Pigeon drawings begin Friday night

The 1983 Christmas season gets underway officially Friday night, as Pigeon Chamber of Commerce stores begin the year with a visit from Santa and the lighting of Pigeon's Community Christmas Tree, erected by the Pigeon Jaycees.

Santa and Mrs. Claus will bring Shivers the Snowman to town Friday at 6 p.m., to greet local kids. They'll be meeting children and giving out candy treats until 8 p.m., when they'll help light the Community Christmas Tree located uptown.

The public is invited to bring homemade ornaments to help decorate that tree, one of the largest in the entire area, according to Chamber spokesman June Kretzschmer.

A children's prize drawing will be held following the tree lighting, to give away more than a dozen goodies for boys and girls. Included is a brand new bike.

An adult drawing will follow about 8:15 p.m., with entry coupons available at Pigeon Chamber of Commerce members for each $5 of merchandise sold. Shopp-

A time for thankful families to gather together

Thanksgiving time in the Ed and Wanda Eichler Family includes more than just a big meal, parades and football games.

The Pigeon area family enjoys a song around their pump organ, to include religious involvement in Thanksgiving 1983.

Shown singing with their parents are seven-year-old Liesl, 10-year-old Willie and two-year-old Peter.

it is For These, My Thanks I Give

By MARY LEIPPRANDT

It was a golden sunrise that I saw, Sweet music had played and I heard. The scent of the rose is mine to inhale; And with tongue, I can speak by word...

The mile was rough, but I could walk. I have cradled small babes in my arms. I have felt soft winds blow through my hair, And I can value true friendship's charms.

My hands have soothed the sickened brow. I have tasted delicate fruits. My head can lift unto the sky, or it can bow to earthly roots.

My thoughts can be vast, or sometimes shallow.

I can feel joy, sorrow, or fear; My heart can have mingled feelings; My eyes can twinkle, or they can tear.

My body can feel warmth or coldness; My soul has knowledge of God. I can give vent to troubled feeling Or I am able to give praise and sweet laud.

This great gift that was given to me Is this life on earth that I live. These treasured things gold cannot buy. --- It is for these, My thanks I give.

Cross Lutheran School reschoolers enjoyed a trip Fluegge Foods in Pigeon last Wednesday, perhaps even more than shopping Teacher Cindy Engelhard wanted to teach the youngsters first-hand about the four food groups, especially before they sit down to a Thanksgiving feast at home. So she arranged a tour of Fluegge Foods with owners Otto and Loraine Fluegge.

Mayer serves as 'medical missionary'

In recent years the U.S. government became concerned with political developments in Central America; but former Pigeon resident Verda Mayer has put her concern for the people of that area in action by sharing her medical skills and Christian faith with them for over 10 years.

Mayer, a registered nurse, accepted a church missions assignment in 1967 by traveling to Costa Rica where she worked in a government medical clinic in a secluded area of the country near Panama. The closest medical help was 40 miles away, and reached only by traveling 20 miles on a road to a river crossed by boat, with the final 20 miles covered by

She worked four years at the clinic there with another American nurse, attending to the medical needs of the Blacks, Indians, Spanish and a few Chinese and Americans who lived in the vicinity.

The primary mode of transportation used by Mayer to make house calls was a small motorcycle. She encountered many different medical problems and Cuts, snakebites, pneumonia and many contagious diseases were among the problems treated by the American missionary nurse.

Vaccination was an important activity due to the prevalent contagious diseases, says Mayer.

She also worked with nutrition and prenatal care of pregnant women. The two American nurses also helped with home deliveries of babies there. In 1972 Mayer was transfered by her mission board to Nicaragua to establish a clinic in the heart of the country where no government medical help was available. The clinic was set up at Rio Blanco, a secluded rural

"I didn't know there were so many." We should feel this way when we begin to count our blessings.

Oh, certainly the threat of nuclear war, unrest in the Mideast, continuing unemployment and possible personal illness or despair are frustrating to us all. Certainly there are things in our lives which could be better.

But who can even begin to count all the blessings we enjoy as individuals, as members of a family, a church congregation, as residents of a city, township or village -- and as citizens of our United States, this great and free land?

We often take our blessings for granted...without a thought of the Giver, without a word of thanks. Sometimes we even seem to think we deserve or have in some way earned them.

We've lost the true meaning of Thanksgiving. It's become a day to over-eat turkey, dressing. mashed potatoes, pumpkin pie and so much else on our groaning tables. It's a day to watch a parade or two, catch two or three football games and maybe squeeze in a church service if there's time.

An informal, local survey shows Thanksgiving has lost lots of its original intent. Established as a day to give thanks to the Almighty for his blessings, the "giving thanks" portion has gotten diluted.

Thanksgiving symbols

The fourth Thursday of November is the official day of Thanksgiving, according to proclamation by the President of the United States. We celebrate the holiday in various ways. When we think of Thanksgiving, we usually think of the traditional dinner. What would Thanksgiving be without a turkey? Thanksgiving dinner may be what saved the turkey from becoming our national bird. We wouldn't think of serving roast eagle, now would we? Whatever - the turkey with all its accompaniments is a symbol important to all Americans. The turkey, squash, cranberries and pumpkin pie symbolize the harvest recently completed. Probably roast beef, ham and baked beans would be more symbolic in our particular area. We are thankful for a bountiful harvest. We read of hunger in the cities and hear of local food pantries being depleted and give thanks that we do have enough to eat and ask for the grace to share our plenty with those who don't

Another symbol of the season is a Pilgrim. Cards, posters and decorations of all kinds feature the black and white clad figures. It is good to remember the settlers who gave us this holiday. We are thankful for their courage in coming to a new land. We appreciate their perseverance under hardships we find difficult to imagine. When we remember the way the early Americans shared their meager menu with their neighbors, the Indians, we should be able to gladly share our blessings with our neighbors. Even as the Pilgrims and Indians gathered at the first Thanksgiving celebration we come together with family and friends to give thanks.

Modern-day Thanksgiving celebrations have come to include parades and football games. And we can give thanks for entertainment. Even the Pilgrims didn't go round with long faces all the time. They weren't real big on fun and games, but as my kids keep telling me, times were different then. Perhaps the football games are symbols of the struggles we all have -- gain a little and lose a little, but someone is going to win in the end. Sometimes that someone will be us. For the strength we get from the struggles and for the pleasure we get with a win, we give thanks.

Thanksgiving is a time of gathering. We've gathered the harvest. We gather memories of the year as we approach the end of the calendar. We gather families and friends around us to celebrate and thank God for all our blessings

Among the turkey, Pilgrims, parades and football games, don't forget what the symbols are all about.

That local survey brought several laughs, when people were asked if they were truly thankful for anything. One person said he couldn't think of much of anything for which to be thankful.

A few folks expressed genuine thanks for health, spouses, home, employment, family and life itself. But too many people think they've somehow earned those things, too.

That's dead wrong!

It's certainly true this has not been the best year for some of us. Some of us no longer enjoy the health or happiness we once had. But we are still alive! We have a roof over our heads, a bed to sleep in, clothes to wear, food on our

These are blessings directly from our Creator. Giving thanks doesn't really work if you're going to do it only on a national holiday.

Instead of using this Thursday for a big meal (and then a time to fall asleep during a ball game), why not let this be a springboard for a daily ritual of showing appreciation for what we have?! Few people feel they have enough, probably, but we all have plenty. Plenty more than we actually need.

That's something to be grateful for every day of our lives.

Pete Progress says:

"If a person isn't thankful for what he's got, he isn't likely to be thankful for what he's going to get.

It's not what's in your pocket that makes you thankful, but what's in your heart!"

Ever stop and realize the number of things you save that are a bit unusual? Just small items that clutter up boxes and drawers that mean nothing to anyone else, and probably not much to you anymore -- except a good

Most people tend to save newspaper articles, whether it be a wedding story or comings have you saved that simply serve no purpose? C'mon, what about all those recipes you cut out but have never tried and chances are you never will?

Some people have a fetish for saving the so-called "odds and ends." Things that have obviously fallen off a bigger object. Yet think about how many times you have never figured out what that little "odd" piece belongs to - and it never really mattered that you didn't figure it out.

What about jars? How many times have you kept a jam or jelly jar to use for storing something trivial? And of course, you always have more jars than you have things to put in the jars. And of course, you still keep saving those jars!

How many times have you lost a button, but didn't give it too much thought because in one of your many jam or jelly jars, you have "spare" buttons? But seldom do those "spare" buttons ever match the ones you lost!

Hmmmmm, just came across a clothes pin. What on earth did I save that for?! Be sure to have a super is the freezing of body tissue. It most often occurs on the hands and feet as the result of inadequate insulation in boots or gloves for long periods of time. The skin becomes numb and stiff as it begins to freeze.

Frostbite victims should warm the injured area slowly by immersing the affected area in water that is slightly above normal body temperature. Someone who is not cold should take care to insure that the water is not too hot, as the frostbite victim will not be able to judge the temperature. Those with blistering due to frostbite should seek immediate medical attention.

Especially during this special holiday season, we are pleased to take a moment to show our great thanks for the many good things we enjoy as Americans.

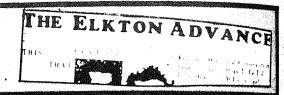

We live in the best and most free land on the face of the earth. Our choices are not whether or not we have clothes to wear or food to eat, but which items to wear and what foods to eat. Those are ours thanks in part to the bounty of our farmers.

We have family members, friends, health, employment, enjoyment and so many other things -- and we have a generous portion of these things.

So when we raise a Wick roof it stays that way—high and dry!

When roofs are secured firmly in place with unique Wick screw fasteners, rain, wind pressure and snow loads can not intimidate them. Research shows that the roof of a Wick building is strengthened since screw fasteners resist wind stress. And they lock into wood fibers with 122% greater pull-out resistance then the typically used nails. Penetration raises steel around the scew shank, forming a positive seal. This helps eliminate roof leak problems caused by nails that can loosen and back out due to the action caused by winds and snow loading. Come on in today and learn about the many other extra-strengths of Wick

A form of dishonesty some feel is harmless, shoplifting is the most common of crimes, involving all age, sex and socio-economic differences

National retailers report $56 billion in losses due to shoplifting in 1981, according latest figures available. Michigan retailers report losses of $1.95 billion in 1981, an increase of $50 million over the previous year.

Customers often don't realize that they are the ones paying for shoplifting activity. Government studies show many shopowners markup prices on their goods by 10 percent in an effort to cover

Our Michigan Kitchen By Mr. Jean Charest

Desserts from our Michigan Christmas

The dessert should be dramatic. It should have glamour. Unless it creates a little stir of interest by its appearance, there is no object in having this final course. A dinner can perfectly well end after the main course -- no one is really hungry by the time the dessert is reached

Dessert does give the finishing touch to a good meal, so make it interesting and attractive. In our Michigan Kitchen Gertrude is the resident artist who is most usually assigned the task of providing a dramatic dessert for our "special occasions." However, on one occasion, about six weeks ago, we saw an Italian recipe for "Budino deplomatico con salsa all vaniglia," you can forget its Italian name and simply remember it as "Diplomat Pudding with Custard Sauce."

This was a very nice dessert which allowed me to impress guests who all requested the

on the mixture, skim it off. Add the vanilla. Butter a large ring mold and sprinkle it with the sugar, tilting in all directions to coat it well, and tapping out the excess. Place alternate layers of ladyfingers pieces (or you may use pound cake when ladyfingers are not available), raisins and rum-soaked fruit. Carefully pour in the egg/milk mixture adding it by intervals so that the ladyfingers become well soaked and do not float. Place the mold in a pan of hot water deep enough to come ¾ up its sides, cover the mold loosely with a sheet of aluminum foil slashed in several places to allow steam to escape, and place in a 300° oven for 45 minutes, or until a knife inserted in the center of the pudding emerges clean. Remove from the oven, lift out of the water bath, let it rest for 20 minutes, and unmold it onto a serving platter.

Note: If you plan to serve this cold, leave it in the mold for 45 minutes, then unmold onto the platter, place in a refrigerator and serve three hours later. The Italians serve this with Custard Sauce. CUSTARD SAUCE

BAKED ALASKA

Solidly frozen ice cream enclosed in a hot meringue crust is always a mystery to the guests, besides providing a delicious contrast of flavors, textures and heat and cold. Actually, this dish is based upon a sound scientific principle: insulation. The cake (or pie crust) and meringue contain so many tiny air holes and provide such excellent insulation against heat, that rock-hard ice cream will remain rock hard inspite of the oven heat. A baked Alaska must be served at once, so that the meringue is still hot. This recipe comes to you fom the Holland House Restaurant of Warwick, Rhode Island.

1 rectangle or round of sponge cake, at least 1" 3 T. preferred liquor or rum flavor Cut the take into a 9" circle. Allow the ice cream to soften. When ice cream is soft enough, shape it into ound domed shape, no larger than 7½ or 8 inches. Place the ice cream in the center of the round of cake. Place the cake on an oven-proof platter (not metal) and store in freezer until you have made your meringue. At serving time you will have to work quickly. Remove the cake and ice cream from the freezer and sprinkle the ice cream with the liquor and candied fruit if you choose to use them. Spread the prepared meringue over the ice cream, making sure that it is spread evenly and that there are no bare spots or gaps. Work quickly and calmly, and do not allow the ice cream to start melting. Place the meringue covered cake/cream in a preheated 400° oven and leave it there untl the meringue turns golden brown (from five to

seven minutes). Remove from oven and serve. ITALIAN MERINGUE

8 egg whites (room temperature)

Pinch cream of tartar (or 1 T. white corn syrup)

Place the egg whites, salt and cream of tartar in a large, round bottomed metal bowl. Let stand at room temperature while you prepare the sugar syrup. Place the sugar and water in an enamel pan and stir until the mixture is quite clear (or whirl in the blender at high speed for 10 to 15 seconds). Cover pan and bring sugar to a simmer over low heat. Remove cover (it allows the steam to wash down any sugar crystals clinging to the sides of the pan), and cook without stirring until it reaches the softball stage (238° on the candy neter). When sugar has reached 230° begin to beat the egg whites with a wire whisk or electric mixer (one hand must be used for beating, the other for pouring in the syrup; for this reason the rotary beater is impractical). When egg whites are beaten until they form soft peaks and sugar has reached 238° pour in the syrup in a slow, very fine, steady stream, beating whites very vigorously all the time. When syrup has become used up, continue beating until cool. Your meringue is ready to be used. Enjoy your Thanksgiving.

Time for thanks

Recently on a beautiful fall afternoon as I stepped into a tiny farm woodlot and let my lungs fill with the bittersweet air of October I reflected on how lucky I was to live in an area where I can enjoy the outdoors that I love so much. My mind raced as it sorted hundreds jof little happenings which occurred during the last year that made me thankful for the wooded hillsides, clear flowing streams, bounties of fish and game and pest of all, people to share it with. Most of these occurrences are not terrible important when compared to the nightly news, but little and insignificant as they may seem, they stock up in the storage compartments of my mind to be pulled out at a later date and savored like a piece of fine chocolate.

As I contemplate the Thanksgiving season, I think again of these simple events that can no longer go unnoticed. Although the list is by no means complete, the following came quickly to mind as needing atten-

I am thankful for:

Living in a four-season state where there are multiple outdoor activities to enjoy all year long. The nicest part is that if you're bored with what you're doing, you ony have to wait three months for a change. -- Having a pair of hunting dogs that allow me to keep them even though I don't spend as much time in the field as I should. -- Howard Tanner and Troy Yoder who were instrumental in developing the Great Lakes into one of the hottest fishing holes in the world. Now all I have to do is travel some 50 miles to be in the best salmon and trout fishing in the state.

-- A little gray-haired lady who invited me to hunt on her 160-acre farm, only to find that it is smack-dab in the middle of the highest turkey population in the northern

-- My woodstove, which produces a type of radiant heat that finally keeps me warm in the winter. Oh yes, it warms me twice. Once while I'm cutting the wood, and the other when I burn it. - A brother who leased 320 acres of the best deer woods in the Reed City area, and is always looking for someone to hunt with. -- The DNR officials who had the foresight to establish a "catch and release" program on the South Branch of the AuSable River. Decisions like this allow mediocre fishermen like myself to have fabulous

- A wife who decides she can take better pictures than I can. And because of her vanity, she gets stuck carrying the camera and other equipment during all our vacations.

-- Mallards who cup their wings and slip sideways into your decoys while you try to pour a cup of scalding hot coffee. And staying long enough to allow you to set it down and grab your gun.

Lodge owners who give you a ride upstream and drop you off in one of their favorite fishing spots. And point out a couple of good holes before they leave. The Thumb Steelheaders who have become the "watchdogs" of the super Lake Huron fishery that is being developed. even a new and struggling puppy can get an honest, if not ungainly, point and hold it long enough for me to get close enough to shoot.

A couple of editors (bless their souls) who think enough of my broken-down writing that they've kept me on staff for almost two years (and they pay me

- A guy in Midland who bought a sailboat and decided that he didn't want his canoe any longer. And to all the guys who answered his ad and didn't buy it so it would still be there when I finally got around to looking up the address.

-- Mail-order companies who keep me supplied in catalogs above and beyond my

- The Vermont Casting Company who puts on the biggest and best picnic I've ever

- A stranger on the main branch of the AuSable River who motioned me over for some conversation and ended up splitting his apple and a piece of cheese with me while we talked. After eating, he pulled a ratty-looking fly off of the fleece pad on his vest, attached it to my leader and pointed to a slick at the end of a pool. On the third clumsy cast a brilliantly-colored 14-inch Brookie made me feel like an expert flyfisherman by hooking himself in such a manner that even I couldn't lose him.

-- Readers who constantly make me feel super by telling me they enjoy my articles. - A couple of brothers who, in the absence of a hunting father, found time to have an inquisitive, tow-headed brother tag along on numerous hunting and fishing trips.

-- Trout Unlimited and Ducks Unlimited, through whose efforts I am still able to experience the thrill of a trout's tug and hear he lonesome mallard's call.

- The Sage Rod Company, who makes such a good flyrod that even I look like I know what I'm doing during a cast.

- The best charter captain on Lake Huron taking the time to call me for an early spring fishing trip, and letting me land the big-

"What's your trouble?"

Read Isaiah 26:1-6

All that the Father gives Me will come to Me; and him who comes to Me I will not cast out. John 6:37

One doesn't need to be an analyst to detect that something is wrong when a friend wears a frown, when his or her countenance is downcast.

It is perfectly normal to ask, "What's the trouble?" We may not always receive the true answer, but some kind of reaction will be forthcoming. Isn't it great to know that we have a God who doesn't need to ask the question, because He is omniscient -- He knows all things? Nothing is hidden from him. God invites us to come before His throne in prayer, seeking His help and looking for His solution to our problem. St. James reminds us, "You do not have, because you do

But more than that, through His word God offers us wisdom and strength in facing up to our problem, and the ability to cope with the most painful situation

This is what St. Paul learned in all his troubles. God told him, "My grace is sufficient for you, for My power is made perfect in weakness.'

Having experienced this ourselves, we are now able to help others amid their problems.

We can given an answer to all who come to us for guidance and advice in their troubles.

O Father of our Lord Jesus Christ and our Father, give us the wisdom of Your Word to cope with all our troubles. Amen.

She says the situation there was frustrating because many people returned with the same diseases. This prompted efforts to teach health practices to the people there. Classes for local health leaders were also established to train them in health services.

After a year and a half, Mayer returned to the States for a furlough, then returned to Nicaragua for the next eight years to coordinate a rural health program. She directed about 10 American nurses in four different health leaders, she explains. Some of the reasons for that belief include: the bulk of human illnesses are comprised by only a few diseases, most illnesses are easily determined by easily recognized symptoms and can be cured by simple medicines and remedies,

Improvement of sanitation practices taught by the missionaries, such as the use of pure water and latrines reduced medical problems drastically.

"The key was getting them to see how they can help themselves," says Mayer. The local health leaders were able to treat most of the problems they encountered, and referred those which required more medical knowledge to doctors.

Mayer served in Nicargua during the Sandinista revolution during 1978-79, but left the country less than two weeks before the Samoza government was toppled. She had intended to work with refugees across the border in Costa Rica, but returned to Nicargua just two weeks after the fighting ended.

"But Doctor, I do floss! How can I be getting new decay between my teeth?

Above is a typical statement from a conscientious patient who may have just learned that he or she has new interproximal (between the teeth) decay. Proper flossing usually does stop this from occurring. The key is "proper". Flossing must be done properly in order to effectively remove the plaque which ultimately may cause dental decay.

First of all, the floss itself should be unwaxed if at all possible. Waxed floss is designed to slip more readily between teeth. However, fibers of unwaxed floss are more efficient in plaque removal.

Second, the action of the floss itself needs to be correct in order to be effective. Imagine two bowling balls placed so that they touch each other tightly. Imagine also a super goey mixture of something like flour and water covering the bowling balls. One way of cleaning the surfaces of the bowling balls which face the other bowling balls would be to pass a piece of binder twin between them and rub (floss) the surfaces (proximal) of the balls which face each other. If the twin were to pass straight down, almost no goo would be removed. f, however, the twine is pressed or pulled around the bowling ball and then moved up and down for several strokes, the fibers of the binder twine would remove the goo. The same principal applies to teeth only on a smaller scale. In the mouth, a straight up and down motion will also cause discomfort to the gum tissue between the teeth.

This and last, frequency of plaque removal by flossing is critical. Flossing should be a daily routine in order to keep plaque from damaging teeth and gums. Hopefully, improved techniques with unwaxed floss on a daily basis will result in more checkups in which more people can say "look Ma, no cavities".
