MY LITTLE BLACK-AND-TAN.

Of all the friends that I have had-

Or friends that seemed to be—
They left me when reverses came,
Save one, who atayed by me.
This friend that I am speaking of
Is neither child nor man;
It is a faithful dog at home,
My little black-and-tan.

No matter where I wander to,
No matter where I roam,
I know I have at least one friend;
My little dog at home.
I love to hear his playful bark—
He's truer friend than man,
No one can take his love from me,
My little black-and-tan.

He knows my step upon the walk,
He also knows my rap,
And when I sit down in the house,
He jumps into my lap;
And when his shining eyes meet mine,
For speak they almost can,
I see true friendship beaming forth,
My little black-and-tan.

Nor chide me not for loving him,
For love bim well I do;
(if all the friends that I have had,
Alone he has been true.
He does not leave me, though I'm poor,
He loves me better than
The ones that left me in distress—
My little black-and-tan.
