For nearly 48 years the news giver for Manchester and surrounding towns. We invite every body to call at the Enterprise building, east side of the river, and see how we can help you and you to know us. We want to know what you know, if it's worth telling to the public. If you can't call, write us, giving your name. We want your advertisement, your job printing and order for stationery.

Phone 44

 $1.25 a Year; Single Copy 5c and must be paid in advance.

The Paid Date
 To which every subscriber's Enterprise runs is printed plainly on every paper sent by mail. If the paper is received and used after that date, the subscriber thereby legally assumes responsibility for payment, and the Enterprise is mailed to all subscribers subject to such responsibility. If on the 1st of the month your paid date expires, don't receive and use it. If you do so you must pay for it.

Notice of meetings or of any event where a fee is collected must be paid for; obituary notices, card of thanks, etc., 5 cents a line.
 If we want to do your probate advertising. Ask Judge Murray to send the notice to the Enterprise and we will.

When you write or phone, don't ask for anybody in particular just say No. 44.

The U. of M. scientists may determine why the wire fencing sold to Michigan farmers should rust more in some places than in others or why it don't rust in any of it does.

So Spain has decided not to send a war vessel to take part in the ceremony at the Panama canal because Admiral Dewey will be there. Oh, wachta afraid of we ain't fightin' now.

We furnish our Washtenaw county readers this week, with the proceeding of the board of supervisors for the past year. It may be a good idea to file this issue of the ENTERPRISE for future reference.

Some business men have lots of trouble and are always telling people about it. Oh, no not in the paper, those who use a newspaper publicity seldom have troubles. Their customers keep them busy and happy.

Unless they find a way to make heavy right along there is little likelihood of poor people ever paying an income tax. But if they succeed, at the price they could be put on the list before the summer is gone.

Man's inhumanity to man is shown in the fact that a sick stranger can work and take his coin while a non-queerage would not be able to take a coin for a dollar at ninety nine cents. Again, when any thievery is going on it usually attributes it to "local talent."

Rather than incur the risk of war with a foreign nation, we would favor discussing all dealings with nations at war and with others where our production and provisions are likely to assist any of the nations at war. It would hurt many of our manufacturers and corporations but they can stand it.

The plan to keep our wheat and corn in European countries, as proposed by John W. Snyder of Baltimore, seems feasible. American corn could reach the people how to produce corn bread, corn cakes, and fried corn and that would be cheaper than wheat. Besides America is the only country where corn is grown to any extent.

In the time of high protective tariff the consumer paid the price, that is, Americans. Today, on account of the war in Europe the price of wheat has greatly advanced. For every cent Europe pays the dear people of the United States pay two or three because only one quarter, or one third of the wheat sold goes to Europe.

Prosecuting attorney Lehman and others who went to Wisconsin to see Kramer, the man who was arrested on a forgery charge, have returned home Kramer practically admitted his transaction with Martin Oavanaugh but when told that if he would make restitution he might receive a lighter sentence, said that he could not raise even $1,000 and expected to die in prison in Wisconsin.

What under the sun is the matter with the men anyway. Guggenheim the wealthy mine owner says that the government should see that all laboring men have work. He thinks that corporations should divide with their employees. Is he crazy or been drinking. Why don't he do as Henry Ford has and loosen up the strings of his coin bag so a few clunks will spill out and be gathered up by the poor.

Vernon and Metamora, Ohio, for a two week's visit with friends and relatives.

Though Mrs. Charles Sloat had been in rather poor health, her death Sunday evening came as a shock to the family and friends. While talking over the telephone she was taken with coughing and died soon after. She leaves a husband, one daughter, Mrs. Edward Logan and two sons, Will and Charles. Mrs. Sloat though a resident of this village many years, was a former resident of Sharon. The funeral was held from the residence Wednesday.

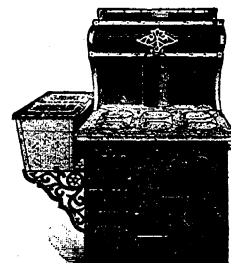

A quiet but very pleasant gathering was held at the residence of Mr. & Mrs. Bert Hall in Lodi, Calif. in honor of Mr. & Mrs. Harvey Hall, his father's and mother's 60th wedding anniversary. A fine dinner was served and some golden remembrances were received, also a shower of post cards from relatives and friends in Michigan and New York states. REPORT OF EQUALIZATION COMMITTEE

Minority report read by Supervisor Holmes as follows:
To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of Washington County.
Believing that the reduction of the Tax Commissioner's rate by 20 per cent is the correct and equitable adjustment of the rate of the county, I respectfully submit the following minority report of the committee on equalization:

TWO YEARS' WAR, DECLARES EDISON

Days of Thirty Years' Contest
Passed, Says Wizard.

SUBMARINES ARE EFFECTIVE

Their Exploits Teach Lessons in Building of Battleships—Boom in Business Here to Be Tremendous After the War—Worry? Think of the Kaiser!

"The year 1914 dealt a staggering blow to civilization, the arts and the sciences," said Thomas A. Edison at his laboratory in West Orange. "But civilization will recover from the blow very soon after the war ends."

"And that will be?" asked a correspondent of the New York World.

"Not for two years, I fear," said the great inventor. "This war has taught the world that the killing of men in war is a scientific proposition now. With all the implements of destruction and plans for offensive and defensive operations so carefully mapped out and with the great number of men that can be drawn into the fray by both sides, the conflict will be long drawn out."

"There have been wars that have lasted thirty years, but those days are past. Killing men is a different proposition today, but I believe the present struggle will not end for at least two years, although I pray it will end sooner than any of us expects."

Mr. Edison added that the submarine has been the greatest offensive instrument in the world conflict and said:

"While the submarine has not obliterated the necessity of the Dreadnought, it surely has lessened its value. But you can let the ships England is constructing now are so built that they will be protected against submarine torpedoes. The effect of a primary explosion can be greatly minimized by the interior construction of a Dreadnought, and this, in all likelihood, is being done by the allies now."

The hearty old gentleman, from whose pockets the destruction of his plant by fire took $300,000 a short time ago, seemed entirely happy.

"Did your loss persuade you to make any New Year's resolutions?" he was asked.

"Worry? Think of the Kaiser!"

"Resolutions?" he repeated. "No sense! Years ago I formed my rules of life and I have adhered to them. The chief of them all is 'Work.' No. 1. The loss of the money does not worry me. Nothing was burned that cannot be replaced. I was up against a harder proposition when we built the first electric lighting plant in New York. It was something new—electric lighting—then. A fortune had been invested and the whole world was awaiting the outcome. Everything depended upon the success of that plant, but as a result of it the world has become electrically illuminated at night, as it were."

"When any one talks about worry he might apply my new standard of worry. Just think of the Kaiser, now on the defensive, with nearly 900 miles of battlefield, all told, on the east and west. Why, the average man's worry sink into insignificance compared to this. Another standard of distress is Belgium—little, gritty Belgium!"

"It has surprised me to see how Americans have become weakened over this war. They seem to be stricken with a sort of commercial paralysis. They want to get out and do something; now is the opportune time. Why, you can put a building up cheaper today than you could before the war, and yet many of our supposed good business men will wait until the war is over as a sign of prosperity and pay more for the building. The wise man will prepare now for the boom in trade that we will soon experience and which will be tremendous after the war."

A Belgian War Romance

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

One quiet evening in the summer of 1913 a pair of young lovers stood on a bridge that crossed the river Lys in Belgium. They were there for a parting. The young man was to leave for the coast early the next morning and thence for America. Nothing could be more peaceful than the scene about them. A young moon shone in the west. If an occasional breeze stirred the leaves on the trees they were stirred lightly. As for sound, there was only a slight gurgle beneath them as the current passed the abutment of the bridge.

"Mina," said the young man, "cheer up. It will not be long before I am here. I shall have saved enough money to send for you. That we may have a definite time to be reunited I promise you that one year from today, if not before, you shall receive the package money to bring you to me."

"And I, Hans, will work and save so that if you do not succeed in gaining enough to send for me I may have enough for the journey."

When the year had passed a great change had come over Belgium. The Germans were pouring into the country from the east, the French from the south. Wilhelm had received letters from her lover in New York that money would be sent her for her passage, but before it was dispatched the war had stopped the mails.

On the anniversary of their parting at evening, Wilhelm went to the bridge on which they had stood a year before. It was now a ruin, more than half of it having been destroyed. Here and there across the fields were flashes followed by a distant roar of guns, while searchlights sent their columns of light across the sky like the tails of nearly extinct comets.

What should she do? Her home had been that day in the line of fire and was a ruin. Before leaving it she had snatched up her savings, and these she had with her. Standing there in the identical spot where she had stood in quiet with her lover, she resolved to go to him if possible.

There was no way of announcing her coming before-hand. She had neither writing materials nor a way to send a letter. Indeed, it was doubtful if even she could break through the line of war to reach the coast. And if she arrived at a port would she find a vessel? Nevertheless she turned her face toward Holland and set off in the darkness.

Her adventures are a long story by itself. Fortune favoring, she reached Rotterdam in safety and there found that she had the means to buy a steerage ticket on an outgoing steamer to New York.

On the arrival of the vessel the emigrants were landed at Ellis island, and Wilhelm among others was brought before the emigration commissioners. There she was asked how she would be provided for in America, and when she said that she had no money she was told that she would be sent back to Holland.

Her modesty, the consciousness that she was coming to marry a man without a special bidding, had caused her to conceal what she expected. Besides, suppose Hans had changed! But the prospect of being sent back to a land running in blood, where even the little home in which she had been born and where she had been levelled, overcame her reticence, and she told a love story that no pen, however inspired, could put on paper.

"Hans must be found!"

Such were the instructions given to a messenger, who departed on his errand.

There is a committee of Belgians in New York whose purpose it is to look after their incoming fellow countrymen. The head of the committee was found, and he in turn started a hunt for Hans.

Ever since the war had broken out Hans had been anxious about his Wilhelm. He had not dared to send her his savings for fear they would be lost. Indeed, one of the troubles brought on by the war was the inability to send funds to Europe. He had written her, but without expectation that she would receive his letters. As to receiving letters from her, he had no faith in that either.

Hans was at work one afternoon when a fellow workman came to him and told him that the boss wished to see him in the office. Hans laid down his tools and reported as directed. He found beside the boss a man, who asked him:

"Are you Hans Wicheit?"

"Yes," Hans replied.

"There is a girl on Ellis island who came over from Belgium. She says you will marry her."

"Marry?"

"She says her name is Wilhelmina."

"Marry her? Of course I will marry her. Where can I find her?"

Hans wished to go at once to Ellis island, but suddenly remembering that a man in overalls was not in wedding costume, he turned on his heel and set off to join his sweetheart.

If the authorities had any doubt about Wilhelm's story it was dispelled by the fervent embrace of the lovers. But Uncle Sam's emigrant officials take no man's promise of marriage, and there are no breaches of promise in his large family. A man went with the couple to the city hall in New York, where a license was procured. Then the pair went to the office of the Belgian committee, where the marriage ceremony was performed.

LIVE SNAKE IN HER STOMACH

X Ray Reveals Reptile—Removed Without Operation.

Madison, Wis.—One of the most unusual cases in the history of local medicine was revealed at a local hospital, when physicians, submitting a woman from Waunakee, Dane county, to an X ray examination, discovered that her stomach contained a live snake six inches long.

The woman had not suffered any pain up to the time of the discovery, but was greatly distressed when told of the result of the examination. The snake was removed without operating. It proved to be a reptile commonly known as the grass snake, nearly pure white. The hospital authorities refused to make any statement regarding the case.

Cheap Vegetable Dye.

Country housekeepers may dye beautiful shades of brown by drying and using the green and brown moss and lichens that in some sections grow all about everywhere on rocks, fallen trees and fences. Boil the moss in enough water to rather more than cover it. Strain the liquid and put it on the stove. For light shades only a short time is required. For darker shades leave longer in the dye. If left in a very long time the color will deepen until it is almost black. This vegetable dye is fast. It will not fade as do many brown dyes. Try on small pieces of goods first.

The Smart Sash.

The new sash is made of chiffon or messaline. It is draped very high in front and plaited in fan effect. In the back it is very simply knotted, and the ends, which are cut diagonally, hang exactly the same length on both sides.

HOW TO FRAME PICTURES.

Water color pictures usually look well in narrow gold frames. A narrow mat of cream, white or gilt usually brings out the colors. Often, however, a silver gray or green frame, sometimes one of light brown, flat and not heavy in appearance, is best to good advantage.

The tendency now is to frame most pictures with little or no mats. The color and quality of prints, either colored, brown or black, are best brought out with the frame set close against the print. When a mat must be used have it in a color that harmonizes with the tone of the picture.

A photograph printed in sepia tones or any of the sepia prints is best framed in brown wood. Usually, according to present day standards, a flat simple frame looks best, although one of carved wood or turned wood can be used. Sometimes the Florentine wood frames that travelers to Florence buy and bring home by the yard can be effectively used on known prints. They are especially in keeping on a copy of some old Italian picture in brown. But usually a simple, unornamented frame is more effective.

GAMBLERS HAVE NO MONEY.

Opening on a Small Scale Is Planned, and Few Americans Are Expected to Be Present—Interest in War Over-shadows Excitement of Games, but a Few Visitors Are Now Expected.

London.—The Times prints the following interesting article from its correspondent at Monte Carlo describing war conditions in the gaming capital:

"According to established precedent, the gambling season should open at Monte Carlo in the fall. Then all the officials of the casino, from the guards of the outer courts to the least of the croupiers, begin to take note of the first gathering of worshippers at the shrine of the fickle goddess. But Monte Carlo has suffered the common fate

MILITARY AIRCRAFT FLYING OVER DEEP SEA MUSEUM AT MONTE CARLO.

For the moment its accustomed business and pleasures have sunk to trivial insignificance, all forgotten in the man's urgent issues of life and death.

"On Nov. 15 of last year, at the hour when in normal times the world of frivolous sport and fashion would be moving toward its palace of golden dreams, I sat outside the Cafe de Paris reflecting on the whirligig of times and the pitiful destinies of man which had made this for once an appropriate and comfortable place for meditation. No faring note disturbed the bourgeois peace of that enchanting garden between the Alps and the sea which all Europe in its idle moment associates with riotous living."

"No noise or smell of motorcar marred the Sabbath serenity of the scene. The monotonous plaint of M. Blanc's well fed doves was distinctly audible right across the place. A group of earnest citizens was gathered about the bulletin boards absorbing the latest news from the seat of war. Nowhere was there any sign of Petrograd or Chicago, London or Paris in pursuit of excitement."

"Making my way through the solemn place where magisterial clerks are wont to scrutinize the apparel and social standing of applicants for cards of admission to the casino, I observed that a large portion of its space was occupied by a very excellent map of Europe, all neatly decked with many colored flags, while above it hung several striking specimens of the French cartoonist's conceptions of his majesty the Emperor William, from which I gathered that, despite all previous experience, to the contrary, the croupier, too, is human and that even in this independent principality of Monaco the flowing tide of war on the fields of Flanders is a matter more absorbing than the fortunes of chance."

"Nor is this surprising when one learns that out of the 800 employees of the casino nearly 500 are now serving France with the colors. The rest have been retained in the service of the company at temporarily reduced rates. Until a month ago there seemed to be little prospect of the casino's opening for play this season, but it has now been decided to make a beginning at the Sporting club."

"M. Blanc fully realizes that whatever business the establishment may do will be nominal, at least until the Germans are driven out of France. Nevertheless he believes in opening the casino not only in the interests of his shareholders, but because the prosperity of the Riviera depends to a considerable extent on the money spent there by the habitual frequenters of Monte Carlo. By nature optimistic and a firm believer in the force of habit in human nature, the president of the Conseil d'Administration expects that, notwithstanding the war, some of the casino's usual clientele will come from Russia, South America, the United States and England."

"The consensus of opinion on the subject at Nice and Mentone appears to be that the class of visitors who will be attracted to the Riviera this winter in search of rest and sunshine will not contribute many subscribers to the salons prives of the casino."

"BEAUTY ON BUSINESS BASIS"

New Slogan for Making National Parks Self-Supporting.

Washington.—Development of the economic, as well as the aesthetic value of the national parks of the country, is the policy of Mark Daniels, newly appointed superintendent of national parks in the department of the interior.

Through the operation of a carefully worked out plan Mr. Daniels believes that not only can the national reservations eventually become self supporting, but that the picturesque value will be enhanced rather than destroyed by the placing of "beauty on a business basis." Briefly, the plan of the new superintendent contemplates the establishment of a "model village" in each of the large parks or in so many of them as the patronage will justify. In discussing his plan Mr. Daniels said:

"There is no doubt in my mind but that the national parks should be placed on a self supporting basis. The people will in time refuse to support the parks, and we should therefore take advantage of the revenue producing elements of the national reservations."

"My plan is simply to broaden the field for concession and to lay down simple building regulations to be followed by the concessionaries, which will preclude the possibility of the erection of buildings not harmonious with the scenic beauty of the parks."

The Claimant

By EUNICE BLAKE

On the estate of Lucien Marivaud, in France, lived a poor man named Soubise and his wife, Marie, the couple having a little son, Francois. M. Marivaud had extensive vineyards, from the product of which he manufactured wine. Soubise had charge of the grape growing, and Marivaud not only valued his services highly, but was very fond of him. Soubise's wife died, and he soon followed her, leaving little Francois without a home.

M. Marivaud had a son, Victor, about Francois's age. When the latter was left an orphan he was taken to the chateau and became a playmate of Victor. There was a brother of Victor, Louis, much younger than either of those two boys.

When Victor was eighteen he entered the military school and became an officer. Upon graduating he was ordered to join his regiment in Tonkin. Francois was anxious to see service, and, enlisting in the same regiment, went out with Victor, who agreed to interest himself in his promotion that he might become an officer.

A year later after a fight Lieutenant Marivaud was reported missing. This meant that he had fallen into the hands of the Chinese, in which case it was quite likely that he had been murdered. When nothing was heard from him for several years he was given up by his family, and when his brother, Louis, came of age he inherited the family patrimony, his father having died without a will. M. Marivaud had purposely omitted to make one because he never ceased to hope that his son would one day turn out to be among the living.

Ten years after the departure of Victor Marivaud, when there was no more of the family living, Louis, who had for some time possessed and managed the wine business, became engaged to Hortense Villaret, the daughter of a neighbor. Mlle. Villaret belonged to an aristocratic family, but the estate had been confiscated during one of the many changes in the sovereignty of France, and she was very poor. She and Louis were much in love with each other, and her father favored the match because Louis was wealthy and could enable Hortense to return to the style of living to which the family had formerly been accustomed.

All went happily for the lovers till a few weeks before the day set for the wedding. Then one day a man appeared at the chateau claiming to be Victor Marivaud. Louis was but twelve years old when his brother left home, and, granting that this man was Victor, he would not have remembered him. There was no other person at hand who had been familiar with Victor to identify him.

But the claimant was able to tell of many incidents that had happened on the estate, which went far to prove that he was what he claimed to be. He explained his long absence in this wise: During the fight in which he was reported missing he was knocked on the head by the butt of a musket in the hands of a Chinaman and stunned. When he came to himself he remembered nothing of the past, not even his name. The dead were lying about him, the wounded had been removed. He arose and walked till he came to a city, where he eventually entered the service of a French merchant. After passing through various vicissitudes he was taken suddenly ill and was removed to a hospital. After having been delirious on returning to his former condition he had exclaimed, "You misically Chinaman, take that for yours!" But seeing a nurse before him instead of a Chinaman he appeared much surprised. He had returned to a normal state, remembering that he was Victor Marivaud.

His appearance was a terrible blow to the lovers; for, according to the French law of inheritance, Victor Marivaud was the owner of the estate, including the wine business. He told Louis so many things that had occurred during the latter's childhood that Louis became convinced that the stranger was his brother. Nevertheless it was not to be expected that he would be pleased to see a brother of whom he had no remembrance and who would dispossess him of his property. But the severest blow was that M. Villaret immediately withdrew his consent to his daughter's marriage unless it could be proved that the claimant was an impostor.

There was an old blind woman living on the place, who, on hearing of the claimant, desired that he be brought to her. She asked him a few questions, which seemed to trouble him, though he answered them correctly. Then the old woman directed that he be uncovered to the waist. This was done, and her hand was guided to his chest. She slid her hand around to his side under his right arm, and it rested on a small lump the size of a pea.

"This is Francois Soubise," she said. "I lived with his mother when he was a little boy and often dressed and undressed him. I know him by this lump."

That ended the pretense. Louis Marivaud after this attempt to impose on him went to Tonkin and made a search for his brother, Victor. But, although he spent much time on the matter, he failed to obtain any information whatever. Victor never returned.

METALLIC TRIMMINGS.

Pearls are being used a great deal for embroideries again.

Beaded and metallic trimmings are favored for evening gowns.

Tassels and separate ornaments and drops of bright sequins are frequently used on dancing frocks and dressy blouses.

Beaded fringes in crystal and silver and also in colors of blue, green and brown in width up to eight inches are used for edging tunics and dancing dresses.

Dainty and light are the opalescent or radium sequins appearing in almost all trimmings, but especially in flouncings. They are used alone or in combination with crystals or pearls.

Passionate motifs in triangular and wedge shaped effects in smart color combinations are used on small fitted blouses. Fancy buttons with loops are also used for blouse decoration.

Beard fringe is very much in vogue and is used to border the tunics of dance frocks or sheer undergarments. Wide sash scarves worn low over the hips have the ends finished with bead fringe to match the tunics or large tassels fashioned of the beads.

MODISH BLOUSES.

The jumper blouse is a much favored design.

Blouses show decided tailored tendencies.

The beaded blouse is fashion's latest offering.

The new blouses have closer fitting set in sleeves.

Many of the new blouses are trimmed with fillet lace.

The very low cut blouse is going out of fashion for street wear.

White crepe de chine blouses are trimmed with striped piping.

The correct morning or afternoon blouse at present is of striped material.

Paris has designed a new blouse in cape effect. It is a combination of blouse and bolero.

Very smart is the lace blouse with roman striped silk bodice that covers all but the sleeves and the décolletage.

HINTS WORTH REMEMBERING.

To clean iron shake some borax over a square of sandpaper. Rub your iron on it and you will find it cleans and waxes at the same time.

To economize on stove polish and save labor in polishing the stove, mix the polishing paste with dry soap powder. Any sort of soap powder answers the purpose, and the shine obtained is far better than when the polish alone is used.

To remove chocolate stains from white dresses or table linen sprinkle the stain thickly with borax, place a saucer beneath it and pour on just enough water to moisten. Leave for several hours and then wash.

DUSTING A ROOM.

There's No Necessity to Make This Work Unpleasant Drudgery.

The invention of the dustless duster has helped to solve the problem of how to get the dust out of the house without raising more than dusting is worth.

But the dustless duster must be watched and washed and renewed often to afford the satisfaction it ought, and even then a good going over of the house in the old fashioned way is still necessary.

When you begin to dust raise the windows. Then wash washable bric-a-brac in tepid water and a little white soap and dry on soft cheesecloth. Have a place, say the sofa, already dusted and in order, where you may put the pieces and cover them over.

Have sheets made of two lengths of gingham or calico—anything that is cheap and washable—to cover the furniture, and, after washing the small bric-a-brac or dusting it off and covering it up, go after the other pieces of furniture. Large squares of outing flannel for this purpose serve well if you haven't dustless dusters.

It isn't necessary to use furniture polish every week on good furniture, or once a month even.

A quick washing off with slightly soapy water and cheesecloth sometimes is beneficial for furniture in the graying city. Follow with furniture polish, after which rub hard with fresh cheesecloth.

The last thing to do in a room is to wipe up the floors. When this is done it is time to begin to put the cleaned and dusted articles back in their places.

FANCY DOOR PORTERS.

Door porters are useful in keeping doors open. The most convenient kind for the bedroom door is the little modern maid—a doll's head fastened to a body filled with sand and dressed in black with white cap and apron. She is fastened to a long loop of ribbon, which is hung over the doorknob, so that she can be conveniently lifted and moved.

ACCORDION PLAITED GOWN.

SEERGE AND SATIN DRESS.

Accordion plaiting is used extensively in the designing of many new gowns, even those for street wear. It is very effectively utilized in the making of the pictured gown of navy blue serge which is combined with black satin. The long tunic of accordion plaited serge falls over a plain skirt of satin. The bolero bodice has a pointed satin vest. Worn with it are collars and cuffs of white handkerchief linen adorned with tiny pearl buttons.

Cheesecloth Duster.

Don't think any old rag good enough for a duster. Have a cheesecloth duster, and keep it for that purpose until it is worn out.

The oftener it is washed the softer it gets. Have two separate cloths for dishes and pots. Keep the cloth for that purpose. Use the pot cloth for wiping shelves, etc. Send both out once a day. When you need a new dish cloth take the old one for a pot cloth.

THE COLOR SCHEME.

All colors for day wear are subdued. Rose is a favorite color.

A lovely bronze green is among the favorite shades.

Burnt green is one of the fashionable tones.

Dark green is firmly established among staple colors.

The all white frock continues its popularity for evening.

Dark blue and seal brown is a modish combination.

The all black frock with an artistic dash of color is fashionable.

Navy blue and brown and green are in great favor. Among light colors said and putty are chosen.

Black and white combinations and soft rich colors are in favor for afternoon costumes.

Brown is fashionable, but to be correct the brown must be dull. Dark brown shoes and gossamer hose of brown silk are worn with frocks of almost any color.

Ring a Ting, Ting.

A ringing good game to play at your birthday party is the ring game. After your guests are seated distribute papers and pencils. Then seat yourself in the center of the circle and ask the following questions, stating that each answer ends in a "ring."

The butcher's ring?
The doctor's ring?
The lawyer's ring?
The ring that is often lost in old age?
The ring that baby should take daily?
The ring of the traveler?
What ring pleases the actor?
The ring of the rude maid?
The marriage ring?
The ring that pleases the orator?
The ring found in the sea?
The cat's ring?
The mackerel's ring?

Answers.—Slaughtering, curing, inquiring, bearing, ailing, touring, encoring, staring, pairing, cheering, herring, purring, jeering.

Parlor Stunts.

Prepare a large circular cardboard target and to this affix as many dark red or blue bullseyes as there are guests, having back of each bullseye a tiny slip of paper on which is written directions for some stunt, such as whistling a tune, singing a song, standing with the face in the corner or any trick which suggests itself to the hostess as likely to amuse the company. Prepare a bow and arrow and ask each guest in turn to shoot at the target until an arrow pierces some one of the bullseyes. The player then takes the slip of paper which his arrow has pierced and stands in readiness to perform the "stunt" written upon it, although he must not tell what it is until his turn comes for amusing the company.

"Robin Adair."

At one of Whittier's birthday celebrations one of the guests was a noted singer, who, when she was asked to sing, sang "Robin Adair." While she was singing Whittier's pet dog came into the room and sat down beside the piano, listening very carefully. When she had finished the dog shook hands with her and licked her face. Mr. Whittier told her that the dog's name was Robin Adair. From this time on the dog scarcely left her. He followed her everywhere, and when she went away he seemed to feel very bad.

Byron Hall is making his plans for the future. In the spring he will move onto his farm south of town and become a genuine farmer. His health has been so much better since he left the laundry business and began working out of doors that he says he feels like a different person.

The ENTERPRISE press has printed posters advertising "The Mountain Wolf," the four act drama the young men's club will present at Arbuter hall, Friday evening, Feb. 5th. From the perusal of the play, we conclude that it will be a good one. Some of the best village talent are in the cast.

It may not be known by all our readers that A. J. Hough has owned half interest in Baird's blacksmith shop for several weeks. He has now purchased the whole works, as will be seen by his advertisement elsewhere. After Baird was accused of tapping Schneider's till in Freedom the deal was made and Baird packed up and left town.

We do not feel that we have to call special attention of our readers to the advertisements of any of our live-village firms. They are writing good advertisements, some of them better than others, perhaps, and people look for them every week. By doing so and taking advantage of the bargains offered they make a neat saving and our advertisers are satisfied that it pays to advertise in the ENTERPRISE.

A curious fife stopped here yesterday and attracted some attention. It was a covered sleigh with a stove inside. A set of wheels were fastened on top the hobs to be used in case of bare roads. There was a well filled chicken coop under the box and the whole was drawn by a span of horses. A man and his wife rode inside the van. They were bound for Detroit, had been down in Indiana. The man said that he had traveled that way for many years, and claimed to be a gas fitter.

John Jackson reports that since he took the office of nightwatch he has found 22 store doors unlocked when he made his rounds at night. Usually, he enters, goes to the telephone and calls up the proprietor and it is needless to state that the proprietor is generally very much surprised. He found the front door to the ENTERPRISE office unlocked once last summer and he had to acknowledge that our carelessness might have proven more disastrous if a burglar or mischievous person had entered and pried one of our solid editorials, sniped some of the accounts for back subscriptions or let the devil loose. So we thanked the kind and efficient night watch for his vigilance.

The historical sketch by Katherine Howe of Beatrice, Neb., and published in the ENTERPRISE last week attracted a good deal of favorable comment and the editor wishes that he could have more such to publish. He has the promise of some. This sketch was written for and read at the pioneer meeting at Saline by our friend Geo. Rawson which may account for so much being said about the Howe family. A letter from Miss Howe states that she wishes to add the name of John Howland to the list of the first elders in the Presbyterian church of Manchester. Mr. E. Howland long since dead, has a son John N. Howland and several grandchildren now living in Ypsilanti. They were prominent in Manchester years ago.

Just before going to press we learned that Mrs. Barnes who started and built up a fine business in the variety store has sold her interest in "The Fair" to her partner, T. B. Bailey. Many Friends Spring Surprises

Mrs. Jacob Wellport was a victim of a pleasant surprise at her home in the east part of the village Wednesday afternoon. The trick was perpetrated by relatives and friends who were aware that her birthday occurred on this date. A five o'clock supper was served and all report a very joyous time.

Tuesday evening a company of friends and neighbors of Mr. & Mrs. A. Desbler who lives in what was the Orrin Wald house on City road, gave them a grand surprise or more correctly sneaking Mr. Desbler, who has been confined to the house all winter with rheumatism. It was a jolly crowd and they had lots of fun and enjoyed the refreshments served. Such occasions are good for they bring the people together in a friendly, social way.

Surprises seem to be the order now and when the surprise is as happy as the one the friends of Mr. & Mrs. A. J. Wurster sprung on them Monday evening when about 40 of them unceremoniously walked into their new and commodious residence on Jefferson street they are certainly all right. They came with a capacity quantity of good cheer and the reception they received was as cordial. The evening was spent in a very social way with the usual feast of good things to refresh the inner man.

Still Loves Native Town

The following letter was written to Henry R. Palmer, his old school teacher. In Bridgewater and on account of the many friends of the writer still living here, we beg the privilege of publishing it.—Editor.

I suppose you will be very much surprised to hear from me. It is a good many years since I have heard from you directly although we see your name frequently in the ENTERPRISE.

We have been up in this part of the country now about twenty six years; have been in Winnipeg for the past nine years. We like it here very much. We have a very progressive, lively city of about 280,000 and growing fast. This western part of Canada is being settled up rapidly and of course Winnipeg is, and always will be the distributing point for this whole western country, and I tell you, one has very little idea of the vastness of this country unless you are right on the ground. It certainly is a land of magnificent distances. There are large numbers of settlers coming from the states but there are millions of acres yet waiting for someone to reclaim. They are now building a railroad through from Prince Albert to the Hudson Bay and that is going to open up a vast territory of fine class agricultural land and it is also rich in timber and minerals.

Our winters are a little long but not as severe as years ago. The rest of the year is just fine. Just as fine climate as can be found anywhere and it certainly agrees with us. You will remember that neither Mrs. D. nor myself were very heavy weights but now she tips the beam to 140 pounds and I about 180 and our son Clyde Jr., something near 200. He was only three years old when we left Manchester. He has been married five and a half years. He is a very nice home body. They live about five or six blocks from us. He is a car lot broker and is working up a very nice business.

Owing to the war, business is very quiet here this winter but we trust that the end may not be very far distant and then when it is all over we think Canada will have a period of unexampled prosperity. The people have found out that we do not have to depend on Germany for lots of goods that they have been importing but will manufacture them here and thereby give employment for many a person.

I am in the manufacturing business myself. We make the "Pure Food Company" ice cream cones. Have the largest factory west of Toronto. We sit all over the west from Ft. William to the Rocky Mountains but as there are about four months that the factory is shut down we dabble in farm produce, etc. Expect to start the factory about Feb. 15th and as if the summer is right will have a we can attend to until the first of November.

I see by the ENTERPRISE that you are still secretary of the old insurance company. We get the ENTERPRISE every week and enjoy reading it very much although we see many names that are strange to us. We nearly always look for the Bridgewater news first. We often think of the old times and I tell you Henry, it matters not where you are nor how old you may be doing you cannot forget the old town and there is nothing that we would enjoy so much as to take a trip down there and spend a time in old Bridgewater and I expect to do so one of these days. CLYDE A. DICKERSON.

The young People of Emanuel's church will give a Box Social at the Theodore Davider vacant house north of town, Tuesday evening, February 2. Every body invited. Sleighs provided.

The Manchester creamery manu factured 47 579 pounds more butter in 1914 than the year previous which brings the annual production above 200 000 pounds for the year and still it is growing.

The second number of the Iron Creek Lecture Course will be held at the church Friday evening, Feb. 5th. Mr. Howard Hicks of the Student's Lecture League of Hillsdale college, will give a lecture on "The Court of Last Appeal." As he is considered the best lecturer in the college everyone should come and enjoy this intellectual treat.

Hell in Business

Don't be offended, we are only going to tell you about Hell in Business. Everybody has heard of the Damm Family and many of the Nutty Family. We have Angel in Lenawee county, and Teufel (Devil) in Washtenaw county, but in Farrell, Penn., there is Conrad Hell, a German ice cream manufacturer and he is not averse to using his name in a business way. He believes in advertising and so do we.

As you enter Farrell you are greeted with "Go to Hell for Ice Cream." On another street you see "Ice Cream from Hell" is guaranteed pure and cooling. Still another sign reads "Have You Been to Hell?" Main Street here is started by a big bill board reading "Hell is Here, don't miss the place." A little further down another sign reads "You Will Find Every body There on a hot day. Hell is Always Open." In front of Hell's place the most attractive of all is a young couple eating ice cream and the young woman saying to her escort "Hell for Mine Always."

We do not sell ice cream. While Hell is trying to keep them cool, we are trying to keep you warm in one of the Corker Mackinaws and Sheep-Lined Coats. Our Sale was an immense success. We have a few heavy Corker Sheep-Lined, Corduroy, Cottonade, and Kersey Work Coats and will give you

25 Per Cent Off Saturday, Jan. 30

This is your last chance to get such a discount this winter but we want to clean up entirely and give you the benefit. It is not as hot here as in Farrell but we will guarantee to keep you warm.

SCHOOL

Hiram and Harriet Martin of Bridge water have entered the 4th and 2d grades respectively of our public schools.

Little Lucile Aul's of the ward school has had perfect spelling lessons every day since school opened in September.

Mr. Miller of Hillsdale college gave the high school boys and girls a very helpful talk on "The Value of an Education" last Monday morning.

The certificates were given to the pupils last Monday and the teachers wish to co-operate with the parents where the work of the boy or girl has not been satisfactory.

There are 42 students in the high school taking 9th grade algebra work. The work is equally divided between Mr. Smith and Miss Kirchhofer and every thing is being done to strengthen the subject.

The Spaford school report the following as neither absent nor tardy for month closing Jan. 22, May Cash teacher: Alice Schaeble, Anna, Lillian, Martha, John and Frederick Bam, Grace McKenzie, Elmore Hasler, Walter Hodgeboom.

The various grades are having eighth grade parties. The faculty does not object if these take place on a Friday evening, but during the week they interfere with the pupils best work. The tenth grade were entertained at the home of Paul DeWitt in Freedom last Tuesday evening. Misses Dwyer and Nagl accompanied them.

The Alpha Sigma had an interesting meeting last Monday evening and was well attended. The piano solo by Miss Minnie Grossman and the song by Julius Lombardi were greatly appreciated. The debate, resolved that capital punishment should be abolished was decided in favor of the negative by the judges Miss White, Miss Nagl and Mr. Smith. In honor of Michigan's 78th birthday as a state a pretty little exercise was given by girls of the ninth grade. Mrs. Geo. Smith was critic for the evening.

RURAL SOCIAL CENTERS

We need social centers where our young people can be entertained, amused and instructed under the direction of cultured, clean and competent leadership, where aesthetic surroundings stir the love for the beautiful, where art charges the atmosphere with inspiration and power, and innocent amusements instruct and brighten their lives.

To hold our young people on the farm we must make farm life more attractive as well as the business of farming more remunerative. The school house should be the social unit, properly equipped for nourishing and building character, so that the lives of our people can properly function around it and become supplied with the necessary elements of human thought and activity.

Education is a developing of the mind, not a stuffing of the memory. Digest what you read.

Old men have visions, young men have dreams. Successful farmers plow deep while sluggards sleep.

The growing of legumes will retard soil depletion and greatly add to its power to produce.
