Carter does not set deadline

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Carter has not set a deadline for U.S. allies to initiate sanctions or break relations with Iran, State Department officials said Monday.

The officials said Carter left a "misimpression" in a weekend interview in which he told European television correspondents there is "a specific date" by which the United States expects success in "this common effort."

Western European governments, under pressure from Washington to join the U.S. sanctions against Iran, expressed puzzlement Monday about President Carter's "deadline" for them to act.

Official sources in most European capitals said they had received no specific date.

Only British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, Carter's most enthusiastic supporter of tough action on Iran, offered quick formal words of support. But even she said no date had been received.

In a television interview with European correspondents, broadcast Sunday, Carter said he had given friendly governments a "specific date" by which Washington expected her allies to join in economic sanctions. The United States imposed sanctions and severed diplomatic relations with Iran last week after failure of negotiations to free the American hostages who have been held in Tehran since militants took over the U.S. Embassy there Nov. 4.

WEST EUROPEAN LEADERS planned to consult with their recalled envoys from Tehran in anticipation of next Monday's meeting in Luxembourg of European Economic Community foreign ministers. Iran will be discussed then.

Thatcher told the House of Commons on Monday that the Western allies were conferring urgently and should make a decision on joint action at the meeting next Monday.

"Our job is to show our support to the American people and to President Carter," she said.

She added, however, that Carter had not given Britain a deadline by which to make a decision. "We have not been set a date by which our American allies want us to act," Thatcher said.

Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington told the House of Lords that Britain would have to consult with its European Economic Community partners before reaching a final decision on sanctions.

"I AM ALSO QUITE SURE we should consult with such countries as New Zealand, Australia and Japan which have enormous interest in that part of the world," he said.

Dutch Prime Minister A.A. Maria Van Agt, traveling in India, said that although America's allies are unhappy with the United States taking unilateral decisions on the Iranian crisis, they should support its stand, the United News of India reported.

He accused the United States of asking its European allies to support its decisions only after they had been made in Washington. "This made it psychologically difficult for the allies to support the decisions," he said.

Other Western nations, including the other members of the nine-nation Common Market, were silent, apparently waiting until next week's meeting. The other member-nations, besides the United Kingdom and the Netherlands, are Belgium, Denmark, France, West Germany, Ireland, Italy and Luxembourg.

Bonn's conservative Die Welt newspaper saw Western Europe as looking for one European nation to show the lead and support Carter with sanctions — and suggested West Germany for the role.

In Denmark, where the previously expressed official view is that sanctions are unlikely to work, officials declined comment on Carter's broadcast.

The conservative Copenhagen tabloid, B.T., dismissed any move by Carter to try to get an EEC decision at next Monday's meeting as "election bait" for the Pennsylvania presidential primaries in which he is a candidate.

Switzerland cannot join sanctions because of its neutral stance and the U.S. request for that country to assume a diplomatic caretaker role in Iran.

But in a front-page editorial the influential liberal newspaper, Neue Zuercher Zeitung, urged that even neutral nations should take action because Tehran's conduct threatened international law.

Red Cross visit viewed as Iranian strategic ploy

By The Associated Press

The American hostages in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran received a seven-hour visit Monday from two representatives of the International Red Cross in an apparent move by Iran to blunt President Carter's campaign for Western support in imposing sanctions.

"To me they appeared in rather good shape," Harald Schmid de Grunee, one of the Red Cross officials who visited the hostages, told The Associated Press Radio Network in a telephone interview. "You can imagine those people have been there under rather difficult psychological conditions and they did appear in good shape."

"Of course there are some people, this is just human, who support less than others those conditions, but still I want to emphasize there is no very grave problem."

"We were able to take the names of those hostages, to take the address of their family in the States, and their telephone number and on top of this — and I do believe this is most important to reassure the families in the States — we were able to get from each hostage a message, a Red Cross message, which (will be) sent to his family."

"THEY WILL BE sent tomorrow by a doctor delegate who is leaving for Geneva and from there they will be sent to the States, so I guess the families there should receive them in a couple of days and this should reassure them, I am sure."

He said he had seen all the hostages, but did not say how many were visited. The State Department has put the number of captives in the embassy at 50.

In Washington, the State Department dismissed the Red Cross visit as a "palliative," but acknowledged it could be helpful to the hostages and their families.

State Department spokesperson Hodding Carter said if the Red Cross representatives saw all 50 Americans in the embassy independently and were able to report on their status to their families, "it will be a plus."

BUT, HE ADDED, "it will not be anything but a palliative, . . . a mask for the central reality that they are being held," as far as the United States is concerned. "Our objective is their release."

Carter said he hoped the visit would not cause U.S. allies to lose sight of the fact that "the point is not whether they are being held in good condition, but that they should be released."

Iranian Health Minister Mousa Zargar accompanied the two Red Cross officials, Schmid de Grunee, the permanent representative in Tehran, and Dr. Bernard Liebeskind, a physician. The two are Swiss.

An official of the Red Lion and Sun, the Iranian equivalent of the Red Cross, also went with them.

Hasidic men crowd in to touch the coffin of Rabbi Levi Grunwald as it passes down Bedford Avenue in Brooklyn, N.Y., Monday. More than 30,000 mourners clogged the streets for blocks for the funeral of the 86-year-old rabbi. In 1939 he led his people from the shadow of the Nazi terror in Czechoslovakia to the promise of a new life in the United States. UPI

CITES LACK OF COST FIGURES

Carr asks details of draft plan

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Bob Carr, D-East Lansing, and another Congress member asserted Monday that Congress is being asked to vote on President Carter's draft registration proposal without knowing its implications or costs.

Carr, who sits on the House Armed Services Committee, said Congress, which is being asked to shift appropriations so draft registration could begin, has been presented with only the bookkeeping costs of registration, not the potential enforcement costs.

U.S. Rep. Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wis., told a hearing of his House Judiciary subcommittee on courts, civil liberties and the administration of justice that the Carter administration has not addressed what effects draft registration will have on individual freedom or the federal court system.

"The administration, quite candidly, has not been able to answer these questions," Kastenmeier said. "We almost voted on it last week."

Judy Goldsmith, executive vice president of the National Organization for Women, said NOW might challenge the constitutionality of registration unless it applies equally to men and women. But she said her group would prefer to see no registration at all.

Another hearing by the subcommittee is to be held in Washington.

Begin pledges quickened pace for Palestinian autonomy talks

By BARRY SCHWEID

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin pledged on his arrival here Monday for talks with President Carter to try to accelerate the pace of negotiations with Egypt over an autonomy plan for Palestinian Arabs.

Begin said Israel is willing to keep talking as long as it takes to complete an agreement. And yet, indicating sharp differences with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, Begin said an administrative council fulfills Israel's commitment at Camp David in September 1978.

Sadat, who was in Washington last week for talks with Carter, is pressing for a Palestinian council that has legislative and executive powers. He also has called for a moratorium on new Jewish settlements and allowing Arabs in East Jerusalem to vote in elections among the Arabs on the Israeli-held West Bank of the Jordan River.

But Begin, in an arrival statement at Andrews Air Force Base, said, "An administrative council will be the expression of full autonomy."

Referring to the West Bank as Judea and Samaria, their biblical names, he said, "We shall not interfere in the daily affairs of the inhabitants but we shall assure the security of Israel and the future of her children."

BEGIN'S CONCERN IS that a powerful Palestinian council could be the first step toward a state bent on subverting Israel and, with Soviet support, threatening the population centers nearby.

But while taking an apparent hard line on the issues, the prime minister said Israel is prepared to accelerate the negotiations and to continue them until an agreement is in hand. He said deadlines have been set and then extended in the past, citing the six months needed after Camp David to complete last year's peace treaty with Egypt instead of the three months originally planned.

With Secretary of State Cyrus Vance standing at his side, Begin expressed sympathy over the holding of American hostages in Iran for more than five months and said that country had undergone "the most reactionary of revolutions" in history.

Referring also to the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, he said his visit comes at "a time which is difficult for the United States" and that it can count always on Israel as an ally.

Predicting a smooth visit by Begin, one official said, "We've seen them start with confrontation and end with agreement. This one won't even start with confrontation. Everybody is interested in an agreement. I don't think there will be any sharp encounter on anything."

AS HE LEFT TEL AVIV, the prime minister was asked if he intended to go beyond the Camp David agreements of September 1978, which omitted the settlements and Israel's annexation of East Jerusalem.

Begin replied: "Why should I? Why should anyone go beyond an international agreement?"

A compromise autonomy plan would be based partly on deferring some tough issues, such as control over water facilities on the West Bank of the Jordan River, until the Palestinians themselves are willing to join the Egyptian-Israeli negotiations.

Blackout now just a dark memory

By KY OWEN

State News Staff Writer

When the lights came back on in residence halls the parties ended following Sunday's blackout.

Except for students setting off firecrackers and graffiti writers spray painting buildings, all was quiet on campus during the blackout and no major problems were reported, said Department of Public Safety Capt. Ferman Badgely.

"Mostly people were just having fun and enjoying themselves," he said. "As soon as the lights went back on everything quieted down."

"Thank God it wasn't a warm night," he said, adding there might have been some problems if weather had been pleasant.

MSU WAS ENTIRELY without power from 8:54 p.m. until shortly after 10 p.m., when power was restored to some areas, said Paul Nilsson, director of automotive services and utilities.

Nilsson said a raccoon caused the outage when it touched a transformer terminal while standing on the ground, which caused the transformer to be short-circuited.

The raccoon was electrocuted immediately when it touched the terminals, which carry 46,000 volts of electricity.

Nilsson said animals often climb on the transformers looking for a warm place to sleep, but this time the raccoon went too far.

Restoring power is a slow process, Nilsson said, because the generator cannot be brought up to full capacity right away.

Therefore, power was not restored to the entire campus at once, Nilsson said.

THE PHYSICAL PLANT has a priority system under which power is restored to the most important areas first, Nilsson said.

While there were no major problems, some people were stuck on elevators for a short time during the blackout, but rescue and residence hall personnel got them out.

The Library and Chemistry Building were evacuated, the latter because exhaust fans were not functioning.

Sunday's blackout was the first total outage since 1974, when construction was being done at the physical plant. That outage was caused when heavy rain went through a canvas covering an opening in the building and shorted out circuits.

Early Monday there was an unrelated power outage in some buildings, including Mason-Abbott and Snyder-Phillips residence halls, Nilsson said.

Bob Wyant of the Physical Plant sandblasts spray-paint graffiti from a wall of the Administration Building. Vandals took the opportunity to paint various messages on buildings and sidewalks on campus during Sunday evening's blackout. State News, Helen Street

Spring term enrollment of 40,872 is highest ever

Students trying to find sunning space along the Red Cedar River this spring will have more competition than in any previous spring term at MSU.

Ira Polley, assistant provost for admissions and records, reported that spring term enrollment on the East Lansing campus is 40,872 — 1,003 more than the enrollment for spring term of 1979.

The previous high mark for spring was 40,808, set in 1976.

Polley credited the increase to what he called the "pipeline effect" noting that the enrollment for fall term 1979 was the highest fall term enrollment ever, and the students who enrolled then are continuing their program.

Fall term enrollment was 44,756 — 176 more than the previous high enrollment of 44,580 in fall 1975.

"There is some speculation the economic slowdown may have stimulated the enrollment," Polley added.

He said some people who do not have jobs decide they may as well go to school and improve their skills.

But there are two sides to the matter, he said, noting that other students may not have the funds to supplement their loans to continue their education.

The colleges which reported the largest increases over last year were engineering, with a 10.4 percent increase; business, with an 8.8 percent increase; and communication arts and sciences, with a 7.2 percent increase.

Polley noted that those increases reflect recent trends in enrollment.

Currently at MSU, there are 21,085 men enrolled compared to 19,787 women, but the gap is closing as there are 3.4 percent more women at the University this spring than last, while there are only 1.7 percent more men.

Knife misses Indira Gandhi

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi escaped assassination Monday when a spring-actuated stiletto knife, hurled by a man standing six feet away in a crowd outside Parliament House, narrowly missed her, authorities said.

The six-inch knife grazed one of Gandhi's bodyguards without wounding him, they said.

The man, identified as 37-year-old Ram Bulehand Lalwani, of Baroda in western India, was charged with attempted murder and illegal possession of a weapon, the commissioner said. The maximum sentence for attempted murder is a 10-year prison term.

'Sterile' woman becomes pregnant

GRAND RAPIDS (UPI) — In a suit transferred to federal court Monday, a former Michigan woman who became pregnant a year after she underwent a sterilization operation is suing a Lansing doctor for $250,000.

Ethel L. Stapella, who now lives in Mequon, Wis., filed suit against Edward W. Sparrow Hospital in Lansing and Dr. Scott Pringle.

Stapella was a resident of East Lansing when the sterilization operation was performed Nov. 18, 1977. The suit alleges Pringle performed the procedure because the woman "desired to protect against any risk whatsoever of any further fertility."

On Jan. 26, 1979, a Milwaukee doctor informed the woman she was pregnant.

Ten days later Stapella underwent a "complicated" abortion in Milwaukee.

NBC will not show Olympics

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC-TV will not broadcast the Summer Olympics from Moscow, network sources said Monday. But the official announcement will be delayed until company lawyers are certain NBC can recover some $57 million on an insurance policy.

The $57 million represents the 90 percent recoverable portion of NBC's Olympic payment to the Soviet Olympic Organizing Committee and the International Olympic Committee, according to a policy the network placed with Lloyd's of London in September 1977.

An NBC statement issued Monday said: "NBC has repeatedly said it would be guided by the policies of the United States government and we reaffirm that. We are discussing alternate advertising plans with our Olympics' advertisers."

The policy with Lloyd's calls for NBC to recover if the Games are not held, if the Games are terminated, or if the U.S. Olympic Committee doesn't send a team.

NBC had contracted to pay $87 million — $64 million to the Soviets for facilities and rights and $13 million to the IOC.

A woman keeps her eye on her partially-submerged car near the downtown section of New Orleans Monday after heavy rains caused massive flooding. The pumps which normally keep city streets free of water could not keep up with the deluge.

Storms kill 9 in South

(AP) — Battered rivers poured over their banks across the South Monday, routing thousands of people and snakes, while up to a half-foot of snow smothered spring flowers from Arkansas through the Midwest.

At least nine people had been killed in storms which brought a weekend deluge to Dixie, record April cold to some towns in the Southwest, and the heaviest snowfalls ever to come so late in the year in Missouri.

The abnormal snowstorm brought traffic to a halt on some interstate highways in the Midwest, closed schools and knocked out power in scattered areas.

Cuba blames U.S. for exodus

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Cuba's official newspaper said Monday the flocking of more than 10,000 Cubans to the Peru and Venezuela embassies in Havana were "Yankee provocations." It called for mass protest rallies, including one at the U.S. government office in the Cuban capital.

In Washington, White House press secretary Jody Powell announced the United States would accept up to 3,500 Cubans from the Peruvian Embassy and called on the Cuban government to permit a "prompt, safe and peaceful" exodus from the communist-ruled island. He welcomed Costa Rica's offer to serve as a staging area for refugees going on to other countries.

The front-page editorial in the Cuban newspaper Granma suggested it was no accident the asylum-seeking Cubans crammed into the Peruvian Embassy only weeks before the U.S. armed forces planned exercises at Guantanamo, an American military base on Cuba's eastern tip.

"The coincidence of these events is not casual. Nor maybe is the coincidence of epidemics and plagues in pork, tobacco and sugar-cane, since in the past the hand of the CIA could be behind all that," Granma said.

N. Case Hall residents weigh alternatives

By RUSS HUMPHREY
State News Staff Writer

Things are looking brighter for North Case Hall students who have been told they must find new living accommodations next year.

Case Hall management announced April 10 that the third floor would be changed to an Honors College student living area.

The students who may be displaced were given an opportunity to express their concerns Sunday night before a special meeting of management personnel and students.

If things go as the students requested, they may still get the chance to remain on third floor.

The students asked management to consider gradually filling the floor with Honors College students or perhaps phasing the plan in over the next two years. It was their last chance to discuss the proposal before hall sign ups begin on April 22.

IN ADDITION, THE students suggested Honors College students be given the option of selecting any student as their roommate.

Angela White, Case Hall manager, said Case Hall management personnel, are "exploring" these ideas as possible alternatives to the present plan.

She said any student being affected by the proposed plan will be given priority over other students during residence hall sign ups.

White said she is not sure how many students are affected by the plan.

"They (management) told us last Thursday that we had to leave," said Jeffrey M. Humphreys, a freshman majoring in pre-veterinary medicine. "We have hardly had any time to look for alternative accommodations."

THE PROBLEM of finding alternative housing seems to be the overriding concern of those people who are affected by the possible housing change.

The selection of third floor Case Hall as the Honors College floor was discussed in an open meeting on April 3, White said. Students had enough notification and opportunity to address the proposal.

After the Case Hall Resident Association decided on the plan, all students affected were notified "shortly after," White said.

Ann Kolasa, a freshmen majoring in pre-law, said she was concerned that management never asked for student input in the matter.

White said a committee of seven people from management and students involved in the hall government asked for responses to the proposal but received only a few.

Sosa presents testimony against ASMSU Board

By JIM MITZELFELD
State News Staff Writer

ASMSU Student Board member Henry Sosa testified Sunday at an All-University Student Judiciary hearing that the board has been operating in violation of its code of operations and that he was unfairly dismissed from the board in February.

Sosa was dismissed from his seat on the board as representative of the College of Arts and Letters by ASMSU Chairperson Bruce Studer. Studer dismissed Sosa for failure to pay the $3 ASMSU tax.

Sosa was re-elected to the Student Board spring term.

The AUSJ hearing consisted of two separate cases.

Much of the hearing centered around whether the ASMSU Code of Operations, a booklet that states the procedures the board must follow in conducting business, was binding.

THE FIRST CASE involved Sosa's charges that the board was not following its code of operations regarding the way in which bills were passed by the board. It also involved the length of time Studer took in making interim appointments to fill vacancies.

"We have ignored the rules and regulations that guarantee our student body fair play," Sosa said in his closing remarks.

"I don't view the code (of operations) as a ball and chain to restrict the processes of business," Studer said in defending the violation. Sosa argued that the board had failed to waive the code which specifies a standard waiting period before voting on several bills.

"The problem the past boards had were that they spent so much time nitpicking about procedural things, nothing was done relevant to the issues of the students," Studer said.

STUDER ARGUED THAT as long as all the members of the board gave their consent by not objecting, the code could be ignored in some instances to speed the board's procedures. Sosa said the code was indeed meant for strict interpretation.

The remaining argument centered around Studer's failure to make appointments for vacancies.

"There were seven vacancies and no appointments were made," Sosa said.

AUSJ Chief Justice Dave Belanger said the judiciary met Sunday night to consider the two cases but added that AUSJ's written decision and explanation would probably not be released until next week.

AFRICANS HIT 'APARTHEID POLICIES'

Panel tells of freedom struggle

By ELYSE GOLDIN
State News Staff Writer

A representative of the African National Congress of South Africa said Sunday night he would not be surprised if the current situation in South Africa led to U.S. military intervention in that apartheid country.

Apartheid is a policy of segregation which politically and economically discriminates against non-European groups in the Republic of South Africa.

Johnson Makatini said Americans must support total divestiture from South Africa if natives are to attain genuine independence there. Makatini was among four panelists who spoke on ways to liberate southern Africa.

In the dim illumination of an emergency light which worked during the campus-wide blackout Sunday, the panelists spoke on the eve of Zimbabwe-Rhodesia's inauguration ceremonies. They explained the status of southern African countries to a patient audience of about 125 people in the International Center.

THOUGH THE DISCUSSION was scheduled for the Con Con Room, the group met in the lobby of the International Center, following a 45-minute wait for maintenance personnel to open the door.

It was obvious from their persistence to meet and the nature of the discussion, that the panelists were accustomed to battling problems. Sunday night's struggles with the lights and such were seemingly minuscule compared to problems of which they spoke.

"The time has come to deal with the situation as it is rather than go around it,"

Ernest Simela, representative of the Patriotic Front/Zimbabwe African People's Union said.

Problems confronting southern Africa have affected that region as well as the entire world since the late 19th century, when Britain economically colonized Zim-

It must be uprooted and cut-out . . . disappear forever and be a memory in the minds of our people so when victory comes they will know. We are fighting to liberate ourselves . . . the struggle is strengthened when we see our comrades in arms succeeding.

— Theo-Ben Gurirab, representative of the South West African People's Organization

babwe-Rhodesia, he added.

Simela explained that native Zimbabwe-Rhodesians made unsuccessful peaceful attempts to regain their home since 1894 when British colonies apportioned them 47 percent of the land which was non-productive. Additionally, a tax which had to be paid in European currency satisfied Britain but forced natives to work for the colonies in agriculture. This inevitably made the peaceful attempts of Blacks even more fruitless, he said.

Andrew Mtetwa, representative of Zimbabwe African National Union, said the problems in Zimbabwe-Rhodesia could not be overcome using peaceful methods so natives learned to rely upon the military measures of the Patriotic Front.

ALTHOUGH THE BALANCE of arms was not in their favor, and Zimbabwe-Rhodesians lacked the political machinery needed in battle, "the war of liberation was won on the battlefield," he said.

Theo-Ben Gurirab, representative of the South West African People's Organization, said battles being fought in South Africa are not new, nor are they limited to that country alone.

"This is not a new struggle. We are merely continuing the patriotic struggle of our forefathers against racism," he said.

Gurirab said the current situation in southern Africa cannot be successfully reformed or amended, and must probably be overcome on the battlefield.

"It must be uprooted and cut out . . . disappear forever and be a memory in the minds of our people so when victory comes they will know," he said.

"We are fighting to liberate ourselves . . . the struggle is strengthened when we see our comrades in arms succeeding," Gurirab said.

The discussion was co-sponsored by MSU's African Studies Center and Southern Africa Liberation Committee.

'U' employees to start van pooling plan; payroll deductions to finance program

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

A van pooling program for University employees may be off and rolling in the next six to eight weeks.

Janna Winn, administrative assistant in the University Services Division, said van pooling has been successful with organizations that are using it.

The state of Michigan, Chrysler Corp. and the University of Michigan all have van pooling programs.

But even though MSU's program will be small to start with — consisting of only three vans — Winn, the program organizer, is confident it will grow.

"The state of Michigan's (van pooling program) keeps growing each year," Winn said. "I'm anticipating that the same thing will happen here."

WINN ADDED the program is already receiving "tremendous response."

So far, the main delay in getting the program started has been deciding whether the vans should be leased or bought, Winn said.

High interest rates make leasing the vans less economical, she said, while lack of capital makes purchasing vans difficult.

"This has to be totally supported by the people who participate," Winn said, "so we don't have that much money to buy vans."

However, Winn said she is confident the program will be cost competitive with automobile travel, particularly on longer trips.

"With the anticipated rate increase in fuel, it's going to be even more cost competitive by this fall," she added.

THE EXACT COST of participation in the program will not be known for a couple of weeks when it is decided whether to buy or lease the vans, Winn said. The starting date of the program will be known at about the same time.

Only University employees are eligible to participate, since the program will be financed through payroll deductions, Winn said.

Until the program starts, Winn said she is organizing responsive people into groups according to where they live. No one is obligated to participate simply because they fill out a program application, she added.

Winn said one person in each group will be selected as the driver for that group.

People who want to participate in the van pooling program may fill out the attached form and return it to the University Services Division by April 30.

For more information on van pooling, contact Winn at the USD.

Inflation takes toll on small business; soaring interest rates increase prices

By MICHAEL VEH
State News Staff Writer

Rising interest rates affect everyone, but small businesses are hit harder than most, said Daniel Suits, an MSU economics professor.

When small businesses purchase their inventories with money they have borrowed at high interest rates, they are forced to increase the price of their goods, Suits said.

If the Carter administration is able to control inflation the small businesses will be seriously affected, he said.

If prices stop increasing and interest rates continue to climb, he said, small business will not be able to continue passing the increase on to the consumers.

HIGH INTEREST RATES also increase prices and reduce spending, Suits said.

If inflation slows, prices will fall but the interest on the loans remains high and small businesses are forced to keep their high prices, the economist explained.

"The problem of inflation is a very tangled one," Suits said.

Smaller businesses are forced to keep their prices higher than larger businesses which have not taken out high-interest loans and are then unable to compete in the marketplace, he added.

Suits suggested several methods for small businesses to balance the effect of high interest rates, including inventory reduction and elimination of customer credit.

Rising prices can be attributed to attempts by Americans to maintain their standards of living, Suits said.

HE POINTED TO two different problems in the American economy which most people think are directly related — inflation and oil prices.

When oil prices rise, he said, the standard of living drops. This drop in the standard of living is often countered by increases in prices, Suits said.

"We've got to slow down the rat race," Suits said. "We're all running as fast as we can to stay in the same place."

Suits explained that Americans refuse to accept a reduction in their standard of living and, by raising prices in an attempt to negate this decline, they increase the rate of inflation.

"People raise their prices to push their own costs onto others," he said.

Someone needs to convince the American people that their standard of living cannot keep going up, he said. Suits said he sees a need for a real change in governmental leadership and not simply a change in political parties.

The public has to learn to do with less, Suits said. Until then prices will continue to climb.

Mackey will address ASMSU

MSU President Cecil Mackey will address the ASMSU Student Board at 7 tonight in 4 Student Services Bldg.

ASMSU Chairperson Bruce Studer said the board invited Mackey to the meeting to ask him what role he thinks student government should play in the University.

The meeting will also serve as an open forum for board members and interested students to question Mackey.

"It will be the first time MSU's president has spoken to ASMSU in more than 10 years," Studer said.

Tonight's meeting will be the first for seven members of the board who were elected during spring term registration to represent their respective colleges.

The new session of the board may also consider its choice for ASMSU chairperson for the upcoming year.

Research association honors 'U' prof

An MSU assistant professor of educational psychology, Christopher Clark, has received the 1980 Palmer O. Johnson award from the American Educational Research Association.

Clark, the first MSU faculty member to be honored, received the award for a research article on "Teacher's Reports of Cognitive Processes During Teaching." The AERA award carries a $500 stipend and is the highest honor for basic research.

Clark also worked with MSU's Institute for Research on Teaching. He said his research studied teachers' thought processes while teaching.

The article, co-authored with Penelope L. Peterson of the University of Wisconsin, was published in the American Education Journal in 1978. Clark received the award at the annual AERA meeting in Boston on April 8.

Commissioners to review funding for jail

Requests for funding and implementation of a new energy system for the Ingham County Jail will be discussed by the Ingham County Board of Commissioners at 7:30 tonight at the county courthouse in Mason.

The proposed system, which would provide both heat and electricity for the jail, would cost between $1.1 and $3 million.

The board will also consider resolutions to use money from the county contingency fund for the improvements to the county's computer system.

OPINION

Not a weekend for every woman

The controversy behind the withdrawal of funds from EveryWoman's Weekend is more than just a question of semantics. University funding was withdrawn following the project's denial of access to EveryWoman's Weekend to two special interest groups. That denial of access, reached after the project's coordinating committee revamped the EveryWoman's Weekend "pro-woman" policy, discriminates against Michigan Right to Life and Stop ERA, the women's groups barred from the event.

The pro-woman policy advocates freedom of choice for women in taking complete control of their minds and bodies. The event's coordinators argue that the right to life and anti-ERA groups deny women the right to choose the way they would like to live their lives. They assert at the same time that the right to choose is a "very basic right."

The argument is flawed. Granted, anti-abortion and anti-ERA groups advocate a lifestyle very different from the one exhorting by feminists. But freedom of choice would presumably include the freedom to have children and be homemakers. The denial of a forum to present alternative lifestyles is a denial of the right to make an informed choice.

That the women's movement has splintered since suffragists won the right to vote is a development which was to be expected. But the denial of a chance to present competing viewpoints simply because they are on the domestic end of the feminine spectrum smacks of blatant discrimination — which all women have fought against and still face.

The denial to express alternate viewpoints is also a violation of University policy with regard to the First Amendment, which stipulates universities serve as a marketplace for the free exchange of ideas. That two private groups, the Lansing Community College Women's Resource Center and the Ingham County Women's Commission, have also elected not to support the event, lends credence to charges that the exclusion violates freedom of speech as well as academic freedom.

The withdrawal of funding in no way jeopardizes the event, as the University will still house it, and the lost funds amount to only $600 of a $7,000 budget. At issue is the event's credibility and stature. EveryWoman's Weekend coordinators claim the project's title implies that every woman is able to attend — not that every issue and viewpoint will be represented. They say their point of view is "pro-woman" instead of "anti-choice."

Whether the event is headlined EveryWoman's Weekend, Pro-Woman's Weekend, or Some Women's Weekend, it is one-sided. The event's coordinators may find alternate viewpoints "disturbing and offensive," but they are just as important to our right to express and hear differing opinions.

The last stand for the Olympics

In refraining from voting its own conscience, the U.S. Olympic Committee helped President Carter save what face he has left in his attempts to rally the world in support of his symbolic sanctions against the Soviet Union. After a few masterful strokes of governmental arm-twisting, the committee voted what Carter had asked it to do all along — keep the American Olympic team at home for the 1980 Summer Games in Moscow.

Symbolism seems to be the cornerstone of Carter's foreign policy these days. No one, not even proponents of an Olympic boycott, would assert that abstaining from the Games will turn the Soviet onslaught in Afghanistan's favor. And there is no doubt that those who reluctantly cast their vote in favor of the administration's wishes still theoretically oppose mixing sports with politics. Yet we have enmeshed them with the committee's vote, and subsequently rendered moot any more discussion about the role of politics in the Olympics. What Carter has not done though, is tell the American people just exactly what road we are heading down.

To conduct a foreign policy on symbolism may appease some as well as bolster Carter's re-election chances. It will also open the opportunity for other countries to boycott our Games in 1984 on grounds of our own political and military immorality. And who could blame them?

If Carter wanted symbolism, he should have listened closer to the athletes. In discussing the issue with the president, the athletes proposed the best compromise of all. Why not participate in the Games and boycott the preliminary pomp and glory? they asked. Such action would not rule out competition completely, and would still be a show of opposition toward the host country. The administration, however, apparently felt this issue, like the Iran crisis, had no room for compromise. And their actions have indeed reflected that stand. Carter threatened to revoke the committee's tax-exempt status, making it harder than it already is for the committee to garner funds. Grants from the government were as good as revoked in Carter's view.

Carter seems bent on getting support for his crusade to counter Soviet aggression at any cost. He has succeeded with the boycott. But who really made the decision to withdraw?

VIEWPOINT: EVERYWOMAN'S WEEKEND

The controversy is nothing new

By ANN McPHAIL

Is this a choice between the First Amendment and the right to an abortion? Regarding the policy of the EveryWoman's Weekend (EWW) collective toward the exclusion of anti-abortion and anti-ERA factions from a pro-choice organizational fair, I support and commend the responsible decision they have made.

And the issue is not a new one. Last year's EWW collective faced this same decision as the anti-abortion coalition approached the University — Ralph Bonner in particular — in hopes of pressuring University officials to secure them admittance to a fair at which they had no place.

Bonner has evidently changed his position since then, having concluded at our April 1979 meeting that the EWW collective was justified in limiting participation to a limited-space event which had specifically defined objectives.

One wonders also on what grounds Lou Anna Simon interpreted the appropriateness of an already legitimate provision to organize a program from a particular point of view. Is this a provision which applies only on an ad hoc basis? She raises the question as to whether the control over the content of an event is indeed linked to its funding sources, but implies that the retraction of support by the Department of Human Relations and Family Ecology, the University College and the Honors College does not have its ramifications for the collective's ability to exercise control over the content, and thus the quality of this event.

As most conference planners, we share a responsibility to exercise a working definition of those forces which work for us, and those which do not. Who, then would expect a pro-choice organization, clearly defined in funding applications, to invite a non-choice organization?

The issue for many women regarding the anti-abortion coalition is the historical and current support they maintain with other anti-women and anti-minority policies. Is it sheer coincidence that these larger coalitions overlap in personnel and share common financial support?

The legitimacy of the title EWW seems to be a trump card for many anti-feminist and non-choice coalitions who have female membership and claim to participate in the struggle for a liberated future. So what if the conference title is changed? Will this symbolize a further fragmentation of an already fragmented women's movement, which struggles within itself, in face of strong resistance?

Again, I commend the EWW collective for knowing where the issue lies, and for foregoing funds, to the tune of more than $500, and maintaining consistency. The decision could not have been easy as it means that additional energies and time must now be spent on securing the necessary additional funds to cover their costs.

LETTERS

Work eligibility unlimited Carol

Dear Ms. Kalwatis:

After reading your letter of April 9 in The State News, I decided to do some checking. It is my job to monitor student earnings. Upon reviewing your financial aid package for this academic year, I did not find any earnings limitation placed on you. The only time a student's work eligibility is limited is when he or she has accepted a form of federal financial aid, i.e.: work study, National Direct Student Loan, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant or a Health Professions Loan.

According to your file, you have not received any of these aid types. Your award letter does state "Campus Employment" otherwise known as "your own job" but this does not imply a limit. That figure was plugged into your package to fulfill the need in your budget since every student is expected to work and earn a portion of his educational expenses. If a limit had been placed on your earnings, your award letter would have stated "This award limits your earnings to ———". Incidentally, had you been limited and asked to terminate your employment by this office once that limit was reached, you would no longer be able to work on or off campus due to the federal regulations governing the use of those federal funds.

If someone in this financial aids office informed you that you could no longer work "on campus," that information was incorrect in your case. This office is in charge of handling work-related programs when financial aid is involved and I assure you that had you come into our office with your problem we could have helped you and explained that it is perfectly all right for you to work on campus.

If you have any other questions concerning your financial aid and eligibility to work, we will be happy to answer them for you.

As blimps float over the Moonies

They have all gone a little too far.

The organization called CARP is really a part of Moon's Unification Church. Change your life if you want to make him some money. CRAP.

Why is PIRG allowed to place itself on our student fee cards for a yes/no funding vote? It does not represent the MSU student body as a whole and it is not part of MSU. We might as well add the Red Cross and the Republican Party.

President Mackey, why do you feel it necessary to take away professors' rights, alumni control of the alumni association, (say that again?), and maintenance workers' cost of living increases? These make up the heart of this fine University. Monarchy went out long ago.

ASMSU Blimpers, I heard you have to possess a quality product before you can go around promoting it. Bloopers.

No interpretation in Zevon review

In his review of Monday night's Warren Zevon concert, Bill Holdship makes much of Zevon's "artistic violence" and use of gun/phallic images in his songs, yet fails to venture a guess as to how the artist's "guns and decadence" might best be interpreted by the audience. From the looks of some of the folks I saw in attendance at the concert, they could use some help in deciding what to make of Zevon's violent lyrics and stance.

The most glaring copout in Holdship's review concerns the remarks Zevon made during "Poor Poor Pitiful Me" about "shooting her in the p— like Marty Scorsese" (twice incidentally is a reference not to Peckinpah as much as to lines from Scorsese's small acting role in Taxi Driver. Holdship claims he does not know how to interpret the remark aside from noting that it's "awfully weird," but I think he has something of a responsibility to go further with it than that. Otherwise the remark appears to ring frighteningly of misogyny, and I personally doubt that Zevon is a misogynist.

Help me out, Holdship. Is it parody, social satire or what? What do you come up with when you tie the remark in with its original context in Taxi Driver? Or was it merely Zevon's gratuitous stab at firing up an audience? If so, then I am worried. I saw men near my seat cheer that remark, and I think they were cheering its literal, surface meaning rather than what Zevon was (hopefully) trying to say about violence in America. If Zevon's fans are getting off on his violent stance purely for the vicarious thrill of it, they are not any better off from listening to his music than they would be watching Starsky and Hutch reruns.

What's more, aren't these legitimate concerns of State News entertainment reviewers? Last term, Bill Holdship saw fit to interpret and balk at Johnny Thunders' drunken Afghanistan remarks at Gang War's appearance in Dooley's. Whether or not I agree with Holdship's interpretations of that incident, I certainly agree that it was his journalistic responsibility to make them. Speaking as a fan of Zevon and one who enjoyed his concert Monday, I can not help but feel that Holdship ignored such responsibilities this time in reviewing Warren's concert. The result is that what might have been an insightful piece of journalism was instead a pretty superficial report.

VIEWPOINT: ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

We need Jack Kinney

By BRIAN J. SOLARIK

I have spoken with Dr. Mackey, Trustee Barbara Sawyer, Dr. Westcott and have met and conferred with the officers and board members of our alumni club. I would like to present our thoughts and feelings regarding the current controversy between the University administration and the alumni association. We would like each of you to know that our first and main concern in this, and any other matter affecting the University or the alumni association, is wholeheartedly for the well-being of MSU, as is evident by our membership in the alumni association.

We have examined both the Feb. 4 letter from Mackey and the Feb. 12 letter from Westcott. We strongly feel that the "revised proposal," for the "Principles and Policies Governing The Agency And Operating Relationships of The Alumni Association, Inc., and MSU," submitted to the Executive Committee on Jan. 16, is a fair and more just arrangement for not only the alumni association, but for the University as well; both now and in the future. It is our view that to place the immense power of the Executive board in the hands of one person, or just a few persons is not, in many circumstances, in the best interest of the University or the Alumni Association. We believe it is to everyone's advantage that the entire 17-member Executive Board be entrusted with the power to hire the executive officers of the alumni association. This is a more democratic and just procedure that has the consensus of many persons, with their collective and independent viewpoints and recommendations.

We have a great sense of concern and a deep feeling of pride for our alma mater. It is of paramount concern to us all, that we do what is in its best interest. Therefore, we feel that Mackey's call for Jack Kinney's resignation is not and cannot be in the best interest of the University or the alumni association. MSU has recently gone through somewhat turbulent periods, and at this critical time, MSU is in need of true Spartans; whose loyalty and faithfulness are needed now more than ever. Jack Kinney is a true Spartan — and to give up or walk away from MSU when it is not in the University's best interest, is something a true Spartan cannot do. Jack Kinney has given MSU 25 years of loyal and faithful service. He is regarded by his peers in the highest professional terms and his name is synonymous with MSU and the alumni association.

To lose Jack in this manner can only cause the undermining of moral and financial support for both the University and the alumni association. We, therefore, want to express to you our 100 percent support of Jack Kinney, and are looking forward to working with Jack and the University for many years to come.

I would like to add my belief that the alumni association, by its very existence and membership of fellow MSU alumni, does, and will always, seek to promote the well-being of MSU, its traditions, reputation, and academic excellence with the utmost loyalty, pride and conviction. It is for these reasons that individual alumni and their alumni clubs from around the United States are voicing their opinions and concerns at this time. MSU will always be a part of us, and we a part of it.

Solarik is president of the MSU Alumni Club of Phoenix, Ariz. and a 1974 graduate of MSU

Mailer wins Pulitzer for fiction

By ARTHUR EVERETT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Norman Mailer won the 1980 Pulitzer Prize for fiction Monday for The Executioner's Song, the story of Utah convict Gary Gilmore and his execution by a firing squad. The author had won in 1969 in the non-fiction category for Armies of the Night.

Talley's Folly, Lanford Wilson's romantic comedy about a Jewish accountant from St. Louis, won the prize for drama. In journalism, the Gannett News Service won the gold medal for meritorious public service for an 18-day series of articles on the Pauline Fathers, an order of Catholic priests, and their mismanagement of gifts and contributions intended to finance a shrine.

Individuals cited in that award were John Hanchette, of Gannett's Washington bureau, William Schmick, state editor of Gannett, and Carlton Sherwood, of Gannett's national staff. All three are themselves Roman Catholics.

THE STAFF OF the Philadelphia Inquirer won its sixth straight Pulitzer, this one for general local reporting of the nuclear accident at Three Mile Island. More than 80 staff members worked on the story. Don Wright of the Miami News won his second Pulitzer for editorial cartooning for a 1979 portfolio that had among its targets Ayatollah Khomeini, the death penalty, and Three Mile Island. He won previously in 1966.

Three Mile Island also played a role in Ellen Goodman's prize for commentary. Her Boston Globe column regarding social values and appearing in 200 newspapers dealt during the year with the nuclear accident, as well as with such subjects as medical ethics, Iran and birth control.

The name of the winner of the spot news photography award was kept a secret. The picture, submitted in the contest by United Press International, showed a government firing squad executing nine Kurdish rebels and two former police officers following the fall of the shah of Iran. The Associated Press had distributed the same picture when it was taken.

"Because of the present unrest in Iran, the name of the photographer cannot be revealed at this time," UPI explained.

THE PULITZER PRIZES

were founded by the late Joseph Pulitzer, publisher of the old New York World. They have been awarded since 1917 by Columbia University on recommendation of an advisory board.

Except for the gold medal in the category of meritorious public service by a newspaper, each award carries a prize of $1,000.

In the field of history, the 1980 winner was Leon Litwack, professor of history at the University of California-Berkeley, for Been in the Storm So Long, a study of the end of slavery from a slave's point of view.

The Rise of Theodore Roosevelt, the first full history of the pre-presidential career of the nation's 26th chief executive, won the Pulitzer Prize in biography for Edmund Morris, a Kenya-born, British-educated American citizen.

The prize for poetry was awarded to Donald Rodney Justice for his Selected Poems, many drawn from earlier books. He is a professor of English at the University of Iowa.

Douglas Hofstadter's Godel, Escher, Bach: An Eternal Golden Braid, won the prize for general non-fiction. It was described as "a work of mathematical philosophy."

In Memory of a Summer Day won the prize in music for David Del Tredici, a member of the music faculty of Boston University. The work for solo soprano and orchestra was commissioned by the St. Louis Symphony for its 100th anniversary.

A FOUR-MEMBER team of Boston Globe reporters won the prize for special local reporting, with an investigative effort that exposed mismanagement in that city's transit system. Charles Stafford and Bette Swenson Orsini of the St. Petersburg, Fla., Times, won the national reporting prize, for a 14-part series on the Church of Scientology, a story four years in the making.

The prize for international reporting went to reporter Joel Brinkley and photographer Jay Mather of the Louisville Courier-Journal, for their series of articles and pictures on Cambodian refugees. Brinkley, 27, is the son of NBC television commentator David Brinkley.

Robert Bartley, editor of the Wall Street Journal, won the Pulitzer for editorial writing on such subjects as defense, politics, economics and business.

Erwin "Skeeter" Hagler's Dallas Times Herald 23-picture series on the Texas cowboy won the Pulitzer for feature photography.

The television critic of the Boston Globe, William A. Henry III, won the prize for criticism for columns dealing with new video technologies, a profile of a major network executive and an analysis of network values and ethics.

Supreme Court ruling limits campaign spending

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — This year's Democratic and Republican presidential candidates cannot spend more than $29.44 million in their general election campaigns, the Supreme Court ruled Monday.

The justices unanimously upheld federal laws attacked by the Republican National Committee and others.

Returning to a busy day on the bench after a two-week recess, the court also took these actions:

- Left intact former Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel's political corruption conviction. He, and five of his political associates, could be ordered to start federal prison sentences within a month.

MANDEL FACES A four-year prison term for participating in a favors-trading scheme that reportedly brought him some $350,000 worth of gifts, vacations and interests in business deals.

- Left intact a ruling in a California case that persons applying for welfare must receive full hearings before being denied benefits.

Monday's action does not set a national precedent but the lower court's ruling apparently is binding on all general welfare programs in California, Alaska, Arizona, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Washington and Hawaii.

- Refused to strike down as racially biased against Whites the admissions policy of the University of Washington's medical school.

Frederick McDonald, a White man turned down by the medical school in 1976, had charged that he was a victim of "reverse discrimination." He asked the justices to rule that the school's admissions policy extended beyond the affirmative action standards enunciated in their "Bakke" decision of 1978.

UNDER THE FEDERAL Election Campaign Act and the Presidential Campaign Fund Act, presidential candidates nominated by the two major parties may finance their general election campaigns in one of two ways. They may raise the funds through private contributions, limited to $1,000 from each individual or to $5,000 from a political committee, or they may accept public financing.

Under the two laws, each major party candidate who seeks public financing is entitled to receive $20 million, plus adjustments for inflation, for the general election campaign.

But those candidates who agree to public financing are prohibited, as are their campaign committees, from accepting any private contributions in addition to those taxpayer moneys.

Winder will clarify any questions council members ask before beginning an open discussion on the proposal.

The council will also continue discussion on the Course Formats and Credits Document.

A State Police helicopter circles over the First National Bank of East Lansing, 3332 Lake Lansing Road, in search of a robbery suspect Monday afternoon.

Man robs Lansing Twp. bank

A Lansing Township bank was robbed of about $2,000 Monday afternoon and a suspect is being held in Ingham County jail in connection with the robbery.

Brett Harrington, 21, of Detroit was arrested in a near-by abandoned garage where the $2,000 was recovered, police said.

The First National Bank, of East Lansing, 3332 Lake Lansing Road, was robbed at about 3:45 p.m., Lansing Township police reported.

Police said the robber walked into the bank shortly after a local gas station employee deposited $2,000 in the bank.

The robber then said "Give me the money," police said.

The incident is being called an armed robbery by police because the robber had his hand in his pocket, possibly concealing a weapon, police said.

The suspect was reported to fit the description of the robber. The robber was described as a 5-foot-10, 175-pound White male, cleanly shaven and with dark hair. He was also described as being "highly intoxicated."

Several local police departments sent officers to the scene of the crime to help track down the robber.

The Michigan State Police and the Lansing Police Department each sent helicopters to aid in the search.

The State Police also sent its canine unit to the scene, and an East Lansing police officer brought his dirt bike.

A road-block was set up at Lake Lansing Road, between Coolidge and Abbott roads.

Three bank employees and one customer were present at the bank when it was robbed, police said.

More MSU graffiti

Back by popular demand, we present some more original "desk top" graffiti that you the student have worked so hard to put together during those boring lectures.

Once again, the graffiti is from Berkey Hall because the desks there are still wood, so they lend themselves to the following types of writings:

"Econ 318 died here on 2 6 80... the Greeks don't want no freaks... Graduate — I can't wait!... rock lobster... Econ is a drag... I think I am. Therefore, I am. (I think?)"

"Here's to me and here's to you, and here's to love and laughter, I'll be true, as long as you, but not one moment after!"

"Patti Smith is God, and God is dead... this prof is a maniac... Coke adds life (and numbness!)... Buy dope — send me through school for free... The fear of living for nothing strangles the will... God isn't dead, he just got the hell out."

"Kiss my body... Luke Mucus and the Phlegms... I'm in a Michigan State of mind... rub my tummy!... Bing Crosby plays sudden death golf... Today is the first day of the rest of your life, but so was yesterday... A fool and his self-respect are soon parted."

"It's true — Lassie kills chickens!... this class gets a person nowhere fast... A man of knowledge was here 9/30/76... God is it, is soulis, who am I? (You're nothing, buddy)... Clean out the zoo — vote Republican!... George Washington slept here."

CBS presents Guyana drama tonight

By JOAN HANAUER
UPI Television Writer

NEW YORK — The degeneration of the Rev. Jim Jones and the horrifying mass death to which he led his followers in Jonestown, Guyana, evokes the inevitable question: How could it happen?

That's the story Ernest Tydman tells in the CBS two-part dramatic special Guyana Tragedy: The Story of Jim Jones, to be shown tonight and Wednesday 9 to 11 p.m. EST.

The highly dramatic, absorbing and powerful drama is based on Guyana Massacre: The Eyewitness Account, by Charles A. Krause and the staff of the Washington Post, and stars Powers Boothe as handsome charismatic Jones in a taut, compassionate performance.

The drama is unusual in its effectiveness and also in that it makes a serious effort at explaining how Jones changed from a devout Christian devoted to social justice to a paranoid drug user who sexually abused members of his congregation and led his followers to their death in a jungle clearing.

The story starts in Guyana, where a drug-drained Jones is putting his people through a suicide death drill, a precursor to the real thing. The tragedy is told in flashbacks, a counterpoint of past and present.

There's little Jim growing up in Lynn, Ind., toting his Bible and berating his peers for gambling when they play marbles for keeps.

His piety comes from a motherly neighbor, played in a cameo appearance by Colleen Dewhurst, to whom he flees from the fights within his own home.

The boy retains his piety into manhood. He has a vision and a mission. He marries a nurse, works his way through school and becomes a minister.

Although raised in the cradle of the Ku Klux Klan, Jones believes all men are brothers. In 1953 Jones is called to an Indianapolis church where the changing neighborhood has resulted in an almost vanished flock. He goes out to find new members — among the new black residents of the old area.

He is warned by Clayton Ritchie, the animal-hating owner of an inherited pet store, that Whites and Blacks may all be God's children, but "God ain't the only one looking."

The Klan also has been keeping its eye on Jones, and after several incidents the White church leaders put out a call for a new minister.

That's when Jones goes into what has become a Black ghetto to found his People's Temple and dedicates himself to helping poor Blacks with both faith and a hatful of social services.

Money to support his vision is a steady problem — according to Ritchie, who was to become his business manager, he was spending $2,000 a month more than what was coming in. A visit in another striking cameo by James Earl Jones — and he begins to see the light.

Increasingly now, he is becoming more ruthless in accomplishing his mission.

Here is where he makes the decisive wrong turning. He literally throws down his Bible and tells his adoring congregation to have their faith, not in printed words but in him. He is above the law of God. He has been troubled by the temptations of adultery. Now he finds himself an exception to the Commandments.

The moral inferred is that in religion as in politics, man must be ruled by laws and not by other men, and no one man can hold himself above the law. Now that has a familiar, post-Watergate ring and suggests an interesting comparison.

The result is a moving documentation of good twisted into evil, an attempt to illuminate the inexplicable. It also is strong entertainment, not recommended for children but compelling adult fare.

Bonnie Raitt to appear this month

Country-blues singer Bonnie Raitt comes to the MSU Auditorium Monday, April 28, for an 8 p.m. show.

Raitt's roots can be traced back to such influences as her Broadway singer father, John Raitt, and her early attraction to the country blues music of John Hurt, Muddy Waters and John Hammond. Born and raised in Los Angeles, Bonnie headed east for college, entering Cambridge in 1967 when venues like the Club 47 nourished a healthy folk and blues scene. It was in Philadelphia that Bonnie first took her guitar and distinctive blues interpretations onstage.

Initial success led to club engagements in New York, at Philadelphia's Main Point, and at the Philadelphia Folk Festival. Thanks to the introductory efforts of Dick Waterman, who's managed most of the blues musicians during the past 10 years, she learned from Son House, Mississippi Fred McDowell, Arthur Crudup, Howlin' Wolf, and her special mentor, Sippie Wallace. Bonnie signed with Warner Brothers in 1971.

Fans initially attracted by Bonnie's blues performances weren't dismayed with her debut album, Bonnie Raitt. The program included traditional material from Robert Johnson and Sippie Wallace as well as performances by Chicago bluesmen Junior Wells and A.C. Reed. The sessions were held in a garage on Lake Minnetonka, Minn., and as noted in the liner notes, "reflects the difference between music made among friends living together in the country and the kind squeezed out trying to beat city traffic and studio clocks." Produced by Willie Murphy and engineered by Sylvia and Dave Ray of Koerner, Ray and Glover fame, the album also covered a range of styles that would become a Raitt tradition — a mixture of country blues, early R&B, interpretations of material by new songwriters as well as original compositions.

It was with her next album, 1972's Give It Up, that Bonnie began to get serious favorable notice. The album was recorded with members of the Woodstock and Cambridge musical communities, and brought to light the relatively undiscovered songwriting talents of Eric Kaz, Jackson Browne, Chris Smither and Joel Zoss. 1973's Takin' My Time brought Bonnie back to the West Coast to work with new-found friends Lowell George and Bill Payne from Little Feat, Van Dyke Parks, and John Hall of Orleans, who produced the album. On this album, Bonnie introduced some new elements into her repertoire — a salty calypso tune by Calypso Rose, Randy Newman's "Guilty" and a bluesy rendition of Mose Allison's "Everybody's Cryin' Mercy," featuring Taj Mahal on harmonica.

1974's Streets brought Bonnie to the uptown R&B talents of producer Jerry Ragovoy, who assembled the best New York session men on a variety of new tunes by New York songwriters. The album featured some fine interpretations of material by James Taylor, Joni Mitchell, Allen Toussaint and John Prine.

Home Plate was recorded in L.A. during 1975, where she has lived since Takin' My Time. A reunion of sorts with the musicians from that album, it combines the production talents of Paul A. Rothchild with her growing family of musicians and friends. Along with new tunes by Toussaint and Kaz, much of the material was written and custom-arranged for the album by the musicians themselves — among them, John Hall, Fred Tackett, Bill Payne and J.D. Souther.

For Sweet Forgiveness, Bonnie and Paul Rothchild teamed up again, utilizing the close-knit feel of Bonnie and her touring band as the focus of the sessions. Along with works by Browne, Kaz, and Karla Bonoff is an exciting revamped version of Del Shannon's "Runaway," featuring Norton Buffalo on harp and Mike McDonald from the Doobie Brothers helping out on vocals. Her latest album, The Glow, was recorded in '79.

Tickets for the concert are $7.50 and $8.50 and are available at Sounds and Diversions, WhereHouse Records, Campus Corners II and the Union ticket office.

'Grease' closes after 3,388 performances

NEW YORK (AP) — Grease, Broadway's longest-running musical, rocked, rolled and sang of high school life in the late '50s for the last time on Sunday. It closed after 3,388 performances.

Grease opened Feb. 14, 1972, and survived critics, a royalties dispute and occasionally slow box-office business. It took the long-run record from Fiddler on the Roof with its 3,243rd performance on Dec. 8.

Grease also helped boost the careers of a number of young hopefuls who went on to stardom, among them John Travolta, Richard Gere, Barry Bostwick, Adrienne Barbeau and Marilu Henner.

The show died primarily because of New York's 11-day transit strike, which ended Friday, according to Lynne Guerra, the musical's production stage manager.

She said Grease drew a predominantly young audience, many of whom live in New York City and takes buses and subways to the show. But they stayed away from the box office, apparently because of uncertainty over when the strike would end.

"People weren't buying tickets in advance, and with no advance, we couldn't continue," she said.

Grease, in trying to survive, had offered half-price ticket coupons, good through April 27, in Sunday's editions of the New York Daily News. But its closing had been expected.

Spokespersons for the show last week said unless there was a dramatic upturn in box office business this weekend, the musical probably would close Sunday.

Grease, which had been running at the 1,655-seat Majestic Theater, began in 1971 at a basement theater in Chicago, where the husband-and-wife producing team of Ken Waissman and Maxine Fox first saw it.

Written by Warren Casey and Jim Jacobs, it originally was a play with music, not a musical. The producers persuaded the authors to revamp it as a full-scale musical destined for Broadway.

With Pat Birch choreographing and Tom Moore directing, it first ran three months downtown — under a Broadway musical contract with the unions — at the old Eden Theater before moving uptown.

At a cost of only $150,000 to produce, Grease cashed in on the '50s nostalgia craze of the last decade that also gave America Happy Days and the rock group Sha Na Na.

It grossed more than $8 million, according to Waissman — from the show itself, a cast album, touring companies, and a 1978 movie that starred Travolta, fresh from success in Saturday Night Fever.

SPORTS

ADAM TEICHER

School time for Waters, players

A learning process. That's what spring practice will be to the 90-odd football players and nine coaches on the MSU campus as drills begin today.

New coach Frank "Muddy" Waters and all but one of his assistants—Sherm Lewis, who has been an aide at MSU since 1969, being the exception—know nothing about these players save the little they've been able to scrape off the films of last year's games. Likewise, the players are going to have to learn a whole new system.

IT TOOK MORE than one spring practice for the MSU players to learn the Darryl Rogers system when Rogers took over four years ago. It took well into Rogers' first season and the learning process under Muddy Waters may last into next season.

But while the new coaches may not know much about the personnel, there is no shortage of ideas.

"The Michigan State offensive philosophy is very simple: to put our kids at the best possible advantage and to utilize their talents the best," new offensive coordinator Joe Pendry said. "We'll use different formations, motions, shifts, lots of things to confuse the defense to give us the advantage. But this doesn't mean our offense will be complex. It will be simple for our players to understand. We may run the same play from seven different formations.

"WE'RE GOING IN very multiple," Pendry continued. "After we see these players, then we'll plug them in and run what is best. My background is strictly in the veer offense and this is the way we may wind up. I don't know."

Muddy Waters knows his football. Even though he doesn't know much about his players, he does know that Darryl Rogers didn't leave him much talent.

What the new coaching regime is going to have to do is get the maximum out of MSU's three talented runners—Steve Smith, Derek Hughes and Bruce Reeves. They teamed up for more than 1,500 yards in 1978 and over 1,800 last season.

But there is precious little else as far as proven talent. As a result, many of the positions are open.

"Each kid thinks he has a chance to start and that is the way we are going into spring practice," Pendry said. "A kid that may have been third string last year can see the light at the end of the tunnel and it's not a train."

Defensively, there also will be a philosophy change.

"BASICALLY, WE ARE going to simplify things," Lewis, the defensive coordinator and the only holdover from Rogers' staff, said. "We will come with more people up front. This will allow us to rush up a little more in pass coverage, but hopefully, we will make up for this with a better rush."

"The key to our defense is injuries," he added. "We won't do as much hitting defensively in the spring as we've done in the past. Our first 11 are as good as we've had here in a while, but we just can't afford to get anyone hurt."

Lewis will build around line-man Bernard Hay, linebacker John McCormick and defensive back Jim Burroughs, who incredibly was left off the all-Big Ten team last season.

Elsewhere, the story on defense is the same as on the other side of the ball: very little proven talent. And linebacker George Cooper will have to miss all of spring practice with a chipped bone in his back. "Hopefully, he'll be back in the fall," Lewis said.

MUDDY WATERS KNOWS his football. Even though he doesn't know much about his players, he does know that Darryl Rogers didn't leave him with much talent.

"We've got some good freshmen coming in," he said. "But you can't always count on freshmen. We're going to need some young players to perform or it may be a long season."

"This is going to be a year of discovery for us, which is another way of saying a rebuilding year."

Trackmen seek sunshine

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer

MSU men's outdoor track team coach Jim Bibbs was not too happy when he awoke Monday morning to find snow covering the East Lansing landscape.

His tracksters had just returned from Knoxville, Tenn., after participating in the Dogwood Relays there, and Bibbs had hoped to return to some nice weather so his team could run outdoors.

BUT EVEN THOUGH Bibbs knew that Monday's practice would again be held indoors, he was happy with the way his Spartans performed at the individually scored Dogwood's.

"For our first time being outdoors for more than one day at a time this spring, I thought we did a real fine job," said Bibbs, who is starting his sixth outdoor season at the track helm.

"We had three good days of outdoor work down there, and I think we made a lot of progress in our conditioning."

Although none of the limited-squad tracksters finished in the top three in their events, a number of Spartans did establish some good times.

BIBBS PICKED OUT specific performances which he thought were superb at this early point of the campaign, and was especially impressed with junior hurdler Ken Eaton's time of 14.45 seconds in the 110-meter high hurdles.

"That was Kenny's personal best time even though he didn't place in the event, and we're expecting big things out of him in the future," Bibbs said.

The sprint medley unit of Randy Smith, Ricky Flowers, Calvin Thomas and Tim Kenney had the highest finish for the Spartans, with a time of 3:20.59, good for fifth place.

Sixth's were taken by Smith in the invitational 100-meter dash (10.68) and Flowers in the Invitational 200-meter race (21.51), while a seventh place was produced by Keith Moore in the 1,500-meter run. Moore ran 3:51.59 after a 3:40.8 in the preliminaries.

TWO OTHER EVENTS in which the Spartans participated but did not place was the mile relay, made up of Tyrone Williams, Kenney, Smith and Thomas (3:12), and the high jump, in which Paul Piwinski cleared 6-feet-10.

Other than Eaton's fine performance in the hurdles, Bibbs cited Flower's 20.8 time in the second leg (220-yards) of the spring medley as one of the highlights at the meet, and Thomas's 46.9 time in the 440-leg of the same event as another.

Additionally, Bibbs said he was pleased with Williams' and Smith's times as the starters in the mile relay and spring medley, and Kenney's 1:51.6 time for the 880 in the last leg of the spring medley race.

The Spartans will next see action when they host the Michigan State Invitational this Saturday. Preliminary races will begin at 10 a.m.

Itnyre, Gibson honored

Mary Kay Itnyre and Nanette Gibson, members of the MSU women's basketball team, have been named to the All-region 5 team selected recently by the National Scouting Association.

Double headers rescheduled

Today's baseball double-header with Western Michigan University has been canceled due to unseasonable weather. The twinbill is rescheduled for May 7.

In addition, the twinbill scheduled for last Thursday with Aquinas College will be played at 1 p.m. Wednesday at Kobs Field.

Admission is free to all MSU students.

The NSA regional and national awards were presented initially after the 1978-79 season. Itnyre has been named All-Region both years.

Itnyre and Gibson led MSU in scoring and rebounding respectively, in 1979-80.

Vincent wins 2 MVPs

Jay Vincent won two "Most Valuable Player" awards Friday night as MSU's basketball team staged its annual banquet.

Vincent, who averaged 22 points per game and won UPI All-Big Ten honors as the league's top scorer, won the Chicago Tribune MVP Award given by vote of the team, as well as the Charles S. Phillips Award, granted to the MVP by vote of press, radio and television representatives.

Forward Ron Charles won the "Most Improved Player" accolade for the second time. The St. Croix, Virgin Islands, senior won the award in 1977 as a freshman.

Fellow senior Terry Donnelly won the John E. Benington Award as the best defensive player. Donnelly and Charles received the Captain's Award as outgoing team captains.

Back-up guard Mike Longaker won the Stephen G. Scoles Sportsmanship award for the second straight year.

The Spartans finished the 1979-80 season ninth in the Big Ten and had a 12-15 overall record.

Fossum happy after runnerup finish

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

The MSU men's golf team finished second in the Illinois Intercollegiate Tournament Saturday in Champaign, Ill.

Purdue University won the tourney with a 36-hole score of 758. MSU was next at 770 and Southern Illinois University.

Edwardsville third at 787.

The Spartans had a one-stroke lead on Purdue going into the final 18 holes, but the Boilers shot a sparkling 373 over the last round to win going away.

"Purdue just played super," MSU coach Bruce Fossum said. "They deserved to win. We played consistently (384 over the first 18 holes, 386 over the second), but their second round was a great one."

Purdue also had the tournament's medalist. Guy Wollet took the honors with a 145, three strokes in front of the second-place finisher, MSU's Dave Belen.

The Boilermakers were eighth in the Big Ten last year, but may challenge for the conference crown this time around.

"They just ran into a problem (last year at the Big Ten match)," Fossum explained. "They had two kids that were pretty sick. It was just a bad scene for them. But they've added two freshman that can really play as well as the players they have coming back. They're solid and I think they can contend with us and Ohio State. I feel we are more consistent than Purdue. We would probably beat them over four rounds, but they really popped us Saturday.

"I think we're on a progressive trail," he continued.

"We got into the hardware (trophy) business and I think it means something to the kids when you bring something home," Fossum said.

After Belen's 148, Monty James was MSU's next finisher at 152. Tom Mase was third with a 153. Hill Herrick fourth with a 159. Rik Grover fifth with a 161, and Mike Thomsen, after his 225 for the 54 holes last week, slipped to sixth with a 165.

Linkswomen place sixth

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

When and if the sunshine and warm temperatures which usually characterize spring finally return to Michigan, MSU women's golf coach Mary Fossum will be a whole lot happier.

"I just think the girls are tired of playing in the bad weather," Fossum said Monday after returning from the Ohio State University Invitational held over the weekend in Columbus.

The linkswomen braved the cold, rainy and windy conditions in the sixth renewal of the OSU tourney to finish sixth in the 17-team field with a score of 1,012.

"That is a long golf course," Fossum said about the fabled Scarlet Course in Columbus. "It's 5,900 yards long but it's the longest 5,900 yards you could ever see. It plays more like 6,200."

Fossum noted the quickness of the greens, even in the rain the cold, which she said helped contribute to her team's high scorers.

"We didn't putt at all well," Fossum said, "except for one girl, sophomore Lisa Speaker, who did a lot of things well."

Speaker fired rounds of 81, 85 and 78 for a 244 total and a 12th place finish individually.

Softballers fifth in tourney

The Spartan softball squad played hot and cold as it finished tied for fifth in the fourth annual Redbird Invitational Softball Tournament at Illinois State University in Normal, Ill., last weekend.

The 16 teams in the tournament were divided into pools of four teams. Each team played one game against every other team in its pool with the top two teams advancing to a single-game elimination playoff to determine the championship.

The Spartans easily handled their first two opponents Friday, shutting out both Eastern Illinois State University, 7-0, and Ohio State University, 8-0, before falling to eventual tournament champion Texas A & M University, 5-0.

The Spartans and Texas A&M advanced from their pool into the single elimination playoffs, but the Spartans were drubbed by Indiana University, 11-0.

"In the first two games, our pitching was great," said MSU head coach Gloria Becksford. "In the first game Wendy (Greenwood) gave up, I think, one hit, so we were very strong on defense.

"Against Texas A & M, Laurel (Reynolds) started to get into trouble and they ended up winning 5-0.

"Indiana was much better," Becksford said. "They were strong on offense and defense. They got something like nine runs and scored 11 runs. They really hit the ball.

Weather permitting, the 9-8 Spartans will face Western Michigan University today in Kalamazoo to play a scheduled double-header and finish a tie game that was rained out here April 8.

Council considers budget

The 1980-81 East Lansing city budget will be presented to City Council at 7:30 tonight in the East Lansing Public Library, 950 Abbott Road.

The more than $15 million budget is divided into six categories, said Gary Murphy, the city's group manager for finance.

The six categories are community and human development, environmental and health protection, protection of persons and property, transportation, education and leisure time activities, and policy formulation and administration.

Figures for each of the categories will be released to the public at the meeting, Murphy said, including the amount earmarked for the Capital Area Transportation Authority.

CATA has requested all entities it serves give a 15 percent increase in subsidies. East Lansing is the second-highest contributor to CATA, topped only by Lansing.

The city budget is based on a $426,000 federal revenue sharing moneys. Although President Carter has proposed certain cuts to states in the revenue sharing moneys, all indications are that cities will receive the funds, Murphy said.

A public hearing on the budget is scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday, April 22, in the East Lansing Public Library.

After the budget is reviewed and possible recommendations are made by the council, it will be considered for approval May 22.

Poetress subject of luncheon

"The Imagery of a Poetress: Discussion of Women Writers" will be the topic of a brownbag luncheon from 12:15 to 1 p.m. today in 334 Union.

The luncheon, sponsored by the Women's Resource Center, will be offered in conjunction with the appearance of Adrienne Rich, renowned feminist poet, at 7 tonight in Erickson Kiva. Sharon Cogdill, president of the Council of Graduate Students, will discuss some of Rich's works at the luncheon.

The event is open to the public at no charge.
