FRENCH FOWLS. The French fowls are not nearly so popular in America as they deserve to be. The Creve-cours and Roullans are both prolific egg producers, grow rapidly, and have white, juicy flesh. The latter have plump breast, fine-flavored flesh, remarkablylight bones and gray legs. If properly fed the hens will lay on without stepping to sit. They thrive well in confinement. The Creve-cours are also nonsitters, and are not surpassed for whiteness of flesh by any variety. Their black legs are often objected to by cooks and dealers, but they have no effect upon the color, flavor or tenderness of the flesh. terward I went out to see a cow I wanted to buy, and he sat down at milking time to let me indge of her flow. I certainly never saw a dirtier pail of milk. Specks of dirt, dust, dandruff, hairs, etc., perpered the top and swashed about on the bottom as the pail was emptied. He got only 18 or 20 cents for his butter, and I think it was worth no more. Does not this filth flavor the milk, the cream and the butter? Most assuredly it does. This is only obvious filth; the invisible and more-potent volatile exhalations from the manure and urine saturated floors and all the malodorous surroundings of most cow stables usually have a greater influence.
