Fatal Shooting Accident

While Milo Allen and his son were hunting in Waverly last Saturday the latter accidentally discharged his gun killing his father almost instantly. While the reports are many and varied it appears that the father got in range just as the boy fired at a rabbit.

Mr Allen and family were residents of this community for many years and have a host of friends and relatives who extend deepest sympathy in their bereavement.

Mary Elizabeth Scofield was born at Big Flats, New York November 21, 1835.

At the age of 8 years she moved with her parents to Bristol, Kendall county, Illinois,

Realizing the need of an education, her parents gave her every opportunity. She attended the nearby schools, then the Aurora Academy and later a young ladies Seminary and finishing school at Elgin Ill. At the age of 17 Mary accept ed Christ as her Savior, and as long as health permitted has been an active worker in the Baptist church, January 13, 1857 she was united in marriage to Robert S. Hopper of Illinois. To this union one son Charles, was born, who departed this life October 22, 1913. In the fall of 1898 her dearly loved helpmate was called home. leaving her to battle life's journey alone.

Her sister, Carrie E. Howard died in 1881, leaving a baby son Charles S. Howard 5 days old, whom she took to her home and cared for as if he were her own, and it is in his frome she has been careed for for the past 11 years. She also leaves one brother, James Scofield, of Yorkville, Ill., besides a host of dear friends and relatives, to mourn her departure. In Bristol she took up the work of the Womans Christian Temperance Union and became very much interested, soon becoming County Secretary, then State Secretary. After this she became a member of the National Temperance Union where she held high offices. After the death of her husband and son she gave years of her life to the Lecture field, and as an Organizer, in nearly every State in the Union. In 1910 she had the pleasure of attending the World's Convention in Europe, but now her life's work is ended, never to be forgotten. She has done what she could.

She departed this life Nov. 11 1925, at the age of 89 years, 11 months and 21 days.

Michigan, Our Michigan

In previous issues we have mentioned Michigan as a place for summer tourists and resorters. A late report gives $250,000,000 as the amount of money left in Michigan this season by these classes. This represents an increase of about 300 per cent over 1924. This business will continue to increase throughout the coming years. California and Florida will always be the Mecca for winter tourists and pleasure seekers from all over the continent but the masses will live and die without seeing either, because the man with the job cannot hold it and take the time necessary to get to these places, but the summer vacation is common to most of these and the summer playgrounds of Michigan are within driving distance of the people of the midwestern cities. More and more good roads are constructed yearly to aid these people in getting here, and natural scenery, good fishing, games, sports and other entertainments will help them pass the time pleasantly, all of which will encourage them to come again and bring their friends.

Civic pride should encourage us to treat well these strangers within our gates but aside from this all Michigan industries must gain and sell my home in Gobles at a rewarded.

This section, in the midst of the fruit belt, within a few miles of one of our large resort cities, in the midst of a region of many small lakes that are easily accessible and abound in good fishing, within a few miles of a Lake port, within a few hours drive of two of the nations' largest cities and fewer hours from several cities of the second size, with miles of lake frontage still undeveloped, with a diversity of fruits and other foods of finest flavor, can well afford to leave the factories to the cities and beat them at the finish.

With a glad hand and a sincere welcome, development will come speedily, valuations will increase and better markets and more wealth will result, and we can continue to live well in the best community, of the best state, of the greatest nation yet and make each better and greater as the years go by.

Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right; and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

HOBBIES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK

CAN imagine nothing more dreadful," a distinguished politician is quoted as saying, "than a man without a hobby or recreation."

As I understand a hobby it is something outside of a man's regular business, something disconnected with the regular routine of every-day work in which he finds pleasure and entertainment. For instance, Chambers is an engineer of my acquaintance who makes his living building bridges and installing electric light plants, and establishing pumping stations. He is much concerned every day with plans and estimates, and calculations. His business is very much mechanical.

His hobby is books. He has one of the finest libraries, and one of' the rarest, in the large city in which he lives. He would cross the continent or make a trip to Egypt to pick up a beautiful and unusual book. His friends say he is crazy over the subject of books, but he is in fact only an enthusiastic bibliophile who is kept interested and alive and youthful because of his hobby. He has no time to be bored with leisure or to be homesick when he is away from home, for he always has an interesting or a rare book with him or his eye out for Johnson's hobby is golf. He sits at a desk all day in a busy office, he is concerned with selling things and in pushing the business with which he is connected. If he did not exercise regularly he would have a tendency to grow stale, to put on weight, to develop an increased belt line. His golf saves him. He has a little garden in which before breakfast and after dinner he practices putting; he takes all the golf magazines, and he keeps up on the champions, he knows all about the best links in the country-and in other countries, too, and instead of talking business when he gets home from the office at night, and so tiring out himself and all the family, he talks golf and has everybody crazy about it.

His Saturday afternoons he gives to golf, and though he is a conscientious and serious churchman, he manages someway to choose an early or a late service, so that it may not interfere too much with his favorite game. As a consequence he keeps ruddy, and slender, and good tempered. His hobby will enable him to live longer and to do more business than if he had not fallen under its spell.

Philbrick has no hobby. He plays no games, he makes no collections, he to his niece in Ireland.'

talks about nothing, he thinks about nothing, he is interested in nothing but his business. When I meet him on his vacation, as I sometimes do, he is concerned with nothing excepting how things are going at home. He wants his letters daily and is unhappy/if he is away from the telephone or the telegraph station. If we go out for a walk he begins at once to talk business. He is growing old and 'irritated and worn before his time, because he has no hobby. He will have a miserable old age because he has no recreation to fall back upon when he gives up his work.

It would be interesting—and important—to know the thoughts of President Coolidge at the Backache Wearing You Out?

Every day find you miserable with backache? Suffer sharp, stabbing pains? Feel lame and stiff—always tired, nervous and dispirited? Then look to your kidneys! Your kidneys are the blood filters. Perhaps they have failed to properly rid the blood of body poisons. Naturally, then, you suffer the injurious effects of this slow poisoning. Don't risk neglect! If your kidneys need help, use Doan's Ptils. No other kidney diuretic is so well recommended nor so successful. Ask your neighbor!

the first anniversary of the landing on Plymouth Rock. During the first terrible winter of 1620-21 nearly half of the Mayflower company had died. But the fall of 1621 had assured them of an abundant harvest. Moreover, the Fortune had arrived in November with thirty-five more colonists. So there was every reason why Gov. William Bradford should set apart a day for, thanksgiving.

HOWLAND HOUSE

The Puritans, who arrived in force beginning with 1630, apparently adopted the Thanksgiving Day of the Pilgrims. Or possibly they evolved a Thanksgiving Day of their own. Anyway, the Puritans at Watertown had a Thanksgiving Day celebration in 1634. The famous Cotton Mather, in his "Magnalia Christi Americana; Or, The Ecclesiastical History of New-England" has a chapter on the life of the Rev. John Sherman (1613-85), A. B., A. M. (Trinity, Cambridge), who arrived in Watertown in the summer of 1634, in which he

So much was religion the first sought of the first come into this country, that they solemnly offered up their praises unto Him that "inhabita the praises of Israel" before they had provided of Thanksgiving was now kept by the Christians of a new, here called Water-town, under a tree; on which Thanksgiving Mr. Sherman preached his first sermon, as an assistant unto Mr. Philips: there being present many other divines, who wondered exceedingly to hear a subject as security. dered exceedingly to hear a subject so accurately excellently handled by one that had never before performed any such public exercise.

Cotton Mather, it will be noted, makes no mention of a Thanksgiving feast following the "public exercises" "under a tree." It is to be hoped that the famous divine was a bit forgetful-otherwise the Puritans of Watertown must have been obliged to be satisfied with "a feast of reason and a flow of soul." Incidentally it is interesting to note that in all human probability President Coolidge's great-great-great-great-great-greatgrandfather was one of the congregation that listened to that Thanksgiving sermon.

The first national observance of Thanksgiving Day took place 160 years after the first celebration at Plymouth. It is generally stated that the first national observance was November 26, 1789, in accordance with a proclamation by President Washington. That, however, is an historical error.

In the proceedings of the Second Continental Congress it is recorded that September 13, 1781, on motion of Mr. Sherman, seconded by John Witherspoon of New Jersey, it was resolved that Thursday, December 31, 1781, be 'appointed as a Day of Public Thanksgiving throughout the United States and that a committee be appointed to prepare and report a proclamation suitable to the occasion.'" The committee appointed consisted of Mr. Sherman, Mr. Witherspoon, Joseph Montgomery and James Mitchell Varnum. The proclamation, reported October 26, 1781, recites, among other things, that the year is one in which "the confederation of the United States has been completed" and "in which, after the success of our allies by sea, a General of First Rank, with his whole army, has been captured by the allied forces under the direction of our Commander in

In the first session of the first congress, organized April 3, 1789, we find Mr. Sherman one of a committee of three to request President Washington "to recommend to the people a day of public thanksgiving and prayer to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many signal favors of Almighty God, especially by affording an opportunity peaceably to establish a Constitution of Government for their safety and happiness." It was in accordance with this request that President Washington by proclamation set apart November 26, 1789, as a day of public

The "Mr. Sherman" in both cases was Roger Sherman of Connecticut (1721-93), who is unique in American history in that he helped prepare and signed the four great documents: Articles of Association (1774), Declaration of Independence (1776), Articles of Confederation (1781) and Constitution of the United States (1787). He was a great-grandson of Capt. John Sherman of Watertown, who heard his cousin, Reverend John, preach the Thanksgiving sermon "under a tree." And it was Roger Sherman's grandson, United States Senator George Frisble Hoar of Massachusetts, who procured the return from England in 1896 of the manuscript diary of Gov. William Bradford containing the "Mayflower Compact."

Thanksgiving Day, as a recurrent national holiday by Presidential proclamation, had its beginning in 1863. In October of that year President Lincoln by proclamation so recommended the day to the people and set aside the last Thursday in November for its observance. Such has been the slow growth through three centuries of the observ ance of Thanksgiving Day, which has marched across the continent with the American people.

Plymouth attracts more than 250,000 visitors a year. These visitors make much of the "Old Howland House," which dates back to 1666 and was owned by Jabez Howland, son of the John Howland of the Mayflower. It now belongs to the Howland Descendants of America. John Howland was that "lustie younge man" of whom Gov. William Bradford writes, in his "History of the Plimoth Plantation":

In sundrie of these stormes the winds were so feirce and the seas so high as they could not beare a knote of saile, but were forced to hull—strike sails and toss with the waves—for diverce days togither. And in one of them, as they thus lay at hull, in a mighty storme, a lustic younge man (called John Howland) coming upon some occasion above the grattings, was, with a seele—roll—of the shipe thrown into the sea; but it pleased God that he caught hould of the top saile halliards, which hunge overboard, and rane out at length; yet he held his hould (though he was sundrie yet he held his hould (though he was sundrie fadomes under water) till he was hald up by the same rope to the brime of the water, and then with a boathooke and other means got into the shipe againe, and his life saved; and though he was something ill with it, yet he lived many years after, and became a profitable member both in church and commonwealthe.

This "lustie younge man," thus miraculously saved, married Elizabeth Tillie, who was on the Mayflower, and their descendants are many in the land. Moreover, tradition has it that John Howland was the last of the Mayflower passengers to Many places in the south of England have associations with the Pilgrims and have honored their memory with memorials of various kinds. The latest memorial to be set up is a stone at Immington creek, at Hull. It was unveiled in the presence of representatives of the American, British and Dutch navies. The photograph reproduced shows Capt. A. P. Fairchild, U. S. N., delivering an address on the Pilgrims.

On Thanksgiving Day the good American should give thanks to the Divine Providence which has so often aided the progress of this one nation of earth dedicated to liberty, to equality of rights and opportunity and to the pursuit of happiness. Never in all history has the individual citizen had so great an opportunity to achieve a competence, establish a home and found a family. Never before has a people enjoyed such material comfort. And the pation is the wealthiest and most powerful of earth.

With power comes responsibility; such is the unwritten law. Also prosperity tries the soul of man quite as much as does adversity, such is human nature. And so it is with nations. The good American should therefore add dignity and importance to Thanksgiving Day by taking stock of the past and the present and by making resolves for the future.

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

Influenza, Grippe and Pneumonia usually start with a cold. The moment you get those warning aches, get busy with good old Musterole.

Musterole relieves the congestion and stimulates circulation. It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister. Rub it on with your finger-tips. First you feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief. Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

To Mothers: Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterele.

SEE NO DANGER OF U. S. COAL FAMINE

Production Said to Be Ample to Fuel Nation-Strike May End Soon.

Washington.—The nation is insured against a coal famine even if the hardcoal strike continues, according to a statement issued by the National Coal association, which is the national organization of the bituminous opera-

The statement presents figures intended to show that the bitumnous mines are fueling and can continue to fuel the entire nation.

The statement is signed by Harry L. Gandy, executive secretary of the National Coal association. It is pointed but that there is no indication of a general car shortage which will interfere this winter with fuel transporta-

"The actual fact," says the statement, "is that bituminous production is exceeding by several hundred thousand tons the weekly average that it will be necessary to maintain until March 31, the end of what is known as the coal year, to meet the average consumption of both anthracite and bituminous. An average weekly profluction of 11,880,785 net tons will fuel this nation, and, according to the figures of the United States bureau of mines, the production in each of the last two weeks of October exceeded 12,000,000 tons. In fact, for the week ended October 31, the figure was 12, 450,000 tons.

Philadelphia.—Reports again were in circulation in the anthracite fields of a possible compromise offer to end the coal strike.

These reports had it the proposal would be either a 5 per cent increase in wages or the granting of a partial check-off. The partial check-off would mean the collection by the coal companies of only union dues, but not union assessments.

There was also a rumor that miners and operators would get together within a few days.

Valentinos Confirm Report of Paris Divorce

New York .- Confirmation came of reports that a divorce would end the marital venture of Rudolph Valentino, film sheik, and Winifred Hudnut, heiress and aspirant to movie stardom. Of the cabled reports from Paris that Mrs. Valentino had already brought suit, Mrs. Valentino said: "I want to devote myself exclusively to my career in the film. I want to think about my work and to make my own living. The public can draw its own conclusions."

She pointed out that both parties to a suit must be present in France. Rudolph is preparing to sail for Paris at once. In a dictated statement he said:

"Mrs. Valentino having applied in Paris for a divorce from me, it is my intention to defer to her wishes in this matter. As I understand it, all I have to do is to establish a domicile in France, which I will do immediately upon arrival in Paris."

RADIO CONFERENCE DRAFTS NEW LAW

Reduction in Number of Stations Demand at Parley.

Washington. - Radio broadcasting stations will be reduced in number as present stations go out of existence voluntarily and no new stations will be licensed except when Secretary Hoover is convinced that they will not add to the congestion of the air. This was the principle adopted by the Fourth National radio conference.

A law is being drawn up by the conference giving the secretary of commerce legal control, and the measure will be presented at the coming session of congress.

Some provisions proposed by the radio men follow:

(a) The rights of free speech shall not be violated.

(b) Those engaged in radio communication shall not be required to devote their property to public use, as their properties are not public utilities; but a license or permit to engage in radio communication shall be issued only to those who, in the opinion of the secretary of commerce, will render a benefit to the public, are necessary in the public interest, or are contributing to the development of

Giant British Submarine Lost in Channel With 68

London,-Another tragic submarine mystery developed when the admiralty announced the disappearance of the M-1, a giant submersible, with 68 officers and men in the English channel during a storm.

It is presumed the disaster is analagous to the American loss of the S-4. Her skipper was Lieut. Commander Alec Carrie.

The M-1, built in 1919, is one of the world's largest submarines. It is of the monitor type and carries a 12-inch gun, besides heavy secondary batteries.

Obligation Fixed at $2,407,-000,000-Due in Sixtytwo Years.

Washington.-The Italian government, third largest of America's war debtors, funded its ol ligations to the United States on the most liberal terms yet accorded to a European na-

Italy borrowed $1,648,000,000 in American money. That obligation, with accrued interest to date, aggreapproximately $2,138,000,000. Italy will pay $2,407,000,000 to the United States over a period of 62 years, in full discharge of this obligation. The settlement, according to members of the American debt commission, is $215,000,000 more than Count Volpi and his associates of the Italian debt commission hoped to pay, but the Italian plenipotentiaries were radiantly happy, well satisfied with the terms and effusive in their praise of the treatment accorded them by the United States.

Count Volpi declared in a formal statement that the "settlement is a long step toward the restoration of economic peace in Europe."

The settlement agreed upon was that proposed by the American debt commission and represented the unanimous view of the commission after eleven days of negotiation with the Italians and a thorough examination of Italy's capacity to pay.

Italy will pay $759,000,000 in interest in addition to the actual borrow-The principal comes back in full. Italy's depleted capacity to pay is given recognition in the low interest rates granted throughout the amortization period. For the first five years she pays no interest and will pay annually $5,000,000. The interest will be one-eighth of 1 per cent for the first five years.

Count Volpi will make preliminary arrangements in New York for a $100,-000,000 loan to Italy before sailing for home, it is said.

Wonderful Golden Crown Found on King Tut's Head

Cairo.-Discovery that the wonderful golden crown of Egypt is still on the head of Tut-Ankh-Amen was the thrilling culmination of the painstaking unwrapping of his mummy by Doctor Carter and the scientists who are assisting him.

Although the head has not been fully unwrapped, it is indicated that on it is the double crown of upper and lower Egypt, which never before has been seen in the history of Egyptology. The shape of the crown, however, is familiar to Egyptologists.

The feet were first bared and they are so small that the theory is that King Tut died when he was about fifteen.

So far nothing has been disclosed to support the theory that the king was murdered.

Christian Settlements Suffer in New Bombardment.

Cairo.-The bombardment of Damascus has been renewed by the French, according to dispatches from Syria. The houses of Christians suffered in the new bombardment, which was a sequal to a night-long battle when rebel forces, led by Hassan el Kharrat, raided the city.

Batteries in the citadel at Elmeyeh joined in the battle and shells crashed on the Christian quarter at El Babelsharky, from which 12,000 refugees fled to Beirut. Many women and old men of Damascus were driven mad by terror during the last bombardment, a prominent physician, who has just arrived here from the Syrian metropolis, declares. Eye-witness accounts of the disorders in Damascus assert that the French shot 15 children and youths, including a boy of four.

TAX REDUCTION PUT AT $308,366,709

Long List of Excise and Occupational Levies Cut or Eliminated.

Washington.-The house ways and means committee completed its outline of tax reduction, setting the final total at $308,366,709, after many "nuisance taxes" had been dropped and a long list of excise and occupational levies had been slashed or eliminated entirely. Only the taxes on admissions and club dues were left virtually unchanged.

In its six arduous hours of executive session, the committee also fixed the graduations in the new surtax rate, granted life tenure and a higher salary to members of the board of tax appeals, and rescinded their former vote granting exemptions up to the age of twenty-one for children attending educational institutions. Now the administrative features of the law are all that are left to be considered.

Chairman Green announced the $308,366,709 total, which is allotted as follows:

н		200
ļ	Earned income	7,000,000
	Normal tax	45,546,186
	Surfar	98,691,720
į	Evemntions	42,330,640
	Gift tax	1,000,000
	Cigora	12,000,000
	Alcohol	4,000,000
	Excise taxes	84,367,168
	Occupational taxes	11,431,000
	Stamp tax	2,000,000

There will be no change in the surtax rates for incomes up to $40,000. From this point up to incomes of $100,000 and more, the scale runs from 14 per cent up to the maximum of 20 per cent. The scale rises 1 per cent for every $10,000 as far as incomes of $80,000 a year. Incomes of not less than $80,000 and not more than $100,000 are to pay a surtax of 19 per cent.

The $12,000,000 knocked off the tax on cigars will reduce the burden on gars of small size from $1.50 to 75 cents a thousand.

The $4,000,000 cut in the $18,000,-000 alcohol tax will in the end reduce the present $2.20 levy per gallon of proof alcohol to $1.10. Fifty-five cents of this cut is effective on January 1,

1927, and 55 cents more on January

The $7,807,811 levy on automobile trucks and wagons and the $22,737,-384 tax on tires and accessories were dropped and the tax on passenger cars was cut to the extent of $37,656,-That is, the rate was reduced 619.

In addition, the tax on physicians' dispensing narcotics was reduced from $3 to $1 a year, which makes a reduction in revenue of $311,000. Although the committee left the tax on admissions and dues which brings in about $31,000,000, they voted to remove the tax on the "legitimate" theater.

---13---"In certain eventualities, Captain Drummond, I propose to send an anonymous letter to Scotland Yard. Surprised though they would be to get it, it might help them to clear up the mystery of Mr. Latter's insanity. It may prove rather unpleasant for

"It's kind of you to give me a loophole of escape," said Drummond pleas-"What are the eventualities to which you allude?"

"Dear, dear," said Hugh. "Am I supposed to have them in my possession?"

"I can only hope most sincerely for your sake that you have," returned the other. "Otherwise I'm afraid that letter will go to the police."

For a while Drummond smoked in silence: then, with a lazy smile on his face, he sat down in an armchair facing the hunchback. "There are one or two things I have to say to you before depriving myself of the pleasure of your company. By the post following the one which carries your interesting disclosure will go another letter addressed to Sir Bryan Johnstone himself. I shall be in the office when he opens it-and we shall both be roaring with laughter over the extraordinary delusion that I -quite the biggest fool of his acquaintance-could possibly be the leader of the Black Gang. And, as if to prove the utter absurdity of the suggestion, this second letter will be from the leader of the Black Gang himself. In it he will state that he was present at 5 Green street, Hoxton. iast night in an endeavor to obtain possession of the anarchist and Bolshevist literature stored there. That he took with him a professional burglar to assist him in opening the safe and other things which might be there, and that while engaged in this eminently virtuous proceeding he found that he was trapped in the room by some mechanical device. And then will come a very interesting disclosure. He will state how suddenly he saw through a crack in the door a pair of eyes looking at him. And their color -see, what is the color of your eyes? -gray-blue, very noticeable. Much the same as old Longmoor's-though his are a little bluer. And then the owner of the eyes was so inconsiderate as to throw a bomb in the room a bomb which killed one of the men, and wrecked the desk. So that the owner of the eyes, gray-blue eyes just like yours, is a murderer—a common murderer. And we hang men in England for murder." He paused and stared at the hunchback. "This is a

"And you really imagine," said the hunchback contemptuously, "that even vour police would believe such a story that a man would wreck his own office, when on your own showing he had the men trapped inside it?"

jolly game, isn't it?"

"Probably not," said Drummond affably. "Any more than they would believe that I was the leader of the Black Gang. So since they're such a wretched crowd of unbelievers I don't think it's much good playing that game. Waste of time, isn't it? So I vote we play another one, all on our own-a little game of make-believelike we used to play in the nursery."

"I haven't an idea what you're talking about, Captain Drummond," said the hunchback, shifting uneasily in his chair. For all trace of affability had vanished from the face of the man opposite him, to be replaced by an expression which made Mr. Atkinson pass his tongue once or twice over lips that had suddenly gone dry. "Haven't you, you rat?" said Drummond quietly. "Then I'll tell you. Just for the next five minutes we're going to pretend that these two astonishing statements which the police-stupid fellows-won't believe are true. We're going to pretend-only pretend, mind you-that I am the leader of the Black Gang; and we're going to pretend that you are the man who flung the bomb last night. Just for five minutes only, then we go back to reality and unbelieving policemen.'

And if during the following five minutes strange sounds were heard by Denny in the room below, he was far too accustomed to the sounds of breaking furniture to worry. It wasn't until the hunchback pulled a knife that Drummond warmed to his work, but from that moment he lost his temper. And because the hunchback was a hunchback-though endowed withal by Nature with singular strength-it jarred on Drummond to man. So he flogged him with a rhinoceros-hide whip till his arm ached, and then he flung him into a chair, gasping, cursing, and scarcely human.

"You shouldn't be so realistic in your stories, Snooks, I shall call you Snooks," he remarked affably, though his eyes were still merciless as he looked at the writhing figure. "And I feel quite sure that that is what the leader of the Black Gang would have done if he had met the peculiar humorist who threw that bomb last night. Bad habit-throwing bombs."

With a final curse the hunchback staggered to his feet, and his face was diabolical in its fury.

"You shall pay for that, Captain Drummond, stroke by stroke, and lash by lash," he said in a shaking voice. Drummond laughed shortly.

"All the same, old patter," he re marked. "Tell old Longmoor with my love—" He paused and grinned. "No, on second thoughts I think I'll tell his reverence myself-at the appointed time."

"What will you tell him?" sneered the hunchback.

"Why, that his church isn't the only place where dry-rot has set in. It's prevalent amongst his pals as well. Must you go? Straight down the stairs, and the card tray in the hall is only electro-plate-so you might leave it."

With a great effort Mr. Atkinson pulled himself together.

"Can we come to an understanding, Captain Drummond?" he remarked quietly. "I can assure you, of course,

"Someone Has Been in This Room Denny," Said Drummond.

that you have made a terrible mistake in thinking that it was I who threw that bomb at you last night."

"At me?" Drummond laughed short-"Who said you'd thrown it at me? That wasn't the game at all, Snooks You threw it at the leader of the Black Gang."

"Can't we put our cards on the table?" returned the other with studied moderation. "I know that you are that leader, you know it—though it is possible that no one else would believe it. I was wrong to threaten you-I should have known better; I apologize, But if I may say so I have had my punishment. Now as man to mancan we come to terms?"

"I am waiting," said Hugh briefly. 'Kindly be as concise as possible."

"Those diamonds, Captain Drummond. Rightly or wrongly I feel tolerably certain that you either have them in your possession, or that you know where they are. Now, those diamonds were not mine-did you speak? No. Well-to resume. The diamonds were not mine; they had been deposited in the desk in my office unknown to me. Then this fool-whom you foolishly think was myself-threw the bomb into the office to kill you. I admit it; he told me all about it. He did not kill you, for which fact, if I may say so, I am very glad. You're a sportsman, and you've fought like a sportsman—but our fight, Captain Drummond, has been over other matters. The diamonds are a side-show and hardly concern you and me. I'll he frank with you; they are the sole wealth saved by a Russian nobleman from the Bolshevist outrages. He deposited them in my office during my absence, with the idea of my selling them for him-and now he and his family must starve. And so what I propose is-"

"I don't think I want to hear your proposal, Snooks," said Drummond "Doubtless I look a fool; kindly. ight him as if he had been a normal doubtless I am a fool, but I like to radio sets are to be made.

think duct /m not a congenital idiot. I'm glad you have discovered that it's not much use threatening me; but to tell you the strict truth, I prefer threats to nauseating hypocrisy. So much so in fact that the thought of that starving nobleman impels me to take more exercise. Ever read "Alice in Wonderland," Snooks? A charming book-a masterpiece of English literature. And there is one singularly touching, not to say fruity, bit which concerns Father William-and a gent teel young man."

With a look of complete bewilder ment on his face Mr. Atkinson felt himself propelled through the door, until he came to a halt at the top of the stairs.

"It's a little poem, Snooks, and some day I will recite it to you. Just now I can only remember the one singularly beautiful line which has suggested my new form of exercise."

Mr. Atkinson became aware of a boot in the lower portion of his back, and then the stairs seemed to rise up and hit him. He finally came to rest in the hall against an old oak chest of the pointed-corner type, and for a moment or two he lay there dazed. Then he scrambled to his feet to find three young men, who had emerged from a lower room during his flight, gazing at him impassively; while standing at the top of the stairs down which he had just descended and outlined against a window was the huge, motionless figure of Drummond. Half cursing, half sobbing, he staggered to the front door and opened it. Once more he looked back-not one of the four men had moved. They were just staring at him in absolute silence, and, with a sudden feeling of pure terror, Count Zadowa, alias Mr. Atkinson, shut the door behind him and staggered into the sunlit street.

CHAPTER X

In Which Hugh Drummond and the Reverend Theodosius Have a Little Chat

"Come up, boys," laughed Hugh. "The fog of war is lifting slowly." He led the way back into the study and the other three followed him.

"That object, Ted, you will be pleased to hear, is the humorist who threw the bomb at us last night."

"The devil it was," cried Jerningham. "I hope you gave him something for me. Incidentally, how did he run you to earth here?"

"Things have moved within the last two or three hours," answered Drummond slowly. "Who do you think is stopping at the Ritz at the present moment? Who do you think lunched with Peter and me today? Why--Peterson, my buckos-no more and mo

The nuisance of it is that by putting two and two together they've spotted me as the leader of our bunch. How I don't quite know, but they indubitably have. They also think I've got those diamonds: hence the visit of the hunchback, who did not know they were in the desk when he bunged the bomb. In fact, things are becoming clearer all the way round. . . . Hulle! What's this?"

He had opened his desk as he spoke, and was now staring fixedly at the

"It's been forced," he said grimly. "Forced since this morning. They've been over this desk while I've been out. Push the bell. Ted."

They waited in silence till Denny appeared in answer to the ring. "Someone has been in this room. Denny," said Drummond. "Someone has forced this desk since half-past eleven this morning."

"There's been no one in the house, sir," answered Denny, "except the man who came about the electric light."

"Electric grandmother," snapped his master. "You paralytic idiot, why did you leave him alone?" "Well, sir, Mrs. Drummond was in the house at the time-and the servants were all round the place." Denny looked and felt aggrieved, and after a while Drummond smiled.

What sort of a man was it, you old fathead?"

"A very respectable sort of man," returned Denny with dignity. "I remarked to Mrs. Denny how respectable he was, sir. Why, he actually went some distance down the street to call a taxi for Mrs. Drummond to go to the Ritz. .. .

His words died away, as he stared in amazement at the expression on his master's face. "What the devil is it, Hugh?" cried

Ted Jerningham. "He called a taxi, you say?" muttered Drummond. "The man who came here called a taxi?" "Yes, sir," answered Denny. "He was leaving the house at the same time, and as there was none in sight he said he'd send one along at once.' "And Mrs. Drummond went in the taxi he sent?" "Certainly, sir," said Denny in surprise. "To the Ritz, to join you. I gave the order myself to the driver." The veins were standing out or Drummond's forehead, and for a moment it seemed as if he was going to hit his servant. Then with an effort he controlled himself, and sank back is his chair with a groan.

FEED CABBAGE AND POTATOES TO COWS

Potatoes may be fed to dairy cows immediately after milking without noticeably affecting either the flavor or odor of the milk or cream. Similarly, cabbage may he fed with but slight effect on the flavor and odor of these products. These facts were brought out in experiments conducted by experts of the United States Department of Agriculture to determine whether feeding cabbage or potatoes affects the flavor and odor of milk and to ascertain how they may be fed and the milk handled so as to minimize any objectionable effect on its quality.

The investigation was conducted with six Holstein and ten Jersey cows, representative of the two breeds, weighing on an average 1,145 and 918 pounds respectively. The stage of lactation varied from fresh cows to those nearing the end of their lactation period.

The animals were divided into groups of four. One group received a ration consisting of two parts (by weight) each of hominy feed, bran, and oats, and of one part each of cottonseed meal and linseed meal. In addition, the cows were fed all the alfalfa hay they would consume readily. Besides the hay and grain ration, the other three groups received, respectively, the following quantities of cabbage: 15 pounds one hour before milking, 30 pounds one hour before milking, and 30 pounds immediately after milking. This practice was followed for four consecutive days, but on the fifth day no cabbage was fed. The cows in the various groups were then interchanged in order to equalize any abnormal results in the milk of an individual animal. There were times, however, when certain cows failed to consume the entire amount of cabbage fed. Of each 15pound portion of cabbage fed an average of 14.3 pounds was eaten; while when 30 pounds was fed an average of 24 pounds was consumed. Samples were taken from the milk of each cow at the time of milking and cooled but not aerated. The samples were examined for flavor and odor by experienced judges having no knowledge as to which cow produced a particular

It was found that when dairy cows consume an average of 14.3 pounds of cabbage one hour before milking the flavor and odor of their milk are unfavorably affected. An increase in the amount of cabbage fed intensifies the objectionable flavor and odor. In the case of cows eating 15 pounds of cabbage immediately after milking there are but few resulting objectionable odors and flavors in the milk. In connection with these experiments another series of tests was made under similar conditions to determine the effect of feeding potatoes on the flavor and odor of milk.

These tests showed that when dairy cows consume an average of 14.8 pounds of potatoes one hour before milking, slightly abnormal flavors and odors may be produced, but they are so slight that they would seldom be noticed by the average consumer. Increasing the amount of potatoes fed one hour before milking from 14.8 pounds to 29.3 pounds does not increase objectionable flavors and odors in the milk. Dairy cows may safely be fed 28.7 pounds of potatoes immediately after milking without affecting the odor and flavor of the milk. Proper aeration is of value in reducing strong abnormal flavors and odors in milk caused by feeding cabbage, and some of the slightly objectionable flavors and odors may be entirely eliminated by this method.

From Four to Six Weeks

Vacation Is Long Enough Cows should not go dry too long at time, four to six weeks vacation from milk production is long enough. When cows remain dry through a long period of time the blood has a tendency to get too rich and trouble may follow. Too long a dry period in a cow's life is apt to make her forget that her function and life's work should be the production of milk.

It may seem strange but it is true that some cow owners breed their cows to freshen in the spring, then when fall months and winter approach they dry up the cows with the explanation that the bovines won't give enough milk in winter to pay "fussing" with them.

Coming back to feeding through the dry period it may be well to emphasize liberal feeding. While on good pasture the average-sized cow should have at least eight pounds of oats and four pounds of bran each day. The oats part of this ration is essential and should be divided equally for each feeding time.

Minerals for Cows

If cows receive legume hay—alfalfa, clover, soy beans or sweet cloverin winter, and are on good pasture in the summer, there is no danger of a lack of minerals, except perhaps with very heavy producers. If legume hays are not fed, and for very heavy producing herds, it is recommended that two to four pounds of steamed bone meal, ground rock phosphate, finely ground limestone or wood ashes be fed with each 100 pounds of grain mixture.
