AS IRANIAN, IRAQI FORCES EXCHANGE FIRE

U.S. allies demand hostages' release

By The Associated Press

Western European nations told their Tehran ambassadors Thursday to "demand" that Iran release the 50 U.S. Embassy hostages. The toughly worded declaration by the nine Common Market nations stopped short of joining in U.S.

sanctions against Iran, but it hinted that some action might be taken later.

In Tehran, meanwhile, the Moslem militants holding the embassy made a new death threat against their American prisoners, captive for 159 days.

The hostages will be "destroyed" if Iraq invades Iran, a militant identified only as "Habib" told NBC-TV in an interview.

"Habib" said in the interview that "by military intervention we mean if the American government directly intervenes in Iran or if its puppets in the region, like Egypt, Iraq and Israel, intervene in Iran."

The nine Common Market foreign ministers discussed the crisis Thursday in Lisbon, Portugal, and afterward issued a statement saying their ambassadors in Tehran would "demand" of Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr that the hostages be freed, and that he outline plans for their release and set a date for it.

The European ministers said their countries' policies toward Iran would be "frozen" until they received a response from Bani-Sadr, and they would then define their new positions.

Their statement called the Tehran hostage-holding "contrary to the basic principles of international society" and it "strongly deplored" Iran's disregard of U.N. Security Council resolutions calling for the hostages' release.

In a hint that they may be prepared to take action against Iran, they mentioned a January resolution in the Security Council that threatened economic sanctions. That resolution was supported by the West Europeans on the Council but vetoed by the Soviet Union.

In Tokyo, the Foreign Ministry said Japan would make no "hasty decisions" on whether to act against Iran.

Iranian and Iraqi forces, supported by helicopters, exchanged artillery and mortar fire across their troubled border Thursday. Tehran Radio reported. It said the Iranian command dispatched navy ships into the northern Persian Gulf to guard against "any aggression" from Iraq.

Iran's news agency reported that a bomb blast killed one person and wounded 20 in the southwestern port city of Abadan, near Iraq. It blamed the Iraqis.

The Baghdad government, calling on other Arab nations to rally behind it against Iran, denounced revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in bitter terms.

"This crazy, racist Khomeini is nothing but a turbaned shah," the official Iraqi News Agency said in an editorial.

THE GOVERNMENT-RUN Tehran Radio said 14,000 Iranians expelled from Iraq by the Baghdad government had poured across the border into the western Iranian province of Ilam, and that 11,000 more had arrived in Kermanshah province, just north of Ilam.

The Iran-Iraq showdown and the Tehran hostage crisis were linked Thursday by one of the Moslem militants holding 50 Americans at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

The militant told NBC-TV the hostages would be killed if Iraq, which he called a U.S. "puppet," invaded Iran.

Carter ready to take legal action to keep Olympic athletes home

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Carter said Thursday he is prepared to take legal action if necessary to prevent American athletes from participating in the Moscow Olympics this summer.

In a speech prepared for the American Society of Newspaper Editors convention in Washington, the president made it clear he does not consider the United States bound by a decision of the U.S. Olympic Committee, which meets this weekend to consider Carter's call for a boycott of the Summer Games.

Carter has demanded Americans boycott the Moscow Games to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The president also defended his policy in the Iranian crisis and said Iran's leaders lack "the cohesion and resolve" to end the long stalemate over the holding of American hostages.

Carter previously had told American athletes invited to the White House that the United States would not send a team to the Summer Games this year, but there have been suggestions that some athletes might seek a change in Olympic rules to permit them to participate as individuals or to compete without taking part in Olympic ceremonies.

But Carter made clear in his speech to the editors that no such alternative is acceptable.

"IF LEGAL ACTIONS are necessary to enforce the decision not to send a team to Moscow, I will take them," the president said.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said any administration action depends to some degree on what the International Olympic Committee, its U.S. component and the athletes themselves do. But he said the president contemplates an exercise of his executive authority, rather than going into court to seek to restrain American Olympians.

The government could revoke the athletes' passports or stamp them invalid for travel to the Soviet Union, but Powell indicated the administration is reluctant to use that power.

Michigan primary halted in court

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

Michigan's May 20 presidential primary encountered yet another stumbling block Thursday when Ingham County Circuit Judge Ray Hotchkiss issued an injunction blocking the election.

City and township clerks requested the action, claiming they would not be adequately reimbursed by the state for costs they incur while running the primary.

The ruling, however, will be appealed by the Michigan Attorney General's Office, which is already planning to go to the Court of Appeals early next week.

Hotchkiss, who four years ago handed down a similar decision that was later overruled by higher courts, said the costs for running the primary were too high.

TOTAL COSTS, which have been estimated between $3 and $3.8 million, include costs of printing, voting machinery preparation and election workers.

"Michigan is on the verge of total bankruptcy," Hotchkiss said. "There is no guarantee that the clerks will be reimbursed."

Hotchkiss also criticized the primary system itself, claiming the process is unnecessary.

"It elects no one, it nominates no one. To spend $3.8 million is ludicrous, it's just not good judgment," he said.

Robert Ward, who represented the state in court, said the Michigan Court of Appeals will probably assume jurisdiction over the case, meaning the issue will never actually come to trial under Hotchkiss.

WARD SAID the clerks would "most definitely" be reimbursed for their costs.

He noted that about $2.9 million of the governor's budget is earmarked for reimbursing cities and townships for costs of the primary.

He added, however, those funds could not be used to pay public employees or to pay for equipment that could be used again.

Robert Robinson, executive director for Michigan Townships Association, one of the groups opposed to the primary, said testimony indicated cities and townships had not been properly reimbursed in the last presidential primary.

The decision Thursday was one of a series of stumbling blocks the Michigan primary has encountered.

The National Democratic Party has said it will not accept a delegation chosen in a Michigan primary. The primary allows voters to choose the candidate of their choice, regardless of the voters' party affiliation.

THE PARTY HAS opted to hold a caucus, in which only registered Democrats may participate.

Zolton Ferency, MSU associate professor of criminal justice, has filed a suit in attempt to force the Democratic party to hold an open primary.

Ferency said he was unsure how Hotchkiss' decision would affect his case because he had not had time to read the actual decision.

Ferency said that if Hotchkiss' decision is upheld, there are two alternatives to the primary system of electing delegates for the national convention.

One of those options would include having precinct delegates electing state and national convention delegates. The second would be a caucus system for both parties.

State Sen. William Sederburg, R-East Lansing, said he was surprised by the judge's decision.

"In my opinion, there is nothing to indicate the state won't pay what they are supposed to," he said.

Moon followers stir up controversy

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

A yellow banner emblazoned with an orange sunburst complemented heavy brass sound of CARP's band in the Union Ballroom this week. The band's affiliation with the Rev. Sun Myung Moon was also clearly visible, in large black letters.

CARP, Collegiate Association for the Research of Principles, presented the concert in an attempt to recruit members for its student organization at MSU. CARP's members follow the teachings of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon and are members of the Unification Church.

The association was registered as a student organization in March after several unsuccessful attempts throughout the past few years.

The concert was presented by a mobile CARP unit that is touring 33 campuses in the United States. In its effort to spur support for Moon's followers, the group has met with some resistance.

THE GROUP WAS recently pelted with eggs during visits to Berkeley, Calif., and the University of Wisconsin. CARP often faces critics who claim the group uses deceptive practices to lure potential members before indoctrinating them to the teachings of Moon.

Dan Fefferman, leader of the mobile CARP unit, and Dave Burgess, president of the MSU chapter of CARP, acknowledge that "we have made mistakes in the past," but they do not plan on recruiting members in the same manner now.

A national CARP seminar this January in Florida, however, generated a great deal of publicity when Alachua County deputies were called in to remove seven college students who claimed they did not want to remain in a camp run by the Unification Church.

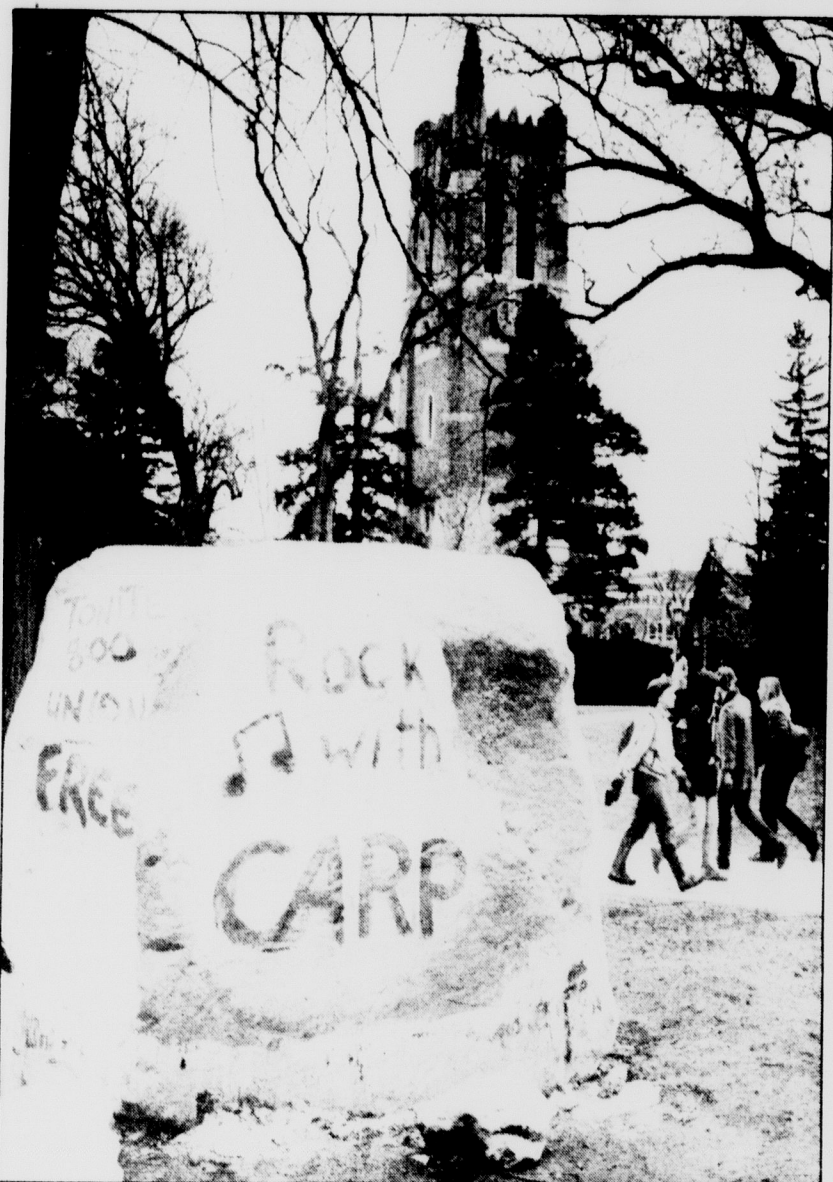

More than 250 college students from the East Coast and Midwest paid $20 apiece after reading posters that promised "Sun, Fun, and People," with the main theme centering around "New Leadership for a New Age."

THE SEMINAR WAS held in central Florida at an overcrowded YMCA camp. YMCA officials were reportedly upset because they were not told CARP was a recruiting group for the Unification Church.

The largest amount of publicity was generated by a camper, however, who held a press conference after she left and said Moonies had tried to brainwash her. "That incident got out of hand," Fefferman said of the Florida seminar. "When her mother called the sheriff's department, well it was in a redneck part of Florida and they brought in about eight squad cars and everything but a tank."

"From the coverage, they (other people) probably thought it was some kind of Jonestown thing."

CARP is suing the camper for her statements because "we can't let people get away with these things," Fefferman said.

Five CARP members were arrested Monday evening for painting a message, promoting their Tuesday night concert, on The Rock.

"WE ARE NOT a personality cult because we follow principles," he added. "We have had to overemphasize our relations with the church in order to avoid criticism."

The principles followed by CARP, and taught by Moon, were listed with the student affairs division of MSU when the group filed for student organization status.

These principles are listed as:
• — revitalization of a higher sense of patriotism on college campuses;
• — re-establish the founding spirit of Judeo-Christianity;
• — formulation of a new system of ethics based upon Unification principle, the writings of Sun Myung Moon; and
• — critique of Marxist-Leninism and a counterproposal.

"We emphasized they (CARP) had to be up front and let people know they were associated with the Rev. Moon and the Unification Church," said Louis Hekius, associate dean and director of student governance. "We have a very real concern about maintaining the integrity of a student organization and therefore must know the group is made up of primarily students."

CARP'S INITIAL ATTEMPTS at gaining student organization status were thwarted because they could not prove the organization was comprised of mostly students.

The MSU association now consists of seven students and three non-students, Burgess said.

When the Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan, members of CARP protested along the perimeter of MSU because they were not a registered student organization and were not allowed on campus.

"They had really wanted to have that on campus," said Lana Dart, assistant director of student governance.

Moving the protest on campus would have "severely damaged" CARP's chances of obtaining student organization status, Hekius added.

THE GROUP HAS not encountered much resistance since it registered or during the concert held last week, Dart said.

She added that most people who have come to her have expressed concern about whether MSU was aware of or what the group stands.

"Our guidelines specifically say registration will not be denied on the grounds of goals, beliefs and attitudes of a group," Dart said.

Although a small number of students and non-students attended the CARP concert in the Union, some members of the audience came because they were opposed to CARP's principles and wanted to see how the group would present itself.

John Mitman, MSU Episcopalian chaplain, was one of the people not satisfied with the way advertisements presented the CARP concert in the Union Ballroom.

MITMAN STOOD ON the steps of the Union and distributed flyers to those coming inside which called attention to the group's affiliation with Moon.

Patrick Rogers, an MSU alumnus, said he had a friend involved with the Unification Church and objected to the way CARP presented itself.

"I think they must be extremely up front," said Rogers. "This is a dead-end trap. Sure they can get you off drugs, but they replace it with something worse."

Rogers said he cannot see his friend without making an appointment for a limited amount of time — his friend then must be accompanied by another church member.

"The allegation itself is not true," Burgess said. "We don't control anybody's mind and body and we don't try to; that's impossible."

BURGESS AND FEFFERMAN see no conflict of interest and openly state the Unification Church is wealthy and involved in business operations for profit.

A congressional committee on International Relations filed a report in October 1978 claiming Moon is the center of "what is essentially one worldwide organization. In the diversity of its functions and basic organizational structure it now resembles a multinational corporation, involved in manufacturing, international trade, defense contracting, finance and other business activities," the report states.

The report also quotes Moon as saying, "Once we can control two or three universities, then we will be on the way to controlling the certification for the major professions in the United States."

The May 10, 1974, edition of Hope News, which is affiliated with the Unification Church, also stated that "Father (Moon) wants to mobilize 20 to 30 of the Korean professors to influence American academia, both professors and students. Because of this, Father stressed the importance of building up CARP to serve as a foundation for their

Legal details plague Anderson committee

By JAMES KATES
State News Staff Writer

The coordinator of a student group supporting presidential candidate John Anderson admitted Thursday that unexpected financial success had resulted in group operations being in violation of federal election laws.

But Ed Turanchik, president of Students for Anderson, an independent political committee, also said the group had operated in "ignorance" of the law and was already taking steps toward compliance.

The group failed to register with the Federal Election Commission and directly supported Anderson's candidacy while failing to comply with laws requiring disavowal of ties with the national campaign.

Turanchik said the group had contacted the FEC and an attorney with the Anderson campaign in Washington, D.C., both of whom informed the group of how to comply with the law.

"We've straightened it out," Turanchik said. "We're in compliance. The fact is that we didn't know all the rules and we were operating with best intentions."

SHARON SNYDER, an assistant press officer for the FEC in Washington, said independent groups are required to register only if they anticipate total expenditures of more than $1,000.

Turanchik said the group had not anticipated raising that much money, but will register with the commission now that it is apparent its earnings will exceed that amount.

Because of election laws governing advocacy by independent groups, the organization will be required to change its name, probably to "Students for an Alternative in '80," Turanchik added. The group will also be required to insert disclaimers in its locally prepared literature disavowing connection with or endorsement from the national campaign.

Turanchik said the changes are "technicalities" mandated by recently amended laws including a specification that political committees not be allowed to use the name of a national candidate to identify an independent group.

Legal oversights by the group first surfaced in March, when Howard Kalogian, co-coordinator of campus activities for George Bush, asserted that the Anderson group was violating election laws by selling T-shirts for local fundraising purposes without reporting the sales figures to the FEC.

KALOOGIAN SAID HE considered filing a complaint with the commission at the time, but that the action was discouraged by Colleen Engler, state campaign director for the George Bush for President Committee.

"I did consider filing a complaint, but Engler said that would be pretty low — kind of like what Reagan did to Bush in New Hampshire," Kalogian said. "I don't want to send anyone to jail."

Turanchik said the Anderson group had planned from the beginning to file a report of campaign expenditures with the FEC. The group's confusion stemmed from questions about the need for immediate registration, he said.

"Howard's being picky," Turanchik said. "He's not an attorney. And it's dangerous to take your legal advice from a rival political campaign."

The Anderson group, with about 350 student volunteers, was organized in February with encouragement from the Anderson for President Committee in Washington. The group is independent from the national committee and raises its funds locally, Turanchik said.

Peru to admit Cubans

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Five South American countries agreed Thursday to take in some of the thousands of Cubans who flocked into the Peruvian embassy in Havana seeking help to leave the country.

"It can't be done in five minutes, but we are trying to do it as quickly and efficiently as possible," Ecuador's Foreign Minister Alfredo Pareja said after an overnight emergency meeting of the Andean Council.

Peruvian Foreign Minister Arturo Garcia y Garcia said Peru was ready to receive 1,000 persons. He said he could not comment on how many the other council members or other countries would take.

In a joint statement, the council said that Cuba was responsible for what had happened but that it was the obligation of the rest of the world to help the refugees.

Koepchne backs Kennedy

SWIFTWATER, Pa. (AP) — Gwendolyn Koepchne, whose daughter Mary Jo died in Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's sunken car at Chappaquiddick Island, favors the Massachusetts Democrat in the 1980 presidential race, her husband said Thursday. He said he was undecided.

In a rare breach of the couple's guarded privacy, Koepchne said through her husband, Joseph, that she thinks President Carter is too conservative.

Koepchne does not blame Kennedy for her only child's death on July 18, 1969, her husband said.

"But I will say this. I won't be voting for the man who is president at the present time," he said.

Train derailment kills 2

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — Two persons were killed and several others injured Wednesday when a pair of Western Pacific freight trains derailed in South Hayward, causing an explosion and fire that sent smoke and flames billowing over the city's industrial area, authorities said.

The accident occurred when the lead train, 67 cars long, went into emergency braking on an overpass, according to Western Pacific spokesperson Jack Burke. The trains were coupled at the time of the crash.

As the train slowed, said Burke, it buckled at the point where it was attached to the second train, seven cars long.

Israelis encounter no terrorists

METULLA, Israel (AP) — Israeli troops who thrust into southern Lebanon patrolled the mountainous border region Thursday for possible Palestinian terrorists planning raids into Israel, a U.N. spokesperson said. Lebanon requested a U.N. Security Council session to discuss the "explosive situation" caused by the Israeli presence.

Israeli military sources in Metulla, Israel's northernmost town, defended the two-day-old Israeli incursion as strictly a defense move aimed at keeping Palestinian terrorists from crossing the Lebanese-Israeli border to attack Jewish settlements as they did Monday, killing three Israelis, including a young boy. The five raiders were also killed.

In Metulla, Israeli military sources who asked not to be identified by name said Israeli forces in Lebanon had not encountered terrorists squads or U.N. forces and there had been no firing.

Islanders return to home

ENEWETAK ATOLL (AP) — After three decades in exile on a faraway island, the people of Enewetak — some of them singing to the tune of "Lead Kindly Light" — began returning this week to their ancestral homeland once contaminated by nuclear bombs.

This group of islands was subjected to 43 nuclear tests between 1948 and 1958. But on Tuesday the United States formally declared it had completed a radiological cleanup, and in a simple ceremony returned Enewetak to its people.

Iroij Binton Abraham, a chief among the Enewetakese, said Wednesday his people were aware that there had been warnings of dangers of radiation, but that they considered that inconsequential in comparison to being able to return home after 33 years.

Troopers patrol Georgia town

WRIGHTSVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Schools reopened in this racially divided community Thursday, as the governor vowed to keep state troopers on hand and the Justice Department said the outbreak of violence came as "no surprise."

Black leaders, meanwhile, obtained a permit for an afternoon march and said they would return to the streets repeatedly until their demands for better jobs and political opportunities were met.

Georgia Gov. George Busbee said he had directed the 30 troopers on hand to patrol the school areas Thursday at the request of parents. Classes had been called off Wednesday after some Blacks complained that armed White adults were appearing the schools.

During the night Wednesday, the 30 troopers helped maintain order. They dispersed a crowd of some 75 Whites in front of the courthouse after dark and later moved into the Black community, where they tore down makeshift barricades erected by a group of armed Blacks and seized a number of weapons.

work they they arrive.

"Father said that college campuses are a major battlefield, and if we win there we will definitely win America."

It is extremely difficult to determine the actual wealth of the Unification Church, although Steve Hassan, of Ex-Members Against Moon, estimated its wealth at possibly $300 million to $500 million.

"The church's wealth is growing," Burgess said. "People have a feeling, however, that the church is worth large amounts of money and therefore it is Moon's money. That it not true."

National fundraising teams still raise funds, Burgess said, and MSU CARP will raise funds "for their own expenses."

In the meantime CARP will present its principles to college students and provide information to those who express interest in the teachings of Moon, Burgess said.

Economics dept. signs grievance

By LOUISE WHALL
State News Staff Writer

An overwhelming majority of economics department faculty members have signed a formal grievance against Provost Clarence L. Winder for his actions in the reinstatement of John R. Hildebrand.

Nineteen of the 21 eligible tenured faculty members filed the grievance against the provost for "his violation of established University policy in unilaterally assigning Hildebrand" in the economics department for teaching and research. The department is also grieving because the provost assigned specific courses — namely Economics 200 and 201.

Byron Brown, chairperson of the economics department and C. Patric "Lash" Larowe, Faculty Grievance Official, were not eligible to sign the grievance. Other members of the department who would have been eligible are on leave.

The department took the action because the provost has violated the policy governing appointments as stated in the Faculty Handbook, the Bylaws for Academic Governance and the provost's own memorandum, one faculty member said.

THE FACULTY HANDBOOK states the responsible administrator should make the judgment on non-tenured faculty with respect to professional competence, academic potential and departmental needs.

The Bylaws for Academic Governance give the chairperson of a department responsibility for educational and personnel matters in his or her jurisdiction.

Winder distributed a memo in January which stated that he will only endorse appointment recommendations in instances where the primary recommending unit is an academic department, school or college.

The department requested in the grievance that the provost rescind the assignment of Hildebrand to the department and rescind the assignment to teach particular courses.

ACCORDING TO THE Interim Faculty Grievance Procedure, the FGO must first try to settle the grievance without a formal hearing. Larowe said he plans to send a copy of the grievance to Winder and schedule a meeting in an attempt to solve it informally.

If settlement cannot be reached informally a hearing panel of seven faculty members will be drawn at random. The provost's office has the final authority over the decision unless an appeal is filed.

Winder made the assignment after a federal judge ordered MSU to reinstate Hildebrand following almost 12 years of litigation over his dismissal in 1969.

mass transit projects.

The Transportation Department was forced to drastically cut planned highway projects for the May through September period, dealing a serious blow to the state's already slumping construction industry.

The cutback was due to a $131 million reduction in anticipated federal aid resulting from President Carter's economic belt-tightening.

Federal mass transit and rail programs are financed through a separate fund, however, and were not affected by the cuts.

The Transportation Department, at Gov. William G. Milliken's urging, said it will speed up construction of intermodal terminals, railroad track upgrading, purchase of buses and construction of bus maintenance facilities while money is still available.

"We will push continuation of projects now underway and begin work on the rest by the end of the year," Transportation director John Woodford said.

More than $99 million in federal funds already are appropriated for public transit and rail projects. The state will kick in another $102 million.

These projects include:

- $118 million for large and small bus systems, $86 million of it from the federal government.
- $15.8 million for transit development projects for commuter systems in the Detroit area, $12.6 million of its federal money.
- $56 million, all of it state money, for rail freight projects including the controversial tug barge system.
- $12.3 million for bus stations and terminals, all of it state money.

IN ORDER TO solve the problem, Brickley said, the government is going to have to make some difficult decisions.

He mentioned that Michigan will be losing about $100 million in revenue sharing funds because of President Carter's plan to balance the federal budget, and said many state welfare and unemployment programs are already underfunded.

"All of the news indicates the pinch is taking effect," he said.

The state must prioritize needs when making budget cuts, Brickley said.

Higher education must compete with welfare programs for funding he said.

"WE'RE PUTTING HIGHER education next to a check that feeds somebody," he added.

"Budget cutting is not fun — it is painful." In the past, higher education and law enforcement usually received high appropriations, but today those amounts are diminishing.

Brickley said the current problems have been complicated by Proposition B-type proposals.

"Our friend Mr. Tisch is back at it again," Brickley said, noting that Robert Tisch is proposing a tax cut similar to the one which was defeated by Michigan voters in 1978.

"We will be saved from that Draconian measure by its extremes," Brickley added. "We cannot talk about cutting the revenues of the state."

WHILE THE SITUATION for higher education already looks bleak, it could get worse because of a "quirk" in the Headlee Tax Limitation Amendment, Brickley said.

Under the amendment, which was approved by Michigan voters in 1978, funds

AUTONOMY DEBATE LINGERS

Alumni board to meet

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

The question of autonomy for the MSU Alumni Association may be solved Saturday — much to the relief of many people involved — when the Executive Board of the association meets.

The main issue involved in the controversy is whether the MSU president should have the right to fire and hire the president of the alumni association, which is incorporated separately from the University.

The Executive Board will meet at 10 a.m. Saturday at the University Club.

"This whole thing has taken a tremendous amount of energy and we would like to get about our business which is alumni relations," said William Westcott, chairperson of the Alumni Association. "I hope it is all over Saturday."

Although he would not predict the outcome of Saturday's meeting, Westcott said he believes the association has "a mandate from our membership to preserve our corporate entity."

MSU ALUMNI ASSOCIATION President Jack Kinney said he was not sure if the meeting would solve all the issues, but it at least may indicate "a course of direction."

However, Kinney added that he "certainly hopes it solves the problem for the good of the University."

Trustee Carole Lick, a Kalamazoo Democrat and member of the alumni association's Executive Board, agreed but added, "there will be some discussion which ever way it goes."

The 17-member Executive Board which will grapple with the question consists of 11 representatives from the alumni association and six representatives from the University. The University representatives include MSU President Cecil Mackey, the provost, two faculty-staff members and two members of the Board of Trustees.

HAVING SIX UNIVERSITY representatives on the Executive Board was an agreement negotiated by former MSU President

Edgar L. Harden before he recommended, in June 1979, that the Board of Trustees allow the Alumni Association to incorporate.

The trustees agreed, and on July 1, 1979, MSU became the ninth Big Ten University to have an independent alumni association. According to alumni association President Jack Kinney, an independent alumni association can handle various functions — particularly those involving money — better than an alumni association which is part of a university.

"The purpose of any alumni association is to serve the institution," Mackey has said. "I've never known anything that the alumni association did in that context that required independence."

MACKEY WAS NOT available for comment Thursday.

However, shortly after Mackey arrived at MSU, he said he would not have supported an independent alumni association.

The Board of Trustees then failed to donate $80,000 to the alumni association as Harden had originally recommended.

Finally in late February, Mackey called Kinney into his office and asked for his resignation. Kinney refused.

During Mackey's presidency at Texas Tech University, the long-time director of the Texas Tech Ex-Students Association, Wayne James, resigned under what several people called "unhappy" circumstances.

HOWEVER, JAMES SAID "I had been there for 21 years and I felt it was time to do something else."

"I have no further comment with regard to Dr. Mackey," he added.

Bill Dean, who replaced James as president of the Ex-Students Association, said although his relationship with Mackey had been good, "he made no bones about the fact that he would like the association under the umbrella of the university and control the association."

Mackey has said the alumni associations at the three institutions where he has been president all had different systems and could not be compared.

Alumni association gets support in controversy over autonomy

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

MSU alumni from around the country have shown support for Jack Kinney and the MSU Alumni Association with dozens of letters and phone calls to alumni association officials.

"It's very heartwarming," said Kinney, president of the Alumni Association. "Until you get into the situation, you don't realize how many people are in your corner."

"A lot of people have come out of the woodwork on this," he added.

The controversy began in late February, when MSU President Cecil Mackey asked for Kinney's resignation. Mackey said he thought the University should have a degree of control over alumni association matters.

Ronald Karle, editor of the MSU Alumni Association Magazine, said "every single one" of the dozens of letters received supported the Alumni Association.

"IN MY 10 years as editor, I've never seen the alumnus so mobilized about anything as they have this," Karle said.

William Westcott chairperson of the alumni association, said he was "delighted" with the reaction.

"I can't eat my dinner without my telephone ringing," Westcott said. "I can't help but think they want us to carry on the way we have."

Typical of the response if a telegram received from the MSU Alumni Club of Southern California which said: "Dear Jack (Kinney), The MSU Southern California Board of Directors held a special meeting tonight. We have voted to support you 100 percent in regards to your situation with Dr. Mackey."

Bill Baker, an alumni of both MSU and Texas Tech University wrote, "If Mackey wins his battle and Jack Kinney is unseated, I want nothing to do with the alumni association."

"At Tech (Texas Tech), Mackey was successful in running off Wayne James, the long time Ex-Students Association director, and replacing him with his hand picked stooge, so I'm not surprised at his following the same path at State."

ANOTHER LETTER CAME from MSU alum Robert Forman, who is also the director of the University of Michigan's alumni association.

"I believe that an independent and viable Michigan State University Alumni Association should be viewed as one of the institution's greatest assets," Forman wrote.

"I'm hoping . . . the Board will remain supportive of the independent concept and of the strong leadership role that's been traditionally provided by Jack Kinney."

MSU alumnus and sportscaster for WJIM-TV-6 Timothy Stoudt wrote, "since last September I have noticed a continued deterioration in the University's morale. This includes faculty, staff, followers and alumni. The current president of this school has obviously attempted to change basic foundations of this school for his own private purposes."

"I have lived in this community for 25 years and I tell you it is vital that MSU suffer no more controversy, no more consternation," Stoudt wrote.

Higher education funds to fall; appropriations cut next year

By KY OWEN
State News Staff Writer

In a somber message which has become familiar in past weeks, Lt. Gov. James H. Brickley said Thursday higher education appropriations for next year will be cut.

"Higher education did all right (in 1979-80)," Brickley told a meeting of the MSU Administrative-Professional Association. "This time there is no level that won't be touched."

"Can we keep appropriations at the current inflation rate? The answer is no," he said.

Brickley told the group the state is now in "the age of limits," and will have to cut back on spending.

"We've been excessive in many regards," he said, noting the current 18 percent inflation rate. "And we're paying the price for that."

enforcement usually received high appropriations, but today those amounts are diminishing.

Brickley said the current problems have been complicated by Proposition B-type proposals.

"Our friend Mr. Tisch is back at it again," Brickley said, noting that Robert Tisch is proposing a tax cut similar to the one which was defeated by Michigan voters in 1978.

"We will be saved from that Draconian measure by its extremes," Brickley added. "We cannot talk about cutting the revenues of the state."

WHILE THE SITUATION for higher education already looks bleak, it could get worse because of a "quirk" in the Headlee Tax Limitation Amendment, Brickley said.

Dooley's may face license suspension for seven alleged liquor law violations

By MIKE CHAUDHURI
State News Staff Writer

Dooley's, 131 Albert St., faces fines and/or a possible suspension of its liquor license, after seven cases of alleged liquor law violations were heard against it Thursday.

Several witnesses testified during the two-hour hearing that they had been served liquor by Dooley's employees, even though they were under 21 years of age.

Liquor Control Commissioner Edward Wiest said after the hearing that although he has not made up his mind regarding Dooley's penalties, he would not rule out the possibility of suspending its license.

"A lot of facts go into a decision like this," he said.

WIEST SAID HE might fine Dooley's rather than suspend its license, but added that he would not revoke its license.

He noted these were the first charges brought against Dooley's in its seven years of operation in East Lansing.

The cases heard against Dooley's included 10 charges of selling liquor to persons under the age of 21, and one charge of refusing to cooperate with law enforcement officers.

Dooley's can be fined up to $300 per charge, Wiest said.

The refusal-to-cooperate charge was made after a Dooley's bartender refused to give his home address to an East Lansing police officer, according to the officer's testimony.

Wiest said he expected to make a decision within 10 days.

GARY FOLTZ, AN operating partner of Michigan Systems of East Lansing, owner of Dooley's, admitted several of the charges were valid.

"In some of the charges we were flat in violation of the law," he said. "Our people didn't do their job."

But Foltz complained that the East Lansing Police Department does not arrest under-age drinkers found in local bars, because of instruction from East Lansing City Attorney Dennis McGinty.

"Why should we have to enforce it any more than they do?" he asked.

Foltz emphasized he does not want to see stricter enforcement of the law by police, but rather more understanding from the city because of Dooley's "difficult position."

HE SAID DOOLEY'S cannot strictly enforce the law by itself and ensure that every under-age person in the bar does not drink alcohol.

He added Dooley's has to admit 18 to 20-year-olds into the bar because of an interpretation of the law by Michigan's Civil Rights Commission.

"We can't kid ourselves and say we're going to end all under-age drinking. The problem is created through what I believe is an unworkable law," he said.

East Lansing Police Chief Stephen Naert acknowledged that the police force does not arrest under-age drinkers in bars.

He said the force could go into Dooley's on certain nights, with "200 under-age drinkers there, and issue 200 tickets," which he said would not be feasible.

Lt. Robert Brown said the police "try to get at the nucleus of the problem — at the source."

Carter's sad but inevitable move

Perhaps the saddest part of the Iran crisis is the fact that President Carter's decision to cut trade and diplomatic ties with the country was undertaken in absence of any foreseeable option. Patience and restraint, the two factors that compelled the administration to resist hasty moves, had indeed worn thin, too thin to inaugurate more passivity and a policy of hope.

Ayatollah Khomeini virtually provoked Carter's action, and then went on to laud it, as he ruled the hostages would not be transferred to the hands of the government but would remain inside the U.S. Embassy compound. His decision prolonged the hostages' fate, magnified the split in Iran's revolutionary government and gave Carter no choice but to cease any further appeasement.

How long would the hostages have remained captive if Carter had decided to withhold economic sanctions and maintain ties? Judging from Khomeini's past actions, their vigil would have had no end in sight. The hostages have become an effective political tool as well as a trump card for Khomeini's regime. The revolutionary council has used the hostages to force the world to meet their demands one by one. From approved visitations to the arrival of the U.N. Inquiry Commission, Iran has made daring efforts to have its grievances redressed. Regardless of whether the United States apologized, returned the shah's wealth or made a worldwide announcement of its past crimes against Iran, by now it is obvious that the revolutionary council has no intention of letting the hostages go. Although a solution may lie in a decision to return the deposed shah for trial, it is equally obvious that it is one demand that neither the United States nor most of the world will meet.

Iranian President Bani-Sadr's initial success with the council offered a glimmer of hope that the hostages' release might be obtained without meeting the demands of the council's religious factions. However, Bani-Sadr's limited authority has caught him in the Iranian quagmire. How does the supposed head of state in a country foment any action if another body is not only keeping tabs on him, but is diametrically opposed to his solutions? The administration seems to have based its wait-and-see attitude precisely on the possibility of a favorable outcome to this governmental tug of war. Khomeini's most recent announcement however, has dashed any hopes of an expeditious solution, and reinforced suspicions that Bani-Sadr is not really running Iran at all.

The United States is thus forced to cope with Khomeini, instead of the moderately sympathetic government that seemed to be emerging from Bani-Sadr's election. Iranian sympathizers as well as members of the Iranian government have admitted to splits between Bani-Sadr and the Khomeini ideology. There is little debate that taking on Khomeini is quite different from taking on the man who kneels at his side, urging him to allow transfer of the hostages. As sincere as Bani-Sadr might be, he offers the United States no consolation. His power is and always has been limited, a paradox in his title of president that has never been more evident than now.

Iran has failed to produce a solution after asking the United States for more than five months to help seek an agreement through diplomatic channels. Carter has repeatedly balked at sanctions on the assumption that the hostages would go free. A few months ago, the idea of waiting until April for their release seemed outrageous; we cooperated anyway. Now that deadline has passed, and with it any assurance that the hostages will be released.

Cutting ties and imposing sanctions appears to be the last step in the impasse. As for the former, severing relations with belligerent nations is a standard procedure in American foreign policy, though it has not been used since 1961 when America ceased diplomacy with Cuba. Economic sanctions as an arm-twisting measure will be more symbolic than substantive, but a necessary measure nonetheless. Carter, of course, has gambled this decision on the assumption that U.S. allies will respond accordingly. Their support so far has been strong in Soviet denunciations, moderate on the boycott issue and incorrigible in America's attempts to convince them to boycott Iranian oil. Strong backing in favor of sanctions is a necessity. Without allied support, they will put no more pressure on Iran than the trade restrictions the United States has already imposed.

Inevitably, Carter's moves against Iran will be judged according to how the administration backs them up. Sanctions are an easy way of sidestepping outright conflict, but will undoubtedly prolong the crisis even more.

If we are to solve the crisis while pressuring Iran, a new strategy is needed. Patience and restraint have backfired on us, and have so far watered down any influence we have used in securing the hostages' release. A show of America's willingness to act might just deter Iran from thinking it has all the time in the world to end the crisis, which is as much theirs as it is ours.

'LASH' LARROWE

Lash for the Alumni Board?

I'm at my usual spot in the Union, card table set up, petitions laid out all nice and neat, this alumnus goes by, doesn't even notice me. Then he does a double take, comes on over.

"Aren't you Dr. Larrowe?" he asks. "I didn't recognize you at first, what with that green-and-white cape with the pom-pom, your green blazer there with 'Michigan State' on the pocket, those snazzy white shoes you got on."

"In my day, you always wore scuzzy jeans with patches on 'em, Hawaiian shirts and dirty tennies. Don't tell me you're running for Congress again."

"I was goin' to run against Bob Carr this time," I says, "but he's getting married and needs the bread, so I backed out."

"You always did stick up for the little man," he says admiringly. "I don't know if you remember me, Lash, I had your labor class in 1955. Got a 4-point, but I never was able to figure out what you were driving at. What're you doing here, with the table and all?"

"When Joe Kearney split for ASU, I explains, "he left a vacancy on the board of the alumni association, OK. These petitions here are to get me appointed to fill Joe's seat. Want to sign one?"

"Before I do," he holds back, "What's your position on the fight Mackey's picked with Jack Kinney?"

"I'm a Mackey man all the way," I tell him.

"I think Jack's been doin' a real fine job, myself," he says. "How come your pal Mackey's out to get him?"

"Mackey wants every facet of the 'U' to speak with one voice," I says. "That's why he ordered we faculty to check in with him before we talk to the Legislature."

"We alums have always been real loyal boosters for Michigan State," he spatters. "What's Mackey's hang-up about our association?"

"It isn't your loyalty he's worryin' about," I explains. "It's your judgment. What if Kinney and your association came out in support of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan? President Mackey knows that'd be real bad for the 'U's image, you better believe he's got to head that off."

"That's insane that could happen, Lash," he objects. "You know that yourself."

"Maybe so," I says. "But if you don't control the leadership of an organization, anything can happen. Prexy can't take that chance."

"Your friend Mackey demands everybody marches in step, right?" he says accusingly. "Didn't he get into South African Krugerrands for his own private account when the trustees' policy is not to buy securities of companies doing business down there?"

"Only a few of us know it," I tells him smugly, "but before he brought those Krugerrands, he had the place where they produce 'em checked out real careful."

"The natives who mine the gold they make 'em out of have one of the strongest unions down there. Good working conditions, great fringes. He's got some cute pictures of 'em singin' an' dancin' during their tea breaks."

"Let's get back to Mackey's attack on our alumni association," he says. "I can tell you, Lash, the alums are saddened and demoralized by what's been happening on the campus. Especially when Mackey rejected President Hannah's compromise proposal to resolve the dispute between himself and the association."

"President Mackey has always believed no compromise is possible," I says sternly, "when you know what you're doing is right. I'm with him all the way on that, yessir!"

"How can you say that, Lash?" he demands. "John Hannah built this University from a cow college to the great university it is now. We alums revere him as the George Washington of MSU, you know. I'm sure he wouldn't propose anything that isn't in the best interest of Michigan State."

"I'll admit Dr. Hannah made his contribution in the old days," I says. "What's he done for us lately?"

"That's a disgusting thing to say, Lash," he seethes. "I sure hope the trustees don't see eye to eye with you on that. They're the last hope we alums have."

"You're out of luck then, buster," I chuckles. "Those turkeys are stooges for whoever's in the president's office. You saw what they did when Harden was in there. He wanted 'em to let the alumni association be an independent corporation, they fell into line, right?"

"Mackey wants to control it, they flip-flop right back, support his move to waste Kinney."

"If that's the way you folks are running Michigan State nowadays," he snorts, "I'm sending my kids to Ann Arbor. I'm sure not signing your old petition, either!"

"That's jake with me, mister," I barks, grabbing my petition out of his hand. "If you can't accept the way we do things democratically these days at the 'U', we don't need you. That goes for your kids, too!"

Protect the bog

As co-chairpersons of a campus-wide environmental group, we wish to voice support for the MSU administration in its attempt to protect the Bear Lake Bog area from the actions of a sand miner. The Bear Lake Bog area on the southeast corner of MSU property is certainly one of, if not the most unique and treasured natural features on campus. It is also used as a research and teaching area. Formed by glacial activity, it is a very sensitive and fragile area, and deserves top priority and protection from MSU.

The problem is that the owner of a sand mine adjacent to the Bear Lake tract, Edward F. Soloman, wishes to remove 200,000 cubic yards of sand for a project in south Lansing. The Campus Parks and Planning Office and other scientists at MSU fear the mining could rupture the layer of marl which seals the lake and bog. If this happens, the lake and bog would be drained and quite possibly destroyed by a series of spontaneous combustion fires.

MSU should seek and use all legal remedies available, including the Michigan

Environmental Protection Act, if necessary, to protect the bog. This University is well known for many of its outstanding academic programs, including the departments of natural resources. If we are to uphold our reputation for high quality natural resource programs, we must demonstrate this knowledge in the management of our own natural areas.

A better boycott?

I agree with your editorial opposing an Olympic boycott (March 31). The people who would have this nation's athletes sit at home as a method of showing the world our disapproval of Soviet aggression are neglecting the lesson learned at the 1936 Olympics. The highlight of that game was the stunning performance of Jesse Owens, and the annihilation of Hitler's ideas of racial supremacy. If F.D.R. had ordered the athletes to stay home as a means of expressing displeasure with German politics, we would never have heard of Jesse Owens.

If the United States wants to take definitive action against the Soviets, why doesn't Carter simply stop all exports to the Soviet Union? It seems that once again our president chooses to tiptoe around the issue, and in the process causes more grief at home than abroad. On the April 6 showing of 60 Minutes, Dan Rather was shown in Afghanistan talking to the people there, trying to determine what was going on. The people there are fighting to the best of their ability to withstand the Soviet aggression, frequently using outdated weapons to do it. I kept waiting for Rather to explain to them, to tell them "Don't worry, everything is going to be all-right, the United States is going to boycott the Olympics..."

Bill opposition was misinforming

While my organization is not directly involved with state investment legislation, it was with great disconcert that I read your April 4 editorial arguing against state divestiture from U.S. corporations investing in South Africa. In summary, you say that MSU's divestment from such stocks was prudent, but that a similar effort by the State of Michigan would set "a dangerous precedent."

It is quite ironic that the first organized public opposition to this bill should come from a student newspaper... from MSU of all places! But what is even more disheartening is the misinformation you supply about House Bills 4831, 4838 and 5446. In the first place, the state of Michigan already has the power to dictate how public funds are to be invested. During the past few years the state has voluntarily withdrawn its investments from many state corporations and has reinvested in corporations, bonds, which have no business in Michigan. Consequently, present Michigan investment policies are oriented to using tax moneys from state residents to invest in more profitable institutions residing outside the state.

Secondly, these bills introduced by Rep. Perry Bullard would not forbid Michigan banks from making loans to South Africa; rather, the bill prevents the state treasurer from depositing surplus funds in financial institutions which provide loans to South Africa.

Thirdly, your argument that these bills mix politics with investments is short sighted, at best. Quite clearly, present investments already mix with politics; nowhere is this more clear than in our late supporting and rewarding corporations which enforce racial segregation in South Africa. The Bullard bills do not seek to eliminate all profits from South Africa, but only to disassociate Michigan from South Africa's manner of generating profits from forced labor. If there is a dangerous precedent being set in this issue, it is your inexcusable misinforming the public of the facts.

'Eight-a-Day' policy relaxed

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Staff Writer

Pop Entertainment has officially changed its admissions policy for the upcoming "Eight-A-Day For The Eighties" show to allow for unrestricted re-admission, director Carl Bressler has announced.

While it was previously announced that Pop Entertainment might have to charge people to re-enter if they left at any time in order to satisfy University requirements, it was generally felt that it would be an inconvenience to require concert-goers to remain inside for the duration of the all-day festival. The new policy would allow ticket-holders to leave and re-enter at will upon presentation of proof of admission (ticket stub or hand stamp).

Assistant director Glenn Movish said the policy will be to let ticket-holders come and go as they please. There will be picnic tables and bleachers outside the fieldhouse for those who wish to sit out during any of the acts, as well as concessions selling many varieties of food, T-shirt, frisbees, etc. People are also free to bring their own lunches if they desire.

"What we're trying to do here is create a situation that's essentially an outdoor show indoors," Movish added, citing that Pop Entertainment will not be producing an outdoor concert this spring. "The doors will be open, the wind will be blowing, and people can wander in and out all day."

Bressler and Movish both stressed that people planning to attend the festival should get their tickets as soon as possible, citing that response to the Festival will determine what (or even if) concerts will be held next year and beyond. So far, they noted, ticket sales have been fairly slow, even though the May 3 concert is only a few weeks away.

"The concert is an attempt to break away from the mold of previous shows we've had at the University and offer people something new and different," Movish pointed out. "We've been faced with all sorts of pressure to not put on this kind of festival, and we need people to support this and prove that they really DON'T want to see Pablo Cruise year after year."

"If this show isn't a big success," Bressler added, "music at MSU could go back to the Dark Ages. We would not be allowed to take risks — we would have to put on concerts by outside promoters offering only the most established bands."

The line-up for the "Eight-A-Day For The Eighties" show is indeed quite a departure from the usual MSU concert offerings. Headlining the show will be the Ramones, whose six albums of stripped-down rock 'n' roll have had an immeasurable impact on rock music in the last few years. Also on the bill will be Stiff recording artist Wreckless Eric, who has just released his first American album after earning quite a reputation for his three-chord pop/rock in his native England; M-SEX, who will be bringing their electronic new wave music from Australia for their first-ever American concert; Carolyn Mas, who has been widely hailed for her Springsteen-like concert appearances; and Canada's Battered Wives, who thankfully have recently taken to calling themselves the Wives.

The show will also feature L.A.'s Textones, a relatively new band who so impressed Tom Petty recently that he gave them a new song to record; The L'oyds, who are featured in a soon-to-be-released Jon Peters movie called Die Laughing; and Detroit's own Gary Fabulous and the Black Slack, who electrified Dooley's over spring break with their awesome funk/new wave fusion music (the dual guitar players in the Black Slack are so incredibly hot that some wits have dubbed them "The new Parlia-Funkadelic-Experience").

Tickets for the "Eight-A-Day For The Eighties" extravaganza are already on sale for $10 apiece (which a little bit of math translates to a mere $1.25 per band; for reserved seats. Tickets are available at the Union Ticket Office, WhereHouse Records II and III, and Sounds & Diversions in Lansing. Tickets are also available by mail order to the Union ticket office.

Is Love only a three-letter word?

I do not believe in "love at first sight." This phrase is nothing more than an imperishable myth. But I do know that "sexual attraction at first sight" happens all the time, and is, in fact, the basis for a great many interpersonal relationships — many of which lead to marriage.

Now the great tragedy is not that we so often confuse love with sex (although this is a common tragedy), but that we fail to recognize the spiritual bankruptcy inherent in any relationship based on such an attraction. For physical attraction, though persistent for days, weeks and months, becomes a waning cancer once we realize that we secretly and inexorably despise the very person to whom we are attracted. When this happens we are trapped, seemingly forever, in a perpetual tug between one's mind and one's genitals — and our only recourse is to flee.

Love has nothing to do with genitalia. A simple, straightforward statement most people will readily acknowledge on the level of the mind but fail (again and again!) to match on the level of action. It is equally true that love has nothing to do with one's heart. Anyone who subscribes to the phrase "my heart is overflowing with love" need only view the procedures in an open-heart surgery to exorcise oneself of this notion.

It is equally true that love has nothing to do with one's heart. Anyone who subscribes to the phrase "my heart is overflowing with love" need only view the procedures in open-heart surgery to exorcise oneself of this notion.

From my experience I have found that couples who revel endlessly in each other's company, that is, who display a delightful yet poised outlook on each other and the world, were indifferent to each other upon their initial meeting, and may, in fact, have actually hated each other, due to ignorance, misunderstanding or both.

The reasons for this paradox have to do with chance and a willingness to learn: should they ever meet again (and usually they do), things can only get better. From an initial point of indifference or hostility, the scenario is set for growth, exploration, and change. Sexual attraction, a dormant issue at the start, emerges only after facades are slowly dropped, and when each partner is willing to give, not gifts of love, but one's self in love. With few exceptions then, these relationships have always struck me as being mature and fulfilling to each partner, where respect for one another is earned not on the basis of one's status, physical traits or educational level, but through the preservation of one's own individuality vis-a-vis the relationship. Nothing lost, something gained.

Politics Of Culture

The phrase "getting all worked up," used frequently when describing a range of emotions, is not entirely inaccurate when describing love. For love, like hate, requires hard work. Anyone who doubts this statement need only look into the eyes of any racist American, sexist American, or religious fanatic to understand the raw energy needed to contrive to hate another person, or oneself. "I never met a man I didn't like," said Will Rogers. Mr. Rogers chose to channel his energies elsewhere.

But work in general rarely gives one immediate rewards, and this is especially true of the work required for love: love is an ambiguous, abstract goal, of whose attainment one can never be assured. Love can never be arrived at without pain, struggle, and a plethora of mistakes. And it remains true that most people are unwilling to pay these prices — often for good reasons.

It takes a long, long time to fall in love, and if it is a genuine love, it always gets better. Most young people today know nothing about love and everything about sex, while older people, our parents and grandparents, know a little about each (although modesty prevents them from divulging this "know-how"). Thus with age comes balance, moderation and a tempering of the polarities of love and sex . . . and these are polarities, for the poets have shown that true love never needed to be consummated. So then . . . who needs true love?

Beal presents Fellini's film masterpiece

There's a lot of popular films on campus this weekend, so why not avoid the crowds and see something REALLY good — go see Fellini's acclaimed Amarcord (presented by Beal). It's fantastic!

After several surreal, wildly exotic films that established Fellini as a visual craftsman, distinct from other neo-realists (like his one-time co-worker Wertmuller or De Sica), Fellini returns to the old simplistic style of filmmaking, like in his I Vitelloni. Once again, Fellini returns to the small colorful hometown setting where his movie weaves throughout the people's lives, the passionate explosive Italian tempers, the covert adolescent initiations and realizations, the creeping perversion of Mussolini, and the complacency of Roman youthful summers. Amarcord is a memory film — the title translates to "I remember" — and establishes a vagueness and familiarity that is the essence of Fellini's art; he is unrivaled in this ability.

Amarcord does make occasional trips into Fellini's unpreventable surrealism, such as in a fantastic sequence where the town goes boating at sunset or in the tales of the grand but deserted hotel. The characters themselves are caricatures, stereotypes — exaggerated personalities, moving in choreography, and operating in a distorted impression like that of a youthful memory.

This slightly more than two-hour film is a Fellini masterpiece, combining the best of his "common people" realism and the warmest of his visual eccentricities. It so effortlessly conveys the passion and the baseness of growing up in his emotional and often crude childhood environment. No one should miss it!

THIS WEEKEND

If anything else, it's a great film weekend on campus — Fellini, Herzog, Rocky, and even something from the National Lampoon. Something for everybody.

CONCERT DEPT. The Lansing Symphony Orchestra Cabaret/Pops is presenting an afternoon of Gershwin at the Lansing Civic Center starting at 2 p.m. Sunday. Tickets are $10 for adults (tickets include box lunch) for the main floor, $5 for the first balcony, and $3 for the general admission balcony. Tickets are available through the Arts Box Office.

Janesville, Wis.'s own duo Sweetapple is coming to Ten Pound Fiddle's coffeehouse in Williams Hall Cafeteria at 8 this evening.

Be-boppers Richie Cole and the Johnny Griffin Quartet are being imported to Ann Arbor by Eclipse Jazz, at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Michigan Theatre. Tickets are at East Lansing's Discount Records.

The music department presents two foreign musicians free of charge in the Music Building Auditorium this Sunday. Cameroonian musician Francis Bebey will perform 10 works drawing from his African heritage at 4 p.m. Following at 6 p.m. is oboist Jiri Tancibudek from Australia, who will be accompanied by MSU faculty member pianist Edith Kraft.

THEATRE DEPT. The Collected Works of Billy the Kid is playing at the BoarsHead, and despite the mixed response, it is a fine production although the play itself might offend some people with its graphicness, violence and nudity. Call 484-7805 for tickets and info.

In MSU's own Toybox Theatre, you can see Michigan folklore enacted by some very versatile puppets. Admission is $1.50. Phone 355-0148 for information on this Saturday and Sunday show in the Arena Theatre. There are several showtimes.

KRESGE AND ABRAMS DEPT. Abrams is still continuing Cosmic Fireworks (as they will through June 1). Call 355-4672 for information. This is also the last weekend for the MSU Faculty Art exhibit in Kresge Art Gallery. It's open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today and 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

MOVIES DEPT. What's new in town? Irwin Allen's When Time Ran Out!!!! Paul Newman! Jacqueline Bisset! William Holden! It's action! It's adventure! It's crap! It's at the Michigan Theatre.

There are some GOOOOOO films on campus this weekend. Beal is presenting Amarcord with The Clowns in a Fellini double feature tonight and Saturday (see promo elsewhere in this section). Amarcord is at 9:15 p.m. only. The Clowns is at 7:30 and 11 p.m. Showplace is 128 Natural Science Bldg. tonight, and 100 Engineering Bldg. Saturday. Admission is $2.

Classic films brings the staggering Acquire The Wrath of God, which some consider Herzog's best film. It's the Heart of Darkness-like journey into the mythical land of El Dorado — a story of pride and obsession and humanity (7:15 and 9:30 p.m. in 109 Anthony Hall tonight). Gene Hackman's an existential cop in Night Moves (7:30 and 9:30 p.m. Saturday in 109 Anthony Hall; 8 p.m. Sunday in 336 Union). Classic films are $1.50, or $1 with RHA pass.

tonight in 100 Engineering Bldg.

Ah yes, the pornos. Candy Goes to Hollywood stars the inimitable Candy who just CAN'T seem to stay out of everyone's beds. It's in B-106 Wells at 7:30, 9 and 10:30 p.m. and midnight tonight and Saturday. Admission is $3.50, and $2.50 for students.

Acquire The Wrath Of God, which some consider Herzog's best film, is on campus tonight.

RHA pulls out the big guns with films surely EVERYONE has seen before: Rocky, Animal House, and Silver Streak. I can see the lines forming. Call 355-0313 for times and places.

Our friends at the India Club Committee want to inform you of its next presentation: Harmonium, a Bengali film by one of the leading Indian directors, Tapan Sinha. The film is an incisive portrait of Indian life featuring some exquisite original Indian melodies. It's at 7

MAKE ME LAUGH DEPT. Check out the Comedy Castle tonight, Saturday and Sunday and see Leonard Barr, the popular Tonight Show comedian who says something nasty about everything. Comedy Castle is located in Moon's, 225 M.A.C. Ave. Tickets can be found at Discount Records, WhereHouse Records, Paramount News Center, and Recordland.

PAC to present Woody's comedy

Play it Again, Sam. Woody Allen's classic tale of love and neurosis, will be dramatized by MSU's Performing Arts Company in Fairchild Theater at 8:15 p.m. April 15 through 19.

Allan Felix is a shy, wimpy, recently divorced writer who yearns to be the next Hum-Bogart when it comes to attracting women. Throughout the play, Felix bumbles through a number of close encounters and blind dates, relying on advice from Bogey himself, who convinces him that "when you're not coming on phony, you can make it with dames." Unfortunately, the "dame" Felix successfully seduces is Linda Christie, wife of his best friend, Dick.

Play it Again, Sam opened in

New York City 11 years ago after successful tours in Washington, D.C., and Baltimore. It marked Woody Allen's debut as a stage actor and included performances by Diane Keaton and Tony Roberts as the Christies.

The trio went on to repeat their roles in the 1972 film version of the play. In its New York City debut, the critics were generally impressed. One reviewer described it as "a handsome and deserved tribute to Humphrey Bogart."

Director Frank Rutledge describes Play it Again, Sam as "a funny play, challenging for the actors, with a number of cameo roles for women."

MSU Sophomore Don Weingust will portray Allan Felix.

Jane C. Salutz and Lawrence Baisch star as the Christies, with Gregg Schulte as Bogey. The cast also includes Cynthia Zeitz, Shelley Kalmus, Marcia Pihl, Shawn Dale, Susan Dear, Mary Rademaker, Estelle Goda and Linda Goetz.

Tickets are on sale at the PAC box office in Fairchild Theater, 355-0148. Prices are $3.50 for Tuesday through Thursday performances, $4 on Friday and Saturday.

Husband and wife play recitals Sunday

Husband and wife pianists Ralph and Albertine Votapek will be playing in separate recitals this weekend in the Lansing area. He will be the featured soloist at the Lansing Symphony Orchestra's Gershwin spectacular, which will include his performance of Rhapsody in Blue. The recital is at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Lansing Civic Center.

Mrs. Votapek will be performing with MSU's Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Dennis Burk. She will play Back's Concerto for Harpsichord in D minor on the program with Elgar's Serenade for String and Orchestra and Bartok's Divertimento for Strings. The free concert is at 8:15 p.m. Sunday in the Kellogg Auditorium.

PLAY HOME-AND-HOME SERIES

Wolverines ahead for Spartan batters

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

In each of the last two seasons, the Big Ten baseball championship has come down to the final pair of games between MSU and the University of Michigan.

In 1978, Michigan clinched the title on the final weekend. Last season, it was the Spartans who won their first Big Ten title since 1971 after a thrilling 8-5 win at home.

It is a big early to predict a similar finish in this year's conference title chase, but the Big Ten season does get underway beginning Saturday as defending champion MSU will take on the Wolverines in a home-and-home pair of contests Saturday and Sunday.

MSU is currently 5-15 overall, while the Wolverines are 11-9. The Spartans' Thursday home double-header with Aquinas College was canceled due to wet grounds, and may be rescheduled.

Both games will be nine-inning matchups, with Saturday's action slated for Ann Arbor, and then the two teams coming to Kobs Field at 1 p.m. Sunday.

The Wolverines have named their starting pitchers for the weekend, but are unsure who will pitch on which day. Junior right hander Mark Clinton and freshman right hander Steve Ontiveros will be the Michigan hurlers, with Clinton the owner of a 2-2 won-loss mark and a 2.40 earned run average. Ontiveros is 2-4 with a 2.81 ERA, including 44 strikeouts in 32 innings.

THE WOLVERINES ARE hitting .279 as a team and are led by senior shortstop George Foussianes with a .415 average. Foussianes was the all-league shortstop a year ago and led the conference in hitting. His three home runs and 17 RBIs lead the team this year.

Sophomore right fielder Jim Paciorek is hitting at a .309 clip with two homers and 16 RBIs, and he and Foussianes are major concerns of MSU head coach Danny Litwhiler.

"Those two guys can really break up a ball game," Litwhiler said. "Foussianes is a good hitter and we hope we can pitch him like he should be pitched and stay away from his power."

FOR THE SPARTANS, senior left fielder Kenny Robinson is the offensive leader in nearly every category. His .365 batting average and five home runs are tops, and defensively, the Ypsilanti native has committed just one error.

Junior Mark Russ is hitting at a .346 clip, with sophomore shortstop Al Dankovich right behind the Lansing right fielder with a .341 mark.

MSU will start senior Jay Strother on Saturday and senior Brian Wolcott in the Sunday contest. Strother boasts a 1-3 mark with a 3.11 ERA, while Wolcott is 1-2 with a 5.90 ERA.

"You could have the worst team in the world and get fired up enough to beat Michigan," Litwhiler said about the age-old rivalry. "This year it'll probably be a toss-up."

Laxers try to extend perfect league record

The MSU lacrosse team will try to keep its Midwest Lacrosse Association record perfect when league foe Ashland (Ohio) College invades Spartan Stadium Saturday for a 2 p.m. matchup.

The laxers had a 3-2 overall record before a Thursday match scheduled at Hope College. MSU is 1-0 in the MLA.

The Ashland game is an important one for the Spartans, and co-coach Nevin Kanner foresees quite a battle.

"Ashland is not only one of the top teams in the league, it is also one of the best teams we will play this season," Kanner said. "In order to win, we're going to have to play a good solid 60 minutes of intense ball."

With the way the laxers have been playing as of late, though, the Spartans might be better off than Kanner imagines.

MSU's all-time leading scorer, Kevin Willits, is off to another great start this season with 19 goals and six assists in just four games. Those sort of statistics are rather expected out of Willits, however, and it is the play of the rest of the team that has made the Spartans a genuine contender for the Midwest crown.

For example, senior co-captain Mark Pinto tallied four times against Oberlin last weekend and added two more goals in MSU's 10-5 win over Albion; sophomore Greg Helgmo scored twice against Oberlin and had two assists at Albion; and senior Jim Goldrick had a pair of goals against Albion, as did freshman Art Barry.

"Our attackers and mid-fielders are really coming along now, and their scoring reflects the confidence they're gaining," Kanner said.

"Even if Willits is forced to miss a game because of the pinched nerve in his hip which flares up now and again, the rest of the team believes that they, too, have the ability to put the ball in the net and win some games."

Injuries hurt netmen

By ED BRADLEY
State News Sports Writer

The MSU men's tennis team is undefeated, untied and unhealthy.

Injuries to key personnel have been foremost on head coach Stan Droba's mind while preparing for home matches with the universities of Minnesota and Iowa today and Saturday, respectively.

The Gophers come into East Lansing for a 3 p.m. contest, while tomorrow's dual with the Hawkeyes is slated for 1 p.m. Both will be played at the Racquet Club of Lansing, unless weather conditions permit outdoor play at the Varsity Courts.

The Spartans defeated the University of Illinois and Purdue University last weekend in home events to open their regular season.

DROBA'S LATEST CASUALTY is No. 4 singles player Jeff Wickman, whose bad leg has kept him on crutches much of the week.

"He's determined to play this weekend, but he hasn't walked since Monday," Droba said of his sophomore standout.

Wickman joins Francisco Amaya (wrist) and Mike Klemm (back) on the team's injured list. It was not known whether any or all of the injured would be available for service this weekend. (continued on page 9)

Golfers off to Ohio State

Columbus, Ohio, and the famed Ohio State University Scarlet Golf Course will set the stage beginning today for the Sixth Annual OSU Invitational.

The MSU women's golf team is among the schools listed in the 17-team field, and with play running through Sunday, the event has been expanded to 54 holes.

MSU head coach Mary Fossum left with her team early Thursday morning after the completion of intrasquad playoffs conducted this week.

Fossum took seven members of the MSU links crew with her to Columbus, and will play five as a team, with two others scheduled to compete as individuals.

Senior Ann Atwood, sophomore Lisa Speaker and freshmen Sid Wells, Lisa Brown and Allison Sellers will comprise the starting unit, with sophomores Nina Spatafora and Beth Sierra completing the traveling squad.

Host Ohio State and the University of Georgia rank as favorites in the weekend tourney, although Fossum is confident her Spartans can finish as high as third.

New champions in both team and individual categories are assured in this year's classic as 1979 champion University of North Carolina will not return to defend its team title and medalist Sherry Turner of Furman University has graduated.

Following the OSU Invitational, MSU heads for Huntington, W. Va., and the Marshall Invitational April 18 and 19.

Riders unite

The newly-formed MSU Equestrian Club will hold an organizational meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in 133 Akers Hall. Anyone interested is welcome to attend. For additional information call Anahid Avakian at 353-3195.

Tournament next for Spartan softball squad

The Spartan softball team will travel to Normal, Ill., this weekend to compete in the fourth annual Redbird Invitational at Illinois State University.

The 16-team tournament, expanded from last year's 12-team field, consists of pool play in which the entrants are divided into pools of four teams.

Each team plays one game against every other team in its pool with the top two teams from each pool advancing to a single-game elimination playoff for the championship.

The Spartans are scheduled to meet Eastern Illinois University and Ohio State University today and will wrap up pool play Saturday against Texas A&M University.

The MSU squad is 7-6 on the season, but has had five of its last six games rained out.

MSU has not finished in the top four in either of its previous appearances in the Redbird Invitational.

Tickets available

Tickets are still available for tonight's MSU Basketball Bust at Long's Convention Center in Lansing. The cost is $25 per person. Dinner will begin at 7.

On basketball recruiting

Jud Heathcote knows MSU basketball observers could be happier.

He knows Tim McCormick, the state's top high school player, has decided to east his lot with that institution 60 miles southeast of here via Interstate 96 and U.S. 23.

He knows Vern Fleming, one of New York City's best backcourtmen, has announced he's heading for the Peach State and its University of Georgia.

He knows his team must improve upon its lackluster 12-15 record and ninth-place Big Ten finish of last season.

HEATHCOTE ALSO KNOWS that getting the manpower for such a turnaround is not easy. But any lack of success, he says, is not from lack of trying.

"Everybody says we're not doing well. Maybe we're not doing a good job of getting prospects, but we're doing a good job of recruiting," the MSU coach told The State News this week.

Okay, Jud. But what about the guys you do have?

The Spartans did sign two in-state players to national letters of intent Wednesday, the first day high school seniors could make such a binding commitment.

THE NEW SIGNEES are Ben Tower, a 6-8 forward from Saranac, and Randy Morrison, a 6-2 guard from Olivet. While both compiled excellent statistics as preps — Morrison led the state in scoring with a 34.2 average and Tower scored at a 28-point clip — their small-school backgrounds made them anathema to most Big Ten recruiters.

"I don't look at the level a kid plays at as a limitation," Heathcote said. "It's true that some schools wouldn't even look at them (Tower and Morrison)."

Heathcote said the pair was most heavily recruited by Mid-American Conference schools (Western Michigan and Central Michigan universities, the University of Toledo). He said Washington State and Stanford universities also were after Tower.

But two signees do not a recruiting year make, and the MSU brass knows its task is far from over.

A BIG DISAPPOINTMENT to MSU boosters was the failure to land the 6-10 McCormick, one of the nation's top pivotmen. However, Heathcote was not surprised with that cager's decision to go Maize and Blue.

"Am I disappointed? Yes. Extremely disappointed? No. If we had thought all year we were No. 1 on (McCormick's) list and he had said he was going elsewhere, then we'd have gone out and killed ourselves.

"But we were never at the level with him where we were considered 'in the hunt.' Even when the top three schools were announced (just before McCormick made his final decision a week ago), only Michigan, Ohio State and North Carolina were in the running."

HEATHCOTE COMPARED MSU's status with McCormick to that of Fleming, a 6-5 guard out of New York City and another "blue-chip" All-America prospect.

"We've been No. 1 on Vern Fleming's list for a long time," the coach said Monday. "But now it's decision time and he's not ready. That's not a good sign."

Evidently it wasn't, as Georgia beckoned.

It has also been reported MSU has its eyes on two other New York-area prospects, 6-foot-4 Roosevelt Chapman and 6-foot-7 Ron Williams.

Another Michigan blue-chipper, Detroit Catholic Central's Barry Spencer, does not have MSU high on his list, though through no fault of its basketball program. Spencer, who would like to enter architectural engineering, had Stanford and Duke universities and the University of Virginia among his top three.

"People have to remember the competition for the top kids is tremendous," said Heathcote. "There are so few big men, not enough to go around. There might be five quality centers like McCormick in the country, with 250 Division I schools after them."

The question is, who will play for MSU next year? The outlook at the moment is not good. The 1979 national champion could be 1981's Big Ten cellar dweller. Time will tell.

Netters host Iowa, Minnesota

The MSU women's tennis team hosts two opponents this weekend, as Big Ten foes from the universities of Iowa and Minnesota come to East Lansing for round-robin play.

The Spartans take on Minnesota in a dual match at 3 p.m. today then watch from the sidelines as the Gophers meet Iowa Saturday at 1 p.m.

Then, MSU and the Hawkeyes complete the schedule with a 9 a.m. meeting Sunday.

les tendon.

"THE TRAINER EXPECTS they will be able to play, though we may have to play it by ear with Jennifer," said Rutz.

MSU will still be short a starter for Sunday's match. No.

3 player Cindy Bogdonas has personal commitments and must leave after today's contest.

Yearlings Monty Gettys and Jill Grinberg are slated for the Nos. 1 and 2 singles positions, respectively. Freshmen Sue Kim, Tewes, Pierce and Diane Dunn complete the singles set-up, in that order.

Gettys and Grinberg, Tewes and Pierce, and Dunn and Kim are the doubles lineup due to Bogdonas' absence.

Ruggers win

The MSU rugby team won twice last weekend, beating the Windsor Canadian-Anglos 58-0 and 18-6 on the East Complex Fields.

IM NOTES

Due to specific day scheduling problems, co-rec one pitch softball will not be played. Any persons or teams may be considered for regular co-rec slow-pitch softball play when team scheduling slots open. Call Sally Belloli or Lynne Olson at 355-4710 for scheduling priority.

The deadlines for fraternity, individual and co-rec and women's doubles tennis is noon today in 201 IM Sports-West.

The deadline for residence hall and independent tennis is noon Thursday, April 24 in 201 West IM.

Tennis team ailing

If any of the injured play like Matt Sandler did last week, Drobac will breathe easier.

Sandler, an Essexville junior, fought off the flu bug and emerged victorious in both his singles contests and one of two doubles matches against Illinois and Purdue. He has recovered and is slated for his familiar No. 2 singles position.

Freshman Steve Yorimoto will play No. 1, with sophomore Scott King at No. 3.

THE REST OF the lineup is unclear. Should Wickman not play at No. 4, Dino Demare will move up from No. 5 and John LaParl from No. 6 to No.

5. Steve Heitzner, a member of last year's team recently restored to active status, will also be available.

Yorimoto and King, Sandler and Wickman (or LaParl) and Demare and LaParl (or Klemm) will play doubles for the Spartans.

Drobac sees big challenges from this weekend's foes, both of which placed higher than MSU at last year's Big Ten championships.

"Minnesota is picked to place third in the league this year, and Iowa should also be right up there," Drobac said. "I'm impressed with our play thus far, but we'll see just how tough we are very soon."

SHAH'S ASYLUM CAUSES PROBLEMS

Egyptian Moslems angry at Sadat

By ELIAS ANTAR
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt — When President Anwar Sadat granted asylum to the deposed shah of Iran, he gave his own opponents more ammunition. But he does not appear to have created any new enemies.

The critics in Egypt and elsewhere who have demanded the shah leave Egypt have been attacking Sadat and his policies for years. The presence here of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, who was forced out of Iran by a fundamentalist Islamic revolution more than a year ago, has given them one more argument for attacking the government.

The most notable recent opposition has been from young Islamic fundamentalists who have seized upon the shah's presence to take their views into the open. In one case they clashed violently with police in the town of Assiut, 235 miles south of Cairo.

The fundamentalists demand that the government abandon Egypt's secular system and institute the Koran, the Moslem holy book, as the law of the land. That would require such an upheaval of established procedure and behavior that it would amount to a call for overthrow of the government.

THEY WANT AN end to Egypt's peace treaty with Israel, and an end to Sadat's pro-Western course — including efforts to shift the economy from rigid state control to free enterprise.

Helmi Gazzar, a 25-year-old student who calls himself the "prince of princes" of all the Moslem fundamentalists in Egypt, recently told reporters that Egypt's fundamentalist movement had not been influenced by the Islamic revival in Iran.

The new student demonstrations have raised the question of whether the religious zealots receive support — and if so how much — from Arab nations opposed to Sadat because of the treaty with Israel. Although the fundamentalists' numbers appear to be growing, they are still a minority among Egyptians in general, and even among students.

Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Syria or Kuwait have cut off economic assistance to Egypt, but none had any particular quarrel with the shah when he was in power. They have been silent on the shah's presence here, and have maintained reasonably good relations with the Iranian revolutionaries, who took over in February 1979.

Iraq, bitterly opposed to peace with Israel, is now occupied in open confrontation with the Tehran regime in a dispute over ownership of strategic Persian gulf islands, and armies are on the alert on both sides of the border.

IRAN, ANGERED BY Egypt's aid to the ousted monarch, seized on the Assiut clash here and a later Moslem rally to call on the people of Egypt to rise and overthrow their president. Most Egyptians appear to have ignored the exhortation.

The shah, who underwent surgery at a military hospital recently, doesn't appear to be an issue to most Egyptians. The state-controlled media have aroused some favorable public feeling by reminding Egyptians that the shah helped them when Egypt needed oil and cash during and after the 1973 war with Israel.

Many Egyptians regard Sadat's help for the shah as the right thing to do. Newspapers have hinted that the shah is dying of cancer. The shah has been fighting cancer for years, and during his recent surgery here it was discovered the disease had spread to his liver. Doctors said they were confident they could control the cancer with drugs.

The Moslem right is by far the most potentially dangerous element for Sadat. It can, with appeals to religious sentiments, inflammate crowds, even if only temporarily.

It has taunted Sadat with cries of "pharaoh" and "sultan." Even though Sadat is the most openly devout leader Egypt has had in this century, Gazzar said the president was leading Egypt "far from God."

Sadat calls on Israel to recognize Arab rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Claiming the Mideast peace process is in danger, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat urged Israel Thursday to accept Arab sovereignty in East Jerusalem and over the West Bank of the Jordan River.

Recognizing Arab rights in these territories "is the only sure way to peace and harmonious existence," Sadat said in a speech to the national Press Club.

He called on the Israeli government to invite him to address the Knesset in Jerusalem "and put all the facts before them."

Sadat's tough line followed talks here with President Carter. The Egyptian leader said they had reached "agreement on certain steps" toward Palestinian self-determination.

While he did not provide any details, Sadat said an autonomy plan that has eluded negotiators for more than 10 months could be worked out "in hours, not days," if Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin comes to an understanding with him and Carter.

Begin is due in Washington for talks with Carter next week. The visit is expected to accelerate negotiations over the future of the 1.2 million Palestinian Arabs who live in Israeli-held territory.

"Reaching agreement on transitional arrangements should not be a problem," Sadat said.

In fact, he said, Israel should have agreed to Palestinian administration of the West Bank as a "gesture" in response to his visit to Jerusalem in late 1977, an overture which led to last year's peace treaty between Egypt and Israel.

Specifically, Sadat insisted that Israel end its military and civil authority over the West Bank, lift all restrictions on Palestinian inhabitants, and free political prisoners.

Palestinian self-rule is no threat to Israel and its security, Sadat said. On the contrary, he said, it is the only avenue to peace in the Middle East.

Sadat's far-reaching proposals for Jerusalem would keep the city undivided for municipal functions and services.

An employee of the vending machine company probably left the machine unlocked, police said.

City Council to consider appointment of negotiator

By MATT PERRY
State News Staff Writer

The appointment of Stephen Kintz as Lansing's chief labor negotiator — to go along with his present position as personnel director — was placed on Monday's City Council agenda at a council Committee of the Whole meeting Thursday.

Kintz, whose appointment as personnel director is the subject of a lawsuit filed in Circuit Court by a former Lansing Charter Commission member, was nominated for the position by Mayor Gerald Graves Monday.

Kintz was appointed personnel director by Graves March 20 when a council resolution amendment requiring a master's degree and six years experience in the personnel field was omitted by a mistake in the clerk's office. Kintz had not legally been qualified for the position until the discrepancy arose.

A temporary restraining order filed by Richard Holmes, editor and business manager of Lansing Labor News, that would have prevented Kintz from taking office was rejected on March 25. Circuit Court Judge Ray Hotchkiss denied the motion on the grounds that it would have been detrimental for the city to be without a personnel director because five union contracts are coming up for deliberation.

HOLMES SAID HE has filed for a formal hearing, which he expects to be held

"anywhere from six weeks to six months from now."

Council members questioned Kintz on his qualifications for the job as labor negotiator, a job traditionally held in conjunction with the personnel director position.

Kintz cited his four-year experience as Lansing's deputy personnel director and his participation in 16 contract deliberations over that period as qualifications.

Kintz said he also acted as head negotiator for the city of Flint for six months when the chief labor negotiator's position was vacated. He participated in nine contracts overall in his Flint job, he added.

QUESTIONS REGARDING BOTH Kintz' experience and his affirmative action policy were expressed by citizens at the April 7 City Council meeting.

Kintz said that while a number of charges have been made about the city, all have been disproved or dropped by the Equal Opportunity Commission and the Civil Rights Commission.

"I think the record reflects hiring has improved in hiring minorities and women," Kintz said. "This shows up in the human relations report."

Kintz said he had "just this past week" hired a woman as personnel assistant who will help screen job applicants.

4.4 ON RICHTER SCALE

Quake shakes Mt. St. Helens

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP)

— Another large earthquake shook Mount St. Helens on Thursday, and a scientist said some kind of change in earthquake activity on the volcano was anticipated.

The quake occurred at 6:19 a.m. and registered 4.4 on the Richter scale, said Craig Weaver, U.S. Geological Survey scientist at the University of Washington in Seattle.

"We expect to see some change in quake activity before a change in eruptions — either a decrease or increase," he said, adding the mountain seemed to be in a "steady state" of earthquake activity.

There were no reports of ash eruptions on Thursday morning, said a U.S. Forest Service spokesman in Vancouver, about 50 miles south of the volcano.

"WE'RE GETTING SET- TLED down for a long watch," he said. "The last time it did this more than 120 years ago it lasted 25 years."

The 9,677-foot volcano in southwestern Washington — which began erupting two weeks ago — was shaken by a new series of tremors on Wednesday. Authorities said the quakes occurred so close together at one point that they formed a blur on seismographs.

While low clouds blocked any view of the volcano's growing summit crater, two scientists said they believed the mountain was ripe for expanded lengthy eruptions.

Dr. Richard Waitt, a U.S. Geological Survey geologist, said the mountain has progressed from "casual venting" of steam to eruptions lasting an hour to more, to the lengthy eruption recorded Tuesday.

If the mountain changes signals again, it would be logical to assume it might switch to continual, round-the-clock eruptions, he said Wednesday.

Steve Malone, a University of Washington seismologist, called the period of continuous quake activity "the most significant seismic change seen" during the last few days.

HE SAID IT was the most significant event since the cessation of "harmonic tremors" on Sunday. Geologists had said the harmonic tremors, a rhythmic type of seismic activity, could foreshadow a lava eruption.

Since significant earthquake activity began on the peak on March 20, seismographs have recorded more than 100 quakes registering more than 4.0 on the Richter scale, including three Wednesday, said Norm Anderson, a U.S. Forest Service spokesman.

Despite the predictions of increased activity, the Forest Service planned to end its news briefings Thursday, said spokesman Jim Unterwagner.

N.Y. strike settlement in sight

NEW YORK (AP) — Hopes for settlement of a 10-day-old citywide bus and subway strike suddenly blossomed Thursday, based on reports of progress in peace talks, but business losses due to the walkout hit the $1 billion mark.

Brooklyn state Supreme Court Justice John Monteleone, who has been monitoring the illegal walkout, said there appeared to be a good possibility for a settlement no later than Friday.

The judge said he had talked to Walter Gellhorn, head of a three-man mediation panel seeking to bring the 35,000-member Transport Workers Union into accord with the Metropolitan Transportation Authority, operator of the nation's largest transit system. It serves 3.5 million riders daily.

"He said he was very hopeful and thinks that perhaps the talks may be culminated shortly," Monteleone said.

Earlier, Richard Ravitch, chairman of the MTA, said there had been some movement in negotiations with the TWU and added that "this means progress."

Monteleone put a renewed contempt hearing against the TWU on hold at the request of state Attorney General Robert Abrams, who said it might adversely affect the peace talks.

Earlier in the week, Monteleone fined the TWU and a companion union $1 million for ignoring a no-strike injunction.

Two Soviet cosmonauts board orbiting space lab

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Soviet cosmonauts on Thursday boarded the orbiting space station which they are to put into order and occupy for an indefinite period, Tass reported.

Soyuz 35 docked with Salyut 6, the space lab sent up by the Russians two and one-half years ago, about 26 hours after the cosmonauts were launched from the Baikonur complex in Central Asia, the Soviet news agency said. Also currently attached to the space lab is a supply ship sent up last month.

The cosmonauts, commander Leonid Popov and flight engineer Valery Ryumin, first checked the links and then entered the space lab, which was vacant for almost eight months, Soviet television reported.

The television showed Ryumin, who spent a record 175 days aboard the Salyut last year, floating into the lab. He said: "Everything has remained as we left it."

The Soviet media have given no indication how long the mission will last.

Trustee named in jail

MARBLE, Colo. (AP) — More than a year after Clayton Kuhles got fed up with the Army as just "advanced Boy Scouts" and returned home to be elected a town trustee, he is in jail while the Army prepares desertion charges.

Kuhles, 26, was sworn in as trustee of the Rocky Mountain community of 40 residents Tuesday night in his cell at the Garfield County Jail in Glenwood Springs.

Marble's town officials were close-mouthed about the situation.

"I don't have any comment until we talk to the town attorney," said Mayor David Beamis, who hung up on a reporter.

Town Marshal Ed Hogue, who received first word of the Army AWOL charge against Kuhles two days after his April 1 election victory when Kuhles was arrested at his home, was unavailable for comment. So was the town attorney.

But Trustee Oscar D. McCollum, who said he has known Kuhles "since he was a little boy," thinks, "The Army apparently got things fouled up and told him he was a deserter."

Lt. Joe Sullivan, information officer at Fort Carson, Colo., said Army records show Kuhles went absent without leave from C Company, 2nd Battalion, 34th Infantry Division at Fort Stewart, Ga., on Dec. 18, 1978.

Sullivan said Kuhles would be charged with desertion once returned to military custody.

He said military police hope to move Kuhles to Fort Carson by Monday.

Kuhles, a sawmill worker and welder, said in a telephone interview from the jail that he joined the Army in early summer 1978 because he thought he would be educated and trained.

"But it was advanced Boy Scouts at best," he told the Denver Post.

He said he told his commanding officer and others how he felt about the Army and they did nothing about it.

"If there was anyone who didn't know about it, they must not have been listening," Kuhles said. "I told everybody my feelings, including my commanding officer. Nobody did anything to help me, so I put on my civilian gear, got my wallet and walked out."

Former OPEC president calls for 'prudence' in oil pricing decisions

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer

DOHA, Qatar — A prominent Arab oil minister urged the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on Thursday to avoid sharp oil-price hikes, which he said would increase world inflation and hurt the economies of Arab nations.

Sheik Abdul Aziz Bin Khalifa Al-Thani, Qatar's minister of finance and petroleum and a former president of OPEC, called instead for a "gradual increase that hurts no one."

He said his country would not cut its 500,000 barrels-a-day crude oil output and would bar any price increases over the current $29.23-a-barrel level.

"We (OPEC members) will have to resort to reason and adopt prudent decisions as far as oil prices are concerned," he told The Associated Press in an interview.

"Sharp price increases could hurt the economy of the world, adversely affect the OPEC countries and the Arab world," he said. Al-Thani, whose country produces about 500,000 42-gallon barrels of oil a day, is widely regarded as a moderate and has allied Qatar with his giant OPEC neighbor, Saudi Arabia.

THE SAUDIS LAST year said they were temporarily boosting oil output by 1 million barrels to 9.5 million barrels daily to help calm tumultuous world petroleum markets. Industry sources said Thursday the Saudis now have decided to make the 9.5 million-barrels-a-day level their new production ceiling.

The Saudi production is about one-third of OPEC's 29 million barrels-a-day oil output.

World oil prices have doubled to an average of $30 per 42-gallon barrel since the seven-week shutdown of Iranian oil production during the country's revolution in late 1978 and early 1979.

The sharp price hikes by OPEC members and other oil producers have prompted consumption cuts in industrialized countries and have left the world with a surplus of oil as the United States and other major countries face a possible economic slowdown.

Al-Thani said the oil surplus amounts to nearly 2 million barrels a day over current consumption. But the consumption cuts have been met by production cuts of 1.2 million barrels a day by Kuwait and several other OPEC states.

"Naturally oil prices cannot possibly be frozen," said Al-Thani. "Prices cannot remain the same for the next 10 or 15 years. But what we want is a gradual increase that hurts no one," he said.

REJECTS REAGAN CRITICISM

Carter defends foreign policy strategy

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

President Carter rejected Ronald Reagan's criticism of his conduct of foreign policy Thursday as helping the Kremlin and Iranian terrorists. The Republican presidential front-runner retorted: "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen."

At the same forum in Washington where Carter spoke a few hours earlier, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy criticized both candidates and accused Carter of actually inviting Reagan's election in November.

Carter and Kennedy, his challenger for the Democratic presidential nomination, spoke separately from the same platform before the American Society of Newspaper Editors, and both took the occasion to attack their political opponents.

After a speech dominated by foreign policy, Carter told questioners that the Soviet leadership and Iranians holding Americans hostage in Tehran both would agree with Reagan that the United States was responsible for the Afghanistan and Iranian crises. These arguments, Carter said, "can only help them."

The president denied any lack of resolve or determination to resist Soviet aggression that might have been perceived as a sign of weak U.S. leadership and he dismissed suggestions he had manipulated announcements of developments in Iran and the Middle East to try to influence primary election results in his favor.

TO THIS, REAGAN said while campaigning in Greensburg, Pa.: "I'm going to quote Harry Truman: If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen. I don't think any criticism of mine gave aid and comfort to the enemy."

Following Carter to the rostrum about four hours later, Kennedy took aim at both Democratic and Republican front-runners. "The Republicans cannot lead by summoning the nation backwards — and the Democratic Party cannot succeed by trying to out-Republican the Republicans," he said.

Kennedy said Carter was running for re-election in a way that invites Reagan's election by promoting the idea that government does not work, and that no president "can do the job." This argument, the senator said, might persuade voters to turn to a Republican candidate "who promises to do as little, but at lower cost."

In his speech, Carter defended his handling of the Iranian and Afghanistan crises and promised to take legal action, if necessary, to enforce an American boycott of the Moscow Summer Olympics.

It was only the third time this election year that the two major contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination had spoken before the same audience. Kennedy has repeatedly challenged Carter to abandon his stay-at-home policy and join him in debating the issues.

On the Olympic boycott, White House officials did not specify what steps Carter might take to forbid American athletes to travel to Moscow, and they indicated the administration would be reluctant to revoke their passports or stamp them invalid for travel to the Soviet Union.

THE PRESIDENT, HOWEVER, said, "If legal actions are necessary to enforce the decision not to send a team to Moscow, I will take them."

Carter also defended his restraint in seeking the release of an estimated 50 American hostages held by Iranian militants in Tehran since Nov. 4. He said Iranian authorities lack the "cohesion and resolve" to end the hostage crisis.

On the Republican side, Reagan said in Pittsburgh he had misspoken in charging Wednesday night in Nebraska that Vietnam veterans were being short-changed on GI Bill benefits because Congress never made a formal declaration of war in that conflict.

"That was not quite correct," Reagan said, adding that he based his statement on information supplied by two senior military officers whom he refused to identify publicly.

Other sources, however, said privately they are Adm. Thomas Moorer, former chairperson of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Lt. Gen. Edward Rowney, former Defense Department liaison at the SALT II treaty negotiations with the Russians. Both men are retired.

REAGAN FACES A head-to-head showdown with GOP rival George Bush in the April 22 primary in Pennsylvania, which will send 83 delegates to the Republican National Convention in July. Bush insists that "I'm going to win in Pennsylvania."

Bush, also in Pittsburgh, accused Reagan of making "phony promises" by saying he would "cut taxes by 30 percent, balance the budget, increase defense spending and stop inflation all at the same time."

The former U.N. ambassador challenged the former California governor to prove to the public "how all these things can be done without making inflation much, much worse."

Rep. John B. Anderson of Illinois, who failed to get his name on the Pennsylvania ballot, told the editors' convention in Washington that even if he decides to make an independent bid for the presidency against the Democratic and GOP nominees, he will remain in the Republican Party.

Lillian Carter testifies in Lance banking trial

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — Former federal budget director Bert Lance opened the defense in his bank fraud trial Thursday declaring that he had not lied to an Atlanta bank. President Carter's mother testified that Lance had more "honesty, integrity and truthfulness" than "anyone I know."

"Absolutely not," Lance said in a booming voice, when defense attorney Nicholas Chilivis asked whether he had falsified a July 1974 financial statement submitted to the Trust Co. Bank of Atlanta.

Chilivis then asked the former banker whether any items were false in a June 1975 statement. "Absolutely none," Lance replied.

Lance, Carter's longtime friend and former top-level advisor, opened the defense case on the morning after nearly half the charges against him were dismissed by the presiding judge.

Lance's testimony, which promised to be lengthy, was interrupted briefly for character testimony by Lillian Carter, the president's 81-year-old mother.

SHE SAID SHE had known Lance since 1970 and was aware of Lance's "reputation for honesty, integrity and truthfulness."

"I think he has more of them than anyone I know," Mrs. Carter said. "I think Mr. Lance is quite a man."

Besides the two counts of making false statements to banks, Lance, 48, is also charged in 10 counts with misapplying bank funds in loans to his relatives and friends.

Prosecutors rested their case Wednesday, after the testimony of their 159th witness, U.S. District Judge Charles A. Moye Jr. then acquitted Lance on 10 other bank fraud charges in the indictment.

Three co-defendants — former bank president Richard Carr, former druggist Jack Mullins and contractor Thomas Mitchell — are to present their cases after all of Lance's witnesses have testified.

Lance's testimony opened with a review of his youth in Calhoun, his first jobs at a theater, a grocery store and a post office, and his duties as a 20-year-old teller at the Calhoun National Bank — which occasionally included sweeping the floor.

THE TALL, SWARTHY banker smiled often, and turned to his right to address his answers directly to the 12 jurors and six alternates.

In an attempt to rebut government testimony about Lance's financial statements, Chilivis chalked several columns of figures on a courtroom blackboard.

Lance said government accountants apparently failed to include some $640,000 in assets that he considered the property of the Lancelot Co., a partnership of Lance and his wife.

If convicted on all counts, Lance could be sent to prison for 54 years and fined as much as $60,000.

NRC proposes $100,000 fine for Three Mile Island designer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission on Thursday proposed a $100,000 fine against Babcock & Wilcox Co., designer of the Three Mile Island nuclear plant, for allegedly failing to report safety information which might have prevented or lessened last year's accident.

The company immediately denied violating any federal reporting requirements and said it would fight the proposed penalty.

General Public Utilities, owner of the stricken Three Mile Island plant, sued Babcock & Wilcox last March 25 for more than $500 million, charging failure to provide adequate information and training for safe operation of the plant.

The fine proposed Thursday against the company would be the NRC's first civil penalty against a reactor supplier.

As early as November 1977, the NRC said, a Babcock & Wilcox engineer wrote a memorandum questioning whether operators of the firm's nuclear plants had sufficient guidance on dealing with small breaks in the reactor coolant system. This particularly concerned the need for operators to be careful about shutting off the automatic emergency cooling during an accident.

That, however, is just what the operators at Three Mile Island did, in response to their (continued on page 18)

Chrysler revises loss estimates, further cost-cutting considered

By JAMES V. HIGGINS
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT — Chrysler Corp., citing the "devastating impact" of high interest rates, said Thursday its 1980 losses could reach $750 million instead of the $500 million it originally predicted.

It was the second recent upward revision in Chrysler's loss estimates. In papers filed March 14 with the Securities and Exchange Commission, the No. 3 automaker said it could suffer a 1980 deficit as high as $650 million.

The company, which lost $1.1 billion in 1979 and $205 million in 1978, described the more somber financial result "likely" even though new cost-cutting programs will be implemented. Chrysler, which already has cut expenses to the bone, refused to say what further cost-cutting plans are being considered.

"WE'RE WORKING ON the details of several plans to cut costs," a Chrysler spokesperson said.

Chrysler has laid off thousands of workers, closed four plants, imposed pay cuts or bargained for payroll relief from virtually all its employees, and sold off a number of overseas holdings.

It is expected to sell additional U.S. assets, and company officials have acknowledged the closing of additional plants is being considered.

The year-long auto industry slump, aggravated in recent months by high interest rates, is the cause of Chrysler's worsening condition, the company said.

It said interest rates are "having a devastating impact on the automobile business and were causing the increased losses."

Dealers cut back drastically on their inventories after the prime interest rate — the rate they pay on new car orders — soared to 20 percent, Chrysler said.

"REDUCED DEALER INVENTORIES, higher interest costs and dealer support programs will increase Chrysler's losses by $300 million . . . forcing the company to make new cost reduction," the company said in a statement.

Chrysler said it is helping dealers pay interest costs if they agree to order a predetermined number of cars. General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. also have been forced recently to pay a portion of high interest rates on wholesale purchases by their dealers.

Draft counseling workshop

People interested in draft registration counseling are invited to attend a workshop Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in St. John's Student Parish East, 4828 S. Hagadorn Rd.

The workshop is sponsored by the Ingham County Coalition Against Registration and the Draft (CARD) and St. John's Student Parish, and features anti-draft activists and other groups.

The schedule of events include:

- 10 to 10:30 a.m. — an overview of the program by Joe Tuchinsky, director of the Michigan's Citizens' Lobby;

- 10:30 a.m. to noon — a historical and political analysis by Jim and Marion Anderson, activists against military spending;

- 12:30 to 2 p.m. — legal options and risks by Will Dupuis and Joe Tuchinsky;

- 2 to 3 p.m. — practicality of school presentations by Barb Thibault, from the Peace Education Center in East Lansing.

- 3 to 4 p.m. — role playing by anyone who is attending the workshop. The role playing is being organized by Ona Meslin of the Abrahamic Community and Ruth Mauser, of St. John's Student Parish.

Role playing will be a time for people to practice confrontations with a mock draft board.

At 4 p.m. closing remarks will be given.

The sponsoring groups suggest people bring lunches as the workshop breaks for lunch at noon.

Board reprimands four doctors who lost number of patients

BOSTON (AP) — The state medical licensing board dropped disciplinary proceedings against a team of heart surgeons who lost an unusually high number of patients on the operating table when four of the six doctors agreed to accept a reprimand.

The action brought criticism from one member of the board, who said the panel seemed more interested in avoiding a "public airing" of the case.

The disciplinary hearings were canceled after four of the six doctors agreed to accept a reprimand. The other two were cleared.

Among those reprimanded was Dr. Warren J. Taylor, who had been president-elect of the American College of Cardiology. The disclosure of excessive mortality rates forced him to resign from the college on the eve of his installation.

The other doctors reprimanded were Thomas F. Boyd, Gerald Desforges and Morton Heafitz. Those doctors against whom charges were dropped because of their limited participation in the heart program were Dwight Harken and Jack C. Lee.

AT ISSUE WAS the doctors' practice of performing an average of eight open-heart operations a year at suburban Malden Hospital, even though federal health experts have recommended that hospitals avoid the tricky operations unless they can do 200 to 300 of them annually.

The licensing board began an investigation after The Boston Globe reported four years ago that half of the open-heart patients operated on by the doctors died over an eight-year period. This was as much as 10 times higher than the mortality rate experienced in larger programs.

The board's latest decision, revealed Wednesday, was reached in a closed meeting last Friday. Attorney George Annas, the board's vice chairperson, was out of town during the meeting. But in a letter to the board, he said, "I think the board acted with unseemly haste, undermined and possibly destroyed its credibility with both the public and the Legislature, and demonstrated that it was more interested in avoiding a public airing of the issues than in finding facts and setting standards."

THE CHAIRPERSON, DR. Claude Welch, said, "All I can say is that the voting members of the board followed the legal advice we were given, which was that the whole thing might come apart. If it had gone to trial, it might have ended with a complete draw."

The doctors, who worked as Cardio-Thoracic Associates, voluntarily stopped performing heart surgery at Malden Hospital in 1975.

The negotiated reprimand said that by the beginning of 1973, the doctors "knew or should have known" that the hospital's program could not have achieved an "optimum" caseload.

All six surgeons agreed not to perform open-heart surgery without undergoing a six-month update program to improve their skills.

R. Robert Popio, a lawyer for five of the doctors, said his clients wanted "nothing less than complete exoneration and an apology from the board."
