For Register of Deeds

I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for Register of Deeds of Van Buren County at the primary election on Sept. 4.

I am basing my candidacy upon the accuracy with which the office has been conducted during the time I have been associated with it, in which I have assumed responsibility for much of the actual work of the office.

On this basis I am greatly pleased that my candidacy is supported by many of the bankers, attorneys and notaries public in the county who appreciate the importance of prompt, careful and accurate work in the recording of instruments affecting the title to property within the county. These bankers attorneys and notaries are among the people of the county who transact the greatest volume of business with the register's office and are in a position to judge of the manner in which it is conducted.

I will appreciate your vote at the primary, and will, if elected, endeavor to conduct the office on the same accurate basis.

The point of origin of boat shipments is not given but the equivalent of 372 cars were shipped in this manner from various lake ports near the grape belt. #### Michigan Shipped $878,000 Worth of Pears Last Year

The report, just issued, says that Michigan carlot shipments of pears in 1927 amounted to 536 cars as compared with a total of 457 cars in 1926. The heavier shipment in proportion to total tonnage in 1927 as compared with the previous season is largely accounted for by the better marketing conditions and prices prevailing during the 1927 season, and to the fact that larger proportion of 1927 crop was marketable than was the

But 40 cars of the 1927 totals were shipped by boat, as compared with boat shipments of 161 cars in 1926 and 71 cars in 1925. The increase in the proportion of the crop moved by rail over last season is laregly due to the fact that the most active demand for the Kieffer crop was largely from points not accessible to the boat lines.

State Studying Peat Utilization

The land economic survey and the geological divisions of the department Miss Mildred Wiley is another of conservation have entered into corpeat and its utilization. Large beds of peat exist in this state and inasmuch as some 200,000 tons were imported from Europe last ported from Europe last year by American industry, the state has decided it is worth while to investigate the possibilities of fields within the confines of the Wolverine state.

Following an inventory that has extended over a three-year period, those in direction of the work have come to find that there are three types of peat: namely, woody, fibrous and pulpy. These three types vary generally within the same bog. This possibly offers the explanation of the failures in past attempts to make fuel out of Michigan peat. People behind the attempts, it develops, did not know the material with which they were dealing. Hence, in most cases, they were doomed to meet failure even be fore they started.

Investigation has revealed that the woody peat is of little value except for forest growth. Its high content of water and costly processes to which it would have to be subjected in order to eliminate the moisture precludes the use of it for any other purpose. It is too sour and wet even for agricultural purposes. The fibrous peat may be found useful in making cheap grades of paper, for litter in stables and dairy barns and especially in slaughter houses where its immense absorbent value stands it in good stead. Recently medical research students have found that the fibrous peat, when properly prepared, can be used for various purposes in hospitals.

The pulpy peat is the type best adapted to use for fire making. Its properties also adapt it admirably for use as filler in commercial fertilizer. In the past, fertilizer filler usually has consisted of sand and other substances that did not add to the value of the product itself. The pulpy peat, however, is mostly organic matter, has a high degree of nitrogen therein and all in all, is ideal for this use.

The chemical engineering depart ment of the University of Michigan is also co-operating in determining the value of this Michigan resource and the best way in which to conserve this asset. The department does not plan to expend any great amount of money on the project, although the results forward on a conservative basis.

Plant Diseases Take Heavy Toll From All Crops

Disease of plants in the United States reduce crop yields to growers, often to a serious and sometimes to a riculture are now collecting the statisverity of diseases varies from year to In 1926, disease is estimated to have caused a reduction in yield of the wheat crop of more than 7 per fourth. Benton Harbor is entitled to cent, with bunt as the most damaging single disease. Damage to rye from all diseases amounted to only about 1 per cent, but barley suffered worse with nearly 6 per cent reduction in yield and with covered smut the worst disease. About 10.3 reduction in yield of oats is estimated with stem rust and loose and covered smut responsible for most of the loss. Corn diseases accounted for nearly 13 per cent reduction in yield with ear orts responsible for more than half the damage. Tennessee growers lost about 30 per cent of their crop largely through root and ear rots, and Missouri, Pennsylvania, and South Carolina ranged from 28 per cent of 21 per cent. In the truck crops, potatoes are seriously effected with a large variety of diseases, but late blight caused injuries estimated at more than 6 per cent of a total reduction in yield of more than 18 per cent. With sweet potatoes the loss amounted to more than 10 per cent and with beans nearly 6 per cent.

Cotton, seriously injured by insects, also suffered a reduction in yield due to diseases of nearly 15 per cent. Grapes, with the exception of a few States, suffered only comparatively slight losses, but the apple crop reduction amounted to more than 10 per cent, and peach and pear reductions in 1926 were about 8 per cent

Department of Agriculture scienists are constantly studying these diseases with a view to divising methods of cure or control or to eliminate osses by the discovery or breeding of resistant varieties. In some of the most seriously affected crops ways have been devised by which farmers can prevent or minimize these losses.

Locusts Appearing In Nation on Time

As astronomers time the cycles of the comets, so naturalists time the cycles of the broods of 17-year locusts or cicades which swarm and disappear in various parts of America at egular intervals.

Now, after slumbering in the earth for half a human generation, "Bood II," as it is known to scientists, has dug itself out according to schedule, and is swarming over the Atlantic seaboard states. During June and part of July the rasping hum of myriads of wings will be heard in Connecticut, New Jersey, southern New York, eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina.

This does not mean, however, that the east will be afficted by the desolation which marked the visitation different forms, chocolate, cottonseed, biblical times. According to W. T. Davis, of St. George, Staten Island, who has named half the varieties of cicada known in the North America and has written many government bulletins on them, the 17year locusts have a sucking, rather than a biting mouth. They may harm the foliage of a few oak, hickory and chestnut trees, or of young orchards, but the damage will be due largely to the eggs they deposit in the tree twigs and plant stems.

This year's locusts are born of eggs that were deposited in 1911, during the last swarming of Brood II. The purae burrowed into the earth, cast off their outer shells from time to time as they passed through various stages of development, and now are emerging to enjoy a life of about six weeks above ground before they mate and die.

Hay Cures Better In Windrows; Is Better In

Modern authorities on hay making are agreed that the windrow method and elsewhere, is allowed to dry in the swath. Raked into light, airy windrows with a side delivery rake, with the coarse stems toward the outside and the tender leaves in the center, the hay dries evenly by the natural process of respiration. If dried in the swath, the eaves dry faster than the stems and when the stems are dry enough to put in the barn or stack the leaves are over dry and brittle, breaking off when handled.

Thus the leaves, the most valuable part of the hay, especially in legume crops such as alfalfa and clover, are lost, while the desirable green color is not secured. For best results, the hay should be raked with a curved tooth side delivery as soon as possible after mowing.

Legume Hay

It is possible to grow good leume on the project, although the results of the early investigational stages have produced evidence that compels attention and work will be carried growth in watersoaked soil and will carloads of horses to the fair. A good

CULTIVATORS MAY DECIDE SUCCESS OF MANY CROPS

This has been one of the worst seasons to get farm work done on time that we have had for many Haying and cultivating are terribly behind and especially cultivating. Many farmers are using cultivators with very poor, old, worn, rusty teeth and shovels which should be thrown away and be replaced with new sharp duckfeet and shear knives to do the best possible work. Every cultivator should be in the best possible condition so that when it passes down the row there will not be a single weed left, or thistle or grass that s not cut off to within three inches of the growing crop or even a little closer. Do not say that it can't be done for there are a few farmers who put their cultivators in the proper shape so they completely cut everything in the rows between the growing crops. We have had so much rain that the ground dries up hard and must be cultivated to keep the beets, beans and corn growing.

There are many farmers who start n the spring and do very good plowng, fitting and planting of their cultivated crops, who have left their cultivators out all winter so that they are very rusty, bolts loose and frame wobbly so they are not in shape to do 50 per cent of efficient work as could be done if fitted with new cutters or the old ones taken to a shop and properly sharpened. All sheer knives and duckfeet should be sharpened on the top side and free from rust so they will scour all the time, also a sharp file should be carried and rubbed across the top of these knives every half day or oftener if hard and tony land. Many farmers are cultivating too leep this year as the cold wet weather we had when crops were starting made the roots form close to the sur-

Don't throw away the success of a crop as well as your time with a 50 per cent efficient cultivator.

New Test For Oil

In the growing of soybeans in the United States, two general tendencies are present, one for the growing of a bean as rich in oil as possible from which the vegetable oil may be extracted in quantity, the other for a bean with as little oil content as may be procured. Trouble with "soft pork" as the result of feeding soybeans to hogs, is, for the most part, a result of the high oil content of the beans.

Plant breeders in the United States Department of Agriculture have been working for many years toward the development of high and low varieties of soybeans. In view of the large number of analyses to be made in developing such varieties, the department breeders have been greatly handicapped by the amount of time required for each analysis.

The problem of testing the percentages of oil in soybeans is similar to that for other oils such as cacao in flaxseed, mustard seed, peanuts, and sesame seed. Work on a simplified process of measuring the oil by observing the refraction of light passing through the oil has been under way for some time, and recently the marketing specialists of the Bureau of Agriculture Economics have perfected the system until it is possible to determine the oil content with a quantity of seed amounting to only a small fraction of an ounce, perhaps one or two soybeans.

The seed is first ground to a powder, and the oil is then dissolved in halowax. With the refractometer used in the tests it is possible to determine the refraction correct to 5 decimal places, and this figure is then compared with tables prepared for given percentages. Tests can be made in 15 minutes at an expense for material of less than one cent, as compared with the old method of ether extraction which required 24 hours and a much larger sample of the seed. Receipts of the department of state reached the record-breaking figure of $44,865,480 during the fiscal year ending June 30, according to a report of John Haggerty, secretary of state. The total was $8,500,000 more than that for the preceding fiscal year.

The increase was largely attributed to the increase in the gasoline tax from two to three cents beginning last summer. The gain in gasoline tax alone was slightly over seven millions, amounting for the past fiscal year to $17,683,913 as compared with $10,618,415 for the previous twelve months. Corporation fees collected during the period amounted to $7,-314,581 while the weight tax on motor vehicles totaled $18,616,326.

DR. LITTLE PLEADS FOR FRIENDSHIP IN D. A. R. CRITIC REPLY

Dr. Clarence Cook Little, president of the University of Michigan, who received a caustic rebuke from Mrs. Alfred Brosseau, Greenwich, Conn. president general of the Daughters of American Revolution, regarding a recent address delivered at Detroit in which Dr. Little made remarks regarding the D. A. R. that Mrs. Brosseau disliked, answered her letter with the following reply:
"My dear Mrs. Brosseau:

"Absence from the state has prevented before my acknowledgment of your letter of the seventh. Without commenting on its references to my present remarks may I express my appreciation of the fact that you clearly distinguish between the University of Michigan of which as you state I 'happen at the moment to be president and my personal views. Fortunately for me those who are the governors of this institution give me right to personal opinions even though they may not agree with them and I am glad that these opinions will not be confused by you with the University which so greatly appreciates what you and your husband are doing to aid needy students. Of course that fact cannot for a moment be desired by either of us to influence me in stating what I believe to be right. 'To some Americans of Revolution-

We do not care to be ruled either by outside or foreign influences, or by inside secret deliberations and decisions of an inner and privileged council of any organization. We prefer to deal directly with principals and ideals to which we can be whole heartedly loyal. We believe that organizations should exist for the use of mankind, not for his enslavement. We believe also that we recognize what America means to us and that we have not only the right but the duty when we see a society—no matter how fair may be its name-standing as a menace in the path of such relationships between our country and its citizens to say so in no uncertain terms.

Frequently Hastings has observed a fairly large colony of warblers during one summer and on returning the next season finds the region deserted. Evidently the trees have grown sufficiently in one year to make the location undesirable to the birds. On one occasion this year he counted nearly 30 pairs of the supposedly rare bird.

Financial statistics for the State of Michigan, as reported by the Department of Commerce for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1927, show that payments for operation and maintenance of the general departments of Michigan amounted to $52,610,366 or $11.84 per capita. The collector hobby, present to tempting to stop it. Her machine collided with another auto, which also makeup, can be well served by spendings for the home, thinks Miss A. Louise Fillebrown, writing on Home Decorations in the Farm and Fireside Magazine for June.

Furnishing a house is something that shouldn't be done in an afternoon or a week of afternoons, thinks the writer. It is, on the contrary, a lifetime job.

"Many a bride rushes into town and buys furniture for a whole house in less time than it takes to make her bridal veil," says the writer. "Some young couples buy a houseful of furniture on the installment plan and have a debt to start with. It is really nice furniture but often is not what they want nor what is most appropriate for their home. Hasty buying is always risky. Then there's the cautious couple who buy 'just do' furniture until the time when they can buy the house of their dreams. foolish, too, I often think.

WEEK OF AUGUST 12

General Farm Outlook: Rainfall for the week beginning August 12th for the state as a whole we believe precipitation will average normal and generally beneficial to the growing crops. The temperatures during this period will range from normal to slightly below over the state but we expect the temperatures to be sufficiently warm to make good growing weather. Haying, harvesting and threshing should progress rather favorably in most counties.

Weather for the Week: The week of August 12th opens with rather unsettled and stormy weather locally. Many of these storms will be quite severe, if not damaging. Tornadoes or, at least strong winds, are entirely probable; also electrical storms.

The above character of weather will continue over the first half of the week and on through the middle. In fact, we hardly look for any real close close of the week.

Temperature Frend Downward: The general trend of the temperature during the last two weeks of August over the country as a whole will be downward. Following this period there will be a decided increase in warmth lasting for the next week or 10 days

More confounded and disturbed than ever, my friend retired to bed, but he was too much excited to sleep. He had much the feeling that one fancies a prince to have over whose heritage distant armies are contending, while he in forced inaction awaits the result. No clue had been given which enabled him to reach a solution of the mystery that involved him, and nothing further transpired during the night to render matters any plainer.

On the following afternoon he was obliged to start for Boston on business. As he was elbowing his way through the crowd in the Grand Central station, he heard at his ear the well known voice of the "Great Mogul," speaking as usual in the un-known tongue which Vantine understood, yet the identity of which he had never established. There was no visible appearance this time, and the voice, although distinctly audible, voice, seemed to come from a great dis-

"Great Master," the voice said, "they are beheading us. All is lost."
"It would be some comfort," John Vantine said, rather irritably when he confided this strange story to me, know what was lost. I would have been uncommonly civil of the 'Great Mogul' to be a little more definite in his information. If the poor fellow lost his head in my service I am pro-foundly grateful, of course; but precious little good does it do me. Do you think the Physical Society would undertake the job of discovering in what part of the universe I am rightfully dubbed the Great Master and that young rascal in the nursery is a prince! Unless they can do something, I'm afraid I shall be a half-starved New York lawyer to the end of the chapter."
To which I had nothing satisfactory

The Radiator

(Scene, the chamber of Mr. and Mrs. Ellston in an apartment hotel. Time, three a. m. The silence of the night is unbroken save by the reguar breathing of the sleepers, until suddenly, from the steam radiator, bursts a sound like the discharge of a pattery of forty-pound guns.)

Mrs. E. (springing up in bed)—Oh! eh? what is that?

(Her husband moves uneasily in his sleep, but does not reply. The noise of the sledge-hammer score of the Anvil Chorus" rings out from the radiator.)
Mrs. E.—George! George! Something is going to happen! Do wake up, or we shall be murdered in our sleep; Mr. E. (with mingled ferocity and amusement)—There is small danger of anybody's being murdered in his sleep, my dear, where you are. It's only that confounded radiator; it's always making some sort of an infernal tumult. It can't do any harm.

Mrs. E.—But it will wake baby. Mr. E.—Well, if it does, the nurse (From the room adjoining is heard a clattering din, as if all the kettles and pars in the house were being thrown violently across the floor.)

Mrs. E.—There! The nursery radiator has begun. I must go and get baby.

Mr. E.—Let baby alone. If the youngster will sleep, for heaven's sake let him. The steam pipes make enough noise for this time of night, one would think, without your taking the trouble to wake baby.

Mrs. E. (with volumes of reproach in her tone)—Your own little baby! You never loved him as his mother

Mr. E .- Have what theories you choose, my dear; only please let me get a few crumbs of sleep, now the radiator has the mercy to subside. Mrs. E.—You are a brute, and I won't ever speak to you again!

(She firmly assumes a stony silence, and the radiator, after a few concludng ejaculations and metallic objurgations, also relapses into comparative stillness. Mr. Ellston's breathing begins to give strong indications that slumber has redescended upon his weary frame.)

Mrs. E. (starting up with the inspiration of an entirely new and startling idea) — George! George! George

Mr. E. (with less good humor than might be desired) Eh?
Mrs. E.—Wasn't it wonderful for baby to sleep through it all? Mr. E. (drowsily) Yes; droll little beggar. His mother wasn't in the nursery to wake him, though. Mrs. E .- You don't suppose there is anything the matter with him? George! George! I say! you don't suppose the reason he sleeps so soundis because he's sick?

(To this conundrum Mr. Ellston offers no solution, and equally passes in silence queries in regard to the probability of the nurse's being awake, alive, well-disposed, and able to take care of baby in case of emergency. Mrs. Ellston sighs with the desperation of long-suffering anguish, and once more stillness reigns in the chamber. The lady again arouses herself however, from an apparently sound nap to ask, in penetrating tones—)
"George, do you think it will begin all over again?"

(To which her brutal worser half grumbles out the reply)-No! and that's where it is more endurable than a woman.

(At which the radiator gives a chuckle so apt as to suggest the possession of a sinister consciousness on the part of that noisy instrument of torture. Mrs. Ellston groans, with the discouraged conviction that she is but one against two, and upon this theory at length consents to resume
