Gobles Shines

Gobles surely shone in the Kalamazoo Gazette over the week end.

Starting Saturday with Otis Lohrberg and his big speckled beauty and continuing Sunday with with pictures of Frances Connery and Josephine Kalmer, our sweet girl grsduates at the University of Michigan this year.

Then after a few pages of unimportant items, then pictures of Earl McNamara and Eddie Herrington with that of the mint setter which the former designed and the latter built; with an extensive description of the machine which has proved the best by far of any machine yet devised for setting mint plants.

was also pictured in the same issue. Many minor mentions of Gobles and its people led us to realize that ours are holding high rank in the opinions of outsiders as well as of the home folks.

For State Senator

Paul H. Smith of Paw Paw has announced his candidacy on the Republican ticket for state senator from the Eighth Senatorial District, comprising Allegan, Barry and Van Buren counties. Mr. Smith was a candidate for this office in the Republican primaries two years ago in a three-cornered race, was high man in Barry and Van Buren counties, and lost in the district by a narrow margin. His friends believe that this showing in his first attempt, which was a quiet, clean campaign, will aid him materially this year.

He is serving his seventh term as supervisor of Paw Paw township and has served as chairman of Van Buren county board of supervisors.

Mr. Smith was born and raised on a farm just south of the village of Paw Paw. He graduated from Paw Paw high school and from the University of Michigan. His interests have always been with agriculture, first as an active farmer, next as a county agricultural agent, and for the last five years as a dealer in farm implements and

PREDICT SHORT 1928 WHEAT CROP

The present prospects are for a year, according to the April crop report issued by Herbert E. Powell, Commissioner of Agriculture, and Verne H. Church, Agricultural Statistician of Michigan.

The April 1 condition of Michigan Both wheat and rye started the winter in good shape as was shown by the December, 1927, condition of 94 per cent for wheat and 92 per cent for rye, but snow did not cover the ground for long enough periods to afford much protection and there was too much successive freezing and thawing during February and March. In some sections the fields were also damaged by ice cover for several days. The April 1 condition of winter wheat was 74 per cent, compared with 86 per cent last year and the tenyear average of 84 per cent. The condition of rye was 79 per cent or normal, which was seven points below last year and nearly 8 per cent below the average for April 1.

Limestone May Be Applied

Ground limestone may be applied to fields at any time. It does not injure seeds that come in contact with t.. Neither does it tend to set free the ammonia in manure that comes in contact with it, so that it is often possible to scatter a suitable amount of ground limestone on a load of manure in the spreader and apply it in this way. It should not be mixed with or applied at the same time as superphosphate, since this tends to bring about a change of the water-soluble phosphorus compound to an insoluble Oxide of lime, either in the form of burned lime or slaked lime requires somewhat more care in application. slaked, be applied so that it comes in contact with seeds or young plants. Like the ground limestone, it should not be mixed with superphosphate. Neither should it be mixed with stable manure, as it brings about loss of ammonia. Lime may be applied by drilling with a seed drill or by spreading with a manure spreader.

Drilling is not a satisfactory method if the lime is not in a proper condition to be uniformly distributed. manure spreader serves satisfactorily when a thin layer of manure is placed in the bottom and the size of the load regulated according to the quantity to be spread. The practice of placing burned lime in piles in the field and slaking it by the addition of water or allowing it to slake in the air is a somewhat common one. This is a disagreeable operation and uni form distribution is difficult.

Cows When Freshing May Be Relieved of Much Udder Trouble

Dairy cows when freshening sometimes suffer from the trouble known as congested udder. If the cow is at all feverish or the udder hard and congested, give her a one-pound dose of Epsom salts. If this does not have the desired effect, give a second dose two days later. In such cases leaving the calf with the cow longer than two days may be a great help.

The calf's frequent sucking and massaging of the cow's udder seem to aid in reducing the congestion. Milking three or four times a day and massaging the udder with camphorated oil may be necessary in some cases. Keep the cow in the barn and away from drafts.

ROMEO MAN ASKS $100,000 DAMAGE

The Grand Trunk Railroad has been named defendant in a suit for $100,-000 damages, filed by George W. Graves, 23, of Romeo, who alleges that he lost his two arms, and his brother, Ralph, was killed Nov. 7, 1924, when an automobile they were riding in crashed into a freight train. The accident occurred in Oakland county, it is alleged.

No danger signals to warn the driver were visible, the bill of complaint alleges, nor was there a watch-The road, at the crossing, is elevated 20 feet and the car started down the incline, the bill further states, and crashed into a speeding train, the outlines of which were barely visible in the dark.

Ralph, brother of the defendant, was the driver, it is alleged.

Graves estimates the loss of his arms and the humiliation he has suffered at $100,000.

by Ruth Brittain

Thumb sucking does look sweet in a baby, but it is disgusting in the three-year-old and sometimes it hangs on until fifteen or sixteen! The habit may cause an ill-formed mouth or induce adenoids; and it always interferes with digestion. Pinning the sleeve over the hand; attaching mittens, or putting on cardboard cuffs, which prevent bending the arms at the elbows, are some of the ways to stop the habit.

Another had habit—irregularity in bowel action—is responsible for bowels and constipation in babies. Give the tiny bowels an opportunity to act at regular periods each day. If they don't act at first, a little Fletcher's Cas toria will soon regulate them. Every mother should keep a bottle of it handy to use in case of colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, loss of sleep, or when baby is cross and feverish. Its gentle influence over baby's system enables him to get full nourishment from his food, helps him gain, strengthens his bowels.

Castoria is purely vegetable and harm less—the recipe is on the wrapper. Physicians have prescribed it for over 30 years. With each package, you get a valuable book on Motherhood. Look for Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper so you'll get the genuine.

Portland to Stock Grand River in 1928

Fishermen around this section of the grand river valley are of the belief the coming season will mark a new era in fishing history of Grand river, especially upstream from Port-

For the past several years the river has had but few fish. Blame was attached to sewage from towns upstream for disappearance of the smallmouthed bass, grass pike, suckers and even the hardy carp.

This year many suckers have been netted from points that hitherto have yielded nothing, while pike and bass have been found in places long deserted by the finny tribes.

Sebewa creek this year had an abundant run of suckers and many were taken by net. This is the first time in several years fish in goodly quantities have been there.

Nets at different points indicate pike will be especially abundant.

John B. Hecox, active in the affairs of the Portland Fish and Game club, states conditions seem to warrant an extensive campaign in stocking this section with game fish. Previous to this year virtually all fish fry planted here went into Looking Glass river. This year Grand river will get the bulk of the planting.

Selfridge Gets $400,000

An appropriation bill including an additional $400,000 for improvements at Selfridge Field has been approved by the House of Representatives. This amount will be expended for the construction of a new post hospital, officers' quarters and field machine With this appropriation a building program this year approximating $1,000,00 is seen by Capt. Robert S. Beard, construction quartermaster. Congress has already passed an appropriation this year of $381,-000 for a new radio station, operations and headquarters buildings and six new hangars. A third bill carrying $146,000 for drainage, runways and the construction of smaller shops has been proposed.

To Dam Allegan Creek For Artificial Lake

A permit was granted Lewis J. Caro and Victor J. Conrad of Chicago recently by the Allegan county board of supervisors for construction of a proposed dam in Swan creek. The dam will be on the Barry ranch, which covers 1,200 acres of land in Valley township.

According to attorneys who presented the petition of the Chicago men, who have organized a corporation to promote the project, it is proposed to dam the creek and create an artificial lake, on the shores of which will be established a summer resort. No details of the project have been revealed here.

Grand Rapids Is Given Publicity in New York

Embers of Grand Rapids' historic street car fire in June two years ago when obsolete equipment was burned and a fleet of the most modern street cars in the country was launched on Grand Rapids streets, still are glow ing in national circles.

The pioneering done here was wide ly advertised early this month in daily New York papers by the McGraw-Hill publications, which publish trade papers relative to street cars and busses.

Opening paragraph of a large advertisement reads: "Two years ago one night in June 50,000 friendly voices broke into cheer after cheer as a mammoth bonfire of old Grand Rapids street cars climaxed the celebration that began a few days previously. America's Motto

When John Adams was minister to Great Britain in 1787 it was suggested to him that the Latin phrase meaning "out of many, one" would make a fitting motto for the new independent colonies. On his return to America he transferred the suggestion to his friend, Charles Thompson, secretary of congress, who in 1792 reported his design for a government seal in which the phrase, E Pluribus Unum, appeared on a ribbon held in an eagle's beak.

Romance and Its Mirage

By H. IRVING KING

-+-+-4-4: (Copyright.)

HEN my ship comes in," Miss Martha was always saying. She said it constantly for many years. And then one day, when Martha Proble was sixty-five years old, her ship realty did come in. A cousin died and left her a fortune.

Her ship came in, but while it brought her wealth there were things which Martha could not find on the manifest-youth, for instance, and a lost romance.

Miss Martha, in receiving ner inheritance, received also from her cousin's lawyer information regarding her deceased relative which gave her considerable food for thought. It appeared that this cousin, whom she had seen only once in her life, had brought up an orphaned niece, whom he had intended to make his heir. But the niece having fallen in love with a perfectly ineligible young man she had been passed over in the will for Miss Martha, Miss Martha went to see the niece, found her a very pleasing young lady of twenty-four or so, and invited her to make her home with her-Miss Martha. And Ethel Roberts, having no financial resources, agreed to the proposition.

"Now, my dear," said Miss Martha when she and Ethel had had their talk, "tell me all about this young man you are engaged to and because of whom old Clem Whitaker cut you out of his will."

"There is little to tell," replied Ethel. "He is poor, just starting out as a lawyer. But he will succeedand then we will be married. We have concluded that it would be better to wait awhile. Uncle, you see, was determined I should make a brilliant match and told me frankly that if I became engaged to Donald Cameron not a penny of his money should ever be mine."

Miss Martha went home, took her little old romance out of its cotton, and looked at it. Donald Cameron! That was the name of the man who had jilted her years and years ago, gone off and married somebody else, but to whose memory she still clung. Her Donald, she knew, had turned out a worthless sort of person, but he was her Donald still. Could this young man be his son? She made inquiries and found out that he was. She found out other things about the present Donald, many of them not at all to his credit. Miss Martha and Ethel were living together now and had grown very fond of each other. Donald lived in his vicits became less frequent. Miss Martha took a dislike to the young man-and yet he; was like his father.

Halsey Chapman, the wealthy young man whom old Clem Whitaker had picked out as a husband for his niece, one day to his surprise received a call from Miss Martha. She had called to "size him up," and told him so frankly. He pleased her. They had a long talk. She was convinced that Halsey was really in love with Ethel. Ethel, of late, had been falling into moody fits. Miss Martha had found her in one of them when she home from her visit to Halsey "Ethel, my dear," said the old lady,

"what was the maiter with that Halsey Chapman your uncle wanted you to marry?" "Nothing," replied Ethel drearily,

"only I thought I liked Donald better. And Donald was so desperately in love with me." "Humph," sniffed Miss Martha,

"that was before your uncle cut you out of his will. Mr. Halsey Chapman is coming out here to see me tomor-Watching the young lady intently, Miss Martha saw an expression of pleasure sweep across her Mr. Chapman came—he came frequently after his first visit; always, ostensibly, to see Miss Martha but really, of course, to see Ethel. Donald heard about his visits and his own became even less frequent than before. Finally he wrote Ethel a letter stating that, as she seemed to have become of the opinion of her deceased uncle with regard to the propriety of her marrying Mr. Halsey Chapman, he, Donald, released her from her engagement.

"There, Aunt Martha," said Ethel, handing the old lady the letter, "there goes my little romance."

Miss Martha went to her room and came back with a locket containing a miniature. "Who is that?" said she, showing it to Ethel.

"Why, it looks like Donald-only it isn't," said Ethel.

"It is Donald's father," said Miss Martha. "I was in love with him once. Here goes my romance to follow yours." And she threw the miniature into the fire. "I cherished that little old romance of mine-it was the only one I ever had to cherish-until I saw it re-enacted by you before my eyes," went on Miss Martha. "Then I saw it as it was and hated it,"

Two nights later Halsey Chapman came out. "Have you heard the news?" said he. "Donald Cameron's engagement to the wealthy widow Marplet is announced."

When Halsey had gone Miss Martha said, "Ethel, he told me before he left that he was going to propose the next time he came. What are you going to say?" "I am going to say yes," replied

Ethel.

Protect Your Investment in Your Model T Ford

THE Ford Motor Company is making a new car, but it is still proud of the Model T. It wants every owner of one of these cars to run it as long as possible at a minimum of expense.

Because of this policy and because of the investment that millions of motorists have in Model T cars, the Ford Motor Company will continue to make parts until, as Henry Ford himself says, "the last Model T is off the road."

More than eight million Model T Fords are still in active service, and many of them can be driven for two, three and five years and even longer.

So that you may get the greatest use over the longest period of time at the lowest cost, we suggest that you take your Model T Ford to the nearest Ford dealer and have him give you an estimate on the cost of any replacement parts that may be necessary.

You will find this the economical thing to do because a small expenditure may enable you to maintain or increase the value of the car and give you thousands of miles of additional service.

No matter where you live you can get these Ford parts at the same low prices as formerly and know they are made in the same way and of the same materials as those from which your car was originally assembled.

Labor cost is reasonable and a standard rate is charged for each operation so that you may know in advance exactly how much the complete job will cost.

Because of the fact that we need our money to expand our growing bean business and because we simply cannot stand the load being continually made heavier by carrying so many outstanding accounts we have decided that on and after May 21, 1928 we will conduct our business on a strictly cash basis. Terms will be cash or bankable paper.

By doing this we can accomplish several things we have long wanted to eliminate in the conduct of this business; we will no longer have to make collections, send statements, keep a lot of books, pay interest on borrowed money and charge off a certain amount of money each year to overcome bad accounts. Consequently our service will be much better and our prices will be much reduced, because of these many savings which will be passed on to you by eliminating these costly overhead items.

While this may work a hardship for a little while on a few, yet it will be only a matter of a short time until they can adjust themselves to this new method of buying and start saving by conducting their business on the solid basis of paying as they go.

We pay the spot cash for produce no matter whether for a dollar or several thousand at a shot and any fair minded man can see that we cannot continue to do this and conduct a general credit business.

Our coal business will be conducted also on a cash basis. We are planning and expect to have something along price lines to interest you in the purchase of your coal for cash. Due to delivery we plan on asking that the last load of coal be paid for before getting another.

We have worked hard to build up this business and make it a good market to sell produce at. This you know by the distance we get beans from. Now we want your cooperation in the building up a good cash retail business. Its to your interest, so let's have your support.

STATE COLLEGE MILITARY BAND TO MAKE RECORDS

Lawrence Bates of St. Louis is a member of the Michigan State College military band which will have the distinction of being the first college band in the world to be officially recorded for a national music concern.

Lewis Richards, head of the college music department, has arranged for this organization to be placed on the Brunswick company's official list of recording bands, and the first record will be taken on May 15. Under the direction of Leonard Falcone, 65 members of the Varsity band will play on that occasion.

Proceeds from the sale of records, over and above the cost of production and distribution, will go to the band itself and will be divided in three ways: maintenance of the music department, upkeep of the Union Memorial building and for the purchase of new band instruments.

By extended trips through the east and middle west the band has become widely known. Precision of drill and maneuvers as well as musical training has made it a feature of social gatherings and atheltic events.

Both basic and advanced course students are provided with uniforms, which may be worn at all times or only at R. O. T. C. classes.

Both basic and advanced courses require a certain number of hours fall. per week in subjects designated. The total for the first year basic course is 96 hours and the same number of hours the second year. Advanced course students put in 160 hours the first year and 162 hours the second.

C. S. T. C. Plans Summer Excursions for Students

Dates and arrangements for excursions to points in and near Mt. Pleasant are being made at Central State Teachers college for the summer term. This is the first time this plan has been attempted.

In Mt. Pleasant trips to the United States Indian school, the Borden Condensed Milk Co. factory and the Gorham Veneer Works are planned. Buildings and equipment will be examined and a brief explanation made of the work.

In Lansing, the capitol, Michigan State College and an automobile faccounty courthouse also will be visited.

Olivet Sororities Headed by Girls From Three States

Three different states are represented in the presidencies of the sororities of Olivet College. Illinois contributes Miss Agnes Durham of Berwyn, the president of the Sigma Beta society; Indiana sends a South Bend girl, Miss Charlotte Post, to the Alpha Lambda Epsilon office, and Michigan is represented in the person of Miss Catherine Woodward of Owosso, the newly elected president of the Soromian society.

Michigan claims all the other officers of the societies as follows: Sigma Beta-Vice president, Dorotha Sanford, Battle Creek; secretaries, Inez Anderson and Lila Jagger, Luding-ton; treasurer, Lucille Wildt, Belle-vue; critic, Marian Johnson, Bellevue.

Alpha Lambda Epsilon—Vice president, Adelaide Hammond, Reed City secretaries, LaVange Clark, Big Rapids, and Elizabeth Tefft, Leslie; treasurer, Mary Snyder, Charlotte; critic, Katherine Saylor, Williamsburg.

Soronian—Vice president, Dorothy Abbey, Battle Creek; secretaries, Margaret Jennings, Big Rapids, Dorothy Chamberlain, Grand Rapids; treasurer, Elizabeth Elson, Grand Rapids; critic, Marian Bishop, Lan-

The societies have their own home in which the senior members live and wherein the society has its weekly literary sessions of talks, book reports, papers, chalk talks and music. They entertain at special sessions the men of the campus and the new girls at the beginning of each semester.

Last year they initiated the idea of a joint inter-sorority public performance at which they entertained the men's societies, the non-society members and the faculty with a presentation of three one-act Irish plays. That idea will be followed again this year and will probably be a tradition to take the place of three separate performances as was previously done.

LIES ABOUT THE TRUTH

It has often been said that "Half ruths are the most dangerous form suppose you simply haven't got it; of lies." But the person who says hat is guilty of telling a half truth.

Often a half truth is the best that one can get, and in many cases "half a loaf is better than none." We do not know the whole truth about electricity; but we do a pretty fair job using what we do know. Most cer-tainly we know or y a half truth (or less) about God and the universe be-yond this planet; but the sane man pelieves in using what little light we you from failing.

If you can do that-live by the part burden of sound judgment as to what is true. Somehow, there is no way to escape the use of intelligence, otherwise known as plain common gant statement with a grain of salt.

Half Truths About Success in Life
Just now I am thinking of such rash statements about how easily anyone can succeed in this or that or the other thing if only he makes up his nind to do it.

"Isn't it true?" you ask.
"Well, maybe," I would say; "and again, maybe not! It is only one of those half truths, you know."

Then you ask me: "Don't you be-

What is will power, anyway? A definition which I happen to have be-fore me says: "The power of controlling our own activities and men-tal states." Can you do it? If you think so, try it. Some folks tell you: "Tis never too late; you can still be anything you choose to me." But common sense that IS true, not by that which is choose to me." But common sense false—then you will be safe. But tells you it is often a lie. Have you that puts back onto you, yourself, the If not, wherein are you now different?

So take every rash or extrava- find this statement: "The roots of gant statement with a grain of salt. will-weakness penetrate deep down into a mire of selfishness, physical and moral cowardice and general lit-tleness of soul." Do you believe that? There is food for thought.

If this is true, then building up your will power doesn't mean a sudden swelling of the wishbone or a six-lesson course in mental hygiene. It means tackling your character at the roots and setting out on a lifelong campaign to enlarge your soul, strengthen the very foundations of your character at every point, all to develop a personality with a real will. Then the half truths about will power and success in life will apply to you.

WEEK OF MAY 13

General Farm Outlook-For the week as a whole the rainfall for the will have plenty of precipitation while others nearby will lack sufficient moisture. The temperature throughout the state for the week of May 13th apart, if they—if they cared?" will average moderate to below the seasonal normal. In some sections the soil will be too wet to properly work, although grains, pasture and meadows should advance favorably. Vegetation in general will not progress as rapidly as it should because of the chilliness. In fact, we look for some frost damage in most any of the counties. This will hardly be a good week to germinate corn and oats that have already been planted.

Weather for the Week-The week of May 13th begins in Michigan with rather unsettled and stormy conditions, a hang-over from last week. Wind and showery conditions will be general during first or second day. During first part of week the temperatures will be rapidly falling and freezing weather or frosts are almost certain in many counties.

Through the middle days of the week the sky will be clear and the temperatures continue low for the season. A moderation, however, will occur about Thursday and which may last over Friday. A drop in temperature is again expected about the last day of the week or not later than Sunday of next week. It is quite likely this cool spell will be more severe than the one of the middle of the Conflicting elements working during last three day of the week will probably keep copious moisture from spilling generally over the state, although certain sections may feel the brunt of it.

The immaculate little man with the precise mind and unswerving sense of honor had seen the development of the interest between his daughter and the young man who had been taken into their home.

Peter Borden knew his daughter. There was much of him in her, and more of her mother, and Borden had known every twist and quirk of his wife's brain and emotions.

It therefore did not surprise him to see that from the first Lois wove a great romance about the tragic, stoopng figure of Bob Terry. He was pa thetic and he did need sympathy and kindness and mothering. It was only natural that a girl—young and impressionable and always sheltered from the harsher phases of life—should fall under the romantic spell. Bob Terry, fine minded as he was, was yet not of their caste, and so, until matters had progressed too far, Borden did not sense that Lois' interest had transcended the impressional and taken unto itself a depth which now had to be faced as a fact.

There were three phases to the condition which brought little wrinkles of worry to the corners of Borden's eyes. One was that he doubted the depth of his daughter's love for Bob Terry. That she thought she was in love with the young man, he knew. But he doubted if she really was. Now, Bob was possessed of a halo—she dramatized every look and move and action; he was a starkly heroic figure in her eyes. Above all, it was certain that she did not see him clearly. She saw only the pathetic side and could not see him as he was: a young man of great possibilities for good; of certain ability but with the strength and weaknesses of an average human being. It was not that Peter Borden considered that Terry was not good enough for his daughter; he was fearful that she did not bitter as he thought—and suppose the boy attacked him through Lois? Peter Borden shuddered.

Tonight Bob had dined at home and then gone from the table to his room. Borden moved into the library for his evening cigar and Lois followed. For a few minutes she moved restlessly about the room, a slim, straight figure of white and gold, then, without a word, she came and seated herself on the arm of his chair.

Borden reached up and took his daughter's hand. This was the opportunity for which she had prayed—and which he dared not create for himself. His voice, freighted with understanding and symmetry came understanding and sympathy, came

"Worried, dear?"
"Yes, Dad."
"Bob?"

"I think so."

She hesitated before answering. And then— "Why didn't he let you help him, Dad?"
"Instead of going to work for Carmody?" "Yes."

A vertical furrow appeared be-tween Bordens' eyes. "Perhaps it was just as well."

"Bob has never forgiven me, Lois."
"No-o. He hasn't. But he doesn't know you—and the only way he could have known you would have been to have gone to work for you.

The daily contact—"
"He's had that here." "No, Dad. He hasn't and you know it. He has lived under this roof and eaten some of his meals here, but he hasn't known you. I get shuddery sometimes looking at him—and thinking. It is almost as though he hated you—and was staying here for a purpose." Borden sighed. "Perhaps. I cannot object to anything he may think or do. I wrecked that young man, Lois. No use evading the fact. I did to the control of th it from conscientious motives, but that didn't make the blow to him any less terrible. And so, whatever he is now—whatever he may be—is my fault. I can only make what reparation he will permit me, and do my best to provide for his future."

"He has every reason to think that."
"Of course. But the Carmody thing—"

"Bob was probably pretty sensitive about coming back to work for the where his trouble started. company where his trouble started. Pride—and all that sort of thing."
"No-o-o." She shook her head. "It isn't that, Dad-else he would never have come here to live, or accepted money and clothes and food from you. There's something else behind it. And since he went to work for Carmody —you've noticed the change, haven't

"Yes. He has improved tremendously. The awakening of his self-respect, I'd call it."

"He could do so much for himself -and is doing so little. He frightens

"Don't be silly, Lois. He'll make out very well, I'm sure. He's got the real stuff, but it is overlaid with bitterness and with memories which are ike gall. People do stare at him curiously, but not so much as he thinks. And I judge that he loathes pity. The back trail for him is going to be long and hard—and we must be patient. I only hope that I can do for him what

She saw the lines of worry. Instantly her own problem was forgotten in her love for her father.

Something wrong, Dad? "Nothing in particular." "What?" she demanded.

"Oh—business."
"Really wrong?"

"Just what we call an acute crisis. Our creditors—the banks from whom we have borrowed—are calling in some of the loans. We saw ourselves through one major crisis when we moved into the new plant. Now we're facing a more vital one. and Jonas Merriwether is very difficult to han-

"Explain it to me, Dad." "There's no need. But we're in this position: we must again borrow from ourselves. That is, the corporation must borrow from the individuals, because the banks won't lend us any more money. In two years everything will be in perfect condition, but most of us are in up to the hilt already; there has been a succession of troubles, and Jonas is the only man with enough private cash available to see us through. And he is balking. If he refuses finally, I don't know what we'll do. He is a heavy investor, but he can afford to lose his money. The rest of us can-

She stroked his thinning hair. "It's going to come out all right, Dad. I'm sure of that. Merriwether is a nasty old man, but he loves money too well to lose what he has already invested. And you've always said that once the new plant is operating as it should, there'll be a real fortune in it for

"There is, but that isn't what has worried me. I have been thinking of you, of course. And beyond that, of Bob Terry. I want to do a great deal for him; I want to make up to him, through his future, for the suffering I unwittingly caused in the past. That would be a rather difficult job if what little I have were swept away" swept away.'

had dedicated their lives. It was the girl who spoke first.

"Perhaps," she suggested, "it might be good for him. Perhaps if he had, from the first, faced the necessity for work, the rehabilitation might have been easier.'

"Perhaps, Lois. And then—" His voice trailed off and when he spoke again it was in a voice which she scarcely heard. "You're fond of Bob, aren't you, dear?"

"Why, yes—" A pink flush stained her cheek and neck. "Yes, of course."

"I don't mean, of course. I mean—personally."

"Dad—I—" Then, softly, "Yes, Dad"

"And he?"

"Please— He doesn't know. He never will."

"He's never said—anything?"
"No!" Her voice was startled. "Oh, Dad! I wouldn't have him know—not for worlds. And I wouldn't confess this to anybody else."

"I know that, dear. I want to,ask you one more question; please be frank—and don't let me hurt you. Do you care for him—or are you sorry for him?"

She did not answer immediately. "Both. Dad. I care—and I'm, oh so sorry."

He opened his lips to speak as Bob Terry appeared in the doorway. Much of the stoop had gone from his shoulders, a good deal of the bitterness had left his face. He was smiling slightly as his eye fell upon father and depotitor. daughter. It was Peter Borden who

"Won't you come in, Bob?"
The boy's face hardened for a moment. "No, thank you, sir."
"Going out?"
"I don't know—"

Lois did not know that her face lighted. Bob went out so many evenings—with the Shannon girl, probable and a simple impulsively.

nings—with the Shannon girl, probably. She spoke impulsively.

"Please say with us tonight, Bob."
Terry did not answer at once. And Peter Borden understood. He knew the lad's antipathy to him almost as well as Bob knew it himself.

"I'm going up to my room, Bob. Some work to do. Suppose you entertain Lois."

Instantly Bob's face cleared. He moved forward and seated himself in an easy chair.

and he wordered vaguely why he had never before noticed that she was exquisitely beautiful.

They were in strange contrast as they sat side by side on the big lounge—the girl slender as a reed and blonde as the morning sun. the young blonde as the morning sun, the young man queerly old about lips and eves and in his deliberate gestures. But the soft light of the table lamp was kind to him and the deepest of his lines were masked by the semi-

Bob settled back comfortably in the uxurious upholstery. He was inexolicably glad that tonight he was with Lois instead of Kathleen. He did not probe too deeply for reasons: it was sufficient that he was here-and contented. He was keen'y conscious of the girl's delicate beauty and of a bond between them, and he harked back over the aimless months which had drifted by since the barred door of the cell block had closed behind nim—and he had stepped once again nto the sunshine.

Lois was different from Kathleen. was soothing and soft where Kathleen was electric and vivid. He couldn't settle back and think when he was with Kathleen: she filled him with a vague, disturbing restlessness and an ambition which annoyed him. But' Lois was different; she seemed glad to accept him as he was; and he wordered how he had withstood her friendly advances for so long, being content to look upon her with eyes which saw her only as the daughter of the man he hated.

But something had occurred ninutes since which aroused in the girl the conscientiousness which actuated Peter Borden's every move. She spoke gently, but reproachfully.
"You're not very kind to Dad, Bob Terry."

He looked up in surprise.
"Why should I be?"
"he due politeness?"

"I try to be polite."
"Were you—a few minutes ago? You made it quite plain that you wouldn't come in here if he remained. You forced him to seek another room in his own home."

Bob's voice was harsh. "I don't care to talk to him."
"Yet you are willing to make your ome in his house.

He flushed darkly. "I'll move out any moment he says the word. "That wouldn't undo what you've done. You came here when you had nowhere to go. Dad offered you all hat he had in the world. He is making a sincere and conscientious effort to atone to you for the injustice he has done. He doesn't shirk responsi bility as some men might. He made a terrible error, and he admits it. It seems that when you have accepted that much, the least you can give him is courtesy. You see, Bob, even if you left this house tomorrow-nothing can alter the fact that you have accepted as generously as he has offered."

He did not answer immediately, and when he did speak, the words came slowly and with difficulty. "I do not like to talk to your father."
"Why?"

"You know why. When that thing occurred—originally—I knew I was innocent, and I knew that he should nave known I was, no matter how damning the evidence. I had been like a son to him—in the office, that He said he was fond of me, and know Terry, the man. She only knew him as she imagined he was. And that fact brought to Borden's mind the third possibility. Suppose Bob was as bitter as he thought—and suppose had dedicated their lives. The said ne was iond of me, and I looked up to him as I would have to a father. Then, when the break came, he didn't have confidence. He was the first to decide that I was builty. If he had believed to a father. guilty. If he had believed me, I would never have been convicted. It was his evidence which sent me to the penitentiary.' "He sincerely thought you were guilty."

"But I wasn't guilty—and I knew it. I told him so. And I hated him when he said that it cut him to the heart to send me to prison. He prat-tled about his duty and about the state and all that sort of rot. I saw him through new eyes then. And when I went down yonder and suf-fered and was treated like an animal and driven to work in good weather and bad, when I was well and when I was ill. I let that hate corrode my was ill. I let that hate corrode my soul. It is only natural, Lois. For three years I thought of nothing except the injustice of which I was the victim. It would have been hard enough to bear had I been guilty, but when I knew I was innocent and that a little faith in me would have changed everything—" changed everything-'

"Yet you accepted what he offered when you were released."

"Of course I did. He said he had wrecked me and that I was entitled to anything he had. I agreed with him. He wasn't doing a bit more than he should."

"But other men would not have that"

done that.' (To be continued)

What Dr. Caldwell Learned in 47 Years Practice

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasanttasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In cine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get ing you will feel like a different per- PLE BOTTLE.
