"One night there came a knock at the dorr, and my brother, wild-eyed and haggard, was admitted. He had only time to explain that he was charffed with forging a check on Colonel Colins and was now flying from the vengeance of the law, when the door opened and Colonel Collins himself enters. Toward, by forgrand, her elf entered. Tortured by fears, and har-assed by a man who was scarce less than rassed by a man wao was scarce less than a denion, my poor brother was seized with convulsions, and for days his life was despaired of. Colonel Colones informed me that unless Ubecame his wife my brother, regardless of condition, should be dragged to prison. This would kill both him and my orders and faithful and my colors. nother, and frightened, horrified and unmother, and trightened horrined and un-conscious of the awful step T-was taking without consulting any one, I consented. "I have but a faint recollection of my marriage light as if it was a feightful dream. When I came to realize that I was his—almost soul and be ly—I resolved that I would make him as goed a wife as I could without loving him, and determined to protect my family. He had us sceretly conveyed to the stone flouse on the hill. There we have lived, he holding as a constant menace over me the destruction of my mother and insane brother, who are inmates of that house. While I do not love my husband, and was forced into marriage with him, yet as God is my witness I have made him as good a wife as he would let me, and I shall live and the loyal to my marriage vows. He wanted mother and I to assign over to him the property we hold in our own names, but this we refused to do, determined to save it for my afflected brothers. He flew into such a rage at our diobedience that we feared he would do'iny little dumb brother some harm, or send him away where we should never see him again. It was then that I, for that child's sake, dayd make the visit to you and entist your moathles in him, as you remember. Alien's head was bowed upon his hand.
At last, with a troubled sigh, he asked?
"What is his motive for this strange conduct. Is he an outlaw, as has been charged?"

Conclusion.

Allen Gray found the remainder of his life at Turiev's Point inksome. He kept the secret of the col house on the hill to himself. As he had no hopes of improving his business at the Lunt, and he found it daily growing more unpleasant, he deter mined to make a change; although he offered his press and material very cheap, no fered his press and masses that up one could be found to take thin up.

Driven to desperation he at just bethought him of a science, whereby he might be able to dispose of the Western Republic.

These politicians and stateshen, Messrs, Simmons and Streeg, learning nothing from defeat, continued to war upon each other. They had sufficient money to purchase the rewspaper; and, as Teney Barnes began to evince a desire for effect the purnalistic field, he determined to make some use of the Western Registry and put you in its education. Allen asked the post of day, as Locame into the effice with a fresher d of man-

Thus released, Alien Gray, unmoved by the sighs, tears and defeate instingations of Miss Replains, quarted the deall little Missouri town, and in Chengo sought new fields of labor, with little hopes, however, of driving from his mind the sad memories of the past.

He secured a position as reporter on one of the great city dailies, and for a year his life ran on with but little to disturbits daily routine. One evening he had just come into the main office, when the editor inschief sent him to the scene of a railroad disaster, which a telegram had announced but a moment before his arrival. The wreck newspaper men with him.

Darkness had already enveloped the landscape, concealing much of the ghastly horror, when the scene was reached. It was a broken bridge and there were shat

The gray-haired man of science bent over her, placed hisear to her chest, and said her heart still beat. Restoratives were administered, and she began to revive. Allen turned away and noted several lifeless forms lying at the side of the track. Among them was the dark-whiskered Frenchman, the husband and evil genius of Bertha.

Even in death there was a look of flendish satisfaction upon his hanghty.face. Calmly-Alica went about the wreek, and, hurriedly writing up the affair, took it to a reporter on a rival paper and sand:

A few weeks after his marriage and return to Chicago, Allen received a letter from Toney Barnes, accompanied by a poem for which he hoped Mr. Gray would ind a publisher. Toney stated among other items of news that Simmons and Strong had at last succeeded in financially ruining cach other. The Western Republic had suspended several months before, and Miss Hopkins had unarried a widower over on the Island with nine children." He concluded by saying that the people were all moving away-from Turley's Pointo and the old stone house on the hill had long since been deserted.

BEAUTIFUL CREOLE GIRLS.

Many Perfect Blondes Among Them Con

We are not hidebound nor narrow minded in our admiration for female beauty. The fair and the dark, the blondes and brunettes, all have their special charms and admirable points. Besides the beauty of feature and color besides the beauty of reature and color there is also a spiritual and intellectual beauty which is quite as potent as the other. In the presence of a pure and lovely soul or a sparking intellect and a delighting disposition; one may be so completely enchanted as to be utterly blind to material things. But, whatever may be our liberality in matters of love and admiration for the beautiful sex, and we recognize their claims without regard to the ethnological or geographical limits.

JAPANESE WRESTLING MATCHES.

One of the chief amusements of the Japanese are wrestling matches. These are always taking place and attract large crowds. The wrestlers, strange to say, train to put on fat, rather than to take it off, and the stemaëlis of some of them are simply enormous. Around these they wear a large band, which is intended for the opponent to catch hold of, I think; at least he generally does, and otherwise there would be no sense in having them so strong. This band and small pieces of cloth around the waist and loins form the wrestling costume. These wrestling matches have something of a religious character the invention of printing with wood cats, and dated 1493.

Our vigilant correspondent in the town in consequence of an antagonistic "will power," which has sprung up between the teacher, Miss Caroline Richardson, ob because the dress stay factory has, and the patrons of the district. It seems that the contract does not imply that the teacher shall build the fires, and as no kindling or other conveniences are proyided by the district the teacher refuses to attempt to warm, the school room, and as a natural consequence the attendance If as dwindled down almost to a unit. Legal advice has been sought and it is generally admitted that the teacher has the advantage, yet at fast accounts no conciliatory measures have been employed. Miss Richardson goes every morning to the school house, calls and dismisses almost simultaneously, and then returns to her boarding place. In fact, she "holds the fort," and in the language of an aged lady if they have a school the district "wil have to come to't." -Adrian Times.

During the past few years Mr. Owen has suffered much from the effects of disease contracted in the army, and has rapidly failed, neither travels in the sunny south, the mineral water at the Ypsilanti sanitarium, nor the skill of physicians availing to check the progress of the disease, which was hastening him to an untimely grave.

COLUMBIA FARMERS' CLUB

This is a large organization, having fully 100 members, and nearly that number were in attendance at the meeting at F. J. Randall's, two miles west of Brooklyn, on Saturday, Dec. S.

President Dunn called to order soon after 10 A. M., and the exercises were opened by a piece of music sung by the club, followed past year; 3,073 books have been drawn by prayer by the chaplain, after which the minutes were read, and some committées re ported. The general discussion was on, What crop has paid me best the last year?" and consisted largely in the giving of figures as to the cost of various crops. Of those who reported, the largest number had found and flowers was made and premiums hogs most profitable. Colts found favor with the next largest number. There was a wide difference of opinion as o the value of corn fodder, some counting it worth no more per acre than straw, while others thought it worth as much, load for load, as hay. One told of a neighbor who paid $5 for a half day's work by a threshing machine, engine and hands, and had put 14 loads of stalks through the machine, obtaining 21 bushels of shelled corn therefrom, while his stock were consuming nearly the whole of the threshed stalks. The corn had been husked at so much a shock

In the midst of the discussion it was announced that dinner was ready and an intermission was taken for refreshments, which were excellent in quality and plentiful in quantity, being chiefly brought in by those who came.

After the close of the discussion Miss Maggie Crego sang a solo, Miss Flora Wesh gave a recitation and W. Pierce read an essay, some disconnected thoughts from which are: " As a nation we are richer in all that. makes life worth living, than any other nation. Concerning Consanguiucous Marriages. Concerning Consanguiueous Marriages.

Dr. Shuttleworth some time ago communicated to the British Medical association the results of the inquiries which he had made into the influence of consanguineous marriages on offspring. For want of a uniform basis of comparison positively accurate conclusions are hard to reach. His opinion on the subject, generally expressed, is that "inst cousin marriages are to some extent favorable to the production of idiot children." Extending his inquiries to the life historics of the grant to the life historics of the parents, he found that in the greater number of cases causes of idiocycould be discovered in addition to ordinder number of cases causes of idiocycould be discovered in addition to ordinder that morbid inheritance rather than specific degenerative tendency will account for all the infimities met danger in the intermarriage of cousins. We may therefore assume that "the great danger in the intermarriage of cousins that or the production of the offspring of cousins, we may therefore assume that "the great danger in the intermarriage of cousins."

When any profession or calling is overstocked it means, generally, that there's on large an amount of mediocrity in spell- profession or calling. Or, in other words, there are too many who can do the same thing equally well. There is always a place for the better worker, the man or woman whose individuality and originality can strike out in some new path and make an improvement on the clu method, providing such worker has force eneugh to keep on pushing his or her talent to the front and not use that same force eneugh to keep on pushing his or her talent to the front and not use that same force in all problems.
