Planning commission denies residential zoning

■ Recently annexed property will remain agricultural for now.

By Marsha Johnson Chartrand
Staff Writer

The hotly-debated proposed development on land recently annexed to the village faced another obstacle at last week's Village Planning Commission meeting.

Rezoning of the parcel to single-family residential with a planned unit development zoning was denied by a 5-2 vote of the commissioners.

Despite a variety of conditions suggested by the developers and commissioners, the final vote showed Tom Kladzyk, Laura Sutton, Cliff Tracy, Rick Finger and Jim Keller opposed to the rezoning while Amy Fielder and John Hinkley voted in favor. Commissioner Guy Little was absent from the meeting.

The motion for denial was made for reasons of density, fragile land, utilities and traffic flow.

The commission's recommendation for denial will be on the village council agenda for the first meeting in April.

Asked what the decision meant, village manager Jeff Wallace said, "It merely states that planning commission does not want this development in this form on this piece of property now."

"They're not saying they don't want development, but that this piece of property isn't right for the development that has been proposed."

The property has already been annexed and is part of the village in perpetuity.

"It's still a good site that could be developed," Wallace added. "It will be a wonderful place possibly for homes and it could still happen."

"But we're going to have to take in to consideration what planning commission says, get more information from our planning consultant and discuss the issue with all the ramifications."

The village has its own set of zoning rules and state laws it needs to follow.

"We use zoning to do the best we can for the village as far as developing and planning it," Wallace said. "But we also need to look at the concerns that are out there that deal with how we treat proposed developments and make sure that we're not going against any rights they may have, so we're not doing anything illegal or construed to be taking away their rights."

He added that recent traffic studies conducted by engineers hired by Wexford stated that the increased traffic flow would be feasible given current conditions.

"They didn't bring up any glaring problems," Wallace said.

"Certainly, added traffic will add a burden to the intersection at M-52 and Main

Schools scrutinize programs for future

■ Improving curriculum creates new needs within district.

By Marsha Johnson Chartrand
Staff Writer

As the Manchester Community Schools' Board of Education examines curriculum trends over the past decade and plans for the future of the district, they are seeing one distinct trend.

"There is an overall conflict between curriculum and facilities," said Marlene Wagner, board trustee.

"As we look at what courses we need, we try to figure out how to make it work with our staff and our current facilities."

"It's a puzzle and it gets more complex as we switch curriculum requirements."

Along with the new Career Pathways program at the high school, the board has been looking strongly at developing a stronger core curriculum throughout the district.

"Part of the problem is that we can't deliver the curriculum we need to because of the quality of our facilities," said Superintendent David Oegema.

To remedy the situation, the board is looking at plans for a new high school and remodeling at the middle school and elementary buildings.

"We've had a citizens' committee working at this for about three months, and they will present a proposal to the board at the April 9 meeting," Oegema said.

The scheduling issues spread across the curriculum.

For example," Oegema said.

"the middle school gym is so small, we can only have one class in it at a time. The board recently approved a new physical education curriculum, but we don't have the space to offer it to the students."

Also at the middle school level there is only one science lab for the entire student body. A teacher who wants to do an experiment may need to switch classrooms with another teacher to accommodate that class.

Similarly, at the high school, the chemistry class currently meets in one of the portables.

"There is nothing in there for lab equipment, so again, they need to switch classes around to work in lab in (the high school facility)," Oegema said. "That's an example of the type of problems we have."

The high school's life skills classroom has several electric stoves that don't work, circuits that are not properly grounded and an inadequate ventilation system.

And although the Kiwanis Club of Manchester has recently purchased a kiln for the art classes, there are no pottery wheels, little space for the students to work with clay, and minimal storage space.

"The list goes on and on," Oegema said.

In the past year, many cuts were made in the curriculum due to budget restraints. Oegema said that for the coming year the curriculum committee is looking to return to some of these courses even with the reduced staff.

Brian and Simendea Kissman to teach in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia

By Marsha Johnson Chartrand
Staff Writer

As a mother, Simendea Kissman has the typical hopes and aspirations for her daughters' social and educational opportunities.

But there is a different twist to Kissman's thoughts these days as she contemplates leaving their home of four years in Manchester.

The Kissman family - Brian, Simendea, Ashly and Amanda will leave for Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia on July 20. There Brian will take a new position as curriculum director of the International School of Kuala Lumpur. The school serves expatriate students from all over the world, the children of diplomats and corporate employees working abroad. Their daughters also will attend the International School.

"We're excited," Simendea says of the upcoming move. "We have always been open to the idea of going back overseas."

"This just seemed to be the right time."

Simendea, who will receive her bachelor's degree in elementary education from Siena Heights University this spring, is completing her student teaching at Klager Elementary School. The family has come full circle here as Brian served as Klager's principal for two and a half years. Amanda went through second, third and fourth grades at the school and now Simendea is student teaching in Heather Stommen's second-grade classroom. She will continue as a second-grade teacher in her new position in Malaysia.

"The international schools like to hire teaching couples," she explained. "And it is easier for us, too."

"Just like in the United States, it is getting harder everywhere to live on one salary."

The Kissmans had the opportunities to live in Asia or Europe but she says that her husband preferred the idea of living in Asia.

"We had visited Thailand and Hong Kong when we lived in Japan," she says. "Malaysia is much like Thailand, with the same beautiful beaches."

Though they have never visited Malaysia the family has heard many good things about the country and Kissman says educationally, the experience will be good for her girls.

"We like to travel, and be part of an international community," she says.

And the school certainly is an international community. There are 52 nationalities of students - 30 percent of the students will be American, 20 percent from English-speaking countries such as England, Australia, Canada and New Zealand, 10 percent are from Japan and the remaining 40 percent from other countries around the globe.

"I believe it is good for the children," she says. "We are giving the girls an education as

New name, same faces at Michigan Livestock Exchange

■ United Producers will continue livestock marketing at facility.

By Marsha Johnson Chartrand
Staff Writer

March 2 was the end of an 80-year history but the livestock marketing operation formerly known as "Michigan Livestock Exchange" in Sharon Township will continue under a new name.

Michigan Livestock began in 1922 as a commission firm in Detroit. Expansion and the changing face of the urban landscape over the years brought the corporate headquarters to Manchester in 1972.

On March 5, United Producers, Inc. of Columbus, Ohio began leasing and operating the livestock facilities that have been owned by Southern States cooperatives.

"The Manchester yards have been a successful market for a long time, particularly because of the sheep market," said Ernie Birchmeyer of the Michigan Farm Bureau.

"The merger of Southern States and United Producers allows both companies to combine their strengths and solidify their position in the livestock industry. Overall, it should be a positive change."

Manchester facility manager Doug Brooks said that after a period of uncertainty about what the merger might mean, business is proceeding as usual at the livestock exchange.

"It's a change of name right now," Brooks said. "It wasn't a real bad downsizing. It's a change of name and where the checks go.

"(United Producers) is very similar to the old Michigan Livestock Exchange, prior to when we became part of the Southern States Cooperatives. It's primarily a livestock marketing company."

Prior to the Southern States merger, MLE was the largest livestock market east of the Mississippi. The company went through some challenges and sought out a merger with Southern States. The cooperative bought MLE and kept it for the most part intact.

Brooks explained that the company had branched out further into retail operations under Southern States, which is a farmer-owned cooperative.

"We're going back to where we came from," he said.

But he added that the retail store would remain at the former MLE yards as long as it continues to be a productive arm of the livestock marketing business.

"The store ties in with the barn," he said. "What we carry may change."

"We'll have to prove our value."

Brooks' wife, Kathy, runs the retail store, which just expanded its hours of operation last fall.

United Producers leased all except one of Southern States' seven Michigan facilities, along with four in Indiana, one in Ohio and three in Kentucky.

"UPI has been involved in livestock marketing for a long time and has a solid position in the states where they've been operating," Birchmeyer said.

"I think it should be a positive. In the long term it should strengthen the Michigan Livestock Exchange role in the livestock marketing business, even though the MLE flag won't be flying."

Brooks said that United Producers, which initiated and completed the merger, has a more conservative management style than either MLE or Southern States.

"They're stable, solid," he said. "This is a benefit for the producers since there is more financing available."

He added that United Producers retained the four full-time and 12 part-time employees who had previously worked at the livestock exchange.

The business runs twice-weekly livestock auctions. Mondays sales are the largest with a variety of livestock and Thursdays are the more specialized sheep sales. Special sales are held periodically for equipment auctions and monthly equine sales.

The store is open daily Monday through Saturday with extended hours on Monday to accommodate those attending the auctions.

"I think this merger puts livestock people working with livestock people," Birchmeyer said. Prior to purchasing MLE, Southern States had not been involved in the livestock marketing industry.

"They were moving into an arena they had not been involved in before. This merger puts livestock people back working with livestock issues."

Birchmeyer pointed to the merger as one of many recent changes in the agricultural economy.

Brooks added that the business, particularly at the store, would be directed to the community's needs and supported by its willingness to help.

Bridgewater continues work on master plan

■ Meeting set for tonight to review land use agenda.

"The Bridgewater Township Planning Commission has nearly completed work on the goals, objectives and strategies portion of the master plan," Jim Fish, chair of the planning commission, said recently.

In September, the planning commission had over 100 people participate in a special workshop meeting to develop that portion of the master plan. Under Michigan law, townships are required to update their master plans regularly. A master plan helps guide future zoning and development in a community.

Fish added, "Now we're going to critique our progress against actual land use planning. We need our residents and property owners to take a look at how we're doing."

This will be done tonight at 7 p.m. at a special meeting of the commission, held at the township hall. The topic for discussion is a review of a proposed land use chapter.

The draft land use plan would add some land use categories, such as public or quasi-public, a medium density resident category directed to the hamlet area of Bridgewater, and a medium density suburban category that could allow zoning for manufactured housing parks.

"The challenge of the update process is to plan and manage growth," Fish said.

"Communities have learned the hard way that failure to plan to accommodate a range of growth and development only leads to chaotic growth, often forced by lawsuits. It never leads to no growth or slow growth."

"If Bridgewater is to retain our rural character, we have to manage how we grow. We have to face the fact that southeastern Michigan is a growth area."

The township's planning firm, Birchler-Arroyo Associates of Southfield, will lead the discussion. Copies of the material that will be discussed are available at the reference desks at the Saline and Clinton Township libraries. The public is encouraged to attend.

Land preservation a priority for trust

■ Striving to save our farmland.

By Rachel R.L. Mitchell
Staff Writer

“Washtenaw County contains special natural and agricultural landscapes,” Barry Lonik writes in the Washtenaw Potawatomi Land Trust’s web site.

“In the past 20 years, however, the strains of growth pressures, urbanization and population increases have caused fragmentation of farmland and open space in many parts of the county. The amount of farmland and the number of farms have decreased.”

Since the inception of the land trust, four Washtenaw County properties have been preserved.

The Parker farm and the Manny farm on Parker and Jerusalem Roads have sold easements to the state totaling a 225-acre protected area. In York Township, the Braun farm on Bemis Road sold an easement to the state protecting 215 acres. In Superior Township, Bob Schultz has sold easements totaling 360 acres.

The Washtenaw Potawatomi Land Trust encourages townships to create ordinances for the protection and preservation of farmland and open space. Currently, no township has approved its own ordinance, but some townships are considering such ordinances. Lonik, the WPLT executive director, said it is hoped that ordinance enactment will move faster than the current rate of land lost to development.

The land trust is named for the Potawatomi Indian tribe that resided in the area prior to European settlement. These inhabitants “regarded the land with a special reverence and thankfulness for the bounty it provided.” Decisions were made with foresight of sustainability, collectively considering the ramifications of the land and all of its inhabitants. Lonik and the association named the land trust on this premise in hopes that the county’s current inhabitants could strive for the same ideology.

A joint media advisory issued by Lonik and Liz Brater of the Ecology Center points out that 10 percent of the applications to the state for purchase of development rights (PDR) programs this year, came from Washtenaw County. Half of those were submitted from Freedom Township residents.

This reiterates the need for major land preservation programs in the county, as residents themselves seek alternatives to selling their farmland to developers.

Lonik explained that state officials still are reviewing the applications. The final decision may be made within the month. Unfortunately there is only $5 million to fund the PDR program so far.

“Preliminary results show that Freedom Township applications have scored very well,” said Lonik.

The application process reviews the amount of tillable farmland, soil samples and the percentage of prime farmland within the parcel of land. Points are given for each item being tested.

Residents interested in further preservation efforts may contact Lonik at 734-426-3669. He offers his assistance to anyone who is interested in applying to this program. Lonik stated he would walk individuals through the application and come out to the site as well.

Or, contact the Department of Agriculture, Division of Farmland and Open Space Preservation. Some preservation oriented web sites include www.LTA.org and www.farm-land.org.

On a related note, Freedom Township Board members are meeting with the Washtenaw County Road Commission regarding the proposed widening of Pleasant Lake Road tonight. The board members have gone on record with their opposition to the widening of the road because it conflicts with the rural nature of the township.

Looking for a few good volunteers

■ CRC seeks care givers for home bound.

By Marsha Johnson Chartrand
Staff Writer

A new opportunity to reach out to others in the community is being coordinated through the Manchester Community Resource Center.

“We need people who are willing, on a paid or a volunteer basis, to do some aspects of home care within the community,” CRC director Crystal Copeland said.

The assistance can take the form of grocery shopping, helping with light housework, or even some personal care.

The commitment is usually for just a few hours a week per family. The average time ranges from three to 10 hours.

“It’s perfect for stay at home moms,” Copeland said. “The hours can be flexible, while children are at school.”

“No special skills are required to do this kind of work, and volunteers may choose which aspects of home care they wish to provide.”

Tasks can be as diverse as providing personal care, doing grocery shopping, light housekeeping or transportation to doctor’s appointments.

More than one helper can provide different types of care for one family, to fit into workers’ own comfort level and scheduling needs.

Funding is provided for some of the services through the county, Copeland said. Those who are interested in participating in this project are invited to call Copeland at the CRC, 428-7722.

“Washtenaw County is short on workers in this area, and we have at least two families locally who are in need of this type of care,” she said.

Families who are in need of this type of home care are also welcome to call Copeland at the above number.

It's a heck of a way to spend the day

I will admit it. I have a love/hate relationship.

There are times when it has interfered with my family and with my marriage.

I have had this relationship long before I had children; in fact, it is of longer standing than the time I have known my husband.

There are times when I feel like I must keep this relationship hidden, so it's sometimes relegated to dark and quiet corners.

And there are other times when I am so weary of this relationship that I end up hiding myself.

You might have caught clues to my not-so-secret relationship in previous columns.

I have had a lengthy fascination with Dr. Alexander Graham Bell's invention, the telephone.

So intense is this fascination that my parents allowed me to have a "princess" telephone in my room when I was in high school. In this day and age when high school students often may have their own home phone line, a pager and a cellular phone, this does not seem like a very big deal, but it was considered a bit of an extravagance at the time.

MARSHA JOHNSON CHARTRAND

It wasn't really my own phone, as my parents frequently reminded me. It was the family's phone and it happened to be located in my bedroom. Nonetheless, I reveled in being able to sit in my closet and have my own private conversations.

The telephone in the closet nearly came to an untimely end the night it rang and rang while my dad attempted to find it in the dark under a pile of dirty laundry.

That probably is the beginning of people's impatience with my telephone obsession.

When I was a young mother the telephone was my lifeline to the outside world. At least it seemed so during the long days at home with a baby, then a toddler, then a baby and a toddler ... The telephone allowed me to have adult conversation in the midst of bowls of cheerios and a room full of Fisher-Price kids.

Pretty soon my toddler had her own telephone to play with, to keep her occupied while I talked on the phone. And my fixation continued.

As the kids grew up, I took to hiding, again in the closet, for privacy. Old habits die hard.

And now I have the opportunity to talk on the phone in privacy in my car.

All this to explain why it is not surprising that I have ended up in voice mail hell.

It's bad enough to have computers hanging on you, as I wrote about last week. Now you also can hear them haranguing you for what seems like hours, while you wait on hold.

"If you would like to speak to a customer service representative, please press 'one' now. Para las opciones de habla hispana, prensa 'dos'."

After choosing your option of speaking to an American or a Hispanic customer service representative, you have more options.

"To begin service, press 'one'. To learn more about our exciting new service, press 'two'. To make arrangements to pay for your service, press 'three' ..."

And so it goes, up to eight or nine options, any of which will take you to another level of voice mail hell.

The one option that everyone wants, and that seems to never be offered, is, "To speak to a warm body, please press 'blank'." I have heard rumors that pressing zero will get you a live warm body. Sometimes that works. Other times you are told that you have chosen an invalid option.

My favorite is when you finally do get a warm body on the line, which normally takes anywhere from five to 15 minutes of waiting, you are then placed on hold.

While on hold you may be treated to a repetitive monologue extolling the virtues of whatever (new and exciting) product the company offers. Often these are interspersed with dubiously helpful safety tips.

Utility companies have perfected the art of voice mail hell. I am willing to bet you have been there with me. The only value in this whole scenario is that you can get crabby with the computerized voices and they won't get offended.

However, at this point I am quite weary of too many hours spent on the telephone, talking to no one but computers. Maybe Providence is trying to break me of my bad habits after all these years.

I think it's working.

Country music hits a familiar chord

Every now and then I listen to country music. For some reason I seem to key in on the lyrics to country music more easily than I do to the traditional rock songs that I've been listening to for years. I don't know why that is but I'm sure there is some scientific reason that I will stumble across some day that will explain it all.

In any case, there is one song that really tickles me. It is called Just Another Day In Paradise. The song is about married life with kids. And it just hits the mark.

Lyricists seem to have a knack for boiling things down into a nutshell. Not including the repeated chorus, there are only 182 words in this song. Not many words but it sums up family life.

The song starts out, the phone is ringing, the kids are screaming, the mailman is bringing a stack of bills, overdue. The milk has gone sour, the washing machine broke... at that point I knew I liked this song.

It is the little things. People say not to sweat the small stuff but it is the small stuff that makes us and breaks us.

COLLEEN O'NEILL

REFLECTIONS

We've all had those kind of days. We get up late, the kids don't want to wear the clothes they set out, they have a fit, we get upset, breakfast is rushed and they have to run to get the bus. We think, "phew that's over" and then it continues.

You spill coffee on your white shirt, changing clothes is another delay and wouldn't you know this is the day you get a flat tire. And then it rains.

There are days that go smoothly. They just don't happen too often. Our family is made up of four and a dog. That is four personalities, four moods, four wants and four desires all using one bathroom and tripping over the dog.

It's not likely that the milk will go sour in our house because it goes so fast. Waking up to no milk is our kind of problem. You can't put lemonade on cereal.

We are rushed and harried and overwhelmed.

But the name of the song is so simple yet so concise.

It's just another day in paradise.

And it is grand. Even though we get mad or frustrated these wonderful people that are our family surround us and there is no place I'd rather be.

When I was a young adult I wanted adventure in my life. I went out and got a lot of adventure. I lived in the southwest. I lived in the mountains. I even did a bit of skydiving. That was adventure. But it is nothing like having a family.

Every day is an adventure with a family, from the spilled Kool-Aid to the rock collections. From teaching a child to ride a bike to tending a child who is ill. The difference between this adventure and the ones of my youth are in the connections.

We are four people but completely intertwined and together we have created something.

In the chorus marriage is described in the simplest of terms. Two hearts, one dream. Two hearts, two people, but we've come together, we created these children, we bought this house and we've made it a home.

The little things are the things that life is really all about.

My girls sit on my lap in bed to get their hair brushed each morning. My husband brings a cup of coffee to me in bed every morning. And he has done that every morning of our 11-plus year marriage. We talk and laugh and tease even while we are struggling with knotted hair or clothes that "just don't do it today" we are still together and we are family.

The smiles, the soft cheeks, the jokes and the pranks are all the things that make this just another day in paradise.

And in our lives, like in the song, when dinner plans are ruined a dinner date becomes Domino's pizza in the candlelight. With plans to tippy-toe to our room and make a little love that is overdue I find myself laughing, knowing exactly why they need to tippy-toe.

But when a child with a bad dream wants to crawl between Mom and Dad interrupting that quiet moment for two, you know you are having just another day in paradise.

Lyricists seem to have La knack for boiling things down into a nutshell.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Village and township trustees should be commended.

To the editor:

I am writing this to all the public. Do you feel you have a thankless job?

This is something that is way past due and should be expressed more frequently. A heartfelt, with deep appreciation THANK YOU. Jobs well done.

Like most others, I have taken some people for granted for many years. Never giving their jobs a thought, let alone a second thought. In the back of my mind, I may have thought, "They wouldn't be there if they weren't doing their jobs." But I had no idea of the jobs these great men and women really do.

Have you ever attended a meeting in the village or township? If not, I strongly recommend that you do, just to see some of what they have to deal with. In the past year I have gone to several meetings and find them very impressive with lots to learn. All the meetings are open to the public and you don't have to be a resident. If you have a question or comment, they respectfully hear them and answer if they can. Try to go before an issue is at your door.

Manchester can consider itself a very lucky community to have these people make many decisions that affect our town. We have elected and appointed persons for our village and township who receive little, if any, thanks.

Our village council and planning commission, township board and planning commission, have members who do outstanding jobs above and beyond the call of duty. They deserve much more than our thanks and appreciation.

If we considered the hours they put in to learn, investigate and keep up with all the constant changes, and had to pay them, our taxes would most likely double or more. They are truly "in the middle."

They have the public, state, county and federal government all telling them what they can and cannot do. "And you think you have stress."

They have to deal with what they are required to do - rules, regulations and laws. I believe the most difficult part of their jobs is to stay open minded and look at all angles.

It is incredible the job they each do. When a request or issue comes before them, the process is too lengthy to describe. You would be amazed. I urge you to attend at least a few meetings each year, even one, just to enlighten yourself.

These wonderful people give up a good portion of their personal time for these low-paying positions. Why? Because they care about the community - the people here, its image, reputation and overall quality of life.

The decisions that these groups make, I may or may not agree with. Yet, I have confidence that they have done their very best and more to come to these conclusions. They should all be recognized for the magnificent jobs they do, each and every one. A standing ovation to all would only be a nice beginning.

If you are too busy to attend, please take a few minutes to send them a note or letter expressing your appreciation.

Let them know what you would like to see in the area, or not see. They could use the public input for current and future planning.

A township member may be considering resignation - this would be a tremendous loss. Please encourage him to stay.

With appreciation, thanks and respect,

Janet Vanden Hout

Toys for tots program raises funds for area libraries

By Marsha Johnson Chartrand
Staff Writer
Over 500 Washtenaw and Jackson County children had a merrier Christmas season this past year thanks to the joint efforts of the Manchester District Library, the Brooklyn Library and the Jenter and Braun Funeral Homes.
When J.B. DeJeu of the Jenter and Braun Funeral Homes first envisioned a Toys for Tots drive last fall, he set a modest goal of 200 toys in the project's inaugural year.

He was overwhelmed by the response.
"We had a total of 511 toys donated," he said in amazement.
The number was combined between the two libraries. The Marine Corps from Washtenaw and Jackson counties picked up the toys and distributed them to local children in need during the holiday season.
In thanks to the libraries for their participation in the project, Jenter and Braun Funeral Homes pledged $1 per toy collected to the library general fund.

On March 15, DeJeu presented each library with a check.
"This project was more successful than we dreamed in its first year," he said. "We will continue this each year and we look forward to its growth in the future."
Brooklyn librarian Judy Barry told DeJeu how patrons would bring their children to the library with toys in hand, to donate. Teresa Poland, of the Manchester District Library, said that some patrons would return again and again with more toys for children in need.
All agreed that the project was worthwhile.
"This is really tied in with the spirit of giving," said DeJeu's partner, Todd Borek. "It seems we don't always live in a 'giving' society, so such an outcome in the first year of this project is particularly heartwarming."
Watch for more information on this year's Toys for Tots program in late fall.

Street," he added. "But so will all the development in Manchester Township, Brooklyn and Norvell, but we have no control over that."

"Should we force development out of the village into the township?"

On the surface, the options before Village Council at its April 2 meeting are fairly simple. The council can agree with the recommendation or it can disagree.

Further options can be developed, however. The proposal can be returned to planning, giving parameters for further discussion. New information could be developed that had not previously been considered by planning commission that may produce a different outcome. Council also can propose and even approve a compromise solution.

Wexford also has options. The company can decide not to purchase the property and pull out of the project.

"Without rezoning, the company can still put 80 homes on the property in any configuration that would be appropriate for them, and still meet our standard restrictions and code," Wallace said.

"Or they can take legal options if they feel it is necessary. A lot of zoning is decided in the courts."

"You try to work things out, do the best for the community with what you can."

Wallace said the key to community planning is working together.

"Zoning is law, it is something we can't always change," he said. "But we should put our time and effort into a good solution."

"We want to do the best we can do for all people. If we turn it down we could get a lot worse."

Tomorrow's student leaders selected

■ "Coming home" week celebrated at high school.

By Marsha Johnson Chartrand
Staff Writer

A big week at Manchester High School culminated in the selection of tomorrow's student leaders at the Napoleon basketball game on March 2.

During the week, the leadership class had chosen themes for each day of the week. Pajama Day, Dress as your Favorite Teacher Day, Opposite Sex Day, Class Distinction Day and School Spirit Day were the themes.

On "Class Distinction Day," freshmen added saran wrap to their attire and sophomores dressed like cowgirls and cowboys, while the juniors had a Hawaiian theme and the senior class dressed in camouflage. On School Spirit Day, everyone was decked out in school colors.

The winning class, with the largest percentage of participants, was the senior class.

At halftime of the varsity basketball game was the announcement of the student leaders of tomorrow. From the 10 finalists chosen by their peers and the high school staff, Audrey Bennett and Adam Knapp were chosen as the school's representatives.

Adam Knapp (left) and Audrey Bennett were selected as "Student Leaders of Tomorrow" at the Coming Home festivities during the last home basketball game.

Other finalists included Rachelle Lilienthal, Amy Preston, Jennifer Schulze, Kristi Trinkle, Will Brinkman, David Ellison, Seth LaRocque and Will Slocum.

SENIOR CITIZENS NEWS

Marion Ahrens would like to give a special thank you to Judi Bejma for delivering food on Thursdays, and to Rubena, Howard and Dorothy for following up on her other duties while she was away.

We will remember this cold weather and snow for a long time to come.

I want to share what I read about a contest held in the Fargo Forum, where people had to finish the sentence, "It's so cold that..."

The winner was Carolyn Minnie of Twin Valley, Minn., with, "It's so cold that the teeth on my zipper chatter."

Here are other entries: "Politicians have been caught with their hands in their own pockets."

"A person has to take a bath with long johns on."

"Jack Frost is no longer nipping, he's biting."

"I saw penguins flying south."

"My dog wants to use the cat's litter box."

"The hands on my wristwatch are begging for mittens."

"We have to leave the refrigerator door open to warm up the kitchen."

"Cows are giving ice cream instead of milk."

Thursday: Volunteer nurse Mae Sellers will begin taking blood pressures at 11 a.m. Pork chops and kraut will be 'dished up' by Tod at 12 noon and who doesn't like this? If you are 55 or older, and this sounds good to you, come on down to the Emanuel United Church of Christ dining room to join us. Reserve a spot by calling Kelly ahead at 428-8359 or Tod between 9 and 10 a.m. on meal days at 428-7630.

Laughter also is good for the soul and there are plenty of remarks to tickle your palate. Each Thursday you also may play cards or bingo at our new place in the village hall at 12:30 p.m.

Monday: It's off to Jackson for shopping with pickup by senior bus beginning at 9:30 a.m. Call Marion at 428-7865 if you haven't already signed the book.

Tuesday: Our committee has changed the entrée today to lemon salmon patties. Watch below for the chicken previously scheduled for today's meal.

At 12:30 p.m., Dorothy's stamping class will meet and you are welcome to join them in making greeting cards and more. I am not one bit talented in this art, but perhaps you are! Tootie says all I have to do is stamp. I say, that takes talent. Come and join in, they are making beautiful creations.

Wednesday: Yoga class is winding down ... come to the Manchester United Methodist Church (the one on the hill) and join the fun of stretching your spine. We do stretch, and feel so good afterward. You must be 65 or older for this class and you'd be surprised at the progress you'll make. Donna, our instructor, will not let us "can't." Come at 9:30 a.m. and join in.

By the time it's over, hunger strikes and it's time to be picked up by senior bus to go to the St. Mary's chicken and biscuit luncheon, which starts at 11 a.m. Call Marion for your ride.

Thursday: Crispy baked chicken will be served to us and to our guests when the Saline Senior Citizens will join us for a meal. Then, we invite you to join everyone at the village hall to continue the fun and fellowship while playing cards. Let Marion know if you plan to come, or sign the book.

Guess what? I saw a robin on March 14. I hope it could find worms ... I must go out to tell them to look under the finch feeder.

Hopping in to fulfill wish lists

Easter candy and gift sale will support middle school programs

Ackerson Middle School students will be participating in a fund-raiser to help pay for trips, assemblies, parties and other fun activities.

The Middle School PTA looks forward to working as a team with students, parents and staff to provide these opportunities for middle school students.

The Frankenmuth company has been a profitable fund-raiser for Klager Elementary School for many years and has provided a wide range of school activities and educational supplies for Klager pupils that are not covered under the school's budget.

The sale, which includes Easter candies, candles, novelty items, flower bulbs and much more, will end on March 26. All money must be turned in before the orders can be processed.

Incentives for high sales will include participation in a drawing for a Razor scooter for each ten items sold, a limousine ride to lunch at a fast-food restaurant for students with $200 in sales, and the top ten sellers will vie for a variety of prizes including cash, a color TV, Karaoke machines and talking telephones.

Scouting Out the News

government.

The mathematics curriculum is also under review.

"Area by area, we are looking at textbooks to see which ones are out of date or no longer published, and trying to resolve these issues," Oegema said.

The high school is also looking to block scheduling as an option, which would mean longer class periods for a single semester. This may provide more opportunities for students to take a wider variety of courses.

"We are looking at how other schools implement that type of program," Oegema said.

Additional electives at the middle school will provide some structure for the career pathways program from grades seven through 10.

"This will provide a flow for what the students choose as electives and how that aligns with career choices," he added.

Though this may sound like a major overhaul, Oegema says that the focus is on refinement.

"We're identifying weak areas where there hasn't been an emphasis for the past couple of years," Oegema said.

"It's an ongoing, long-term process."

Minor Michigan Matters

The ice men of Ann Arbor have combined on a scale of prices and will cut out Sunday morning deliveries.

As a result of a terrific blizzard throughout western Michigan on the 13th, trains on nearly all the railroads were stalled. The storm was considered the most disastrous one in years.

A Paw Paw real estate man received an offer from a Chicago man who wanted to exchange 61,000 gallons of rye whisky for a Van Buren county fruit farm. And Van Buren is a prohibition county, too.

Chas. A. Johnson, cashier of the First National Bank, at Niles, was arrested at Columbus on the 17th. He is badly broken in health, much emaciated, and very nervous, but expressed a willingness to return to Niles.

A murder was committed at the Wayne county house on the night of the 13th. Two inmates named Wm. Harris and John McMahon quarreled, when the former pulled a jackknife and stabbed the latter several times, causing his death a few minutes later.

Local Brevities: Concerning Events in Our Village

The song birds are coming and spring is almost here.

The ice is getting very thin in the upper pond.

That Jackson firm has moved its clothing stock back home.

Well, we had three very pleasant days anyway, Saturday, Sunday, and Monday.

The ideal entertainers did not draw much of a house last Saturday night. Those advertising freaks are of little use.

The river was on the rampage Monday and was likely to do some damage to the upper dam when Lonier and Hoffer set to work to prevent it. A small hole was washed out of the embankment on the east side.

The senior class of our high school has arranged for four fine entertainments to be given at Arbeiter hall as follows: Schiller Male Quartet, March 28; Fred High, Entertainer, Monday, April 8; Lou J. Beauchamp, Lecture, Wednesday April 17; Alton Packard, Cartoonist, Tuesday April 30. The price of season tickets is 85 cents for adults and 50 cents school children. Reserved seats for the course opens at Haeussler's Saturday morning, no extra charge. This is a very cheap course for the class of entertainments and our citizens should patronize it liberally.

FREEDOM

Albert Kress went to Jackson Monday.

The portable saw-mill moved to Dexter last week.

Mr. & Mrs. Ben Huehl of Chelsea visited at his parents Sunday.

Miss Anna Brannick of Manchester will close the winter term of school in district No. 6. Friday. She has been engaged to teach the spring term.

BRIDGEWATER

Mrs. H.B. Rice of Chicago came here last Friday to visit at Frank Palmers'.

Henry Trolz of Sharon has rented the Fred Mahle farm this year and has moved his family there.

Does your Merchant give you Discount Orders? Insist on having them. They are as good as gold.

SHARON

Mr. & Mrs. Grant Arnold left for Ord., Neb., last week, which will be their future home.

Sharon and Freedom will hold a Sunday school convention at Sharon center, Thursday, March 28. A picnic dinner will be served at the town hall. Workers from Ann Arbor will be in attendance.

Puts Baby To Sleep

An invention intended for household use, comprising a chair and cradle in one article of furniture, the two being combined in such a manner that the cradle telescopes into the under portion of the chair when not in use, has been patented. A third rocker is provided, which lies close to one of the main rockers when the chair only is in use. The cradle portion rests on sides attached to the front and rear legs of the chair and is operated as easily as the pulling out of the drawer of a desk can be accomplished. When it is desired to use the cradle the end board is grasped in the hand and pulled outward until past the inner slides, thus preventing the cradle from becoming detached.

Personal

Wm. Locum was in Chelsea Saturday.

Bert Rogers of Blissfield is in town this week.

Bert Quick is not getting along as well as was hoped.

We received a pleasant call from Rev. Kamm of Clinton, Tuesday.

Raynor Haeussler visited the high school Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. S.M. Spafard entertained the district board of the W.C.T.U. today.

Fred Maurer of Ann Arbor came here Tuesday and went out to his farm to look after things.

Mr. & Mrs. Marshal Fisk who have been "swinging around the circle" and visiting friends, returned home Tuesday.

Rev. D.R. Sheir will accompany Presiding Elder Ryan to Napoleon Sunday afternoon and will preach there in the evening.

Miss Martha Spenser closed the winter term of school in the Stautz district on Friday and will have a two weeks vacation.

Miss Minnie McAdam goes to Hudson to spend her vacation with her sister, Mrs. Ancil Kishpaugh. The other teachers will go to their respective homes.

We learn that Ben. Goodyear who has been at work at Adrian for some months, has gone to Kansas City, Kan., where he has relatives residing.

world citizens. They will have exposure to other cultures and religions.

"We are fortunate, they do adjust well to these changes."

While the Kissman family is excited about the opportunity, Simendea says they will miss Manchester.

"When we moved here four years ago, I told Brian I could stay all my life," she recalls. "I really like it here — well, at least all but about two months' worth in the winter."

The family has enjoyed their close proximity to the cultural opportunities that Ann Arbor offers as well as the close relationships they have developed with neighbors and friends in Manchester.

"We have made good friends here, especially the girls," she says. "It will be difficult when we have to say good-bye in June ... we will be back, but it will be different."

"We will miss Manchester. The people have welcomed us and we have had a good response here. The girls have been very happy and we will all miss our house here."

In Kuala Lumpur, the family will live in a new house close to the school, in an expatriate community.

Simendea says she has felt deeply comfortable in Manchester, and with the friends she has made.

"We have helped each other out," she says. "We are all working mothers and we work out arrangements to pick up the children and make sure they get where they need to be."

"You don't always find that in a community."

As Manchester folks have learned about the Kissmans' upcoming move, they have faced some intense curiosity about the decision.

"People ask me what kind of children I will be teaching," she says with a smile.

"I tell them probably children who don't want to sit in their seats. It doesn't matter if they are American, British, German or Chinese. Children are children, no matter where they live. And parents are all parents. We will find the same good qualities there," she says with confidence.

Ashly, an eighth-grader at Ackerson Middle School, finds that her friends wonder if Malaysia has television, telephones and the Internet.

And her parents simply consider this another opportunity for education — both for their daughter and for their daughter's friends.

"Kuala Lumpur is a modern city, and has been very stable for 20 years," says Brian Kissman, who has been surfing the Internet for information on the family's new home.

"In the last decade it's been called the strongest Asian economic tiger."

The city of 1.4 million inhabitants, an ethnic mix of Malays, Chinese and Indians, is home to the Petronas Towers, currently the two tallest buildings in the world.

Kissman also was considered for positions in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia and New Delhi, India and attributes his time as curriculum director in Chelsea, a position he has held for a little over a year, to helping him ace this new post.

"I went to a conference of International Schools in Washington, D.C. which is where I secured the position. I was offered the job on the spot," he says. "The time I've spent in Chelsea, what I've learned and achieved here, made me exceptionally competitive."

Since 1955, International Schools Service has helped almost 15,000 teachers and administrators find positions in 200 American and international schools around the world.

"It's a once in a lifetime opportunity," Kissman said. I couldn't pass it up."

Varsity run ends in second half collapse against Blissfield

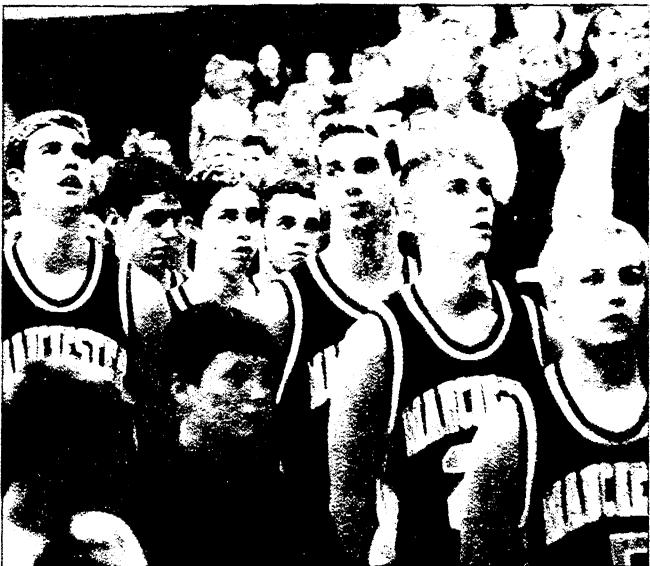

Photos by Colleen O'Neill and David Jose
 In their first regional appearance in 27 years the Manchester Flying Dutchmen got off to a great start when Brett Maki (left) won the tip-off. The Dutch looked to be the team to beat for two quarters. With a 17-9 lead in the first quarter the Dutch looked in control. In the end the first quarter was their best quarter for scoring. Although they remained solid through the second quarter, a miserable third quarter allowed Blissfield to climb back in to the game. At top, Brent Leverett and Josh McCalla discuss strategy during a time out. Although bad officiating played a role, Manchester's demise was largely its own fault. The team went on to lose to Blissfield 42-51 to end what had been a dream season.

When the national anthem failed to start (bottom left) for the third consecutive game, it might have been an omen of what was to come. It took officials over five minutes to work out the technical difficulties and get the sound system and the scoreboard working correctly. At right, guard Karl Schaible, coach Mike Quinn and the rest of the bench watch as the team's memorable season ends at the hands of Blissfield. Bottom right, Quinn reflects on the score in the waning seconds of the game. The final score was no indication of how close the game was. With just under three minutes Manchester held a 39-38 lead. Blissfield made a free throw to tie the game. Manchester fouls continued to give the advantage to their opposition. Blissfield capitalized on four technical fouls to put the game away. Except for a last second three-pointer by Jon Miller, the Dutch only scored three more points in the entire fourth quarter. An older, more experienced Blissfield team never got rattled and made the right adjustments to answer everything Manchester had to offer. The disastrous fourth quarter filled with turnovers, poor shooting and technical penalties is one the Dutch would prefer to forget.

FROM THE BLEACHERS

When asked what happened Tuesday night to cause the Dutchmen to lose the regional game, Manchester coach Mike Quinn put it succinctly:

"We didn't make enough baskets."

While that may be an understatement of epic proportions, it fails to mention the personnel and discipline problems of the game.

Monday morning quarterbacking shouldn't override the fact that the Dutch had one of their best seasons in recent years.

They went out at the regional level after winning the District championship and ended the regular season with a 15-5 record.

And this is a young team.

The Dutch will lose only two players when Jon Miller and Brett Maki graduate this spring. Barring injury, both Nick Strobl and Nate Smith will move up to varsity. And with a deep and talented junior varsity squad to continue to draw from, Quinn will have an impressive team.

If next year's seniors can become leaders and rein in their emotions, and if Quinn's talent as a coach can be solidified with confidence and discipline, the Dutch will be the team of the future.

The names and faces behind Manchester basketball have spent years developing a program that is building what could become a basketball dynasty. They nurture young players with solid fundamentals.

They inspire them with winning teams. They create ample opportunities for practice and games. They have built a team from the bottom up.

It is time for all of their work and effort to pay off. But the biggest hurdle for this team will be conquering the mental edge.

Last year one Manchester coach told me after a loss that there is a belief among the high school athletes that they are not good enough to win. That there is a sense that the Dutch are the country mouse that can't live up to the city mouse standards. This was not a slam on the student-athletes but a testament to what is lacking at the emotional and mental levels.

Manchester is not in the shadows of Ann Arbor or even Chelsea. Manchester is a town, a place with its own history and character. There is much in which the Flying Dutchmen may take pride. But they will never win at a grand level until they believe in themselves.

World-class athletes say it over and over, that winning is 90 percent mental. The work has been done and the groundwork has been laid. Winning, for all Manchester sports, is there for the taking. But winning will never happen when emotion, disputes or a lack of confidence fractures the teams.

These teams need leaders, they need cohesion and that cannot come from anywhere but from within.

Step up to the plate, Dutch. No one can give it to you. No one can do it for you. It is there - and it is yours for the taking.

During a stretch of 10 straight wins, the sixth-grade travel basketball team finished second at the recent Vandercook Lake tournament, won three Ann Arbor League games and won the annual Brooklyn Columbia Central tournament.

With just three more Ann Arbor League games to go, this group of hardworking boys will have completed a 30-game season.

Their hard work, team dedication and the support of their parents over the past five months is greatly appreciated by coaches Dan Galaska and Jim Roberts.

'Cousin Lino' comes to high school

■ Drama Club performance set for this weekend.

The entire family will enjoy My Cousin Lino.

The cast includes Andy Thompson, Shannon Gaal, Kathryn Horodeczny, William Cole, Scott VanRaden, Audrey Bennett, Amy Hough, Christina Carpentier, Katie Sucha, Brenda Bancroft, Jeanne Cloke, William Aldrich, Casey Preuninger and Melissa Luckhardt. The play is directed by June Weiland.

Doors open at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday nights for the 8 p.m. curtain. Tickets are $4 at the door.

Mr. & Mrs. J.A. Goodyear intend going to Detroit to hear the great Bernhardt, also Sousa's band.

A. J. Waters was about the streets Monday morning supported by a cane. When leading his horse into his father-in-law's barn Sunday he was kicked on the leg by one of the horses. It caused him much pain but luckily the horse was unshod and no bones were broken.

Memorial of the Alumni Association of the Manchester Public Schools on the Death of Hon. James B. McMahon

Our association is in mourning; James B. McMahon died at his home in the city of Ludington, on Friday March fifteenth, nineteen hundred and one, at the age of fifty-three years.

Belonging to the Class of '71, he was one of the first regular graduates of our schools, and his name heads our enrollment of membership. Ambitious in his nature and aspiring to higher education, he sought broader fields of learning, received his degrees at the University of Michigan in 1875 and entered at once upon the practice of law in the western part of the state. By a close application, inspired by a love of his work, he soon attained a pre-eminent station in his profession. He was elected to and held many positions of high trust and honor, being at the time of his death Circuit Judge of the 19th Judicial Circuit of this state. Logical in his reasoning, keen in his sense of equity, clear in his exposition of the law and its application, and unblemished in his integrity, it may be truthfully said he was an upright citizen, a powerful and eloquent advocate at the bar and an able and distinguished judge.

Skilled artisans may work and mould initials, sculptors may chisel in marble, but the impress of a life and character upon those who came in contact with it in the daily walks of life is a far grander memorial of a pilgrimage upon this earth than can be conceived or erected by the most skillful of the craft. He has reared his own monument.

Our Alma Mater has been honored, our association elevated, the bar and bench of our state have been enlightened and the commonwealth dignified and exalted by him whom we honored in life and whose memory we now cherish.

The Supreme Judge of the Universe has called him to the bar of a higher court. Amid the sorrow and bitterness of the affliction that has been visited upon his family we tender our deepest sympathy with the sincere hope that a serene and peaceful reflection upon the sublimity of his life and the high esteem in which he was held by his associates, may in a measure alleviate the sufferings in their dark hour of distress.

RESOLVED, therefore: That a copy of this memorial be presented to the family of our deceased member; that the same be published in the MANCHESTER ENTERPRISE as soon as practicable, and be transcribed upon the records of our Association, to be a permanent record therein.

Superior Seafoods Recipe of the Week! POLLOCK LEMON LOAF (FISH LOAF)

1-1/2 lbs. Pollock fillets
3 tbs. Fresh Parsley (chopped)
3 Tbs. Soft margarine or butter
4 Tbs. Dry White Wine
1/2 Cup Bread Crumbs (unseasoned)

2 Lemons
2 Medium Onions
1 Tsp. Old Bay Fish Seasoning
Freshly Ground Pepper

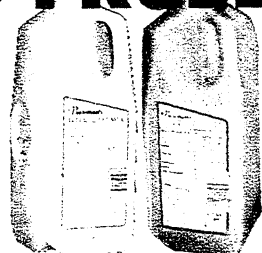

Grease a small, deep oven-proof baking pan with butter or margarine to prevent sticking. Rinse Pollock fillets under cold running water and pat dry. Slice the lemons into very thin slices and remove the seeds. Peel and thinly slice the onions. You will be creating four layers of alternating Pollock, lemons and onions. To form the first, spread one fourth of the Pollock evenly over the bottom. Top the Pollock with one fourth of the lemons and then add a layer of onions using one fourth of them. Sprinkle 1 tablespoon of the wine on top. This completes the first layer. Arrange three more layers exactly like the first using up all the ingredients. Sprinkle the fish seasoning, parsley and ground pepper on the top. Complete the loaf by spreading the bread crumbs over it and evenly distributing the remaining margarine over the top. Bake in a 400 degree oven for about a half hour.
