	RED CHAFF SPRING WHEAT the Can- ada Former calls "a bad variety of spring wheat," and says that while it is only since last harvest that much of it has come into market, except for seed, "it has already become pretty well known to millers, bakers and grain buyers, who are unanimous in the resolve to avoid it as completely as possible. No miller who knows it will buy it, except at a great re- duction in price below what the Glasgow and Fyfe variety will bring, as it injures  	the appearance and depreciates the value of any brand of flour which it may be used to make." It urges farmers not to COUGH IN SWINE — A Hamilton county (lows) correspondent of the Rural World says: "If the shoats are not doing well, says: "If the shoats are not doing well, and the hair or bristles do not he smooth- ly—the shoats having been fed principally on corn, and they go coughing around— we come to the conclusion that they have got worms, and a teaspoonful of turpenspoonful; asually the first dose will be sufficient. If frogs are fed plenty of salt and ashes, the worms hardly ever get the advantage of them. Sulpher and stone- ceed and charcoal are good preventives of diseases in swine. Hogs are very fond of

•	charcoal, and also of salt. SEX OF EGGS.—Science and experience have sufficiently demonstrated that exery thing that bears must possess both the male and the female qualifications; but perhaps it is not generally known that such is the case with eggs. I have found by experience that it is, and by the fol- lowing rules: I raise as many pullets among my chickens as I wish to, while their chicks are nearly all roosters, and they can not see why there should be a difference. I will tell you here what I have told them, and for the benefit of those who do not know that the small round eggs are female eggs, and the long, slender ones are males. This rule holds good among all kinds of poultry, and I dare say all kinds of birds. So, if you wish to raise pullets, set the small, round eggs; if you wish to raise roosters, set the long, slender ones; in this way you will be enabled to raise whichever sex

	PRESERVING GRAPES, A Fornich grape- grower has succeeded in preserving bunch- es of grapes intil the month of April-

Is the Moon Inhabited!

[From the Daily Graphic.] Last night a friend and myself were crossing the North River just as the moon was rising in great majesty and beauty, and our conversation turned on ;

"It is settled, I suppose," said I," that no living things exist in the moon.

"It is not settled to my satisfaction,"

Well but there is no water and atmosphere there. How can there be breathing creatures in such conditions as that? Then look at the alterations of temperature—during the lunar day the heat on the surface must be equal to a furnace, while at night it falls about 140 degrees below zero.

Yes, I don't suppose that there are any men or animals living on the surface of the moon, but my theory is that there is a population of troglodytes in the planet. You know the latest speculation in regard to the moon is that the surface was formerly diversified with seas and oceans; but that all the waters and atmosphere have been sucked into the immense cavities in her interior. vice as a page, and then sent him with a fact that the moon did formerly have an letter to the empress in which he charged atmosphere is proved by the extinct volume of the control of the extinct volume. her, upon pain of his displeasure, to have cannox; how could these have burned the bearer put to death. But Friday night she capped the climax and proved herself a paragon of usefulness. It appears, that one of the boarders, who had been reading in the parlor, instead of turning down the side light before retiring, as is customary, left it burning, unnoticed, in close proximity to the door (the fixture being a movable one). heat, coming in contact with the varnish, soon ignited the woodwork and started a blaze, which but for the cat's sagacity would soon have called out the fire de partment. The crackling of the flames must have aroused the intelligent creature, for she rushed up stairs and mewed in front of the door leading to Mrs Rice's bedroom.
