MUSING.

And trying to recall.

The forms of those most dear.

The evining shadows fall

I muse of those that sleep

The last long sleep of death And bow my head and weep To think that I am left. Why should I breathe a sigh? For all things seem to say, I very soon must die, And pass from earth away.

The myst'ry, now so strange To me, will then be known

To me, will then be know and all that feel the change To their eternal home. Well, let the curtain fall, My aching heart, be still, be said by all, "Be doze, His holy will."

Then let us, Oh! I pray.
Prepare with God to dwell

Around the throne above,
With Christ, our Savior hear,
Sing everlasting love.
