GENERAL NOTES.

THE Objo Horticultural Convention and the Convention of the National Beckeeper's Association have been holding sess one at To edo. The usual topics were discussed, and plans adopted which are thought to be of general benefit.

THE money for the great Music Hall of Ciucinnati, set in motion by Mr. Springer, has all been subscribed, and a Committee consisting of prominent citizens has been appointed by the sub scribers to report a plan for incorpora-ting and organizing a society for the erection and management of the Cincinnati Music Hall.

ANOTHER centenarian has been dicovered. The Cincinnati Enquirer records the death of Charles Avery, at the County Infirmary, aged one hundred. He is anold resident of Hamiston county, having arrived there in 1800 and was regular in the army, under G.n. Wilkinon, in the South, from 1806 to 1811. He leaves s wife, but no children or prop

A FIRE at Cincinnati destroyed the five-story building of Mr. Fletcher, on Home street. It was occupied by W. M'Donald, Son & Co., lithographers; Frank Thomas & Co., machinists; Block & Co., printers, and a Laundry Company. The loss altogether is estimated at $50,000.

It turns out that the Ohio saloon reeper who reported the discovery of a vein of crude petroleum in hiscellar was deceived. The oil came from the kitchen range just above, having been placed there over night by the servant girl for kindling purposes.

THERE is a musical prodigy among the xoal miners near Massillon, Ohio. He is a boy of seventeen, and seems devoid of intelligence, except in musical matters. Brought up in the mines without training of any kind, he has nevertheless remarkable powers for mastering music, and readily learns and plays difficult airs without mis-ing a note.

In the additional particulars of the Deutschland's wreck, which are cabled over, there are two or three features which tell badly against human nature, and which ought to cause additional penal sections to be inserted in the international maritime code. The captain of the De itschland declared that several vessels passed near the ill-fated steamer, and that she signaled them for assistance, but they passed either without hoticing or without heeding the signals constantly pass between the North Hinder and the Galloper lights, it is impossible that some captains should not have seen the signals, and they should be punished by another tribunal than that of their own conscience. The same can be said of those Harwich men who refused to go with the coastguard men in a tugboat, and aid them in their attempted rescue. The small modicum of human sentiment contained in the bosom of those men is sufficiently shown by their unanimous answer that "they thought it was only a collier which was lost." His duties as a professor at Cambridge are evidently performed quite as well as they would be if he were not blind. In a recent admirable speech at a meeting of the Science and Art Department at Kensington, he made the first allusion I have ever known him to make to his loss of sight. It was, he said, nearly twenty years since he had looked on a work of art, and he should never again enjoy that pleasure, but he could recall the satisfaction which it ence preduced, and estimate the precious privilege enjoyed by those who can do so. Do you know how Professor Fawcett became totally and horelessly blind? Twenty years ago, when he was a most promising and active young man of two and twenty, he was out with his father shooting in the neighborhood of Salisbury, when by some mishap two separate shot from his father's gun pierced the glasses which he wore, one lodging in the very pupil of each eye and effectually destroying the vision for ever. I have used less than a bottle. The dandruff and the irritation which caused it, have entirely disappeared, and my hair was never before in so good condition.
