Josh knew what to do when a fire starts...

It was just another day to Joshua Rosenthal -- mostly. But his mom and dad know better, and they're grateful their four-year-old son knew what to do when a kitchen fire occurred at their S. Elkton Road home about 7:30 last Mon-

The youngster saved the family's house, and possibly his mother's and brother's lives, by his cool response to a fire

Josh's mother, Dawn, had some chicken stock cooking on the stove, as she was making soup. As the pot cooked, she was on the phone and looking away from the kitchen as she chatted with a friend. Josh and his two-year-old brother Adam (A.J.) were also at home. Dad Brian Rosenthal was at work, on second shift at Pigeon Manufacturing Corp.

"Josh came running to me saying the stove was burning, Dawn Rosenthal recalled. "I didn't believe him and told him, 'no it's not, it's just bubbling,' but he came back again and

The mother went into the kitchen and saw a problem developing, and responded naturally. "I took the lid off, which I probably shouldn't have done," she says, and the overheated pan exploded grease all over.

Mrs. Rosenthal was badly burned on her face and right arm, and fire was everywhere around the stove -- and ignited a nearby couch.

Josh saw what was happening and knew just what to do.

The four-year-old carried the telephone outside, entered the house again and grabbed little brother A.J. and brought him outside, too. He calmly called his grandparents, Don and Lorraine Metzger, also of Elkton, who live two houses south, and yelled, "Grandma! Grandpa! There's a fire!"

Josh then made sure to stay outside with A.J., while his mother struggled to put out the fire inside. She grabbed a garden hose, hosed the fire off herself and extinguished the fire spreading around the couch.

"The house would have been gone if I would have had to get Josh and A.J. outside to safety," Mrs. Rosenthal believes. "I could just put out the fire, since I could see the kids were okay."

When the Metzgers arrived minutes later, "Josh had Adam in the corner of the porch, in the safety area," Lorraine Metzger recalls. "We helped Dawn finish putting out the fire, but Josh is the one who made the difference.'

A passerby saw smoke billowing out of the house and helped take care of the two children, while the Metzgers drove their burned daughter to the hospital for emergency treatment. She was admitted for three days, with burns on about 10% of her body.

'Oh, Josh was excited, but he kept his head clear," Mrs. Metzger says. "I remember seeing him jumping up and down as our car stopped, but who wouldn't be? He was screaming a lot, but he wasn't scared."

Dad Brian says Josh has actually picked up his brother A.J. before, when needed. "Josh just grabs him and carries him down the steps," he says.

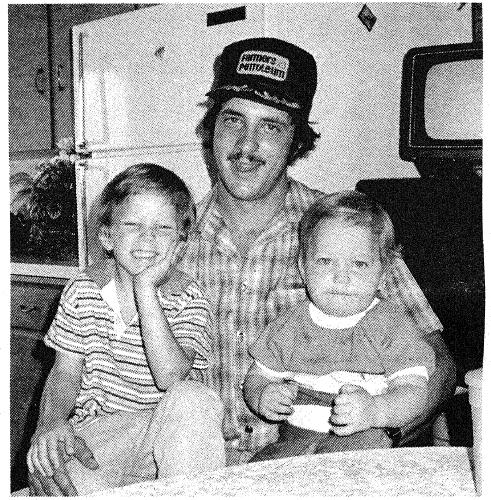

Josh remembers the incident clearly, and says he wasn't worried. "There was a fire in the house and Mom got all burned up. Her skin came off her arm right here," he points in explanation. He says he took the phone outside, got his brother safely out, and then remembered his grandparents' phone number to call for help. Nothing to it, he figures.

But he has no bad dreams or other problems - except a small elbow burn from the burning pot as his mother threw it

Brian and Dawn Rosenthal give much credit to the Head Start education Josh has received in daily classes in Pigeon. "Connie Smeader keeps telling the kids how to be a helping hand, and they talked about what to do in a fire," Mrs. Rosenthal says. "Josh did real great. He's the story

Josh says he remembers the three important words from Head Start fire training -- "We learned if there's a fire, you should stop, drop and roll," he says seriously. And that's what he did.

BRAVE LAD: Four-year-old Josh Rosenthal of Elkton, left, is held with his little brother, Adam (A.J.), on the lap of their father, Brian Rosenthal. Josh's elbow shows the only burn he received in the fire last Monday at the family's home, which threatened to destroy the house on S. Elkton Road.

The Aug. 11 fire occurred on the Rosenthal's anniversary, coincidentally -- which should give them plenty of anniversary memories in coming years.

The Village of Elkton plans to give young Josh a commendation or medal, but the little boy doesn't know about that fireman," he says.

yet. He does know his Aunt Suzy Licht gave him a pin, and he's proud of that.

But after being involved in such a dangerous incident, you'd think Josh would want to steer clear of any danger. But not THIS four-year-old.

What does he want to be when he grows up? "I'd like to be a

3 BROTHERS DIE IN FIRE

Three young Sebewaing brothers perished in a Sunday disapproval of the lesbian-owned private facility.

Rev. Harvey Fry of Bad Axe's Free Methodist Cl ing described as the worst death toll in recent memory.

Three of the four sons of Dean and Kathy Weisenbach --Nicholas, 5, Bryan, 3 and Jeffrey, 1 -- died in the bathroom of the house as fire raced through the house and totally destroyed it about 10:30 a.m. A fourth son, Clinton, 7, was at a neighbor's house when the fire of unknown origin began.

The parents were in the front part of the home, but the flames spread so fast that they were driven out by smoke and heat, they told police, expecting their children were all outside. The Michigan State Fire Marshal is investigating, following work by Sebewaing Village Police, Huron County Sheriff Department and Sebewaing Fire Department of-

Rev. Harvey Fry of Bad Axe's Free Methodist Church says the group he leads, Citizens United for Decency, plans to picket from 5 to 9 p.m. Aug. 22, and expects to do so every Friday and Saturday until October. The idea to picket came after meetings between camp opponents and their attorneys,

The planned action follows an Aug. 9 "wedding" between two women at the camp, although Rev. Fry says that didn't result in the decision to publicly oppose the camp. Camp members say they'll watch the picketers as members drive to and from the camp on Blakely Road, east of Owendale.

2 SPECIAL ELECTIONS

The Huron County Election Scheduling Committee has approved separate special elections for Lake and Hume ownships for Monday, Sept. 29.

Huron County Clerk Helen Lemanski says Lake Township voters near Caseville will be asked to approve two mills for two years, 1986-87, in a millage renewal proposal, with 11/2 mills for road improvements and the remaining 12-mill for police protection.

When the late President John F. Kennedy ate breakfast on that fateful Friday morning in 1963, probably the thought furthest from his mind was that by two o'clock that afternoon he would be in eternity.

We never know. Only God knows the hour when our death will come.

What we do know, because God has told us, is that our time on earth is limited and the days keep passing rapidly and continuously.

The Holy Scriptures use the movement of time.

Job says that days pass as quickly as "a weaver's shut-

He reminds us that we are strangers and sojourners, since we are God's children, our real home is His home

While we are on earth, we serve God and prepare to go to that home.

We trust in His son Jesus Christ, who died and rose that we might live forever. Meanwhile we have work to do for Christ.

As Missionary C.T. Studd said, "Only one life, 'twill different analogies to picture soon be past; only what's done for Christ will last."

Beginning before Nov. 15, Caro Community Hospital will no longer deliver babies, as the facility's directors have voted to "temporarily discontinue" obstetrics services. Skyrocketing liability insurance costs and falling birth

Officials say the closing is only temporary, until the Hospital is strong enough financially to support the O.B. ward again. That ward has been operating at a loss for many years, they say, but the Hospital itself is in no danger of clos-

Bridge Crossing

The Michigan Dapartment of Tourism is telling us that Mackinac Bridge crossings have taken a turn upward this summer. The kids and I can vouch for that as we waited through a quarter mile of traffic to pay toll after crossing from south to north during a recent trip to Wisconsin. We crossed on a rainy, windy Friday in the nastiest weather that I've ever crossed the bridge, so the quarter mile at the toll booths was a surprise.

A greater surprose was the jamup at the St. Ignace McDonald's where we decided to lunch. We'd packed a picnic cooler but the liquid weather didn't give us a chance to sit outside and eat. The lines at McDonald's were five people deep and five in number and we had to spot a table and hold it long before we could get our food. Ah, yes, the joy of summer travel. We did get our first helpings of Oriential McNuggets, the latest packaging gimmick.

The return trip was a contrast of beautiful weather, little traffic and wonderful pasties from the Mackinaw City Pasty Company. Willie and I downed two of the traditional Cornish beef pasties without gravy while Liesl and Peter ate their traditional fare -- hot dogs. An employee who visited with us while taking her coffee break turned out to be one of the former owners of the shop whose ancestors brought the pasty recipe with them from England. She told us that they'd made eight batches pasties so far that day and that each batch numbers 160 pasties! We thought that was just a lot of

We also learned that the true Cornish pasty contains beef (they use steak), potatoes, onions and rutabagas. Willie didn't even know what rutabagas are and I had to admit that my acquaintance with them has been limited. Whatever, the results are delicious and well worth the stop in Mackinaw City for a taste which is actually a meal.

Now, for the great announcement! Wanting to keep order (somewhat) in the car and urge observant eyes, we started keeping track of license plates on our trip. Mind you, we traveled down Michigan's Thumb on M-25, up the Lower Peninsula on I-75, across the Upper Peninsula on US-2 and on into Wisconsin via M-35 along Green Bay and US-41 which runs just a mile from my folks' farm south of Fond du Lac,

I boldly announcede when we began writing down license plates that we'd do well to get 15 states recorded. The kids figured 20 to 25. We soon realized that Canadian provinces would have to be included in our count. The grand total?

Twenty-five, plus four Canadian provinces We bagged all the midwestern states, one Alaska plate (an RV parked along Lake Michigan). several Texas vehicles, the mountain states of Colorado, Montana and Wyoming, and Arkansas, Florida, California, Teneessee, Pennsylvania and Oklahoma. Canadian province plates sighted were Ontario, Alberta, Manitoba and Saskatchewan. Some of the more distant eastern seaboard plates came off the semis running on the major highways we traveled, but most of the plate sightings were cars or campers.

While chatting at the pasty shop, the lady told us that their daily business was up by over 30% each day with some days topping 60% more pasties made than on the same day the year before. I don't know if gas prices were the cause or if we timid Americans chose to stay home in the good old U.S.A. this summer because of terrorism or if the weather has been generally better than last year, but judging from the license plates and the lines at Mackinaw, the evidence is there -Michigan tourism is booming this summer.

That's good to hear. Our agriculturally based economy is have a difficult time and the domino effect on property taxes, school millages, and families leaving farming is taking a toll in rural Michigan. It's good to know that the rural people (for tourism is much a rural industry) who are involved in seasonal work are doing well. Maybe their propserity will rub off on the price of beans and wheat! (Gee, I wonder if somebody could come up with a Huron County bean pasty. kinda like a burrito ... we could sell tham just like the bean soup ... hmm!).

surpluses? How will it EVER be disposed of? There aren't enough export markets on this earth to consume all these crops. And, other worldwide producers often undercut our prices and get the orders first.

Then, there's the problem of bean eaters. Somehow, we've got to increase consumption of dry navies... because national trends are quite the opposite.

Twenty years ago, Americans ate about $7\frac{1}{2}$ pounds of dry beans per year — as baked beans, pork and beans, three-bean salads, etc. That's not a huge amount by any means (we already eat 11 pounds of watermelon, per capita, nearly 16 pounds of noncaloric sweeteners and 76 pounds of potatoes each year!), but the number has been slowly declining. The most recent bean figures available, from 1984, show we're now eating 6.1 pounds of beans annually.

The very poor aren't big bean eaters, as might be expected — nor are the very rich. Use of beans is greatest in the upper level of the small-income range. And, smaller American families — with one or more working family heads — don't have the time (or don't take the time) to make bean recipes former generations

You don't see beans on any major restaurant menus either, which works against further expansion of any sales efforts. Part of that reason is there's no single-serving, easy-to-handle packaging available. There should be, to help increase sales.

More marketing is needed, and that's spelled 'dollars." Advertisements must be purchased, following the tracks of very successful "Milk is a Natural!" campaigns conducted by the American Dairy Association in recent years. Milk is being recalled more and more in ad surveys as an alternative drink to soda pop.

Bean marketers ARE trying. They're coming out with sodium-reduced and "light" varieties. and are pointing up the very good nutritional values of beans.

But it's an uphill fight. And it won't be solved overnight. Local bean farmers face many more crops of $14 and $15 "break-even" crops before true successes will be seen -- if ever...

'Behind every successful man stands a surprised mother-in-law!'

We started to talk together and I told her that years ago when my Dad used to get gas, he'd say "Put in five gallons" and give the man $1 and get back some change!

When the man asked if Dad needed oil, he'd take an iron rod about three feet long with a hook on the end and look under the car and turn a pitcock. If the oil came out fast, he didn't need any -- but if he turned the bottom one and it came out slow or not at all, he'd need a quart of oil. It would cost 15 cents to 25

And we had to wear long black stockings and a supporter belt with supporters on them to keep them up.

So if you'd change your collar, and have it all stacked up so stiff that you couldn't hardly turn your 'head, and have a bow tie on and a collar button behind and in front, you were well dressed.

And, of course, you'd have to have button shoes on and if you didn't wear a coat, you had to have sleeve holders

Another point of common interest, as far as I'm concerned, he is a porch - sitting philosopher who has some positive viewpoints concerning life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness in this day and age. He was in automobile sales work and last evening we reminisced about the early cars and the car dealers in the Thumb.

My memory of the early car dealers in Pigeon is rather sketchy. Hugh Harder had the Ford Agency Ernest Paul had Buick and Frank Diebel had Chevrolet

Details of our first car comes into clearer focus. Along with other hopefuls, Dad signed up for a Ford in November of 1916, paying half down to secure the deal. The flivver was delivered in April, 1917. No wonder it was said in those years that having a Ford agency was like having a license to print money cash in advance, no trade-in, no financing, no options or models and no lack of customers panting to be next

Hugh Harder took success in stride. He earned his posi tion as a good citizen or Main Street and he kept it.

The Buick Agency was somewhat of a side-line sales activity for Ernest Paul, who had a well-established farm implement business. That changed quickly in the World War I years when farm prosperity (beans at $20 bushel) prompted a demand for more status and comfort than a flivver provided.

Buick sales and service became an important part of the business of E. Paul and Son. The Chevrolet sales operation was not very flourishing. As local lore would have it, "Frank Diebel was a mechanic and a good one. He liked to fix things. There was a lot of paper work in selling cars there was nothing to fix.'

Cannot remember if Leipprandt Bros. sold cars or not but there must have been a considerable free-lance selling in the area. Essex, Maxwell, Dodge, Elgin, Hupmobile, Reo and Studebaker were familiar names and battled the heavy clay roads of that day. Few of them

The Studebaker, sturdy and cumbersome, had a seven - passenger model that had considerable appeal to large families and the barnyard humorists.

That large back seat area prompted immediate humor concerning posterior amplitudes, country roads and moonlit nights and shotgun weddings.

The Foods of Michigan

of Michigan's agricultural roots.

by Linda Hughes

For more than a century, farming was the major way of life here. The skills of farming were not only admired, they were essential to survival. They were passed from one generation to the next, in a long, gradual process.

In past fairs, agricultural and homemaking exhibits were the main attractions. This yer's - which runs from August 22 to September 1 in Detroit — has more worldly interests. There's rock and country music, carnival rides, game booths, etc.

But the modern fair has enough farm and food exhibits to remind us of Michigan's roots. During the 1800s, pioneers flocked to Michgan from the Eastern US, from Europe and Scandinavia. They bought land from the government or from logging companies after the trees had been cut. These hardy pioneers cleared the land, removed stumps, rocks, trees and brush. They tilled the land, built houses, barns and outbuildings. They shaped a way of life that continued for several generations — the family farm. Farm women took great pride in their kitchen skills. They created foods that were remarkable despite difficult kitchen conditions.

Here are some recipes that have roots in Michigan's agricultural past:

CUSTARD APPLE TART (Elegant, but easy to make)

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour

1/2 teaspoon salt 2/3 cup shortening

6 tablespoons water 2/3 cup dry bread crumbs

1/2 teaspoon sugar 2 teaspoons ground cinnamon 1/2 teaspoon salt

6 cups sliced, pared apples 1/4 cup butter or margarine

4 eggs 11/2 cups heavy cream

1/2 cup sugar 1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg

2/3 cup apple jelly Mix salt with flour. Cut in shortening until crumbly. Sprinkle water over this mixture; stir until moistened. Shape into a ball.

Divide dough in half.

Roll each ball of dough on a lightlyfloured surface to a 12-inch circle. Line 10-inch flan pans (or pie pans) with dough. Combine bread crumbs, 1/2 teaspoon sugar, cinnamon and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Sprinkle half this mixture in the bottom of each pan. Arrange apple slices over the crumbs, overlapping slices. Dot with but-

Bake at 425 degrees for 15 minutes.

Beat eggs well. Stir in cream, 1/2 cup sugar and nutmeg. Pour over apples in each pan. Reduce heat to 375 degrees; bake 25 minutes, or until custard is set and apples are tender. Heat apple jelly in a saucepan over low heat; stir. Spoon over hot tarts. Cool. Makes 2 tarts.

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Add to creamed mixture, blending well. Stir in walnuts.

Spread in a greased 9-inch square baking pan. Sprinkle confectioners sugar evenly over the top.

Bake at 350 degrees for about 35 minutes. Cool; cut in 11/2-inch squares. Makes 25 squares.

POTATOES WITH SAUSAGE

about 12 cups. To make basic biscuits: Combine 2 cups of Make-ahead Biscuit Mix and 1/2 cup water. Mix with a fork just enough to make

Now after all these years of standing on my feet, they're vised me to spend far less time on my feet.

That's when I aspired to my dream, which is to stay home and sew for people. I already do some dressmaking on evenings and weekends. My biggest problem is the need for supplies which I can't afford because, realistically, retail work pays very little.

If I could get started on this, I could work fewer days, sew more at home and eventually it could become a full-time business. Someday I would like to be able to replace my 20 year old sewing machine with a new one. That, it itself, would be a dream come true. My problem seems very small compared to some people you help, but I feel my dream has merit. Do you? - Mrs. M.A., St. Louis, Mo.

According to Jim LeCureux, Ubly sheepraiser and a Huron County ag extension agent, about 800 to 1000 people visited the event during its Friday and Saturday run at the under-oneroof new Activities Center on the Huron Community Fairgrounds. "The new facility was a definite plus for the affair. We put exhibitors with spinning and weaving equipment, fibers, clothing, books, animal care items and various other things in the east wing of the building and used the west wing for animals - goats, colored and white wool sheep. Most of the activities and demonstrations took place in the arena ring, which is large enough to accommodate two activities at the same time.'

Sheep shearing, an interesting operation to watch, even for those who are accustomed to it, was demonstrated several times on both days. On Saturday morning, a sheep was sheared while three spinners and a weaver stood by. As soon as fleece began to fall from the animal, spinners began filling bobbins with spinning and weaving. Other demonstrations involved angora rabbits, which have to be plucked to harvest their fibers. One rabbit can produce as much as one ounce of fiber in a plucking -- long, soft fiber that makes elegant mittens, hats and sweaters. Border collies used to herd sheep were a feature of the arena one day, as almost everyone present took a break and jammed the arena viewing area to see the carefully trained dogs at work.

Lamb dishes were featured at the food concession as lamb barbecues in pita bread and lamb bratwurst were the main menu items. For many people, is was a rare exposure to the tasty meat which is not commonly available in grocery meat departments.

Over 50 exhibitors from all over the state showed animals during the two days. Included wee angora goats, angora rabbits, a jackpot market lamb show for 4-Hers, Suffolk sheep and a wool show where the sheep is judged not only for body characteristics, but also for the quality of fleece carried. Visitors from all over the state, especially the western and southern parts, joined with some out-of-state folks to produce a good crowd at the event. While many were amiliar with some aspect of animal or fiber production, there were some who visited and were treated to a firsttime, hands-on display of a facet of Thumb agriculture still unfamiliar to most Thumb residents.

One display had to be done outside as wool dyers worked all day on Saturday outside the east wing of the Activities Center. Working over fine beginning.

THROUGH THIS NEWSPAPER YOU HOLD THE WORLD IN YOUR HANDS

hether you hold your newspaper upright or spread it out on the dining room table doesn't matter. The important thing is that you are reading it; and that although it may consist of the most inexpensive grade of paper obtainable, its value otherwise is priceless. You are quite literally looking at the whole world and the day's happenings all over it, fairly and honestly reported. This includes the events of your own community, which could have a direct effect on you and your future. Moreover, you are aided in forming your own conclusions about all these occurrences by means of editorial comments and the opposing views of noted columnists, who show you all sides of an issue. You are also aided in your choice of a religious service to attend, by a convenient House of Worship directory. All things considered, your newspaper is truly your passport to the world and everything that goes on in it.

Woods WATERS By Duane Guenther

Cronies

Webster and I disagree. In his New Collegiate Dictionary he defines the term "crony" as being a close friend; especially of long standing. While I agree my cronies are close friends, and perhaps they could remain friends over long periods of time, not once does he mention hunting or fishing camps. As any outdoorsman worth his salt readily knows, cronies only appear in hunting and fishing camps, and they have special characteristics. Cronies are always older than you, and smarter, too, or at least they think so. You never befriend a crony, they befriend you - if that's what you want to call it. And finally, a crony's friendship seems to flourish in hunting and fishing places and lapses dramatically when you return to the real world. Let me tell you about a few of mine.

Chuck is an outdoorsman. He hunts, fishes, traps, and would virtually "live off the land" if the local DNR officer would let him. While he demonstrates extreme skill at all of his endeavors, it is at the sport of bow hunting where he really shines.

I met Chuck at an outdoor archery shoot many years ago, or should I say he met me. I was struggling with a round of "roving archery", a contest resembling golf except you use arrows rather than balls. He appeared at my shoulder. His assumption was simple. I needed help. He could help me. The rest is history.

For the next dozen years, Chuck and I became cronies during bow hunting

During that time, he taught me how to shoot, track, trail, gut and drag. Most of the time we worked with his deer, but that was OK because when we were together it seemed more like our deer.

bow hunting. He would just call me on the phone and announce, in a matter-of-factmanner, that he would be at the tree blind in the flats, or the ground blind at Cemetery Hill. If I wanted to go, I just chummed around together socially. He and his family had their life, and I and mine had ours. We rarely saw each other during the course of the year, but were almost inseparable during archery season.

Although I haven't seen Chuck for several years, I'm sure that when October rolls around, all I would have to do is call. He would tell me at what blind he would be. That's the way cronies are.

Jim is one of my latest cronies. We met on a west Michigan Steelhead stream a couple of years ago. By chance, we fished with the same guide and during the day struck up an easy friendship. Over the past 2 years we have beat a lot of water together, and he, like I, feels there are only 2 types of fishing, flyfishing—and all the other kinds.

I recognized Jim as a crony almost immediately. They all seem to have a Christmas-like trait of giving, rather than receiving. In Jim's case, he almost goes overboard, a good example occurred a couple of weeks ago.

Jim and I met at one of our favorite spots to do a little fishing and a lot of planning for our upcoming Alaskan fishing trip. We stayed up into the wee hours of the morning, furiously tying more flies than 10 fishermen could use in a year-long marathon.

During the course of the evening each time I mentioned a particular material Jim was using, he would pick it up and shove it in my direction. After a while, it got a little embarrassing, and I casually remarked that I could probably afford to buy a few of the items being bestowed upon me. I immediately sensed Jim was offend-

Back to School With a Spinal Health Exam

Regular spinal care—like dental care—is essential to your child's health. Start this school year with a chiropractic health check-up for your

A spinal examination is important because scollosis (abnormal curvalure of the spine) is apt to show up in adolescence, and this is the time proper care can be effective.

In addition, the bumps and falls which your child experiences can contribute to twisting in the pelvis or rotations of specific spinal bones. These conditions can lead to the fornation of scoliosis.

If scollosis remains untreated, it can lead to more severe back problems in later life, cautions Dr. Norwood McMahon, chiropractor in Annandale, Virginia. More severe cases can even lead to permanent disfigurement, Dr. McMahon added. "I recommend an annual checkup for children 4 to 7 and a semi-annual one for youngsters 8 to 18."

Correction started early can speed the healing process because the spine of young bodies is more responsive to care than those a few years older who are already develop-Ing, said Dr. McMahon.

As the new school year approaches, chiropractors suggest a spinal examination to complete your child's fall health checkup.

SOUND-OFF!!

I think the new water tower is a bunch of bull. The only difference with this one is that it's round. It's not bigger than the old one. Get a grip, Pigeon.

// Have you ever driven down M-25 toward Port Austin, about three miles north of Caseville, and enjoyed that beautiful stretch along there? It's Stroh's subdivision, and they're all 100-foot lots, It's a restricted area and that's why it looks nice.

I'm glad we do have neighbors with a heart. They agreed we could move that trailer in after our house blew up during the tornado, so we could still live on our property and enjoy the lake. We'll forgive anyone who thinks this is wrong. Signed, Jerry and Bonnie Adams.
