Every American citizen who is properly and lawfully registered has a right to vote. Some exercize the right, others do not. There are people who belong to one or the other party, there are people who don't know where they belong, and there are people who try to make their neighbor believe they vote one ticket when in fact they vote the other. Then there are men who yote a part of both. Pretty much all of the above classes were at the polls last Monday. Politics in Manchester seems to have gotten in a bad way, or at least the democratic party has for it cannot elect a supervisor, although there is a democratic majority of about

75. Then, too, there was a little dissatisfaction in the caucus over the nomination of treasurer. According to custom Mr. Clark would be entitled to renomination, especially as he has proven a competent officer, but they put up Mr. Kurfess. Then the republicans who held their caucus later, put Mr. Clark on their ticket, presumably on the principle of anything to beat the democrats.

The fight began early and lasted until the last vote was cast.

Merchants Organization.

The Retail Merchants of Manchester met in the Council Chamber last evening and listened to an address by C. B. Mac-Donald of THE MERCHANTS RETAIL COMMERCIAL AGENCY, 53 Dearborn St., Chicago, Iils. The system in use by this Agency has for its purpose the protection of Retail Merchants. The legality, practicability and results of the system were fully explained. After consideration, a motion was made that those present proceed to organize the Manchester Branch of such Agency. The motion prevailed by a uranimous vote. The following

The enrollment in the high school is the largest for any spring term for many

For the first time this year there are no more hoys than girls in the high school. The score stands at present 23 to 23. The grammar room has a larger enrollment than usual for the spring term, and the intermediate rooms are crowded. Why do some parents send their children to school at 7 o'clock in the morning? Would it not be better to find some chores for them until time at least for the first bell? The Wonder of Wonders.

When Mr. Loughton was Spanish Consul at Boston he was one day standing near where some ballaststones were being thrown overboard from a vessel that had recently arrived from a European seaport. Among this rubbish was a flint pebble somewhat larger than a hen's egg, which, when it struck some of the larger stones, separated in the middle. Mr. Loughton stooped and picked up two halves. On each half, in marks made Loughton stooped and particular halves. On each half, in marks made by the natural growth of the stone, were two perfect human heads in profile, all of the outlines of features and in a box is used only for kindling purposes. The most surprising part of the whole incident is the fact that, even though the two halves fit together exactly, one of the faces was clearly that of a male the other that of a female. Even the putting up of the hair was appropriate to the sex; yet, in the stone, they were face to face.

A New Steam Road-Carriage.

The problem of steam road-carriages, according to the Paris La Nature, has been practically solved by Mr. Serpollet of that city. The paper

We have made known, the moment that it was introduced to the engineers and to the public, the inexplosible generator of Mr. Serpollet. The apparatus is formed, as is already known to the public, of a sort of capillary metallic tube, through which the water injected is instantly converted into vapor. This extraordinary boiler, which contains only a few contrimetric cubes of water; and no reserve of vapor, appeals to us, in its incipient stage, to satisfy most admirably certain requirements, and notably those for the creation of a curious and very simple. A board steam carriage, both economical and about three feet long and two feet practical. After having caused it at wide is secured and a heavy piece of first to impel a steam tricycle, Mr. nrst to impel a steam tricycle, Mr. Serpollet has successively constructed during the past two years experimental carriages, which have repeatedly been in operation in Paris; and which in January, 1889, enabled him, in company with Mr. Archdeacon, to accomplish the long journey to Lyons. These preliminary studies brought the inventor to the creation of an absoinventor to the creation of an absolutely practically type of vehicle, which we can now present to our readers. The new carriage is elegant and luxurious. The coach itself has been manufactured by one of our best specialists. It has the form of a large phaeton, and can seat seven travelers—three on each side, and a seventh on the bracket seat conceits. the bracket seat opposite. Not an item of the comfort found in ordinary vehicles is wanting in this. The suspension is easy and seats are elastic. In case of rain one can, as in all other phaetons, lower the hood. The generator is concealed as much as possible; placed in the rear, it is imprisonable that we have the two hoves for the read ed between the two boxes for charcoal, with which it is bound by two filters,

As in the case, of all fixed generators, a stop is effected by a suppression of the alimination; the most subdent stoppage is completed by means of a pedal chick placed in reach of the foot of the conductor. Another interesting point to note: accordingly as it is not. Bismarck's name was frequently repoint to note: accordingly as it is propeated. HERALDS OF WEATHER,

WINGED AND OTHER PROPHETS OF THE RAIN.

Things That Crawl and Fly, Better than the Signal Service Bureau Forecast to the Farmer the Coming Storm.

The weather signal service of the United States is a great thing. That is, it is an admirable arrangement for the dissemination of knowledge concerning what the weather is going to be. And the government with its present means of telling what the weather will be to morrow, is wasting time and money when it attempts to give the average farmer pointers on the coming weather. The farmer doesn't thank the signal service for its mechanical miscalculations, since he is abundantly supplied with thermome ters, barometers, and everything else of the sort, and of a kind that never slips a cog or makes a wrong reckoning. The farmer doesn't have to bother his mind in studying out what the weather is to be. The cats, dogs, horses, geese, fishes, ants, gnats, birds, snails, swallows, crows and cattle predict it and tell him in their own land guage whether it will be fair or foul. Those unacquainted with the conduct of animals as it presents itself to an observing farmer might doubt the reliobserving farmer might doubt the reliability of the source of his information, but the experienced farmer himself never does. If there is not human reason as the foundation of his faith therifies something much less fallible—animal s something much less fallible-animal be foretold by the actions of animals. The following is his poetic description of the signs of rain:

The hollow winds begin to blow;
The clouds look black, the glass is low;
The soot falls down, the spaniels sleep.
The spiders from their cobwebs creep; The walls are damp, the ditches smell; Closed is the bright-red pimpernel. Hark! how the chairs and table erack! Old Betty's joints are on the rack; Her corns with shooting pains torment her And to her bed untimely send her. Loud quack the ducks, the sea fowls cry, The distant hills are looking nigh. *

How restless are the snorting swine!

The busy flies disturb the kine; The walls are damp, the ditches smell; Low o'er the grass the swallow wings The cricket, too, how sharp he sings! Puss on the hearth with velvet paws Sits wiping o'er her whiskered jaws.
Twill surely come, we see't with sor

No working in the fields to-morrow Any farmer boy who is at all obsering has noticed how unusually active ants are just before a storm. They rush hither and thither and seemingly have more to do than mail-carriers do on Valentine day. Every one is on the jump, fetching and removing and preparing for the storm which is sure how to foretell an approaching storm. Chickens pick up pebbles, fowls rell in the dust and flies bite viciously before a rain. The assembling of gnats under the branches of trees is a sure indica-tion of a coming storm. The person is very presumptuous who dares to say that the tree-toad does not understand

James Whitcomb Riley treats of this weather maker in

A TREAT ODE. "Scurious-like," said the tree-tond "I've twittered away all day; And I got up soon, And hollered till noon—

But the sun hit blazed away,
Till I jest clumb down in a crawfish hole,
Weary at heart, and sick at soul!

The singing of hens presages a coming gale or high wind. This is a sign that every farmer will swear by. When hogs run playfully about carrying straw or sticks in their mouths a windstorm is sure to follow. This trait of swine gives rise to the proverbs "Pigs swine gives rise to the proverbs can see the wind" and Whene'er the swine shall run and play 'Twill storm before another day.

Geese flying against the wind the numbers in the evenings, peacocks squalling at night, mice squaking and geese washing are all signs of rain.
When the rain has begun falling its probable duration is indicated by the conduct of the chickens. If they run for shelter the shower will be brief, but if they stay out in the rain it indicates that there will be falling weather for some time—too long, at least, for the fowls to attempt to keep their feathers dry. Beetles flying in the evening assures a fine morrow, as does also the flying of bats. Farmer boys know that when fishes swim low and will not bite, on the morrow they will have to work in the field. This is a sure sign of fair weather. The snowbird's feathers appear dark when a thaw is approaching and light when snow is coming. Hogs prepare a warm bed the day preceding the coming of a cold wave. With all of these sids for accurately foretelling the weather what need the farmer care for the signal service men's in probable guesses? While instinct tells the birds of the air, the beasts of the field and the fishes of the sea what the weather is to be like, man, with all of his boasted intelligence, has not raised the science of foretelling the weather above the plane of speculation. "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canse not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth."

A Hint to Philanthropists.

One of the most reassuring signs of the times is the great number of wealthy mer who find the uplifting of their fellowmen a sweeter pastime than horse races or base ball. Philanthropy has capital at command whenever proves a scheme feasible. Colleges, churches, libraries, museums, hospitals, alms houses have long been the staple products of liberality. Some wise heads have devised model tenement houses. But perhaps there is no great presumption in thinking that in point of necessity, feasibility, and efficiency, the first claim on the attention of the munificent and apostles of every kind is held by the girls' board-
