THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION

GOV. WARNER ISSUES ANNUAL EXHORTATION TO OBSERVE THE HOLIDAY.

SAGINAW COUNTY PROFITS MOST FROM THE PRIMARY SCHOOL FUND.

Fire at Boyne City Destroys Railroad Shops, Causing a Loss of $45,000.

Gov. Warner issued his sixth annual Thanksgiving proclamation. It reads as follows:

"It is a wise and benevolent custom that has been observed by people to set aside a day during the season of the sere and yellow leaf and after the harvest promised God's people at the seed time has been completed, as a day of praise and thanksgiving for the blessings shown upon us.

In obedience to this custom, however, observed and hallowed by long observance, I hereby designate Thursday, November 24, as a day to be set apart for the purpose of reflecting upon the blessings of every good and perfect gift that has come to us as individuals and as a people.

"It is a wise and benevolent custom, however, observed and hallowed by long observance, I hereby designate Thursday, November 24, as a day to be set apart for the purpose of reflecting upon the blessings of every good and perfect gift that has come to us as individuals and as a people.

"Our state is one of the bravest, most enterprising and hardy in the year now drawing to a close we have been especially favored. The hand that yielded bountiful crops to the state is the hand of intelligent ownership. Our cities are centers of commercial enterprises and the handwork of our artisans is bringing fame and fortune to our people.

"Our progress is not all along material lines. The religious activity and unselfishness of our people has manifested and brings assurance of better citizenship, higher ideals, a better and purer home life and a continuous increase in the welfare of the state and nation the greatest heritage that has come to any people.

"In recounting our numerous blessings we must not forget the number of our number who are deprived by misfortune or otherwise of a just measure of the happiness of the state. The spirit of the infant, upon whom the hand of affliction has been laid should share our love and material welfare. The day of the poor is the day of the honest and sincere and lives by deeds of charity, by lightening each other's burdens and by carrying for this day the burden of the world. It is the world to those deprived of liberty. The bonds of love and affection should be cemented to bring together those who are separated from the love of God.

"Let us assemble on this day in our places of worship and in a spirit of pure devotion thank the Omnipotent Father for the many blessings and measure of peace and prosperity we are permitted to enjoy."

Saginaw Profits Most.

For 1910 the state paid out of the primary school fund to the various school districts of the state a total of $5,591,434, and the total state tax collected for the same year from these counties was only $4,729,000. Thus it will be seen that the state paid out to the various counties $862,434 more than was paid by these same counties in the state taxes.

There are school districts in the state that have a surplus of several thousand dollars on hand that they have no use for, and the amount is rapidly being added to by the apportionment of the primary school money which comes twice a year.

There are, on the contrary, districts that could use much more money than they are now receiving and use it to advantage, but the law is such that a just distribution is not forthcoming.

Only twenty counties are paying more state tax than they are receiving from the state in primary school money. Wayne County leads the list in this amount, while Saginaw leads all counties in the amount received from the primary apportionment over that paid by the county in state taxes. Wayne's excess of state tax over the school fund is $53,182. Saginaw's excess of primary money over the state tax is $75,047.

$45,000-Fire at Boyne City.

Fire which broke out in Boyne City destroying the B. C. G. & A. railroad repair shop, foundry and roundhouse and considerable equipment. The flames originated in the boiler room and in 10 minutes the huge structure was a mass of flames. Two locomotives which were being repaired were totally destroyed. The other equipment was gotten out safely.

A strong northwest gale was blowing and for a time it was feared the business houses along the west side of Lake street would also be destroyed. The fact that they were constructed of brick and the good work of the department saved them. The machine shop was fully equipped. Work will be commenced immediately to rebuild the roundhouse and shops. The loss will reach $45,000, partly covered by insurance.

Half His Head Gone, Lives Six Days.

William Bryans, 43, a farmer near Hastings, after living six days with the top of his head torn off by a horse's kick, died unexpectedly. After the accident surgeons removed about 30 pieces of bone from his brain and part of the brain itself. Death was momentarily expected, but two days later he regained consciousness, talked rationally, and asked to be taken home. His improvement astonished the surgeons, who regarded his vitality remarkable. He leaves a widow and two children, one of whom is blind.

GOT HIS MONEY FROM DEBTOR

Shrewd Russ of Philadelphia Physician Who Had a Smattering of Law.

A little legal knowledge is a dangerous thing—for the fellow who doesn't have it. In Philadelphia not long ago, Harry Bissell and Bookkeeper's Magazine reported that a man who had owned a $200 doctor bill for eight years or more, established his studio in a residence district and began to make money. The bill, it was explained, was the result of the bill being converted so that the photographer actually owned tangible property in the city, and that he was able to collect the debts he had won, among the rest, for the state of limitations, which had outlasted the bill several years before. But, as it happened, this doctor had studied law a little, so on day he dropped into the office of the physician's lawyer, "Brown," he said, "you remember that bill I have against you?" "Why, yes," replied Brown, "but it's out of date."

"It's true the bill is outlawed," replied the doctor, "but I see you're working up quite a stylish trade, and perhaps you wouldn't object to taking my picture and applying the price on the bill."

"Certainly," replied Brown, who saw he could add to his prestige by displaying in his office a portrait of his own doctor.

A few days later he was sued in court on the bill, and when he put up his hands in despair, he learned to his chagrin a bit of law he had not known; that any acknowledgement of an outlawed bill brings it to life again, and that payment on account of the money due, good, constitutes such an acknowledgement.

In the Gleaming.

The shades of evening were falling. The dim-electric lights softly strove to dispel the gloom, and the last lighted east platform of the elevated loop station at Wabash and Madison.

There was no crowd—a most unusual happening—and the young man and young woman, who were together, had strolled along together, and finally, converging, had the platform almost to themselves.

Imperceptibly, as their steps increased, with a swift motion she put her arms around his neck and said:

At this precise moment the man on the west platform, directly opposite, who had been looking and looking the other way, was gone.

The purpose of this story is to assure those two young persons that the sun still sets, except what is here truthfully set forth.

Higher Than Ever.

In his exploration of the Karakoram, Doctor Longstaff found a vast wall of unknown peaks to the northeast of the main range. The highest, which he called "Kampti," he estimated, before taking his observations, as being over 25,000 feet high. Actual observations, when made, gave a height of 23,200 feet. A second set of observations, however, taken from a more favorable station, showed the real height to be 26,000 feet, and according to the president of the Royal Geographical society, "Doctor Longstaff" manipulated his observations so as to make the mountain look higher than it was, otherwise would a proceeding probably unique in mountaineering annals, "there really is a strong presumption that Everest can be longer regarded as highest."

Height of Clouds.

Many a man has been turned to this question, and, in fact, it may be added that there is no fixed height for any kind of cloud. Some remarkable heights of clouds were made at Vienna by an ingenious method. Advantage was taken of the extremely brilliant light furnished for the night by the electric arc lamp, which was erected long ago in that city. By means of a projector it was found that a beam of light could be sent up to the clouds, producing upon them a bright reflection, being observed simultaneously from points on the earth two or three miles apart, thus observing the exact height of the clouds, which was found to be as much as 10,000 meters, or nearly 33,000 feet.

Hobbies.

"Who do you think invented the expression, 'The hair of the dog is good for the bite'?"

"I don't know, but I am sure it was not the owner of one of these Mexican dogs."

No Name.

"I was deeply disappointed in this article and its venomous creatures."

"No, it is only about tarantulas and cobras. I thought maybe it would mention some woman I know."

Just to Be Contrary.

"Don't forget," said the ready-made philosopher, "that there is always a way to do things."

"I'm working the other way," replied Mr. Growler.

"Then I'm a minus proposition."

Landmark of Revolution.

Such is the revolutionary history of this country center in New York city. It is strange, though, that the old landmarks remain. At the dedication of the old Jumel mansion a public historical museum, Senator Depew called the building a "temple of history." Those who attended the period. Those on hand, however, were not in agreement with that date, and 1776 is said to have been making very fast in this country. Morris remained true to the British flag, and when the revolutionaries took the fort, he fled to England, and their property, like that of many revolutionaries, was confiscated. It was, indeed, an irony of fate that the approach of his former lover was the cause of his banishment.

He had a son, however, who was born in France, and he died in Paris.

Cobras.

The young housekeeper was looking after some live chickens in a coop.

"Yes," said the dealer, "I'll kill and dress them, and send them to your house."

"Well," replied the young housewife, hesitating, "are you positive they are fresh?"

Plausible Theory.

Little Willie—Say, pa, why do they stamp eagles on our coins?"

Pa—Problems in emblem of the Bradock Campaign. That was in 1755

STRANGE THINGS FOUND IN VARIOUS PORTIONS OF THE EARTH

Walter Winans' Parlor Pet

DRAMA MADE TO ORDER

A startling scene was witnessed the other day by a crowd at the boat basin in New York, when a man, dressed as a bear, was carrying a baby in his arms and leaping into the deepest part of the pond. The other would have been shocked to see a woman, who was carrying a baby, leaping into the water and rescuing the nurse, who had fallen from a window in particular, the banks of the Thames.

Walter Winans, the famous horse lover and crack revolver shot, was at the time of his accident, a member of the British racing group of thoroughbreds, actors, including the property baby, all went home in a cab.

CALAIS AND ITS LIGHTHOUSE

Calais is rather an ugly place for a French town. The Place d'Armes, where the tower of the Hotel de Ville has remained since the fifteenth century, is not very attractive. Here Calais is a friend and has a safe hold on the square, towering over the roofs of surrounding houses, dwarfing them, is the old water tower.
