"Left yesterday morning," said I. "The story is that the old man intends to buy a house at Burnham."
"What a relieff" cried Willie. "What a remeatful relieff" wonderful relief!' cried Willia. What a relief!'

Now, this little bit of talk had a singular result. Willie, hearing that the Hardwares had gone away, was seized with a fancy of seeing the old house again. It turned out, however, that the departure had been postponed for two days, and it thus came about that as Willie strolled up the road near to Tumbledown Farma a bend of the way brought him face to face with Vanity, who was walking slowly in the opposite direction.

At the sight of her Willie was thunderstruck. She looked pale and hopeless; but

At the sight of her Willio was thunder-struck. She looked pale and hopeless; but her manner betrayed no disorder, while he trembled with agitation. At first he made a movement to ruise his hat, but, changing his mind, prepared to walk past her without any sign of recognition. He was not to escape so soon.

"Stop!" cried Vanity.

"Stop!" cried Vanity.

Her voice was calm and authoritative.

Willie, looking around with a haughty air,

You must excuse me." replied: "You must excuse me.
"I shall not excuse you, answered Vanity boldly. "You shall stop. You have to hear

FACTS!

Worthy of consideration. At this season of the year who dealers are anxious to dispose of surplus stock, that cheap John advertising is so plenty embodying all sorts of statements to induce people to buy; when one stops to consider how ridiculous some of these statements are it is a wonder that people pay any attention to them whatever. There are some who credit all they read as true, and squander their hard-earned each without realizing how budly they have been deceived. Judging from our success since last April we are satisfied that we have as good quality, bought as close and sold as cheap as any Clothing House in the county. With these facts in mind is it not worth your time to give us a call
