A COMPARISON. I'd ruther lay out here among the trees, With the singing birds and the bum'l bees, A-knowin' that I can do as I please, Than to live what folks call a life of case Up thar in the city.

Fer I really don't 'xactly understan' Where the comfort is fer any man In walkin' hot bricks an' usin' a fan, An' enjoyin' himself as he says he can Up thar in the city.

At a kinder lonesome, mebbe you'll say, A-livin' out here day after day In this kinder easy, carriess way, But a hour out here is better a day Up thar in the city.

As fer that, jus' look at the flowers aroun' A-peepin' their heads up all over the groun'. An' the fruit a-bendin' the trees' way down. You don't find such things as these in town, Or, ruther, in the city.

As I said afore, such things as these.
The flowers, the birds and the bumil bees.
An's livin' out here among the trees.
Where you can take your ease, an' do as you please.
Makes it better'n the city.

Now, all the talk don't 'mount to snuff Now, all the talk don't 'mount to snum'
'Bout this kinder life a-bein' rough.
An' I'm sure it's plenty good enough,
'ai' 'tween you an' me, 't ain't bail as tough
As livin' in the city.

HE ATE CROW.

How a Boy Got His Father to Eat the

There is one family in Norwood that knows how crow tastes when served in a pot pie, and now that these folks have tried it they are not afraid to tell about it. Two or three years ago a family came here from New York city, bringing a couple of boys, one of whom was called Ray, was about 10 years old and was sickly. He was turned out to grass, as the natives here say, and supplied with a small rifle and cartridges. He not only acquired health and skill with the he cultivated a disposition to make his father's life a burden with practical jokes. The last joke relates to a crow

One day recently the boy came home from the woods with a mysterious air and a bulging pocket. Taking his mother to one side he opened the pocket, pointed at a skinned bird, and said; 'Partridge! Coax pop to say it's all right." Pop was approached diplomatically by the mother, who said the boy was fool-ish to violate the law, and besides it was wrong to kill even a cock partridge at this season, but she was sure the boy would not kill another. Pop was angry, but only to the extent of seriously lecturing the boy, and when at last the lad suddenly put his hands to his face as tears came to his eyes even the lecture was suspended, and he was told to go, something which he did with the utmost haste.

Well, there was the dead partridge. The law and conscience would not be healed by wasting the bird, and seeing there was a bit of veal, bought for a stew. in the ice chest, it was better to make pot pie of the combination than to throw away the bird. And so it was done.

On the next day, at the noonday dinner, a most savory heap of dumplings was stacked upon a platter in the center of the table, while a great bowl of cream gravy stood on one side, and a plate of yeal, with a plump bird on top, stood at the other. Pop carefully cut the bird, giving a half of the breast to the boy, and serving just a taste to each of the other three persons at the table. Ray, with unwonted generosity, offered to share his piece with his father, but the father declined, and thereupon the bird was eaten with many expressions of pleasure. The father and mother noiced, meantime, that Ray was convulsed over something, but when inquiry was made about it he said that he could "not help thinking how George Pardy got ex-

When the bird had disappeared on the other plates Ray suddenly left the table, having swallowed but one mouthful of ire of the bird, and a few minute later he was rolling on the lawn, well nigh in hysterics, which condition lasted till the father came to the door, and then the boy screamed:

Twas a crow! 'twas a crow. Oh! oh! Think of the trouble I might get into for breaking the game law!

The father says that it took some half hour's argument and the production of the bird's wings and skin to convince him that a crow had really been eaten. It was a young bird, just grown, and as fat as butter, and, if the truth be told, in spite of prejudice, it was as good eating as one could ask for.—[N. Y. Sun.

Seven Meurs' Sleep at Least. There is not one man or woman in 10,-000 who can afford to do without seven or eight hours' sleep. All those stories written about great men and women who slept only two or thee hours a night make very interesting reading, but I tell vou. my readers, no man or woman ever yet kept healthy in body and mind for a number of years with less than seven hours' sleep. Americans need more sleep than they are getting. This lack makes them so nervous and the insance. asylum so populous. If you can get to bed early, then rise early. If you can not get to bed till late, then rise late, It be as Christian for one man to rise at 8 as it is for another to get up at 5. I counsel my readers to get up when they are rested. But let the rousing bell be at least 30 minutes before your public appearance. Physicians say that a sudden jump out of bed gives irregular motion to the pulse. It takes hours to get over a too sudden rising. Give us time after you call us to roll over, gaze at the world full in the face, and look sefore we leap.

Breaking the Colts to the Cara-One morning last spring a traveler approaching a country railway station noticed a man holding a young horse some wenty rods distant from the track upon which a train was then standing. man's left hand grasped a strong leather halter at the point where it is fastened to the leading line, while his right hand held firm hold of a heavy strap buckled loosely about the horse's throat. The man, who was speaking to the horse in a low voice, presently began moving with him over the open space toward the locomotive, which thus far was perfectly silent. The horse's open nostrils and excited at the strange apparition, but he evidently felt assurance in his keeper, by whose side he had moved with short and nervous step over perhaps half the distance between himself and the train, when the locomotive suddenly let off steam. The terrified creature turned like a flash, and in so doing for an instant swung the man's feet clean off the ground. But before the horse made the first spring in the opposite direction the man's feet were again on solid earth, and he lost hold with neither hand, although the horse dragged him beyond the plac of starting before he could be stopped. Casting his eyes around at the still hissing locomotive the horse again sprung forward, but could no more free himself from the man's hold than a rat could escape from the teeth of a terrier. After a few more futile attempts the horse again turned around, and this time found himself able to endure the sight of the locomotive. Thus he stood for perhaps two two minutes with staring and quivering muscles. After a little the steam was shut off, when the man loosed his hand from the strap around the horse's throat. and with it began stroking his neck still speaking to him in the same low toned

Soon the horse became quite composed, whereupon the man, again grasping the throat strap with his right hand, urged him toward the train as before. With many stops and snorts of inquiry the horse permitted himself to be led again toward the locomotive, which, when he was about the same distance from it as the other time, burst forth into a second hissing, quite as loud as was the first Again was repeated the scene already described, but the horse did not drag the man so far as before, nor did he require so long a time in which to be quieted. The steam soon shut off again, and the man and horse once more approached the train, which now moved away from the station. The last glimpse of them showed the horse watching the now accustomed terror and the man by his side still grasping the head of the leading line and stroking the horse's neck—a beautiful and expressive illustration of ensues between these robbers of the great deep when they meet on common feeding ground. In front of the hotel there is considerable depth of water and the porpoises came so near that many of them could have been reached with a fishing rod. Suddenly, as the school of porpoises were tumbling over each other in play, a four foot shark made a dash out of water, pursued by a ten foot por-poise. The porpoise succeeded in biting a piece out of the man eater and made a vicious plunge at the shark in mid air. while the sea became red with blood.

Both fish were in a duel to the death. Neither tried to escape. The shark was the swiftest in motion, but was an unequal antagonist. The porpoise would dive under him and strike him in the belly under water, to the great discomof the man eater, whose iaws were not big enough to make much impression

Inlet. The Golden-Casket's Contents

The Germans have a story which the home loving people love to repeat. A father, when his daughter became a bride, gave her a golden casket with the injunction not to pass it into other hands, for it held a charm which in her keeping would be of inestimable value to her as the mistress of the house. Not only was she to have the entire care of it, but she was to take it every morning to the cellar, the kitchen, the dining room, the ibrary, the bed room, and remain with it in each place for five minutes, looking carefully about. After the lapse of three years the father was to send the key, that the secret talisman might be revealed. The key was sent. The casret was opened. It was found to contain an old parchment, on which was written these words: The eyes of the mistress are worth 100 pairs of servants' hands." The wise father knew that the practice of the inspection followed faithfully for three years would become a habit and be self perpetuated—that the golden casket and ould have accomplished their mission.

Every summer I like to ride up to Irvington and spend a couple of days with Jay Gould. He treats me well while there at his house, and though nothing is said about it at the time there is a tacit understanding that I am to write a piece about him for the papers when I get home.

A. BATTLE IN THE SURF.

Terrifle Combast Between a Porpoles and a Shark.

While the bathers were enjoying a bath in the surf at Avalon, N. J., says the Philadelphis Times, a large school of porpoises made a dash up the coast just behind the breakers. There were over 100 of these slippery monsters so hard to catch in a net, and they never bite at any known bait. A good sized porpoise will devour a bushel of moss bunkers or young drum fish at a single meal; and flust now the surf is filled with small drum fish feeding at flood tide.

The man-eating shark likes the same kind of diet, and many a bloody conflict ensues between these robbers of the great deep when they meet on common footing the page in the hay field. It is said that much of the hard carned money which Mr. Gould gets every month for his railroading is spent on his farm at Irvington. He hasn't so much ground as Cy Field has, but it is under a higher state of cultivation. Mr. Gould likes to encourage crops, while Mr. Field prefers to see his grounds grow up kind prefers to see his grounds grow up kind of wild as they do in England. Jay has a peculiar weakness. Mr. Field has quite a lodge or toligate at the entrance to his grounds where the lodge keeper's wife hangs out her clean clothes on Monday morning to acare the horses of the gentry.

Mr. Gould goes up at about 4 o clock on the New York Central Road, riding on an annual pass, and it is very rare that he is recognized by anybody. Quite often a large railroad hog occupies the seat with Mr. Gould and almost squats the life out of the man who has squeezed other people so much all his life. He said that he was glad to see me, for he wanted to tell me about a kind act which he did a year ago in secret, hoping that it would get into the papers before this, but it had not. He said that other folks could do kind acts in secret somehow, and in forty-eight hours it would be in the papers, but he never could do it.

He then gave me a roll of solid manuscript in his own well-known hand, which had evidently been returned by a good many editors during the past year, as it had certain blue marks of disapprovoval all over the back. It reads as follows:

AUBREY'S FAMOUS RIDE.

A Feat That Has Few Parallels in Physi-

"The greatest physical achievement ever accomplished in this country," said John F. Graham to a Denver News re-porter, "was the ride of F. X. Aubrey from the plaza of Santa Fe, N. M., to the public square at Independence, Mo., a distance of nearly 800 miles through a country inhabited by warlike Indians. a large part of which was then a sandy "It was about the year 1851 that Au-

His business for ten years as a Santa Fe trader had made him perfectly familiar with the trail and all the stopping places. He was a perfect horseman, and although there were great riders, in those days none of them cared to dispute the palm with Aubrey. On a wager of $1,000 he undertook to ride alone from Santa Fe to Independence inside of six days. No man could keep up with the rider, and he would have killed every horse in the would have killed every horse in the would have killed every horse in the undertaking. It took him just five days and nineteen hours to perform the feat, and it cost the lives of several of his best horses. After being carried into a room at the old hotel in Independence Aubrey lay for 48 hours in a dead stupor before he came to his senses. He would never have recovered from the shock had it not been for his wonderful constitution. The feat was unanimously regarded by Western men as the greatest exhibition of strength and endurance ever known on the plains."

It is becoming quite comfar even as Yonkers and Nyack people were supplied with sausagy wrappers their friends with phonograms. The voice is a much more valuable souvenir than a picture or even an autograph, and as the cylinders can not be duplicated they are likely to possess a unique interest in the future.

> Supreme Court of the United States The highest court of the United States holds a unique place in the various forms of government in the world, and one not found in any other governand one not found in any other governamental system. It wields a power greater than is exercised by any other judical tribunal in the world. In no country of Europe or the East has any court authority to make or unmake the supreme law of the land, to limit the prerogatives of the legislature, to shape the form of government. These functions are exercised by the Supreme Court of the United States. It holds a power above that of the chief magistrate of the nation, superior to that of Congress, higher than of any State, and equalled only by that which made or can amend the Constitution. It can change the relations between the States and equalled only by that which made or can amend the Constitution.
