holding down consumption. In Michigan, consumption dropped about 9 percent following rises in fuel costs stemming from OPEC's December price boosts. That reduction is slight, but a sign of what impact higher costs can have on demand.

When it comes to putting a lid on gasoline use the options are few. There is an inequity inherent in Carter's tax: it will probably deter the poor from buying gas more than it will the rich. This is where the Carter administration will have to put its windfall profits tax to work. The fuel revenues will be there. It is up to Carter administration to see they are diverted to the right places.

VIEWPOINT: TRUSTEE SELECTION

An appointed board is the solution

By ANTONIO PIDO

The following is substantially a copy of a letter I sent to Sen. William A. Sederburg. As is his usual practice, he immediately responded. He was interested in my suggestions and very receptive to some, although he was not in total agreement with all my views. I would like very much to share my views and recommendations to Sen. Sederburg with students, faculty, former colleagues and fellow alumni. I support the efforts to have the boards of trustees of the three Michigan universities appointed rather than elected. The antics of the MSU Board of Trustees in the past year or so constitute a good argument for having them appointed. For example, during the last month or so it was embroiled in the spending spree (about $8,000) by one of its members. I concede that the expenditures may be too much or even improper, but why concentrate efforts on this matter, when other more important matters are ignored? To wit: the re-organization of the administrative structure, creation of at least one new administrative position with an out-landish salary, without any input from faculty or students. It is perhaps because the board has become the rubber stamp of the most entrenched, powerful and voracious group in the academic community, the administrators — maybe at the expense of the faculty and students?

In deliberating on legislation for an appointed board, I suggest the following be considered: the boards(s) should be represented by important segments of the population. To wit: a) the academic (teaching and scientific — not administrators) community; b) business/industry; c) faculty and students of the particular university; d) Michigan Department of Education; e) a representative of the local government and/or community where the university is located; f) organized labor; g) farmers organization; and h) the general public or "at large" members. These representations should be so stated in the law.

With the exception of the MDE representative (who may be the ex-officio chairperson and cannot vote except in breaking a tie), the constituencies should nominate at least two (more if possible) candidates to the governor, who shall appoint them subject to confirmation by the state Senate. The governor can appoint persons who are not nominated, provided they represent the constituencies (i.e., he or she cannot appoint a labor or business leader to fill the slot for faculty, etc.) This action by the governor of appointing persons other than those nominated will have to be justified by him or his appointee at the confirmation proceedings.

The terms of office will be for either three or five years. Five years would be ideal, but there might be difficulties with the student representative which may leave the university (graduate, etc.) before the end of his/her term of office. Last but not least, you may also consider representation from the Legislature (i.e., one representative each from the Senate and House education committees).

It can be argued that you may end up with a large "unwieldy" board of trustees. However, since board members will be nominated, appointed and subject to confirmation, I am confident they will be at the very least rational men and women. Besides, a large and potentially unwieldy board is better than a small rubber stamp one.

VIEWPOINT: BILLY THE KID

A second opinion on BoarsHead

By HARRY PERLSTADT

I would like to comment on the recent review by William Barnhardt on the BoarsHead Theatre production of The Collected Works of Billy the Kid. I saw the play and stayed for an informal discussion hosted by director John Peakes. As a result, I came away with a different understanding and appreciation of the play than depicted by Mr. Barnhardt.

First, I would like to downplay the "heated nude scenes." Either the general Lansing theater-going audience is extremely sensitive or a small group is being pandered to. I found the nude scenes well within the context of the play and supportive of the dialogue and plot. I find brief nudity to be more realistic and appropriate than bathrobes and twin beds in the old west.

Second, Mr. Peakes told the audience after the Sunday performance that the play was originally written as a long poem. The poem apparently won the Canadian equivalent of the Pulitzer Prize and the author then edited the poem into a series of play-like scenes. The best comparison might be with Dylan Thomas's Under Milkwood. This is, to be sure, neither rhyming couplets nor iambic pentameter. The flights into modernistic abstract poetry were not examples of intentional obfuscation and confusion. The play attempted to explain the murderous tendencies of Billy the Kid by illusion to psychedelic fantasies, and the irrationality of the abstract poetry did jar me to ask, "Is this guy crazy?" and "Where is this soliloquy leading?" but each time the sense slowly crept back in and it was an artistically interesting experience.

Third, the Sunday discussion raised the point about the lengthy mad dog story. Peakes suggested that in addition to poetic rhythms, certain events were repeated, particularly in the second act. These repetitions became more frequent and intense. But in the first act, the repetitions appear more drawn out. The mad dog story is a repetition of both the rat in the barn story and the history of the breeding of basset hounds. Bartok in his Concerto for Orchestra plays around with the length and intensity of musical passages.

Finally, Barnhardt classifies this play as one of those grotesque lets-shock-the-audience specials that rarely returns a message or enjoyment. I found the play to be meaningful and intellectually stimulating. The concern with cruelty to animals and our intolerance to it is played against the cruelty of man's inhumanity to man.

Perhaps because I saw the play on Easter Sunday, the audience was prepared for a passion-like interpretation of the play. Certainly the closing scenes are bloody and gruesome, but so are several of the classical paintings and sculptures of the death of Christ. The play constantly uses phrases like "Sweet Jesus" and "Christ Almighty" which at first seemed like polite 19th century swearing, but perhaps are part of a carefully woven allegory. On my way home I cast Billy the Kid as a misunderstood Jesus whose history is written primarily by his enemies rather than his fellow gang members; Pat Garrett as Judas who befriends Billy at the Chilsom Ranch only to destroy him later; Angie Dickinson as the wild west's equivalent of Mary Magdalene; and Sally Chilsom as Mary Martha.

We must decide our own destiny

In order for us as women to have control over our lives, it is imperative for us to have control over our own bodies.

In response to Jim Disantis' viewpoint, we would like to respond to two issues: first, the role of the father in relation to a woman's decision to have an abortion; second, the role of religion in a woman's right to make that decision.

When one considers the time, energy and physical strain involved in carrying a pregnancy to term, it seems that the greater pressure is on the woman. Hers is the life that will be interrupted, and hers is the body that will bear the pain of childbirth. We don't want to discount the role of the father, but since the woman is the one who suffers not only the physical hardship but bears most of the social censure very often directed toward unwed mothers, and usually the responsibility for child-rearing within marriage, we believe the final decision must be hers.

Disantis also writes about his previous accusation of anti-choice persons not understanding equality for women. He implies that he no longer believes this. But how can we say that we have equality when there are still people who want to deny us major decisions in our lives, such as whether or not to continue a pregnancy?

Disantis states that his perceptions changed as his Christianity developed. We respect that. However, we don't feel our lives should be decided by someone else's perception of God and the Bible, both of which are historically male-defined concepts.

As Disantis' perceptions change as he grew as a Christian, ours change as we grow as women. Among those perceptions are that we, as women, must be free to decide our own sexuality, spirituality and destiny, and not have our lives decided by someone else's version of morality.

From separation to ethnic purity

I can not understand why everybody is so upset at the prospect of an Honor College floor in Case Hall. Why, anyone can see that those people have their own special problems and needs that should be taken care of as a group. Why, imagine if we were to let those people free to run around with the rest of us normal people! I think pushing them off into their own little cubby hole is a great idea.

But why should we stop there? Other groups have their own special problems that could be well taken care of collectively. What a floor for those of us who have grade-point averages below a 2.0? This would remove their disruptive influence from the floor and make them feel less inferior. (I think I South would be ideal.)

HEADLEE LEADS DRIVE

Exec seeks limited terms of office

By MARK FELLOWS
State News Staff Writer

Richard Headlee, who successfully sold a tax limitation idea to Michigan voters in 1978, thinks he has a better idea this year.

The Farmington Hills insurance executive is leading another petition drive, this time to limit the number of terms many elected state officials may serve.

There are currently no term limits for elected state officials.

The proposal would place a six-year term limit on the offices of governor, secretary of state and attorney general. State senators would be allowed two four-year terms, while representatives could serve three two-year terms.

ELECTED STATE OFFICIALS' pensions would also be eliminated under the new Headlee proposal.

Headlee admits his group must do the nearly impossible to get the question on the November ballot. Almost 300,000 signatures are required for proposed constitutional amendments before the petitions can be submitted to the Secretary of State by July 7. Headlee said the drive started four months late.

"Representative government is failing," Headlee said. "We've allowed professional career politicians to take over the positions of power."

Headlee said he envisions a citizen legislator replacing the professional politician. Rather than let people make careers out of politics, he said, legislators should be encouraged to return to the community when their term limits expire.

The advantages to this proposal, Headlee said, would be to encourage more interested and creative blood to flow into the legislative process and to remove the influence of special interests.

HEADLEE CRITICIZED

THE seniority system of appointing senior party members to powerful committee seats. Limiting the number of terms for legislators would force a change in the appointment system, he said.

Another major problem with the political system, he said, is that politicians worry more about getting re-elected than about dealing with pressing problems. Re-election often depends on not alienating powerful interest groups, Headlee said, thus stifling needed legislation.

For example, he asserted, if John F. Kennedy had only one term, he would have withdrawn U.S. troops from Vietnam in 1963, rather than maintain American involvement to pacify war supporters.

Headlee also pointed out that incumbents have an almost insurmountable advantage in campaigns because of media access and privileges of office, such as free mailing.

State officials seem to agree with Headlee that a problem exists, but many disagree with his solution.

LT. GOV. JAMES Brickley termed the proposal "cynical" and "disruptive."

"It says we can't trust the people to determine who will continue in office," he said.

Others are concerned about the effect the proposal would have on the quality of lawmakers and the strength of the legislative arm of government.

The proposal would make legislators more dependent on the state bureaucracy than they are now, said Sen. William Sederberg, R-East Lansing.

Some areas of expertise are needed for competent legislation, said MSU political science professor Charles Press. New lawmakers need time to learn the system and the issues they will be legislating, he said.

Press added that inexperienced legislators may become more dependent on special interests and lobbyists for expertise under the proposal, rather than be freed from outside influence.

Panel talks child abuse

"Child Abuse: Are We Winning Or Losing?" will be discussed by an expert panel at a brown bag luncheon at 11 a.m. Friday at the Central United Methodist Church, 215 N. Capitol Ave., Lansing.

The discussion will be part of the monthly Board of Directors meeting of the Council for the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect.

"The most common child abuse problem is neglect," said Sharon Shay, director of the council. This usually results from the parents' inability to cope with their problems, she said.

The council provides therapists who try to help the child as well as educate the parents about their child's needs, Shay said.

The council is a non-profit, private agency established in 1975 to diminish the problem of child abuse and neglect in Ingham, Eaton and Clinton counties.

The moderator for the discussion will be pediatrician Dr. Susan Scheurer, of the MSU Department of Pediatrics and Human Development.

Other panelists include Psychologist Margaret Bailey, Community Mental Health; Susan Boyd, supervisor, Ingham County Probate Court; George Duncan, supervisor, Ingham County Protective Services; Sandra Murphy, family coordinator, Family Growth Center; and the Rev. John R. Smith, sponsor, Parents Anonymous.

Grey Panther calls for changes

By JAMES ST. CLAIR

The young and old Americans must work together to put this country back on its feet, the leader of the Grey Panthers activist group said Wednesday at MSU.

"It's up to the old and the young to make the changes in this country," said Maggie Kuhn. Kuhn predicted the 1980s will be a period of "tumult and transition," but a new and perhaps better society would be the result.

"What we are facing is that the old order is dying. Our old political systems are crumbling around us," she said. "The change that will come will be painful, but it will also be hopeful and exciting."

Kuhn said the greatest changes would be made by those with the least to lose and the most to gain — the youth and older citizens.

"The young people of our country have the energy and the idealism to make changes," she said, "while the old people have the benefit of historical perspective to rely on."

"The one thing that both the young and the old share is that we are both being discriminated against because of our age."

"I personally feel very sorry for the young people of today. They seem to be a very troubled bunch, very anxious and cynical and generally not very hopeful," she said.

Kuhn placed most of the blame for these attitudes on the federal government and the Carter administration in particular.

"I see the same horrible mistakes of the Nixon era being repeated in the Carter administration."

Kuhn suggested just a "smidgen" of the defense budget be taken and put into programs which would benefit citizens.

"We don't need nuclear power and we don't need the MX missile. We need Amtrak, and we need it now," she said.

Kuhn said the Grey Panthers increased from less than 10,000 members in 1978 to over 50,000 members in 30 states in 1980.

Kuhn said the Panthers' hard-line stands opposing nuclear power and draft registration for both men and women have also caused young people to join the group.

"Our group includes members of the student groups of the '60s, the anti-war protesters of the '70s," she said.

Kuhn said with the success of the Grey Panthers she has no thoughts about retiring from the radical life.

"I like to be old. I never had so much fun in all my life," she said. "And the job keeps getting easier all the time, since I have out-lived most of my opposition."

SARAH VAUGHAN

The divine & sassy original

By WILLIAM BARNHARDT
State News Reviewer

Sarah Vaughan's evening of incomparable vocal jazz may have been the concert of the year! Lecture-Concert brought The Divine One to the MSU Auditorium Tuesday night.

Aiding Vaughan was her superb trio, which opened the first half of her program with a sleek jazz number that demonstrated the scampers of Andy Simpkins, the intricate pianowork of Butch Lacy, and the drummer keeping it in time, Harold Jones.

"Somewhere Over the Rainbow" where Vaughan continued with the final "Oh why, oh why can't I?" line and wailed it repeatedly in the mournful gospel style. Inspirational! Equally essential was her rendition of "You're Blase," which displayed the dramatic abilities, the complacency and experience, this great American singer can produce.

Sarah Vaughan's history is rather impressive. She started at the Mount Zion Baptist Church in Newark, N.J., from there she auditioned for the Apollo Theatre, stomping grounds of her inspiration Ella Fitzgerald, and was noticed by the jazz vocalist Billy Eckstine who persuaded Sarah to join him with Earl "Fatha" Hines. In time she and Billy left for Billy's own band featuring such luminaries as Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, Roy Eldridge, and Fats Navarro. This combination gave the world be-bop and they were no doubt the height of the era. Since then, everyone from the Boston Pops to Count Basie have been appropriate backdrops for Sarah Vaughan's versatile and widely-accomplished style.

After an exciting up-tempo number from her jazz trio, she joined them on stage for some Gershwin — "Fascinatin' Rhythm" and "The Man I Love," both graced by her distinctive high-speed episodes of scat-singing. With "Easy Living" she reclined into a sumptuous drunken melody where she echoed her own soulful inflections, easily jumping from octave to octave without a slip or imprecision — a particularly appreciative ovation followed this number. "I Got it Bad, and That Ain't Good," "How Long Has This Been Going On?", "Lullaby of Broadway," and a devilish "Everything I Have is Yours" (where she played the piano and confessed through the song the parts she wasn't remembering or finding correctly) made the excellent second half rival to the first. She concluded with her own distinctive "Send in the Clowns" with a desolating a cappella last verse and a range reaching into the rarely heard recesses of her throaty soprano.

After an encore of scat-singing she led the audience in a sing-along of "bye-bye's" and bade farewell an applauding, standing crowd that did not easily let her depart.

Sarah's recent albums have

been praised as her best for the growth of her subtlety, her newfound abilities in implying and suggesting her vocal theatrics, her way of interpreting instead of imposing. Tuesday night saw Sarah at both perspectives — still applying those wondrous vocal techniques, but also bringing some of that acclaimed restraint to some of the evening's more delicate moments. Sarah with her one-of-a-kind-voice is still swingin' through the years and rapturously reminding each fortunate audience why she is indeed The Divine One.

Brothers Johnson will open for Rufus

The Brothers Johnson, with their distinctive brand of sophisti-funk, will appear with Chaka Khan and Rufus at 8 p.m. April 30 in the MSU Auditorium.

A capsulized history of The Brothers' career outlines a classic case of overnight success. Their first three albums, Look Out For #1, Right On Time, and Blam! have all achieved platinum-plus success. Added to that were two hit singles and a Grammy award.

"When everything started to happen for us, it was definitely a mind blower," says brother George. "We were fortunate, though, because we had people around us who helped keep things in perspective. We try to maintain a balance of priorities, but the music is our life force, it's what's important."

"We found ourselves in a bad situation in 1979. Suddenly we felt ourselves in a spin, so we pulled back to regroup and concentrate totally on making the best record we could."

"The concert business in general had slowed down for everyone, and disco was waiting in the wings," George continues. "Our lives had changed with wives and kids and a lot of toying to the point where it became necessary to put the brakes on. We had to sort out what was happening around us musically and socially and draw all our energy in real tight and then just go for it. That's what Light Up the Night is all about — it's both the message and the product of all the wood-shedding that we did."

While the trademark of The Brothers' sound has been Louis' thundering bass and George's melodic guitar lines and vocal, they strive to make music that doesn't repeat itself. In Light Up the Night they show the most structural stylistic growth of all their albums to date. It is their most melodic effort yet.

"Quincy (Jones) really pushed us on the message of structure and melody," George continues. "You couldn't ask more of a producer than Quincy gives, and he has so much knowledge to give too. We've learned a lot from this past year and from making this album. I guess the bottom line is that you've got to love what you're doing but not so much that you don't keep trying to make improvements on it."

The concert is sponsored by Ebony Productions. Tickets are on sale for $7.50 and $8.50 at the Union Ticket Office, WhereHouse II and III and Sounds & Diversions.

LSO to host 'Gershwin Spectacular'

The Lansing Symphony Orchestra will present a Gershwin Spectacular, featuring pianist Ralph Votapek and soloists Jacqueline Paige Green and Uzee Brown at the annual Cabaret Pops Concert at 2 p.m. This Sunday in the Lansing Civic Center. The guest conductor will be Bruce Hangen.

The concert will be a tribute to the great American composer George Gershwin, and the orchestra will perform such Gershwin classics as American in Paris, Rhapsody in Blue, Piano Concerto in F and selections from Porgy and Bess.

Ralph Votapek, artist in residence at MSU, returns to the LSO to perform Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue and the Piano Concerto in F. Votapek has performed with such noted orchestras as the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops. He has recorded a solo LP which was recently made available to the public once again. Copies will be obtainable at the concert Sunday night, in addition to Marshall Music, Discount Records and the Kellogg Center Gift Shop.

Guest conductor Bruce Hangen is currently serving his fourth season as music director and conductor of the Portland Symphony Orchestra, and he was associate conductor of the Denver Symphony Orchestra during 1976 through 1979. He has acted as guest conductor with such orchestras as the Boston Pops, the New Zealand Symphony, Tulsa Philharmonic, the Rochester Philharmonic, the Spokane Symphony and the Grand Rapids Symphony. Hangen received the conducting prize for outstanding conductor while a conducting fellow at the Berkshire Music Center in 1972. While there, he studied with Leonard Bernstein, Seiji Ozawa, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, and Michael Tilson Thomas.

Guest soprano Jacqueline Paige Green will perform selections from Gershwin's Porgy and Bess. She is currently a doctoral candidate in voice performance at the University of Michigan, where she earned her bachelor's and master's degrees in voice. She has been awarded numerous prizes, including Third Prize, Munich International Vocal Competitions (1978), and Semifinalist at the National Metropolitan Opera Auditions (1978). Paige Green has performed with the Berlin Philharmonic, the Greater Bridgeport symphony Orchestra, and the U-M Opera Theater, Chamber Orchestra.

Baritone Uzee Brown will perform with Paige Green in the Porgy and Bess selections. He is currently the curator and program coordinator of the Eva Jessye Afro-American Music Collection in Ann Arbor, and is a graduate assistant at the U-M School of Music where he is working toward a doctorate in voice. He has performed with the U-M Opera and Orchestra, the Atlanta

The actual event will begin at 12:30 p.m., as the main floor will include tables of 10 with box lunches of fried chicken and other munchables. Wine, beer and soft drink merchants will circulate the floor, as well as strolling musicians, clowns, candy butchers and "sellers for chance."

Tickets for the concert are $10 (adults) and $6 (children 12 or under) for main floor tables seats including the box lunch. Reserved first balcony seats are $5, and general admission balcony seats are $3. Tickets are available at the Symphony office in the Michigan Dental Building, Lansing; the Arts Box Office in Lansing; The State Journal, and Schmidt's Super Markets. The concert is sponsored by the latter two patrons. Table seats with lunch must be ordered in advance.

Dance party highlights poetry festival

Poets and writers from around the state and the Midwest will be converging this weekend on the Plaza Hotel in downtown Lansing for the Fourth Michigan Poetry Festival.

The festival, which is sponsored by the Poetry Resource Center of Michigan, will feature two days of readings, workshops, presentations and discussions, as well as offering an opportunity for poets and writers of all disciplines to meet and discuss their work. Also of interest will be a dance party following Saturday's readings featuring the music of Retro and Trainable.

The festival will kick off with registration and a book fair from noon to 6 p.m. Friday, followed by readings in the evening by E.G. Burrows, Rosa Maria Arenas, and Gozo Yashimasu with Thom Fitzsimmons and "Doc" Holladay. Saturday's schedule will include workshops and discussions throughout the day, as well as readings on film and videotape by such writers as Ginsberg, Ferlingetti and Dylan Thomas. The evening's readings will be given by Alvin Aubert, Lee Upton, and Diane Wakoski.

The late-night dance party will feature the multi-textured new wave art-rock of Trainable and Retro, both of which play music that you can shake your brains as well as "booties" to. The two bands are probably the most interesting musical units to have recently come out of Lansing and Detroit, respectively. Admission to the dance is free to conference attendees or $2 to the public.

Registration for the festival is $10 for the weekend, which also grants a year's membership in the Poetry Resource Center of Michigan. Persons planning to attend the manuscript workshops, meanwhile, should bring 15 to 20 copies of their poetry for group discussion. Further information on times and events can be gathered by calling the Plaza Hotel.

Blues & Jazz Festival: a weekend of alternative sounds

By BOB FONOROFF

The directors of Mariah and Showcasejazz are putting their money and reputations on the line to bring East Lansing its first Blues and Jazz Festival, April 18, 19, and 20 in MSU's Erickson Hall Kiva.

"I wanted to do this last year, but before it wasn't feasible," said Showcasejazz director Scott Hanson. "Now it's an idea whose time has come."

While speaking with Hanson and Mariah director Dave Johnson, I realized that East Lansing is on the threshold of possibly the finest musical event of the past five and maybe even 10 years. The reason for this is the East Lansing Blues and Jazz Festival is being put together for all the right reasons. Money is not the overriding factor. People are. But first a little history.

The concept of a Blues and Jazz Festival is nothing new to this area. Ann Arbor has had a rich tradition of blues and jazz festivals. Some good years for Ann Arbor were 1972, '73 and '74 with some monumental outdoor festivals put together by the Rainbow Peoples Party. The Ann Arbor festivals were a symbol for alternative music and a community that supported the efforts of those involved. When talk of a blues and jazz festival in East Lansing came up, people started assuming that the festival would be a carbon copy of Ann Arbor's event. This will not be the case.

When Hanson and Johnson first started seeking acts to play the festival, the original idea was to have three nights of music — one night of blues, one night of jazz, and something in-between. Then something happened. Agents got word of what was going on in East Lansing, and Mariah and Showcasejazz were blitzed with offers from bands that wanted to be a part of the festival. As a result, the planned three nights of music turned into two days and three nights to accommodate the demand by musicians, and there will now be nine acts doing a total of 10 shows.

But what makes one weekend of music a festival? Dave Johnson explained. "It's more a feeling than anything else. It's what our organizations have done together to get the job done." A point Johnson repeatedly made was that Mariah and Showcasejazz as organizations did not bring the festival together. The idea came together due to the people in these organizations, and the friendship they share with one another. So the key to this weekend of music is both and people involved and the people who come to the shows — that's us. If we can bring together the feeling that a musical happening is going on right here in East Lansing, it will be fantastic.

Another positive aspect of the Blues and Jazz Festival is that the musicians performing truly want to be here and look forward to playing. We will hopefully not see the typical slick album support tour we are becoming so used to. Ronnie Laws' is a case in point. It will not be a prefabricated 60-minute set of all "new" material. These bands are not only going to play, they're going to be jamming with one another. Again it is the spirit of friendship coming through. If your looking to hear some of the most innovative and freshest names in the fields of folk, blues and jazz today, the festival will definitely be right place to be.

The weekend kicks off Friday night with the David Bromberg Band and Sippie Wallace. Bromberg has done his homework. He knows how to control his audience, often putting them in a frenzy before bringing them down to more subdued level. He is loved by critics and concert-goers alike, and puts on a very good performance.

Sippie Wallace is an 81-year-old blues singer from Detroit. She will be performing songs she made famous in the 1920s, accompanying herself on piano. Shows are at 8:30 and 11 p.m.

Saturday afternoon brings poet/composer/keyboardist Gil Scott Heron to town. He is considered one of the most articulate spokespersons of the problems of the 1970s from the Black perspective. He puts on a thoughtful and enjoyable show, and his MSU appearance should be no exception. Shows at 2 and 4:30 p.m.

Saturday night will be a real treat with the Dixie Dregs and Alive. The Dregs combine rock, jazz, country and classical music to give "fusion" music some credibility. Alive is a polished, all-woman jazz band which the Washington Star hailed as "one of the freshest sounds on the jazz scene today." Alive combines a be-bop and gospel sound along with abstract solos and seat jazz improvisation. Shows at 8:30 and 11 p.m.

Sunday afternoon brings the Son Seals Blues Band with special guest Ellen McIlwaine. Son Seals is one of the youngest and supposedly one of the hottest guitarists out of the Chicago blues scene in quite some time. On stage Ellen McIlwaine is a tough performer, from her bluesy vocal repertoire to her scat singing. She is also one of the finest women slide guitar players around. It should be a hot afternoon. Shows at 2 and 4:30 p.m.

Sunday night brings us to conclusion of the East Lansing Blues and Jazz Festival with the World Saxophone Quartet and special guest Leroy Jenkins. The World Saxophone Quartet consists of four gifted saxophonists who play without any rhythm or percussion backup. People who think this makes for a boring recital type of performance couldn't be further off base. European audiences have raved about this fresh and original approach to traditional and modern jazz, and now East Lansing has an opportunity to listen and learn. Don't miss this one. Plain and simple, Leroy Jenkins is a virtuoso violinist. He is also a superb improviser and master of his instrument. Shows at 8 and 10:30 p.m.

Combine all this with short films, such as Jammin' The Blues, videotapes, and other activities both before and in-between acts, and you have the first annual East Lansing Blues and Jazz Festival. Mariah and Showcasejazz are giving this area the opportunity to experience some truly great alternative music. "We're putting our credibility on the line," Dave Johnson said. "This hopefully will be the most professional thing we have ever done."

Hanson and Johnson spoke of the festival as a learning experience for them. But it will also be a learning experience for the audience as well. For if we can go to Erickson Kiva April 18, 19, and 20, and sit down with an open mind to acts that are not familiar to us, we can learn something, not only about the music, but about ourselves. Mariah and Showcasejazz hope to start a tradition next weekend. They have done their work to bring us an impressive list of nine talented acts. Now, it's up to us. If we blow it, we will have no one to blame but ourselves.

Paperbacks: a pleasure reading list

By GERRY SKOCZYLA

One of the many benefits of taking your spring break in Florida is the opportunity to catch up on your reading, all while sipping on a mint julep while sunning at poolside.

Therefore, the following is a list of capsule reviews of recent best-selling novels, all of which were a refreshing change from the usual diet of textbooks:

New York, New York 10022 by Steve Kahn. This is an improbable novel about a gang of thieves who mastermind the robbery of the richest post office in the world — 10022 in Manhattan. Everybody loves a good heist and this one has you on the edge of your seat, rooting for the bad guys. The books is fast, easy reading, and it will soon be made into a motion picture.

Dress Grey by Lucian K. Truscott IV. This is a whodunit murder mystery set in the military trappings of the Army Academy at West Point. The book serves more as an expose of "what it's really like" at West Point than it is a murder mystery, actually. It's tedious in parts, but it is interesting to see what life is really like for a cadet. (The author was a graduate of West Point, of course.)

The Bronx Zoo by Sparky Lyle and Peter Golenbock. If you're any kind of baseball fan, you'll love Sparky's gossipy diary of the 1978 New York Yankees — a team that went from 14 games back in the summer to the playoffs and World Series. It's loaded with all of the smut about the Yanks — particularly that love triangle between Billy Martin, Reggie Jackson and Yankee owner George Steinbrenner. Similar in kind to Jim Bouton's Ball Four. Non-sports fans, however, probably won't appreciate the book's locker room antics and language.

The Island by Peter Benchley. What better book to read on the beaches than another thriller from the author of The Deep and Jaws? I really like Benchley's style — forgive me for putting him in their class, but I see him as a combination of Melville (the sea), Poe (violence), and Agatha Christie (mysteries). In this book, Benchley attempts to explain the disappearance of ships in the Caribbean by supposing that there is an uncharted island full of pirates and cut-throats doing the handwork. It's as unlikely as Jaws, but by the middle of the book, he's got you believing that it might be possible. A real page-turner. (The movie comes out in June, too.)

Overload by Arthur Hailey. This is Hailey's latest novel about what happens in a giant power company in California when it runs out of electricity. It's chock full of violence and sex, so I enjoyed it immensely. It's a bit long, but Hailey does a good job of weaving a real situation with fictional characters, just as he did in Wheels and Airport. Overall, the book is, well, electrifying!

Miracle on Ice by the New York Times Sports Staff. This is the story of, believe it or not, the U.S. Olympic hockey team's gold medal performance at the Winter Olympics. It is the chronological account of the team's unexpected climb to the gold medal, including the victory over Russia in the semi-finals. The strength of the book is in the 64 pages of pictures and not in the journalistic account of the games.

The Rosary Murders by William Kienzle. This is the best murder mystery I've read in quite some time! Set in Detroit, it is the story of a murderer, who, for unknown reasons, begins killing priests and nuns in a systematic manner. Kienzle, a former priest and editor of the Michigan Catholic, uses his knowledge of the church and police work to come up with a real winner for his first novel. And, of course, using the Motor City as a background makes it especially interesting for any native Detroiters.

Correction

How stupid! I don't know why I get Rain and Of Human Bondage mixed up — they have nothing in common really. Of course, of course, of course Bette Davis was in Of Human Bondage (not Rain as I erroneously reported Wednesday). Let's try again: Bette Davis, Dangerous in 1935 and Jezebel in 1938. You know, it seems you always catch those little slips the morning after. Bette can you forgive me? Despite some of those NAAAASSSSSTY phone calls, it's nice to know there's some old movie buffs on campus.

Rain idles softball team — again

By BEN WELMERS

State News Sports Writer
April showers have kept the Spartan softball squad idle most of the week as Michigan monsoons have washed out five of the team's last six games, including Wednesday's double-header at the University of Detroit.

A timely torrent intervened Tuesday on behalf of Spartans when the first game of a twinbill was suspended after Western Michigan University scored a go-ahead run in extra innings.

The run, scored in the top of the eighth inning, was nullified due to the downpour, which prevented MSU from batting in the bottom of the inning. The score thus reverted to the 1-1 seven-inning deadlock.

The game will be continued when the Spartans meet the Broncos April 15 for a scheduled double-header at Kalamazoo.

Head coach Gloria Becksford said she was pleased with her team's performance against the potent Broncos, who dominated the Spartans last season and captured state championships the past two years.

"Our team played well," Becksford said. "Western is powerful but not unbeatable. They go more hits, but we were hitting harder than they were."

The Spartans struck early when lead-off batter Joanne Ferguson connected for a three-bagger to center field.

The next two Spartans grounded out before Michel Van Howe hit a RBI single for the Spartans' first score.

WMU battled back in the third inning when Bronco Patti Rendine led off with a single and was advanced to second base on a well-executed sacrifice bunt by Barb Burke.

Designated hitter Beth Belleville was picked off at first base on an infield grounder for the second out, but Rendine advanced to third.

Bonni Kinne, the Broncos'

Bronco shortstop Barb Burke is out at first base on a close play by Spartan Jennie Klepinger in Tuesday's game at Old College Field.

outstanding freshman from Grand Ledge, then singled in the run to even the score.

With one out in the bottom of the seventh inning, the Spartans took their best shot at salvaging the game when Lauren Reynolds, pinch-hitting for Jennie Klepinger, and Ferguson both got on base with singles.

The next Spartan out came on a fielder's choice as Reynolds was forced at third. Denise Bundo then hit a fly ball for the final out, ending the rally and sending the game into extra innings.

Tower, Morrison sign with MSU

By The State News and UPI

Two standout high school basketball players have signed national letters of intent to attend MSU, it was announced Wednesday.

Ben Tower, a 6-8 forward from Saranac High School, and Randy Morrison, a 6-2 guard from Olivet High School signed with the Spartans after agreeing to Big Ten letters of intent last month.

Tower and Morrison were both All-State selections, with Tower a member of the Class C All-Star team and Morrison the Class D unit.

"Even though they both have small-high school backgrounds, both are excellent Big Ten prospects," Heathcote said.

Heathcote has two scholarships remaining to award. The maximum number allowed is five, but MSU's limit was four after sophomore Don Brkovich recently changed his mind about transferring and decided to stay at MSU.

Tiger pitching may tell tale

By RICHARD L. SHOOK

UPI Sports Writer

DETROIT — Weak pitching arms cannot carry a baseball team far — and therein may lie the tale of the 1980 Detroit Tigers.

Only one of the Detroit's four starters is "proven" — and he has not put winning seasons back-to-back.

But when Jack Morris opens the season for the Tigers at Kansas City today he is the closest thing Sparky Anderson has to a "stopper."

IM NOTES

Due to specific-day scheduling problems, the intramural department has announced that one-pitch softball will not be scheduled this spring.

Any one-pitch players may be considered for regular co-rec slow-pitch softball after scheduling slots open for that league.

Call Sally Belloil or Lynne Olson at 355-4710 for scheduling priority.

MORRIS IS THE only pitcher

the Detroit manager can put out on the mound with any kind of assurance that the opposition bats will look like they are on a midseason vacation.

When Morris is announced as the starting pitcher, there is a definite feeling Detroit can win. No right-handed pitcher in the American League won games last season.

He was 17-7 with a 3.28 earned run average — after being miffed because then-manager Les Moss started him out with Evansville.

If the Detroit staff starts with Morris, a hard-throwing righthander out of Brigham Young University, it ends with right-handed Mexican bullpen ace Aurelio Lopez.

Also in the bullpen are young Pat Underwood, veteran John Hiller, Dave Tobik and jack-of-all-assignments-Billingham.

Golf team cast as 'favorite'

The MSU golf team takes on the role of the favorite Saturday when it joins 10 other teams at the Illinois Intercollegiate Tournament at Champaign, Ill.

MSU coach Bruce Fossum feels the Spartans will be in for a battle.

"Let's put it this way: we have the tools to win," Fossum said. He expects MSU to go down to the wire with Big Ten rivals Purdue University and the host Fighting Illini.

Last week in the Marshall Invitational, MSU tied for fourth while Illinois was 12th.

Sophomore Mike Thomsen (who shot a 225 for 54 holes in the Marshall Invitational) and seniors Tom Mase and Rick Grover (each 226) all earned automatic trips to Illinois by their play in the tournament. The three others in the lineup, sophomores Dave Belen and Monty James and junior Hill Herrick, all qualified during the team's playoffs this week.

"I'd really like to get a victory under our belts," Fossum explained. "That would establish us as a top team."

TO DOGWOOD RELAYS

Trackmen head south

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer

The MSU men's track team opens its outdoor season Friday and Saturday when a limited squad travels to the Dogwood Relays in Knoxville, Tenn.

Spartan coach Jim Bibbs is saddened by the loss of two of his stars, Andy Wells and Michael White, who each sustained leg injuries and will be lost for the entire season. But Bibbs still feels the team is capable of finishing high in the Big Ten standings.

"We had an excellent indoor season, placing fourth at the Big Ten meet by only a third of a point, and I think our momentum will carry over to the outdoor tracks," Bibbs said.

"WE'VE GOT RICKY FLOWERS back in the lineup again, which will bolster our relay events, plus Keith Moore, Randy Smith and Calvin Thomas are all in great condition.

"If we perform to our ability, I think we'll surprise some people this spring."

Flowers, a senior from Saginaw, was academically ineligible for the 1980 indoor season. He currently holds the Ralph Young Field records in the 200-meter dash with a time of :21.7, set in 1979, and was part of the 440-yard relay team in 1977 with Smith that set the field mark of :40.5.

Additionally, Flowers was a member of the 1979 440-meter relay unit with Wells, Smith and Thomas that set a new varsity outdoor record of :40.02.

SMITH ALSO HOLDS the Ralph Young record of :09.4 in the 100-yard dash, set in 1977, while Moore owns the 1,500-meter record of 3:49 set in 1979 and was part of the distance medley relay team that set the mark of 9:39.64 in 1977 with Herb Lindsay running the anchor position.

Bibbs sees Indiana University and the universities of Michigan and Illinois as teams to beat for the conference crown.

"The same three teams were on top in the indoor season, and I expect them to be just as competitive outdoors," Bibbs said.

Bibbs will find out for sure when the Spartans host the Michigan State Invitational April 19. Most of the Big Ten teams will be there, along with an assortment of other Michigan universities and out-of-state colleges.

At the Dogwood Relays, Smith will run the 100-meter invitational race while also competing as a member of the sprint medley relay unit. Flowers will also run in the sprint medley, plus compete in the mile relay and the 200-meter invitational.

THOMAS IS IN the sprint medley and the mile relay;

Randy Smith

Tyrone Williams will run the 400-meter intermediate hurdles and the mile relay; Ken Eaton is in the 110-meter high hurdles and is the back-up runner in all of the relays; and Moore will run the invitational 1,500-meter event and anchor the sprint medley.

Also competing will be Tim Kenney in the mile relay and the open 800-meter race, and Paul Piwinski and Darryl Diamond in the high jump.

Smith and Moore are both senior All-America performers, gaining that status in 1977 and 1979, respectively. Piwinski, a freshman, became All-America after finishing sixth in the high jump at the NCAA indoor meet held in mid-March.

Paul Piwinski

"We should do quite well this season with our big guns back," Bibbs said. "And if Kenney, Andre Williams and Martin Schulist continue to mature, then we should have very good depth as well."

Masters golfers expect good scores

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — Ray Floyd is not expecting another hot hand like he had in the 1976 Masters when he tied Jack Nicklaus' record, but he insists he will not be surprised if one of the other golfers does that well this week.

"If the golf course stays in the condition it is now and we have no wind," he said, "271 is in jeopardy."

That number, 17-under-par, is what Floyd shot four years ago when he won the Masters by a commanding eight strokes.

Masters' favorite Tom Watson disagrees with Floyd's forecast for a possible low score.

"The rain Monday night and a heavy downpour for an hour Tuesday afternoon has softened the greens and it is playing easier than usual. But, you've got to figure the wind is going to dry things off the next couple of days. I think a 10-under 278 would be a fair prediction."

The prestigious tournament begins today at the Augusta National Golf Course.

Laxers try for third straight

MSU's lacrosse team hopes to make it three wins in a row today when it travels to Holland for a rematch with intra-state rival Hope College.

The laxers, 3-2 on the year, routed Hope 13-2 in their home opener two weeks ago. However, MSU co-coach Nevin Kanner does not think a victory will come as easily this time around.

"When we played Hope earlier, it was their very first game of the season," Kanner said. "A team like Hope will look 100 percent improved from what we saw before."

Out of the lineup in the first MSU Hope game was Spartan scoring leader Kevin Willits, who had academic commitments. Kanner said Willits missed Tuesday's practice because of a pinched nerve in his hip, but is expected to play today.

Senior Ken Horan, who has been sidelined with tendinitis in his knee, is ready for action again.

After today's game, MSU returns home for its second Midwest Lacrosse Association game of the season, a Saturday matchup with Ashland (Ohio) College. The Spartans won their MIA opener last weekend by beating Oberlin (Ohio) College, 12-10.

Track meet at Jenison

High school women's track and field takes over Jenison Fieldhouse this weekend when MSU hosts the sixth annual Spartan Track and Field Meet for High School Girls.

Schedules for Friday and Saturday, the meet features athletes from Class C and D schools Friday and Class A and B athletes Saturday. The three field events get underway at noon Friday and 10 a.m. Saturday with running events beginning an hour later.

A total of 40 schools are entered in Friday's C and D meet, with 75 schools sending teams for Saturday's A and B event.

Admission charge for each day of competition is $1 for students and $2 for adults.

Each day's program consists of 10 events. Activity begins with the three field events — high jump, long jump and shot put. The first running event, scheduled to begin an hour after the meet's opening, is the shuttle hurdle relay. Other relay events include the spring medley relay, 880-yard relay and mile relay. Individual running events are the 880-yard, one and two-mile runs.

BILL TEMPLETON

Few remember tour's 'rabbits'

The best in professional golf will come together starting today in Augusta, Ga., all with one quest: the prestigious green sports jacket awarded annually to the Masters champion.

Although the field assembled represents the class of the PGA Tour, few people know the other half of this world which appears so glamorous as we sit in our homes and watch men and women win thousands of dollars by having fun.

The "rabbits" are players not exempt from tour events, the struggling and hopeful who must go out every Monday and qualify for their spot in the tournament by playing against other youngsters in the same position.

Those pros who do not finish in the top 60 money-earners are cast into the other half of an otherwise lucrative profession. Oh sure, someday they may find themselves paired with a Tom Watson or a Jack Nicklaus, but for now, they must scramble for their pars and scrape for their food.

IT IS A tough life indeed for these professional golfers, but a legitimate proving ground in recent years has been college golf.

Nicklaus, Tom Weiskopf, and most recently young John Cook, all attended perennial powerhouse Ohio State University. Though many associate OSU with football, college golf enthusiasts know the Buckeyes are defending NCAA champs.

By playing against other top amateurs while in college, these young lions get an appetizer indicative of the main course awaiting them should they succeed in getting their professional card.

Once they have had enough college golf, either through graduation or indoctrination, many feel they are ready for the rigors of professional golf.

As in the case of Cook, he chose to forego his final year of college competition in favor of trying to qualify for the tour. Cook was a three-time All-America and had nothing else but the tour in his sights anyway. He'll make it.

ALTHOUGH PLAYERS LIKE John Cook and Brigham Young University's Bobby Clampett appear ready to take on the Watsons and Nicklauses at their own game, the rabbits continue to, and probably always will have to, fight for their livelihood.

PRIVATE FUNDS LACKING

Interest rates may slow City Centre

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

The status of the proposed City Centre is up in the air because high interest rates are hampering efforts to obtain private funding for the project, said an East Lansing planner.

Jim van Ravensway said federal funds could not be obtained without private dollars, meaning the project could not be built.

The $8.9 million project is relying partially on a $2.7 million federal grant to assist in funding the development which will consist of retail stores, restaurants, offices and apartments.

The project site is located on the Citgo Block between Albert Avenue and Ann Street on M.A.C. Avenue.

The Urban Development Action Grant, which is given to various cities through the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, will not be provided to the city unless it can show it has a certain amount of private backing, Van Ravensway said.

Steven Spencer, community planning and development representative at the Detroit HUD branch, said East Lansing must guarantee it can provide between $2.50 and $3 of private dollars for every dollar of federal money.

THE CITY'S APPLICATION was reviewed by HUD in Detroit in February and is now in Washington, D.C., where the application will be reviewed again, Spencer said.

Spencer added that HUD in Washington will soon release an announcement of its approval or rejection of the grant application.

He cautioned that even if the application is approved, the city will not receive the money unless the project developers come up with the required backing.

Van Ravensway said private funding would be provided through city backed bonds, which allow developers to borrow money at a lower interest rate.

The bonds also allow the financial institutions to not pay taxes on the interest they receive for lending the developers money.

HE SAID SEVERAL groups have expressed interest in buying the bonds, but added that developers are not willing to pay a 12 percent interest rate.

Van Ravensway said the city will have to wait for interest rates to drop before the project can get off the ground.

Van Ravensway said he is not sure when interest rates will drop, but added by the end of May he will be able to make a prediction as to when the project can get underway.

Although van Ravensway said he is optimistic that private backing could be obtained, he admitted there is "always a chance" the entire project could fall through.

Spencer speculated that East Lansing, like other cities, might withdraw its application and wait for a "more favorable economic climate" before requesting the federal funds again.

VAN RAVENSWAY SAID skyrocketing interest rates have led to major modifications of the initial plans.

"Everytime the interest rate goes up, we have to modify the project again," he said.

Those modifications include reducing the structure from 10 to seven stories by cutting retail space from three floors to two, reducing office space to one floor and cutting down the number of living units from 108 to 75.

Van Ravensway said even though the project is scaled down, the City Centre will be a big shot in the arm for East Lansing because the development will attract both business and shoppers.

Sorority hosts 'U' conference

More than 700 members of Delta Sigma Theta sorority are expected to attend a regional conference, to be held today through Saturday in Kellogg Center.

The events begin with a reading of the BoarsHead Theatre play "Sizwe Bansi Is Dead" at 8:30 p.m. Friday. Tickets may be purchased at the door. A party will be held after the play in the Brody party room from 10 p.m. to 3 a.m.

Detroit City Council President Erma Henderson will speak on "Black Women and Black Youth in the 1980's" at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Big Ten Room, Kellogg Center.

Afternoon discussion sessions, to be held from 1 to 3 p.m. and from 3:30 to 5 p.m. The events are open to the public.

Williams Hall residents change floor plan to include more women

By RUSS HUMPHREY
State News Staff Writer

Williams Hall residents successfully voiced their views Tuesday in deciding the fate of next year's housing changes.

Management will implement the resident's request to displace men from the north side first floor living area of Williams Hall next fall term.

The change was implemented to allow more living space for women in Williams Hall. In recent years there have been more women than men on the Williams waiting list.

The vote for the winning proposal was not close. The choice received 93 first place votes — 66 votes more than the second choice.

The 252 residents were asked to grade the choices on a scale of one to four, according to their priority preferences.

The housing proposal chosen at the last government meeting of winter term received the lowest priority of all proposals.

That proposal, calling for the displacement of all men on the third floor along with other changes in the housing situation, caused many residents to air their views about the changes.

Some students in the hall were surprised that management allowed students to decide the housing setup.

George Van Buren, Williams Hall manager, said he was glad it went to a vote, adding that management has always tried to involve students in cases which directly affect them.

"I'm glad it's resolved," he said, adding that he would "remain neutral" concerning the students' choice.

"This is the best and easiest way out," Marie Harding, housing clerk, said after the results were tabulated. "I would have rather seen it remain the same. I like it the way it is."

John Owings, Williams Hall president, said he was glad to see many residents participate in the voting. He also expressed pleasure in management for allowing residents "to decide their own fate."

TRC offers training

The East Lansing Tenants Resource Center is offering a training session this weekend for those wanting to be TRC counselors.

The sessions will enable interested citizens to help area residents with various housing problems.

The sessions will be held from 6:30 to 10 p.m. Friday, and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday at the center, 855 Grove St.

Israelis have next move in peace summit—Carter

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Carter wound up talks with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat on Wednesday with words of support for the Palestinians but no apparent decision on their future in Israeli-held territory.

That, Carter said, will depend on his consultations here next week with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Carter stressed, however, that there must be "a recognition of the realization of Palestinian rights, a recognition that the Palestinians must have a voice in the determination of their own future."

The two leaders parted on the White House South Lawn with an exchange of tributes after three rounds of talks in two days.

CARTER SAID HE was "deeply grateful for what he (Sadat) adds to my ability to lead this country."

Sadat, before driving off to see congressional leaders, said he was proud to be the friend of "the gallant American people." As Carter smiled his approval, the Egyptian leader added, "I shall never let you down."

Sadat also said difficulties in Iran and Afghanistan, and what he called "a threat" to the Persian Gulf, "should enhance the efforts for reaching an agreement upon the full autonomy for the Palestinians."

But he and Carter made no claim of having overcome any of the hurdles to formulating a Palestinian autonomy plan by the May 26 target date.

While Carter called his talks with Sadat constructive, he said "no decisions could be reached yet because Prime Minister Begin and the Israelis must be carefully consulted."

Diplomatic sources said they doubted, however, that the back-to-back visits by Sadat and Begin would produce an accord. These sources, asking not to be identified, said negotiations would be intensified and that Sadat was likely to return for further meetings with Carter early next month.

SO FAR, EGYPT and Israel have been unable to define the "full autonomy" promised in their Camp David accord of September 1978 to the 1.2 million Palestinian Arabs living on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in Gaza. Those territories have been held by Israel since the 1967 Six-Day War.

At one point in his statement, Carter said there must be "a recognition of sovereign rights." But it was not clear whether he was calling for national powers for a Palestinian council, for the rest of the Arab world to join Egypt in recognizing Israel, or both.

Carter and Sadat went out of their way to underscore the importance of their White House sessions.

"We've had, perhaps, the most far-reaching discussions, these last few days, in my own experience as president," Carter said.

Social Security benefits to rise to compensate for high inflation

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — This year's soaring inflation means the nation's 35 million Social Security beneficiaries can expect benefit increases upwards of 14.3 percent in July.

The exact figure will not be known until the government announces April 22 the Consumer Price Index for March. Social Security checks are adjusted upward annually when inflation exceeds 3 percent. The increase is based on how much the CPI rises from the first quarter of one year to the first quarter of the next.

In the 11 months through February, the CPI already had shot up 13.5 percent. If it goes up at the same frenetic pace in March as it did in the first two months of 1980, Social Security benefits and Supplemental Security Income, a welfare program, will go up 14.3 percent.

Three months ago, the Carter administration forecast in its 1981 budget that this year's Social Security increase would be 13 percent.

A 14.3 percent increase would cost Social Security nearly $17 billion and raise the average monthly benefit for individuals $45 to $360. The maximum monthly benefit for a retired worker would shoot up to $654 from $572, an $82 increase.

This will be the biggest cost-of-living increase for Social Security beneficiaries since the system was tied to the CPI in 1975, but it will not be the biggest boost in history.

CONGRESS RAISED BENEFITS 20 percent in 1972, the same year that it provided for the automatic increases starting in 1975. After an ad hoc 11 percent increase in 1974, Social Security benefits rose 8 percent in 1975, 6.4 percent in 1976, 5.9 percent in 1977, 6.5 percent in 1978 and 9.9 percent in 1979.

In attempting to balance the budget, the administration considered but decided against asking Congress to give Social Security beneficiaries only 75 or 85 percent of the CPI rise instead of a 100 percent adjustment.

Some economists contend the index overstates the impact of rising mortgage rates and housing costs on the elderly, many of whom own homes. But some senior citizen advocates contend the index understates the impact of inflation on the aged in other areas.

White House officials, in releasing the administration's revised fiscal 1981 budget late last month, said no changes had been recommended "because of the complex nature of the issue and the short time available to review it."

"HOWEVER," THEY SAID, "in view of the major impact indexing has on the federal budget and the widely held belief that the CPI may at times exaggerate the adjustments needed to maintain the purchasing power of benefit payments, the administration proposes to undertake a thorough review of this issue."

The officials said the study will consider using inflation indexes other than the CPI and will address "the broader issue . . . of protecting beneficiaries."

Board approves survey

By JIM MITZELFELD
State News Staff Writer

The ASMSU Student Board approved a resolution Tuesday night to conduct a phone survey of students to obtain their opinions on the proposed change to a semester system.

The board opened its meeting with a presentation by Provost Clarence L. Winder, who said he felt a change to a semester system would increase the academic quality of programs at MSU.

The board also passed a bill to entrust a five-member Blimp Board with the power to purchase the proposed ASMSU blimp.

The bill would provide for a board made up of the ASMSU Student Board chairperson, executive director and comptroller, as well as two other members of ASMSU, to investigate the purchasing of a blimp and report their decision to the board.

The bill, which passed by a 11-2 vote, concerned the purchase of a $3,000 radio-controlled blimp. The bill stated that the blimp would not only be used as a promotional tool, but also as an effective fund raiser.

"It's time we fund ourselves from other sources than student taxes," Bob Carr, chairperson of the budget committee, said. "The blimp has money-making capabilities."

Carr said the blimp could be used to advertise at football games and would easily undercut the $275 that airplanes and helicopters charge to make two or three circles of the stadium.

"It's definitely going to get on national TV," chairperson Bruce Studer said.

Carr said he felt the blimp could be run as a money-making operation by charging $120 to 140 per flight. He added that if the blimp made 16 to 17 flights a year it could pay for itself in five years.

Air Force offers cash bonuses

The U.S. Air Force has begun a nationwide cash bonus program in order to fill three positions requiring six years of training.

Bonuses will be paid to recruits who complete technical training requirements for radio communication analysis/security, explosive ordnance disposal or voice processing, said Sgt. Charlie Chan, Air Force recruiter in East Lansing.

The lump sum payments are $1,000 for the radio communications specialist, $1,500 for the explosive ordnance disposal specialist, and $2,000 for the voice processing specialist.

Applicants for these positions must be high school graduates or have passed a state-certified test in order to prove competence.

CLERK WANTED - Adult Bookstore. VELVET F

Strike turns violent

but postponed it at the request of Asher Schwartz, an attorney for the striking Transport Workers Union, who said peace talks were on the brink of "substantial progress." The Metropolitan Transportation Authority was meeting with the TWU's 45-member executive board.

The end of Easter vacation for about 1 million students and teachers contributed to the traffic snarls as just under 250,000 cars converged on Manhattan. Police Commissioner Robert McGuire called the tieups the "most difficult we've had thus far."

Police blamed the bus sabotage on the striking transit workers but there were no immediate arrests.

George MacDonald, a dissident leader on the executive board of the 35,000-member TWU, warned that more violence lies ahead.

"The city is making us pay — we'll make the city pay," he said. "I'm sure there is going to be violence, sabotage or fires. There's people around here who will do that."

"There's going to be a lot of trouble — garages smashed, wires pulled out and cut, lights broken, switches not working."

AFTER MONTELEONE'S ORDER, the Amalgamated Transit Union promptly sought a return-to-work of its 2,500 striking members who man city buses in areas of Queens and Staten Island.

The MTA said it was "arranging for adequate police protection" for the ATU drivers.

The TWU was openly defiant of Monteleone's order and its leaders vowed to stay out "until we have reached a reasonable contract."

Temper grew shorter as the city's first transit shutdown since 1966 dragged on.

A bicyclist ran over and then beat a police officer who stopped him for speeding on the Brooklyn Bridge. The cyclist was arrested as he was trying to grab the officer's gun, police said.

In Brooklyn, a motorist tried to run over a woman police officer who arrested him for refusal to heed her traffic signals.

Israelis cross border

In New York, a spokesperson for U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim called the Israeli move "a very serious development" and said a "strong protest" had been lodged with authorities in Jerusalem. "We are not aware what is the intention of this operation," said U.N. Spokesperson Rudolf Stajduhar.

SAMIR SANBAR, the Beirut-based spokesperson for the 6,000-member U.S. Interim Force in Lebanon, said U.N. troops in the southern part of the country were ordered to a state of full alert.

Timur Goksel, another U.N. peacekeeping force spokesperson, said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press in Tel Aviv that Israeli troops in armored vehicles were setting up defensive positions with barbed wire and trenches in apparent coordination with the Israeli-backed Christian militias who control the border zone. No resistance was encountered, he said.

"There are indications they will be staying for a while," Goksel said by telephone from U.N. headquarters in Naqura, Lebanon, just north of Israel.

Israel and its Lebanese Christian allies, who control a six-mile-wide stretch along the 59-mile border, claim the U.N. peacekeepers have been unable to check insurgent infiltration through U.N. lines. The U.N. troops have been in Lebanon since Israel's 1978 across the border by Palestinian insurgents.

Goksel said one Israeli detachment of four armored personnel carriers entered the Irish troop area and took up positions near the villages of Tiri and Kounin.

Goksel also said Israeli troops dug into positions at Markaba, four miles west of Kibbutz Misgav Am; near Shakra, three miles further southwest; and in the Kounin area, about four miles north of the Israel-Lebanon border and three miles southwest of Shakra.

Dollar plunges in Tokyo, continues European drop

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar plunged five yen on the Tokyo foreign exchange market Thursday, and dealers said the sharp drop apparently mirrored the dollar's weakness on the European and New York markets Wednesday.

The dollar opened at 252.50 yen compared with the Wednesday's close of 257.50 — down from 260.60 yen Tuesday — and moved in the 252.20-.80 range in early transactions.

The dollar fell sharply against most major currencies for the second consecutive day Wednesday in what analysts said was a combination of interest rate and international worries.

Gold — a traditional hedge in times of economic or political uncertainties — continued to gain in Europe but slipped a bit in New York after sharp gains earlier in the week.

TRADERS SAID ESCALATING tensions between the United States and Iran and border fighting between Iraq and Iran were behind gold's price jump this week and added to skittishness in the dollar markets.

But a New York dealer also pointed to a softening in U.S. interest rates and expectations that West Germany will soon increase its rates as other major reasons for the dollar's sharp decline.

He added that trading was "sporadic" and resulted in wide price spreads on dollar rates.

At one point during morning trading in Frankfurt, the dollar lost eight pfennings, the largest one-day movement since Nov. 1, 1978, when the dollar rose the same amount in response to President Carter's package of measures to support the American currency.

The West German Bundesbank, which was selling dollars for six weeks, bought heavily into dollars, possibly up to $200 million, Frankfurt dealers said. They called the central bank's move an action to support the American currency. The Bank of Italy sold $8.5 million out of $14.7 million officially traded.

Chrysler negotiates with state for $150 million Michigan loan

By MICKI MAYNARD

United Press International

State Department of Treasury and Chrysler officials huddled Wednesday in what was called the "final stages of very delicate discussions" on a $150 million Michigan loan.

Meanwhile, Treasurer Loren Monroe clarified remarks made the day before, saying the state aid is contingent on waiver by banks of claims on Chrysler's Trenton engine plant.

Monroe said he was not referring to separate negotiations between the troubled automaker and its creditors over loan waivers and deferrals valued at $650 million.

Other administration officials, however, indicated successful completion of those negotiations also is an important condition for the state loan.

CHRYSLER SAYS IT needs the Michigan money this month to meet day-to-day operating expenses.

The Michigan funds and waivers or deferral of interest on the $650 million are needed by the automaker to qualify for $1.2 billion in federal assistance.

At Tech Hifi It's Guaranteed.

At Tech Hifi, we offer you extra guarantees you can't get at most stores. Including our 7-Day Moneyback Guarantee (which lets you try your new components in your own home for a full week. If you're not satisfied, you can return them for a full refund), and our 3-Month Full-Credit Trade Guarantee (which lets you trade anything you've bought from us within 90 days for full credit towards anything else in our store). In addition, Tech Hifi gives you a 60-Day Defective Exchange, a One-Year Loudspeaker Trade-Up, and a 30-Day Lowest Price Guarantee. These guarantees don't cost extra. And you get them in writing, right on your sales slip.

This Week's Receiver Specials:

How can we afford to give guarantees this good? Because our components are so good. This week's featured $599 system is a prime example.

The key to this system's outstanding performance is a pair of 3-way Ohm L loudspeakers. High Fidelity magazine (4/78) says the Ohm L's "...overall sound is solid, yet transparent and detailed. Deep bass is tight and well controlled...Power handling and freedom from distortion are first class."

To drive the Ohm L's, there's an exciting new Vector Research 2500 receiver. It's so well-made, it comes with a 3-year parts and labor limited guarantee. The turntable is a precision, belt-drive Hitachi HT324, with automatic shutoff and a quality Audio-Technica AT-90E cartridge.

We invite you to play this system — or any other components that interest you — in a Tech Hifi sound room this week. We guarantee you'll like what you hear.
