What is true in this particular in Lon on is even more marked in New York We have more thickly populated districts in this city, less clean streets and inferior sanitary regulations. The national im-portance of physical deterioration in towns is greater in England than in the United States, because the proportion of her urban population is much greater, but this certainly should not lessen the humane purpose of improving the condition of things in our cities. ## THE WORLD'S BIGGEST SPONGE.

Description of a Prize Taker-Mediter-

"That is the largest Florida sponge in e world," said a William street dealer to a reporter.

The sponge looked like the thatched of of a small cabin, and measures eight feet in circumference when wet, We have one in Philadelphia on tem-perary exhibition there that is ten feet in circumference. It is from the Mediterranean. This sponge has taken medals in France, Amsterdam, New Orleans and other places. We would not take $500 for it. It holds fifteen gallons of water."

The reporter was then shown the smallest, which is as big as a chestnut, and never grows any larger. If is taken on the reefs and is sold for a slate sponge,

"The Mediterranean sponges," continued the informant, care taken in the Greeian archipelago, by men in diving suits, who go into much deeper water than they do in Florida. There most of them are taken with grappling frons, in the same way as oysters. They can be seen with the eye at the bottom, clinging to the rocks. When one is dislodged another grows in its place, taking from six months to a year. A great many are also taken in the Bahamas. The market for that crop is Nassau, New Providence. Key West is the market for the Florida sponges, which are taken all along the coast. Trieste and London are the markets for the Mediterranean

sponges. Some are taken off the coast

"We had one once that inclosed a large jug. It was a fine sponge, and had grown completely around it. They are frequently full of shells. When a ponge is first taken out of the water it cas black as ink, and it has to be treated by various processes until it becomes the color commonly seen. A sponge is the lowest order of animal life, being considered partly animal and partly vege-table. A number of minute animals live in it. The business is about half a century old in this country. Sponges are sold by the bale in this country, and by the case in Europe. They weigh from 25 to 100 pounds. When sold by weight the dealers are allowed to sand them about 25 per cent. Prices range from $10 to $150. The latter for very fine toilet sponges. There are many grades such as silk, velvet, cup, glass, bath,

> There are about 20,000 miles of telegraph and telephone wires in New York city. Of this number the Western Union Telegraph company operates and controls more than 5,000 miles, 500 miles of which are already placed in conduitunderground. The same company operates over 430,000 miles all told. Its wires if stretched in one continuous line would go around the globe nearly eight-een times, and they would reach from the earth to the moon and almost back over double that number from the East to the North river at the greatest width > of Mannattan Island. This length of wire weighs compara-tively little. The wires of the Western Union company vary in weight from 330 to 650 pounds per mile. Taking the smallest sized wire as a basis for calculation, one ton of metal would make thirteen and one-third miles of wire, while 2,000 tons would be sufficient to stretch around the world, with plenty to spare. The cost of the wires is about six cent-per pound. They are very durable when stretched through an open country, last-ing from twenty-five to thirty years. Atmospheric changes affect them but little. ## The Sensations of the Dying.

It is doubtless the case that in many instances—and perhaps they are the majority—dying persons lapse gradually into an unconsciousness that ends their bodily pain, and saves them from the anguish of the final parting with those they leave behind. ### TRYING TO CAPTURE CARLOTTA

A Mexican General's Story of His Attempt to Take the Empress Prisoner. In 1873 I was coming from the City of Mexico to El Paso, Tex., and by chance I met Gen. Aurellano, who is now a met ber of the national congress in the C of Mexico. We began to talk of the miprovements of the country and on other topics. When we passed the City of Queretaro, where Maximilian was made mer. I mentioned the incident about the Empress Carlotta in 1866, and he said: "Yes, it was I who made the at-tempt to capture her." "Will you explain to me how it was, and what your intentions were, general?" "Yes," he answered. "You may remember," he said, "the decree of Oct. 3, 1865, issued, Maximilian and his ministers, and ich read: Every Mexican caught with any weapon in his hands shall be considered as a bandit and shall be executed immediately.' It is said that Maximilian himself was opposed to this decree, but, influenced by Bazaine and the Empress Carlotta, was compelled to issue it. Now, by this merciless law we lost the brayest of our soldiers and the best of our general-

"In May of 1866 the well known and Jalisco and brought to the City of Mexico, where, together with others, he was to be shot on the 6th of June. I had a great regard for this man, brave in battle and merciful with his prisoners, and  ${\bf I}$ bim. I was commanding 1,000 men; my headquarters was the Mount of San Juan, which you know is not far from the capital: I chose sixty of my brayest men. nd, favored by the darkness of the night of the 5th of June, I led-them through the forests of the road connecting the castle of Chapultepee with the capital; I hid my men and myself in a small river along the road; I knew the empress had to pass between the hours of 6 and 7 in the morning, as she was accustomed to take a ride every morning at that hour from the city to the castle. My intention was to capture her, and by doing that I was sure to rescue my great friend. I also knew she had with her ten or twelve men, but I had six times that number, and what gave me confidence was they did not expect such an attack.

I waited. The hour came, and I said to my soldiers: Don't hurt the woman on a white horse, but try to capture her.' Just then Charlotta came in sight, and with the cry to my men, 'For Mexico!' we sprang to the bed of the road, and a hand in hand struggle at once began. The empress, to my sur-prise, instead of fleeing toward the castle as I expected she would, turned to the city. I followed her closely—very closely. I was about to eatch the tail of her horse, but by that time I was at the gate of the city, and before 200 or more French soldiers, who were thunderstruck at the sight of their empress passing like lightning between them. The captain commanding this body of soldiers was Boulanger! I took advantage of their surprise and returned to my men. The empress owed her life to the beautiful mare. Indeed, that mare beat my horse and saved her mistress. When I reached the place where my men were, all the French soldiers with the exception of again.
