DOGS KILL SHEEP IN MASON COUNTY

Another instance of the destructiveness of dogs permitted to run at large in the country has reached the attention of Frank Knowles, conservation officer. Seven sheep have been killed and three wounded on the Sippy ranch at Woodruff lake south of Cus-

The dogs attacked the sheep, which were heavy with lamb, and ran them badly. It is believed further damage was done to those that escaped. The slaughtered animals are valued by Harry Wilson, superintendent, at $45 each. Bigger and Better Ionia Free Fair Is Promised Mayor Fred A. Chapman, who also is managing head of the Michigan State fair and is secretary of the Ionia Free Fair association, insists he is making no extravagant statement when he says his bookings to this date promise two of the most outstanding musement enterprises for the state's two foremost expositions" in their long and successful histories.

The Ionia Free fair, his honor's home town and pet enterprise, in its natural progressive expansion has assumed mammoth proportions and demands a program in keeping with this growth, and this will be provided, he declares. The rush already is on, 75 per cent of the midway concession space being chartered. Chapman is visibly enthused over the quality and caliber of the talent he has signed np, several of which will appear at both the Detroit and Ionia shows.

The safety exhibit sponsored by the city of Detroit shown there in mid-March as part of the flower show is destined to be an interesting exhibit. It consists of a miniature city, designed so as to depict the many ways in which human lives are snuffed out through traffic accidents.

Tomatoes Have Much Sought New Vitamin

The newest mystery of the interesting tomato was revealed recently in studies at Johns Hopkins University where experiments proved that the tomato contained the much-sought-for vitamin E. This vitamin assists the red blood cells in absorbing iron from foods. Owing to the acid nature of tomatoes, the canned product retains its vitamins and health properties.

Recently, also it was established by the Chicago Dental Society that tomatoes are a fine insurance against bad teeth in later life, due to the presence of vitamin E, in both fresh and canned tomatoes, which supplies a certain at the fair in Hartford this fall. Books hardness to the teeth.

Gas Groundhog

The surest method of controlling the groundhog, or woodchuck, is by the use of gas.

Carbon disulphide and calcium cyanide are both effective for fumigating the burrows. In using carbon disulphide, pour 3 tablespoonfuls of the liquid on a small wad of cotton or other absorbent material and throw t well down into the entrance of the burrow. Close the entrance with a stone or inverted piece of sod, taking care not to get dirt or other loose material on the fumigant. The gas from the liquid being heavier than air will penetrate to the lowest levels of the burrows and kill the groundhog

Timber Methods Are Recommended

The forest problem in the Lake States must be worked out on the lands now in private ownership and must deal largely with second-growth of the state is shown by the fact that timber and non-restocking cut-over land, according to Dr. Raphael Zon, director of the Lake States Forest Experiment Station, Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture. To prevent timberland from becoming barren the principal steps to be taken are (1) fireproofing the woods, as far as possible, by slash burning or other ways of reducing the fire danger from slash or debris left after cutting, and (2) keeping fire out of the woods thereafter by a protective organization for detecting and fight-

To Enlarge Halls For Hartford Fair

More new buildings at the Hartford fairgrounds to meet demands for increased space at the annual Van Buren county exposition are being planned by directors of the associa-

The contemplated improvements include an addition 60 feet in length to the floral hall, a 40-foot addition to the poultry building, rebuilding of the free attraction platform and improvements to the grandstand and other buildings.

Demand for more space in the floral hall has come largely from schools and 4-H extension clubs. Last fall several schools could not show complete exhibits due to lack of space. These schools already are making reservations for space for the fair next fall.

Directors also are calling for bids for installation of a dance floor in the transportation building and its conversion into a dancing pavilion for fair week.

Borer Control Is Livestock Factor In State Farming

The importance of European corn borer control to the livestock industry since last November Michigan feeders have been paying over one million dollars monthly for corn imported from other states, according to L. E. Osmer, manager of the Michigan Elevator Exchange.

"The corn crop was short in valuable reserves as stands of mature year ago in February, only 40 cars were purchased through the Exchange, while this year 140 cars were bought. Even when the state's production is up to normal, millions of dollars are spent each winter by feeders for corn imported from Illinois, Indiana, and Iowa.

"The State is vitally interested in prevention of the spread of the corn borer. The establishment of the pest in the great corn producing states will mean an increased price for corn and will result in a greater feeding cost. If the borer is not controlled, the effect will be felt not only by feeders of livestock, but also by country elevators in which many farmers are interested."

Engineer Unit for Upper Peninsula School

The Michigan college of mining and technology is to have an engineering unit of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, the student body having voted does not undertake the project before, in favor of the adoption of a two-year compulsory military training course, ably will have a chance to vote at the followed by a two-year elective

> The establishment of a unit requires that there be a guarantee that at least 100 men will take the work men the war department will provide instruments for a band of 28 pieces. Advance course students are paid at the rate of 30 cents a day, or a total of $180, and in addition receive $29.40 for time spent at camp as well as 5 cents per mile travel experses to and from camp. Both basic and advance course students are provided with uniforms, which may be worn at all times or only at R. O. T. C.

Much of the work outlined could be taken in connection with the regular engineering work of the students. It will fit in and harmonize nicely with the regular courses of Michigan Tech. In charge of the minimum unity of 100 men there would be one captain from the Engineer Corps and one enlisted man. It is expected that the unit here will number 250 men or

How Many H. P. in Michigan's Streams?

How many horsepower do the rivers of Michigan conceal within their watery depths? No one knows now, but the state is going to find out. At some future date figures will be available that show definitely just how much latent power exists in the streams of the Wolverine state and where it can best be harnessed. The economic land survey division of the conservation department is pursuing this information systematically and slowly, but surely overhauling it.

Every summer season sees an expert from this department exploring streams, determined to wrest their secrets from them. He patrols the rivers from mouth to source, learns its present, and nearly as possible, its future. At the present time the department point out that the Rifle river is hiding power that could be put to use. Only one power unit exists there now while there is plenty of room for more. As the surveys grow, data will be available in the department offices that may be used by individuals or corporations seeking power. In the end the total potential horsepower may be compiled.

MAMMOTH PARADE FOR VETS' REUNION

One of the features of the Upper Peninsula American Legion convention, which will be held in Bessemer June 21, 22 and 23, will be a mammoth parade, which will exceed any thing of a similar nature that has ever been attempted in that vicinity.

Bessemer business houses and civic organizations have signified their intentions of entering floats. At least ten-and possibly more-bands from various cities in the upper peninsula will march in the parade. Efforts are being made to secure five drum corps, and these together with a military band which is expected will give the proper martial atmosphere.

Present indications are that a company of soldiers will he sent to Bessemer for the convention, and their marching will give persons who witness the parade an idea of military

State Acts to Save Small Fish in Bear Lake

Each year thousands of small fish have found their way to the outlet from Bear lake and have been carried by the strong spring current out into the swamp, there to die and be eaten by crows instead of increasing the piscatory population of the lake. Steps to prevent this occurrence this year have been taken.

As a result of activity on the part of a committee from the Bear Lake Community club, Ray Wolters of Manistee, acting for the department of conservation, has installed a smallmesh screen across the mouth of the outlet. This allows free passage of water but prevents the fish from es-

PIED PIPER PIPES HIS WAY TO COURT

A short time ago a man who introduced himself to the residents of Gratiot county as the "pied piper" and who claimed to have a system of rodent extermination that carried the approval of the federal government visited various towns in Gratiot county and proceeded to rid the towns of rats. But there seemed to be a flaw in his system, numerous county residents reporting that their dogs

"Raymond McDonald of Monroe, Mich., one of the men who came into Mt. Pleasant recently styling themselves as modern Pied Pipers and whose poison was responsible for the death of several valuable dogs in the community, was fined $25 and costs in Justice Wardrop's court.

"McDonald pleaded guilty charges of placing poisoned food in places open to dogs and other domestic animals.

"A sworn statement from persons who claimed to have seen the poison placed was secured by Prosecuting Attorney James Ryan and held as evidence against the accused.

Prescription He Wrote in 1892 Is the World's Most Popular Laxative

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and s now the largest selling liquid laxaive in the world. The fact that milions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, in-digestion, loss of appetite and sleep, oad breath, dyspepsia, colds and

Mortgagee. Attorney for Mortgagee,

The Surprise for Betty

B. DUFORD JENNE

-07* (Copyright.)

THE old stage-driver recognized her the moment she alighted from the train at the country station—the slim, brown, graceful girl he had good reason to remember—and with regret.

As she came forward, she smiled a friendly greeting that betrayed a dimple in each rosy cheek. "Hello, Mr. Crewe, I wonder if you will drive me to the village? I have come on a happy errand, and I am in a hurry to get there," she said gayly.

He nodded. "I 'member you, Miss Retty, all right-don't often ferget folks who come this way. Yes, I'll take you where you want to go."

Soon he had her baggage safely stored in his car, and they were off up the long winding road.

He could see that she was bubbling over with some inner happiness as she chatted beside him. His thoughts went back, however, to the preceding year when she had come to visit the young fellow, Albert Weston, whom he and the whole valley loved, who had returned from the World war battered and broken, but with his old courage and his old kindness and fineness of heart and mind unimpaired. This girl beside him who had won his heart had finally turned him down, and then had left him to go on her year's wandering in Europe. The whole valley had known about the love affair, and with its old-fashioned generosity had taken her to its heart, until-and rumor had it that she had said she couldn't settle down to farm life even with Albert-she had gone, and the truth came out.

"She ought to be punished, and she will be," the old man thought to himself. "He turned to her: "Jest where do you want to go, Miss Betty?"

"Where?" she asked, her brown eyes flashing with happiness. "Why," to Albert's place, of course! Can't you guess why I have come back? I've come back to tell Al that I am going to stay and never go again. It's going to be a surprise! I really tried to forget him—didn't write—but couldn't forget; so I am going to tell him!"

"I'll take you up thar," he said brefly.

The rheumatic flivver rattled along over the familiar road, through the long forest aisles, along the brook, up over the wooded ridge, and into the

The girl was a little silent now as if into her thoughts had come memories not altogether pleasant or thoughts of unhappy things that might have happened. The mood passed, however, and she turned to

"I am sure he—he loves me enough to want me now," she said softly, half to herself. "Perhaps I wasn't kind enough to him a year ago, but thenit was different."

The old man nodded. "We're a-gitting thur," he said shortly as he whirled the car off the main road down a long inviting sideroad.

"Yes, I remember this road," the girl said quietly.

They swung into the open through the trees, and before them lay a wide, rambling old house, hospitable still in its air of brooding homeyness, but the grass had covered the paths; and on the porch was a white sign with the words--"For Sale."

She gave a little cry of consternation and stared at the sign. Then she whirled breathlessly upon him.

"What does this mean, Mr. Crewe? What has happened? Why did you bring me here? Is Al- Oh, it can't be! It can't be!" She looked at him with brown eyes full of terrible fear.

He locked at her with cold eyes. "Al was in bad shape from his war wounds when you was here—an'. then to lose you. I didn't blame you so much-yet I did-you shouldn't hev come an' then left him in the lurch. Al was a man we all liked since he was a kid."

"'Was'-you say 'was'!" she cried, and then with a shivering tremor she crumpled against him. "He's dead-Oh, it can't be!"

He whirled the car again and at a rapid pace sent it rolling back. At the main road, he turned to the right, and, keeping the same rapid pace,

The girl at his shoulder was sobbing quietly, and the iron in his heart began to soften. "Guess she really means it," he told himself.

Under the tires woodland and meadow passed, and the road veering sharply led along a winding drive and into the front of a white-painted cheery place that was an up-to-date farmer's home. He stopped.

He put his hand on her shoulder. "Little gal, I kinda hated you for last year, so I thought I'd give you a lesson. I feel mean about it now, 'cause I kin see you really love the boy. This is Al's new place and-"

A tall, bronzed figure appeared near the house, stared, and then with a shout came running up. The girl whirled with an inarticulate cry, and in the next moment was swung from her seat and gathered into strong

"Oh, Al!" and "Betty!" were all that the meeting lips could say after the manner of the hearts of men when roo full for speech; and, unheard and unseen, Mr. Crewe turned his car bomeward, feeling a little guilty but content in his knowledge that this time the brown girl would stay for

Held "Dead" Language

Had Peculiar Charm

Children of the Hittite race who went to school in Asia Minor about 1000 B. C. had to learn dead languages just as the modern schoolboy learns Latin. Baked clay tablets found in the capital city of the ancient Hittite empire have been deciphered by scholars who say that eight languages are represented on them, written in the neat, wedge-shaped characters known as cuneiform writing.

The Sumerian language was then long dead, but the Hittites learned it. and taught it to their children because they believed that charms sung in the old language were peculiarly effective. In some of the tablets the Sumerian text is followed by columns containing the same text translated into official Hittite language and into Babylonian and also a column pronouncing the Sumerian words. Babylonian was apparently the language of diplomacy among the Hittites.

Several thousand tablets were discovered in a palace and a temple used as a record office by German archeologists some years ago, but early attempts at reading them were hampered because the different languages were not sorted out. Writers of long records on the baked tablets were careful to indicate the sequence from one tablet to the next, and usually at the end of the document the author wrote his name, his profession and place of residence, in modern fashion.-Washington Star.

Mixture of Nicotine and Soap Helps Ferns

Indoor ferns as a rule have few insect or disease enemies, but when they do get into trouble no time should be lost in taking effective remedial steps, a writer in House and Garden asserts. This bit of advice. indeed, applies to all plants, whether growing in the house or outdoors.

Perhaps the commonest fern enemy is scale on the stems or leaves. When the infestation appears the plants ought to be turned upside down (of course, holding the soil and roots so that they cannot fall out of the pots) and dipped in a pail filled with a mixture of one ounce of nicotine solution and one-half ounce of soap dissolved in water. After dipping, the plants should be kept in the shade for 24 hours. A weekly spraying with the same mixture is an advisable supplementary procedure.

In case the scale infestation has made much headway before discovery. It will be well to remove entirely the most affected fronds before administering the prescribed treatment.

Worn to Ribbons

One could tell by the expression of disgust on his countenance that he was not thoroughly enjoying the Saturday afternoon shopping tour with his wife. His arms were loaded with packages and with a weary posture he slumped against a counter while the wife fumbled among some ribbons to find a certain color or shade. After a long time handling the merchandise, she turned and said:

"Well, we will just have to go somewhere else."

"Great smoke!" exclaimed the husband who flushed with impatience, "have you ever in your life found the thing you sought in the first store you entered?"

While the wife tried to explain the of ribbon, the saleswomen chuckled inwardly and another husband or two passing cheered the sentiment.

Resistance to Fire

The word fireproof is probably a less appropriate term than fire resistive. Buildings can be constructed so that they can withstand a complete burning out of contents without any collapse of structural members. There will, of course, be damage to finish and trim. They can also be constructed to withstand exposure from fires in adjacent buildings without communicating fire to the inside of the building, although here again there may be damage to facing material and window glass and shutters. Fire-resistive buildings greatly decrease the destructiveness of fires in providing less likelihood of rapid spread, greater ease of extinguishment, and less hazard to neighboring structures.

The Trouble The car had broken down and the pair of legs protruding from underneath seemed to indicate that repairs were in progress.

"Had a breakdown?" inquired a passerby.

"Oh, no, only playing hide-and-seek with the works," came a muffled voice from underneath the car. But the questioner was not easily daunted. "What power car is it?"

"Forty horse." "What's wrong with it?"

"Well, as far as I know," came the answer, "thirty-nine horses have bolted, and the remaining one is too upset to answer questions."

Sound Waves 🕝

Light and electricity and sound are the results of entirely different vibrations or waves. Sound waves travel in gases, liquids and solids, and their speed varies according to the material, its temperature, etc. Light and electricity travel through a medium which we call the ether, and always at the same speed. There are other vibrations such as the X-rays and wireless telegraphy rays which are still different

Millions of Model T Fords are still in active service

FOR nearly twenty years, the Model T Ford led the motor industry and it still is used by more people than any other automobile. More than eight million Model T Fords are in active service today—an indication of their sturdy worth, reliability and economy.

Because of the tremendous investment which people have in these cars and becaus so many of them will be driven for two, three, and even five more years, the Ford Motor Company will continue to make replacement parts until, as Henry Ford himself says, "the last Model T is off the road."

For the Ford Motor Company has always believed that its full duty consists not only in making a good automobile at a low price, but also in keeping it running efficiently for you as long as possible at a minimum of expense.

No matter where you live, therefore, you can still buy Model T Ford parts with the same assurance as formerly, knowing that they will give you the kind of service you have a right to expect, and at the same time protect the money you have invested in your car.

All Ford replacement parts, as you may know, are made of the same materials and in the same way as those from which your car was originally assembled, and are low in price because of the established Ford policy.

So that you may get the greatest use from your Model T Ford over the longest period of time, we suggest that you take the car to the nearest Ford dealer and have him estimate on the cost of any replacement parts which may be necessary. You may find that a very small expenditure will maintain the value of your car and will be the means of giving you thousands of miles of additional service.

The Sheriff's Girl

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

IT WAS supper time at the Denton ranch in Wyoming. The ranch foreman usually supped with the family, and he entered the room through one door just as Mrs. Denton and her daughter Ruth sat down at table.

"My husband has had a telephone message from Red Spider," said Mrs. Denton to the foreman, Ralph Black. "and so he had an early supper and started off-perhaps you saw him?"

"I did see him riding out of the gate," admitted Black, "just as I came in from the upper pasture." He waved his hand--"Has something come up

"Something to do with businessthat is the worst of being a sheriffsometimes I wish Jim would give up his appointment."

"I saw Bryant Smith, Miss Ruth." said Black with a humorous twinkle

Ruth flushed, and a warm look came into her lovely brown eyes. "I suppose he was riding Schuyler's herd," she said with assumed indiffer-

"Riding something-I'll be hanged if I entirely understand the situation—he was going like lightning. Looked as though he was trying to get somewhere in a big hurry!"

Ruth said nothing, but she looked rather worried, and Mrs. Denton carried on a desultory conversation until the meal ended. Then, while Mrs. Denton washed her silver and fine china, Ling, the Chinese cook, cleared off the table and Ruth went out to the broad veranda and sat down with a book. But the girl's eyes were not on the printed page-they scanned the distant trail over which a racy black horse might come skimming-Bryant Smith always came that way! To Ruth Denton, just at this time, most of the world consisted of Bryant Smith's tall, active figure. Though they were not engaged, Ruth's parents rather expected the tall cow puncher to ask the fatal question any day, and Sheriff Denton had his answer all ready.

"I like you, Bryant-there isn't another boy I would rather give my girl to! But you're nothing except a line rider for old man Schuyler-and you've got to be more than that if you want our Ruth!" That is what Sheriff Denton had planned to say when Bryant Smith came to see him about Ruth, but he had never told anybody excepting his wife, and she had confided in Ruth.

So Ruth Denton knew that much inyway, and perhaps she was thinkng that her father might have met Bryant, and they had talked it out, as men are apt to do.

She had not seen Bryant for a week, but she had not mentioned it to the family. The casual remark of the forem n, Black, had roused her thoughts and made her uneasy.

Later that evening Sheriff Denton came home, and with him came Bry ant Smith, of all people.

"I arrested this fellow," grinned the sheriff, "for loitering on the trail coming to the Blue Bottle!"

Bryant grinned sheepishly, and openly winked at Ruth. "He told me," said Pryant, "that I was breaking the traffic laws by speeding!"

"Bryant's made a voyage of discovery during the past week," said the sheriff, "and he is inviting the family (you, too, mother; I'll drive you in the buckboard) to start with him at nine o'clock tomorrow morning. I guess we'll be back in time for supper!"

Bryant Smith remained that night at the Blue Bottle ranch and the next morning they started forth-Bryant and Ruth riding their horses, and the sheriff driving two rangy colts in the shafts of the buckboard in which his wife was snugly placed.

They rode for many miles across the prairie, and then at last they rounded a wooded hillock, and Bryant told them to stop.

It was noon and the sun shone down through one broken space in the thick tree tops and fell into the hed of the stream where it was overhung by thick mosses and long, tangled roots.

"Please come here a moment, all of you," said Bryant rather gravely.

They stood and watched him expectantly. "Mr. and Mrs. Denton, of course you know that I love Ruth," he said, flushing beneath his bronze, "and now I am going to ask you for your daughter. Of course I am just hoping that Ruth likes me well enough to-" he paused and stared rapturously at the girl, who had stepped forward and slipped her slim hand in his large brown one, clinging to it firmly-"there, I guess that proves she does like me a whole lot," he went on, choking a little, "and though you folks all think I am just a line rider, I am telling you I am a whole lot more than that! I am ambitious myself, and so, if you'll just glance down there where the sun is shining right through the water onto the prettiest bit of gold deposit-well, I've been taking it out for weeksand, believe me, I am a happy man! I've got a claim here, and-my bank account at Cheyenne is more than ten thousand dollars-yes, sir-and if you don't mind turning your heads just a moment, I want to kiss Ruth here—and then we'll have some

Many Peculiar Types of Medical "Healers"

In primitive times medicine and mysticism were closely connected. Out of priestcraft came the first physicians. The calling of physician was handed down from father to son and many superstitions arose, such as the peculiar powers ascribed to the seventh son of a seventh son.

The old idea persists in many places. Dr. Dan McKenzie, who has traced the evolution of the medicine man from the witch doctor and the priest physician, lists thirteen types of folk doctors in tribes of southern Europe, including the peasant doctor who depends for his diagnosis on the inspection of excreted fluids; women doctors who learned their art by heredity. midwives, bone setters, surgeons, tooth pullers, blacksmiths, skinners or flavers and praying men.

Of all the nations of the world, the United States has the most variegated and complete assortment of peculiar practitioners of medicine, comments Hygeia Magazine. They cure by every possible medium. Thirty-seven varieties of religious healers alone have been listed. In the midst of this bizarre assortment scientific medicine pursues its way, taking from any source that may develop an estab lished fact.

Motion and Rest

Motion or change and identity or rest are the first and second secrets of nature: Motion and rest. The whole code of her laws may be written on the thumbnail, or the signet of a ring. The whirling bubble on the surface of a brook admits us to the secret of the mechanics of the sky. Every shell on the beach is a key to it. A little water made to rotate in a cup explains the formation of the simpler shells; the addition of matter from year to year arrives at last at the most complex forms; and yet so poor is nature with all her craft, that from the beginning to the end of the universe she has but one stuff, but one stuff with its two ends, to serve up all her dream-like variety. Compound it how she will, star, sand, fire, water, tree, man, it is still one stuff, and betrays the properties.-Emerson.

Monk's Calculations Wrong

For many centuries the exact date of the birth of Christ was based on the calculations of Dionysius, s learned monk of Rome, of the Sixth century. Subsequent investigations however, demonstrated that Dionysius date is at least four years too late The discrepancy was discovered by a comparison of the historical records of Rome with the Scripture records of the birth of Christ. According to Scripture, Christ was born at the time of a census or enumeration made in the territory of Herod, in accordance with the decree of Augustus, when Quirinius (in the Bible, Cyrenius) was exercising authority in the Roman province of Syria. This was four years earlier than the date of

Your Oldest Friend

Hold fast to home influences and remembrances; and recollect he who tries to shame you out of a father's and a mother's fear, and out of obedience to them, tries to steal the most precious treasure you have. He that is trying to destroy the influence of your parents upon you is trying to take away from you the most faithful love you ever knew. You shall lie down in the grave when you have traversed forty or eighty years of life, without having found another friend who has borne as much for you, or done as much for you, as your father or your mother.-Emerson.

Lucky Find

A short time ago a man purchased an old bureau merely because it closely resembled one that was in his old home when he was a boy. When his purchase arrived home, the likeness struck him as more remarkable than ever, and he wondered whether it could really be the same. Suddenly he recalled that the original bureau had a very artfully planned secret drawer. He sought for this and found it. Lying there was a couple of documents in the writing of his father, one of which contained a five-pound note.-London

Brother Ned and His Girl

By JANE OSBORN

"R UT I told you when you 'phoned this morning, that I couldn't -" Ned Fairfax was holding his telephone with one band and sign ing letters with the other, reading them, and talking to his sister all at one time. "I've got a day's work at the office still before me and it's

"But you've got to come-simply got to," his sister Nellie informed "It will absolutely ruin the party if you don't. You are needed to make up the fourth table-that's all there is about it. We shan't start cards until after nine so it won't matter if you're late."

Nellie hung up the receiver and Jim realized that he would have to do his sister's bidding. As a matter of fact he had finished with his own work. He would go over to the output department where he had been told a stenographer would be waiting for him, work for an hour, send out for a sandwich and a cup of coffee and plod ahead until nine.

He was not entirely sorry that he was going. Nellie had told him that she had arranged to have a bewitch-Ned was ing girl there for him. always eager to meet bewitching girls-vaguely expecting that he might some day be bewitched.

Then his telephone rang again. "Say Ned," came his sister's voice. 'You've got to bring a girl. That peach that Molly was bringing for you can't come. She mixed up her dates and finds she was going to dinner and the opera with a count or something. Some class, I guess and Molly says she's a winner. Oh well, we'll have you meet yet, and maybe you can cut out the count." Nellie would listen to none of Ned's protests. How could be ask a girl at that late date. Ned did try to get a girl-called up two or three friends who politely found excuses. Only thing to do was to go himself without the girl-and take the consequences. Fortunately the dictating went along smoothly enough—the stenographer who was waiting for him in the output department was a good one. Not the sort that wasted time. He sent out for sandwiches and coffee for two, and they stopped for ten minutes to eat. Then he noticed for the first time that the girl was at least present-

"What you doing after you through here?" he asked.

"Going home," said the girl. "You get paid so much an hour for overtime here. Any objections to working a few hours more? Not just this sort of work-playing bridge. Do you play bridge?"

The girl looked at him narrowly 'Yes," she said. "I never refuse a chance to make an honest nickel or Trying to save enough to go to college, That's why I do overtime work here. Want me as a stop gap, 4 suppose. I'll play bridge-but I won't dance!"

Ned continued his dictating with a load off his shoulders and once or twice as he dictated he regarded the girl a little more narrowly than he had before. Well, she wasn't bad looking-she'd pass in any crowd. He'd introduce her as an old friend. "What's your name?" he asked abruptly.

"Laura Hough," she told him.

"I'll have to call you Laura," he "You're an old friend-any said. objection?"

"No," said Laura dryly. The dictation over Laura went to the dressing-room to prink a little and reappeared closely wrapped in her trim fur coat. When she slipped it off twenty minutes later in the hall of Nellie's apartment Ned saw that she was wearing a neat little evening frock. "How come?" said

Ned with an appraising glance. "I had it on under my office dress," she said. "I had expected to go out-" But she got no further-Nellie and Molly were greeting her with shricks of surprise. "So you got here after all," said Molly. "What about the count and the opera-"

"Here's the count," said Laura. "The 'opera' didn't last as long as I thought it would-and-I'm as much

"If you really are the girl I think you are," Ned asked her drawing her aside, "how come you're working? Molly thinks you have all sorts of money-and she really believed the count story.'

"Of course that was a joke more or less," said the girl. "But I'm not quite the poor little working girl you might suppose-and I could have gone to the opera with a count if I had wanted. You see I wanted to go to college-but my father had objections. So I got a job on the sly to earn enough to go anyway. I'd have to have some sort of a career-"

"Unless you married?" suggested

"May I consider that a proposal?" asked Laura loud enough for Molly and Nellie to overhear.

"Please don't joke about it too much," Ned said so that only Laura heard. "I might have courage enough some day to ask you," And later when Ned and Laura

The responsibility of presenting the pageant on the stage has developed upon two competent young men of Holland, Fred Olert and Simon Heemstra. Olert will take care of all the details pertaining to the production and Heemstra will look after matters pertaining to the business phase of the work. These two men have complete charge of the activities in connection with the staging of the pageant in all the localities it is to be portrayed. PRACTICAL POINTERS

Are you concerned with finding your place in life? Of course one's job is not the only thing, but it is of definite vocations, you can't exone of the big things, and one of the amine them all. Here are some ways you are reasonably right about. And solve in these brief articles.

Here, then, are some practical pointers on this matter of finding the right kind of work, the right vocation, the right job.

When to Choose?

How early in life ought you to have the matter settled? Now, that can't be the same for everybody. But for ordinary cases it seems to me, at least two years before you enter upon your life work you should have chosen it. Usually that means at least two years before you leave school. Are you governmental. Which sounds best as planning that far ahead? You should a place for you? be. Of course, if it is a professionlaw, medicine, teaching, etc .-- you must plan much earlier, or rather you for you and with each other; or salesmust stay in s chool longer after you make your choice.

Again, not all will be the same. But not many time searching through a library, or have that leaning.

In a great majority of cases you can only choose the broad field, and start in that direction with firm resolve; then, as it opens up to you, a clearer and narrower choice can be made, till you reach the exact final on this whole great question. Address Earnestly he explains: "The picture actor must kiss convincingly and satisfactorily, before staring workmen and fellow actors, amid the hissing of the Kleig lights and the grinding of the camera. He must go through it in rehearsal and in actuality, usually with a director yelling at him, 'kiss her with feeling'."

Menjou is glad that he had his fiancee as leading woman in recent pictures, because he was able to make his kisses sincere. Women picturegoers have been found to be particularly critical of screen kisses.

'The actor has a scale of eight notes or tones to play on in kissing," Menjou explains, learnedly. "There are eight different types of kisses, ranging from the loud and whiskery smack of comedy to the hesitant, breathless touch of first love.

"The varieties of kisses include the heart-broken kiss of farewell, the fond kiss of true love, the passion kiss, the tender kiss, the butterfly kiss and the Chinese kiss. And there is, of course, the kiss on the hand, a gallant gesture, a continental touch, respectfully restrained—but not nour

Week of April 29

General Farm Outlook-The average weather conditions for the week of April 29th in most sections of Michigan are expected to be rather cool to cold for the season. With the probable frosts or freezing weather that would naturally come with this prediction there is grave danger to growing vegetables and fruit at this time. Meadows, pastures and winter grains should make fair growth during the week, but while there may be sufficient moisture at this time for normal conditions, we believe this period will find the temperatures too low for good germinating qualities. In fact, there are expected to be some rather pronounced extremes of weather during the week that will not be good for any tender growth out of Weather for Week-The general precipitation predicted for the end of last week should be about cleared away as this week begins. As a result we are expecting mostly fair weather at the beginning of this week with perhaps some unsettled disturbances.

Temperatures during early part of this week will begin rising, but general storminess of rain and wind are not expected until the last day of this month or during the opening days of May. We believe there will be no doubts about the storm when it does arrive since we are expecting some rather strong winds along with the rain or snow and probable thunder.

Following the middle of the week the temperatures will make a very marked downward movement that will catch some shippers and farmers, alike, unawares.

At the close of the week temperatures will be rising and the sky clouding up with showers and wind in many countries.

How Much Water Should Baby Get? A Famous Authority's Rule

By Ruth Brittain

Baby specialists agree nowadays, that during the first six months, babies must have three ounces of fluid per pound of body weight daily. An eight pound baby, for instance, needs twenty-four ounces of fluid. Later on the rule is two ounces of fluid per pound of body weight. The amount of fluid absorbed by a breast fed baby is best determined by weighing him before and after feeding for the whole day; and it is easily calculated for the bottle fed one. Then make up any deficiency with ficiency with water.

Giving baby sufficient water often relieves his feverish, crying, upset and restless spells. If it doesn't, give him a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. For these and other ills of babies and children such as colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, sour stomach, loss of sleep, underweight, etc., leading physicians say there's nothing so effective. It is purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper—and millions of mothers have depended on it in over thirty years of ever increasing use. It regulates baby's bowels, makes him sleep and eat right, enables him to get full nourishment from his food, so he increases in weight as he should. With each package you get a book on Motherhood worth its weight in gold.

Just a word of caution. Look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the package so you'll be sure to get the gen-uine. The forty cent bottles contain thirty-five doses.

The Outer Gate by Roy Cohen

1927, Central Press Ass'n., Inc.

Here, it seemed, was a giltering to opportunity to do to Borden almost anything he wished—and to do it without the slightest risk. His sole task was to concoct the idea; Bob Terry was willing and eager to execute it. And in a few days more there would be an additional ally at hand when Todd Shannon was rewithout the slightest risk. His sole task was to concoct the idea; Bob Terry was willing and eager to execute it. And in a few days more there would be an additional ally at hand when Todd Shannon was released

Todd was malleable. He was governed by his emotions—whether of the situation. You know those bimthinking man would be eager to align that they ain't going to let things go himself with Carmody and Bob Terry in this campaign against Borden. He could be moved about the board as readily as a chessman—and with as little danger of rebellion or argu-

Carmody's problem, then, had become twofold. The Borden situation was very much the same, but it now appeared to him that he must not only square accounts with Borden, but at the same time precipitate trouble from which Rob Tarry would be ble from which Bob Terry would be unable to extricate himself.

Carmody knew that Terry must be removed from the picture. That he was planning to make wreckage of a new love affair did not bother He had no conscience; his eyes were focussed eternally and clearly on results; methods were matters of John Carmody wanted Kathleen for himself. He had wanted her since before he permitted Todd Shannon to go to prison. He had courted her subtly since the day she had entered his employ as stenographer—and then as private secretary. His analysis of conditions had been accurate.

He knew the girl and realized that she would not be easy prey. For one thing, she was too beautiful in her personal, vivid way; for another she was too naturally decent consciously to permit herself to fall in love with a married man.

The thing which he desired to accomplish, then, was to impress her with his own greatness—to fill her with an admiration of his mentality and his power which would cause her and his power which would cause her to forget his lack of physical strength. She must not look upon him as a physical weakling, but as a mental giant—the master of a city —a county—almost of a state. He wished her to see the wheels revolv-ing, to watch the pulling of strings, to hear the dictated orders and to see to hear the dictated orders and to see their execution. He wanted her to know him in all his glory as a master of human destinies and then—when she had been dazzled by this vast power and had become forgetful of his puny physique—then would be time enough to let her know that he coveted her with a blind passion; a passion so pervading that he took no step at all, in terror of making a false one false one.

He had watched the working of his scheme. The girl first understood, then admired. He realized long ago that she was impressed by the power he wielded. Then he faced the blank wall of impersonality. His plan suc-ceeded so well that she regarded him is a power and not at all as a man.

But he knew that there was no other man in her life, and because of that he was content to wait—free from jealousy—eagerly confident of the successful culmination of the

Now things were changed. Kath for some inexplicable reason, had fallen in love with Bob Terry. Carmody's lips curled with disgust. He feared Terry, and hated himself. But most of all he feared Terry—and a sardonic smile played about his thin, persitive lips. He wanted Terry in his office now—more than ever before. He wanted the boy at his beck and call; he wanted to be ready to seize the opportunity of the moment. He wanted to disclose to Kathleen the vivid contrast between his own dominance and power and Bob Terry's groping indecision.

He pressed his desk buzzer three times. A few seconds and the door opened to admit the herculean figure of Whispering Willie Weaver, with his gleaming, bald head, his massive spread of shoulder, his good-natured grin. Weaver alone had Carmody's confidence.

CHAPTER XIX

"Sit down, Willie."
"Good enough." The big man lowered himself into a chair and produced a cigar. "What's wrong?"

"Oh, come now, Chief."
Carmody smiled wryly. "Nothing wrong, exactly," he evaded, "but certain things are taking shape. I want some information, positive informa-

"I'm the man who can get it." "It's Borden—as usual. I under-stand his company has been spread-ing out a little too thin. What do you know about it?"

"Plenty. They're solvent, of course but they haven't any cash and can't get any. They've let the lease run out on the old plant and the new one isn't finished—some sort of trouble they've had with the contractor. If they clamp down on him, he goes bankrupt and they get lots of satis-faction and no cash. About all they can do is to finance him through on a share-and-share basis, take an original loss, and get going in the new plant right away. But that takes money and they haven't any."
"Sure?"

"Positive. Hartnell at the Fourth National turned them down-and you know damned well they wouldn't have tried Hartnell if they hadn't been to all the others first."

The whisper of Weaver's voice fell soothingly on Carmody's ears.
"Hartnell turned them down?"

'Certainly. 'Why?''

"No security. They've borrowed up to the hilt on the security they've got. The plant is mortgaged for as much as it's worth. Of course it's a temporary crisis. They pull through this and inside of two years they'll all be making new fortunes from it.

dishes were cleared away, and Kathleen presented her uncle with a box of fragrant cigars and a pair of carpet slippers. They sat together, Todd in a rocker and Kathleen and Bob opposite on the sofa.

Here, it seemed, was a glittering Trouble is, they've expended a little

"He's pretty canny."

"Right you are. Anyway, that's the situation. You know those bimboes well enough to agree with me that they ain't going to let things go smash. They've sunk too much in it already and their proposition is too thoroughly sound. There may be some last-minute dope—"
"Get it."

"Done with you." The big man's eyes narrowed and his natural whisper became almost inaudible, giving his words an unduly sinister meaning. What's up?"

"What's up?"

"A real chance, I think, Willie. I've got a strong hunch that Bob Terry is coming to work here."

Willie Weaver made a soft, hissing sound. "Really?"

"I think so. We can use him, of course. He knows a good deal about prisons and criminals—and he's fond of them: they've been his only friends for three years. And he's in the clear for three years. And he's in the clear because he's never committed a crime. But best of all. Borden has gone crazy about him. He's living with Borden -and hating him."

"And you're going to let him rake your chestnuts out of the fire?"
"Exactly." Carmody's voice was metallic and precise; he did not dissemble before Whispering Willie Weaver. "Borden is a hard man to reach. He's too damned honest. This seems a combination of circumstances which should lead to something. Terry which should lead to something. For me, His interest and mine are identical. I hope to make him happy by letting him slough Borden—and I get the him slough Borden—and I get the satisfaction of seeing Borden spuirm and knowing that I did it."

"I get you." Weaver's eyes shone with admiration. "And the hunch is that you want to keep in intimate touch with Borden's affairs so as to help this kid out by thinking up a scheme for him. That it?

"Precisely."

Weaver rose. "I got you. I'll start

Weaver rose. "I got you. I'll start the gumshoe squad right out—have some good dope for you by tomorrow afternoon." He paused with his hand on the door. "Todd Shannon gets out in a few days."

on the door. Told Shannon gets out in a few days."

"I've figured that, too," answered Carmody, dryly. "He's very fond of Bob Terry Do anything for him."

"Or with him, eh?"

"Yes."

Whispering Willie Weaver shook his head in amusement.
"I'll hand you one thing, Chief-what you want, you get."

"You think so?"
"I know it!!"

John Carmody's eyes turned toward the door which led to Kathleen's of-fice. His face was inscrutable and his answer seemed to Weaver unduly emotional. "God knows I hope you're right, Willie."

Todd Shannon came through the gates, his step as regular and rhythmic as Bob's had been, his eyes glistening eagerly, his tremendous shoulders clearing a path for himself in the press of passengers.

Kathleen and Bob Terry were there to meet him. Their greetings were simple. Kathleen offered her lips and he held her tight aaginst him for a moment. Then he turned and caught Bob's hand in a bone-crushing grasp. "Bob!

"Todd!"

The trio passed through the waiting room and into a taxi. Kathleen gave her home address, and the car shrieked its way through the late afternoon traffic.

Todd Shannon lay back in the unaccustomed luxury of an upholstered seat. His gray eyes caught the scene of bustle and activity and freedom, and he sighed deeply "God!" he said reverently, "this is god."

Kathleen covered his hand with hers and a contented smile crossed the lips of the giant ex-convict. He talked not at all, but he understood much which made him happy. He was conscious of the bond between this young man whom he loved and the girl who was a daughter to him. There was no mistaking the occasional glances which passed between them.

But Todd's chief interest was in the boy whom he had last seen through the iron bars of the state penitentiary that hour when he had presented him with the tiny pagoda carved with an old razor blade from a filched bit of cedar.

It was Todd Shannon who saw the change in the lad: the touch of color in the cheeks which had been so pasty and pallid, the brightness of eye, the gradual return of positive characteristics, the straightening of shoulders. And Todd Shannon was glad. He had fathered Bob in prison because he knew instinctively that Bob did not belong there, because he needed shelter from the others in that convict environment. Now it appeared to him that Kathleen had performed the miracle of miracles, that she had keened Bob's interest in life by focusing his interest in herself. The world, at that moment, seemed very good to Todd.

They came to the boarding house where Kathleen lived. She had a large room of her own and had engaged one for Todd. In this room a table was set and Kathleen had arranged with the boarding house mistress for the serving of a simple delicatessen

They talked little through the meal. There was a feeling of much unsaid, and tacitly they waited the peaceful after-meal hour when they could talk undisturbed. And then finally the dishes were cleared away, and Kathleen presented her uncle with a hox CHAPTER XX

Shannon looked at them in grave musement. His slow, heavy voice ked a monosyllabic question. "Well?"

"Well?"
The girl flushed.
"Well—what?"
"What's the news, Kathleen?"
She looked at him squarely, and if here was a quaver in her voice it was pride and happiness.

"Bob and I are engaged."
Todd leaned forward and extended oth hands; the girl clasped one and both hands; the girl clasped one and Bob the other.

"Gee! I'm glad—awful glad."

Terry was embarrassed. "I hoped you would be, Todd. It's almost like—well, like she was your daughter."

"Right you are, kid. And she's a great girl. I had hoped—but you know how hopes are: they don't usually come out."

Silence fell between them, as though everything had been said. But though everything had been said. But there was information which Todd desired, and he did not hesitate to question.

"What you doing, Bob?"

The boy flushed. "Nothing."

"No job?"

"No. Not yet."

Shannon frowned. "They been cking you around because you were stir three years?"

"No-o. It isn't that—"

"He's going to work for John Carmody," interrupted Kathleen.
Todd's face lighted. "Really?"
"Yes."

"Gosh! That's great. There's a man for you, Bob. He's a real A-1 guy. Swell, that's what I call him. guy. Swell, that's what I call him. He'll fix things for you. Honest, that's all I needed to make tonight perfect. What you goin' to do with him?"

"I don't know. In fact, we hadn't decided anything definitely, Todd. Waiting to talk things over with you."

"I'm for it. Whatever Carmody says is right; ain't it Kathleen?"

"Just about." Her face became serious. "I hope."

"Hope?" whaddaya mean: hope?"

"I've worked for Carmody a long time, Uncle Todd. We both know a good deal about him—and his ideas of good deal about him—and his ideas of right and wrong—"

"Piffle! You mean fixin' juries and that sort of thing? And faking evidence in criminal cases?"
"Yes. He'll have Bob doing that."
"What of it? I guess with what Bob has learned down there at the

"That's just it. He'll be valuable to Carmody because of his experience. But while Carmody is merely not ethical, the work he'd want Bob to do would be—would be something different."

Bob Terry leaned forward. "I've argued that with Kathleen, Todd. I don't quite see things her way. They sloughed me when I was innocent. And I've learned a heap of things—and one of 'em is that there are mighty few men in the pen that wouldn't be better off outside. I'm rather keen about trying to keen rather keen about trying to keep others out of jail; that's why the Carmody thing appeals. I've got the slant of those fellows—and it isn't my fault that I got it."

"No, Bob—" It was Kathleen making "But in onits of the foot

1. Entrance to the Proving Ground. The group of buildings includes complete experimental and service shops, engineering offices and comfortable living quarters for resident and visiting engineers and for the driving crews. The Proving Ground personnel numbers more than 200 men.

2. The 4-mile high-speed loop. The largest in America, made of concrete, with turns banked to permit continuous high-speed operation. In addition, the Proving Ground has two concrete straight-aways 1½ miles long, as level as a billiard table, and miles of brick, tar, gravel and dirt roads which reproduce every driving and weather condition.

3. The hill-test road. Test hill grades at the Proving Ground range from 7.26 per cent to 24 per cent. The grades on public highways seldom exceed 7 per cent.

4. The "bath-tub." A depressed concrete roadway which is filled with water at varying depths to reproduce flooded roadway conditions.

Here each General Motors car must prove its value

ON a 1245-acre tract near Milford, Michigan, convenient to all its car and truck divisions, General Motors has the first and largest proving ground for automobiles.

Here tests are made and facts determined to a degree impossible when cars and trucks are tested on the public highways. Here each new model of General Motors must prove itself, point by point, before it is produced for sale to the public.

More than 135 different tests are applied to each car tested at the Proving Ground.

They involve every phase of construction and performance: power, speed, endurance, acceleration, braking, steering, handling, riding comfort, fuel economy and so on. In three months a car or truck covers more miles than you would drive it in three years.

The Proving Ground is another example of how General Motors is serving the public. It is also your assurance that when you buy a General Motors product you are getting all possible quality and value at its price and the advantages of a policy of continuous improvement.

Made Baths Popular

This business of taking a daily bath, although now pretty well established as a hygienic measure, really got its start not as an aid to health, but as a beauty fad. The woman who made the bathtub famous was none less than the little West Indian Credle, born as Tascher de la Pagerie, who rose to be Empress Josephine.

Before the advent of the Nineteenth century baths had exclusively been a sign of ill health, an eccentricity, in fact, indulged in only on medical advice. Josephine's habit of bathing every day in chiseled silver bathtubs, and of constantly washing in silver basins of all shapes and sizes, therefore, surprised France not inconsiderably

It does seem that Josephine carried the bathing business a little far. According to the records she spent three hours each morning at her tollette, what with selecting the day's make up, costume and accessories. But as social arbiter of the day she did establish the both as a fushionable practice in the European courts.

Apparently it wasn't to preserve that schoolded complexion that Napoleon's consort went to such ends. The records reveal that she spent 3,000 frames a year for rouge, or approximately fibed translated into prices of today—a considerable daub of rouge!—Union De Meyer in Harper's Bazar.

New York Had No Show

Towns as well as persons have always shown a disposition to get the "big head" on any possible provocacation. When the Erie canal was in course of construction Governor Clinton of New York visited Lockport. which the citizens dreamed was to be the great inland city of the continent. Buffalo was hardly born. Lockport was to be the key of the commerce that was to flow from the Great Lakes and the true seat of the great flouring initis and manufactories north of Mason and Dixon's line. The governor did not throw any cold water on their enthusiasm, but ventured to remark that New York city would derive immense advantages from the canal. Whereupon the wiseacres shook their heads and said to him: "Too far from Lockport, governor. Too far from Lockport!"

The Taste Test

Walter and Lawrence were in the habit of saving a part of their dessert from the evening dinner for consumption the next afternoon, and, in accordance with this custom, two small cakes had been placed in the cracker jar for them. William, being the first on the scene the next afternoon, went to the jar. He found only one cake, and a large piece had been bitten out of that. Full of wrath, he went up stairs and roused his brother.

"Say," he demanded, "I want to know who took that big bite out of my cake?"

"I did," sleepily answered Lawrence.

"What'd you do that for?"

Explaining Myopia Some justification for calling a near-sighted motorist a "poor fish," was advanced recently at the convention of the American Academy of Optometry. It was said that near-sightedness, or myopia, is prevalent because man has not yet completely lost some of the characteristics of a fish. His eyes naturally diverge to the right and left instead of looking straight ahead. The inner muscles of the eye, in trying to correct this and retain the parallelism of the vision, subject the eyes to a strain which produces myopia.

TO BE STORY OF BUILDING STREET

Wedding Bells and Soap

By AD SCHUSTER

IT IS given to youth and love to be confident, but when a man embarks upon matrimony and a career of installment paying with little in reserve save a brave assurance, he is in for some troubled hours. For Leonard Crayle it may be said he never contemplated the possibility of failure. It was enough for him that Jessie Meadow smiled upon his suit and that he held a job of a kind which is said to be promising and which, as a matter of fact, had been promising steadily for three years.

Leonard knew that he must have more money before he could order the furniture, buy the ring and move Jessie into a bungalow on First street.

"Fill get it all right," he told her. "Never you worry; there isn't anything that can hold me down."

They found a house under construction that was to their taste and planned to be married as soon as the last nail was driven and the paint was dry. Leonard was happy. He held his head high, talked of a roysterious deal or secret and lauried to silence any fears the girl expressed.

"Listen," he said one evening after she had demanded some knowledge of the budget upon which they were to start. "I have no money now, caved what I care, but I have some concurs it will be a good sum—enough to pay for the furniture and more in the bank. You didn't think, did you, that I would get married without knowing where I stand?"

That evening in his room Leonardi drew out a full-page advertiser out which offered ten thousand dollars to the person who could suggest the best name and slegan for a new brand of soap. With the page before him and a pencil in his hand, he gave himself to the task. Every evening for two weeks he had done this and as a result he had mailed 14 answers. In three more days the contest would close. Leonard thought how much he needed the money, considered how much brain power he had put into the task, and decided the prize was as good as won. Then he planned how they would spend the ten thousand and reveled in a sense of affluence.

The little house was finished and it would be two months before the soap company would announce the winner. There was really no need to wait. Some one else might take the house.

"Frothwell," "Lathergood," "Cleanemquik," — Leonard ran over the names he had submitted and his only fear was that the judges could not decide which of his lot was the best. So he went to Jessie with the story of the money that was coming to him and the wedding plans were made.

In the little house everything was happiness except for the fact the second installment on the furniture was due and there was little money in the bank. Jessie wondered when the money was coming and Leonard smiled at her fears.

In a week or ten days he would toss her a check for $10,000 and she would know what kind of a man she had married. Probably the soap company would announce his name to the world, would print his picture and he would become famous. Leonard found it difficult to wait for the day.

One morning as they sat at breakfast and Leonard was reading his paper there came an end to the dream. Who would think a flat and flamboyant ad could be the pin to prick the bubble of confidence? It did that and more, for it made the rich Leonard Crayle poor, humble and frightened. Here was printed the winning name:

"Wedding Bell Soap."
Leonard folded the paper slewly and looked across the table at his wife.

"That money," he said slowly—"it isn't coming."

Jessie reached over and put her hand on his. "We'll get along. Maybe you'll let me work and help."

"All the same," said the husband, waxing indignant as he remembered the answers he had mailed, "the names I sent in were better than the one that took 'the prize!"

Then he repeated them to her with emphasis and explanation.

"Any one of them," he declared, "is better than 'Wedding Bell,' don't you think?"

"Wedding Bell!" Jessie rose with a little cry. "That's the name I sent in!"

Home of the Middle Ages

The inside decorations of houses are all of comparatively recent date. Through the Middle ages wall paper was entirely unknown. In the castles of the nobility the stone walls of the principal rooms were covered with tapestries depicting scenes of the chase or pictures of heroic deeds in battle. In the houses of the poor there was little improvement upon the mud dwellings of primitive man. The walls were bare and were often covered with mildew from the damp which good through which cozed through.

Glass was unknown, so that the windows consisted simply of holes in the walls. In the castles some of the apartments had a few windows fitted with very thin sheets of horn; but as a rule they consisted simply of apertures in the walls, without any protection whatsoever except bars of iron. In stormy weather they were sometimes boarded up until the storm, about.

The Alfalfa Seed Situation

You prepare your ground, pay your taxes, put on lims and give the land a good summer fallow. All this work goes for naught unless you use the best seed--regardless of price. Fortunately since the Mich. State Farm Bureau has handled seed, it is no longer necessary to take somebody else's word for the seed you buy. The M. S. F. Bureau is YOURSELF and so you are using your own sel.

Alfalfa seed is scarce—that is, GOOD seed is. Come and get yours carly while we have a full stock. We have alfalfa, white and yellow sweet clover, timothy, June clover, nammoth clover, Alsike, rape, etc., etc. Also the proper Farm Bureau Culture to use with the clovers and alfalfa.

Fertilizer

Farmers in this district are just starting to really use Commercial Fertilizer. We have studied fertilizer for nearly 20 years and our experience is at your service. There are only three prime fer tilizer ingredients: Nitrogen (or as it is sometimes called, Ammonia) Phosphoric Acid and Potash. With these three you make ANY and EVERY formula and by mixing them yourself you will save about $10 00 per ton over and above the cost of the "ready mixed" goods. It is as simple as mixing concrete. Nothing mysterious about it. We actually know that farmers buying from us have increased their potato yields from 75 to 100 bushels per acre. You need fertilizer for corn, for potatoes, for beans and for cucumbers. Also for oats and wheat. Usually $4 to $8 per acre will pay the
