The Main Street

Last Saturday the junior class sponsored a dog show on Main street in front of the mill. Prizes were awarded to the owner of the dog in the most original costume, Douglas Hamilton. His dog was dressed as Roy Rogers with gun and holster. Elizabeth Gates exhibited the smallest dog which also did the most tricks. Gretchen Kirk's dog was the largest dog in the parade. Melvin Stockinger's dog was the oldest. His dog, breed unknown, was 17 years old. Josephine Cox was owner of the dog in the funniest costume. All prizes were tickets to the junior play on April 20. Mr. Weed was general chairman and he was assisted by Helen Bowers of the junior class.

The Manchester Ladies Bowling team added last Sunday to their regular schedule this past week in order that their games could be finished in three weeks.

Nancy Ross of the Union school, Saline, was the winner at the district spelling bee held here last Friday. Sue Higgins was the runner-up. Sue is an eighth grader at the Manchester school.

Cpl. Eugene Kuhl called his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kuhl, on Sunday from Ft. Ord, California. His mother said he did not have any particular news, but that the folks at home were glad to hear from him.

It was interesting to note the various awards which were given at the Exchange club meeting on Monday evening and thought we'd pass them along to you. To John Pratt they gave a receipt from the motel where he stopped on his way to Florida. A large fish net was made of a wool sack and was presented with a hook to George Grossman to help him land the fish in Iron Creek. A branding iron was given to Bob Merithew. A game warden badge and pistol was presented to Don Barrett to help him control the poachers on the Warrens farm.

Then, too, it seems that Luther Klager was the fine master and he imposed plenty of fines. Doc Eames received a stiff fine of a quarter for letting his dog loose. L. V. Kirk was fined a quarter for the chuck holes which appear in the pavement. Willard Mann paid a fine for advertising at the Exchange Club and Frank Reck paid a fine of twenty-five cents because he didn't make maple syrup for the Exchange Club members. He paid the fine with a ten dollar bill and the $9.75 change was poured over his head the change being all in pennies.

The May meeting will include a dinner and a visit to an institution of education.

Exchange Club Farmers' Night Was Gala Event

Last Monday evening proved a gala affair for the Manchester Exchange Club. It was Farmer's Night and between members and farmers there were about 160 men present. The usual excellent meal, the singing entertainment, and the excellent speech by Austin Grant made the evening complete. Yes—and gags aplenty were pulled upon unsuspecting members so be sure to see "Main Street" for some of those who were "fined" for this and that. Austin Grant, or Uncle Dudley as he is more affectionately known, made a fine speech about Americanism. His three main points, or "keys" as he called them, were "Faith," "Education," and "Economy." He stressed that this country was founded on faith and that in order to remain great that faith must be retained. In the matter of education the basic value is the education of the child; Mr. Grant was afraid that today's educational system, and its mass production basis was losing sight of this fact. He pointed out that teaching was a profession and should be treated as any of the other professions. After all what better investment can you make than one in the future of your children. On the matter of economy Mr. Grant stressed the ideal of stable markets with "Individual Capitalism" or incentive for labor as the way to attain this stability. He pointed out that where ever incentive plans were in operation production was good for the return made. It was also stressed that a plan of this nature would have to be nationwide and administered wisely. In all these three keys "Man" was the basis of the ills of the world and only through man regaining his sense of balance would these troubles be ironed out. Mr. Grant's speech wound up the evening and with the exception of one minor mishap everything was fine. It seems that someone had a coat exactly like the one belonging to Mr. Emmett Noggle and accidentally wore it home with him. Would the holder of the strange coat please return it to Rolfe Grossman at the station and Mr. Grossman will return the coat to Mr. Noggle. Thank You.

Working on the committee are Virginia Kroske, Elizabeth Grossman and Maxine Mingus. The new star point chairs are expected for the next meeting.

"Inflation" How Long Will It Last?

Is the above statement true? Is it basic? Is it a basic fact that the larger the public debt, and the heavier the tax burden necessary to carry it, the higher will be the prices and wages, and the lower the real value of the dollar? Can we accept it as true, that the higher the public debt, the higher will be the prices of goods, of labor, and of everything else, in any country where the citizens are reasonably free to run their own affairs? MacDonald Brown, writing in the "Farm Journal" December 1950, states that as a fact. Then he points out that the U. S. Government, the state government, the cities, counties, townships, and boroughs, all borrow money. On this money they all pay interest. To pay the interest and pay back the loan, they must collect taxes; the larger the debt, the higher, the taxes. Now taxes do not come out of thin air. They must be paid by individuals, by corporations, by everybody. And these taxes quickly become a cost in the production of everything. He also points out that a corporation, for example, hardly ever really pays taxes. It must, and does—add them into the price of whatever it makes and sells. Taxes, therefore, do not come out of the company or its stockholders—they come out of the customer, and that's you. "A corporation is a tax collector, not a payer," says Brown. Then consumers, workmen, and farmers, finding costs of living advancing, begin to demand higher wages and prices. Organized labor is always able to get more wages. That adds a little more to the cost of goods. Then prices of goods have to be raised a little more. Then more wage demands, enforced by strikes. So here we are in the inflation spiral, wages up, prices up, wages up and so on. Our dollar would buy about 60 cents worth of supplies in 1948. Since Korea, a bale of wire, for example, has doubled in price. As it takes twice as many dollars to buy it, each dollar has only the purchasing value it had before Korea and it was worth only 60 cents then. If these figures interest you, let me suggest that you borrow the magazine from some farmer friend and read the whole article and see if you can find any holes in the writer's logic. If his premise is sound and his logic isn't lame, then read his conclusion. Here it is: "So there we are. Unless the public debt is repudiated, unless the politicians stop spending, borrowing, and taxing, unless (Continued on Page 8)

Says Russia Spends More on Education Than America

Mrs. Philip Gentile of Detroit guest speaker at the Twentieth Century club gave a lecture on the United Nations at the Emanuel church hall. She gave a description of the Security Council and commissions with interesting sidelights. She explained why so much time has been given to the Russian bloc rather than other groups such as the Mohammed-Arab or Latin American blocs, both of which she said were much larger than the Russian bloc including her satellites. She noted that 5 percent of the national income of Russia is spent on education as compared with 2 percent of the income of the United States and said that "great strides in education have taken place in the past twenty-five years in Russia to enable the general population of the country to better read and write thus helping them to better understand communism." She explained that the same application of education to the illiterate could work just the opposite and spread democracy. She said 78 percent of the people in the world cannot read or write. In Bolivia only 5 percent of the people can. A large number in this group are from South America, Asia and China. In conclusion Mrs. Gentile said she was not asking people to agree with her views but to simply give some thought to the facts which she brought out in the lecture. She came here through the Extension Service of the University of Michigan. Mrs. Alvin Kappeler and Mrs. Edna Snowman were in charge of the Twentieth Century Club program to which the public was invited.

From Your Congressman

A Weekly Report From Congressman George Meader

Washington, D. C. Congressional consideration of the future of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has developed a growing sentiment for abolition of the corporation.

Putting aside the question of personalities and improper activities or weaknesses of individual directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and viewing the corporation solely in the light of public policy and structure, the large consideration becomes: What should be the policy of the United States under present world conditions, with regard to the future of this corporation?

Before answering that question we should consider several factors.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is not of ought not to be a matter of political partisanship. It was created by a Republican administration. Its purpose was to meet a severe economic crisis the depression of the early thirties. It was constituted as a bi-partisan agency the law requires that no more than three of the five directors shall be of the same political party. It was founded on national representation, through the provision that not more than one director should be appointed from any one Federal Reserve District.

Unquestionably, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is socialistic, in the sense that it is an agency through which the Government is engaged in the banking business, by the lending of public funds to private industry.

Also, this government corporation has been a competitor in the banking field. It is not supposed to make loans where private credit is available on reasonable terms, but the use of the word "reasonable" leaves interpretation of this restriction open to a wide field of varied opinions. Large banks, I am reliably informed, always have been unfriendly to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation because they recognize it as a competitor.

But even conceding that this corporation is in a sense socialistic and that within this country under a free enterprise economy, do not generally favor socialistic activities on the part of our government, there still is another question to be considered.

I am very much concerned about the disadvantage under which small business enterprises find themselves in attempting to grow and expand on the basis of their merit and the capability of their managements.

Securities and Exchange Commission statistics show it is from 17 to 22 times more costly for small business to raise few capital by the selling of stock than it is for large concerns.

The large concern can afford to cope with government controls and can maintain establishments in Washington leading to contracts with the government. This is beyond the reach of small business.

A large, established corporation can readily obtain loans for current operation or for expansion from insurance companies or struction Finance Corporation. In addition, the Congress should consider the implications of our defense production, on which we now are entering, inevitably will cause dislocations intensifying the need for financial aid. This will be most difficult for the small concerns, since our procurement program seems to be founded upon huge prime contracts with large business.

I dislike to differ with policies determined by the party of which I am a member. The policy committees of the Republican Party of both the Senate and the House have publicly favored abolition of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. I hope they will reconsider. They should consider carefully the effect on our free enterprise economy if the thousands of small businesses, which still make up, fortunately, the bulk of our national economy, are forced out of business by the imposition of emergency economic controls, for which they have no responsibility and which they could not reasonably be expected to foresee.

It is no answer to say that defense production loans make the Reconstruction Finance Corporation unnecessary. The recent evidence of a $7,800,000 defense production loan to three men with only $600 invested makes it clear that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which investigates and services all defense production loans and which objected to that particular loan, is better equipped to exercise discretion in such matters than is the National Production Authority.

I am of the opinion that the

Reconstruction Finance Corporation should be continued at least until some substitute is found to meet the needs of small business in this defense emergency period, through either private enterprise or government.

Buzz And The Off-Key Baritones

Reverend Lester of the church out on Hillsboro Road coaches his Young Peoples' Choir late Thursday afternoons—after high school basketball practice lets out.

Buzz Ellis pastures cows next to that church. Around 5 o'clock they used to make a lot of racket about wanting to go home. That made it kind of tough on the choir.

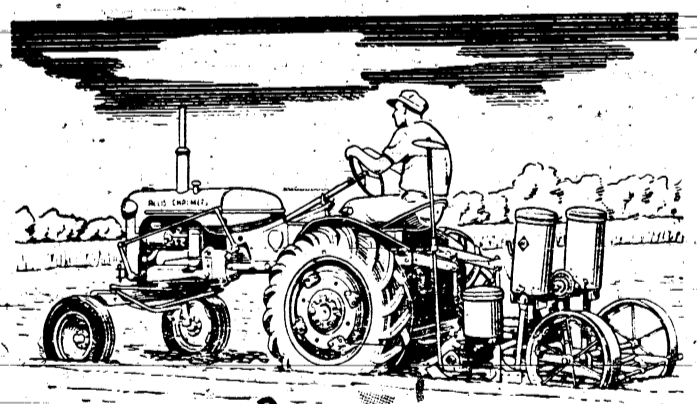

When Buzz learned what was going on he said to Reverend Lester: "I never yet heard of a cow that could moo on key. So I'll just move 'em in a little earlier." This started me to thinking. Buzz doesn't go to that church. And he's so tone-deaf he couldn't carry a tune in a bucket!

From where I sit, you might say that Buzz didn't have much in common with those singers. But he doesn't divide folks into groups he's "with" or "agin." Your politics, your personal preferences—or the fact that you like a moderate glass of beer—mean nothing either way to Buzz. He's a real neighbor to everybody!

Today, Want Ads encompass home—business—industry. For here is the pulse of the people—the barometer of business—the prosperity or depression of a community forecast in the jobs offered, versus jobs wanted—in the ups and downs of real estate prices—and in countless other ways.

Look to the small type of your Want Ads for BIG opportunities. Read and use the Want Ads for profit, result and human interest—it is the world's largest market-place . . . its biggest bargain counter!

Letter Box

The following letter will no doubt be of interest to a number of persons—particularly those working on the Alumni book for this year. As far as could be traced the catalog of the Manchester Public School dated 1945-46 was the first to carry a star before the name of Euphemia Thorn Henion. This star indicates that the person is deceased. However, this was an error. She is very much alive as can be gathered from the letter which she wrote to a classmate of the Class of '81, Albert English, which follows:

You no doubt will be much surprised to hear from me but I just read about your past life in the Jackson paper and want to add a little to it by saying I also graduated in the Class of '81 and taught one term in Iron Creek. I think in '86, after going to school in Ypsilanti I taught in Manistee until '94 and then married Mr. Henion and came to Huron in 1900 and I have lived here ever since.

I think we must have lived right to be allowed to remain on this beautiful earth so long. Was very happy to know that you are still living and able to enjoy life.

I am quite well and do most of my work. I live alone but one of my boys lives near me. I can see good, but use a cane when walking.

I think all my friends and relatives are gone from Manchester.

Mrs. Euphemia Thorn Henion Huron, South Dakota.

Her address for anyone who might wish to have it is: Mrs. Euphemia Henion, 138 C.J. St., Huron, South Dakota.

CARD OF THANKS

My sincere thanks to relatives and friends and to all who in any way remembered me with gifts, cards and visits while at the hospital and during my stay at Chelsea Convalescent Home, also since my return home. It will long be remembered.

Mrs. Rose Hawley.

I wish to thank all my friends for the many gifts and cards I received during my stay in the hospital.

Doris Gola.

Thanks for the cards and flowers and boxes of fruit sent to me while I was in the hospital.

HUMANE SOCIETY'S NEW ANIMAL SHELTER

On April 5 the Humane Society of Washtenaw County moved from the Goodyear Animal Shelter, familiar to the thousands of citizens who have used its services, to the new shelter built for the Society by a public spirited, anonymous donor. The new shelter is located at 3113 Gale Road, one-third of a mile south of Dixboro. Dedication ceremonies and a gala open house will take place in May.

The model shelter provides a headquarters for service to all parts of the County provided by the Humane Society. Lost, homeless, or unwanted animals are held at the shelter for reclaim by their owners or placement in a new home. A citizen may bring an animal there. It is also used as a depository for stray animals picked up by him.

Humane officers, Herbert Gay and Marc Meyer, investigate complaints of cruelty or neglect from this headquarters which, besides providing comfortably for small animals, includes a barn area for temporary housing of large animals. Special kennels have been provided for holding under observation stray animals suspected of rabies.

Humane education in schools throughout Washtenaw County plays an essential part in the work of the Society, and visitors to the shelter are invited to look over pictures and publications. Of especial interest to visitors is the puppy room in which pup-

LANSEING—To find some effective way to interest the people in voting is still one of the biggest problems of democracy.

This was demonstrated again in the extremely light vote cast in the April 2 election. Although the offices filled on April 2 determine the character of our entire educational system only a small percentage of the qualified voters of Michigan bothered to cast their votes.

If this disinterest on the part of the citizens were confined to the Michigan Spring elections, it would be sufficiently alarming.

But the record shows that the American people as a whole, and the people of Michigan in particular, are not exercising their precious right to vote in respectable percentages.

From 1900 to 1948, in presidential election, the percentage of qualified citizens voting in the entire United States declined from 80% to 52.3%. Michigan's vote in the 1948 election was 52.9%, only slightly above the national average.

Nearly half the people of Michigan who were qualified to do so did not cast their ballots in 1948, with a President, a Governor, and a United States Senator being elected.

The percentage, of course, was lower in 1950, when the Governor was the top office at stake.

These figures represent one of the most real and immediate dangers to our democratic way of

To find an answer to this problem is a job for our schools, our churches, our labor unions, our civic groups, and every individual citizen.

In these remarks, I intend no disparagement of those who were elected to office on April 2. I congratulate all of them, and assure them of my fullest co-operation during their terms of office.

I had the privilege last week of inaugurating the new State Commission on Problems of the Aging.

This commission I established some weeks ago, to study thoroughly the problems which effect our older citizens. Under the capable chairmanship of Mrs. Harold S. Patton of Kalamazoo, the commission held its first meeting at the Student Union Building, Michigan State College.

The group elected the Rev. Charles M. Herbst of Iron Mountain vice-chairman; Mr. John Baoudou of Detroit second vice-chairman; and Miss Ruth Edision of Detroit recording secretary.

The first step was to set up committees to assemble statistics on the number and status of persons over 60 in Michigan. These facts will be available at the next meeting of the commission, May 10 in Detroit.

The welfare of our older citizens is one of the principal responsibilities of a modern state. As medical science lengthens the span of human life, a greater proportion of our people are in the upper age brackets.

These citizens have certain definite economic problems. But their needs far transcend the economic sphere. They also need to participate fully in the social life of our communities, and to feel that their services to the common good are important.

Too often older people are relegated to a status of "retirement" which deprives them of a useful and satisfying role in their communities.

I have requested the Commission on Problems of the Aged to study all aspects of this question, not only the problem of economic security for older people.

We must find ways to use the skills, the wisdom, and the experience of our older citizens to the fullest possible extent—for their own good and for the good of the whole society.

I have nominated John R. Dykema, young Detroit attorney, as Corporation and Securities Commissioner, to succeed my good friend Phillip A. Hart, who has become director of the Detroit Price Stabilization Office.

All of us were sorry to lose the services of Phil Hart to the State. But he correctly regards the call to service in the Federal anti-inflation program as a summons to perform a patriotic duty.

The people of Michigan are fortunate that men like Phil Hart are willing to undertake these difficult and thankless jobs made necessary by the defense emergency. Speaking of citizen interest in government, I was privileged to help dedicate the new $225,000 municipal building at Mt. Pleasant last week.

I was impressed not only with the community spirit which has made this fine building possible, but with the democratic spirit manifest in this fine, clean Michigan city.

The new municipal building contains a very large council chamber. Mayor Norman X. Lyon explained to me that it was designed that way in order to encourage the citizens of Mt. Pleasant to attend meetings of their city council and listen to the proceedings.

That's just one of the ways in which the citizens of a community can be made to realize that their government belongs to them. And maybe that realization is the key to larger participation of the voters in the processes of self-government.

Blossoms for Your Table

There is something in the very air of Spring—light, fragrant, heady—which sets a "party mood." Conviviality is the order of the season, and we are likely to further it by inviting friends in for anything from the most casual Sunday brunch to the most formal dinner party. If giving a dinner party, look to your choice of table accessories to emphasize the spirit of the bright new season. In fine china, the Peachtree pattern by Lenax is a wonderfully suitable complement to a May Day dinner, for example. As is true of all Lenax ware, the body of Peachtree is translucent china, creamy in tone and smooth as cream to the touch. The pattern itself, against the pure lines of the modern coupe shape, is a free-flowing arrangement of pink peach blossoms, accented by delicate green leaves. Gay Spring flowers are now available in profusion, to make the centerpiece another integral part of your table's bow to the season. Peachtree blossoms themselves, flanked by daffodils and bright seasonal berries, make a lively centerpiece, and create perfect decorative harmony for your china on this lovely Spring table.

Travel Trails

It's always interesting to talk about the star of television, first day-time serial, many of you will know Jimmy Lydon as Chris Thayer in WGSB-TV's show, "The First Hundred Years." Well, Jimmy has his heart set on heading for Curacao, the main island of the beautiful Netherlands West Indies. Here's a spot that really deserves to be "discovered" by more pleasure-bound travelers. Curacao has everything you could ask for in the way of climate, beaches, sports and atmosphere. Willemstad, the capital and main port, has all the clean-scrubbed, old-world charm of 17th Century Holland—and it's a shopper's paradise, being a practically duty-free port, with almost unbelievable bargains from all parts of the world. Curacao sparkles just 28 miles off the coast of Venezuela—easy to get to by either plane or ship. Keep it in mind for your next vacation. A real welcome awaits you in Holland's colorful Caribbean.

Mr. and Mrs. William Tirk and their grandson Brady Green of Warsaw, Indiana, and Mrs. Charles Hemminger were recent visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Jenkins at Ypsilanti.

Mrs. Lottie Bowins has returned home after spending the past three weeks with her daughter Mrs. Harvey Ahrens and family at Wayne.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Uphaus entertained at Sunday dinner, Mr. and Mrs. George Knouase and sons and Mrs. Lena Uphaus.

"Unless a few miracles occur." What is a miracle? Webster says a miracle is "a wonderful thing."

Isn't it a wonderful thing that 8000 citizens of Ypsilanti aroused themselves and signed a petition supporting the Kefauver committee? Isn't that a miracle?

Recently a nearly dormant Board of Commerce issued a call for aggressive citizenship. Wasn't that a miracle? Isn't it a wonderful thing that some of our civic clubs are actually trying to get their members to vote?

Yes, miracles are happening right here in Washtenaw county. They are floating around in the atmosphere and they are contagious.

Wouldn't it be a miracle if the State Normal and the University, both located in this county, should catch the spirit of the thing, and awaken from their Rip?

Luncheon Scoops

Yesterday I promised David that he could watch "Howdy Dood" on television. Virginia Kaye announced gaily as we made our way uptown from CBS to Daniels' where we had lunch, "and then discovered that the Kefauver Committee was on all channels. He says I didn't try hard enough."

David, who is five, is Virginia's oldest, and, with three-and-a-half-year-old Johnny, forms two good reasons why her life can never be dull.

Virginia, who took over the title role on CBS' "Rosemary" when Betty Winkler left the cast, had met me for a luncheon interview after her noontime show and my "Wendy Warren and The News" broadcast—and the very contention that atmosphere of Daniels' where you feel as if you were sitting in the cool depths of a great wine cellar, was relaxing and pleasant after all our rushing around.

Mrs. Kaye is a girl of many interests. She at once tries to be on hand for the out-of-town tryouts of her husband's plays—the now has "A Tramp's Garden" with Fredric March on Broadway—she keeps a firm hand in her children's upbringing, and gives a definite part of each day to them and their problems; she studies conscientiously with a private teacher to keep her own dramatic viewpoint fresh and polished; and she brings a very sincere feeling to the interpretation of "Rosemary."

When I took over the role of Rosemary, who is tall, slender and has red gold hair and a lively, mobile face, "I felt that it would be impossible to try to play 'Rosemary' exactly as Betty had—and that I must determine on my own interpretation, and trust to the listeners to accept it. I'm happy to say that they have now—and keeping that interpretation growing and developing is a real challenge."

One of Virginia's trade secrets which she confided in me, is that she drops in at author Elaine Cunningham's office to get an advance peek at future "Rosemary" scripts. This, she finds, helps a great deal in evaluating the present situation "Rosemary" is encountering.
