Big 101 Ranch Wild West

Miller Brothers' 101 Ranch Real Wild West and Great Far East, the largest show of its kind in the world, comes to Kalamazoo Wednesday, August 26 and it will present in the principal streets before est and most picturesque parade in this or any other land.

Miller Brothers, owners of the famous 101 Ranch at Marland, Oklahoma, which contains nearly 150,000 acres, have a mildent, Col. J. C. Miller, has gone into the show's performances, parade and features. The ranch, as a company, paid for the trains, the canvas, the wagons, the tons of equipment. The steel cars, alone, cost $300,000. These figures are not exaggerated, for, 101 Ranch Real Wild West is out for glory-on the road to give America a chance to see once more, on a great scale, our country's greatest romance reinacted-the winning of the empire of the west. Miller Brothers have added the Great Far East so that gorgeous pageantry, elephants, camels, reckless riders of the entire world and exotic spectacles might make doubly sure the show's appeal as a hrilling, beautiful and dazzling entertainment. A three ring circus was bought outright and merged with the per-

Of course, Colonel Miller and his brothers, Zack and George, wish the huge troupe to be a mighty success, and they know this cannot be unless it draws tremendous crowds, so a staggering array of features have been added-world's champion cowboys and cow girls; Russian crack Cossack contingents; Mexican Rurales; South American vaqueros, Chinese soldie banditti; Manchu irregular horse; Hindu and Burmese troupes, crack Zouaves from French Indo-China; Arabian tribesmen ahorse and Slayman Ali's "Blue Devils" DeMott's Turkestan bareback troupes in fact, any startling novelty offering that Miller Brothers' agents, scouring the world last year, deemed wor hy of importation for such a show. Among the historical features is Ezra Meeker, the only living person who crossed the Oregon Trail as an adult, and who, at the age of 95, crossed the continent again in an airplane. This romantic figure, the living link between the old west and the new, will drive an oxen team from his covered wagon in the parade and in the opening spectacle of the performances.

There are 300 Indians, 300 riders, 600 horses, elephants, camels, buffala, oxen, longhorns, burros, ponies and Eskino dog teams with the show. There are 1,400 people in all. Every famous chief and warrior now living will be seen in the erena and in the street parade.

Obituary

Emily Ann Gault Cook, daughter of Freeman and Diantha Gault, was born in Monroe county, New York, May 21st, 1854, died at her home in Gobles. August 13, 1925 Her parents moved to Van Buren Michigan, in 1855, where with the exception of nine years spent in Kansas she lived in and near Gobles. She was united in marriage to Ephriam Cook in 1870. To this union five children were born, two of whom survive her, F. D. Cook, Scott City, Kansas and P. G. Cook, of Kalamazoo, Mich. Her husband, Mr. Cook, departed this life in 1911. She gave her heart to her Savior in her youth and was a faithful disciple of His all her life. Her kind and loving charity for others won her many friends and she will be greatly missed by all of them. Give her the fruit of her hands and let her own works praise her in the

The funeral was held at the home Saturday, August 15, with burial in Robinson cemetery. So another passes to her reward and a home kept for her own so many years becomes only a pleasant memory.

Obituary

Jessie Hodgman was born in the township of Bloomingdale, December 1, 1865 and departed this life August 10, 1925, aged 59 years, 8 months and 9 days.

October 19, 1888, she was united in marriage to Ur Hicks. To this union five children were born, three of whom survive: Hazel of Richland, Ola Hollander of Gobles and Lois also of Gobles, two having died at an early age.

For the last three years she has made her home in Vestaburg. Except for this she has spent nearly her whole life in this vicinity, being a member of the RebeccaLodge and Royal Neighbors of this place.

Besides the husband and children she leaves three brothers, Jack Hodgman of Bloomingdale township, Al Hodgman of Bloomingdale, and Jeff Hodgman of Kansas, also many other relatives and many friends both here and in Vestaburg. sego, Mich.

The funeral was held from the home last Thursday, Rev. Epley officiating and the crowded house and profusion of flowers were fitting tributes to one whose work was well done and whose life has been devoted wholly to family and friends.

JOHN REIGLE, Tre

description of her and do not know her history? Your impression probably is pretty vague. You doubtless visualize a craft big enough to be safe and to make the President and his guests comfortable. And you, as good American, hope it is good-looking enough to be in keeping with the dignity of the office.

Well, the Mayflower is quite satisfactory in all respects as the Presidential yacht. She is not only sightly, fast, safe and commodious, but she is up to date in all respects. And this is as it should be, since the commander in chief of the army and navy of the United States of America—the richest and most powerful nation of earth-should go in proper style when he puts out to sea. "Jeffersonian simplicity" was doubtless all very well in its day, but times have changed and we change with them -or should.

We get the word "yacht" from the Dutch "jacht"-pleasure boat. The Mayflower, to be sure, was designed and built for a pleasure boat, but she is considerably more than that. She is one of the "miscellaneous craft" belonging to the United States navy. She was bought in wartime for war purposes, has done service of many kinds and has a history. She is the Presidential yacht because she is assigned by the Navy department to the use of the man who occupies the Presidential office.

It was President Roosevelt who had the original inspiration and put it into effect with the consent of congress. In the officers' wardroom on the Mayflower hang the autographed portraits of the five Presidents who have used and enjoyed the yacht-Theodore Roosevelt, William H. Taft, Woodrow Wilson, Warren G. Harding and Calvin Coolidge. President Coolidge appears to have a special liking for the Mayflower. President Roosevelt was devoted to the "strenuous life"; he was a hunter and explorer and in the White House was fond of boxing and tennis. President Harding thoroughly enjoyed golf. President Coolidge apparently has a dash of salt water in his blood. There's nothing odd about that. It's doubtless inherited from some old-time Yankee forbear of the days when all New England was sea-going. And he need not feel lonesome on that account. The United States is full of such. For the Revolution-with all due respect to Gen. George Washington-was largely won on the sea by the American privateer. In the War of 1812 it was the Constitution-designed and built by Americans—which beat the Mistress of the Seas at her own game and revolutionized naval warfare. It was the American clipper ship of a later period that astonished the world. It was the America that won "The Cup" and it is the American yachtsman who has since defended that cup against all the world. Every little harbor on our coast has its yacht club-and every freshwater lake bigger than a mill pond; even Grand lake, 9,000 feet up in the Colorado Rockies, has its annual race for a Lipton cup. There is no smarter sailor than the American on all the Seven Seas,

Press reports from White Court, Swampscott, Mass., the "Summer White House" of the President's vacation, have shown that the Mayflower was quite as much in use as was the mansion* itself. Of course, the President had to take his office with him and from all accounts the Mayflower much of the time was the real summer White House,

When the President is in the White House at Washington the Mayflower is in such frequent use that it is quite generally known as "White House No. 2," or the "Mayflower White House." Saturdays are rare in any sort of decent weather when the Mayflower isn't flying the President's flag and starting out for an over-Sunday trip. A roster of the President's guests would be a pretty comprehensive list of people of the hour in American political and official life. The Mayflower has been the setting of many important conferences of the Coolidge administration.

There is another side to these week-end trips on the Mayflower. The President may take his office with him, but he does not feave his home behind. Mrs. Coolidge goes with him always-and seems to take equal enjoyment in the yacht and her voyages. She usually takes along friends who give the political conferences a wide berth. And when President and Mrs. Coolidge go aboard they leave behind them none of the comforts of the Executive Mansion. When they invite guests they are assured of their comfort. It would convey the wrong impression to say that the Mayflower is a dream of luxury. Nevertheless, her appointment is first-class in every way. The principal rooms on the Mayflower include these: reception room, dining room, library, smoking room. There are bed chambers for the President and his wife and fourteen guests.

In fact, there are all the comforts of home, transferred to a different setting. Musicians from the Navy band are frequently taken. That means a concert as often as desired. The Mayflower has powerful radio equipment-which means that the best the studios have to offer is at one's command. There is often a picture play at night. The Mayflower sees many a film before Broadway does.

Every Sunday morning Chaplain R. W. Shrum conducts services—on deck if the weather is fine; in the state dining saloon if the weather is bad. So at least once a week this 1925 Mayflower is reminiscent of the Mayflower of 1620. And in another way, too, is the Mayflower of 1925 suggestive of the Mayflower of 1620. You will recall that the Pilgrims before landing drew up and signed the "Mayflower Compact"—establishing a body politic to be governed by the will of the majority. Quite an experiment in democracy! Well, in many ways there is the same atmosphere of democracy on the Mayflower of 1925. Everybody on board takes part in these religious services-President and guests, officers and crew. And when there is a concert or a moving picture—why, that is for "all

The Mayflower is twenty-nine years old, but she was well built in the first place, has received good care and has been brought up to date. So she's as good as she ever was-and better. George L. Watson designed her. He's the famous British yacht designer who brought out the Thistle in 1887 for the America's cup. She was defeated by the Volunteer in two races in September of that year. Watson's design produced in the Mayflower an appearance of grace and speed rarely found in vessels of her size. For the Mayflower is of quite considerable size. She is 273 feet long and 36 feet beam and her displacement is 2,690 tons. During the Harding regime the Navy department converted her from a coal-burner to an oil-burner, gave her a new teak deck and made her modern in every respect. Her valuation today including appointments is about $1,500,000. The Mayflower is in command of Capt. Adolphus Andrews, U. S. N., who is also senior naval aid to the President. She carries a crew of 165 men, including a detachment of Marines under command of Lieut. Edgar Allen Poe. All are picked men, from engineers to sailors, from carpenters to Filipino mess-stewards—the United States navy gaves the Mayflower the best it can supply.

Ogden Goelet, American millionaire yachtsman, bought the Mayflower in 1896 upon completion at a famous Scotch shipyard. March 17, 1898, the Navy department bought her for $430,000 from his estate; she was needed in the Spanish-American war and the king of the Belgians was negotiating for her. The Mayflower's first assignment was that of a despatch boat in the blockage off Cuba. In 1900 she was on duty at San Juan, Porto Rico, relieving hurricane victims. In 1902 she was, for a time, the flagship of Admiral George Dewey with the North Atlantic fleet. The year 1903 saw our recognition of the independence of Panama and the diplomatic beginnings of the Panama canal; the Mayflower was on the scene with a naval contingent under Rear Admiral Coghlan.

In July of 1905 the Mayflower returned from a European cruise and took to Portsmouth, N. H., the special envoys of Russia and Japan, who there drew up the peace terms terminating the Russo-Japanese war, through the mediation of President Roosevelt. In 1907 she went on permanent duty as the Presidential yacht and was especially in evidence in 1908 when President Roosevelt reviewed the "Great White Fleet" upon its return from its memorable cruise around the world.

This suggests that it is the duty of the President, as commander-in-chief of the navy, personally to inspect the United States fleet during his tenure of office. It is an inspiring occasion when the Mayflower, flying the President's flag, stands by as the long line of fighting craft steams by, each in turn firing the Presidential salute. Yes; there is considerable pomp and ceremony about it all. But there is a good big patriotic thrill in it for all good Americans. And it's a fair guess that everyone of them is pleased that the Mayflower worthily fits into the occasion.

Food Combinations It Is Wisdom to Avoid

The recent death of Ch . Hong, a Chinese laundryman of Baltimore, after a luncheon consisting of cherry pie and milk, calls attention strongly to the fact that certain food combinations may be highly dangerous, though the component parts are harmless enough individually. Chin Hong's death is not attributed to indigestion but to bloodletting practiced by Chinese doctors, but his luncheon made him seriously

Cherry pie and milk make a combination dangerous to Americans as well as Orientals, though a few persons are able to assimilate them successfully. A similarly dangerous dietary grouping is that of bananas and alcoholic liquors, especially if the bananas are not fully ripe.

It is best, in any event, to avoid either of these food combinations at any time of the year.

Antifog Device

The fogging of show windows, if they are of the boxed-in type, may be prevented by placing a flat glass or porcelain dish containing calcium chloride in the window. This chemical substance quickly absorbs moisture from the air with the result that the moisture is prevented from congealing against the outside glass, says Popular Science Monthly.

The contents of the dishes must be renewed every two or three days, and the moist calcium chloride thoroughly dried, after which it may be used

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus eated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Soils Cause for Clover Failures Lime Harrowed Into Field

Before Seeding Is One Approved Method.

Fertilizing for clover has become one of the farm problems. Lime is one of the first requisites if the soil is acid. A method approved by agricultural experiment stations for the application of lime and which has worked out excellently in actual practice is to harrow it into the plowed field before seeding the clover. The lime can be applied, however, when it is most convenient to plow the fields. Proper Proportions.

For average conditions, about 3,000 pounds of finely ground limestone or a ton of hydrated lime per acre are the proper proportions and sufficient to remedy conditions and speed up the

Owing to the decrease in the supply of barnyard manure on farms, much soil needs both potash and phosphoric acid for the best stand of clover. Phosphoric acid deficiency, experiments have shown, may be the factor which checks the growth of the clover.

Acid phosphate and muriate of potash supply the lack, applied at the rate of 300 to 600 pounds of potash and 100 pounds of muriate to the acre. If mixed fertilizer is applied, one high in phosphoric acid and potash should be used. Clover when well started will procure its nitrogen from the air. Seed is Blamed.

An appreciable percentage of the failure of clover crops is blamed upon the seed wheh it is the condition of the soil wherein lies the trouble. If limed and given potash and phosphorus fertilizer the clover would do its Mammoth red clover is said to be more tolerant of acid and poor soils than the medium variety, but this does not mean that liming to remedy acid conditions is unnecessary.

Another cause for the failure of clover to survive the winter is too close grazing or cutting. Clover needs at least a four-inch growth for winter protection. If grazed closer than this a good stand may be ruined. An application of manure in the fall is a great help in winter protection.

Intertillage Practical

Plan to Destroy Weeds We can't grow food plants and weeds at the same time. That's been demonstrated many, many times. The weeds must be destroyed and intertillage is the only practical way of destroying them. Since most all land is weedy this theory helps us but little. But the question is, is this theory correct for all kinds of soil?

The problem of tillage for sandy or alluvial soils is quite different than for clay or heavy soils. Crops growing on sandy or alluvial soils may get along quite well without tillage if there are no weeds, but how about the clay soils? Individual farmers have tried this and, as a result, they got no corn or beets, even where there were no weeds. Sandy or alluvial soil and any soil containing abundance of humus will remain mellow without tillage, but clay soil settles down hard and is almost impervious to air and moisture. Where it is kept cultivated this does not happen and better crops are secured.

A man considered an authority on soil problems once said: "Weeds are a good thing, they're a blessing to most farmers, for if there were no weeds, people would not cultivate as much as they should. Cultivating not only kills the weeds but it improves the physical condition of the soil."

JOHN

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK WHEN I count up the everyday heroes whom I have knownthose simple unselfish souls who meet the sorrows and the sacrifices of a life of toil uncomplainingly and well-I always think of John.

His was, indeed, a very unheroic figure. He was round shouldered and thin, almost to emaciation, and his illfitting, ill-kept clothes hung loosely on him and served to accentuate his physical defects.

He had never had any real home so far as I know. He had "boarded" for thirty years with Mrs. Baynes, a worthy woman who did the village dressmaking and thereby supported an incapable husband. John had taken care of her little garden, had looked after the few chores about the place, had kept the premises and the house in repair. He seemed more a guest than otherwise, though he occupied a bare little room at the back of the house and paid his modest weekly board bill with regularity.

He did not always follow a regular business. In early life he had been a farmhand; later he apprenticed himself to a barber, and in recent years he had kept an untidy barber shop at the edge of town, but trade was pretty slack excepting Saturdays. Frugal wives beat him out of his earnings by trimming the hair of their husbands and children; the work was sometimes crudely done, but a penny saved is twopence earned, and there was no evidence of an inflated currency in the village. He could adapt himself to various sorts of work. He was a host in himself at the time of spring house cleaning, wielding the paint brush skillfully within and without the house, putting on wall paper, and acting as general carpenter and repair man. Sometimes in the summer, utilizing his early training, he went out into the farming district and lent his hand at haying and grain harvest and thresh-

He was full of sympathy, and ready to sacrifice his own desires and interests for the good of others. He had a ready wit, a keen insight into the characters of men, a strangely simple accurate judgment. He had no knowledge of literature, he was not much given to religion, he was quite ignorant of political science, and yet the village teacher always dropped in to see John when he struck a hard snag; the minister would never have got quite successfully through a revival service without consulting him, and there was never a political scheme in the county carried through without his being on the inside.

He was a good story teller-direct, humorous, Individual. I've seen a crowd about him of ten at a village street corner or when the men were resting at noon in harvest time, every ear strained to catch his words, and every man shouting with laughter at his tales.

He knew everyone within twenty miles, any everyone whom he knew had a good word for him. Children told him their troubles, mothers named their babies for him, men out of luck and out of work came to him for help, and young boys asked his advice and took it. No one was too low or too insignificant for his consideration. No help that he ever gave was offered with the idea of reward, yet he was seldom left out of any social gathering in the town or the community. He said himself once that he thought he had ridden more miles in a motor car than anyone living who did not himself own a car or drive one.

If anyone was sick he sent for John. If anyone was in trouble it was John to whom he came for advice—young girls and old women, wild boys and shrewd men, the child and the gray beard found in him an unselfish friend and a helpful adviser. No one ever heard him complain or grumble or find fault at his humble lot.

When he died the village was crowded with those who came to look on his kindly face and to follow him to his last resting place. They were the children with whom, he had played and with whom he had walked hand in hand through the streets; they were the women whom he had helped and the men by whom he had sat when they were wracked with pain; they were the friends he had made through his daily ministrations of toil and helpfulness.

There was no sermon; there was no need of one. John had never belonged to the church. Only the minister prayed and read:

"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: for I was an hungered and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger and ye took me in: naked and ye clothed me: 1 was sick and ye visited me: I was in prison and ye came unto me."

Describes Development

of New Smutless Wheat

Dr. E. F. Gaines, cerealist at the Washington Agricultural Experiment station, gave an illustrated talk on his work in cereal breeding before the agronomy seminar of the Kansas State Agricultural college. His studies have been primarily in smut diseases and in resistance of wheat varieties to smut infection. Tests of the degree of resistance to smut infection were conducted on more than 700 varieties of wheat. A few of these were found to be partially resistant.

Crosses were made between resistant varieties with a hope of combining the good qualities of each and smut resistance. The cross, Turkey X Florence, gave promising results. Turkey wheat used in the cross was secured from the Kansas station about 1906. A number of strains from the cross were thoroughly tested for about seven years and the most promising was named Ridit. This variety, now in the ninth generation, shows almost complete immunity to stinking smut.

Sheep Render Valuable

Assistance on Any Farm Sheep require less feed per hundred pounds of gain than do cattle, and give a larger return for grain used. The conditions under which sheep are kept provide ideal conditions for the conservation of a maximum amount of the fertility contained in the excrement. Sheep render valuable assistance in keeping a farm free of noxious weeds and in the newer sections aid materially in land clearing by keeping down the second growth. Other adventages of sheep are that the investment in buildings is comparatively small and a minimum amount of labor is required in caring for them.

Feed Calves Enough but Don't Overfeed

Do Best if Kept Just a Little Bit Hungry.

Feed the calves enough, but don't overfeed them. They will do better if kept just a little hungry. Overfeeding causes digestive troubles.

These are some of the suggestions made by the department of animal husbandry of the New York State Agricultural college at Ithaca on the raising and care of calves.

The first thing to remember, says the college, is that no calf should be raised for dairy use unless it comes of first-class parentage-from a purebred sire and a high-producing dam. Granting this heritage, the dairy calf will respond to, and should receive, careful handling.

It is best to let the calves stay with their mothers for two or three days after birth. Then they should be taught to drink from a bucket. Care should be taken to see that the pail is clean for, as every farmer knows. calves are subject to digestive disorders.

The calf should get from 6 to 12 pounds of whole milk daily for the first three weeks and then may be gradually switched over to skim milk and a little grain. Most farmers find it best to give the calf its grain immediately after it has finished drinking the milk. A good concentrate allowance will contain muscle and bonebuilding nutrients and will contain some fat to replace a part of that abstracted from the milk.

Here are three rations which have been found good:

Corn 3 parts, bran 3 parts, oats 3 parts, oil meal 1 part.

Corn 5 parts, oats or bran 3 parts, oil meal 1 part. Oats'3 parts, bran 1 part, oil meal 1

Banking Celery Late in Summer Is Best Scheme Most of the growth in celery occurs late in summer when the weather is beginning to turn cool and from then on till freezing weather. When the ground is becoming cool, in September, the soil should be pulled up around the plants a little at a time until it is half way to the top. Before much soil is drawn up, the bunches should be tied. This is quickly done by beginning at one end of a row with a ball of twine, one end of which is tied to a stake driven in the ground. Beginning with the first bunch of celery, draw the leaves together with one hand, and with the other make a turn of the string about that bunch, then on to the next without cutting the string, merely keeping it tight between stalks. In this way the leaves are held compactly together without being tied too tightly.

Not before frost should more earth be thrown up, for it tends to rot the stalks if banked while the weather is warm. Celery will stand a killing frost or even a light freeze without injury, but will be destroyed if frozen hard. When the earth is cool, some time between the first frost and the freezing of the ground, the soil should be drawn up from each side to within few inches of the ton. Double rows will save some labor in banking. Some make a practice of adding more earth with the approach of cold weather, then a covering of litter or corn fodder, so that the celery may be left where it grew through the winter storage period. This method requires a great deal of labor toth in storing and taking out, and is not to be recom-

both scarce and high-priced. More food animals were slaughtered in the United States last year than ever before. The total was 119,-980,500, or about 1.1 for every man, woman and child in the country.

The consumption of milk in the United States has increased 25 per cent since 1920, but our per capita consumption is still lower than the principal dairy countries of Europe.

At least 50 per cent of all live-stock losses in transit are preventable by co-operation of the railroads, shippers and producers, say officials of the new Live Stock Loss Prevention Association of Ohio.

By storing vegetables for late fall and winter use and using a horbed to produce for late winter and early spring, the summer garden can be supplemented and a supply of vegetables will be available the year round.

CALF WILL THRIVE IF STARTED RIGHT

At the age of two weeks the calf will thrive best on whole milk of a somewhat low butterfat content fed at body temperature for the next two weeks. When at the age of four weeks the milk may be gradually changed from whole to skim; this change should take about a week so as to avoid any digestive disorders. At no time should the calf receive over 16 pounds of skim milk a day until after it is four months old, at which time it is usually more profitable to feed the skim milk to hogs or poultry, or if the market is a whole milk market, it will be needed in this

After the calf is on skim milk twice a day feeding is the most practical. Care, however, should be exercised in keeping bright green alfalfa hay before the calves and to let them eat a little fresh ensilage at least once a

It is important that growing calves should be fed a grain mixture that is high in the growth producing, or protein concentrates. For this purpose it is recommended that from one to three pounds of the following mixture be fed to growing calves in addition to alfalfa ensilage and warm skim

25 lbs. corn meal 35 lbs. ground oats

25 lbs. wheat bran 15 lbs. linseed oil.

If oats are hard to obtain, this portion of the mixture may be partially substituted with barley. As the calves grow older corn chop may be used in the place of corn meal.

An abundance of clear fresh water should always be accessible and care should be exercised in keeping the calves' quarters clean, well bedded and dry, so as to guard against the contraction of pneumonia or like diseases.-H. R. Lascelles, field man, Colorado state dairy commission.

Sprays for Flies Ought to Be Applied in Summer The cost of spraying a herd of ten cows for a 90-day period during the fly season is approximately $2 when either of the following sprays is used according to the entomology department, Purdue university.

Spray No. 1: Chlorozone (a stock dip) ... ½ gallon Oil of tar 2 gallons Oil of tar 2 gallons
Kerosene 2½ gallons
Spray No. 2:
Fish oil 2 quarts
Oil of tar 1 quart
Crude carbolic acid ...3-5 ounce

These sprays were used in a test during the fly season of 1924, on several Indiana dairy herds. The conclusions at the end of the test indi cated that the sprays should be ap plied faithfully throughout the fly season. Where only one application was made a day, it was found that spraying immediately after the morning milking gave the best results. It should be applied to every part of the body, including the legs and under parts, as a fine spray. An odorous spray proved to be more effective than the odorless mixtures. The cows that were sprayed were markedly quieter, less nervous, grazed more peaceably, and stood quieter at milking than unsprayed cows. Herds that were sprayed showed a diminishing number of flies as the season advanced.

Biggest Dairy Problem

While much attention in the dairy field has been given to marketing-cooperative marketing-during the last few years, such authorities as Canan of Purdue still believe the outstanding problem of the dairy industry is the reduction of the cost of producing dairy products. Canan would begin by improving dairy breeding as an outstanding important step. He says slightly less than 3 per cent of all the dairy cattle in the United States are registered in the books of the various organizations.

ARABS ANNIHILATE ITALIAN COLUMN

Tribesmen of Tripoli Revolt and Wipe Out Force of 200 Near Benghazi.

Rome.-Senussi tribesmen of Africa have risen in rebellion against Italy's rule of Tripoli and Cyrenaica.

Proceeding southward from the town of Benghazi under command of Major Ruggero for the purpose of crushing the traffic in contraband with Egypt, an Italian column has been cut to pieces. Two hundred men were killed or wounded; only a few escaped. That part of the column convoying the supply caravan was captured.

The main caravan route between Tripoli and Egypt has been occupied by the Senussi.

The uprising is led by Sheik Ahmed, religious chief of the Mohammedan confraternity of Senussi. In 1916 he was taken to Constantinople in a German submarine for the purpose of directing the holy war or jehad against the French, British and Italians in northern Africa. He is considered one of the most eminent figures in modern

U. S. Predicts Low Acre Yields for Most Crops

Washington.—The principal crops of the United States this year will be marked by low-acre yields, according to the Department of Agriculture. Figures of the department show that a yield of all crops combined 4.5 per cent under last year's crops and 6.4 per cent below the ten-year average is indicated by present conditions. Drought in the corn belt and southwestern states are the principal cause of the poor showing.

The only crops for which increased yields per acre are expected are spring wheat, which is expected to run over the five-year yield per acre by about one-tenth of a bushel, and a few crops which are concentrated in limited areas, the first including citrus fruits, olives, walnuts, hops, sugar cane buckwheat and some vegetables.

Labor Head Declares War Against Big Textile Firms

Washington .-- In making public a letter to M. G. MRS. MORGAN DIES OF SLEEP SICKNESS

Immediate Cause of Death Was Heart Attack Induced by Indigestion.

New York .- Mrs. J. P. Morgan, wife of the banker, died in her home near Glen Cove, L. I. She had been ill two months, suffering from lethargic encephalitis, a form of sleeping sickness-a strange and baffling ailment. The immediate cause of death was a heart collapse induced by an attack of indigestion.

Mr. Morgan was at his office in Manhattan when the unexpected end came. He had gone to the city entirely hopeful of her continued improvement. He reached the Glen Cove home three hours later. Only a nurse was at the bedside when death came during the sleep, into which Mrs. Morgan passed soon after the illness developed in church on June 14. She has been in a continuous coma for more than nine weeks, and has been fed artificially.

No member of her family was at home when the end came. Mrs. Morgan, member of a well-known Boston family, had, been married to Mr. Morgan for 35 years. There are two sons and two daughters.

Scott Divorce Case Ends: Both Sides Deny Charges

Alpena, Mich.-The sensational divorce trial of Congressman Frank D. Scott and his wife, Edna James Scott, was terminated here suddenly, when Circuit Judge Frank Emerick stopped the closing argument of Irvin S. Canfield, counsel for Scott, and gave him 20 days in which to submit further pleas in the form of a written brief of the mass of testimony.

The lawyers, in their final pleas, went briefly over the testimony which brought the names of dry congressmen and their wives into drinking parties in Washington's fashionable hotels and on a junket on the steamer Cristobal to Panama.

Attorney Canfield declared that, under the law, Congressman Scott is entitled to a divorce on the grounds of

CHAPTER XIX—Continued --15---

"Now he goes running out along the walls searching for something. Look! Here! He ran out along the base of the wall searching."

"For what?" "For bits of wood—for anything that would burn-for fuel. He must have a funeral pyre. He has been crazed by fear again. But he finds nothing, Brena. There is no wood here, no till he drops. There is no mercy for the return journey!" him. Nothing that will burn. Nothing within a half a hundred miles. Like Hennepin, he too now screams and the scream comes back from the cliff with

"But he did find fuel, Peter," she said. "He must have found something."

a terrible mockery.'

Yes, he found something that would do-not very well, as we can see. He had hoped for better results than he got. Come."

On the way toward the gate of the for ification walls Peter stopped and kicked at a blackened spot on the sand. He said laconically, "Their fire. Where they ate their last supper together-the vanished men."

The sun had dropped below the mountains above the mesa; its needled fire had settled down into a hot layer of dull, sullen heat. But beyond the wall where their car stood the open desert, bare, cruel, with the heat waves running like endless herds of sheep along the quivering horizon, was a relief from that strange spell of the dried well, the ruins, the fine yellow-gray dust, and the silence.

Brena filled her lungs as one does who has come from the interior of a mortuary.

"Peter," she said. "Yes, dear."

"I want to tell you, Peter, that you need not worry about me. I am all right. It is necessary for me to know. And I'm going to know, Peter, without any weakening. We've come too far for that."

He took her hand.

'I'm not willing to let this make a scar on me, Peter," she said. "I've paid in full before this. So show me. And then let's turn toward the earning of our ways."

'Our way," he insisted, correcting her. "Not ways. The earning of our way, together." some doubt had Peter's eyes were upon that which he had seen before.

He dropped behind her and turned her body so that she faced toward the bend in the southern end of the fortification wall.

"There," said he. "You did not see it as we drove in."

Standing on the desert, like a ragged unkempt impropriety, was the ruin of a touring car. All that was left of its top was hanging in wispy strips on the metal frame, its paint and varnish had almost gone, the tires had hardened and crumbled on the wheels. shreds of dry rotted leather dangled from the cushions. Motionless, dead, silent as all else, the car, as if it were a shabby outcast thrown out to die, appeared disconsolate, ready to send forth a wail of loneliness into the emptiness. It had turned its back upon Pueblo Mescalero, as if it had wanted to go away but could not. "He came in that, Peter?" Brena asked.

"Yes."

"But never took it away. Did he kill himself?"

"No," Peter answered. "A great abstract justice—a great equity from which there was no appeal-sat in trial of him here. I tell you, Brena. the thing is of magnificent, awe-inspiring dignity. It's a tremendous thing -an unforgettable majesty of inexorable dealing out of sentences. The place of his crime was the scene of his trial, his conviction and sentence. He died as Hennepin had died-of Brena started to speak.

"No, not yet," Peter said. "As Hennepin had suffered, so he suffered. More, perhaps, because in his carjust as we have—he had a two-days' supply of water. Do you see that black thing out there on the desert? It is a metal container for water. He was so crazed that he had tried to drag it along with him on a hopeless journey through the sand. When he lost hope after many miles he dragged it back, tapping its contents to wet his cracking lips until the last drop was gone."

"But the car?" she asked. "What happened to the car?"

entrance. But here it stopped. Oh.

The car was all right," replied Peter. "Come this way. Don't go infront of it. Look behind it-the

I tell you, it is a thing of stateliness -as if some great hand had come > Brena stared at him in open-eyed wonderment.

"He was the instrument of justice —he himself," Peter went on. "A man who would save his life, lost it. The madness of fear brought all that he had to fear-and more."

He paused. "Brena, I will tell you," he said in hushed, awed voice. "The man was mad, irresponsible, without power to reason. He was in a panic of fear. He wanted to hide his crime at any cost. He had filled his gasoline tank for the return journey. Look!"

Peter pointed to the hole in the back of the car into which the gasoline is poured. The screw cap had gone. A bent copper pipe still dangled out of

"He wanted a hat-full of gasoline. That was the fuel, Brena-the fuel to burn the remains of Jim Hennepin." He wet his lips.

"He used a siphon. This bent copper pipe taken from his tool chest a spare length of oil feed pipe! And with that he filled his hat and ran Peter looked up into the sky. He went on quietly. "And the siphon ran on. He had forgotten it. It ran on with its little stream saturating the sand until the tank was empty and the heat of the day was evaporating the last drops at the bottom. Parmalee paper, no grass. There's nothing but | had condemned himself to death! He sand and stone. Let him run about had lost the fuel he had put in for > Brena pressed her lips tightly together and for many moments looked into the great fanlike spread of the sunset. Then suddenly she turned toward the car and took several steps. "No," said Peter firmly. "You mustn't."

"I must know, Peter, beyond a shadow of a doubt."

"He is there-nothing for you to see, dear. He must have had the delusion at last that he could drive the car. He's there-at the wheel-fallen forward. And so-" She looked up.

"And so-to be sure-I took the watch—a gold one—this one. Is it

He held it out on the palm of his hand.

"Yes, it is-his, Peter."

He looked down at it a moment; then tossed it into the sand as one tosses aside a poisonous fungus.

"We mustn't let this go with us when we go-following us away. We must leave them both-here." She took his hand.

"I am sure. For myself I can answer. I know the desert has served some great Will. The book is closed."

They slept upon one great square blanket spread on the open desett beneath the stars while the pale moon moved on its great silver arc across the heavens. The Pueblo Mescalero was far behind; from it they had ridden for miles in awed silence. And when they had reached a stopping place upon a rise of ground, neither had dared an expression. Aching with weariness they had looked at each other mutely and flung themselves

Now the second morning, like the She shook her head a little as if first, came over the desert's edge with host of golden lances; again the air they were outside the wall now and of the desert became a haze of luminous violet hanging above the red and yellow sands and waiting for that clang when the yellow glare was flung forward again over the plain.

> Brena awoke, sat up, unbraided her hair and tossed it loose with her fingers. Something within her, that had been growing with the slow growth of stalwart long life, that had suffered no blight, that subconsciously she had protected and nurtured for an unseen end, that had been made ready to withstand assaults by tragic winds, that had lived apart and immune from taint, was now free. As she threw cut her arms toward the sun, so now this thing within her for the first time came forth from its depths to greet a dawn of its own.

> It was not a thing asking for dramatic crises or for summits of joy: it only asked for the ultimate romance -that of the continuity of a full, strong, human life-the adventure of adventures into which the soul throws mind and body, thought and flesh, nerve and will. And because she had found her mate in this ultimate romance, Brena bent over and kissed Peter's lips.

He smiled in his sleep, and slowly his body moved and his eyes opened. "Where are we going, Peter?" she asked. "Somewhere with you," he said, sitting up. "Somewhere with you. I suppose we'll have to be married, dear one. But I feel that we were something more than that a long, long time ago.'

He turned toward the east and the first flood of golden light illumined his face.

"Do you know, Brena, that there is something not weighed by science and the philosophies, not reckoned by governments nor laws nor customs. It is something that is ours-some newborn thing without material existence. some immortal spirit that we have created-you and I-long ago."

Brena moved her head up and down in silent assent. She sat with her hands clasped in her lap, her dark eyes moist, and a calm smile upon her sensitive, flexible lips.

For now she knew that he too understood the way to the greatest of all the mysteries.

ARTIST IN PIQUE SPOILS ART WORK

Splendid Memorial Model Lost to World.

When Gutzon Borglum destroyed the models for the great Stone mountain memorial, to be chiseled as a reminder of the South and her leaders, he set an example that has been followed by another artist 4,000 miles away.

The city of Milan has been holding contest among artists for a design of a monument to be erected in honor of the city's sons who fell in the World war. Many and varied and beautiful have been the designs submitted. Yet none seems to have filled the want as expressed by the jury of award. They want something different from any memorial yet erected. They want something that shall be eternal, that shall breathe of sacrifice, liberty and glory. They want something everlasting but lyrical, E. M. L. writes in the New York Times.

The design entitled "Alla Gloria" by Giannino Castiglioni seems to have won the greatest number of admirers. It is a gorgeous thing. Upon the top of twelve great marble pillars are twelve figures representative of twelve great battles of the war. Six on a side, these pillars form a wide design in the center of which is a solitary stone. Flanked by wide marble steps are two figures which seem to indicate grief and pride of achievement. The whole is too beautiful to stand the wear and tear of the years.

And the judges want something that will last forever. They seem to want a great pyramid, not a Temple of Ephesus; they want an Alp or a Himalaya, not a Leaning Tower of Pisa or a Milan cathedral. They seem willing to abandon beauty for durability. They want something set upon a hill in Milan that will strike the visitor immediately upon his arrival, something that will be seen from afar.

"Alla Gloria" was a beautiful thing. It is so no longer. The artist was disgusted with the failure of the jury to accept his design. He did not take an ax in hand and destroy it in a fit of temper. He, it seems, talked it over with other artists whose designs had not received recognition. These artists -since misery loves company-did not continue to advocate the surpassing beauty of their own efforts. They concentrated their displeasure upon the failure of "Alla Gloria" to win recognition. So, apparently with the concurrence of the designer, they destroyed the model of a very beautiful memorial.

Paper From Asphalt

Heavy paper is now being made by the use of asphalt. After the fibrous materials have been treated, to remove impurities, they are macerated, pulped, with water and formed into sheets by pressure and dried by heat. Much paper and cardboard for wrappers, cartons, and the like consists of a layer of cheaper material between sheets of better quality. The aim of the new process is to give a better product, made proof against water and vermin, and this accomplished by substituting the asphalt layer for the inferior filling. This layer is a thin sheet of pulp into which an emulsion of liquid asphalt with a small amount of suitable clay and sufficient water are introduced. One or more of the impermeable asphalt layers are used between the sheets of plain pulp, and the resulting heavy paper or fiber board is claimed to be not only waterproof, but about 20 per cent stronger and more durable than ordinary paper or pulp-board of like thickness.

Famous Athletic Clerics

It is over 96 years since the first boat race was rowed between crews from the great universities of Cambridge and Oxford. It is interesting to note that a number of the men who composed the first crews reached high degrees in the church. The Oxford crew included Charles Wordsworth, a cricket as well as a rowing blue, who became bishop of St. Andrews; J. J. Toogood, afterward prebendary of York; T. F. Garnier, dean of Lincoln; and W. R. Fremantle, dean of Ripon. Of the Cambridge men, A. F. Bayford was later chancellor of the diocese of Manchester: C. Merivale became dean of Ely and G. A. Selwyn was the famous bishop of New Zealand and afterward of Lichfield.-London Mail.

Thought She Meant It

Buddy and Doris were washing, getting ready for the evening meal. They are five and three, respectively. Fearing Doris would not be able to wring the wash cloth dry, Buddy was told to do it for her.

At the end of half an hour neither of the children had come from the bathroom, and on investigation the mother was told by her young son: "You told me to wring it dry, mother, but I just can't." Mother says she will never again ask a five-year-old to wring another wash cloth "dry."

Formation of Habits

Makes for Lost Motion One morning I happened to be up early and went to a lunch counter restaurant for breakfast at about 8:40. The place was so crowded I couldn't get near the counter. But only 15 minutes later the rush was over and there were seats to spare, Fred Kelly writes in the Nation's Business Magazine. Which made me think that one of the silliest things about us human beings is our habit of all trying to be at the same place at the same time.

Why shouldn't there be more scattering of hours of eating and hours of labor? Why must so many reach their offices at about 9 o'clock? Why should not subway and street car rush hours be more divided? Not long ago I walked at 2 a. m. along a famous thoroughfare that a few hours earlier was bedlam. The street was quiet and delightful. I felt as if I should like to sleep all day when everybody else is getting in one another's way and do my moving about at night when others are asleep. Why not? Why couldn't more work be done at night? Half the men who go to offices at a certain hour do so only because the boss hasn't enough imagination to recognize that it isn't really necessary.

The chief statistician for a big institution tells me that when he occasionally takes a day off and works at his place in the country he is twice as useful to his employers as if he were at the office. Because he is in a quiet spot, free from interruption, he naturally accomplishes more work and his employers get the benefit. But if he were to ask for the privilege of doing all his work at home he undoubtedly would be regarded as a shirk. His employers like to know that he is at a certain desk in the main office. Because it is necessary for a few people to do their work at the office, the boss fails to recognize that it is not equally essential for everybody.

What a lot of lost motion may be traced to following rules and customs -to doing what is generally considered the proper thing!

Honolulu

Honolulu this time was a revelation. A magic wand had touched the place and transformed it, even as Miami and Los Angeles have been transformed. It is now a flourishing city in a setting of surpassing loveliness. There is life and progress and enterprise on all sides. The down-town district has become metropolitan and upto-date. The mountain sides are terraced with beautiful houses to which perfect roads, flower-lined, wind upward under canopies of great spreading trees.

One cannot be long in Honolulu without observing the racial problems which confront its administrators. Over 42 per cent of the population is Japanese, while only 8 per cent is American, British and German. The remainder is divided between Filipinos, Chinese, Hawaiian, semi-Hamaiian and Portuguese. I have seen a photograph of 32 school girls, each of a different race or racial combination .-John T. McCutcheon, in Hearst's International-Cosmopolitan.

After climbing into a parked automobile and playfully releasing the brakes, five-year-old Jennie Verino of Providence, R. I., decided to see the thing through. She clutched the steering wheel gamely and remained with the machine while it ran wild down a hill and into a fence. She made several attempts at keeping the car in the roadway, and at one point shouted to a boy playmate to "get out of the She was unhurt, but the wheels of the machine were broken.

(© le Western Newspaper Union.) BIG Matt Donovan backed his twelve-cylinder roadster into the street and straightened her up. Then, for no reason except that he wanted to, he glanced across the street and, behind the chicken coop where you sure enough, there was Mrs. Bailey, told 'em they never, never must!"

of a nice fall morning, a Saturday. Big Matt was a master plumber with his own shop and all, fifty, but spry in spite of the great bulk of him. He lived alone in the big house that he and Mary had worked so hard for, and with Mary gone now two years and his daughter away in some viliage called Green Witch, or something like that, desecrating interiors of rich men's homes, it was plenty lonely. The colored woman who cooked his meals went home right after the dinner dishes were out of the way.

"What's wrong, Mrs. Bailey?" Matt Donovan's was a voice to shake the timbers in a hall, but he held in to a rumble in deference to the lady.

"It's the plumbing. The sink. got a man and he was to have come yesterday and he didn't come, and last night the faucet wouldn't turn clear off, and the drain was clogged and the sink ran over, and I had to get up and mop. The man's here now, but, supposing he didn't know his business? So, I said, I'll just call to Mr. Donovan."

"Sure, sure," said Matt, and pushed by her into the house. "That lad of her's should be able to help his mother by now, but not him-the Little Lord Fauntleroy, with his belted Jacket suit and his dancing lessons! If it weren't for that no-account

In the kitchen, Matt found Jim, a friend and fellow plumber. "I'll be going now," he said to Mrs.

Bailey, then hesitated. "You're all right now with the plumbing and I'll be getting to the shop."

"Yes, of course, and thank you very much, but-" and flushed, and she was pretty when she flushed, very pretty, and so young looking. "I had an appointment with the dentist, and I'm afraid that this has delayed me."

"Sure, sure," boomed Donovan. "Jump into the car and I'll drop you there in no time at all."

On the way Mrs. Bailey talked of her only son, lovingly and proudly, as a mother should.

It was late afternoon when, having bellowed a belligerent "Well" into the receiver, he heard her voice, and he knew at once that she was crying. "Oh, please, Mr. Donovan. Could you come and help me? David hasn't

"The plumber wasn't done when I left, you know, and I didn't want to detain you, and I was late for the dentist, so I just went on and left David there, but he ought to have known that I'd be back. He's twelve, you know. And I got back shortly after noon, and he wasn't here, and I can't locate him anywhere, and I've telephoned and telephoned, and nobody has seen him and-"

They went far in the car-to the dancing school, where David had not been, the teacher said; to the house of a little girl who had no telephone, and the little girl hadn't seen him; to a baseball game in a vacant lot; up and down many streets, inquiring for a small, boy in a belted suit with a green cap. Finally home, to see if the boy had came in their absence.

A raucous blast outside brought them to the door, and they saw a small boy in belted suit with green cap jump from an ancient flivver roadster and leap up the steps.

"Good-by, Jim," he yelled at the man, and then poured words at his mother and Donovan. "Gee, but I had a swell time. Jim-that's the plumber -let me go along with him all day. We were in some of the swellest homes, and the junk plambing in them you'd never believe. We worked right through lunch and Jim gave me a sandwich, but just one, and that's all, and I'm awfully hungry. Did you see Jim's car? It's eight years old and he called her 'Asthma,' but she can go just the same. And I helped him all day and Jim says I'm a dandy helper and next summer when he gets his own shop he's going to hire me and pay me a dollar a day, and I can wipe a joint blready. What do you think of that, mother? I can wipe a Joint already, and next Saturday he's going to show me how to plug a pipe. Gee, but I had a swell time.

Made Lonely Journey

A woman farmer in a lonely part of South Africa, Mrs. Ida Francis, has just shown that in luck and endurance British women settlers are not behind the men.

About two months ago a cyclone devastated her farm, which lies beyond the western fringe of the desolate Kalahari desert; and then came floods which destroyed the food and shelter for her cattle. The only way to save her animals was to drive them 400 miles across the desert to her son's farm, and this she did, unaided.

She found that many of the water holes in the desert had dried up, and sometimes she had to ward off attacks by lions with her rifle; but she kept steadily on, and in the end brought nearly all her charges through safely. -Family Herald.

Origin of Arabian Horse Never Traced

The early history of the Arabian horse is shrouded in that impenetrable veil beyond which investigators have been unable to discover a satisfactory path to knowledge.

Recognizing the thoroughbred as a fixed type of highest quality, resulting from painstaking and careful mating to obtain particular results, many students are agreed that the Arabian might have been originated and perpetuated in the same way, says the National Geographic Magazine. On the other hand, the Arabian and the Barb of northern Africa are so alike, and yet so distinct in every possible way from the ancient horses of the steppes and of the European areas, that admirers of the Arabian and Barb are unwilling to assign them to any

A lifetime devoted to the study has brought the conviction that a large majority of these writings, as fat as examined by me, contained little original matter, and that those which may be regarded as authoritative must be considered in the broad light of recorded history and of scientific discoveries in order to assign a correct value to their conclusions.

The preponderance of evidence favors the belief that the Arabian horses were obtained through Egypt, from Libyan tribes of northern Africa, and that by long and careful mating the superior type of Arabian horse has been maintained through many

What Makes a Hotel Popular?

THE BASIS of popularity of a hotel is satisfying service; and growth comes from the fact that guests not only come back again but also tell others of the good treatment they receive.

Here at the ROWE we endeavor to reader service that is unobtrusive but effective in making our guests comfortable. And we know we are giving values that are not usually associated with the exceptionally low room-rate now in effest.

ALLEGANGOUNTY DAY & NITE FAIR

4 Days and 3 Nights August 25-6-7-8 Allegan Fairgrounds

THE GREATEST OF HORSE RACING

Nearly $3,000.00 in Race Purses

Allegan's reputation for real racing at the county fair will be more than sustained this year. There will be two races Wednesday, three Thursday and three Friday, for purses totalling nearly $3,000. Entries have been received from a record number of drivers, assuring hetly contested races on all three days.

DISPLAYS

Bigger, Better and More Complete at This Fair

Displays at this year's fair promise to be superior to any which have been shown in a good many years.

Every effort is being made to have the agricultural and livestock exhibitions more complete than ever. The fair management is asking every farmer in Allegan County to take an active interest in the displays at this fair. Plans have already been made for the display of the state board of agriculture. This will probably be the greatest display ever shown at an Allegan Fair. In addition to this the Michigan State College will have a fine exhibition, which promises to be highly interesting. Fair officers are sure that the displays at this year's fair will be highly endorsed by everyone who visits the annual exhibition.

Seven Big Free Acts

Free attractions for the 1925 fair will out-shine those of all previous fairs.

The famous Flying Fishers in a great aerial cast act.

The Pallone Trio in a comedy acrobatic act are two of the hrillers.

See the Phunniest Phord on Earth. You will split your sides laughing at this.

Vera Direct, famous race horse who races without a driver.

Lascott's Jockey Girls who will ride jumping horses that perform all sorts of spectacular feats.

All these acts every afternoon, and Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights.

Two Bands Each Day

There will be two big bands on the grounds each and every big day. All of them will be Allegan county bands—your bands, excepting one. The Allegan Odd Fellows band, the Silver Creek Grange band, the Plainwell band, the Wayland band and John Tiefenthal's County Boys' band, together with the famous Press Newsboys' band, will play.

WONDERFUL FIREWORKS

This year's fireworks display is to be even better than that of last year. The fair management has spared no expense in securing the finest display obtainable. On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights these big displays will be shown and will give you something to talk about in the years to come. Contracts signed by the fair management call for marvelous pyrotechnic thrillers. If you see them one night you will want to see them the others.
