Anyone wishing to comply with Uncle's request are invited to leave their supply of small bills at The News office and proper credit will be given. Do it today.

Representative Darin, who was responsible for the new law requiring five days to get a marriage license, went to Buffalo to get his license and get married. Through his efforts Michigan people are deprived of the privilege which he could get in New York. Such representation may be what the people want but his conduct in the matter must awake many to the realization of the fact that the law is a huge joke and no credit to its sponsor or the state.

Michigan, Our Michigan

Being the beginning of a series of items about our state, which is aimed to give our readers stirring reminders of its great advantages, present and future possibilities.

In this we hope to combine facts, conditions and visions in a way that will hold our readers' interest to the end and to do this we must necessarily copy much from many sources including reports from state departments, state manuals and history.

The aim is to help sell Michigan to Michigan people in such a manner that they may sincerely sell it to others that many may be benefited. With this in mind we are reversing the general in dealings in the future first, later to strengthen these with facts from the present and history.

Many things herein may appeal to an outsider as elaborate boasting but we give it as we see it and as it is, in the spirit of boosting not boasting and in this spirit we want our readers to receive and believe.

Situated between two of our nation's four largest cities and within but a few hours driving on paved ways to either, with many large industrial centers within our borders, Michigan is most exceptionally placed and local commodities find a ready outlet to nearby consumers and 31 lake ports and railway facilities give the best of transportation service for all surplus, and also make it easy to obtain the outside luxuries desired.

With the prospective deepening of the shallow channels along the St. Lawrence river to float all ocean going boats the nation's coast line is doubled and Michigan will be nearer Liverpool than New York City and these lake ports become ocean ports at which one may load to and from all world ports. This is yet on paper but Yankee enterprise is demanding it and that means it is sure to come. May we all live to see it.

The central location and natural advantages make Michigan the goal for pleasure seekers and she is now recognized as the summer playground of the nation, and summer playing is the only one that the masses will ever be able to enjoy to a great extent.

Next week will appear facts of the present state of Michigan's greatness in agricultural lines.

County Sunday School Convention

The Sunday School workers of Van Buren county who meet at the Hartford Methodist church in their annual convention, Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 21 and 22, will have one of the strongest programs ever prepared in the history of the organization.

Owing to the fact that the state convention is this year to be held in Detroit, which makes it improbable that very many of the local workers will be able to attend, the program committee has endeavored to secure an exceptional array of outside talent for the main addresses. Among these already secured are Miss Irene Rockenback of Lansing, State Specialist in Children's Work; Prof. W. W. Whitehouse of Albion College; Prof. S. C. Nettinga of Hope College; Pres. Allan Hoben of Kalamazoo College.

In addition to these it is hoped to secure a specialist in Young People's work of national experience. All who are interested in Religious Education are urged to set aside the above dates and avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing these noted educators.

The Methodist Church

The following is from the mind and pen of Edgar A. Guest. "To live each day as though I may never see the morrow come; to be strict with myself, but patient and lenient with others; to give the advantage but never to ask for it; to be kindly to all, but kindlier to the less fortunate; to respect all honest employment; to remember always that my life is made easier and better by the service of others and be grateful; to keep faith with God, my fellowmen and my country."

These good thoughts are worth close pondering. We fully subscribe to them. The newly appointed District Superintendent, Rev. R. E. Meader will be here Thursday afternoon and evening. All the official members should be present and any others who can come are invited. Let us get acquainted with Mr. Meader.

Ask Dad— See If He Knows

Father and mother are always thinking of your welfare—there isn't a thing within reason they wouldn't do for you.

But they may unknowingly have been risking your life every day.

When you are at dinner tonight with dad, ask him this question:

"Dad, is our school firesafe?"

Perhaps he won't be able to answer—he may not know.

Ask dad if he knows that somewhere in the country a schoolhouse burns every day. Ask him if he knows that one-third of all the schoolhouses in the country are nothing better than firetraps—maybe your school is one of them.

Of course dad knows that buildings can be built that will not burn. They are being built everywhere, every day.

If your school is firesafe, you're lucky. If it isn't, ask dad what he is going to do about it. You have a right to know.

The highest type of firesafe construction is concrete. Our illustrated booklet "Concrete Schoolhouses" contains a wealth of information on firesafe construction with which every parent ought to be familiar. Write today for your free copy.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

QUARRELS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK

PAYTON and his wife had quarreled a little that morning, and all the day they had been unhappy as a consequence. They had been married a good long time, and had come to depend upon each other more than is ordinarily true of married people. They loved each other very dearly, and still told each other so, though, as I have said, they had been married for a long time.

It was a foolish little quarrel that they had had. She had criticized him at the breakfast table for the way in which he was using his napkin or some such carelessness, and he, more sensitive than most men, had answered back rather sharply, and so they had quarreled. He might have turned it off with a laugh, as he often did, or she might have smiled back at his quick retort and kissed him after breakfast as was her custom, but instead her eyes filled with tears, and she left the table hastily with him feeling the aggrieved rather than the aggressor. All day they had gone about unhappy, each one too proud or too much hurt to patch up the foolish quarrel.

The years were going for Payton and his wife. They knew very well that the time they had been together was longer than the time they could hope to be, and they regretted the swiftness of the passing years. They knew that the time would come when one would go and there would be only one left, and they knew how dreary it would all be, how, as one or the other sat alone, he would think back to these foolish days and regret each moment they had not spent in happiness together. And yet they had quarreled, quarreled over a trifling thing that did not matter either way, and they had lost out of their life together one day that might have been full of happy thoughts, of sweet associations, and left to both of them pleasant memories.

They saw how foolish it is for those who love each other to take offense even at hasty, unkind words, for usually no unkindness is really meant, and those who love each other will never have too many days together and should have on these, if possible, nothing to regret.

Quarrels there must be perhaps, but they should be between those who do not love each other, who do not understand each other, whose paths cross so seldom that the quarrel interrupts no close association, breaks no friendship, leaves no haunting regrets. Friends cannot afford to quarrel—life is too short, the period of friendship and love is all too brief to permit even a day or an hour to interrupt its even way. It is better to ignore the hasty word, to adjust the misunderstanding at once, and to be happy while the days last. Quarrels only make us unhappy.

OLD BOOKS HAVE NOT LOST CHARM

Although attics are quite passe in these days of space conservation, and such antiques as old sofas are only found in second-hand stores, the literature that flourished in the same period, especially that of interest to children, hasn't followed the same path of oblivion, says the Wisconsin Library Bulletin.

When dad and mother were boy and girl, and even when older brother and sister were young, several apples, a copy of "Tom Sawyer" or "Little Women," the old sofa in the attic and the rain pattering on the roof were all that was necessary for a pleasant afternoon. Or in summer, when dandelions needed to be picked, or the dishes washed, the loft in the barn, with "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" or "Nelly's Silver Mine," was a mighty attractive place. Youngsters haven't changed much today, for the books that were dear to the old folks in their childhood are just as much read now.

Historic African Region

The Gold Coast region, long famed in history and fiction, is a portion of Guinea, on the west coast of Africa. Here gold was found, and the country became the mecca of the adventurous and seekers after fortune. The Gold coast is bounded on the east by the Slave coast and on the west by the Ivory coast, and has a coast line of about 350 miles.—Kansas City Star.

Agricultural Pests

The ten most injurious insect pests in the United States, as selected by the votes of eleven government entomologists, are the boll weevil, Hessian fly, codling moth, corn earworm, mosquitos, chinch bug, Colorado potato beetle, grasshoppers, the house fly and the San Jose scale.

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
Helped Mrs. Benedict

MRS. MARY R. BENEDICT
813 FAYSON STREET, KEWANEE, ILLINOIS

Kewanee, Illinois. — "When I was married about a year and a half I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because of ill health. I did not have any children. I now have two healthy little girls and I am sure I would not have had them had it not been for your medicine. Last spring and summer I got all run down, irregular, and I had awful headaches, and my back and side hurt me so that I could stay up only a short time. My limbs would get so tired and ache till I could cry. I started to take the Vegetable Compound again and used the Sanative Wash, and it was not long till I was relieved. Now I do all my own work and help others. I sure praise Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines to any one I meet that is suffering from similar troubles. I think if mothers with girls would give it to them when they come to womanhood it would make them stronger. People who have known me all my life are astonished to see me now as I was always sickly when in my teens until I started taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. MARY R. BENEDICT, 813 Fayson Street, Kewanee, Ill.

Has a Beautiful Baby Girl Now

Bridport, Vermont. — "In the first place I wanted a baby, but none seemed to come to me. I just love children and my husband is away all day, so I was not happy at all. A doctor told me I could not have a baby until I went to a hospital. But my sisters said, 'Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and you will be O.K.' I was nervous, had organic weakness, with backache, sideache, headache and no strength. I had been in bed nearly a week when I began taking the Vegetable Compound. It was all that ever helped me and I just wish you could see my beautiful baby girl. I am fine now, and so is she. I am still taking the medicine as it keeps me well. You may be sure I am recommending the Vegetable Compound and always will."—Mrs. A. W. Howe, Bridport, Vermont.

Michigan, Our Michigan

Being the beginning of a series of items about our state, which is aimed to give our readers stirring reminders of its great advantages, present and future possibilities.

In this we hope to combine facts, conditions and visions in a way that will hold our readers' interest to the end and to do this we must necessarily copy much from many sources including reports from state departments, state manuals and history.

The aim is to help sell Michigan to Michigan people in such a manner that they may sincerely sell it to others that many may be benefited. With this in mind we are reversing the general in dealings in the future first, later to strengthen these with facts from the present and history.

Many things herein may appeal to an outsider as elaborate boasting but we give it as we see it and as it is, in the spirit of boosting not boasting and in this spirit we want our readers to receive and believe.

Situated between two of our nation's four largest cities and within but a few hours driving on paved ways to either, with many large industrial centers within our borders, Michigan is most exceptionally placed and local commodities find a ready outlet to nearby consumers and 31 lake ports and railway facilities give the best of transportation service for all surplus, and also make it easy to obtain the outside luxuries desired.

With the prospective deepening of the shallow channels along the St. Lawrence river to float all ocean going boats the nation's coast line is doubled and Michigan will be nearer Liverpool than New York City and these lake ports become ocean ports at which one may load to and from all world ports. This is yet on paper but Yankee enterprise is demanding it and that means it is sure to come. May we all live to see it.

The central location and natural advantages make Michigan the goal for pleasure seekers and she is now recognized as the summer playground of the nation, and summer playing is the only one that the masses will ever be able to enjoy to a great extent.

Next week will appear facts of the present state of Michigan's greatness in agricultural lines.

County Sunday School Convention

The Sunday School workers of Van Buren county who meet at the Hartford Methodist church in their annual convention, Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 21 and 22, will have one of the strongest programs ever prepared in the history of the organization.

Owing to the fact that the state convention is this year to be held in Detroit, which makes it improbable that very many of the local workers will be able to attend, the program committee has endeavored to secure an exceptional array of outside talent for the main addresses. Among these already secured are Miss Irene Rockenback of Lansing, State Specialist in Children's Work; Prof. W. W. Whitehouse of Albion College; Prof. S. C. Nettinga of Hope College; Pres. Allan Hoben of Kalamazoo College.

In addition to these it is hoped to secure a specialist in Young People's work of national experience. All who are interested in Religious Education are urged to set aside the above dates and avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing these noted educators.

The Methodist Church

The following is from the mind and pen of Edgar A. Guest. "To live each day as though I may never see the morrow come; to be strict with myself, but patient and lenient with others; to give the advantage but never to ask for it; to be kindly to all, but kinder to the less fortunate; to respect all honest employment; to remember always that my life is made easier and better by the service of others and be grateful; to keep faith with God, my fellowmen and my country."

These good thoughts are worth close pondering. We fully subscribe to them. The newly appointed District Superintendent, Rev. R. E. Meader will be here Thursday afternoon and evening. All the official members should be present and any others who can come are invited. Let us get acquainted with Mr. Meader.

DAIRY

MOST ECONOMICAL PRODUCER OF FOOD

Although the statement that the dairy cow is the most economical producer of human food of all the different classes of live stock, is a fact, it does not hold true for each individual cow. The one most important factor in profitable milk or cream production is the ability of the individual cow. It does not matter what breed you own a what family within the breed, there are always certain individuals that are more economical producers than others. According to the latest available figures, the average milk production for the dairy cows in the United States is 4,260 pounds of milk, points out J. P. LaMaster, chief of the dairy division at Clemson college.

South Carolina has just recently started developing its dairy herds, and although we have no available figures on the actual production of all the cows in the state, it is very obvious that the production is much lower than this average for the United States. This means that if we are to make dairying a profitable farming operation, we must not only get more cows, but we must especially improve the average production of all of our cows. The individual farmer can do this in three ways:

First, by keeping records on the cows he now owns, and this does not mean official records, but the actual weighing of the milk each produces at each milking. Totalling this record each month and also keeping a record on the feed each cow consumes in a month, he can in a few months tell which of his cows are the best.

The second way by which the farmer can improve the producing ability of his herd is by buying cows which have already made creditable records proving that they do have this ability to make a profit on feed consumed. This is a rather expensive way because the farmer who has made this record on the good cow wants to keep her and in order to buy her, it is necessary to pay a premium. Also, in buying cows, there are chances for loss in bringing in diseases and other troubles of which you have no knowledge when you make the purchase.

The third way is a combination of the first and the use of a bred-for-production dairy sire on the cows you now own and which are selected from your herd as being the best, judging from the records they have made.

Feed for Calves Where Milk Is Not Available

Where milk is not available for calves, give the following: Take 50 parts finely ground corn, 15 parts linseed oil meal, 15 parts finely ground rolled oats, 10 parts dried blood flour, 10 parts skim-milk powder, one-half part salt. Stir up with warm water at the rate of one pound of the meal mixture to about six pounds of water. Increase gradually as the whole milk is decreased, until at the time the calf is 50 days old it should be getting only the gruel. At this time one and one-half to two pounds of the meal mixed with the water will constitute a day's feed. The total quantity of milk used is about 300 pounds; if less is fed the calves are likely to be unthrifty.

Better Dairy Practices to Increase Production

By increasing the average production of his cows about one-fourth, and at the same time reducing his production costs one-seventh, Arnold Graue of Jackson county, Minnesota, has increased the profit from his cows, above cost of feed and labor, more than 70 times.

He increased the production of his herd by culling out the poorer cows of his herd and replacing them with higher-producing heifers of his own breeding. He cut down on his production costs by installing an engine to run his cream separator and by building a milk house close to the barn, thus reducing the labor of handling his milk.

Egg Shipping Business Allied With Creamery

A good many of the co-operative creameries as well as the smaller private creameries are planning on handling the eggs of their patrons. The reason for this is the feeling that the egg-shipping business is closely allied with the creamery business.

Some of the creameries which have tried this line of work are voting to continue it during the coming year. The reason which is advanced is that it is unnecessary to set up two organizations to handle two products which are so closely related and which may be more economically handled by one organization.

Bitter Milk Cause

It is quite common for some cows to give bitter milk for some time before calving, especially if they have been yielding milk for eight months or more. When the trouble starts the milk secretion had better be dried off at once if the cow is within two months of calving. If it starts much before that time she should be given a pound dose of Glauber salt in three pints of tepid water well sweetened with molasses. Roots or silage bran and oilmeal, not cottonseed meal, are necessary.

Farm Birds Eat Numerous Pests

Feathered Tribe Feast on Insects of Many Kinds and Many Weeds.

The economic value of birds, especially insectivorous birds in farm districts, cannot be too strongly emphasized, in the opinion of the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture. For this reason the bureau is interested not only in the protection of migratory game birds, which is one of its important functions.

Hardly an agricultural pest exists but has numerous effective bird enemies. For instance, 25 kinds of birds are known to feed upon the clover weevil, and a like number upon the potato beetle, 35 on the codling moth, 46 on the gipsy moth, 49 on horseflies, 67 on bill-bugs, 85 on clover-root borers, 98 on cutworms, 120 on leaf hoppers, and 168 on wireworms.

Also Eat Weed Seeds. Birds benefit the farmer also by eating quantities of weed seeds. It has been estimated that a single species of sparrow in a single state— Iowa— consumed annually 875 tons of weed seeds. Birds do not, of course, especially single out the noxious seeds or an insect pest for food; but, eating indiscriminately and voraciously, the most abundant food is taken first, and this is likely to be the moving caterpillar or adult insect, or the seeds on the plant or on the ground, where they have been carried by the wind. Many species of birds perform another important service to man through their feeding habits, since they act as scavengers. In districts where the disposal of waste is not completely taken care of by community and individual effort, birds make a valuable contribution to public health.

Next to man himself, wantonly using his gun, the worst enemy of farm birds is the domestic cat. Storms also destroy a great many birds by cutting off their food supply. Protection against the elements cannot often be provided for birds except where refuges or sanctuaries are maintained for them, but a protective public sentiment, supported by effective laws, will lessen the damage done by man and domestic animals. Birds may be still further encouraged and increased, by the provision of food trees, such as the mulberry, which will serve the double purpose of attracting them away from cherry or other fruit trees and supplying them with suitable food.

Satisfactory Source of Water for Dairy Cows

Cows which are producing milk require a larger quantity of water than for the same animals when they are dry. This is caused by the need of water to be used in the milk and also for the digestion and assimilation of a larger quantity of food.

Tests which were made in Missouri showed that cows consumed practically four times as much water when milking heavily as when dry. There is a larger consumption in summer on account of the larger evaporation of moisture from the body.

Cows which are on heavy feed and producing large quantities of milk should always have access to good water at least twice a day. With dairy cows the water supply should be close at hand, especially during cold weather for the reason that the cows will often do without the water which they need rather than to brave the cold. If they do not get the water needed the milk supply will shrink.

The use of ponds as a source of water for dairy cows is not objectionable if there is no seepage of manure into the ponds or if the cows are not allowed to enter the water. However, most ponds have both of these objections. The most satisfactory source of water is from a deep well.

Blanching and Storing Celery for Winter Use

Banking with earth is the ordinary method of blanching celery. Boards placed at each side of the row and held upright with stakes are sometimes used and especially prepared paper is also used in this manner. An ordinary three-inch drain tile set down over each plant is satisfactory. There are several different methods of storing celery for home use. It may be placed in trenches, a good cellar or in the pit of an ordinary hotbed. Detailed information for these different methods and also much other valuable pointers to celery growers may be found in Farmers' Bulletin No. 1269, entitled, "Celery Growing," which may be obtained free of charge by writing the division of publications, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Hay Shrinkage in Mows Not Easily Determined

It is impossible to give any rule for the shrinkage of hay in the mow because there are so many factors entering into the problem. The weather, the stage of maturity when harvested, different methods of curing, etc., all influence the shrinkage of hay. Experienced hay buyers usually figure on a shrinkage of about 20 per cent in the mow but this cannot be considered a definite rule for it may range all the way from a negligible amount to 40 to 50 per cent, depending upon the water content of the hay when placed in the mow.

Lime and Legumes Build Up Fertility

Immediate Profits Result When Properly Used.

Lime and legumes used properly will help to build up the fertility of the land and will give immediate profits to the crop following the treatment, finds R. T. Lenoir of the Yadin Valley (N. C.) section, who conducted a demonstration with County Agent D. W. Roberts this past year.

"This year Mr. Lenoir had 110 acres in wheat. Part was grown on an alfalfa sod, part on a plot where a crop of soy beans had been turned under, part on a clover sod and another part on old wheat stubble land," says Mr. Roberts. "Previous to this year all of the land was thought to be of the same fertility. The land was prepared for wheat alike. Each plot received the same amount and kind of fertilizers, the same amount and kind of seed and was sown practically on the same day. The only difference was that lime and alfalfa had been used on one plot; lime and soybeans on another; lime and clover on the third and wheat stubble alone on the fourth.

"When the crop was harvested the alfalfa plot yielded at the rate of 34½ bushels of wheat per acre; the soybean plot at the rate of 27½; the clover plot at the rate of 25, and the wheat stubble plot yielded at the rate of 6½ bushels per acre.

"The crop cost Mr. Lenoir $15 per acre including marketing and was sold on the local market for $2 per bushel.

"To make a long story short, Mr. Lenoir made a net profit of $54 per acre from the alfalfa sod plot, $40 per acre from the soybean plot, and $35 per acre from the clover sod plot. Where no lime and legumes were used but only the wheat sod planted, he lost $2 per acre on the venture."

Good Proof That Silage Not Injurious to Cows

The fact that silos have been used in this country for more than 30 years, and have increased in popularity each year, especially in the dairy districts, is abundant proof that silage is not injurious to cows.

Corn, the giant of the grass family, produces more food per acre for live stock than any other known plant. Its nature is such that it cannot be economically harvested at that stage of its growth when it contains the largest per cent of digestible nutrients and stored like other members of the grass family. If allowed to mature it, like other grasses, develops a large amount of indigestible matter—cellulose tissue which is palatable as well as indigestible. Then, too, it is very bulky, requires a large amount of storage, and is bothersome to feed. Harvested after it becomes ripe, and handled in the very best known way, more than 30 per cent of its food value is lost. But if harvested when green, at the proper time, and stored in a good silo, much more of it is digestible and there need not be a loss to exceed 5 per cent in food value.

Small Amount of Iodine Needed in Cow's Ration

A small amount of iodine is needed in the ration of dairy cattle for the proper functioning of the thyroid gland. A deficiency of this element results in goitre or "big neck" in calves. Iodine is often lacking in soils distant from the sea, and consequently goitre is more prevalent in such regions than near the sea coast. Decaying sea weeds liberate this element, which is carried by the wind over the land and taken up from the soil by the crops.

The addition of one-tenth of a pound of either sodium or potassium iodide, finely pulverized, to 100 pounds of salt and this mixture fed to meet the salt requirement, is sufficient, as only a little more than a trace of iodine is needed.

Since milk and butter are very good natural sources of iodine in the human diet, it is important that the cows producing milk for human food receive iodine in their ration.—Michigan Experiment Station.

Farm Hints

Milk, if sold for twice its present price, should still be cheap on the basis of food value.

One volunteer wheat plant may harbor enough Hessian flies to infest several hundred plants.

Do not plant wheat in fields which showed indication of take-all disease last season.

A bushel of corn fed to a dairy cow before calving is sometimes worth as much as two bushels fed after freshening.

Seed wheat, free from rye, smut, and mixtures with other varieties, is the only kind a progressive farm can afford to plant.

Sweet clover is the best honey-producing plant known at this time. The plants bloom abundantly and bees are very fond of the nectar.

The silo filling season is at hand and it behooves everyone to see that the silo and the filling equipment is in proper shape.

POULTRY

COST OF RATION IS BIGGEST ITEM

A very important factor in any ration is the matter of cost. The best ration is one that will give the largest returns, cost considered. This does not mean the largest returns or the cheapest ration. The biggest income may be secured from a ration that is so high in price that it is impracticable to use, while the cheapest ration might bring about such low production as to make it unprofitable.

From the farm poultryman's standpoint the question of feeding is largely a question of economically supplementing the home-grown feeds. Two general types of feeds come under this classification: Those that are supplied to the fowls and those the fowls pick up by ranging over the farm.

In the majority of cases there are two problems: One, the supplying of protein or flesh-forming foods, and the other of giving the proper variety to the ration. This is more particularly true when the fowls are confined than when they are picking up considerable of their feed by foraging over the farm. When foraging they eat more scratch feed and less mash than will properly balance up their ration if they are allowed to choose as they may. Therefore, they must be encouraged to eat the mash by making it as attractive as possible and also by limiting the amount of the scratch feeds which are supplied, especially during the morning feeds.

The cost of the ration is the biggest item of expense in poultry production. The greatest opportunity for a saving lies in the feeding. The big item that the majority of people need to pay more attention to is that of balancing up the food by the use of some of the animal proteins and supplying additional variety. Too much scratch grain and not enough mash to properly balance the ration is the mistake made by many flock owners.

Market All Fowls That Molt Early in Autumn

"Most hens stop laying when they begin to molt," says E. L. Dakan of the poultry department at Ohio State university. "A hen must be a consistent layer to make a high record, and an early molting hen is not a consistent layer."

"The time of the molt is the best indication of the past year's performance. This rule can be used in culling all breeds and varieties, but is of special importance with such breeds as the Orpingtons and Minorcas that do not have the yellow skin."

"The hen that molts early, under normal conditions, will not lay as many winter eggs as the hen that molts late. Neither will she begin egg production earlier in the spring. No definite date can be set as to early molt, but as a general rule the first hens in the flock to molt should be sold, and the last to molt should be kept for breeding purposes."

"Hens may be thrown into an early molt by starving while laying heavily, by irregular feeding, by roosting in a house that is poorly ventilated, or by anything which tends to check egg production."

Fattening on Range

Some feeders have tried confining the turkeys while they are being fattened, but with little success. When confined to a pen, they may eat heartily for a few days but afterwards lose their appetites and then begin to lose flesh. A certain amount of liberty and range is necessary to keep them hungry and in good, healthy condition. Where this is combined with a good feeding ground, as is the case when they are allowed to run in a cornfield that has been hogged off, results are more than likely to be gratifying.

Poultry Hints

Ducks or geese will eat all the grit they require without putting it in their feed.

Turkeys should not be fed at first. Growth should come first and fattening should not begin until in November if the birds are to be wanted for the Thanksgiving market.

A novel and easy way to make wet mash is to pour a little milk in the mash hopper at noon. Just enough liquid should be used to moisten what the birds will clean up.

Make a bred-to-lay hen's home life happy and comfortable with proper housing and feeding, as well as the other surroundings, and she will try to do the nest justice and let you enjoy the profits therefrom.

Only a laying hen is worthy of her feed.

Whether or not it pays to raise capons depends very much upon the market. People who eat capons are very particular people and birds not only have to be well raised, but well finished.

Green feed increases the fertility and hatchability of eggs, it has been found. Hens should have access to pasture, or be fed silage, sprouted oats or some other good green feed.

Michigan Happenings

A new high record for gasoline tax collection was set in August, a report completed by the Department of State shows. The two-cent levy netted the State $27,410, an increase of $29,232 over the net return of $947,677 in July. Gross collections in August were $1,025,433, refunds totaling $48,423. That the total yield of the new weight and gasoline highway finance plan will yield in excess of $21,000,000 appeared certain. The weight tax, up to Sept. 1, had turned $12,856,638 into the treasury and the total probably will run close to $14,000,000.

Instead of the elaborate wedding festivities planned, a very simple, quiet ceremony marked the union of Miss Celia Brovage and her second cousin, Louis Brovage, of Riggsville. The groom, while taking the bride's father, Anthony Brovage, to the wedding by motor car met with a serious accident, in which he was hurt painfully and the elder Brovage was injured so seriously he lies in an unconscious condition in the hospital at Cheboygan.

Michigan's right to fish in Michigan streams was assured temporarily recently, when the jury hearing the case of Frank Collins, of Toledo, O., owner of stump lands on both sides of Pine River, against Gideon S. Gerhardt, of Reed City, who crossed Collin's river fences while wading in the bed of the stream in fishing, returning a verdict of no cause for action.

Pastors and teachers attending the seventy-fourth annual convention of the joint synod of Ohio and other states at the St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church at Saginaw, voted unanimously for a union of the Ohio and Iowa synods. Delegates were directed to instruct their respective congregations to vote on the matter before November 1.

Christensen, assistant secretary. The Architecture building will be started on the $400,000 provision made by the state legislature last spring.

A return to the former limitations regulating ages of women operating dangerous machines in Michigan factories is to be asked of the coming legislature by Carl Young, commissioner of labor. The session of 1923 changed the minimum age from 18 to 21 through the passage of a House bill, which was amended by the Senate.

Despondent over his slowness in school, Stewart H. Faulkner, 17 years old of Sault Ste. Marie, committed suicide by swallowing a strychnine capsule. A physician was called, but the boy died three hours later. He had returned from a Chicago school recently and was attending the local high school. His father is a dentist.

Vice-president Charles G. Dawes is being sought by C. Wellington Kolner, of Pasadena, Calif., president of the International City Managers' Association, as a speaker during the annual convention of that organization to be held at Grand Rapids Nov. 17, 18 and 19. Mayor Elvin Swarthout has joined in the invitation.

The enrollment at the State Normal College at Ypsilanti now is 2,379, about 300 fewer than last year, according to figures given out by Registrar C. P. Stemle. Many of last year's graduates experienced difficulty in obtaining positions because of the over-supply of teachers.

The state administrative board recently released $35,000 to the Michigan State college for additional work on the new horticultural buildings. It was estimated this amount will complete the structure.

Transparent Metals

Dr. Karl Mueller of Berlin claims to have discovered a process by which it is possible to reduce metal foils to a thinness of one-two-and-one-half millionth of an inch while retaining their elasticity. The process can be used with all kinds of metals, including gold; and, of course, renders them transparent.

$400,000,000 BREAD MERGER ANNOUNCED

Ward Company, General and Continental in Giant Combine.

Chicago.—Following a 20 per cent reduction in its Chicago bread prices, the Ward Baking company announced a $400,000,000 baking corporation, a merger of the Ward company with two of its largest competitors. The announcement was made in New York.

Discussion of such a merger was immediate upon the announcement of the Chicago price cut.

The General Baking company and the Continental Baking corporation are the other firms involved in the merger. Articles of incorporation for the new firm, to be known as the General Baking corporation, were filed in Baltimore, Md.

A total of 157 baking plants will be controlled by the merger corporation. The Ward corporation has eighteen plants, the Continental 106, and the General Baking company thirty-three. It is estimated that the three concerns do 10 per cent of the bread business of the United States.

William B. Ward has resigned as chairman of the Ward Baking corporation, and it is believed that he will be the chairman of the consolidated concern when the merger has been completed. Mr. Ward is regarded as the moving spirit in the combining of the three firms.

F. I. Thompson Resigns From Shipping Board

Washington.—Frederick I. Thompson of Alabama, a Democratic member of the shipping board, unexpectedly submitted his resignation to President Coolidge. The President accepted the resignation, effective November 1.

Commissioner Thompson, who has been active in demanding that the shipping board resume control of the government's merchant marine and that the resignation of Leigh C. Palmer, president of the fleet corporation, be accepted by the board, declared he had resigned to be free to oppose proposed legislation that would deprive the shipping board of its control over government ships.

The golf played by Miss Collett shattered all records for women's play over the St. Louis club course. In the morning round she made a concessional medal score of 76 strokes.

Wilbur Scores Critics as Plane Carrier Is Launched

Quincy, Mass.—Secretary of the Navy Wilbur in an address at the launching of the airplane carrier Lexington here, scored critics of the navy who have condemned it as "hidebound with conservatism," and cited construction of the Lexington as evidence of the navy's keeping pace with progress.

At the ceremony, Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the navy bureau of aeronautics, reiterated his opposition to separation of naval aviation from complete naval control.

CAILLAUX TAKES U. S. DEBT PLAN TO PARIS

Mellon Asks $40,000,000 Per Annum.

Washington.—Negotiations for the funding of the French war debt of $4,200,000,000, which have been going on for eight days, were suspended since when Joseph Caillaux, minister of finance, agreed to take back to his government a temporary proposal made by Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury.

This suggestion provides that France pay $40,000,000 annually to the United States for the next five years.

At the expiration of that period, or at any time during its course, the French government would resume the discussion of the definite funding of its obligations, taking up the pourparlers from the point where they are now left off.

Secretary Mellon's proposal was presented to the French commission after the French terms of settlement had been pronounced unacceptable.

The American offer which M. Caillaux will carry back amounts to an acceptance of 1 per cent interest on the total French debt, with accrued interest, as it now stands, at over $4,000,000,000, for five years. The annuities of $40,000,000 in reality represent only an addition of $20,000,000 as France has been paying $20,000,000 annually in interest at 5 per cent on the A. E. F. war stocks she acquired for $407,000,000 in 1919.

Mr. Mellon's offer is admittedly only a stopgap to prevent the total of the debt with accruing interest rolling up to a greater grand total.

Sprague Must Pay Procter $62,697 in Campaign Suit

Chicago.—Col. A. A. Sprague was ordered to pay $62,697 to William Cooper Procter by a jury in Judge Thomas W. Slick's court after it had had this noted controversy over campaign funds under consideration for 22 hours.

This is the full amount for which Mr. Procter sued his old friend and co-worker in the campaign of Gen. Leonard Wood for President, a piece of political adventuring which Colonel Procter now admits was the "work of amateurs." In addition to paying half of the $100,000 note which Colonel Sprague signed in 1920, he must pay 5 per cent interest from the date of signature.

A motion for a new trial was entered immediately by Colonel Sprague's attorneys.

SPANISH TROOPS IN KRIM'S CAPITAL

Believed Victory Will Go Far Toward Breaking Back of Rifian War.

Madrid.—Spanish troops are in Adjir, the capital of Abd-el-Krim, leader of the Ruffian rebels.

News of the victory which has carried their soldiers at last to the stronghold of the enemy was received in Madrid with great rejoicing. King Alfonso appeared at a window of the palace and was greeted by the acclamations of the populace. Flags were flown from most of the houses of Madrid.

The king and the military directorate sent messages of congratulation to Gen. Primo de Rivera, who has been in charge of the Moroccan campaign. The advance on Adjir has been made by both Spanish and French troops, the Spanish troops working from Alhucemas bay and the French on their left from Kifane.

Military authorities believe the victory will go far toward breaking the back of the Rifian war.

Fez.—An official communique says the offensive has ended with every objective taken, the French troops having carried their lines twelve kilometers (7½ miles) north of Kifane.

British Labor Party Will Bar Communists

London.—A drastic measure to purge the party of Red influence was carried out by the British Labor party when at the first day's session of the organization's conference at Liverpool a resolution barring communists was carried by a nine to one majority.

The radicals, who have been seeking to control the party by a process of infiltration, suffered a heavy defeat when—after the defeat of a Red motion disputing the executive's decision not to raise for three years last year's decision not to admit the Communist party to affiliation—a resolution outlawing individual communists also was carried by a majority of 2,870,000 to 321,000.

Divers Find Crew of Submarine S-51 Dead

New London, Conn.—The lives of the men who went down on the submarine S-51 were snuffed out almost immediately after she was rammed and sunk by the steamer City of Rome off Block Island a week ago. The death toll stands at 33.

This was established when divers found that the last two compartments in which it had been hoped there might have been air—the motor and torpedo rooms—were filled with water. None of the crew who went down had a chance for his life.

BLAMES LANSLOWNE FOR AIR DISASTER

Expert Says He Should Have Avoided Storm.

Lakehurst, N. J.—Blame for the loss of the Shenandoah was placed on Commander Zachary Lansdowne by Capt. Anton Heinen, former German Zeppelin pilot, in testimony before the naval court of inquiry. Commander Lansdowne, who died in the wreck of his ship, permitted the craft to be driven into the center of the storm for at least half an hour after the danger was evident and measures to escape should have been taken, the German expert insisted.

Captain Heinen was the instructor of the crew which took the dirigible on her ill-fated cruise into the Ohio valley. He explained in detail how the ship should have been kept head to the wind and away from the vortex of the disturbance.

"Are you prepared to say that if you had been in charge of the Shenandoah you would have escaped the storm?" the presiding officer, Rear Admiral Jones, asked.

"I am proud to say that I could have done so," Captain Heinen answered.

Mrs. Kresge Asks Probe of Spouse in $1,000,000 Suit

New York.—Mrs. Doris Mercer Kresge, wife of S. S. Kresge, the chain store head, asked for examination of her husband in connection with her suit to make him fulfill an alleged ante-nuptial agreement.

Mrs. Kresge charged that prior to their marriage he promised her $7,000,000 in securities but afterward gave her only a ten-cent toy dog from one of his stores. Mrs. Kresge later reduced her demand to $1,000,000, plus a 50 per cent stock dividend declared since the alleged agreement, and interest on the principal to date.

Bricklayers' and Plasterers' Unions Sign Peace Pact

He also signed up for a course in geology, which plays a big part in the evolution theory.

"Brokers" Get Long Terms

Los Angeles.—Harry Hibbs and Thomas Hennessey, who were convicted of defrauding thousands of dollars' worth stock investors by a tale of a $6,000,000,000 merger, were sentenced to from 30 to 300 years in the state prison.

RODGERS, DEFENDS NAVAL AVIATION

Trans-Pacific Failure and Shenandoah Wreck Not Due to Neglect.

Washington.—Commander John Rodgers, flight commander in the effort of the PN-9 No. 1 to reach Hawaii, took issue with Col. William Mitchell, army aviator and critic of administration of the air forces, on two main points in the army man's contentions.

Rodgers declared that he challenged "anyone to make a just criticism of the Hawaiian flight," and defended the navy against other charges of Mitchell in regard to the Shenandoah flight and other mishaps.

He declared in his opinion that it would be impossible for this nation to be attacked by airplanes of a foreign power capable of crossing the ocean with 2,000-pound bombs.

He supported critics of the air administration, however, in their contention that a reorganization of national defense is needed to give more latitude to airmen, and he argued for a department of national defense, under which the navy and all the departments of national defense might be better co-ordinated.

The need for a scientific reorganization of the national defense, Commander Rodgers told the board, was plainly apparent. Defending the navy from blame for recent disasters, he added that there was "something vitally wrong with the Navy department."

Two U. S. Deputies Ousted for Joyride With Druggan

Chicago.—Terry Druggan, supposed to be on his way to the De Kalb county jail, went on a seven-hour joyride and precipitated a new scandal—this time in the Federal building.

The two deputy United States marshals who were with him on the party were discharged by United States Marshal Palmer D. Anderson.

Discharge of the federal deputies, Walter Zippman and Anton L. Polak, makes a total of eleven federal and county officers who have lost their jobs through Druggan's efforts to soften jail life.

Druggan, Zippman and Polak set out from the Federal building for Sycamore at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and they did not reach Sycamore until 11 o'clock at night. Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson had ordered Druggan held there until he makes his findings in the county jail contempt proceedings in two weeks.

Grace Lusk Gets Liberty; Was Married September 22

Madison, Wis.—Grace A. Lusk, Waukesha school teacher, who in 1917 shot and killed the wife of the man she loved, was given a commutation of her nineteen-year sentence at the state prison by Gov. John J. Blaine.

Miss Lusk was released from prison on a conditional pardon January 17, 1923, because of poor health, and in announcing the commutation of sentence, Governor Blaine said that Miss Lusk had married "a professional man of good standing" on September 22, 1923. The governor refused to say where Miss Lusk is living now or to whom she is married.

GINGER MARTIN

SYNOPSIS.—To a gathering of anarchists in Barking, London suburb, Zabolet, foreign agitator, tells of the operations of a body of men who have become a menace to their activities. He says they are masked and wear long black cloaks and are acting without the law. He is interrupted by the men he is describing (the Black Gang), who break up the meeting, sentencing some of the participants to condign punishment and carrying away others. A memorandum found on Zabolet gives an address in Hoxton, which the leader of the attacking party considers of importance. Sir Bryan Johnstone, director of criminal investigation, hears from Inspector McIver, sent to arrest Zabolet the night before, of his discomfiture. He had been seized and chloroformed and his raid frustrated. Hugh Drummond, man of leisure, tells Johnstone of seeing the kidnapers and their victims. He becomes an unpaid agent of the police, under McIver. William Atkinson, ostensibly pawnbroker and money lender, really Count Zadowa, director of anarchy in England, does business in another London suburb. A mysterious stranger invades the premises. Drummond attempts to burglarize the premises to get evidence.

CHAPTER IV

In Which a Bomb Bursts at Unpleasantly Close Quarters

It was perhaps because the thought of failure never entered Hugh Drummond's head that such a considerable measure of success had been possible up to date—that, and the absolute, unquestioning obedience which he demanded of his pals, members of the Black Gang, and which they accorded him willingly. As they knew, he laid no claims to brilliance; but as they also knew, he hid a very shrewd common sense beneath his frivolous manner. And having once accepted the sound military truism that one indifferent general is better than two good ones, they accepted his leadership with unswerving loyalty. What was going to be the end of their self-imposed fight against the pests of society did not worry them greatly; all that mattered was that there should be a certain amount of sport in the collection of the specimens. Granted the promise of that, they willingly sacrificed any engagements and carried out Hugh's orders to the letter. Up to date, however, the campaign, though far from being dull, had not produced any really big results. A number of sprats and a few moderate-sized fish had duly been caught in the landing-net, and been sent to the private pool to meditate at leisure. But nothing really large had come their way. Zabolet was a good haul. But the Black Gang, which aimed merely at the repression of terrorism by terrorism, had found it too easy. The nauseating cowardice of the majority of their opponents was becoming monotonous, their strong aversion to soap and water, insanitary. They wanted big game—not the rats that emerged from the sewers.

Even Drummond had begun to feel that patriotism might be carried too far, until the moment when the address in Hoxton had fallen into their hands. Then, with the optimism that lives eternal in the hunter's breast, fresh hope had arisen in his mind. He had determined on a bigger game. If it failed—if they drew blank—he had almost decided to chuck the thing up altogether. Phyllis, he knew, would be overjoyed if he did.

"Just this one final coup, old girl," he said, as they sat waiting in the Carlton for the awe-inspiring relatives.

"I've got it cut and dried, and it comes off tonight. If it's a dud, we'll dissolve ourselves—at any rate, for the present. If only—"

He sighed, and his wife looked at him reproachfully.

"I know you want another fight with Petersen, you old goat," she remarked.

"But you'll never see him again, or that horrible girl."

"Don't you think I shall, Phyl?" He stared despondently at his shoes. "I can't help feeling myself that somewhere or other behind all this that cheery bird is lurking. My dear, it would be too ghastly if I never saw him again."

"The next time you see him, Hugh," she answered quietly, "he won't take any chances with you."

"But, my angel child," he boomed cheerfully. "I don't want him to. Not on any life! Nor shall I. Good Lord! Here they are. Uncle Timothy looks more like a mangel-wurzel than ever."

And so at nine-thirty that evening, a party of five men sat waiting in a small sitting-room of a house situated in a remote corner of South Kensington. Some easels stood round the walls covered with half-finished sketches, as befitted a room belonging to a budding artist such as Toby Sinclair. Not that he was an artist or even a budding one, but he felt that a man must have some excuse for living in South Kensington. And so he had bought the sketches and put them round the room, principally to deceive the landlady. The fact that he was never there except at strange hours merely confirmed that excellent woman's opinion that all artists were dissolute rascals. But he paid his rent regularly, and times were hard, especially in South Kensington. Had the worthy soul known that her second best sitting-room was the rendezvous of this Black Gang, it is doubtful if she would have been so complacent. But she didn't know, and continued her weekly dusting of the sketches with characteristic zeal.

"Ted should be here soon," said Drummond, glancing at his watch. "I hope he's got the bird all right."

"You didn't get into the inner room, did you, Hugh?" said Peter Darrell.

"No. But I saw enough to know that it's beyond our form, old lad. We've got to have a skilled cracksmen to deal with one of the doors—and almost certainly anything important will be in a safe inside."

"Just run over the orders again," Toby Sinclair came back from drawing the blinds even more closely together.

"Perfectly simple," said Hugh. "Ted and I and Ginger Martin—if he's got him—will go straight into the house through the front door. I know the geography of the place all right, and I've already laid out the caretaker clerk fellow once. Then we must trust to luck. There shouldn't be anybody there except the little blighter of a clerk. The rest of you will hang about outside in case of any trouble. Don't bunch together, keep on the move; but keep the doors in sight. When you see us come out again, make your own way home. Can't give you any more detailed instructions because I don't know what may turn up. I shall rig myself out here, after Ted arrives. You had better go to your own rooms and do it, but wait first to make sure that he's roped in Ginger Martin."

He glanced up as the door opened and Jerry Seymour—sometime of the R. F. G.—put his head into the room.

"Ted's here, and he's got the bird all right. Unpleasant-looking bloke with a flattened face."

"Right," Drummond rose, and crossed to a cupboard. "Clear off, you fellows. Zero—twelve midnight."

From the cupboard he pulled a long black cloak and mask, which he proceeded to put on, while the others disappeared with the exception of Jerry Seymour, who came into the room. He was dressed in livery like a chauffeur, and he had, in fact, been driving the car in which Ted had brought Ginger Martin.

"Any trouble?" asked Drummond.

"No. Once he was certain Ted had nothing to do with the police he came like a bird," said Jerry. "The fifty quid did it." Then he grinned. "You know Ted's a marvel. I'll defy anybody to recognize him."

Drummond nodded, and sat down at the table facing the door.

"Tell Ted to bring him up. And I don't want him to see you, Jerry, so keep out of the light."

Undoubtedly Jerry Seymour was right with regard to Jerningham's make-up. As he and Martin came into the room, it was only the sudden start and cry on the part of the crook that made Drummond certain as to which was which.

"Blimey!" muttered the man, shrinking back as he saw the huge figure in black confronting him. "Wot's the game, guv'nor?"

"There's no game, Martin," said Drummond reassuringly. "You've been told what you're wanted for, haven't you? A little professional assistance tonight, for which you will be paid fifty pounds, is all we ask of you."

But Ginger Martin still seemed far from easy in his mind. "You're one of this 'ere Black Gang," he said suddenly, glancing at the door in front of which Jerningham was standing. Should he chance it and make a dash to get away? Fifty pounds are fifty pounds, but—He gave a little shiver as his eyes came round again to the motionless figure on the other side of the table.

"Quite correct, Martin," said the same reassuring voice. "And it's only because I don't want you to recognize me that I'm dressed up like this. We don't mean you any harm." The voice paused for a moment, and then went on again. "You understand that, Martin. We don't mean you any harm, unless—unless you try any monkey tricks. You are to do exactly as I tell you, without question and at once. If you do you will receive fifty pounds. If you don't—well, Martin, I have ways of dealing with people who don't do what I tell them."

There was silence while Ginger Martin adged about, looking like a trapped animal. "What do yer want me to do, guv'nor?" he said at last.

"Open a safe amongst other things," answered Drummond. "Have you brought your tools and things?"

"Yus—I've brought the outfit," muttered the other. "Where is the safe? 'Ere?"

"No, Martin, not here. Some distance away in fact. We shall start in about an hour. Until then you will stop in this room. You can have a whisky-and-soda, and my friend here will stay with you. He has a gun, Martin, so remember what I said. No monkey tricks."

With fascinated eyes the crook watched the speaker rise and cross to an inner door. Standing he seemed more huge than ever, and Martin gave a sigh of relief as the door closed behind him.

The entrance to Number 5 Green street proved easier than Drummond had expected—so easy as to be almost suspicious. No lights shone in the windows above: the house seemed completely deserted. Moreover, the door into the street was unbolted, and without a moment's hesitation Drummond opened it and stepped inside, followed by Martin and Ted Jerningham. The long black cloak had been discarded; only the black mask concealed his face, as the three men stood inside the door, listening intently. Not a sound was audible, and after a moment or two Drummond felt his way cautiously through the downstairs office toward the flight of stairs that led to the rooms above.

In single file they crept up the stairs, Drummond leading. The door at the top was ajar, and for awhile they stood in the carpeted passage above listening again.

"Along this passage are the clerks' offices," he explained in a low voice to the other two. "At the far end is another door which we shall probably find locked. Beyond that is the inner office, which we want."

"Well, let's get on wiv it, guv'nor," muttered Ginger Martin hoarsely. "There's no good in 'anging about."

Drummond switched on his electric torch, and flashed it cautiously round. Doors leading off the passage were open in most cases, and all the rooms were empty; it was obvious that none of the staff were about. And yet he felt an indefinable sense of danger, which he tried in vain to shake off. Somehow or other, he felt certain that they were not alone—that there were other people in the house. But Ginger Martin had no such presentiments, and was rapidly becoming impatient.

To open the door at the end of the passage, if it should prove to be locked, was such child's play as to be absolutely contemptible. He wanted to get on with the safe, which might take time, instead of fooling round in a passage listening for mice.

Without a sound, the cracksmen set to work; his coarse features outlined in the circle of the torch, his ill-kept fingers handling his instruments as deftly as any surgeon. A little oil here and there; a steady pressure with a short pointed steel tool; a faint click.

"There you are, guv'nor," he muttered, straightening up. "Easy as kiss yer 'and. And if yer waits till I find me glove I'll open it for yer; but Ginger Martin's finger-prints are too well known to run any risks."

Still no sound came from anywhere, though the click as the lock shot back had seemed horribly loud in the silence. And then, just as Martin cautiously turned the handle and pushed open the door, Drummond stiffened suddenly and switched off his torch. He could have sworn that he heard the sound of voices close by.

Only for a second—they were instantly silenced; but just for that fraction of time as the door opened he knew he had heard men speaking.

It looks very much like a trap. What is Zadowa planning to do to Drummond?

Key to Treasure House

Just think of the vast treasures of words full of rich and rare meaning that lie locked up in our language, hidden away from common use and enjoyed only by the learned few! It is as if, possessing the mineral wealth of the world, ready for the mint, we scornfully turned aside to remain in poverty.

The dictionary constitutes the treasure house of our language. As a people we needlessly deprive ourselves of the great helps at our command. In our daily tasks, not one of which can be performed without the use of words, we possess only the most primitive tools, while we might be equipped with the keenest and most efficient.

Don't Sow Wheat or Rye Unless You Sow Phosphate!

Michigan soils need Phosphate, it hastens maturity and fills out the grain.

Remember, our Acid Phosphate is nearly three times as strong as ordinary Acid Phosphate and is the best on the market.

It is also much cheaper to use than the 16 per cent Acid Phosphate that you are offered.

Use Our 44 per cent Acid Phosphate

It pays Big on grain. You can use it before or after the grain is planted.
