COAL PROFITS LIMITED

Fuel Administrator Limits Amount That May Be charged
By Dealers.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 1—Fuel Administrator Garfield last night announced regulations effective at 7 o'clock this morning, for the limitation of the retail prices of bituminous and anthracite coal throughout the country.

The fuel administrator has fixed not the specific price which the retail dealer will be allowed to charge the consumer, but the gross margin which the retail dealer will be allowed to add to the average wholesale cost of his coal in making retail prices.

The retail dealer will be allowed to sell coal to the consumer at a price representing an advance of not more than 30 per cent. over the retail gross margin of 1915. In no case, however, is the gross margin from now on to exceed the gross margin of July, 1917.

If, for example, the retail coal dealer bought a particular kind of coal in 1915 at an average of $2 a ton and sold it to the consumer at $2 per ton, his gross margin was $1.
Dr. Garfield now allows him to add 30 per cent. to this amount, making his total gross margin for 1917 $1.30 provided that is not in excess of his gross margin in July last. If the retail dealer now pays an average of $3 for the same kind of coal he will be allowed to sell it to the consumer for not more than $4.30 a ton.

Cuts Anthracite Price.

A reduction in the price of anthracite pea coal was also ordered by the cars at the mines compared with the price formerly fixed by the president follows:

New price.	Old price.	price.
White Ash	$2.40	$4.00
Red Ash	3.50	4.10
Likens Valley	3.75	4.35

Although there is manifestly room for deception by coal dealers in regard to their gross margin of 1915, Dr. Garfield believes that the price limitation can be enforced by investigation of the books of dealers and withdrawal of the government license of any offending dealer. It also is held by some government officials that an offending dealer can be sent to the penitentiary.

The scheme of a blanket regulation of the gross margin was adopted to avoid the protracted investigation that would be necessary for the fixation of specific retail prices. Under this plan the administration is confident that the coal business will be stabilized, that consumers will be buying and the prices will be reduced.

"I believe," Dr. Garfield said, "that this plan will result in determining at once in each community a retail margin, fair to both, the consumer and the dealer, and that this being a fact, the public uncertainty regarding retail coal prices and the uncertainty as to whether or not to buy will be entirely removed."

"It is possible that in some communities the percentage of increase of the present cost of retail coal business is more than 30 per cent in excess of the cost in 1915. When this can be demonstrated, the local fuel administrator will be empowered to recommend a readjustment. All such readjustments must be taken up in the first instance with the local committee to be appointed by the state fuel administrators."

"Readjustment also will be made wherever the fuel administrator learns that the retail margin added to any dealer is too high. In fixing this margin the dealer is under no obligation to increase his 1915 margin by the full 30 per cent.
That represents the maximum permissible margin in any circumstance."

It seems that the stone once left from place. Probably it is as well to acquire eloquence in some other way.

Best Listener in the World.

The horse is really one of the best listeners in the world. He is always on the alert for sounds which concern or interest him. When he looks at anything he turns his ears toward it to observe the better whether any sound comes from it. If a horse is particularly interested in your driving of him he always turns his ears backward to ward you, but if he has no concern of that subject or if he sees anything that interests him he keeps his ears pricked forward. A horse hears the whinny of another horse at a great distance than the average man can hear it.

DENIES THAT
GENERAL GRANT
WAS UNFEELING

One Who Knew the "Silent Man" Well Tells of Instances That Prove Rumor's Falsity.

G RANT did not select the Wilderness as the scene of his first engagement; he was compelled to take it, writes Samuel H. Beckwith, chief cipher operator to General Grant, 1862-65. But he was not caught unaware, as some unfriendly writers have argued. We well knew that the "Johnnies" were somewhere before us, ready to oppose brisk defense to our forward movement, and every possible precaution was taken to protect our troops against surprise.
When the fight started we were prepared for them, so far as an army could be prepared for the struggle up on such a field.

During the first day's engagement General Grant was not idle. He wanted on to learn first-hand what was going on about him. A personal inspection, therefore, was necessary, and Cincinnati, that magnificent war horse, was drafted into service. There have been many horses that have gained conspicuous places in equine history, but this noble animal deserves place among the best. He was a chestnut gelding of rare mettle, and when in action upon a smoke-covered field he certainly was an object of admiration.

I was the general's only companion on that ride, and for one excellent reason, son, among others, my mount could keep pace with his.

There were a few moments during the ride in which I was reasonably sure that our time had come. As we penetrated a thicket of dwarf pine and emerged into a small clearing a line of Federal troops groping their way along clashed, in our immediate front, with a detachment of Confederates who were pushing through the tangle of wood.
A fusillade of bullets was the result, and several sang an ominous song about our heads. We reined up, and then, as our men drove the enemy back to cover, he continued on his way with this comment:

"When our time comes, Beckwith, we'll go, and not before. There's no use trying to avoid it."

UNDISMAYED BY TIDINGS.

As was inevitable under such conditions as prevailed in the Wilderness, reports of the vicissitudes of the engagement were numerous and conflicting. To headquarters, where Grant awaited the outcome of the second day's fight, came courier after courier bearing news of the progress of the contest from various portions of the field.

Some of these were alarmingly incorrect.

But the evil tidings didn't disturb the silent Grant. Several times during the night I visited his tent to receive or deliver messages, and found him apparently unmoved by the direful rumors.

He had done all that any commander could do to insure victory; the result was with Providence. Even with some of these disquieting tales unfounded, he retired to his cot to snatch a much-needed rest, the last repose of the group about headquarters.

The morning of the 7th broke up a battlefield strewn with the wreckage of terrible fighting, but the two formidable opponents had finished wringing into history the Battle of the Wilderness. The forces of Lee had retired behind their intrenchments; the Federal troops were unwilling to attack them so protected.

Orders were issued late in the afternoon for a night march of the entire army toward Spotsylvania. Early in the evening the lieutenant-general and Meade with their staffs started out upon the way. When we reached Hancock's corps, the brave fellows were lying behind their works most of them asleep, and we picked our steps carefully along in the darkness to safeguard the recumbent soldiers.

Grant sought a brief interview with General Hancock and the twain crawled into an ambulance wagon and held converse for some time. I had been riding close behind my superior and now I dismounted and threw my bridle rein across the limb of a fallen tree nearby, while I flung myself down upon a pile of brush to await the reappearance of the general. I was pretty well fagged out and a few moments rest was most welcome.

It wasn't long before the boys sensed the presence of Grant, and although orders had been given to refrain from cheering, owing to the proximity of the enemy, when they learned that he was facing southward, they sprang to their feet and the rocks and woods sent back the echo of their boisterous shouts.

Some rather harsh criticism has been directed at General Grant for the tremendous sacrifice of life in the Wilderness campaign, and his alleged callous-ness at the wholesale slaughter of his men.

STOICISM OF GREAT CAPTAIN.

Let me, who was his constant companion during three years of the Civil war, bear testimony to his possession of a genuine humanity and manly sympathy. He was a most peculiar nature.
Where others would fret and grieve, manifesting their anxiety in words and actions, he preserved a stern silence. But I am certain he felt as keenly and deeply the barb of misfortune and sorrow as did those about him. During the bloody days of relentless attack and stubborn defense in the spring of 1864 I noticed an almost indefinable sadness in Grant, a sort of moody reticence, that convinced me, who understood the man, that he was suffering at the destruction of so many gallant troops.

It was after the battle of Cold Harbor that I went to the general's tent to deliver a ciphergram, and found him sitting alone, smoking a cigar and evidently buried in thought. His face bore a care-worn expression that indicated sleepless nights and wear-some days. For a moment he was oblivious of my presence; then he nodded to me and I entered, handing him the message. After reading it he turned to me with a sigh.

"Beckwith," he said, "the hardest part of this general business is the responsibility for the loss of one's men.

I can see no other way out of it, however; we've got to keep at them. But it is hard, very hard, to see all these brave fellows killed and wounded. It means aching hearts back home." And he lapsed again into ruminating silence.

bor that I went to the general's tent to
dently buried in thought.

HEALTH AT CUSTER NEARLY PERFECT

LESS THAN ONE PER CENT OF MEN ON SICK LIST, SINCE CAMP WAS OPENED.

MOST SANITARY PLACE IN STATE

Food, Kitchens, Reception, Barracks and Bedding Are Inspected Daily By Regimental Surgeons.

Camp Custer, Battle Creek—The health report of the first month of the camp's existence shows a sick list of less than one per cent and not a single death attributable to camp conditions.

Health conditions are superior to those of any camp in the country, physicians say, and the thousands of men who are making their homes here have been safeguarded before disease as they never were before.

The camp, which deals at Camp Custer, Enlisted men, some and alcoholics excesses practiced prior to arrival was responsible for many deaths.

Practically no one in another place in Michigan is as healthy as the organization of sanitary conditions.

Each regiment has its infirmary with a medical corps and assistants. Twice each day the men are required to report if they require medical attention or infirmary care for the light cases. The more serious ones are sent to the hospital.

But the regimental work goes deeper, as the regimental surgeons each day inspect every kitchen, every ice box, the food, the garbage cans, the barracks.

The men look at the mess kits which the men use to determine whether they are clean. If any one company reports a slight illness among several men, the entire company becomes a subject for investigation, and a report must be made on the findings.

The blankets in which the men sleep are washed and cleaned after the barracks and canteens are cleaned at regular intervals bedding and clothing are washed.

As far as the canteens are concerned, they are cleaned to the shower, and accompanied by officers who see that the matter of personal cleanliness is not overlooked.

PLEDGE WOMEN TO SAVE FOOD

Ford Administration Plans State Wide Campaign.

The executive committee of the state food commission at a conference at Food and Government Expert S. H. Freeman, laid tentative plans for securing the co-operation of every woman in the state in the campaign.

Pledges will be exacted by a woman in every corner of the state in the week of October 21. Until that time the executive committee will spend the rest of its time perfecting an organization.

The wheelless and meatless days will not be mentioned on the pledges, but the women will be asked to sign a statement that they will accept the suggestions of Food Director Hoover in regard to the conservation of food.

Later will come the pertinent suggestions regarding the conservation of some other items for meatless days.

The selection of Tuesdays and Wednesdays of these two days will probably stand, although word from Washington indicates that their selection is only tentative.

The work is to be done by means of county committees.

MANY HOPE TO BECOME OFFICERS

Thousands At Camp Custer Aspire to Higher Rank.

Camp Custer, Battle Creek—Fort Sheridan stands as a great beacon of hope before some of the drafted men in Camp Custer, Waco, Texas, stand in line to apply for commissions.

There are thousands of drafted men who have developed an ambition to attain to rank of officers. They are anxious awaiting the conclusion of the present war, for Fort Sheridan. There is a great demand for officers among Army men to the effect that the next Fort Sheridan class will be composed not of men from civilian life, but of those selected from the regulars, the national guard and the national army.

With the Boys at Camp Custer

Several of the late arrivals lost their lives in camp and were compelled to return. Many workers help to locate their barracks.

The state has offered $25,000 a mile for a new paved way to Camp Custer if the cost will pay half. The road would cost $80,000.

Officers have issued the warning that letters and packages addressed to soldiers at Camp Custer must bear the postage stamp of 10 cents.

The engineer of a Grand Trunk train, when near Battle Creek, saw Col. Blanchard in the track in front of the train applied his brakes. When the train struck Blanchard, who had been bowled over, was between the engine and the front of the train.

He was a boy that leaves St. Uncle Sam's and has already entered Uncle Sam's service will be provided with knitted articles of comfort for the winter months by the commandant of the Navy League in Fort Huron.

The 325th Infantry, a force made up of men from the upper peninsula and situated at Fred Hatch's farm home, near Birmingham, burned. It was the first time all regiments in the state have been set on fire by children.

Walter Short is coming back as a hero in the activity of the market of the upper peninsula which is reflected in three recent sales by the Michigan's Canal Co. Short, however, has the same fact that the quartermaster can outfit most of the men. They are so big they simply can't be squared up to a rump.

The purchase price is $60,000, and order has been sent for larger sizes, to be paid for the timber alone.

MICHIGAN NEWS BRIEFS

Mass meetings and banquets have been held in Bay City, Charlevoix, East Bay City and Bay City to urge the passage of a bond issue for $300,000 for good roads in Charlevoix county.

State Game Warden Bain recommends that Crawford county be closed to deer and partridge hunters for a period of five years. Residents of the county are in a closed season.

More than 100,000 bushels of corn were shipped from Bayview county the last three weeks. The price at the start was $2.75, but dropped to $1.75 and has produced much prosperity among farmers. The quality is the best in years.

Richard H. Fletcher, state labor commissioner, was elected first vice-president of the Association of Governmental Labor Unions of the United States and Canada at the annual convention of that organization in Aspinwall, N. C.

Military training will be equivalent to a year of college work, according to the committee of members of the American Medical Association and the thousands of men who are making their homes here have been safeguarded before disease as they never were before.

Washington—Government control over the coal and timber industries has been completed by an order of Fuel Administrator Garfield limiting the profits of retail coal and coke dealers through the month of October to a basis which is expected to bring in a revenue to the government in excess of $100,000,000.

The general plan of the dietary is as follows: A warm cooked cereal, gruel or oatmeal, served with milk, is the basic diet for the campaign. This is to be replaced by oatmeal, a choice bacon, ham, and toast and a citrus fruit are occasionally added.

The general diet consists of a plain soup made of beans, rice, and vegetables, with a choice of breads, biscuits, and gravy. The diet is to be increased during the month of October.

"When did I ever, John?"—with an up-glance of the gray eyes that was almost wistful. "Always, and with a wisdom that makes me almost afraid of you. For example, there was the night when I was fairly on the edge of letting Jibby stay in the mine and go mad if he wanted to: you lashed me with the one word that made me save his life instead of taking it. How did you know that was the one word to say?" "How do we know anything?" she inquired softly. "The moment brings its own inspiration. It broke my heart to see what you could be and to think that you might not be it, after all. But I came out here this morning to talk about something else. What are you going to do when you are to leave?"

"Go Back Like a Man and Fight" bee-line for the only Absolute Ego woman it had ever known. And it found her." Again the young woman laughed happily. "If you are going to call me names, Ego-man, you'll have to make it up to me some other way," she said. "Whereupon, the moment being strict
