"Here Is Your Jewel Casket, Madam," He Said

NEW YORK.—"Madam"—and the handsome station master looked into her violet eyes.

"I am happy to inform you, he said. The violet eyes looked up into his and a flush mantled her cheeks.

"Thank you so much," she said.

"You must have seen me when I dropped in," H. G. M. said, but with an accent that did not make it sound like a harsh word at all.

"I know it was you," he said. "I know it just matches the color of your eyes. I was much worried until I found you, for I know that the contents must be very valuable. Do not mention it at all. It must be a reward for the trouble I have taken."

He handed these jewels over apprehensively and listened. "I suggest," said the H. S. M., "that you examine the contents before you go further. Perhaps some of them might be missing. My office is at your disposal if you wish to do so."

The violet eyes went to the office and the H. S. M. said so one of his assistants, "Odell, just give the lady this will. She would like to make an inventory of her jewels, which she just lost and found again." And so the violet eyes opened the lid of that leather-bound box, and these were the what took out, one by one:

One small ring, cracked.

One rabbit's foot.

One bottle of perfume.

One tube of rouge.

One tube of cold cream.

One eyebrow pencil.

One date book.

One small box, filled, after a pause, placing at the limp form of the H. S. M., which had fallen back in his chair, "that you should have thought this was filled with diamonds! Why, this is my tango vanity. Everything is all right. Don't you think it is especially nice one? Everything is all right. Look in the little mirror. Thank you so much. Good-by. You have been very kind."

And the station master went into his private office and lit a dark, dank cigar and pondered the ways of the woman kind.

Firemen Steal the Bed of Pair Wed in Secret

CHICAGO.—A Maxim silencer on the wedding chimes failed to work when Charlie F. Passow, a fireman, married Miss Margaret Mullan at her home, 1100 North Avondale avenue. Passow recently asked for a furlough, but did not explain that he intended to be married.

He had heard of the pranks played on newly-marrieds in the firehouse, and during his hours off they visited furniture emporiums and picked out all the accessories dear to the hearts of the newly-married.

But Passow underestimated the discernment of the other members of the engine company.

Mr. and Mrs. Passow went to their new home after the wedding, the next night. Passow tried to open the door, but was unable to do so because of the Maxim silencer which had plugged up all the keyholes.

In a rage hotter than most of the fire he has turned the key on, Passow struggled with the key until finally he and his bride gained entrance.

On the dimly-lighted room he found an elaborate set of aluminum kitchen utensils.

"We must have made a major league proposition in a single night," Passow said.

"Yes, the boys are pretty good-hearted, even if they do have their little jokes," Passow conceded.

"Once he was so tired he missed the bed."

Once more he felt himself in his heart. He raced back and forth through the flat and at last found that the door of a closet was locked and the keyhole.

Passow got a chisel and hammer and got the door open. The bed had been carefully taken out of the closet.

After that, to the matter over, Mr. and Mrs. Passow decided that they could afford to pass over the jokers.

This Couple Knew a Good Cow When They Saw It

CHICAGO.—Charles Shick, when he ranted from the meadow, hunting for his cow, he could keep chickens, a driving horse or two, and a cow. Whenever Shick and his wife drew up a plan, she would say, "I don't care if we have a sketch of an ideal cow."

In fact, they decided that they would spend it necessary, a hundred dollars for a cow. A cow, however, is a creature of care and care of cow. After they became settled in their new home they started out cow-shopping. They read the classified ads in the paper and found that there was a short field in touching runners.

Dick Rude, in the best right-handed pitcher in Governor's circuit this season, was the best right-handed pitcher in Governor's circuit this season.

Shick and his wife went to the Delafield county's 12 county fairs. They saw a lot of cows, but none looked like the cow they wished.

Shick and his wife went to the great Jersey. Its eyes were bright and its coat was beautiful to behold. And as for the general symmetry and make-up of the animal, would put the most exacting.

The herdsmen said that particular cow was an abundant milk producer. He said it was as sweet as honey.

The Shicks exchanged knowing-glances. Verily they had, at last, found a cow that looked like the mental picture they had drawn.

"I suppose you will sell the cow," Shick asked.

"Yes, it is for you," he responded.

"What do you want for the animal?" said Shick.

"Well," said the herdsmen, "it is one of the best animals in the herd, but we'll take five hundred dollars for it."

When they started across the fair grounds, Shick clutched at the standard. For half an hour neither spoke. Then Shick turned to his wife and in a moan voice said, "Say, wife, we know a good cow when we see one, don't we?"

Finds a $367 "Roll" and Gets a 25-Cent Reward

DENVER, COLO.—McGrath, a lifeguard at the Washington park bathing beach, found $367 in bank bills on the shore. With no thought of reward in his mind, he hastened to police headquarters and reported his find. There he learned that the money had been left in the safe of the Argonaut hotel, which had lost his "roll" while bathing in the lake.

"I spent about two bits telephone and the city trying to locate the owner of that money," said McGrath. "When I found him I hurried to his apartment and turned the big bundle over to him with never a thought of reward."

"But he was so overcome with gratitude and joy, he insisted that I be rewarded. So I gave him a dime as a quarter from his pocket and studied for a minute. Finally he showed the quarter toward me and said: 'You deserve a reward.'

"He looked so rufly that I didn't bear to take it. It would have broken his heart. I am sure. Besides, he had been in location him. The bill would barely cover the amount I had spent, so I handed the quarter back to him again."

McGrath is through.

Catcher William McAllester, who was sent by the Louisville team to the National league boats of Gonzales of Cincinnati, Wm. and Arch of Chicago, all in the 300 list. Joe Lamm is sending a lot of good playing material to the Providence team for next year. Pritch Rutherford, who was secured on the Montgomerie Orioles not long ago, has been sent to the Rhode Island capital.

The New York Americans have gone to the Atlantic league for another year. Bill Morris, the Bostonian, has turned Pitcher Elmer Brown over to Newark. Brown cost the Brooklyn club $7,000 last fall, having purchased him from the Atlantic league. At the time there was much criticism of Branch Rickey because he did not take Brown, who had an option on the Montgomerie team. Finally Rickey knew what he was about, and his critics can sit down.

"I just give me a nickel out of that for a keepsake," he said, "and go down to the tobacco company and pay the calls I made in finding out where to get to him."

"But he didn't give me the nickel. I don't know whether he paid for those calls or not. But I am glad I didn't accept the reward. 25 cents is a lot of money to some people. So is $367. But why should I accept a reward for doing my duty? Twenty-five cents' worth of a man's duty doesn't go very far."

POLICY OF FEDERAL LEAGUE

Baltimore Club Is Advised to Get Busy and Secure Players to Strengthen Their Team

Star Matthews, in the Baltimore Sun, offers this kindly advice to the Baltimore Federal League Club: It has been the policy of the local club to go its way in peace, not touching players who are under contract with other organizations. The club has been off Baltimore's athletes in the earlier in the season, for nothing is to be gained by having a clever man under contract. It is, however, just as well to hold on to his services. Paying large salaries to men holding down seats in the grandstand is not good baseball and it is not good for the club. The club have told that the Federal league is right in its contention that the 10-day clause is worthless and unfair. Baltimore might as well get in early, for the winter is still a long time away.

I found you, for I know that the contents must be very valuable. Do not mention it at all. It must be a reward for doing your duty. I handed these jewels over apprehensively and listened. "I suggest," said the H. S. M., "that you examine the contents before you go further. Perhaps some of them might be missing. My office is at your disposal if you wish to do so."

BERLIN CITY OF SUPREME ORDERLINESS

In the petty cases and trials that perplex us day by day: "We encounter in our way: When we feel our patience failing, we are apt to say: Two things still well I'll awaiting—Keeping sweet and holding on."

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

(This article was written a short time before Germany declared war.—Editor.)

OUT realize the moment you step from your train into the atmosphere of Berlin, the capital of the Empire of Germany.

That you are in a place where foreordination is the highest. Berlin is the capital of the Empire of Germany, ordered by the gods, who have placed it in a position of supremacy, and where it is a magnetic gravitation into every activity of every man, woman and child of the nation.

Mathematics is the symbol of this empire of exactness, because all the conditions are postulated by the brain of man, and therefore by the mind of man.
