We were startled by a loud shout and that an uproar should be made at the appearance of a light in the distance. In a few moments we heard the welcome news that a house had been discovered, and that the family were making preparations for our reception. Half an hour afterward we found ourselves sitting least. I have no recollection of any pre-hour afterward we found ourselves sitting.

Softly the snowflakes are falling,
And ghostly their gathering sheen;
And the hirds come home in the twile
To sleep in the cedars green.
But away in the snowy-clad valley,
Where the winds of winter blow,
There "Birdle," our darling, is sleepi
Under the falling snow.
