happened to a clergyman of this city who was being shown the points of interest around the city by one of his parishioners. Among other places they visited a wharf commanding a view of our grand old river. The reverend gentleman became absorbed in contemplation of the prospect before him, and forgetful of the broken plank behind him in the dilapidated wharf. Suddenly stepping backward, he found himself falling, and instructively grasped his friend by the shoulder with one hand and threw his other arm around his waist, and both fell into the opening, which proved to be too small to let them into the deep and rapid current beneath. United they filled the mouth of the yawning sbyss, which gaped wide enough to swallow either of them alone. The union of pastor and people was never better illustrated under any circumstances; the two clung together like Damon and Pythias, and formed a suspension bridge across the horrid chasm with their interlaced bodies, until, by the exercise of herculean efforts and acrobatic contortions, they struggled out of their perilous position and re-gained their perpendicular, when the minister complimented his companion minister complimented his companion with the remark, "Well, you are a good man to cling to. Are all the members of the parish like you?" "Oh, yes," was the answer; "we are all bound to give our pastor a good support,"—Portsmouth (N. H.) States and Union.

A Curious Accident.

A curious though awkward accident

The duration and tenacity of public life, as seen in the length of time during which the seeds of certain plants will re-tain their vitality, are truly wonderful. We may cite the following example:

Lord Lindsay states that, in the course of his wanderings amid the pyramids of Egypt, he stumbled on a mummins of Egypt, he stumbled on a mum-my, proved by its hieroglyphics to be 2,000 year old. In examining this mummy after it was unwrapped he found in one of its closed hands a tuberous or bulbous root. He was interested in the question how long vegetable life could last, and he therefore took that tuberous root from the mummy's he and planted it in a sunny soil, the rains and dews of heaven to descend upon it, and in the course of a few weeks, to his astonishment and joy, the root burst forth and bloomed beauteous dahlia.

The roots of many plants retain their tality under intense temperatures. Certain plants, also, may, by their roots, absorb some poisons which would be destructive to others. The seeds on hich birds have fed will re power of germination during a long period. Birds that food on the seed of the easter oil plant have been have country to another, where grown and multipled,

Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the great blood purifier. The great source of disease originates, in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon public attention:
