The Homecoming

The second annual homecoming of the Cobles Chamber of Commerce proved most successful in every respect, the weather was fine, the program was carried out completely with few exceptions the crowds all that could be desired and no accident marred the occasion.

The ball games were not as even as one would hope for but all teams have their off days and big leagues have one sided victories often.

Promptly on time Friday the band started the event and little time was wasted from them on.

The parade drew 20 entries every one of which was a credit to the entrants and to the community and embraced beauty, business and novelty, and each was well represented. Unfortunately for the judges no provision was made for paizes the separate groups except the novelty section. In this Earl Newcomb and wife recived first prize. Mr. Van Buskirk 2nd and the Osman boys honorable mention. For the rest the judges finally decided to award first to J. L. Clement & Sons, oecond to John Reigle and third to the

Following the parade Congressman Ketchum gave an address and no better man could have have chosen. Mr. Ketch. um always has a message of worth inter-Leo Covey and Levi Camfield spersed with story and anecdote that makes him always popular with his hearers and all will be glad to welcome him again and often.

After dinner the Gobles band entertained until the ball game which was won by Oshtemo. Following this several tried without success, to balance their autos on the teeter.

The general exhibit in the Wise building and the poultry exhibit in Foelsch's building were well worth the visitor's time and won many compliments. The poultry winners are given elsewhere.

The second day's program was com pleted as scheduled and the crowds in creased steadily until nine o'clock in the evening when there was probably the greatest congregation Gobles ever saw and all seemed most happy.

Promptly at seven in the evening the Gobles band played the best concert ever following which the Breedsville band en tertained with several selection which won well merited praise.

The merchandise winners were as follows: Mrs. Charles Kroner, the dresser Isaac Coffinger, the blanket; Mrs. A. Keller, the stop light and Edwin Van Buskirk and Mrs. Guth the groceries.

The tumbling by the team from Kalamazoo proved a good clean act and the boxing was far ahead of the usual, and the Gobles defenders proved a credit to our boys. While no decisions were given had their been Adrian Ryno would not have been the loser in his bout, although the Kalamazoo opponent had the longer reach and no small amount of skill. Carroll Lockhard and Fred Granger were evenly matched and put up a spirited draw.

Homer Smith of course was the featur of the evening and all were pleased to see the man who stayed ten rounds with Firpo and has appeared with all the present day heavies at the larger cities, and it is rather interesting to those who knew them both as boys that Jul Wormeth, who used to beat him well and often as a boy, was chosen as his sparring partner for the evening, and though Jud had discarded the fistic gan e many years ago he stil was able to give his opponent a chance to show his skill.

So the 1925 homecoming closed and w believe that all had a good time which the real purpose of the event.

ILL John Paul Jones be elected this fall to "The Hall of Fame for Great Americans" on University Heights in New York city by the "committee of one hundred eminent citizens"? This great American sea captain failed of election in 1915 and again in 1920. The sketch that follows is not written for the purpose of furthering his election; with that the writer has no concern. Anyway, the claim of John Paul Jones to the claim of John Paul Jones to election is best set forth by this summary of his services by the man himself, found among his papers:

papers:

In 1775 J. Paul Jones armed and embarked in the first American ship of war. In the revolution he had twenty-three battles and solemn recontres by sea, made seven descents on Britain and her colonies, took of her navy two ships of equal and two of superior force, many store-ships and others, caused her to fortify her ports, suffer the Irish volunteers, desist from her cruel burnings in America and exchange as prisoners of war the American citizens taken on the ocean and cast into prison in England as "traitors, pirates and felons."

Toby Paul (Topps) was horn in 1747 in the John Paul (Jones) was born in 1747 in the County of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, the son of a small gardener, John Paul. In 1759 he was apprenticed to a Whitehaven merchant engaged in the American trade, and was sent to sea. He rose rapidly, became a ship owner and by 1773 was making round voyages to the West Indies and to India. He then fell heir to the estate of his brother, William Paul Jones, a Virginia planter, who had been adopted by William Jones. John Paul thereupon added the "Jones" and settled down as a planter in America, "the country of his fond election since the age of thirteen."

The outbreak of the American Revolution found the Colonies without a navy. Congress in December 22, 1775, appointed Esek Hopkins commander in chief, with four captains. Jones was senior first lieutenant. Commander Hopkins went aboard his flagship Alfred (Black Prince, a merchant ship, armed and named for Alfred the Great) in January of 1776 at Philadelphia. Thereupon First Lieutenant Jones hoisted a yellow silk flag with the device of a pine tree and rattlesnake with the motto, "Don't Tread on Me." This was the first flag displayed on an American war vessel. The "Grand Union Flag" was also run up—thirteen stripes with the English union jack in the field.

Lieutenant Jones was soon given command of the Providence, a 12-gun brig. With her he captured 15 prizes. October 10 he was made captain and given the Alfred, a 24-gun ship, and he brought seven prizes into Boston on his first cruise.

Jones was always after congress to carry the war to British waters. Accordingly he was given a general commission as captain in the American navy and ordered to report to the American commissioners in France.

Captain Jones refitted the Ranger at Brest, France, and April 10, 1778, began that cruise of 28 days in British waters, which for daring and success are unsurpassed in the annals of naval history (see map). It was on this cruise that he fired the shipping in Whitehaven and off Carrick-fergus whipped the British 20-gun sloop Drake in a square yardarm and yardarm fight, and made her a prize. Thereupon John Paul Jones became a name of terror throughout the coasts of Great Britain. "Pirate" they called him then—and do in places to this day. Many apocryphal narratives of the life of "Paul Jones, Notorious Pirate" are in existence. As late as 1905 in the journal of the Yorkshire Archeological society appeared a series of letters describing contemporaneous raids with the title, "Paul Jones, Pirate." Well, it was tough—a renegade Scottish gardener's son humbling the pride of the "Mistress of the Seas" in plain sight of England, Ireland and Scotland! However, that's all over now, in these days of "hands across the sea"

As America Sees Him

Captain Jones, upon his return to Brest, asked for a larger and better ship than the Ranger, "crank, slow and of trifling force." The king finally gave him an antiquated India merchant ship, Duc de Duras, which Jones renamed Bonhomme Richard in compliment of Benjamin Franklin. The fleet with which he made his second cruise in British waters comprised Bonhomme Richard; Alliance, 32-gun American frigate; Pallas and Vengeance, converted, merchantmen, and Cerf, 18-gun cutter. Jones wrote Franklin that the Richard was too old to be much use, but that he would attempt "an essential service to render myself worthy of a better and faster sailing ship." He also wrote Franklin that Capt. Pierre Landais of the Alliance was apparently a crazy man. He was a French officer and his crew was nondescript, with few Americans in it.

The squadron sailed from France August 14, 1779. By September 22 it had nearly completed the circuit of the British isles (see map), had captured 17 vessels and thrown the entire coast into the wildest alarm. "The pirate Jones, a rebel subject and criminal of the state," was its commander's standing with the British authorities.

Then suddenly, with the Richard, Alliance and Pallas in company off Flamborough Head, appeared around the promontory a fleet of 42 sail—merchantmen convoyed by the 44-gun frigate Serapis, Captain Pearson and the Countess of Scarborough, about the equal of the Pallas. The merchantmen scattered, the Richard and Pallas headed for the enemy and the Alliance drew off to a distance. Then followed what is probably the most remarkable naval combat in history.

Features of the murderous fight between the Richard and Serapis, from 7 to 10:30 p.m., include these: The fighting was at half pistol-shot. At the first broadside two of the 18-pounders of the Richard burst, killing their crews; the other four were thereupon abandoned. In 45 minutes the Richard's fourteen 12-pounders were disabled and she was fighting with three 9-pounders. The moon came up. Jones ran his ship alongside the enemy to poard. "Have you struck your colors?" hailed Pearson. "I have not yet begun to fight," answered Jones. The Americans lashed the ships together, bow and stern. The 18-pounders of the Serapis made matchwood of the Richard's hull. The Americans transferred their fight to the deck and rigging. An American grenade exploded a pile of ammunition on the deck of the Serapis, killing and wounding 38. The Americans prepared to board.

Irish Sea Cruise

econd Cruise in British Waters

At this precise moment the Alliance drew close and poured several full broadsides into the Richard, killing many. She then drew off. The Richard was now on fire near her magazine and sinking. Jones released several hundred British prisoners and made them pump and fight the fire. Finally Pearson hauled down his flag. Nearly half of both crews had been killed and wounded. The Richard quickly sank.

Jones then sailed into the Texel in Holland with the Serapis, the Countess (captured by the Pallas) and his prizes. December 22, 1779, Holland asked Jones to leave. He sailed the Alliance boldly out of port in broad daylight, escaped the British blockading fleet, ran down the English channel and arrived safely in France. Captain Jones was welcomed with enthusiasm.

The king gave him a gold sword and made him a Chevaller of France. Landais was dismissed from the navy and ordered to leave the country. Jones reached Philadelphia February 18 1781. Congress tendered him a vote of thanks and gave him command of the new 74-gun ship America, then nearly completed. The Revolution was over before Jones could again get to sea.

The restless spirit of John Paul Jones then led him to seek naval service with Russia. He became a rear admiral and one of his brilliant exploits was the defeat of the Turkish navy at the battle of the Liman (1788). He quit the service because of intrigues and went to Paris, where he interested himself in the French revolution. In 1792 he was appointed American consul to Algiers, but died in Paris July 18, 1792.

The new Republic then promptly forgot all about John Paul Jones for more than a hundred years. In 1905 Ambassador Horace Porter found his body, after a long search, in the old St. Louis cemetery for foreign Protestants. His body was convoyed to the United States by an American naval squadron especially sent for the purpose. It was interred with ceremony at Annapolis. During President Taft's administration a $50,000 statue (herewith reproduced) was unveiled in Potomac park, Washington,

Permanent roads are a good investment —not an expense

One Horse Town, Good-Bye!

Any community whose streets are not durably paved is going to be known as a "one horse town."

When that time arrives, Prosperity says, "Good-bye, old friend. Good-bye!"

People start moving away. Bank deposits fall off. Business in general begins to take a slump, and the place is no longer "on the map."

Contrast all this with the city that is well paved.

It steadily forges ahead over its hard, even streets. Automobiles, busses and delivery trucks, operate efficiently and economically, regardless of season or weather.

Business is good, and keeps getting better. Modern, fire-safe buildings spring up. New industries are attracted to town. Plants and factories are working full time. Trade at the stores is brisk, and everybody's busy.

In short, permanently paved streets and roads are one of the very best investments any community can make. You can enjoy the tonic effect of well paved streets by helping your local authorities to find ways and means to build more of them.

to Prevent Smut

Powdered Copper Carbonate Can Be Applied by the Farmer at Any Time.

A method of seed treatment to prevent tunt or stinking smut in wheat where the fungicide is applied dry has been found which not only permits the treating of the seed dry, but at the same time does not destroy any of the viability of seed. It also prevents infection of the seed in the soil. This method enables the farmer to treat his seed wheat during slack time and have it ready when needed. The fungicide used is powdered copper carbonate.

Fairly Pure Material. Copper carbonate used should be fairly pure containing more than 50 per cent copper. It is a fine dry powder, light green in color, never blue unless impure. It is not soluble in water so does not get sticky when on grain in storage. It should be very fine, 99 per cent should pass through a 200-mesh screen.

This powdered copper carbonate is dusted on the wheat seed. Being a very fine dust it adheres to the seed, giving a thin coating of the fungicide that prevents infection from the smut rate of two ounces of good copper carbonate to the bushel of clean seed mately one ounce. There are machines available on the market or home-made contrivances can be used.

Treat Seed in Open. When treating seed with this method it should be done in the open, or the operator should wear a dust mask or wet sponge over his mouth and nose, as the copper carbonate dust will cause nausea if it gets into the throat.

Seed treated with copper carbonate can be stored after treating. The dust does not absorb water, nor does lt injure the seed. Seed so treated is not swelled and no allowance needs to be made at drilling time for swelling. In fact, due to increased viability caused by this treatment, less seed than normal should be used .-Waldo Kidder, Extension Agronomist, Colorado Agricultural College.

Chicken Mites Numerous

During the Hot Season

The summer time brings with it our greatest trouble with chicken mites. If they once get a start it is usually a long fight to get the best of them. They can be prevented in getting a start, however, with regular spraying of the poultry house once a week. Any rood contact sprays such as the various sheep dips, crude oil, a mixture of carbolic acid and kerosene, or any of the coal tar products are good. The solution you buy in the can is usually designated as a stock solution. In making up a spray mixture for mites 3 per cent or three parts of this stock solution is used to 97 per cent or 97 parts of water. This strength is sufficient to keep down mites. If the mites once get a start it may be necessary to use as strong as 10 per cent solution.

Ducks Are Much Unlike

The Rouen duck is the most beautiful of all ducks, and the dark Muscovy next handsomest. The latter are of blue body, green back, white tail, white band about the neck, deep red face and yellow legs, and both sexes are alike. But the Rouen, male and female, are distinctly unlike. The duck is a bright red and brown, feathers penciled evenly with black, red bill, and two transverse stripes of white and black on the wings. The drake has a green head and bill, a white neck band, brown breast, blue underbody, green back, white tail, bars of white, black and brown on under tip of wings, with reddish yellow feet.

Best Feed for Hogs

Pigs turned on soy beans when the oods are filled receive sufficient protein without the addition of a supplement. Permanent pasture is not in the same class with rape, rye or soy beans, but is much better than no pasture. Lespedeza is one of the clovers and is a splendid pasture while it lasts. It is possible to have pasture every month in the year and this system is necessary for the most economical pork production.

Cost of Screening Barn

The cost of screening the barn is more than paid for by the increased production. When the cows are free from flies they can devote their energy to production. If screening cannot be done, spraying with some cheap but effective fly repellent should precede the milking process, whenever possible. Care should be taken, however, not to get any of the spray into the milk, because of the disagreeable odor and taste it will impart.

Care and Feed for Calf

An important thing is to keep the buckets or other utensils from which the calf is fed scrupulously clean at all times. The calf bucket should be washed daily. If it is allowed to get sour, scours are almost sure to follow. After weaning, grain feeding should be continued. Three or four pounds of a good grain mixture will keep it in fine condition until it is a vear old and a little more grain should be fed the second year.

Seed Corn Pointers for Improving Crop

Best to Make Selections From Vigorous Stalks.

If you wish to keep your corn in a constant state of improvement, the thing to do is to select for vigor without close attention for score card type.

That is the new word, based on years of careful study and experiment at the Minnesota experiment station, University farm, St. Paul.

For several years the Minnesota experiment station has carried on activities designed to encourage the selection of seed corn from the standing stalks in the field before frost time in the fall. The idea was to get early maturing corn from vigorous plants. But now comes H. K. Hayes, plant breeder of the division of agronomy and farm management with a new bulletin, No. 210 of the Minnesota experiment station series, "Methods of Corn-Breeding," which among other things

"Corn should be selected from perfect-stand hills and from vigorous healthy stalks. Plants which are green when the ear approaches maturity insure normal maturity of the

"Close selection for ear type leads to a reduction in yielding ability. For this reason no close selection for ear type should be made."

This is no very striking change of viewpoint, except that too much emphasis has been placed on score card ear type and not enough on vigor. Mr. Haves' experiments indicate clearly that vigor has first claim on the seed selecter's attention.

Sudan Grass Excellent

as Stock Pasture Crop

Summer pasture crops, especially on the dry lands, are quite necessary for the best milk production and for growing animals, say successful live-stock farmers. Experience has shown the value of pasture crops to the stock and also the fact that pasture crops produce an abundance of excellent feed. They save labor and build up the soil.

For summer pasture on dry or irrigated lands, sudan grass is good. It may be planted in rows or in drills. It should be seeded now and will make late summer and early fall pasture. Seed used should be pure sudan, with no cane mixture. From four to ten pounds of seed per acre is used on dry lands, depending on whether it is rowed or drilled in. Fifteen to twenty pounds is seeded under irrigated conditions and drilled in. Start pasturing when five or six inches high and keep pastured close.

Such pastures are carrying from three-fourths of a head to one head per acre of mature cattle on dry lands and from one and a half to two head of cattle per acre under irrigation. With such a carrying capacity it becomes one of our best feed producers as well as furnishing fine quality of feed.-Waldo Kidder, Extension Serv ice, Colorado Agricultural college.

Self-Feeder Saves Money

A hog is a queer critter. He will grow fast and thrive if he knows he can get all the food he wants, and all the clean water he needs when he wants it. If he doesn't get it right then he begins to squeal and worry and run off his flesh. The self-feeder gives every hog all the time he needs to fill up as often as his appetite will permit. Being contented and peaceful he eats and sleeps and grunts and eats some more and grows into money.

Deep cultivation of cabbage cuts too many roots:

Carrots, cabbage and sprouted oats help make strong chicks.

It is more important for the farmer to keep his eye on cost of production than on the market. A sweet clover crop plowed under will add from 15 to 25 bushels of corn per acre the following year. Mites and lice seem to enjoy hot weather, for this is the season when they thrive best and multiply most rapidly. Sweet clover is perhaps a more rapid soil builder than alfalfa but the former, in addition to improving the soil, makes the best hay crop that can be grown.

Alfalfa plantings in western New York last spring show that stands without a nurse crop sowed in June after the soil had been well cultivated are now the best.

Turkeys are a great help on any farm in keeping down insects of all kinds. They can almost find their entire living in the fields and pastures without bothering the grain crops.

Using acid phosphate does not increase the lime needs of the soil; on the other hand, liberal applications have been found to lessen the amount of time needed for clover and alfalfa.

Regular changing of pasture of sheep prevents stomch worms. It is not practical to feed them worm medicine. The above method is used by practically all experienced sheep men.

CLEANLINESS WITH MILK IS ESSENTIAL

In order to prevent the contamination of milk and cream with foreign odors and flavors it is necessary to start with the milking operation. The successful producer of good-quality cream develops a system of handling the dairy herd and cream, and each operation in this system is carried out to the letter at every milking. The following way to produce clean milk is suggested:

The cow must be healthful, free from tuberculosis and udder dis-

She must be kept in clean surroundings. The dairy barn should be so con structed that it can be thoroughly cleaned. The manure should be removed a least once each day, and it should be carried to the fields direct or to a manure pit some distance from the

The cow should be groomed before each milking in order to prevent any loose hair, manure, or foreign material from falling into the milk pail at milking time. The udder should be washed with clean water and dried before milking begins.

The mifker should wear clean clothing and should wash his hands thoroughly with soap before starting to Milking should be done with dry hands. The habit of wet-hand milking does not make it easier and cer tainly is a filthy habit.

Milking should be done in smalltop pail, which will greatly reduce the possibility of foreign material getting into the milk at milking time.

As soon as each cow is milked, the milk should be carried to the milk room, where it should be weighed and strained through a suitable cloth The ordinary wire strainer strainer. is not effective in removving dirt from milk. A strainer using two or more thicknesses of filter cloth is much more efficient. The strainer cloth used should be clean and sterilized with live steam.

Milk as it comes from the cow's udder is free from dirt. Any hair, bedding, particles of manure or dust that are subsequently found in the milk come from careless milking practice, dirty cows or careless handling of the milk after it is produced. This foreign matter when once it gains entrance into milk carries quantities of bacteria and many taints and bad odors which cannot be removed. The only method to use to prevent such effects is to produce the milk clean. keep it or the cream produced from it clean, cool immediately and thoroughly, then keep cool. Any foreign matter that may get into the milk, and it is a fact that some will even with skillful handling, should be strained out immedaitely to prevent as many of the bad effects as possible.

Electrical Discharges

Cause Souring of Milk? Do you believe that thunderstorms cause milk to sour? It is generally believed they do. The souring of the milk is generally attributed to the electrical action between clouds, which is responsible for the lightning associated with thunderstorms. There is no relationship between these electrical discharges and the souring of milk. Some authorities report that electricity will destroy bacteria or retard their growth. In such cases electrical action would cause the milk to keep longer.

Souring of milk is caused by a growth of bacteria which feed upon the milk sugar and convert it into an acid when the milk is held at a warm temperature. The acid sours the milk.

It is believed that the temperature conditions immediately preceding a thunderstorm cause the souring of milk. Thunderstorms usually follow a period of hot, humid weather. The heat and humidity cause the refrigerators, cellars and cooling tanks to warm up. The milk is also warmed up, stimulating a rapid growth of bacteria, which really causes the milk to sour .- E. H. Parfitt, Purdue University.

Water for Calves

The importance of watering calves is emphasized by a recent test. Two lots of calves were fed liberal allowances of skim milk, clover hay and the grain mixture of corn, oats, bran and oil meal. One lot was given all the water it would drink twice daily, while the other had no water. The calves given the additional water gained at the rate of 1.86 pounds per head daily, while those given no extra water gained but 1.32 pounds daily.

Cause of Stringy Milk

Stringy milk is caused by inflamed glands in the udder. Incomplete milking is one of the most common causes. The udder must be milked clean regularly and then the danger of inflammation will be greatly reduced. Inflammation may also be caused by iniury and sometimes it occurs without any noticeable cause. Treatment consists of removing the inflammation and this is done by gently massaging the udder and the application of hot cloths is also beneficial.

BRITISH EXECUTE 7 FOR KILLING STACK

Prominent Egyptian Lawyer Battles With Guards on Scaffold at Cairo.

Cairo, Egypt.—Execution of seven men convicted of the murder of Sir Lee Stack, governor general of the Sudan, took place here. They were hanged at intervals of forty-five min-

The death sentence imposed upon Abdul Fattah Enayat was commuted to life imprisonment.

Shafik Mansour, prominent lawyer and member of the Egyptian chamber of deputies, whose role, as revealed at the trial, consisted in remaining in the background and instigating and remunerating the actual murderers, did not bear up with the fatalistic fortitude of his comrades, however. After the guards had pinioned his arms to lead him from his cell, Shafik renewed his wild struggles and actually burst his bonds in an effort to free

Hopes that Mahmoud Ismael, believed to have been the organizer of several big political crimes, might break the silence which he maintained throughout the trial proved illusory. Ismael protested his innocence to the end and met his death with a smile, hurling jests at the warders as they led the men to the scaffold.

MOOR TRIBE QUITS WAR AGAINST FRENCH

Sacrifices Five Bulls as Mark of Surrender.

Fez, French Morocco. Five bulls were hamstrung and killed before General Simon and his staff as a mark of surrender of 300 men, women, and children of the Oulez tribe to the r'rench army.

Submission of Moroccan tribes usually is accompanied by flamboyant ceremony and fantastic native rites. The Oulez, an important faction of the larger Tsoul tribe, arrived at the French post at Oued Amelil, accompanied by their families and led by a venerable white bearded caid. They had had a long, tedious journey.

The caid explained the Oulez loved France because the French had rescued Morocco from anarchy and had given them great prosperity. He bowed low before General Simon and asked the benedictions of Allah to descend on him. Then the caid's family knelt on their carpets and prayed. Others followed them to their knees. With his face in the dust, the caid spoke as follows: "For us the bull is the symbol of strength and courage. In order to prove to you that we consider ourselves vanquished we will sacrifice five bulls in your presence, cutting the muscles of their legs before killing them. "You are stronger than we. We have our leg muscles cut, our hands cut; but we know your kindness. You won't kill us, won't sacrifice us to your vengeance. France is not vengeful. Peace be with thee."

Then, with one gesture, the men threw their rifles and cartridges to the ground and departed. Each family was fined 100 francs.

Fez.—Preparations for a general offensive against the Moorish tribesnen have been completed.

Meanwhile cleaning up operations by the French continue.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

THE RETURN OF THE COL-LEGE BRED

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK

THERE is a wide difference between what we actually teach people in college, or anywhere else for that matter, and what we think we teach them. My first experience illustrates the point to my own satisfaction at least. The exact subject I was presenting does not matter; it was only the fact that I thought I was interesting my students, that I was putting certain literary facts clearly and forcefully before them, that I was actually giving them something definite and specific. I was really proud of the manner in which I was carrying it off—that is, I was until I read my first final examination papers; then I revised my mental attitude toward my talents as an instructor. No one really passed the examination. Possibly I had conveyed to them some sort of information—they often tell me I was a good teacherbut it was certainly not the things that I had imagined I was teaching. I believe this result is not an uncommon one. Last summer near the regular time of the return of the college student to his old home town, I visited in the village in which I had spent my childhood. Most of the young people who graduate from the local high school go off to college, and most of these who go off ultimately come back-some of them, sad to say, somewhat sooner than their friends anticipate. I was down at the station when Bob Lord returned from a short stay at Michigan. He was dragging a reluctant bull pup by a chain, he was carrying a heavy golf bag resplendent in the tartan of the McGregors or some other Scotch clan, and he was gotten up in togs of a cut and color never before seen on the streets of that town. There was not a golf links within fifteen miles, or a dog fancier in the county, so that what Bob brought home from college was likely to do him litfle good at home.

A few days later George Fosbenner blew in from Northwestern lugging a zylophone and a ukelele. From ten in the morning when George got up, until midnight or later when he went to rest, the strains of the latest ragtime could be heard welling from the Fosbenner front porch. It had been currently reported by George's mother that he had been perfecting himself along commercial lines at college and that he had done well in his studies, but his

Over on the Klein piazza, cool, freshly dressed, and comfortably curled up in an easy chair, I could see Marie, lately returned from the State university where her brother told me she was taking domestic science, but now with a copy of Ibsen or the latest magazine in her hand, she was cultivating her literary tastes or perhaps just enjoying herself. No one has servants in my native town, so I could infer with a certainty that Marie's mother was out in the hot kitchen washing the breakfast dishes or stirring up some thing good for luncheon. Marie's domestic science was theory only-she shyed a little at the practice, and let mother do the work.

I had occasion one day to drive out into the country, and in my wanderings I encountered Sam Warren. Sam had been registered in the State Agricultural college, but he had not been thought by any means the brightest boy in his class. In fact Sam's college record if judged by the grades recorded in the registrar's books would have pointed pretty clearly to the fact that Sam was a "bonehead." He had been out of college now two years and had time to turn such information and training as he had acquired to some practical purpose.

The Warren farm had been worked for a long time; the soil was impoverished and the buildings had begun to look pretty dilapidated when Sam went to college. A first glance now would show that there had been a complete regeneration. The fences were as trim as they could be made; the buildings were shining with fresh paint, and everything about the place was neat and orderly. There were fields of alfalfa and clover; sheep were grazing in the pasture; there was modern machinery everywhere; and it was plain to see from the healthy grain and cornfields that somebody had been giving attention to the soil.

I found on inquiry that Sam had not only revolutionized things on his own farm, but that he was looked upon as a regular oracle by the neighbors who took his advice and followed his methods.

I am not railing against a college education. I believe in it strongly The only thing I meant to say in these few paragraphs is that you can't al ways tell what a man is going to bring home from college. Sam Warren was undeniably the dullest of the four students referred to: he would have admitted it himself; and yet he had learned more in his two years of col

Finally Compelled to Make War on Pigeons

Wild pigeons have multiplied in Oslo to such great numbers that they are now a public nuisance. The people have been kind to them and given them food, and from their nests under the eaves of the houses they swarm the streets. One of the worst evils which they have brought with them is the insect nuisance. Millions of insect eggs, brought to the roofs by the pigeons and hatched out in the nests, invade the houses and have become a veritable pest. The medical authorities have requested the people to kill every pigeon coming in their way and have urgently appealed that no more food be given the birds. The women's society for the protection of animals protested against this appeal, maintaining that "it is immoral to starve dumb beasts." Having been convinced, however, that the birds are capable of finding their food themselves the society has ended its opposition and from now on the war on the pigeons will go on in earnest.

CHAPTER I

-1-In Which Things Happen Near Barking Creek

The wind howled dismally round a house standing by itself almost on the shores of Barking creek.

The house seemed deserted. Every window was shuttered; the garden was uncared for and a mass of weeds; the gate leading on to the road, apparently feeling the need of a deficient top hinge, propped itself drunkenly on what once had been a flower-bed. A few gloomy trees swaying dismally in the wind surrounded the house and completed the picture-one that would have caused even the least imaginative of men to draw his coat a little tighter round him, and feel thankful that it was not his fate to live in such a place.

But then few people ever came near enough to the house to realize its sinister appearance. The road—it was little better than a cart track-which passed the gate, was out of the beaten way; only an occasional fisherman or farm laborer ever used it, and that generally by day when things assumed their proper proportion, and it was merely an empty house gradually falling to pieces through lack of attention. At night they avoided it if possible; folks did say that twelve years ago some prying explorer had found the bones of a skeleton lying on the floor in one of the upstairs rooms with m mildewed rope fixed to one of the beams in the ceiling. And then it had been empty for twenty years.

Even now when the wind lay in the east or northeast and the tide was setyou could see a light shining through the cracks in the shutters in that room upstairs, and that, should a man climb up and look in, he'd see no skeleton, but a body with purple face and staring eyes swinging gently to and fro, and tied by the neck to a beam with a rope which showed no trace of mildew. Ridiculous, of course; but then so many of these local superstitions are. Useful, too, in some cases; they afford a privacy from the prying attentions of local gossips far more cheaply and effectively than high walls and bolts and bars.

So, at any rate, one of the two men who were walking briskly along the rough track seemed to think.

"Admirable," he remarked, as he paused for a moment at the entrance of the weed-grown drive. "Quite admirable, my friend. A house situated as this one is, is an acquisition, and when it is haunted in addition it becomes a godsend."

He spoke English perfectly with a slight foreign accent, and his companion nodded abruptly.

"From what I heard about it I thought it would do," he answered. "Personally I think it's a damnable spot, but since you were so set against coming to London, I had to find somewhere in this neighborhood."

"I will explain my reasons in due course," said the first speaker shortly. You may take it from me that they were good. What's that?"

He swung round with a little gasp, clutching his companion's arm.

"Nothing," cried the other irritably. For a moment or two they stood still, peering into the dark undergrowth.

"What did you think it was?" "I thought I heard a bush creaking as if—as if someone was moving," he said, relaxing his grip. "It must have been the wind, I suppose." He still peered fearfully into the gloomy garden, until the other man dragged him roughly toward the house. "Of course it was the wind," he muttered angrily. "For heaven's sake, Zaboleff, don't get the jumps. If you will insist on coming to an infernal place like this to transact a little perfectly normal business you must expect a few strange noises and sounds. Let's get indoors; the others should be here by now. It oughtn't to take more than an hour, and you can be on board again long before dawn."

Zaboleff ceased looking over his shoulder, and followed the other through a broken-down lattice-gate to the rear of the house. They paused in front of the back door, and on it the leader knocked three times in a peculiar way. It was obviously a prearranged signal, for almost at once stealthy steps could be heard coming along the passage inside. The door was cautiously pulled back a few inches, and a man peered out, only to throw it open wide with a faint sigh of relief.

"It's you, Mr. Waldock, is it?" he muttered. "Glad you've got 'ere at last. This place is fair giving us all the 'ump."

"Evening, Jim." He stepped insid followed by Zaboleff, and the door closed behind them. "Our friend's boat was a little late. Is everyone here?

"Yep," answered the other. "All the six of us. And I reckons we'd like to get it over as soon as possible. Has he"-his "sice sank to a hoarse undertone-"has he brought the money?"

"You'll all hear in good time," said Waldock curtly. "Which is the room?" "'Ere it is, guv'nor." Jim flung open a door. "And you'll 'ave to sit on the floor, as the chairs ain't safe."

Two candles guttered on a square table in the center of the room, showing up the faces of the five men who sat on the floor, leaning against the walls. Three of them were nondescript specimens of humanity of the type that may be seen by the thouasnd hurrying into the city by the early business trains. They were representative of the poorer type of clerk. And information is correct we are up yet to the close observer something more might be read on their faces: a greedy, hungry look, a shifty, antrustworthy look—the look of those who and utterly ruthless; a body of men are jealous of everyone better placed than themselves, but who are inca-

It was Jim who broke the silence-Flash Jim, to give him the full name to which he answered in the haunts he frequented. "Wot abaht getting on with it, guv'nor?" he remarked with an attempt at insistent on one point. It concerned a genial smile. "This 'ere 'ouse ain't | the leader of the gang, who he afwot I'd choose for a bloomin' 'oney-

With an abrupt gesture Waldock silenced him and advanced to the

"This is Mr. Zaboleff, gentlemen," he said quietly. "We are a little late, I am afraid, but it was unavoidable, He will explain to you now the reaso.. why you were asked to come here, and not meet at our usual rendezvous in Soho."

He stepped back a couple of paces and Zaboleff took his place. For a moment or two he glanced round at the faces turned expectantly toward him; then resting his two hands on the table in front of him, he leane forward toward them.

"Gentlemen," he began, and the foreign accent seemed a little more pronounced, "I have asked you to come here tonight through my good friend, Mr. Waldock, because it has come to our ears-no matter how-that London is no longer a safe meeting place. Two or three things have occurred fately the sigfinicance of which it is impossible to disregard. Our chief, with whom I spent last evening, is seriously concerned about these things."

"You spent last night with the chief?" said Waldock, and his voice held a tremor of excitement, while the others leaned forward eagerly. "Is he, then, in Holland?"

"He was at six o'clock yesterday evening," answered Zaboleff with a faint smile. "Today-new-I know no more than you where he is."

"Who is he—this man we're always hearing about and never seeing?" demanded one of the three clerks aggres-

"He is-the Chief," replied the other, while his eyes seemed to bore into the speaker's brain. "Just thatand no more. And that is quite enough for you." His glance traveled round the room, and his audience relaxed. "By the way, is not that a chink in the shutter there?"

"All the safer," grunted Flash Jim. 'Anyone passing will think the ghost

"Stow it, Jim," snarled Waldock furiously. "Anyone would think you wanted a nurse."

"Gentlemen—please." Zaboleff held up a protesting hand. "We do not want to prolong matters, but one or two explanations are necessary. To return, then, to these things that have happened recently, and which necessitated a fresh rendezvous for this evening-one which our friend Mr. Waldock so obligingly found. Three messengers sent over during the last three weeks bearing instructions and-what is more important-money, have disappeared."

"Disappeared?" echoed Waldock stupidly.

"Absolutely and completely. Money and all. Two more have been abominably ill-treated and had their money taken from them, but for some reason they were allowed to go free themselves. It is from them that we have obtained our information."

"Blimey!" muttered Flash Jim; "is it the police?"

"It is not the police, which is what makes it so much more serious," answered Zaboleff quietly, and Flash Jim breathed a sigh of relief. "It is easy to keep within the law, but if our against a body of men who are not within the law themselves. A body of men who are absolutely unscrupulous who appear to know our secret plans as well as we do ourselves. "Have you any information with regard to this gang?" It was the Jew who had closed the chink in the

"None of any use—save that they are masked in black, and cloaked in long black cloaks." He paused moment as if to collect his thoughts. "They are all armed, and Petrovitch -who escaped from them-was very firmed was a man of the most gigantic physical strength; a giant powerful as two ordinary strong men. He said . . . Ah! Mein Gott-!"

His voice rose to a scream as he cowered back, while the others, with terror on their faces, rose hurriedly and huddled together in the corners of the room.

Here's mystery the very first thing—one gang of desperadoes beset by another gang equally mysterious and dangerous!

Recognized Jokes

The Scots are making an effort to stop the hoary old joke that they never spend any money. Scientists who have gone into the antiquity of jokes and made a study of the subject say that there are only about six original examples and that all humor is based on them. Old jokes come back into style or else appear wearing new habiliments. Excursions into new fields sometimes are dangerous and unprofitable. The plumber joke may not have been one of the early sextet, but it has been a favorite not only with the almanacs, but with the comic strippers and the higher class weekly funny magazines. If the plumber joke has to go, the joke writers merely will understand that they have one less subject upon which to work.

Squirrel Pest

Despite his pretty appearance and amusing ways, the common red squirrel is said to be one of the most destructive pests found in the woods today. Ornithologists claim that his depredations among birds rank second only to those of the hunting cat, and that he not only kills young birds, as does the cat, but he will destroy the eggs before they are hatched. Around farm buildings he is considered a nuisance because of his propensity for chewing a hole through some building which he has selected as a likely place ts store his winter's supply of food.

Nature Embossed

Carved Initials

An American beech tree was cut down about one mile north of Morrisville, Pa. On splitting a section of this tree into firewood a remarkable work of nature was brought to light.

On one of the pieces of wood were plainly embossed the initials "A. J. D., J. E. D., 1839," and on the other piece were letters and figures exactly corresponding to the embossed ones, says Nature Magazine. A careful examination shows that the tree must have been about sixty-seven years old when the initials were cut. The embossed part was nearest to the bark.

It is supposed that the tree, in growing, gradually overgrew the part with the initials cut in it, when its tissue was pressed into the mold-like initials, forming genuinely embossed letters and numerals. Who has a better explanation? What a story of love or fromance! The sections of wood are owned by Henry Moon of Morrisville, Pa.

Won the Medal

The, announcement that President Coolidge was going to spend the summer at Swampscott, Mass., recalled to Kit Cormac, Universal's cross-word puzzle champion, that she used to be a school teacher there, and brought back the recollection of a funny experience.

She was teaching the Odyssey and asked a young Swampscotter what a harpy was. He replied:

"A harpy is a monster with a face like a woman, only more horrible."-Los Angeles Times.

Not to Blame

Surgeon General Ireland of the War department was discussing the reformation of drug victims.

"To reform these people is a difficult thing," he said. "Whenever I look at a collection of drug victims, with their sensual mouths and weak chins, I can't help thinking of the Chinese proverb:

'Rotten wood can't be carved.'"
