HOLLAND COMPANY MAKES NEW PLANE

The Szekely corporation of Holland is developing a motor for a light plane at its plant on the north side of Black lake which it is expected will have an important bearing on the airplane industry in the United States. The mo tor is a three-cylinder of the radial type and is air cooled. Its development has so far advanced that it is almost ready for manufacture. It is especially designed for a plane to be built at a cost between $2,000 and $3,000. The Szekely company eventually may manufacture a five-cylinder motor.

Lemon Decorated Cars To Bring Court Ruling

A test case is expected in Lansing early in March to settle in court the rights of a motor car company to prevent a disgruntled purchaser of its product from endeavoring to force a settlement of his complaint, real or fancied, through placarding his car as "a lemon" and openly proclaiming that the manufacturer and dealer refuse to adjust his difficulty.

Reo Motor Car Company's sales branch at Lansing, the Reo Michigan Sales, is conplainant in the test action which as been brought against a Chicago woman, Mrs. Antoinette Snell. Mrs. Snell, according to the bill of complaint on the basis of which Judge Charles B. Collingwood issued a temporary restraining order, brought her Reo car to Lansing conspicuously placarded as an inferior product and demanded that she be refunded the full purchase price of the car.

The complaining sales company claims that it has a financial interest in the way of a lien on the car and that Mrs. Snell has refused to permit the companys' service experts to examine the machine and correct any mechanical fault it may have or replace any necessary parts. It is aleged that she has continued to carry the placards on her machine and to tell damaging stories about the performance of the car with the sole intent of securing a full financial settlemen through this species of extor-The sales company management contends that its officials have assured Mrs. Snell that they would put the car in perfect mechanical condition if she would allow them, but they have refused to abide by her terms.

Hearing on the granting of a permanent injunction which would prevent Mrs. Snell from continuing any such means of injuring the Reo Company's business in the future is scheduled for March 8. In view of the fact that many Michigan motor manufacturers have been Syndicate Formed to Drill hands of buyers, many of whom have little or no basis for complaint, it is anticipated that the eyes of the entire industry will be focused on the outcome of the Lansing case.

Consumers Power Co. To Start Dam Near Morley This Spring

Work on the Ox-Bow dam of the Muskegon river will be started this spring by the Consumers Power Company. The dam is to cost $12,000,000 and will develop 35,000 horsepower

It will be the largest development of the Consumers Power Company in Michigan and the largest hydro-electric power dam on soil foundation in the world. It will have a power capacity 11 times that of Rogers dam, also on the Muskegon river, and nine times that of Croton dam, and will be three times the height of the Rogers dam and twice that of Crotor dam.

Morley is to be made headquarters of the construction crew and the work is expected to consume three years. The dam is to be six miles west of Morley.

Traverse Bay Frozen; Growers Quit Worries

Cherry growers in the Grand Traverse region breathed a sigh of relief recently upon receipt of news the bay had frozen over. It always is a source of worry to the orchardists if the bay remains open all winter.

Ice in the bay is believed to have a tempering effect upon the climate in the spring, retarding bud growth in diseases so long that the general pub cherry orchards until all danger of frost injury has passed.

Operates Longest Carferry This is all wrong.

The longest river-type carferry in operation, the New Pere Marquette 12, is now in service between Port Huron and Sarnia. The steamer has a length of 400 feet and a 50-foot beam. It is equipped with two triple compound engines with twin screws at each end. The engines are capable of developing 3,800 horsepower. The new ferry has a capacity for 27 loaded cars and is of the three-track type. The Pere Marquette 12 was constructed at Manitowoc, Wis., at a cost of $600,000.

TRUNK LINES ARE LIGHTED

Michigan trunk line highways which in a decade or so have advanced from gravel to pavement, are rapidly becoming electric lighted paths, as safe for travel at midnight as at noon. Figures compiled by the Michigan Committee on Public Utility Information of Ann Arbor show that with recent additions the lighted rural highways now stretch a total of more than 75 miles. The mileage is growing with increasing speed.

The bulk of the present rural highway lighting is concentrated in the Detroit area-Wayne, Macomb and Oakland counties-but there are stretches scattered throughout the state. One of the latest installations run south from Grand Rapids on US-131, a distance of two and one-half miles. The Consumers Power Company supplies the lights, using 23 lamps of 300-watt capacity each to Main highways radiating from Deroit are illuminated many miles out. The Detroit Edison Company is lighting approximately 343 miles of rural roads in its territory. In most cases the bills are paid by the townships through which the roads pass. Two hundred miles of the 343 are illuminated by 600-candlepower lamps spaced approximately 16 to the mile, while 117 miles are lighted by 250-candlepower lamps. The monthly charge per mile for the 600-candlepower lamp installation is $64, while that of the 250-candlepower installation is $48 per mile. Twenty miles are equipped with 100-candlepower lamps, but this size is not recommended for highway lighting.

P. M. Loses in Move To Get Into Pontiac

Recommendation has been made to the interstate commerce commission by Haskell C. Davis, its examiner, that the application of the Grand Trunk railroad for authority to construct its proposed belt line at Pontiac be granted and that the application of the Pere Marquette railroad for permission to enter the city be denied. Examiner Davis' report is only advisory and must be sustained by the commission, but his record among the I. C. C. examiners is one of the best and rarely are his recommendations in such important proceedings reversed by the commission.

The Pere Marquette application asked for permission to build a line about 17 miles long from Wixom to Pontiac, and a belt line seven miles long on the northern and eastern sides of the city. The Grand Trunk railroad, through its subsidiaries, the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee, the Pontiac, Oxford and Northern and the Michigan Air Line asked for permission to build a line about seven mile3 long, which would connect the first two subsidiaries named and would virtually constitute a belt line around Pontiac.

Davis' recommendation that the application of the Grand Trunk Railway be granted is conditioned upon the proviso that the construction of the Pontiac belt line shall be commenced on or before June 1, 1928, and shall be completed before June 1, 1929.

GROWTH SHOWN BY STURGIS DIRECTORY

The population of Sturgis now is 8,423, according to a count of the new city directory which has just been published. These figures represent an increase of 757 since the 1926 directory was published. During two-year period two new factories have begun operations in this city and it is to their presence a large proportion of the gain is attributed.

Sturgis is unusual in that the well known Jones family, which usually occupies a prominent place in any directory, is not even among the high rankers. Millers lead the list with 85. Smiths are second with 43 and the Browns tag along at 41. There are two families of 13 individuals each.

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night? If you don't know the answer, you naven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment? Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold!

MARKETING BY PARCEL POST DOES NOT COME UP TO EXPECTATIONS

The benefits and limitations of parcel post marketing of farm products as disclosed in a study of the operation of this form of selling over a period of 14 years are set forth by the bureau of agricultural economics in a publication, "Marketing Farm Products by Parcel Post," just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

When the parcel post law went into effect in 1913, says the author, Lewis B. Flohr, there were many and varied ideas as to the part it might play in marketing farm produce. Some persons declared that it would solve the farm marketing problem. There has been a continued and slowly increasing volume of marketing by this method, he says, but the quantity of schools, their good roads, and in farm products passing through the postal service has not reached the pro- township and county governments. portions expected by the enthusiasts, and is a relatively small part of the total marketings of farm products.

The department's new bulletin includes information on the parcel post regulations and requirements, the ways and means of making contact between producers and customers, the necessary business attitude and management of the business and the factors limiting parcel post marketing. The possibilities of parcel post marketing are discussed in detail for a long list of commodities, including fruits and vegetables, poultry, eggs, meats, butter, cheese, cream and milk mushrooms, nuts and nut meats, syrups, honey, plants and other farm products.

Copies of the publication, which is designated as Farmers' Bulletin No. 1551, may be obtained from the Department of Agriculture, Washington D. C.

54 Pair of Partridge From Czecho-Slovakia On Way to Game Farm

The state will experiment with Hun garian partridge in the hope that climatic and feeding conditions will permit planting the birds in Michigan.

P. S. Lovejoy, head of the game division of the conservation department, announced that 54 pairs are en a contributory cause to the increased route from New York. They were use of the cultures, and the laboratory captured in Czecho-Slovakia and cost facilities available at the college for the state $13 a pair. They will be placed on the Mason game farm.

Conservation officials were encouraged to make the experiment by the fact that birds planted in Ohio made their way north into Michigan.

How to Sample Soil

The proper method to sample soils for an acidity test is not to take a lot of small samples from a field and have each one tested separately. The method recommended by soil workers is to take a spade and bucket and sample the field in eight to twelve different field, advises R. P. Bartholomew, assistant agronomist, College of Agri-culture, University of Arkansas. The sampling should be done in the fol-

The spade should be pushed into the ground as far as possible and the first spadeful discarded. This leaves an almost perpendicular soil profile. Now take the spade and cut a 2-inch slice from the profile. Cut away the sides of the piece on the spade and put the center column in the bucket. Do this for eight to twelve locations.

After the samples have all been placed in the bucket, mix the soil thoroughly and take a good-sized handful county agent or send it to the Department of Agronomy of your State Agricultural College, which will test

The reason a large number of small samples are not tested separately is because it would be impossible to apply the lime in the amount indicated for each location. The average amount needed by the whole field is what should be applied. This amount will be indicated correctly by the acidity test made on samples taken as directed. If there is a distinct variation in the soil in a field, a sample should be taken from each kind of

Michigan Cutover Land Load Heavy

An idea of the weight of Michigan's idle cutover land burden is revealed in the fact that 43 of the 83 counties in the state are receiving more money from the state for their support than they are giving the state in taxes.

"Every one of these counties contains a large percentage of cutover hold over until next year, are John timber land, a part of which is tax delinquent," says Albert Stoll, Jr., writing in the Detroit News. He goes on

"At the present time the state owns and controls 1,073,523 acres of land in Michigan, made up principally of denuded forest areas. There is approximately 5,000,000 acres in process of revision and more looms on the horizon. This is not a pretty picture, and it concerns every taxpayer in the state.

"It is the more prosperous industrial and agricultural counties that are asked to support these delinquent counties. They make possible their many cases, the maintenance of their No one has any desire to deprive these communities of these advantages nor to hold them responsible for past timber wastes and land abuses, but the situation cannot go on forever. Industry finds little use for these counties. Agriculture is not warranted from an economic standpoint even if soils conditions were found acceptable.

"The tourist traffic will not prosper where lands lie idle, bleak and stripped of their trees or blackened by fire. It looks like forestry or nothing, and the sooner the state comes to this realiation the better off it will be. Or perhaps it would be a good move to consolidate several of these bankrupt counties and cut down administrative costs and maintenance This is perfectly feasible and offers one way out of the present dilemma."

State College Stops Legume Cultures Sale

Rapid increase in the number of cultures used for the inoculation of legume seeds by Michigan farmers has made a change recessary in the Michigan State College policy of manufacture and sale of these cultures, according to a statement by the bacteriological department at the college.

Expansion of the acreage of alfalfa and sweet clover in Michigan has been the preparation of the cultures are now inadequate to supply the demand.

This year the cultures will be pre-pared by S. F. Edwards, in charge of legume cultures for the college, at his laboratory in Lansing. Mr. Edwards is a graduate of Michigan State College and will work under the supervision of the bacteriology department.

Unsterile dairy utensils is one of the chief means by which fresh milk is contaminated by bacteria. For this reason each piece of apparatus with which milk comes in contact may be an additional source of contamination. If dairy utensils are washed and sterilized properly, all well and good; but those not properly cared for are the direct cause of large numbers of bacteria in milk.

MY POROUS KNIT

This is not an advertisement, It's a bit of mother wit: It's a workingman's conception Of how things had ought to fit. I am speaking of my underwear That helps me do my bit, And those forty thousand air holes In my Porous Knit.

I wear them in the summer time When coming through the rye; I wore them in the engineroom, Where the temperature was high; I wear them in the berry patch Where everything is wet: And those forty thousand air holes In each one a drop of sweat. Oh! the Knit, the Knit, The Porous Knit. Those airable, non-tearable Porous Knit. Now the Venus De Milo Has always made a hit; But she'd look a darn sight better In a suit of Porous Knit.

Week of March 18

General Weather Forecast-Temperatures for the week beginning gone." March 18th in most parts of Michigan are expected to range close to the seasonal normal but with a tendency to drop below the normal rather than above. There will be some fair days but the precipitation for the week will range close to, if not a little above, the seasonal normal. There will be some general rain or snowstorms during this seven-day period. Some extremes in temperature at this time will be injurious to growing grains on land lacking proper snow cover.

Detailed Weather Forecast—Mod erate temperatures will be in force as this week begins in Michigan with the skies overcast, winds more or less strong and moderate to heavy rainstorms in many counties. These storms will quickly pass over the state it is believed, so that before the middle of the week the sky will have cleared.

During the middle days of the week temperatures will take a sharp drop with northerly winds and mostly clear skies. However, there will be some scattered precipitation at this time.

The balance of the week is expected to be mostly fair with temperatures somewhat below the seasonal normal. 1928 to Be Mostly Good for Farmer

-Dr. J. I. Falconer of the Ohio State university declares the farm industry is in a better price position than for several years back. Our forecast really continues this statement through 1928. We foresee conservative activities among the farmers with better financial judgment, a little better price for most farm commodities and some scattered spasmodic spending. However, it will not all be rosy; there will be some depression.

seemed sinister. "I mean where he's

"Ah! You don't mean-?"

"Yes and no."

"Yeh. First edition of the evening paper says he's going to be tem-porarily at the home of Peter Borden Get that?"

"Foolish old man, isn't he?"

queried Carmody gently.

"Damned fool: that's what. Busted the kid in the first place because he didn't have a lick of sense—and now takes him right spang into his have.

Navor did trust Rorden—" house. Never did trust Borden—"
"Too honest, Willie. I never trust a man who is too honest."

"Yeh." The whisper filed the room. "Now this kid is sore at him. I got that from Todd Shannon, and him and Todd having been buddieg."

"He'll come to me. That's under-ood. Be very nice to the lad, stood. Be Willie." "Yes, sir.

"Yes, sir. And now—"
"That's all, Willie. Run along."
The huge figure hesitated—then turned and departed. Carmody smiled after him. Then, alone again, he rose and crossed to a mirror which hung on the wall. He smiled thinly at the meek, guileless countenance reflected. He smoothed his scarf and adjusted the modest sapphire pin. He fumbled with a handkerchief and rearranged it in the breast pocket of his coat so that the very tip showed. Then he returned to his desk and pressed the buzzer.

Kathleen Shannon entered, and Carmody's eyes flickered. He had never quite become used to the magic of her nearness—to the knowledge that a touch of his delicate finegr on the buzzer would bring her to him.

He looked at her now—the one thing in the world which he wanted most and which was most unattainable; firm and straight and exquisite y feminine; hair and eyes midnight cheeks and throat of white satin, lithe, eager, vibrant. A woman intersely physical, whereas he was merely an intellect.

She moved quietly and efficiently across the room and seated herself at his desk, enticingly close; insulting unconscious of his nearness. Accustomed as he was to the impersonality of her attitude, it never failed to stab him. Her voice was cool, self-possessed, casual. "Ready, sir."

He shook himself together. "Not today, Kathleen. I want to talk with you. "Yes, sir." She looked up and smiled, patently pleased by his interest. totally unsuspicious of his deeper feelings.

CHAPTER VIII

"Bob Terry's out of the penitentiary, Kathleen."
"Uncle Todd's buddy?" "Yes. You know the story, of course?"

"Yes. The Borden affair. Embezzlement, wasn't it?"

"Embezzlement. And they just discovered his innocence. He's served three years. Think of that—for an innocent boy. It's hard enough for the guilty-

She half closed her eyes. "Uncle Todd is very fond of him. He has written me and once when I visited the prison he pointed Terry out. He reminded me of—Well, you've seen a fine actor playing Hamlet, haven't you? Like that. Walking around the prison yard by himself—and not about. I've never forgotten." "You are quite sorry for him,

"Horribly. It is ghastly the way he's been treated. Because you know, Mr. Carmody, that they're not going to make it easy for him."
"Oh! but they are. I understand Peter Borden has taken the young man into his home."

"That's it, sir."
"Just what I think. And then he'll be pretty well on his uppers." mody had never appeared more be-"I've always felt queer about Todd Shannon, Kathleen. As though I hadn't done everything possible for him. I'm anxious to make up for it with any friend of his—and I know enough, through my practice, to un-derstand what this boy has been through and just about whats ahead of him. Unless I'm all wrong, he's an innocept man with a criminal psychology. Even his own hand is against him. Now, you are not squeamish—" She flushed. "You mean my uncle is a convict."

"No. Please, Kathleen—I mean that you know a great deal about me: more than I would care to have most persons know. You know that my code of ethics is not what some men might admit. You know that I control some judges, some juries and a great many individuals. You know that I have never attempted to conceal this from you; it wouldn't have been possible, for one thing, and for an-

"Don't go over that again, Mr. Carmody. I've been rather bewildered, anyway. But I give you credit for feeling as I do: understanding criminals, seeing the human side of their weakness—and being sorry. God knows Uncle Todd's experience has taught me charity, and because I'm is niece, I've learned the rest of the bitter lesson—that to some people in this town I am merely the niece of a

"And that is just about what this boy Terry is going up against. Three boy Terry is going up against. Three years in the state penitentiary! If you have felt what you have because your uncle has been—weak, think of what life will be for this lad. I like you, Kathleen"—the man's hand trembled slightly—"and I am fond of Todd. She looked up in surprise. "Comes to see me?"

"Of course he will. He and Todd Shannon were cellmates and buddies. The boy had no other friend in prison. Tod is bound to have sent him to you."

The girl nodded slowly. She had seen Bob Terry once: a lone, boyish, melancholy figure glooming around the prison yard on a Sunday after-And save for his deep sentimental interest in her, she knew the ruthlessness behind his suavity; the lengths to which what he was please.l to term his "elastic code of ethics" would stretch; and the selfishness which blended so grotesquely with his humaneness. But she knew also what Bob Terry was to face, and be-cause it seemed the lesser of evils for the young man she nodded doubtful assent.
"If he wishes to meet you-

"Make him. Frankly, I'd like Terry to like me. I'd like him to want to be in my employ. You can work that for me. Am I sufficiently frank?"
"Yes. But if he doesn't look me

"He will. I'm sure of that. And 'm quite interested in him.'

"I noticed--" Carmody gestured suavely. "Self-ishly," he finished, in a manner which conveyed very clearly that the interest was not at all selfish

The girl remained motionless, waitng for him to speak again. And for several minutes he sat regarding her. Her profile, lined against the morning sun, the tendrils of raven nair which caressed her cheeks-The telephone buzzer on his desk sounded. Kathleen placed her hand on the instrument. "Shall I answer, sir?"

The tension was relieved. Katheen spoke briefly into the transmitter. then turned to her employer.

"Your wife is on the phone, sir."

Bob Terry quivered under the icy shower, his flesh pinking beneath the spray. Then he turned off the water, shrouded himself in a Turkish towe and proceeded to rub down briskly.

He gazed through the window of his room into a perfect morning. The residential district hummed with the soft sounds of every day: street hawkers crying their wares, housewives and housemaids calling to one another and to the hucksters, tiny children—ye below school age—playing about, and neighborhood chauffeurs washing the family cars or mowing the sloping, emerald lawns.

There was a light tap on Bob's door as he stepped into his dressing gown, and almost instantly Croesus entered, bearing aloft a tray on which a toothsome breakfast steamed: savory coffee, fresh cream, strawberries, crumbly toast and bacon which was wafer thin.

"Heah's yo' mawnin' reepast, Mistuh Terry, suh—an' Miss Lois express the wish that you is entirely fine." "Thanks, Croesus."

"Ev'yt'ing hear pretty good, suh. Cook, she say she craves to cook fo' her pulmonary art. Says ain't nobody heah got the appetite you has."

"Thank you."
The black head bobbed, split into a golden grin, and withdrew. Bob drew up a chair and seated himself at the table. It was a far cry to the prison cell: the waking in a chill dawn to the plangent alarm of the corridor gong, the muttered cursings, the scraping of iron cots on concrete floors, the banging of huge, steel doors and then the sullen shuffling into the ghastly mess hall, where prisoners were forbidden to speak. He sat back in his chair and sugared his berries, then poured the rich, fresh cream over them—but his face reffected no happiness. The luxury of the past three days had been like gall and worm-wood. This was no more his sphere ness. than prison had been. The nadir had been undeserved, and he did not belong in the zenith.

He understood that this was Peter Bordens gesture of amends. But it was not in Bob Terry's power to forgive or forget. For three torturing, never-ending years he had nurtured a hatred of this man, had developed a single consuming passion that Borden must suffer as he had suffered, and Borden's kindness had accentuated that desire. It seemed to bring home to the boy that all during this three years the man who had sent him to prison had been luxuriating in silk and velvet. Bob had not talked. The habits of three years are not discarded as readily as prison garments. And both Peter Borden and Lois had respected the taciturnity which they inerpreted as embarrassment and left nim free to go his way. Halfway through breakfast Bob espied an envelope on his tray. It was addressed in the fine, small handwriting of Peter Borden. His lips twisted into a sneer as he handled it. It was a large envelope, quite full. And finally, with a gesture of disgust, the young man ripped it open. (To be continued)

CHAPTER IX

Inside was a letter and a thin book. He opened the letter: "Dear Bob:

"This will explain the card I asked you to sign yesterday. I have opened a small bank account in your name.

The whispering | business of mine where a man of Bob | trust that you will believe I mean Sincerely, "Peter Borden."

The original entry in the bankbook was $5,000. First cash payment on the three years! The note, the lavish gift, the luxurious room in the handsome home, the exclusive neighborhood and the garden of radiant flowers and stately elms and poplars excited only loathing in Bob Terry's breast. Why, Borden was trying to atone for something he didn't even understand. He was doing a great unkindness in thus depriving Bob of unkindness in thus depriving Bob of the necessity of work. It was small satisfaction to Terry that Borden was sharing luxury with him. He want-ed to see the man suffer as he had suffered: he wanted to see the light of despair—and of helplessness—in his eyes. Instead of being dazzled by this fairyland of luxury, Bob hated it.

He didn't belong. He never had belonged, and he knew that he never would belong.

It was then that he decided to seek

Todd Shannon's niece. It wasn't that ne cared at all about meeting the girl but her relationship with Todd promised that she would be a person to whom he could talk, perhaps some one who would understand the feelings which he himself could not analyze. Even the atmosphere of the peniten-tiary was preferable to this cloying luxury. And at times he had been afraid of himself in the house with Peter Borden: he had learned from convict friends how to hate—and how to translate that hate into physical terms.

He dressed hurriedly, domning one of the suits which had been waiting in his room when he arrived from prison. He moved down the stairs with the measured tread of the prison looking neither to right nor left. And as he stepped onto the veranda Lois Borden rose and came toward him.

She seemed inexpressibly cool and fresh in her morning gown of simple white. Her hair, red-gold in the morning, sun, was brushed tight against her head and she stood swaying slightly like a magnificent Killarney rose on a long, slender stem.

"Going out, Bob?"

He did not meet her eyes. "Yes." 'Be home to lunch? "No, ma'am.

She flinched under the "ma'am." 'You don't stay around much."

"No, ma'am.'
"I thought—perhaps—you, might are to talk to me sometimes.' His sunken, steely eyes raised brief-tragically, to hers—and were shift-immediately.

"I don't talk much." A great pity welled within her. She tepped close and dropped her hand ightly on his sleeve. "I understand,

Bob. And anything I can do—at any "Thank you, ma'am," he responded gruffly, and strode off down the drive-lightly on his sleeve.

She stood alone on the veranda staring after him. Her vision was slightly obscured by a mist as she watched his stooped shoulders and the suit which would have fitted him three years before, but which sagged groesquely now. She closed her eyes momentarily as though to shut out sight and remembrance of that sight and remembrance of that rhythmic short tread: the scraping clump of his feet-left, right, left -eyes on the ground, directly before him; every moment, every hunted, sullen look proclaiming the

Three years before he had been rather nimble mentally; but prison had crippled his thought processes while it softened his muscles.

Lois annoyed him. He hated the fact that she was Peter Borden's daughter. He loathed her pity. But he liked her—and he didn't want to like anybody who was close to Borden.

He desired no dilution of his hatred. But he knew that the slim girl was genuinely sorry for him! Damn it! So was her father. Peter Borden was always conscientious when he testified against Bob Terry at the embezzlement trial and had sent him to prison on the damning strength of his testi-mony. It never occurred to Bob that the old man was suffering torture now in the revealing knowledge of the havoc wrought by his conscientious

Bob Terry thought only two things as his feet beat evenly on the pavement. One was that he hated Peter Borden.

The other was that he wished he did not respond so instinctily to the eager friendliness of Lois. And he wished -oh, God! how he wished—that she would stop being sorry for him.

The waiting room of John Car-mody's suite of offices amazed and impressed Bob. It was a tremendous place in the center of which was a huge table piled with newspapers and current magazines. Clients sat about the room: some reserved and dignified and unquestionably of the city's bet-ter social class. There were others who bore the unmistakable stamp of the half-world. Toward these Terry felt an instinctive friendliness. Here was the kind among which he had been for three years: men who were not hampered by ethics or any other instilled instinct, but who broke the law because it was their nature to do so and because they were unfettered by morals

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasanttasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Sewing Machine Comes Back to Place In Nicest Homes

The old sewing machine, always the Cinderella of household furnishings, has come back into the best of homes in such guise that it ranks in beauty with any other furniture.

Discovery that prosperous women who years ago gave up home sewing are resuming their interest has been made. The renewed popularity of the art has been attributed to the increased beauty of sewing machines.

The old-fashioned machine was an awkward looking thing, out of harmony with everything else in the average room. Now the attractive cabinet in the corner, or the handsome mahogary table standing boldly against the wall and bearing flowers and books is just as likely as not to be a sewing machine. The new electric models come in such forms that they are utterly disguised and they are even more useful than their homely

With the modern improvements that have been made in the machines, home sewing has become a much easier task and this fact, together with the trend toward simplicity in present day clothes makes possible a new dress much more frequently than in the old days. Letters received from women everywhere show that home sewing is gaining great headway.

Portland Flour Shipped to Palestine For Passover Bread

A shipment of 100 barrels of flour which left the Valley City plant in Portland will shortly find its way to Palestine, where it will be used in

To qualify the flour for such use a Jewish rabbi was brought to the plant from Grand Rapids by Frank E. Martin, treasurer of the company. The process of manufacture and packing were carefully watched by the rabbi and the shipment bore his official seal. From that moment it will receive special attention through the various arteries of transportation.

The order was placed by a New York exporter. Because of the great distance to be traveled the barrels were made extra strong and lined with waterproof paper.

LIVING AND LOVING

By Mrs. Virginia Lee LOOK FOR A WAY OUT

We all have our troubles. That is agreed, isn't it? And we all like to mourn and grumble and feel very much abused. It's a perfect luxury to do that once in a while. Then we meet or hear of someone who really is fathoms deep in trouble-real trouble-and we feel ashamed of our When we meet the real thing we usually show surprising courage, even though things look so dark that all we can do is to live from day to day, praying for strength to see us through. Don't whine over the everyday woes, but use your brain to find a way out of them. It's lots more
