THE POST-MORTEM. A Physician's Story.

It was in November-the thirteenthout five-and-twenty years ago, that Dr. Turner sent for me to meet him in consultation upon a case at Bortondale. On the following day I answered the sum-mons. Bortondale was fourteen miles distant from my residence; and when I reached the special address, designated I reached the special address, designated a found Dr. Turner already there, and with him was Dr. Prescott, of a neighboring with our purchase, doctor," said Gordon, as I moved towards the table, after havened my hands. I found the patient as the reader might suppose from Dr. Turner's account, to be very weak, very pale, very despondent, very thin, and exceedingly reduced in every way. It was a case of atrophy, for which we could find no cause. We summoned the cook and the nurse, and demanded to know if Mr. Varney ever ate or drank any thing in the house of which the others did not partake. don't be sorrowful, darling

And don't be sorrowful, pray;
Take the year logether, my dear,
There isn't more night than day.

'Tis winter weather, my darling,
Time's waves they heavily run;
But take the year all round my dear
There isn' more cloud than sun.

We are old folks, now, my darling, thir heads are growing gray, But taking the year all round, my dear, You will always find the May.

We have had our May, my darling.
Had our roses long ago.
And the time of year has come, my dear,
For the silent night and snow.

And God is God, my darling,

Ave, God of night, my darling,
Of the night of death so grim,
The gate that leads to life, good
Is the gate that leads to him.
