The private association that governs the lake found it necessary to clean the graffiti from their private lake sign last week. The sign is located in the lake some twenty feet from the shore line. Iron Lake dam which controls the lake level is locate adiacent to Sharon Hollow Road.

Recently the Washtenaw County Road Commission placed no parking signs along Sharon Hollow Road, Ely Road and Wolf Road in an effort to control the problem of vehicles and boat trailers from parking along those roadways.

According to Harry Sabourin, a lake resident and member of the Association governing the lake; "We are having some problems with someone who does not want us to control lake access.'

"Years ago Allen Whiteman had a marina on the lake and he allowed people to launch boats from his property. The boat facilities were under his control and for the most part as I understand it, people were considerate. After Mr. Whiteman discontinued his Marina operations people continued to launch boats from the roadway where there was no guard rail and in the location of the old Marina

We were informed that the law was very cloudy and that enforcement would be difficult unless we had a posted sign. That is when I painted the sign that stands in the water."

There is also a conservation movement, ICU Association, that governs hunting in the area. Approximately four hundred acres are a part of that group. Their intent is to control the hunting in the area and protect the local citizens from unwanted and unsafe hunting. There exists Sabourin felt that Mel a forty acre parcel that is owned

Levi was the son of Carrie Coleman and attended the Little Dutch Child Care Center in Manchester. Carolin Gregerson, director of Little Dutch, said that the Center will be accepting donations to be used for a headstone for Levi.

Carolin also has arranged for Sue Sefanski, a pediatric intensive care social worker, to be present at Little Dutch Child Care Center on Tuesday, December 8 at 7:00 p.m. to talk with the children who attend Little Dutch Day Care as well as other community parents and children. The Center is located at 500 Galloway Drive.

Levi's organs were donated to the University of Michigan Hospital including a kidney which was transplanted to a child on Friday.

REACHING THE PINNACLE

need and economic holding power. Some firms design and build high tech equipment for industry at a time when skill and advanced thinking are demanded.

Pinnacle Engineering Company, familiar to local residents, boasts of similar, yet uniquely different capabilities. Under the watchful gaze of owner Gene Smith, Pinnacle Engineering designs and builds the tooling that goes into the machines to guarantee precision outcomes. The who-whatwhere and why of this makes for some interesting reading.

This story doesn't fly however without understanding the personality that makes Pinnacle possible. Gene Smith, known to some, perhaps misunderstood by others, brought his business into Manchester 22 years ago. A highly motivated, no-nonsense engineer, Gene presents a new standard for excellence. His concept of tooling demands precision and quality. He prevails, to the benefit of Manchester.

A sign isn't out front of the large brown building on M-52, south of the Michigan Livestock Exchange, hinting its owner wishes to keep a low profile. But perhaps the absence can be explained this way. Pinnacle attracts new customers and keeps old ones due to quality work and quick turn-over. What it makes is so unique that not many machine shops have the capability to do what it does. The list of machines reads like the invitation to a Presidential inauguration.

Eight milling machines, six lathes, eight drilling machines, a host of saws, 12 different grinders, six different CNC pieces, welding equipment, and a large array of inspection equipment fill the 14,400 sq. ft. building.

The machinery that appears the most impressive include the computerized CNC milling machine and CNC lathe.

The milling machine for example takes a laser picture of a model (a dashboard panel for

The wire EDM, or electrical discharge machine, is a programed unit that uses fine wire to cut small tools and parts to the tolerance of 20 millionths of an inch. The fast moving wire passes through a small tank of water to keep it cool while it cuts. Super high tech.

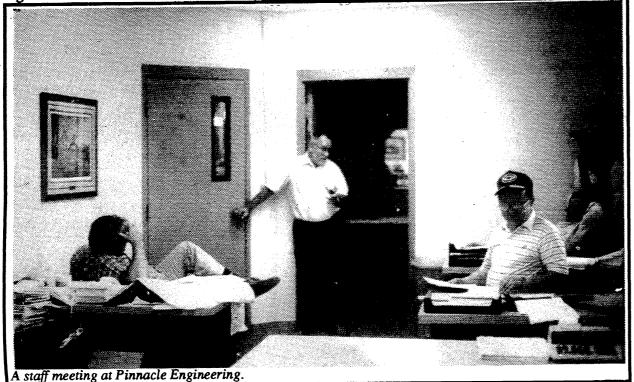

Gene Smith boasts that his equipment specializes in building to tolerances of 20 to 50 -R. Zang

Gene Smith agrees with what others have said in industry: technology and skills have changed rapidly in the past ten years and everyone who wishes to survive, adapts quickly. The use of technology, the thinking that goes into each project, and the coordination of efforts demands that employees work together. The reward is that everyone benefits. The employees gain and refine skills, Pinnacle maintains its edge, and industry receives quality toolmillionths of an inch. And a walk through Pinnacle reflects the professional atmosphere necessary to make it work. The clean, open working environment is partitioned into work areas that hold the variety of machines manned by highly trained machinists. And noise doesn't seem to be a factor, even though large machinery is used. The atmosphere creates the sense of a scientific laboratory with high-level outcomes.

The parts that Pinnacle makes range in size as small as a Washington quarter to dies that need heavy manpower to lift. Samples of each can be observed in the making on most days. And because of the variety of tools Pinnacle designs and makes, the employees find themselves constantly stimulated and challenged project home in his head, mull it over, come back, and draw some plans. Jack will then chew on it for awhile and give Gene the feedback he needs as to what needs to happen in the shop. At this point, a sense of importance fans out to the machinists and things get under way.

One example of this knowhow involved building a solid steel bolster plate (it looks something like a thick heavy 'H' with a hole in the middle and precision notches and holes here and there) for a vacuum molding press. The company who needed the part was under contract and had six days to finish its project. Pinnacle, starting from scratch, built the bolster plate in five days. American

In another case, a company wanted tooling for a vacuum bath enclosure panel. However a complication arose overtowel bar inserts that got in the way of the injection process. Pinnacle designed and built a pneumatic cam operated device to retract the bar inserts prior to the molding . American know-how.

Emory Garlick

Last week's article we decided to be our own general contractor. Not for the faint of heart nor to be lightly taken because all decisions will be your responsibility.

We need to keep in mind that the work must be of good quality and cost effective. Ask many questions of your contractors. Ask their advice what they would do and alternatives that might give the same result with a potential cost savings.

Remember we do have our complete house plans and all permits.

LIST WHAT HAS TO BE

We need to make a list of the construction sequence and try to make a time table for when those decisions must be made. This house is fast track, 60 days, and we must be on top of the construction sequence. Let's break down the construction into 4 major classifications;

- A) Building preparation, B) Rough frame construction,
- C) Finish frame construction.
- D) Final building construction.

To whom it may concern:

Please find enclosed, our check for the next years subscription to your newspaper. We apologize if the delay has caused you an inconvenience, however, we experience similar delays in receiving the paper from you. It is usually two weeks late with recent exception. When it came time for our subscription to be renewed we actually received it within the same week it was mailed. At least ten times during the last twelve months we never received it at all. Any consideration relating to the missing papers would be appreciated.

Perhaps Mr. Garlick could extend some of his youthful energy in finding out why we experience the delays and the mystery of the missing issues. I would like some explanation other than the usual "U.S. Postal Department's problem".

As previously stated, our check is enclosed for the next years subscription. However, if improvements are not seen within the next year, this will be the last renewal you will see from us. I'm sure that if you are truly interested in maintaining the Scullys in Boardman, OH as a customer, you will resolve the problem.

Optimist Club hear about Recycling and the Steer Club

The Manchester Optimist Club heard from Christi Clark, a Manchester resident and Recycling Development Coordinator for BFI, on November 9. Christi has been with BFI, performing virtually every task in the garbage collection and recycling business, for the past 14 years. She is currently in charge of the recycling operations for the midwest, and is based out of Manchester.

There is a huge amount of garbage generated by us daily, and the current trend is to reduce the amount of waste and recycle whatever is possible. BFI has built a multi-million dollar recycling facility in Salem township, about 10 miles east of Ann Arbor. This facility, along with others like it, will help eliminate much waste that currently goes into landfills.

Christi has invited any group to come to the BFI facility for a tour and information on recycling. She is very eager to share what is happening, and some Optimist members may be bringing groups out to see firsthand how recycling works on a large scale. Ronn Mann, Manchester township supervisor, expressed his appreciation to Christi for her assistance in getting recycling off to a good start locally. She has helped us even when her company has not been involved.

The second meeting of November was the annual Steer Club meeting. This year, there

— Jim Achtenberg are 13 students in the Steer Club. The Optimist club sponsors this club, which is meant as a way for youth to learn about running a business. Each member of the Steer Club buys a steer in the fall, feeds and cares for the animal over the fall, winter, and spring, then participates in the Steer Club Auction at the Fair in with the student. All Steer Club members and their parents were invited to the November 23 meeting. At this meeting, Nancy Thelan from the Lenawee County Extension Service presented a talk and video on "Putting yourself in the Judge's Boots". This presentation focused on how a steer is judged in competition, such as that at the fair.

Nancy went over the important features the judges (and ultimately the buyers) look for, such as the proper amount of fat and the shape of the animal. The video was produced at Michigan State and featured commentary by Nancy and judges that have been involved here, with several example steers displaying both desirable and undesirable features. Both Optimists and Steer Club members learned much about the livestock industry. Both of the above programs were very informative to the members of the Optimist Club. Both speakers allowed plenty of time for questions and responded with informative answers.

Jolly Farmerettes Plus

The November meeting of the Jolly Farmerettes Plus was called to order by President Andrea Clark. Flag pledges were led by Katie Tolen. There were 11 members and four guests present. There was a motion to pay Mrs. Lowery for today's project; the bill was for $12.50 and Suzanne Lowery made a motion to pay this and Joelle June. The net profit (or loss) Armentrout seconded it. from the sale of the steer remains

Under committee reports was the bake sale. There was 95 dozen cookies donated and we raised $189.33. We decided to not do the Christmas tree fundraiser this year. We had no demonstrations. The meet was adjourned then and refreshments followed. Some reminders for our committees: Sunshine box committee-Joelle Armentrout Hannah Goodrich, Nichole Jensen, Megan Staffeld and Sue Staffeld. Remember to bring your wrapped boxes for our Christmas caroling. Christmas parts committee — Andrea Clark, Suzanne Lowery and Jodi Armentrout remind those about bringing the things for the party. Also a reminder for everyone to bring their canned goods.

The Frandor Shopping Center in Lansing was the location for this year's Michigan Make-It-Yourself-With-Wool contest. The purpose of the contest is to focus attention on wool. Competition is open to ing from pre-teen to adult.

Saturday, November 14, entrants were judged based on fashion, color, line, fit, grooming, poise and appearance, besides clothing construction. The events of the day culminated in a style show in the mall along with presentation of awards.

Andrea Clark, a sophomore at Manchester High School used this competition to try a new skill — feltmaking. She made the felt in the basement of her home using wool batts from a friend's sheep, accented with colorful flecks of angora from Susan Wiley's (of Manchester) rabbits and mohair from her own angora goat. Andrea handbeaded the front of her jacket to accent its unique quality. To complete this outfit, Andrea made a straight skirt with back slit from grey 100% Wasmer

The Feminine Touch

It was the first weekend in November. The temperature had dropped and the rut was really swinging. Whitetail bucks don't exactly get stupid at this time but they do have their minds on other things. At this time a buck can be attracted by antierrattling, doe bleats, or buck grunts. I like to call from an area showing high rub or scrape activity, and from the thickest spot in the area.

Tammy, my fiance, and I headed for our blinds for an evening of bowhunting. I climbed into my tree stand but found myself being blown in figure eights by the gusty winds. Nothank you! I decided a ground blind would be a better choice. Tammy took a stand about 30 yards away. We were set up on the downwind edge of a thick swale where we figured the deer should be bedded. After settling into my hastily prepared blind I noticed a mock scrape I had made earlier was torn to pieces. The buck had also made a fresh scrape of his own nearby.

The wind seemed to push the cold right through my camouflage as we waited for about fifteen minutes to let things settle down. Then Tammy began to quietly click the rattling antlers together. She didn't hit them together hard for fear of spooking any small bucks in the area. In the cold air it sounded as if buck. two small fork-horns were going at it.

Sounds perfect, I thought. We like to call quietly, trying to sound more like two bucks in a pushing match than in an all out war. This method will call in both big and small bucks. We rattle two or three times then wait 30 to 45 minutes before starting another sequence.

We now have our mail siot installed in the front door of The Enterprise. If you use the mail slot to submit articles or ads, please remember to include your name and phone number in case we have to contact you. Thank you.

Less than ten minutes had passed before I heard something coming through the thicket. got into shooting position just as a 6-point buck came into view. He stopped and stood testing the air with his lip curled up and his tail straight out. Then he began to move toward the scrapes.

If only I were in my tree stand, I thought. Just then Tammy touched the antlers together again. It was perfect timing. The buck stopped and stood staring towards her. Then he slowly turned and started toward her one slow step at a time. With his attention on Tammy he moved by me at ten yards. I began to draw my LaClair Special longbow. I held for a brief second then let the string slip from my fingers. The Snuffertipped cedar shaft flew true and disappeared behind the shoulder. The buck immediately took off, passing only a few yards from Tammy in his flight. The hit was evident, a clean pass-through shot. The trail was easy to follow and a quick recovery was made in less than 70 yards.

What a thrill—not only in taking my buck, but in that the two loves of my life came together that night, doubling the pleasure for me. My fiance, Tammy, had just the soft feminine touch needed to rattle in my

Jan Schmidt Antiques

Jan Schmidt Antiques recently moved to a new location in Manchester at 109 East Main Street (The Manchester Enterprise's new neighbor.)

Jan has been interested in country antiques for 30 years after being given an old wooden potato masher from a friend in Pennsylvania. In 1976, she started doing shows and had a shop in her home in Dexter.

Her new shop sells painted and refinished country furniture, folk art and decorative small items, both old and new. The addition of new upholstered wing chairs, loveseats and sofas are available either to purchase in the shop or a custom color can be ordered. Fabrics are by Waverly; the furniture is reasonably priced and beautifully made.

Sharing an area in the shop is Ewe's and Moo's. Michelle Lobbestael carries new items relating to the country theme.

Herb's quotes in last week's column reminded me so much of my own days on the farm. My Mother swore by a "South Bend Malleable" range, but it did the same things as a "Majestic". Like the Widmayers, we also baked large chickens for Thanksgiving. We had our own, so we didn't have to go "south of town" for our supply. All it took was a block of wood from the woodpile, an axe and a pail of scalding water. Do any of you remember what the smell of singeing a chicken is like? Picture a typical wood cook stove with one of the griddles lifted out of position. Then wad up a couple sheets of newspaper and stick it in the hole. When it flames up, the dressed fowl is slowly passed back and forth above the flames. By rotating the bird each pass over the flames, the hairs are soon gone, but they leave a characteristic smell throughout the ally baked biscuits for the shindig and that meant the range at the church had to perform like hers at home. Otherwise things would be in awful shape in a heck of a hurry.

Before she went to town to work, she often collared me and took me to the woodpile. There she would quickly pick out a couple dozen of her special kind of sticks of woodthe ones she knew would make the kind of fire she needed for her stint at church. Then I had to pick these up and load them into the old Dodge to be taken with her as she drove to church to work. Once there she fieldstripped that range to remove everybody else's soot and ashes. Then she kindled the fire. Now she was ready to work and felt comfortable. Who says Edison didn't bring in a lot of labor savings with his new fangled electric range? But I'm sure folks like my Mother remained certain for the rest of their lives that electric stoves didn't cook and bake quite like a Majestic or a South Bend

Die Entfuhrung aus dem Serail ...on Opera Night, December 11th

Opera Season in Manches- the mighty Pasha Selim who has ter continues next Friday held the prisoners and foils the evening, December 11th, at 7:30 at the Blacksmith Shop with a presentation of Die Entfuhrung Aus Dem Serail (The Abduction from the Harem), a comic opera in three acts by Wolfgang Mozart.

This masterpiece is one of Mozart's earliest mature operas. It has a charming story and exquisite music. "Long live love!" is the theme as the Spanish lovers who have been separated by pirates try to find one another and then be freed from the slavery into which one of them has been sold by the pirates.

The story ends with the generosity and noble nature of escape. His noble nature concludes the opera with the pronouncement that it gives greater satisfaction to return good for evil than to balance one crime against another.

Opera night is fun! All in the community are invited to join in this interesting and enjoyable experience. Both opera lovers and those who know little or nothing about opera can share in this delightful entertainment shown on the large screen video at the Blacksmith Shop.

CHILDREN

We are responsible for children who put chocolate fingers everywhere, who like to be tickled, who stomp in puddles and ruin their new pants, who sneak Popsicles before supper, who can never find their shoes.

And we are responsible for children who can't bound down the street in a new pair of sneakers, who are born in places we wouldn't be caught dead, who never go to the circus, who live in an x-rated world.

We are responsible for children who bring us sticky kisses and fistfuls of dandelions, who sleep with the dog and bury goldfish, who cover themselves with Band-aids and sing off key, who squeeze toothpaste all over the sink, who slurp their soup.

And we are responsible for children who never get dessert, who have no blanket to drag behind them, who watch their parents watch them die, who can't find any bread to steal, who don't have any rooms to clean up, whose pictures aren't on anybody's dresser, whose monsters are real.

We are responsible for children who spend all their allowince before Tuesday, who throw tantrums in the grocery store and pick at their food, who like ghost stories, who shove dirty clothes under the bed, and never rinse out the tub, who get visits from the tooth fairy, who don't like to be kissed in front of the carpool, whose tears we sometimes laugh at and whose smiles can make us cry.

And we are responsible for children whose nightmares come n the daytime, who will eat anything, who have never seen a dentist, who aren't spoiled by anybody, who go to bed hungry and cry themselves to sleep, who live and move, but have no being.

We are responsible for children who want to be carried and for those who must, for those we never give up on and for those who don't get a second chance. For those we smother...and for those who will grab the hand of anybody kind enough to offer it. -Bethel United Church of Christ December Newsletter

Mr. Eugene Kaupp Remembers Early Days in Manchester

Kaupp was born, the village of Manchester had two clothing stores: Marx & Marx, and Wuerthner Brothers. Advertising in those days took a somewhat different turn than is seen nowadays. Upon Eugene's birth, his parents received a small box with the enclosed message:

Heartiest Congratulations upon the arrival of the new Baby, with best wishes and the sincere hope that he will grow up to be a fine healthy boy.

Please accept for him this little gift, which is presented to him in the fond hope that he may, in the years to come, always remember that he got his first pair of pants

Wuerthner Brothers,

These Pants are MarxMade

Marx & Haas Clothing Co

They will fit your son when he is one year old

The little suit inside the box consists of a cotton batiste shirt with cuffs and rounded collar of a slightly coarser fabric. The waist has a drawstring, and the rear opening must have been fastened with snaps or hooksand-eye closures. The thread marks are still visible, but a thrifty homemaker must have re-used those fasteners when young Eugene outgrew the blouse. The pants are made from a lightweight grey wool, with side buttons, and were probably knee-length on a year-old boy. I could hardly imagine a modern mother struggling with this outfit on a wiggly young baby! But Mrs. Kaupp, Sr., must have been very pleased to have received such a nice gift for her child. Times were certainly different

Back in 1916, when Eugene then. Today, at age 76, Eugene he received as a baby.

A visit to the Kaupp's riverside home in Manchester today gave more interesting insights into long-ago days in this area.

Eugene's grandfather, Mr.

George Kirkwood, was the owner of the saw mill as well as the grist mill at Sharon Hollow.

Although in years past there had been a saw mill in Manchester,

Eugene remembers his grandfather's saw mill as the only one in the immediate vicin-

Eugene remembers helping his grandfather from age seven or so at the grist mill. He would help to load bags of feed, grist, or flour, on to a two-wheeled cart and carry them where they needed to go. When the day was done, if he had done a good job, he might be able to expect 2¢ from his grandfather, with which he could purchase a fish hook. The next day may have found him fishing, instead of helping Eugene vividly recalls when, in 1928, Mr. Henry Ford purchased both mills at Sharon from Grandfather George Kirkwood. He was twelve years old at the time. Until this time, he and his parents had lived out at Sharon with his grandparents. He attended school at the Sharon school house until around fourth grade, and completed his schooling in Manchester.

The grist mill was left standing at Sharon Hollow and Ford used it as a factory. One of the automobile components manufactured there was cigarette lighters. Much of the power equipment used by Ford is still at the Sharon Mills building. The water power which had operated the grist mill was harnessed to run machinery for the and run a load of feed for a farmer, and then return to the saw mill. Even back then, there were automatic safety features, which enabled Kirkwood to run both mills effectively and relatively single-handed. When the log was sawed completely through, the saw would automatically switch off.

The saw mill was dismantled by Ford's workers, and re-assembled at Greenfield Village. Mr. Ford did take motion pictures of the dismantling process and the reconstruction and this film was shown at the Manchester Theater in the late 1920's.

The Kaupp and Kirkwood families lived in the house at 811 City Road (now owned by Mrs. Maxine Benedict) after they left Sharon Hollow. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Kaupp now live in a new home on Parr St., with a beautiful view of the same River Raisin which played such an important part in his early life.

CARDS OF THANKS

The Manchester High School S.A.D.D. Chapter would like to thank all who chaperoned our last dance. I apologize for the late thank you. Your help was greatly appreciated! Thank you all!

Sincerely, MHS S.A.D.D. Secretary Jodi Armentrot

Thank you to all my family and friends for your prayers, visits, cards and phone calls both at the hospital and at home since my accident. Your care and concern has touched me deeply.

A special thank you to Pastor Kuntzman and Pastor Doty for their visits and phone calls.

I would like to say a special thank you to the Rescue Squad and the Fire Department. Your dedication and service are most commendable.

Also to the special couple who arrived first and assisted me, I am truly grateful.

Godbless you all! Maxine Frey self-made man came into the tooling trade with mere common sense and grit, but a quick conversation with him reveals years of schooling and constant reeducating. Little did anyone know that when Gene Smith started Pinnacle Engineering on City Street across from the Nellie Akerson middle school that he'd end up with 14,000 square feet plus over on M-52.

Gene Smith states that most

"The Fabric of the Community at Large"

The Community Resource Center is the thread of building. the Manchester Area Quilt. "It helps people" said Dave Little, one of the founders of the CRC in 1987. It all began in the Bancorp with Rev. Bob Little, and Tom Gorney Because of Double A closing their doors and the impact in the community. All these individuals had a vested interest in this fair community and wanted to give a positive outlook for the Double A emsituation. And so it began: the Community Resource Center with Tom Ellis and Dr. Eccles level of the old Methodist church, which housed Dr. Eccles' family practice.

After about eight months, a director was needed and Dianne Schwab was hired. Previous to all of this, Claire Reck was really the center of the community as far as this community was concerned for social help. That is why we have the Claire Reck award.

The original goal of the organization was to employ the children to bed Monday night, December 7th, when a shot rang out at approximately 9:00 p.m. It sounded like it came from next door. I soon saw Sgt.

came from. As I was talking to Sgt. Werner my husband David came from the house to report neighbors had seen an occupant enter 101 Duncan with a rifle. Werner went into action with deputy Angela Hunt. Suddenly a husband watched from the front porch, Werner and Angela called out to the suspect. We knew then both police were safe.

While listening to the interchange between the suspect and police, David was able to follow some of what was happening. They obtained his name and his phone number so they could maintain contact with him Meanwhile, people with scanners were calling us with updates so we had an idea of the sequence of events. They were trying to talk the suspect out of

We were advised to vacate our home by the sheriff deputies, woke the kids up and got them in the cars with Teresa Werner and two other deputies then went to her house to wait it at 133 S. Clinton. I asked them if out. The children wanted to they had a report of gunshot and know if "that bad man would Sgt. Werner said, "I heard it" come find us and shoot us." We then asked if I knew where it reassured them that the deputies would take care of him and we were safe.

While re-living the situation with each other we each realized that we had been in danger of being shot ourselves. When I approached Carl I was right in line with where the shot second shot was fired and the came from. David was also in police hit the ground. As my the line of fire within 1/2 minute before the second shot was fired Teresa had been outside the house just a minute or two before the police arrived. When a situation like this occurs, you

- Marsha Chartrand really start to think about the ramifications of your actions, and the fine line that exists between danger and safety.

In-our little town of Manchester, this is an unusual occurrence. As we tuned into the 11 o'clock news, knowing that the imminent danger was overforus, we realized that what is a once - in - a - lifetime hapening to us is a daily fact of life in Detroit. We feel so "safe" here but we occasionally need to face reality that violence is part of our society these days.

At 11:15 we received word that the suspect was handcuffed and in the rear seat of the police vehicle. Relief flooded through all of us. Our conversation could resume as normal but the memory of this evening will remain in our minds and the minds of our children for a long time to
