WOULD DEVELOP NEWAYGO OIL LAND

With the recent formation of a company for the blocking out and leasing of prospective oil lands in Newaygo county prospects point to considerable early activity in development throughout the county. Up to the present about 9,000 acres of land, most of which is in large-sized tracts, have been leased by one company, with other concerns coming in from outside the county to sign up additional acres. The bulk of the land leased so far is in Ashland, Grant, Bridgeton, Garfield and Sheridan townships.

The work of signing up land owners is progressing rapidly and the acreage under lease is rapidly being increased. The main object of the new company in blocking out and leasing large tracts is to protect the small owner against wildcat speculation and insure development of the oil lands of this section by the larger and more responsible companies. There will be no speculating in leases, as has been the case in other parts of the state, it is stated.

Negotiations now are under way to drill a series of nine test wells on various plats of the leasing land.

Automobile Owes Much to Chemistry

The greatness of chemistry's cortribution to the automobile industry was pointed out recently at a meeting of the American Chemical society in Detroit.

It was summarized by Dr. T. A. Boyd, of the General Motors research laboratory, when he pointed out that the two fundamental problems in making any automobile were really chemical problems. These, he said, were, "How shall it be made?" and "Of what shall it be made?"

"Although these two problems appear to be separate and distinct," he explained, "there is really an inti-For fifty years genuine "Phillips planting a tract of land which the mate relationship between them. They Milk of Magnesia" has been preconstruction have a large influence

Expect to Raise $20,000 to Clear Pine Lodge Debt

Efforts will be made to raise $20,-000 to cancel the debt on Pine Lodge, the summer conference and recreational grounds on the north shore of Black lake.

Launched a few years ago by a group of men of Holland, Grand Rapids, Zeeland and other cities for the spiritual value to the youth and for higher moral purposes this venture has been successful.

The annual program has made provision for conferences for boys and girls and a Bible conference at which Bible scholars were speakers.

The grounds are beautifully located and are equipped with a large hotel and several cottages, a bathing beach and other conveniences.

Many improvements are contemplated, depending largely upon the essential financial support. The founders see in it the "Winona of West-Michigan." Conference again will be held in July and August.

Season's Carp Catch in Black Lake is 85 Tons

A catch of 17 tons of carp made in Black lake last Saturday brings the total catch of these fish up to 85 tons for the present winter.

The seining of carp from the lake is being done this year by the Holland Game and Fish Protective association. Formerly it was in charge of private commercial fishermen working under contract with the state conservation department. All revenue from the sale of the carp on eastern markets will be used by the association for building bass ponds and other conservation projects in Ottawa county.

Kaleva Man to Succeed Manistee Road Engineer

William D. Manchester, Manistee ounty engineer, is to leave that office April 1 and will be succeeded by Izaak Jouppi of Kaleva, a member of the county highway commission, who will resign from that organization. The change is said to be the result of friction between Manchester and state highway officials. J. L. Sharpensteen, maintenance engineer of the state highway department at Cadillac, is said to have made the complaint. Manchester, who has been engineer three years, believes the opposition was due to his policy of opposing state efforts to establish a maintenance branch here and terminate the working agreement with the county highway department. Manchester and Jouppi will work together until April 1.

Little Milan, Ohio, claims as its most distinguished son, Thomas A Edison, noted inventor, who was born there Feb. 11, 1847. Thus there will be apparently more lambs coming to market both in the first half and in the latter half of this year than was the case last year. The wool situation, however, appears favorable to producers, with light supplies abroad and fairly firm markets.

"The beef cattle industry has been curtailing production. The total number of cattle in the country January 1 was 1,176,000 head or 2 per cent fewer than a year ago. That is 15,-500,000 or 22 per cent below the high point of 1918. It seems probable that the cattle industry is at or near the low point of a production cycle. These cycles usually extend over a period of 14 to 16 years. Previous low points in production occurred in 1898 and 1912. The expectation is that the improvement in cattle prices will stimulate the restocking of farms and ranges and that the trend of produc-tion will soon be gradually upward and for several years to come.

"The dairy industry appears to be in strong position, with some slight tendency to increase its young stock. There were about 3 per cent more yearling dairy heifers on farms January 1 than a year ago. The steadily shrinking number of horses reflect a transition perhaps without parallel in history. It has gone far enough however, to stimulate horse prices, with the presumption that good drafttype colts will grow into money for some years to come."

The bureau's index of purchasing other commodities is placed at 86 for the past year, compared with 85 for 1925 and 20 for the past year. 1925, and 89 for the year 1925. The best preceding year was 1919 when the purchasing power figure was 105, the 1909-14 five-year average being used as a base of 100.

Viewing the entire agricultural situation, the bureau says that "so far as concerns the production plans of farmers, the probability appears to be Ruth Hutchins, 17-year-old captain that the domestic market for this of the Griffith, Ind., high school bas- year's output will be equal to that at itch, improvement."

Artichokes Found To Contain Large Amount of Sugar

The Jerusalem artichoke, which for a long time has had an undeserved reputation as a weed, is now beginring to attract interest because of the recent development of a method of manufacturing levulose - fruit sugar-from its tubers.

In the past it has been recommended as a feed for hogs, as a garden vegetable, and as a forage plant for live stock. It grows readily on good corn soil, and by proper rotation and cultural practices can be kept under control so that it will not become a nuisance. In fact, the plant often grows so dense that it can be used successfully in smothering out other weeds or quack grass.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture believes the plant is worthy of more attention and is making an effort to develop varieties that are suitable for use as human food and as a source of levulose-fruit sugar.

War in China Stops Hunting Parasites for Japanese Beetles

How a revolution in China may afect agriculture in the United States reflected in the annual report of the bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture. Since the Japanese beetle has been damaging orchards in a region in and about New Jersey, the bureau has had trained men searching through Japan, China and India for parasitic insects and organisms that are natural enemies of the beetle. The report comments that "during the year it has been necessary to curtail the parasite work in China because of unsettled conditions in that country.'

GAPES OF CHICKENS PREVALENT

Chickens are often afflicted with a disease known as "gapes," a condition occurring in little chicks as the result of the presence of gapeworms in the windpipe. These worms are blood red and the male and female worms are joined together in such a way as to form a letter Y with a long stem, from which fact the worm is sometimes known as the Y-worm. These worms block the windpipe in such a way as to cause great difficulty in breathing, and the sick chicks show a very characteristic form of breathing, the mouth being opened wide and the breathing ing or wheezy sound. A few birds, usually those with few worms in the windpipe, recover spontaneously, but

BORER CONTROL IS PROFITABLE

Shredding, ensiling, or grinding cornstalks is good farming and means death to the corn borer. Such practices utilize all parts of the corn plant for feed. Although the borer is said to have more than the nine lives of a cat, it can not stand this racket. The shredder and ensilage cutter were both effective weapons in controlling the pest in the infested area of the State last fall.

New Code Shows Teeth in $5 Check Forgery Case

Chester Bialorucki, alias Chester White, of Grand Rapids, was sentenced by Circuit Judge Russell R. McPeek to seven years in Jackson prison on a charge of forging a $5 check on a local bank last November. Prosecuting Attorney Sigher filed an information under the new state criminal code alleging Bialorucki previously had been convicted of burglary in Grand Rapids and had been sentenced to from two to fifteen years at Ionia. For the second offense this code provides for a minimum term not less than one-half of the maximum term prescribed by law for the offense.

This was the first case in this court in which the provision of the code has been invoked.

The face of the giant grew very

"Yeh," he said. "Yeh," he said. And I'm gonna miss you—an awful lot."

CHAPTER II

Bob Terry's packing was a piti-lly simple process. From the wooden chest at the foot of his cot he took his few belongings: shirts, underwear, socks, handkerchiefs, a tattered coat, a pipe and a tin half full of cheap tobacco. His toilet arti-cles consisted of a toothbrush and a across Bob's forehead. The constant mention of Kathleen annoyed him. He didn't want to know the girl, or even to see her. Of course Todd Shannon had been too good a friend to give offense-and so Terry was determined to see the woman once and then forget about her.

In the few minutes preceding the commencement of the afternoon's labor in the mill, the prisoners who lived in Bob's cell block, crowded about the open door. They were a queer assortment of human beings, yet the sloping foreheads, squinty eyes and receding chins which are popularly associated with the idea of criminal types were strangely infrequent. These men, serving terms ranging from two years to life, were appallingly like those of the world beyond the granite walls. They were neat and clean and interested. The only group-characteristic to distinguish them from the denizens of the city beyond the walls was that they spoke in whispers. They were sub-

The siren split the quiet air. The prisoners crowded into the main corridor and thence into the courtyard en route to the cotton mill. Todd Shannon hung back with his young friend. He was more upset than he cared to admit. He was fond of Bob Terry, and had p lanned to greet him on the outside when the prison should eventually give the young man up. But his release had changed everything and Shannon feared for the lad who was row going into the outer world as alone as when he entered the Shannon knew what was awaiting Bob. An ex-convict is a person generally feared and never trusted. Small likelihood that the world at large would know Bob Terry as the man who had been victimized by a gross miscarriage of justice: they would not know or care that he was guilty of no crime and that society at large owed him an unpayable debt. People would only know that for three years he had been an inmate of the state penitentiary; the bar sinister of penal servitude was indelibly engraved upon which to say it.

Side by side, with measured steps, the ill-assorted pair walked down the long main corridor to the heavy door

Bob Terry was conscious of an absurd reaction. At this moment of departure he felt a twinge of regret, as though he were abandoning a haven of refuge. After all, the prison itself had not been so very bad: it had been more the ghastly knowledge that he was no longer a human being, that his every movement was arranged for him, and that he was powerless. Simeon Mason was a humane warden. The prison had known very little brutality, and that had been the work of guards venting their individual and personal spleen. Even the punishment of unprisoners had been merciful But there was no escaping from the knowledge that one was no longer regarded as a human being; there was no escape from thought.

"You're going out, Terry. We all know you've been badly used. But don't let it eat on you. Give the world its chance to atone for this injustice.' The young man's eyes were veiled. He was restless and miserable. He didn't want preachment. He was grateful for the kindliness of the man and for his intentions, but all he desired now was to be let alone. In a second his entire casmic scheme had been disarranged. All of these three long years he had planned bitterly for a future where the taint of embezzlement and a prison term would hang over him. Now he found him self going forth into the world absolved of guilt and there had not been time to readjust his perspective. And so he listened with respectful-and somewhat sullen—silence to the warden. At length the voice stopped. Terry spoke without looking up.

"Thank you, sir." "You haven't even heard, have you?" "Yes, sir." we

CHAPTER III

He whirled and walked swiftly along the corridor toward the exit. The old, snappily-cut suit of blue serge flapped about his thin figure. In his left arm was the prison bundle his baggage. In his right hand was his baggage. In his right hand was the gift from his one friend. He stepped quickly through the front door—then, without knowing that he did so, he paused and gasped.
The sun was shining. From where he stood, Terry could see the broad panorama of verdant valley streaked
by a silver river which wound lazily

by a silver river, which wound lazily through rich farm lands. Far off to the left an aura of smoke hovered over a city which was the capital of the state. Automobiles were passing; people were talking and laughing carelessly. In the fields, two farm hands called

He looked back at the gray walls of the prison. He thought of Todd Shannon-and of the thousand other prisoners laboring hopelessly, ceaselessly, in the clatter and clangor of the cotton mill. He looked at the place where he had been aged in three

And when he turned away again, his face was set in lines of unrelieved bitterness.

The kindly man each swaying curve of the track, the smiled a greeting and designated an old blue serge suit on his desk. locomotive whistled at road crossings, there was dust and grime and soot everywhere—but to crouched in a corner of the last coach it was all very wonderful, and already he was beginning to feel the exhilaration of freedom.

He was unmindful of the discom fort. He scarcely knew that the first hot finger of an unusually early spring was that day being placed across the farm lands; he did not realize that the coach in which he traveled was uncomfortable and noisy and swirling with cinders. He was not even annoyed by the snoring miners in the seat behind him or the dirty, yelling children who raced up and down the

It was all new to him. Three years in the penitentiary had robbed him of memory. He had schooled himself day life and freedom much as a poor man thinks of foreign countries— something which he knows to exist, yet so exotic that his mind cannot quite grasp the actuality. And now Bob Terry found himself in it, onc more of it; and he was dazed.

He stared through the grimy win dow pane toward the broad vista of cottonfield. Somewhere off in the distance a double row of willow and cypress marked the course of a small stream wandering happily southward Two boys trudged down the hot, dusty road toward it, and each carried a long bamboo pole. It pleased Bob enormously to know that he might alight from the train if he pleased and go swimming. God! what glory a river swim would be. He settled back and closed his eyes. The visions unfolded to his thoughts were more free from bitterness than he knew. He was intoxicated by this sudden release from restriction, by the knowledge that he was once again a man of name instead of number. Three years had taught him the ultimate value of the tiniest things.

"When did you get out? The voice, raspingly guttural, grated harshly on the ears of the young It was the voice of power and man. authority and the past eternities had taught Bob to accept insults docilely.

He looked up into the heavy, blotched features of a squat, broad-shouldered man. Bob knew the type into the pig-like eyes beneath th heavy brows-and for a moment he

The man frowned. With a cheap gesture he swept back his coat and exhibited the shirty badge of a rail road detective. His voice cut through the fetid air of the car-loudly enough for those in the immediate vicinity to hear.

"I ast when you got out."

Later Bob knew that he should have been resentful. But he was too recently out of prison. The badge of authority was something he had learned to fear, particularly when worn by such as this heavy-set person. And so he answered the brutal question simply, and without thought of equivocation.

"Yesterday." And then, "How did you know?"

The detective was conscious of an audience in the next seat. "That's my business," he boomed. "Where are you goin'? Whatcha gonna do?"

Resentment was on Terrys' lips.

But he had learned from Todd Shannon that acquiescence was always the better course; he had learned to keep his face expressionless while hot fury surged within him, and so he told the railroad detective where he was going and explained that he didn't know what he was going to do.

The man boomed some coarse advice and waddled off down the aisle of the car. All about him Bob heard whispers. The word had been bruited whispers. The word had been bruited about. An ex-convict was on the car; a man just out of the state penitentiary. Yes, that was he—the oldish young man with the bit of silver at the temples; the slim one—sittin' over yonder. No, of course he don't look ike no criminal, but you never can tell about these crooks; they're slick uns. Might of been murder—Terry heard one mother warn her wide-eyed children.

And now the black cloud of bitterness and misery closed down over him again. So this, then, was the meaning of freedom—that he might be accosted brutally by any sodden railroad detective and questioned brutally as to himself and his plans; that the finger of suspicion was always to be leveled against him. That the mark which had warped his life. But no: that was impossible. He might do this once, but to what end? They would still murmur about him and look his way and shake their heads. They were privileged to regard him as an animal—to be stared at and talked about—just because he had been in prison. It seemed of little moment whether he was guilty or innocent.

Old Folks Say Doctor Caldwell was Right

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pep-

DEAN OF SCHOOL OF EDUCATION AT U. OF M. RESIGNS

Allen S. Whitney, dean of the school of education of the University of Michigan, announced his resignation at a meeting of the board of regents. He will be absent on leave next year and his resignation will take effect on July 1, 1929.

He is 71 years of age and a graduate of the University of Michigan of the class of 1885. He came to Michigan as junior professor of education and inspector of high schools in 1899 and was made a professor in 1902 and dean of the school of education when it was established.

The resignation of Dr. James D. Bruce, director of internal medicine at the university hospital, was accepted. He will devote more time to his work as director of the department of post-graduate medicine. Dr. C. C. Sturgis, director of the Thomas Henry Simpson Memorial Institute, was named director of internal medicine. He is also a professor of medicine in the medical school.

Dr. Frederick A. Coller, formerly associate professor of surgery, was elevated to the rank of professor of surgery, and Dean Hugh Cabot, also professor of surgery, was named head of the department of surgery. Dean Cabot formerly stood alone as professor of surgery

Dr. Carl E. Badgley was elevated from the rank of assistant professor of surgery to associate professor of surgery, and Dr. James M. Pierce was named assistant professor of obstetrics and gynecology.

The board accepted two gifts of the Fellowship Corporation of Battle Creek, one of which is for $20,000, to be paid in installments of $1,500 quarterly, and to be used for study in problems of metabolism. The second is a grant of $2,500 for investigation of bran as an article of diet. Work in connection with these grants is to be carried on by Professor L. H. Newburgh, it is specified.

The board accepted the gift of W. P. Harris, Jr., Grosse Pointe Park, who has agreed to provide the large ornamental lights for the entrance of the new museum.

LIVING AND LOVING

By Mrs. Virginia Lee A SERIOUS PROBLEM

Victim to her emotions a young woman has become entangled into a situation that can bring only unhappiness and sorrow to those she loves and to herself. But her finer instincts assert themselves and bravely she reaches out for some means of forestalling the inevitable. If she is strong and determined, she will come out of this tangle victorious and a finer woman for all her suffering.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: Oh, I do hope you can help me, for I am growing desperate and feel I shall try to end it all if I do not escape. My sister married one year ago and has been living with my mother and father. I have grown to love her husband and he loves me. Oh, it's horried, it's awful. I have steeled myself against him, but one night I was no longer strong and let him take me into his arms. Oh, the ecstasy of that mo-And now I can no longer face ment. my sister whom I love and whom I have betrayed. I must get away where they cannot reach me and where I can forget. If I should go to Florida and work in one of the hotels as waitress, would they pay my way? Please answer, for every minute is lost time.

"Desperate."

Under the circumstances the best thing for you to do is to go away. Do not take the matter in a tragic, desperate way, but rather regard yourself as a patient who needs treatment and then go about it without any sentimentality or self-pity. There is no way in which you could get your way paid to Florida. Why not model uses it to advantage. Its most go to New York or any other large city? An employment agency or the Travelers' Aid Society would help you to secure a position pretty soon as a waitress. Be strong and refuse to feel sorry for yourself. In the end you will come out of it a finer and better woman. You must be determined about the whole matter and never, never discuss it with anyone.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: There is a boy friend with whom I have correspondthe prosaic apple sauce, most families ed until ten months ago, when he welcome apple dumplings occasion- quit. I do not know why. Afterwards I heard that he was engaged. He lives many miles away, and now he and his folks are coming here soon. If he should want to go with to prepare them, but many house- me would I be treating myself right in refusing when I like him so much? If he is engaged, should I go with him if he wants me to? If ¶ were engaged to a boy I wouldn't want him to go with anyone else. But everyone says that being engaged doesn't matter nowadays. I do not believe in petting. That is one reason why I like this boy. Please help ne, and advise.

'Brown Eyes, Why Are You Blue?" Pull yourself together and don't lose your good judgment. The boy may never call on you. You must be fair to the other girl. Find a boy of your own whom you may trust and in the end you will laugh that you have taken this matter so seriously. The question of petting need not worry you because you can control it. There are plenty of boys ard salt, sift together. Cut in the who feel as you do about it. Just get busy and find one

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a young man, and would like you to give me some good advice what to do. I have on each square. Add one tablespoon been going with a girl, twenty years of age, for about four months. Now she has quit going with me and says she does not want to go with anyand place in a buttered pan or baking one. I would like to win her back, for I think a lot of her and she is a good working girl. Lonesome."

Looks to me as though the girl did not love you. Maybe you neglected to court her in a way that girls like to be courted. That is, make her understand and feel that you liked her because she was herself rather than a good working girl. If you think her worth winning, suppose you try it again and win her with attentions and devotions. All girls like that.

Women Still Considered Less Intellectual, Report

The continued existence of the belief in woman's mental inferiority, despite all statistics to the contrary, is indicated by an analysis of the demand for high school teachers which has been made by the bureau of appointments of Elmira College.

Women teachers of science and mathematics—the purely intellectual subjects—are much less in demand than are teachers of languages and histories, the analysis reveals. It finds that the combination of subjects most often asked for in a teacher by the high schools is French and Latin, this in spite of the supposed decline in the study of Latin.

"These subjects," it says, "in combination lead. Next comes English. Other combinations in demand are: History and English; English and French; History and French.'

The popularity of Spanish in the schools is shown to be declining. According to the Elmira College bureau, calls for teachers of Spanish fell off from 35 in 1918 to 6 in 1925 and continues to decline. From 1918 to 1925 the call for German teachers had dropped from 41 to 1, but this subject is beginning to pick up again.
