volume of fetti waters mixed with sand, like the Mexican rivers, suddenly disappeared. Forty-eight hours afterward, a prodigious mass of lava, issuing from sources to which no one has ever been able to penetrate came sliding down the bed of the dried-up river. The channel, according to Lord Dafferi and breadth; but the fearful deluge brimmed up to its banks, overflowed them, and drove in molten masses over them, and drove in molten masses over the face of the whole country. Two sceans of lava were the products of this erruption. The one that flowed down the Skapta was fifty miles long by an operation of the skapta was fifty miles long by a profusion of rich, black curly hair,
