RACE FOR LIFE.
A former Wild West Showman's life was saved by a race for life. The showman, who was named John J. Smith, was found by a group of men in a forest near the town of Manchester. He was in a very bad condition, having been shot in the chest. The men who found him were the members of a local hunting club. They immediately took him to a nearby house and called for a doctor. The doctor, who was named Dr. J. H. Smith, arrived and examined the man. He found that the wound was not too serious, but that the man was in a very bad condition. He immediately gave him some medicine and told him to rest. The man, who was now named John J. Smith, recovered and was able to return home. He was now a member of the local hunting club and was very grateful to the men who had saved his life.
