Are Your Eyes Bad?

DR. M. F. STEIN,

THE FAMOUS SPECIALIST,

...WILL CURE YOU....

Many people become all but totally blind and at an early age simply because they pay no attention to their eyes. They notice a dimness and soreness after reading a while, and when a miserable headache comes to them they ascribe it to any cause but the right one and take a pill. The real cause of their misery is that their eyes are weak and every time they read or write means an added strain and the eyes made weaker.

Consultation with a Specialist means the ending of all misery and the saving of your eyesight.

DR. STEIN IS RELIABLE.

You do not see him once and then look for him again in vain. He makes regular visits to your city. Come and see him and have your eyes scientifically tested free of charge, that you may have comfort when you read or write. Will be

LITERARY NOTES.

Marion Crawford's next book is to be called "A Maid of Venice."

A recent interesting fact that the grand vicar's recent circular forbidding Mussulman families to employ European governesses is the result of the effect produced by "The Cross and the Crown" by a Crossian Lady, lately published in Paris. This story has for its thesis the dangers of the uprooting of Ottoman Islam by the surrounding Ottoman Islam.

After dark it is weird business to be swimming in the dark—on the throne of the world. It's well, but it's not all that's well. It's well, but it's not all that's well.

Some of these greenhorns are not paid to pick them. They're some guns—loaded when you don't expect it.

From "D'ri and T." by Irving Bacheller.

Hard work is good medicine for a sick heart.

Hope is born of nothing and dies quickly.

He was a man whose judgment was the stomach of the head. That is to say, it's well, but it leads to success, but there's no hope and no future, it's weak to let one thought be dominant.

A single purpose is well, but it leads to success, but there's no hope and no future, it's weak to let one thought be dominant.

It's made up of musts and musts.

It means lots.

LESSON XIII. SEPT. 29—A REVIEW OF THE QUARTER.

Golden Text.—"The Memory of the Lord is Everlasting—Exalting to Everlasting Upon That That Fear Him"—Page 107, 17—Beginnings of History.

A property owner advised building the house on a hillside, but he said that the ground floors came under flood and that the upper floors were little better.

He said that the gentiles had paid too little attention to the flood.

There is no need of having the roots so high that every time a flood comes down it will result in breaking the root.

Book floors are good in many cases.

And if the roots are low there need be no damage from a flood.

The writer of this has used a book floor for years, and it has not been broken, it has not been materialized.

It is entirely feasible to keep the floor covered with dirt, dust or chaff.

The man that wants to show success at the fair and poultry exhibition should not expect to do so.

He should not expect to get breeding stock at a high price for birds in which certain types have been well fixed. Cheap birds may show good points, but the man may have few of them.

It is the third chapter of the International Committee's "Universal history,"

"The history of what has been done for the creation of man."

He should demand the ancestors of birds. A dozen generations of birds in the blood is as in other kinds of live stock.

It takes skill to build up a flock of birds for any purpose. The birdman will not be able to succeed in this.

It requires time, and the impatient man will do well to keep out of the lists. Lastly, the cost of production of meat is high, and the price of the lists.

It is the immediate result of the money comes back in the future—re-suits.

Dirt is cheap and the hen should have an inexhaustible supply of it.

She needs it for her daily diet, and for bathing her when she is dirty.

She conceives of dirt as the proper medium and will bathe in that or nothing. By all means encourage her to do so, and her all the time she needs.

As this is the case, the birdman should be called to attention to the matter now. In a few weeks the fall rains will have covered the dust into mud and rendered it unusable.

HE SLEEPS IN PEACE

Imposing Funeral Ceremonies Precede Interment of McKinley at Canton.

Out under the whispering oak trees of Westlawn cemetery, in a vine-covered vault, almost buried in a sloping hillside, all that is earthly of William McKinley now rests. About the flower-strewn slopes a picket line of soldiers stands silent in the shadows.

Whole Day Given to Grief.

All day Thursday muffled drums beat their requiems, brasses wailed out the strains of marches of the dead, great men of the nation followed a funeral car in grief and tears. Through solid banks of bareheaded men and weeping women and children, fringed by a wall of soldiers, marching military and civilians passed with the mourners of the distinguished dead.

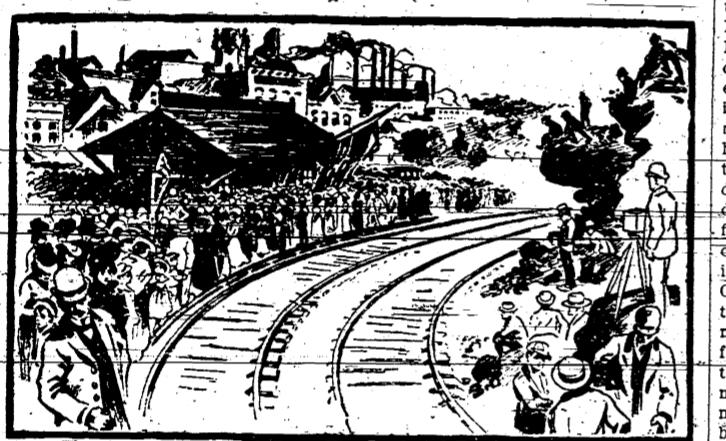

First among those who followed the dead during the journey from the home to the tomb was the man who is now at the head of the government.

Mrs. McKinley Nears Collapse.

Mrs. McKinley was unable to attend the funeral. While the last rites were being said she remained in a room of the family home, dazed, not realizing that death had come to her husband, almost paralyzed mentally. During the morning, at her urgent request, she sat alone for a time beside the coffin as it lay in the south parlor of the house. No one seeks to lift the veil that is drawn over this scene about the bier of the last earthly sleep. The casket was not opened. But she was near the one who ever had cared for and protected her; near the dead for whom grief has burned into the soul of a country the lessons of manliness and beneficence taught by his life.

Final Ceremonies Impressive.

The last ceremonies for the late president were marked with a dignity that struck dumbness to the tens of thousands who watched the funeral column make the journey from the home to the cemetery. From the south parlor of the frame house which had so long been the family home to asket was borne to the First Methodist church at Canton, with statesmen, diplomats, great men of nation, representatives of the world, gathered with the surrounding members of the family. Ministers of five religious denominations said the simple services.

Great Throng Jams in Halls.

Troops banked the streets about, but the thousands who had gathered near and stood in places for five hours held their ground, catching up the broken strains of "Near, My God, to Thee." The silence of calm had come; the silence of supreme excitement had passed. "It was not at him," said the minister of the church, all but hidden from sight by the mountains of blooms and floral pieces that bound in the pulpit and choir loft, "that the fatal shot was fired, but at the heart of our government." Then he added: "In all the coming years men will seek, but will find in vain, to fathom the enormity and the wickedness of that crime."

New President in Tears.

These words brought from with crushing force the warning that the last scenes were being enacted. Among those who sat with bowed heads was President Roosevelt. The tears welled into his eyes as he heard the petitions that God might guide his hands aright. Then came the last stage of this journey to the city of the dead. Members of the United States Senate, those who sit in the house of representatives, officials and citizens from practically every state in the union, soldiers, military organizations—a column of more than 6,000 men followed the funeral car on this last journey.

Father is Carpeted in Flowers.

The skies were hidden by clouds of gray, but not a drop of rain fell. The path of flagging leading to the iron-gated vault was buried beneath a covering of blooms. This carpet of flowers came as an offering from the school children of Nashville, Tenn.

place where the funeral services were to be held. At the church entrance were drawn up deep files of soldiers, with bayonets advanced, keeping a clear area for the advancing casket and the long train of mourners. The hearse halted while President Roosevelt and members of the cabinet alighted. Again they grouped themselves at either side of the entrance, and with uncovered heads awaited the passing of the casket. Then the flower-covered coffin was brought from the hearse and as it passed within the black-draped entrance the president and his cabinet followed within the edifice.

Blooms Taken as Mementos.

So it happened that when the men of the army and of the navy carried the black casket within the shadow of the vault the flower carpet had disappeared, its blooms, however, to be guarded for years as mementos of this day of sorrow.

Just without the entrance to this mausoleum stood the new president of the United States. The coffin rested on supports only a hand's reach from him. Then the members of the cabinet formed an open line with him, and members of the family—all save the lone woman who was in the home under the close watch of Dr. Rixey—gathered near. "Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust," came the benediction from the lips of the venerable Bishop Joyce.

The roar of the cannon echoed from the hilltop just above. It came as a mighty "amen." Again the white-haired minister spoke. Again came the crashing roar of the salute, its reverberations beating on and on over the hills about the city.

"Taps" Sound as Bugler.

"Taps," the saddest call the bugle language of the army knows, came from eight bugles. The last notes were held until the breath of the wind seemed to rob them of life. Away down the broad street, two miles away, the marching columns were still coming. The music of the bands, muted, it seemed, by some giant hand, came floating to the group about the vault.

"Near, My God, to Thee, Nearer to Thee."

ject of which is to do this very work mechanically.

The remaining three divisions were made up of representatives from clubs, societies, civic bodies and the Eighty-second regiment of National Guards, together with other military organizations.

When the funeral at Canton began all the tides of American life stood still. The wheels of industry ceased to revolve. The hammers of toll paused in their beat. The ship stopped. Her lips quivered slightly as he was about the crescent road to the left of the temporary tomb. Then darkness threw its veil over all, the silent guards took their stations, the committee gates were closed.

Never Mourning More Sincere.

That is the bare outline of one of the most imposing and impressive funerals ever seen in the United States. To fill in all its details would take pages, while to convey an adequate idea of the feature of it all which was most conspicuous—the depth and silence of the grief displayed—is beyond words. In that respect it was the scenes of Wednesday enacted over again with increased intensity. All along through the great black lane of people that stretched from the McKinley home to the cemetery—quite two miles—were men and women weeping as though their dearest friend was being borne to the grave.

Every Eye Dim With Tears.

About the tomb itself the outburst of grief was still more striking. As the casket was borne into the vault there was not a member of the cabinet who was not visibly affected, while several were in tears, with their handkerchiefs to their eyes. Secretary Root, although controlling himself to some degree of outward calm, was deeply moved, while President Roosevelt repeatedly pressed his handkerchief to his eyes.

Scenes at the Church.

It was 1:30 o'clock when the procession reached the stately stone edithor in the rear of the church.

CLEVELAND'S TRIBUTE TO McKinley.

All our people loved their dead President. His kindly nature and lovable traits of character and his amiable consideration for all about him will long be in the minds and hearts of his countrymen. He loved them in return with such patriotism and unselfishness that in this hour of their grief and humiliation he would say to them: "It is God's will; I am content. If there is a lesson in my life or death, let it be taught to those who still live and have the destiny of their country in their keeping."

He was obedient and affectionate as a son, patriotic and faithful as a soldier, honest and upright as a citizen, tender and devoted as a husband, and truthful, generous, unselfish, moral, and clean in every relation of life. He never thought any of those things too weak for his manliness.

By the memory of our murdered

President, let us resolve to cultivate and preserve the qualities that made him great and useful, and let us determine to meet any call of patriotic duty directly behind the men of the navy and just across the aisle from President Roosevelt. After Dr. and Mrs. Boer came the venerable Joseph Saxton, uncle of Mrs. McKinley. The great organ had left the funeral march and now the reeds pealed out the strains of "Near, My God, to Thee." Those who had accompanied the funeral train then were seated. Senator and Mrs. Fairbanks came first, followed by Controller Charles Gates Dawes. Senator Hanna followed. He looked worn and leaned on his cane. Mrs. Hanna accompanied him. Then the black-gloved usher seated the other members of the party.

The formation of the funeral procession was as follows:

IT TURNS MUSIC LEAVES.

ject of which is to do this very work mechanically.

When this device is attached to a piano, all that the player has to do is to press with the foot upon a small rubber knob which is placed near one of the pedals. A slight pressure of the foot suffices to release a sheet or leaf of music from a clasp which holds it, and to turn it over. There are as many clasp as there are sheets of music and a simple mechanism connects them with the knob containing the compass air.

This device can be attached to any music stand, and thus a violin player will find it as useful as a piano player. Moreover, it takes only a few seconds to put it in place.

An Incomplete House.

We run wild over the furnishings of a house, its furniture, carpets, hangings, pictures and music, and always forget or neglect the most important requisite.

Something there should be always on the shelf to provide against sudden casualties or attacks of pain.

Such come like a thief in the night; a sprain, strain, sudden backache, toothache or neuralgic attack. There is nothing easier to get than a bottle of St. Jacob's Oil, and nothing surer to cure quickly any form of pain.

The house is incomplete without it. Complete it with a good supply.

Good advice is often suspected when given by a disinterested person.

The highway to wealth is often a dangerous one.

Imperial Chinese Dog Now in Jersey.

Tai-Tai is an Imperial Pekinese spaniel, and as one of the pets of the Empress of China has many times nested in Her Majesty's lap.

This royal Chinese dog was taken from the sacred Imperial palace of Pekin, after the flight of the Empress and Emperor, and is now at Vincennes, Ind., the property of Dr. Corbin J. Decker, of the United States Navy, who was appointed surgeon in charge of the international hospital at Taku during the Chinese war.

Miss Helen Morton, daughter of former Vice President Morton and the namesake of the second son of the Duke of Albany and of Sagamore, a great-grandson of Napoleon's famous minister, was educated in Paris and is an accomplished musician. She is of a literary turn, too, and an expert at many outdoor sports.
