GOBLES, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1928

NO. 2

LOCAL BREVITIES

Hartford fair this week.

Glad to welcome Rev. Hayes back for another year.

Gobles returns to central standard time, Sunday night.

Mrs. Isaac Coffinger is visiting her daughter in Flint.

Stanley Sackett was calling on friends in town Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Myers of Kalamazoo visited his brothers here this week.

Byron Lohrberg has resigned his position with Lohrberg Bros. and will go to Otsego.

Clifford Bingham was home for the week end before taking up his duties at the U. of M.

Alson Hyames and family of Kalamazoo were Sunday visitors at the home of May Hyames.

Abbie Wilcox has resumed her studies at Albion College. Whyte and Paul are also there.

Will Walker and family and Mr. Martin of Kalamazoo were Sunday guests at Seymour Walker's.

The Ladies Aid of the Community church will meet with Mrs. Earl Newcomb Wednesday, Oct. 3.

The Marriotts and Carleton VanVoorhes arrived home last week and report a very successful season.

Miss Silver of Ludington, a former Gobles teacher, with her mother, visited Mrs. Patrick last Saturday.

Mrs. Linda Thayer has sold her home to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shearer. She will have a sale, October 13.

Homer Connery has sold the Val-leau farm to a Mr. Simmons and the Wooster farm to a Mr. Hanson, all of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. John McDonald entertained several tables at bridge last Thursday evening and a fine time is reported.

The Community Club will entertain at the club house again Saturday evening. A good picture and your money's worth every time.

Arvin Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Myers and Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Myers drove to Ithaca last week to visit Mr. and Mrs. Frank Herron.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Kridler entertained a few guests at dinner Sunday in honor of Emerson's twenty first birthday. A feature of the dinner was the beautiful birthday cake made by Mr. Schowe of the local bakery.

Charles Howard had the misfortune to fall from a building in Bloomingdale last week, smashing his face quite badly, but he is on the job again. Because of this, Luther gave up his tour of the south with a concert orchestra.

Don't forget the chicken pie supper served at the home of Arthur Earl Friday evening, Sept. 28, sponsored by the Booster Class of the M. E. church Kendall. Serving will begin at six o'clock and finish when all are served. A program is also being prepared.

Frances Cooley entertained seventeen girls last Saturday afternoon at a miscellaneous shower in honor of Mrs. Florence Burgett Wheeler, a recent bride. The feature of the afternoon was a mock wedding. Fine refreshments were served and a very enjoyable time is reported.

The first entertainment at the new Community club house last Friday drew a large and enthusiastic crowd. While the Doug Fairbanks picture was not available "The Little Church Around the Corner" proved a very satisfactory substitute. Seems good to see a movie without having to drive.

Dorothy Ringle entertained Saturday afternoon at her home a group of twenty young ladies, employees of the Upjohn Building at Kalamazoo to a 6 o'clock chicken dinner, ice cream and other good "eats" were also served. They returned home at a late hour and felt well repaid for coming so far.

Set clocks back Sunday night.

Will Langer is home from another successful season.

Note the Spanton announcement in this issue.

The Wolverine Station has installed a nifty air outfit that almost makes you wish you had a flat.

Maybert Camfield is attending Parsons; Diana Keller, Maher's and Ruby Graves has a position at Upjohn's.

Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Miller of Grand Rapids spent Saturday at Wm. Metzger's. Mrs. Metzger accompanied them to Chicago Sunday.

Herman Schowe has exchanged his bakery building and business with Joseph VanWieren for Buffalo property. Sorry to lose Herman and family but glad to welcome Mr. and Mrs. VanWieren. He is a brother of Louis who ran the bakery here before selling to Mr. Schowe, and he is enough like his brother that we know he will be very satisfactory.

Resolutions

Our Heavenly Father has called from our Order Sister Josephine Myers to the mansions that the Savior has prepared for her above.

Whereas, It is becoming to our fraternity to give expression to our feelings of great loss and the high regard in which she was held by every member of our order.

Resolved, That Hazel Dell Rebekah Lodge extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy in this, their hour of sadness.

Be It Further Resolved, That we drape the Charter in mourning for a period of thirty days and a copy of these resolutions be printed in the Gobles News and a copy be placed on the records of our Lodge,

By Order of Committee

Burgett-Wheeler

Florence M. Burgett and Maurice O. Wheeler were married in Kalamazoo Sept. 17 by the Rev. Isiah Wilson. They were attended by Miss Lola Reigle and John Bradford.

The bride is a Gobles graduate, and one of our popular younger set. The groom is a mechanic for the Checker Cab.

They are at home to their friends at Trimble and Charles Ave., Kalamazoo.

Another Birthday

Rev. and Mrs. Hayes were called to the phone by a supposedly mysterious voice asking if they would accept an invitation to a 6 o'clock dinner Tuesday eve, that a party would call for them.

The voice was recognized and all was settled in their own minds as to the place, but when Mr. Arvin Myers and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Myers called for them and escorted them around the town and into Mrs. Pugsley's home they were just a little puzzled. The next surprise was that they must move on for the next course, so when they entered at M. W. Clement's all were in a real enjoyable mood. Here Mr. and Mrs. Brown joined the crowd and when told again all must move on it was all settled that Brown's was the place, but when ushered to the genial home of A. W. Myers this event proved to be real fun. From here all went to the church to a general reception and were served pumpkin pie and coffee.

The entire program was but another proof that the community are glad that Rev. and Mrs. Hayes are to stay for another year.

If you have business in the probate court, request Judge Killefer to have the printing done at The News. He will be glad to accommodate you and you will help your home paper.

If your subscription to The News has expired, please call at once and settle.

True American Spirit

The phrase, "Don't give up the ship!" is attributed to James Lawrence, American naval officer, who commanded the Chesapeake, an American ship. In the encounter with the British ship, Shannon, Lawrence was wounded early in the encounter in the leg, but retained his post on the deck. He was mortally wounded a second time, and while being carried below, noticing that the crew was hesitating, cried, "Boys, don't surrender the vessel!"

Jewish Religious Sect

The Pharisees were a Jewish sect who were highly versed in the law and were extreme ritualists and formalists. The common people were exactly the opposite, namely, the unlearned and illiterate, who were content with fulfilling the absolute requirements of the Jewish law.

Spare That Tree

A giant sequoia near Grinnell, Humboldt county, Calif., is 308 feet tall, 30 feet in diameter and contains 361,333 feet of merchantable timber. Enough lumber there for the building of 22 homes of average size. "Oh, woodman, spare that tree!"—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Recipes for Happiness

To make much of little. To find reasons of interest in common things, to develop a sensibility to mild enjoyment, to inspire the imagination, to throw a charm upon homely and familiar things, will constitute man master of his own happiness.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Recovering

"Don't complain, thank ye," heartily cried old man Tottlerly, who, Mrs. B. "I'm getting weller all the time. I can quarrel with my son-in-law a little, and hope to hold him level after a while. Yes, sree! I'll be strong enough to play checkers by and by."—Philadelphia Record.

Early Steam Vessel

The little boat, the Washington, of the Potomac Steamboat company is said to have been the first to demonstrate the power of a steam-propelled vessel on the ocean, making the trip to the capital from New York city six years after the tryout of the Clermont.

Sense of Humor

"Shirts that laugh at the laundry," are advertised by a certain firm. One of ours, bought elsewhere, has such a keen sense of humor that it arrived home the other day with its sides split.

Controversial

A polemic theme is a controversial theme or a theme written in support or defense of an opinion or doctrine, especially as against another. A well-known example of polemics is Huxley's polemic vs. Herbert Spencer.

Some Fine Handwork

To show how finely the human hand can work, H. E. Radley of Harrow, England, has engraved the Lord's prayer 12 times on a coin smaller than the American dime, leaving room for three more repetitions.

Superfluous Plant

The attempt is made to manufacture rubber out of everything nowadays. This suggests that a new use might be found for that now superfluous plant, the mistletoe.—Boston Transcript.

Loss That Makes Gain

It may serve as a comfort to us in all our calamities and afflictions, that the who loses anything and gets wisdom by it, is a gainer by the loss.—L'Estrange.

Vitality of Children

As the result of investigating some 25,000 cases, it is said that the children of fathers of thirty-five and mothers of thirty have the strongest vitality.

Thought for Today

The benefits we receive must be rendered again line for line, deed for deed, cent for cent, to somebody. Beware of too much good staying in your hand.—Emerson.

Outs and Ins

There's this difference: An outlaw frankly robs you of money; an in-law promises to pay it back.—Santa Barbara Daily News.

Believes Stars Liquid

Prof. J. H. Jeans, an eminent astronomer, advances the theory that the stars may be largely liquid.—Gas Logic.

Success Through Failure

Failure to appreciate his own limitations has enabled many a man to succeed in life.

Reopened Envelope

To reopen a sealed envelope, lay a wet cloth or paper over the flap and press with a warm iron.

KENDALL

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lewis drove to Kalamazoo and Otsego Saturday.

Mrs. Davidson has returned from her visit at Jackson.

Paul Wright and other relatives of Battle Creek came to visit Mrs. Harry Root Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hofacker spent Sunday with Mr. Hofacker's brother, Charles at Oshtemo. It was a small family party of the brothers and their wives.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Chamberlin had as their over Sunday guest, Mr. Urquhart of Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. Ford Hofacker came from Kalamazoo to spend Saturday evening with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hofacker.

Lillian Ray begins her second year at W. S. T. C. this week.

Mr. Heffernon and Winifred spent the week end with friends at Comstock.

Dr. Wilkinson has torn down the woodshed from his house and will have a new garage built there.

Mrs. Aleda Champion has returned from a few days visit with relatives in Kalamazoo and South Bend, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Youngs had as their guests several days last week Mr. and Mrs. McAlpine of Michigan City, Ind. Mrs. McAlpine is a daughter.

Anna Ray was home for a short stay Sunday afternoon.

Pauline Waber spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Waber.

Do not forget the chicken pie social to be held at the hotel Friday evening, Sept. 28. Everybody welcome.

A stock company has been formed and is already at work taking peat from the marsh land just west of Kendall. At one place the peat lies to the depth of forty feet. Mr. Thrall and Mr. Urquhart of Detroit are financing the company which is to be known as the Kendall Peat Co. It will employ about fifty men and we are in hopes to see our village grow in the near future.

Suffering Love

A Lake View (Ill.) high school pupil defined a passive verb as "used when the subject is the sufferer, as 'I am loved.'"

Character in Handwriting

The belief that handwriting reveals an individual's character was advanced in Italy in the Seventeenth century.

Chinese Divorce Customs

In China it is not possible for a woman to secure a divorce from her husband. A man can divorce his wife for any of nine causes. Divorce by mutual consent is possible. If a wife has mourned her husband's parents for three years, or if the husband was poor at the time of marriage and has since grown rich, the husband may not divorce his wife except in the case of infidelity.

Crickets Tell Temperature

A native investigator says it is possible to ascertain the temperature by counting the number of cricket's chirps per minute and then making use of a simple formula which gives the result with more or less accuracy. An easier way is to use a thermometer and more accurate.

American Eggs Popular

Fresh eggs shipped in cold storage from the United States are appreciated in Chile. They can be had there at 6 cents apiece, compared with the 12 cents asked for Chilean eggs, and, United States eggs are better, for cold storage is lacking in Chile, and eggs, too, probably.

Paint Top and Bottom

In order to last, shelves should be protected with paint or varnish on the bottom as well as the top and sides. Decay is no respecter of surfaces, and will attack and wear away one side as well as another. Therefore, it is best to paint or varnish the entire shelf as soon as it is put up.

Creameries Busy

Three-fourths of the butter produced in the United States is now made in creameries. They now produce about 1,500,000,000 pounds of butter annually, while farm butter amounts to about 500,000,000 pounds.

School Notes

Plans are being outlined for the School Fair which will occur on the afternoon and evening of Friday, October 19th. This work is being outlined by the Student Council and Athletic Association. An executive committee consisting of the following was nominated: Max Brown, Lulu Shryock, Chester Ray, Marie Waber and Mr. Stratton, Faculty Advisor.

Basketball back boards have been placed on the tennis court and the boys have been getting some early practice.

This is the fourth week. Report cards next Tuesday.

School was out for the Hartford Fair yesterday afternoon. In the past it has been customary to take the entire day, but the extra half day will be taken this year for preparation on our own Fair and Carnival. This will make it possible to have much better exhibits for our own fair and a night and afternoon in length.

We are sorry to lose Louise and Herman Schowe from the school. We hope that they will like it in their new school.

Bernard Rich was a visitor at the school last week.

Last Friday morning a chapel program was held consisting of some peppy singing led by Mrs. Schneider. Mr. Stratton gave a talk on his trip to the west this summer.

Farmers, Gardeners and Fruit Growers

This is your opportunity to secure PURE PEAT HUMUS at the remarkably low price of 75c per cubic yard, f. o. b. your truck or wagon. Inquire F. J. Chamberlin, Kendall.

Western Europe More Heavily Armed Than in 1913

The signing of the Kellogg-Briand pact renouncing war as an instrument of policy finds western Europe, except Germany and Russia, more heavily armed than before the World War, 1918. The chart shows an increase of men under arms, including reserve and volunteer units, in each of the 10 countries listed. German's armed forces, however, have shrunk from 800,000 to 100,000 during the past 16 years, while Russia and the seceding states carved from her has decreased from 1,200,000 to 900,000.

CULLING SEASON IS BEST TIME TO CAN CHICKEN FOR WINTER

When the market price of poultry is low, the farm woman may dispose of her chickens by canning them either for sale or for family use.

For safety, the New York state college of home economics says that canning poultry should be done only under the pressure method. The flesh of fowls has a compact texture which makes heat penetration slow, and a high temperature is necessary for proper sterilization.

Chicken roasted, fried, fricasseed or raw may be used for canning but raw chicken is frequently preferred since it does not have the warmed-over flavor of canned cooked chicken. The chicken should remain in the pressure cooker about one hour at ten pounds pressure. The exact time depends on the age and texture of the meat. It is important to have no sudden changes in temperature during the processing for this will draw the juices out of the jar. Avoid too high a temperature for it darkens the meat.

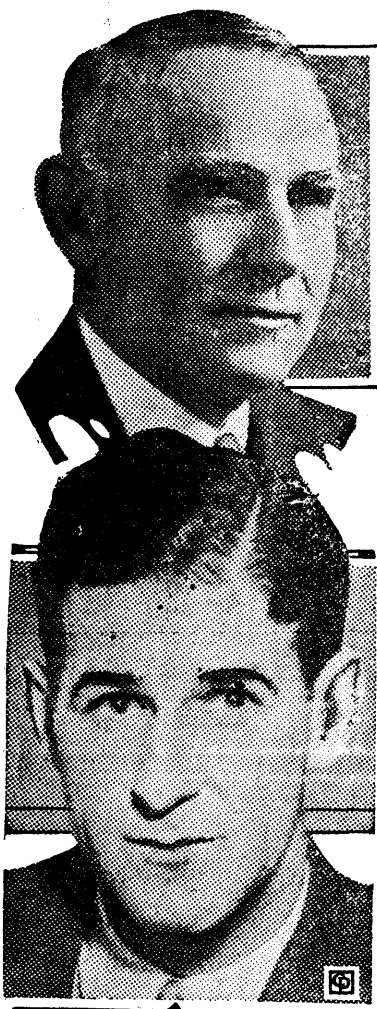

The chicken should be packed in clean, tested jars. Wide-mouthed jars are easiest to pack. It is important to pack the jar tightly. To accomplish this, plan to put the pieces containing a good deal of gelatin, like the back and neck, in the center of the jar and to arrange the other pieces around them. When the jar is hot the skin sticks to the glass sides, so placing the skin next to the outside of the jar will help to give a tight pack. If the more tender pieces, such as fillet of the breast, are placed on top they can be more easily removed without breaking.

To each quart of packed chicken use one teaspoon of salt but no water. If the chicken is carefully packed little space will remain.

Grass Removal Is Difficult Task

The farmer who wants to eradicate Johnson grass from his field will find that he has no easy task. The weed spreads both by seeds and by vigorous root-stocks, and once established, persists stubbornly in cultivated fields. The difficulty in eradicating Johnson grass is in removing all of its underground stems or root-stocks, small fragments of which may take root and grow into new plants. No one method of eradicating this weed can be said to be equally effective and practical under different farming conditions, but general principles of control are given in Farmers' Bulletin 1587-F, just published by the United States Department of Agriculture. One way to control the grass is to cut it for hay before blossoming each time a new growth occurs. Another way is first to pasture it closely for two seasons; and then to play shallow. Extra care should be used in preparing the ground for the next crop and in its cultivation. Where conditions warrant the cost, especially in arid regions, Johnson grass can be killed by bare fallow; that is, by cultivation, so persistent and thorough that green growth above ground is prevented. Careless tillage usually stimulates the grass. Where conditions are favorable for its growth, alfalfa is helpful as a smother crop. In waste places, such as fence rows, railroad rights of way, and ditch banks, the ripening of seed should be prevented by any means practicable. In attempting to eradicate Johnson grass by any method, three aims should be kept in mind: (1) To exhaust existing rootstocks and to prevent the growth of new ones; (2) to kill new seedlings and (3) to prevent the ripening and scattering of seed.

Bucky Harris Out

Clark Griffith, Washington Senators owner, above, and Bucky Harris, manager of the Senators, below, are now reported to have split, with the probability that Harris will be making other connections before another baseball season rolls around. The report is surprising in the American League, as the Senators have played excellent ball within the last few weeks.

Home Bombed

Add to the list of Chicago bombings this year that of the home of Captain Ludw. Garrick, above, of the Chicago police force, which has been partly wrecked by a dynamite explosion. Mrs. Garrick was shocked by the blast and a granddaughter bruised by falling plaster. Captain Garrick had led a raid on a gambling club the night before.

Pasteurize or Add Chemicals to Keep Apple Cider Sweet

Sweet apple cider can be preserved either by the addition of benzoate of soda or by pasteurization.

Apple juice contains from 8 to 16 per cent of sugar capable of undergoing alcoholic fermentation and, if left in its natural state, exposed to the wild yeasts of the air, will develop from 4 to 8 per cent of alcohol. As this is considerably in excess of the one-half of one per cent permitted by the prohibition statutes, it is necessary to treat fresh cider in some way to prevent fermentation.

If the cider is to be either stored in barrels or dispensed from them to the retail trade, benzoate of soda must be added at the rate of four ounces to fifty gallons of cider. Although this imparts a slightly foreign flavor to the beverage, it is the least objectionable and most efficient preservative for the purpose.

If the apple juice is to be marketed in smaller containers, of one gallon or less, then pasteurization may be employed as the method of preservation. This consists of heating the fresh cider in suitable containers such as glass jugs or fruit cans, which can be sealed air tight, for ten minutes at 170 degrees F. The procedure is carried out by placing the jugs of cider, unstopped, in a tank or wash boiler containing enough water to bring to level of the water almost to the mouth of the cider containers. Heat is then applied to the water either as a steam coil in the vat or as heat from a stove, and the temperature of the cider is noted from time to time. When it reaches 170 degrees F. it should be held there for ten minutes and not allowed to go any higher as a cooked flavor will result. At the end of the ten minutes, the jugs must be closed immediately with new cork stoppers and sealed with sealing wax. The corks should be plunged into boiling water for a few seconds just before use.

It is obvious that more time will be required to bring a gallon of cider to a given temperature than a pint. Experience has shown that after the water in the vat has reached 170 degrees F., the following exposures are necessary for the different sized containers to insure the required ten minutes heating at the temperatures stated: Pints, 15 minutes; quarts, 20 minutes; half-gallons, 25 minutes; gallons, 30 minutes; two gallons, 35 minutes, and five gallons, 55 minutes.

Urge New Method In Bean Harvest By Curing System

Bean growers may insure themselves against losses at harvest time by using the McNaughton system of bean curing, according to crops specialists at Michigan State College.

Unfavorable weather conditions in many sections are reported to have delayed the ripening of the bean crop, which is apt to extend the harvest over into a period of inclement weather this fall. The McNaughton system of curing beans is designed to meet such conditions.

Beans harvested by this method are pulled and rolled together into windrows with a side-delivery rake. At intervals throughout the field, steel fence posts are driven firmly into the ground. Enough straw to form a six-inch mat is placed around each post. The beans are then piled in stacks from three to four feet in diameter and to a height well above the post, keeping the sides of the stacks vertical.

From eight to twelve of these stacks is enough usually to cure one acre of beans. Steel posts are recommended but wooden poles may be used as long as they are strong enough to support the stacks.

More Butterfat—Much More Money

Increasing the butterfat production of a dairy herd will also increase the income over cost of feed, and at a much greater rate. Records kept by the Department of Agriculture on more than 100,000 dairy cows were sorted into groups having an average yearly butterfat production of 100 pounds, 200 pounds, etc. As the butterfat production increased from 100 to 500 pounds per year, the average annual income over cost of feed per cow increased from $14 to $178; or in other words, as the butterfat production increased 5 times, the income over cost of feed increased almost 13 times.

Eggs especially packed for storage in new cases made of odorless white wood, with new fillers and flats, are called "storage packed" and sell for slightly higher prices per dozen than do those packed in other ways.

Discount Mangy Hogs

That the control of parasites often pays the hog raiser in dollars and cents can be seen by the fact that in the Central West, where the mange mite is very prevalent on hogs, a number of packers and commission firms now purchase mangy hogs at a discount of from 50 cents to $1.50 per hundredweight. In view of the better prices paid for the mange-free hogs, averaging, for mature animals, about $2.50 a head over those affected by the parasite, the slight cost in labor and materials for dipping a herd is fully repaid.

Believes New Plow Boon to Wheat Men

That his new plow will revolutionize the method of seed-bed preparation and be a boon to the wheat grower is the assertion of an Australian who is exhibiting it in his country. The plow is of a rotary moldboard type, laying distinct furrows diagonally to the direction of travel. It is equipped with a depth-regulating device and will maintain its own traction.

MAKING NEW BARN FROM OLD

Some of those barns which have hardly tasted paint or repairs since the "good old days" previous to 1920 are almost crying for attention. Many of them have been doctored up this summer, some with new floors or foundations, some with ventilating systems, some with the addition of running water or other labor-saving improvements, and many with new up-to-date equipment.

Many old barns can be made "like new" with a little carefully planned alteration and without a great deal of expense. Very successful dairy herds have been housed in such made over buildings, even though the dairy cow requires more nearly perfect conditions than some other classes of farm animals.

It is best to consider every possible improvement when the old barn is remodeled, even though all of them are not made at once. It may be possible to acquire them gradually; thus no work should be done at any time which will have to be undone later on. Feed trucks and feed carriers are time and labor savers, as are litter carriers. A manure pit will pay for itself in soil fertility saved. New stanchions, electric systems are no longer considered luxuries. Attachments for milking machines should not be overlooked when plans are made. Good dairymen say that drinking cups will pay for themselves in less than a year in added milk returns.

Good buildings and well arranged equipment make farm chores a pleasure. Often such improvements pay for themselves in added returns from the stock.

Chemist Sees Riches In Waste on Farms

The brighter day for the farmer awaits the discovery of the chemical constituents of lignin and cellulose, Dr. G. H. Herty, former president of the American Chemical society, explained at the session of the society recently.

Lignin is being extracted from wastes. It is the substance that is in combination with cellulose and has been described as a mortar extract that holds the cellulose molecular "bricks" together.

"Fortunately," said Dr. Herty, "the United States department of agriculture is making a very fine scientific study of what lignin is, basic to the rational utilization of this material."

"When our chemists have solved this problem—as well as that of discovering the composition of molecules of starch and cellulose—a new day for agriculture in this country will be born. There no longer will be any question about the utilization of surplus farm products. The surplus will appear in a thousand new forms of useful commodities, thereby adding a constant stream of wealth to the nation."

Night Supper for Rats

A "sandwich" for rats can be made of 1 ounce of powdered red squill and 2 ounces of good butter, mixed and spread between thin slices of about half a pound of bread. Cut each sandwich into six small pieces for the rat baits. Red squill is an effective poison for rats and has added the distinct advantage of being practically harmless to human beings and domestic animals. The powder has an acrid taste that is objectionable to most animals, but rats will eat it readily. Since the red squill has no uniform toxic standard, it is important to purchase it from manufacturers who guarantee its toxicity. Red squill can also be used with cereals, ground meats, or fruits and vegetables as baits. It is important that a sufficient number of baits be distributed at one time to provide an ample supply for all the rats. Baits should be put around in the evening so they will be fresh when the rats are feeding, stale baits are unattractive to rodents; hence baits put out should be picked up and destroyed the following morning.

Keeping Record of Farm Finds Leaks In Annual Income

A farmer in Maine sold 20 dozen more eggs in April than in November, but he did not realize until he had kept an account book, that he netted $4 more profit in November; this taught him the value of early hatching in order to obtain eggs when prices were highest. Another farmer found, after keeping records and accounts on his farm business, that he was paying $1.07 for feed with only $1 returns; this led him to study his feed costs and put them on a better basis.

The keeping of records on one farm led the owner to the realization that on his particular farm a combination of dairying, poultry raising, orchard cultivation, and potato growing would provide the most steady income.

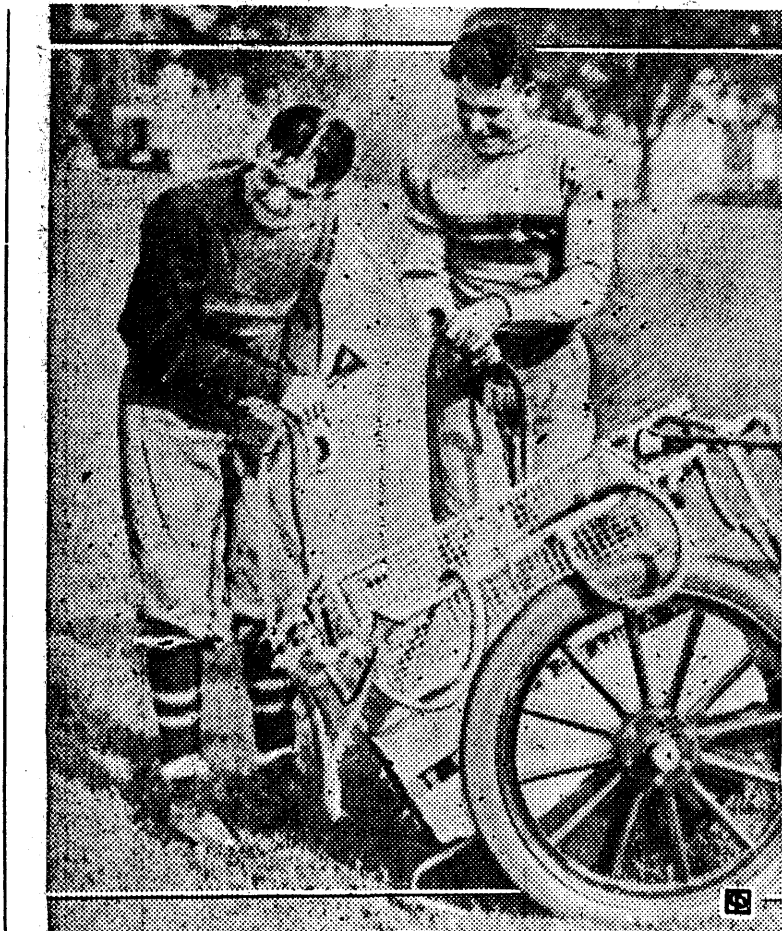

"I want to get insured."
"Fire or life?"
"Both—I've got a wooden leg."
"Hey, Pete, did you ever hear of?"
"Yeah," said the flapper tourist after being shown through the king's palace. "It's a nifty joint. What picture they got here this week?"

Largest X-Ray Tube Developed

The world's largest X-ray tube, more than 15 feet long and operating with 1,000,000 volts of electricity, has been developed at the California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, Cal., by Dr. C. C. Lauritsen and Dr. R. D. Bennett, who are using the machine in researches made possible by the tremendous ray. Its ray will penetrate more than two inches of lead. The machine is shown above with insets, upper left, Dr. Bennett, and, below, Dr. Lauritsen.

Forecasts Synthetic World

The world of tomorrow will be a simple, synthetic world, with lumber made from waste stalks; gems made in a laboratory; silks, leathers, glass coming from cellulose; power, light and heat from the sun, according to Dean Gerald L. Wendt of Pennsylvania State college, a foremost authority on scientific research. Above is Miss Marjorie Laws of Oswego, Kas., wearing a synthetic bridal outfit which cost less than $25. STATE WOULD
HIRE OIL EXPERT

"Oil and gas possibilities in Michigan warrant the state securing the services of an expert and experienced inspector."

That was the statement made by R. R. Brandenthaler, a United States bureau of mines engineer, who recently paid a visit to the Muskegon oil field at the invitation of the state. R. H. Smith, state geologist, has urged the state to employ an expert to conduct inspection work in the Michigan field and Brandenthaler's visit was one of the results of Smith's activity. Brandenthaler was detailed to the Michigan area for two weeks by the federal government and while here Geologist Smith sought his advice as to the type of man needed. The foregoing statement revealed what the government expert thought.

Some time ago the conservation department determined it would employ the expert Smith should recommend. The geologist at once called a meeting of oil operators in Michigan and they decided that to preclude the possibility of any favoritism, a government man would be the ideal figure for the position. On request, the government sent Brandenthaler from the Bartlesville, Okla., experimental station but gave him only a two-week leave.

The mines bureau chiefs also said because of the scarcity of petroleum engineers, they would find it impossible to release any of their men. This started Smith on a new search for an expert. He has several likely candidates in mind.

SAME PRESCRIPTION
HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

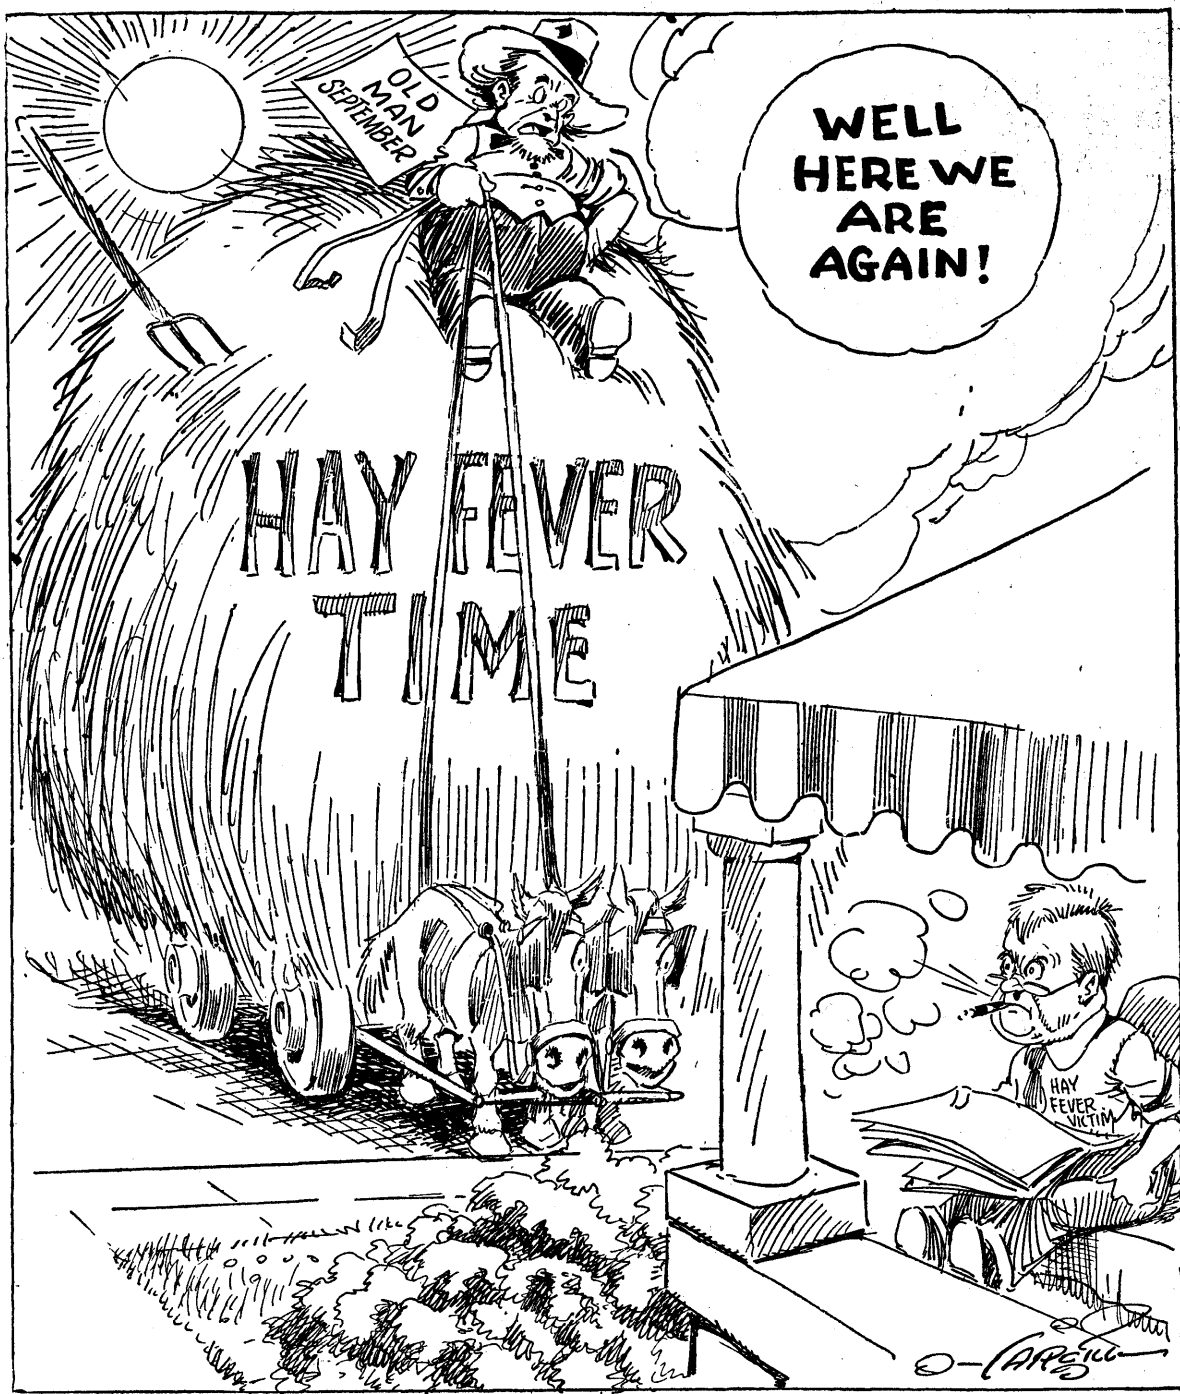

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. At your druggist, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

MOST people know this absolute antidote for pain, but are you careful to say Bayer when you buy it? And do you always give a glance to see Bayer on the box—and the word genuine printed in red? It isn't the genuine Bayer Aspirin without it! A drugstore always has Bayer, with the proven directions tucked in every box:

TRUCKS REDUCE
FOREST FIRE LOSS

New Equipment placed in the various districts has helped materially in keeping Michigan's forest fire losses down this year. Chief Fire Warden Andrews reports both trucks and power pumps, one of each having been placed in each of the several divisions have proved satisfactory.

The trucks have carried equipment through country that virtually would have been impossible to reach by touring car, he reports.

Each of the power pumps originally was equipped with 1,000 feet of hose. They have been found fitted particularly for the fighting of swamp fires and for use in mopping up after a running fire has been checked. The extinguishing of peat or muck fires always has presented a problem to the fire fighters. Water has been the only answer and with the power pumps and hose the wardens have accomplished more than ever before.

The pumps cannot be used so successfully in fighting upland fires because of the usual absence of a sufficient quantity of water. In the lowlands, if there is no stream or body of water near at hand, the workers frequently can dig in a swamp a cistern that fills quickly with a good supply.

September and October are the two worst months from the forest fire fighter's point of view. Absence of rainfall and high winds usually occur over this period, with the result that the conditions are right for a running fire. At present the condition is very satisfactory, but the fire warden's forces are taking steps that will find them ready to meet any emergency that may arise.

Chevrolet Builds Car
Every Tenth Second

The Chevrolet Motor company recently reached a new milestone in its manufacturing history. With production and sales continuing at a record September clip, the millionth car of 1928 came off the assembly line at Flint recently.

Due to the high September production schedule necessary to meet an unusually heavy fall demand, no formal ceremonies marked the occasion, although W. S. Knudsen, president of the Chevrolet Motor company, R. H. Grant, vice-president in charge of sales, C. F. Barth, vice-president in charge of manufacturing, and other Chevrolet officials were present.

An idea can be grasped of the immensity of the task of building 1,000,000 cars in less than eight months when it is borne in mind that to achieve this record it was necessary that a Chevrolet be built approximately every ten seconds of every working day. Computing on the basis that there are 25 working days a month, it means that one million cars were built in a little more than 200 working days.

Mr. Knudsen pointed out that the building of 1,000,000 cars since January 1 would not have been possible without strict adherence to precision methods.

Detroit to Have
$4,000,000 Club

First steps toward the construction of the 10-story $4,000,000 club house for the National Town and Country club in Detroit were taken recently, when ground was broken at Bagley avenue and First street. It will be equipped with bowling alleys, squash courts, handball courts, a swimming pool and other such features. Complete dining facilities and living quarters for members are included in the plans. The building will occupy the entire block facing on First street, between State and Bagley. It is expected to be ready for use by the fall of 1929.

The National Town and Country club was organized four years ago and now has a membership of 2,000. Its officers are: Edward A. Loveley, chairman; McKee Robison, vice-chairman, and James H. Doherty, treasurer.

Engine Exports Grow

Twenty-five per cent of the current business of the Novo Engine company, Lansing, is of an export nature, according to officials of the company. Many parts of the world have proved ready markets for the Lansing product, according to A. W. Prins, Novo export manager. Spain has purchased nearly 100 engines, England, despite discriminatory tariffs and competitive products, a carload of hoisting equipment and engines, while several engines have been sent to Colombia in South America and one sand dredging pump to be installed in a barge at Trinidad. Domestic business has also been exceptionally heavy recently, Stanley G. Hunter, sales manager, said. The company is making castings for a new airplane motor developed by the Michigan Screw company.

KALAMAZOO TO HAVE SKYSCRAPER

Announcement has been made by John Tuberty, president of the Kalamazoo Trust & Savings Bank, of plans for the city's tallest structure, a 15-story building rising 188 feet from the ground, which will be erected this fall as the new home of the Kalamazoo financial institution. It will cost approximately $1,250,000. Wrecking of old buildings to make way for the new structure will be started in September, said President Tuberty. The bank expects to occupy the building in about a year.

The new structure will be featured by a thirteenth floor balcony and a fifteenth floor promenade. The balcony and promenade will be provided by cutting back the walls at the thirteenth and fifteenth floors. The main lobby will be finished in colored marble and bronze. The exterior of the building will be of Indiana limestone.

Reviews 1927 Business

The high level of prosperity enjoyed by the United States in 1927, only slightly less significant than the record established in 1926, reflecting the steadily increasing efficiency of both industry and trade, is analyzed in the 1928 issue of the Commerce Yearbook, published by the Department of Commerce, which has just become available in the department's Detroit office.

The Yearbook, which is a volume consisting of 700 pages, is a complete and official history of commerce and industry in the United States both in general and by products, during the year covered. It contains reviews covering manufacturing, mining and construction, agriculture, transportation, wholesale and retail trade, foreign trade, finance and price movement, while the first chapter treats of production, employment and domestic trade.

Join Pollution Fight

Three more Michigan cities have promised the Department of Conservation, stream pollution division, that they will soon take steps to remedy the condition that now exists. Bay City and Saginaw, two of the large municipalities that empty their sewage into the Saginaw river, have indicated their intention of going forward with the solution of their problems.

Saginaw will submit its plans for a sewer system change and sewage disposal plant as soon as the city finds it possible to do so, while Bay City is to engage a consulting engineer to make a study of that city's requirements at once. Saginaw expects to have sewer system and disposal plant system plans in by Sept. 15.

Michigan Farmer
Buys in Own State

The Michigan farmer does his buying in Michigan. This is the conclusion of C. R. Hoffer, Michigan State college sociologist, after an intensive survey in Livingston, Ingham, Clinton and Shiawassee counties.

More than 1,800 farmers answered detailed questionnaires submitted by Mr. Hoffer in the five counties. Of this number 3.8 per cent buy clothing from mail-order houses.

The same number purchase furniture from the national firms, while only 1 per cent buy groceries and only 2 per cent buy hardware by mail.

Out of 1,851 farmers replying, 647 patronize only one trade center for buying and banking, while 497 patronize two trade centers, 173 patronize three, 32 trade in four communities and three buy in as many as five different centers. Professor Hoffer concludes that the trading interest of one-half to two-thirds of the farmers are divided among two or more towns. Farmers near small towns and villages patronize more trade centers than those near larger cities.

Extending his survey to social influences, Professor Hoffer learns that 54.4 per cent of the farmers attend churches in the same town in which they make their purchases. He finds that 66.9 per cent are subscribers to local newspapers. Social functions in the same towns in which they trade are attended by 62.2 per cent of those replying. As for schools, 76.2 per cent of the children attend classes in the towns in which their parents buy groceries and furniture.

Whereas churches and schools in other towns attract only a few farmers, nearly half of them subscribe to newspapers of larger towns and cities.

Lowell Factory to Expand

Expansion plans of the Hudson Manufacturing Co. were outlined by H. D. Hudson at a dinner meeting at Lorne Pine Inn at which members of the Board of Trade were guests.

The Hudson company, which recently consolidated with the Lowell Specialty Company, plans manufacture of several new products and employment of more than 500 persons, including women, Hudson said. Making of sprayers will be concentrated in one building and a new plant may be built. The company, which has branches in Hastings and in Wisconsin and Minnesota cities, will use the Lowell plant to store articles made at Hastings for distribution in this section.

BIG STURGEON IS CAPTURED AT SOO

A large fish that attracted the attention of summer cottagers and fishermen along the St. Mary's river for several weeks has been caught and proved to be a sturgeon six feet long and weighing 125 pounds.

Many persons had seen the huge fish splashing in the river and had speculated as to its identity.

William Seppala of the Ontario Soo caught the sturgeon while trolling for pike with a piece of salt pork as lure. The trolling line became snagged and while the fisherman was backing his boat to release the hooks the sturgeon took the pork bait.

The battle that followed lasted an hour, with Seppala fighting the giant fish while his son controlled the boat. Finally the sturgeon tired sufficiently that it could be drawn alongside the boat, where Seppala stunned it with a heavy rock he was using as an anchor.

Midland Steel Expands

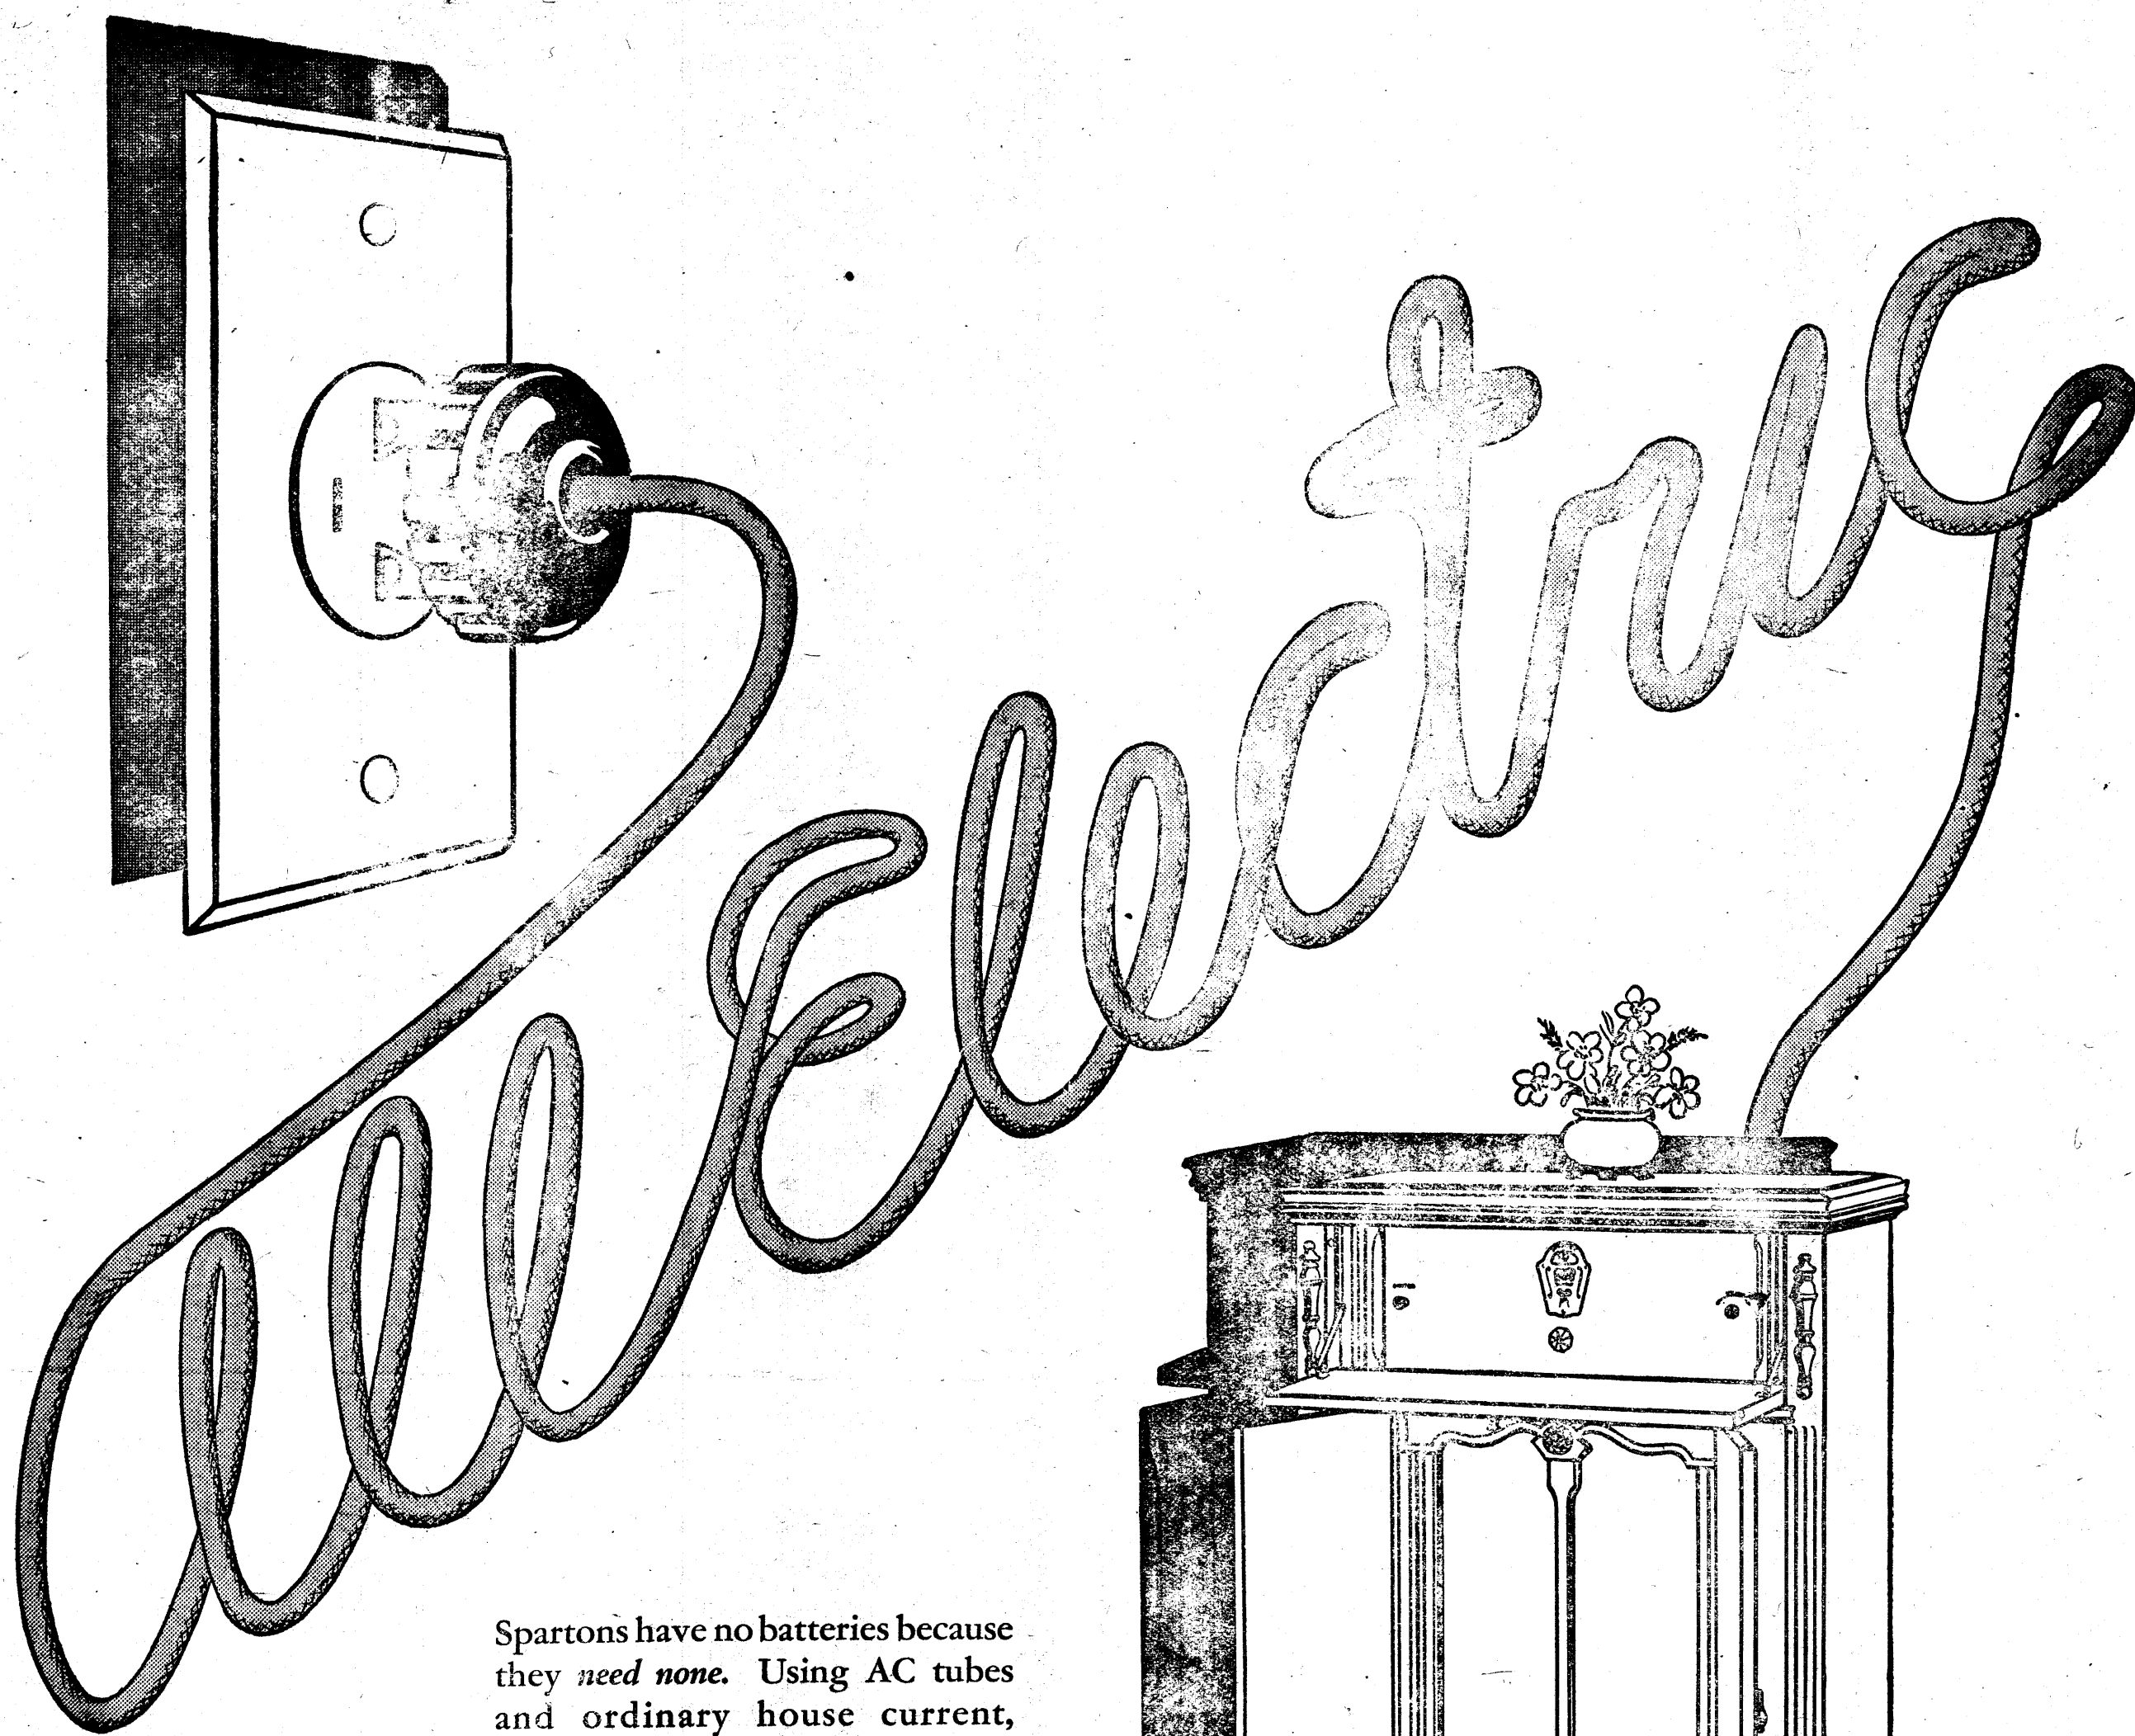

Immediate large scale expansion of plants and production has been necessitated by important booking of new business, announces President E. J. Kulas of the Midland Steel Products company. A large order for automobile frames from Canada and a new domestic order for four-wheel brakes indicate the greatest volume of output for the company in its history. Plans to provide for these business increases are being pushed at both the Detroit and Cleveland plants. At the Detroit plant the expansion program, already under way, has been enlarged by further additions to cost approximately $250,000.

Order 154 Planes

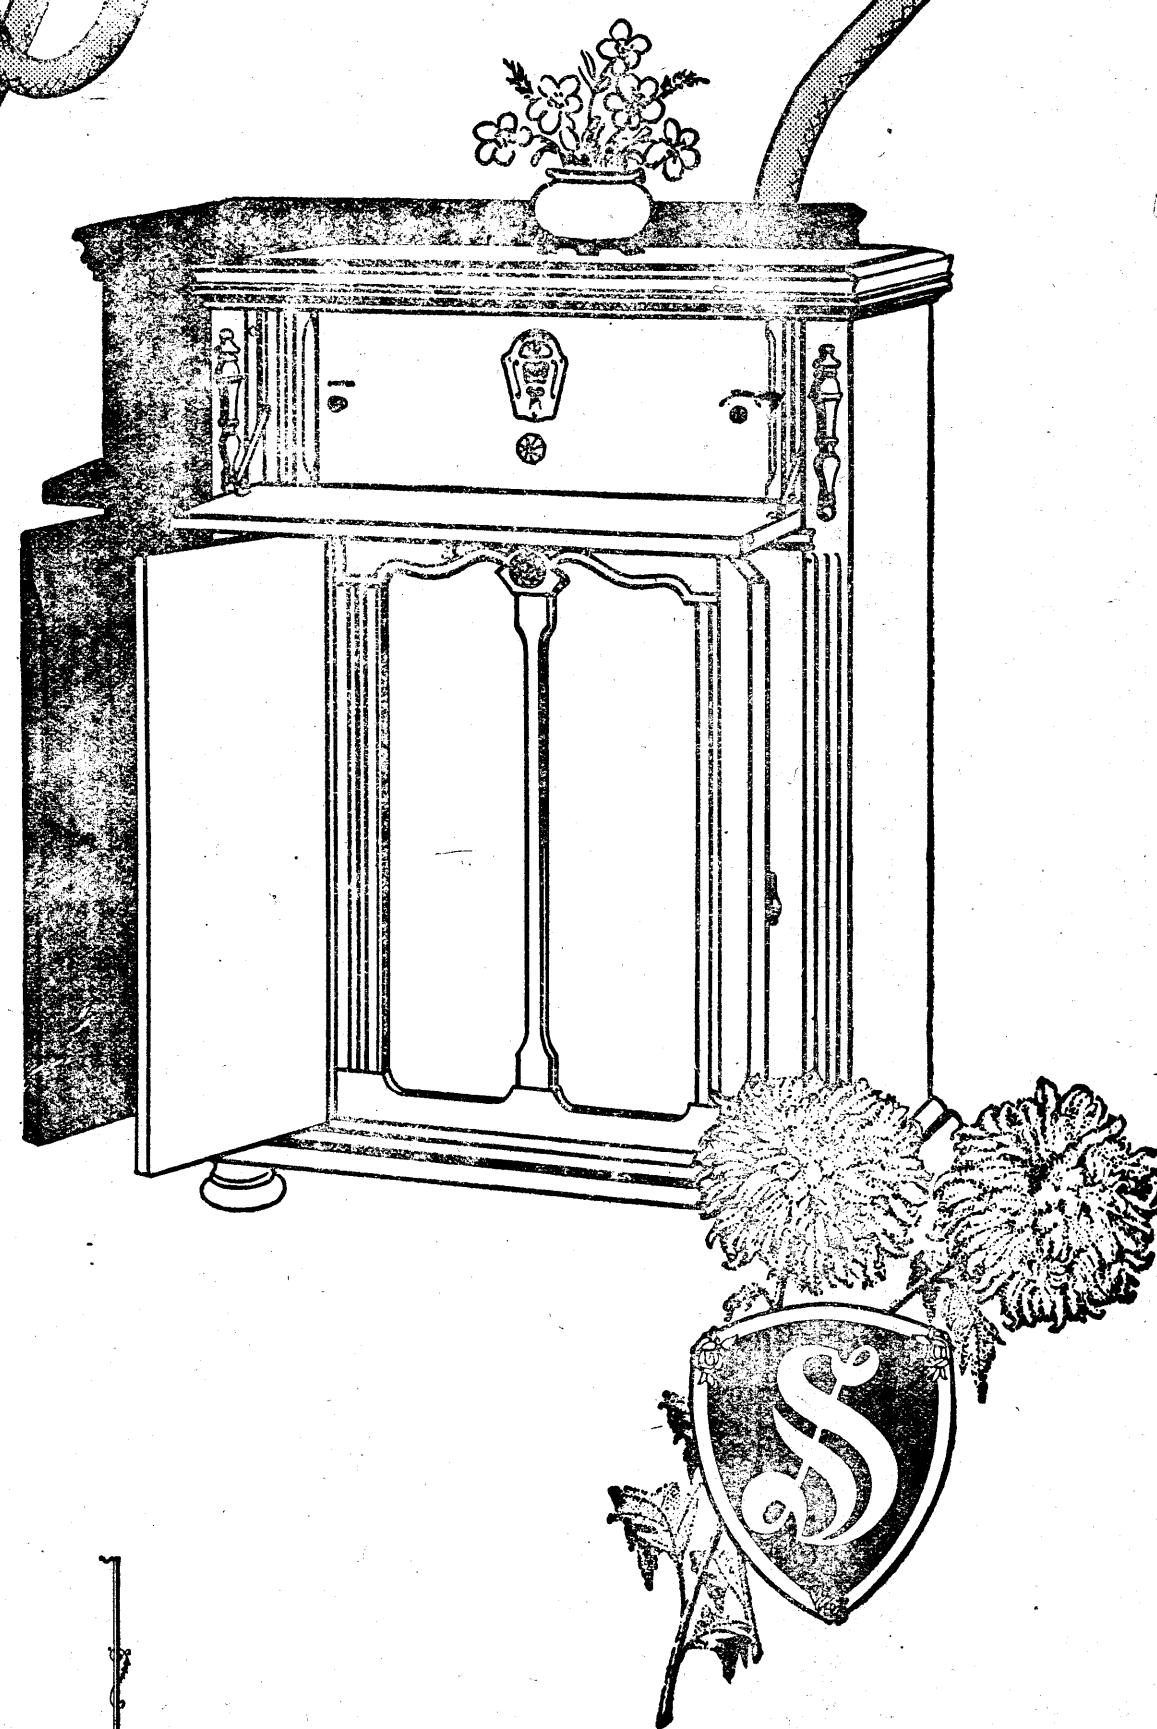

Considerable new business has recently been booked by the Driggs Aircraft Corporation of Lansing. Orders have been given for 154 planes of the Driggs' Dart type, to be delivered to the Air Associates, airplane dealers and distributors of New York. Work has been begun on this order. Another order comes from the West Coast Aviation Company, Inc., for 45 of the Darts to be delivered within the year.

A message to the editor of this paper from GENERAL MOTORS

JUST about a year ago we published, in your advertising columns, a message in which we sought to give you and your readers an idea of what General Motors is and what it is trying to accomplish. At that time, the public was purchasing our cars at the rate of about one in every three; and our Frigidaire automatic refrigerator and Delco-Light electric plants were leading in popular preference in their respective fields.

Since then each of our car divisions has introduced new, further improved models and public patronage has reached the point where almost one out of two automobiles purchased is a General Motors car. Frigidaire and Delco-Light products have showed comparable increases in sales.

The reason for this is two-fold. First, the public wants value for its automobile dollar and recognizes value when it is given. Second, General Motors is seeking so to conduct its operations as to deserve the goodwill of the public.

We are particularly impressed with the number of letters which have come to us from editors of small city newspapers during recent months. These editors, who are in a position to reflect local sentiment, speak of the goodwill which attaches to General Motors in their communities and express an obviously sincere appreciation of the character of General Motors' advertising in their publications.

For our advertising has been as much concerned with giving your readers facts of helpfulness to them in the purchase of automobiles as with the merits of our own products. Our messages have set forth the principles of trade-in transactions and used car allowances. They have dealt with time payments and the change in the public's attitude toward the used car. Other messages have told of the policies of General Motors and of how our resources are being employed to effect them.

That General Motors enjoys the goodwill of the people in the small cities and on the farms of America gives us an especial satisfaction and confidence in the future. It is in the country sections of the United States that half our population lives. It is there that the whole industry must look in increasing measure for maintenance of the production volume upon which high values and low prices depend. And it is there that General Motors is paying particular attention to its facilities for sales and service.

To our friends in your community we express our thanks.

Compiling Average Weights
Average weights of men and women are usually compiled from insurance figures, and are merely what the adjective implies. Ideal weights differ somewhat. An authority on dietetics says that average and ideal weights are nearest together when individuals are between twenty and twenty-five years of age. As the years progress the average weight is higher than the ideal weight.

MISSIONARY TELLS OF JUNGLE PERILS

Third Christian Reformed church of Zeeland has received a letter from Miss Johanna Veenstra, missionary in northern Nigeria, British West Africa, in which the young woman tells of many narrow and harrowing escapes with animal life in the jungles. The letter states five persons have confessed publicly and older Christians are showing a real desire to advance. The big heathen dance held every year in honor of their religion was not held this year.

Miss Veenstra's letter tells of troubles with large and poisonous snakes within a short distance of her cottage. In two weeks three of a certain very poisonous species have been killed within a few steps of her home. The wild bush dogs also cause the missionary workers much trouble as they are very large and attack persons in search of something to eat.

The missionary tells of her bicycle breaking down and having to walk 19 miles. The first stage of the journey was eight miles through the rough African jungle. The final stage, traveled at night, Miss Veenstra carried two lanterns for protection from beasts and in order to see the snakes that inhabited the paths. After the journey her feet were swollen, blistered and bleeding, but her letter stated that her aching feet were forgotten because of the fine mission meetings.

The letter was mailed June 1 and was received in this country only this month.

Ottawa School Teacher Recalls $1 Week Pay

School teachers in Ottawa county received a salary of $1 per week in pioneer days. Historical records contain the name of Martha Maxfield as teacher of the first county school in district No. 1 at Eastmanville. The building was constructed of logs in 1842 and replaced by a frame school in 1849. Miss Maxfield taught school 12 weeks for $12. Miss Matilda Arrell succeeded Miss Maxfield and was paid $17.87 for the term of 13 weeks.

George W. Lowell succeeded Miss Angell in 1851 and he was paid $15 per month, $12.50 out of the primary school fund and the balance raised by the "rate bill." The board adopted a resolution providing three months of school each year. The records also show there were only four taxable residents of the district.

Allegan Council to Push Plans for Memorial

Allegan city council appointed a committee of aldermen to meet with the Griswold Memorial building committee to go over plans for erection of the building and attempt to carry out wishes of Allegan voters as expressed at the recent primary.

In the vote on several special propositions Allegan voters demanded prompt action in constructing the memorial and insisted that the erection cost be kept within the $100,000 limit. Rev. S. E. Kelly, secretary of the building committee, assured the council members of his group would be on hand for the joint sessions.

The council has sold the $185,000 bond issue approved by the voters for the construction of the municipal Calkins bridge dam to a Detroit bonding house.

Western State College Erects New Buildings

Two temporary buildings have been started on Western State Teachers' college campus to take care of the increase of students during the fall term. The structures will be used for recitation purposes only, according to President Dwight B. Waldo. They will be used until funds are available for the erection of permanent buildings.

Blind Pastor Weds

Announcements have been received here of the recent marriage of Rev. Peter Kuiken and Miss Linda Trilk in Dubuque, Ia. They will reside at Twin Lakes, where Mr. Kuiken has assumed the pastorate of the Reformed church. Mr. Kuiken recently was graduated from Western Theological seminary and is the first blind student to enter the ministry in the Reformed Church in America.

Poems That Live

FAREWELL
Thou goest; to what distant place
Wilt thou thy sunlight carry?
I stay with cold and clouded face:
How long am I to tarry?
Where'er thou goest, morn will be;
Thou leavest night and gloom to me.

The night and gloom I can but take;
I do not grudge thy splendor:
Bid souls of eager men awake;
Be kind and bright and tender.
Give day to other worlds; for me
It must suffice to dream of thee.
—John A. Symonds (1840-1893).

Razorback Co-ed Weds

Climaxing a college romance at the University of Arkansas, Miss Fannie Ruth Thomas of Waxahachie, Tex., has been married recently to Robert Austin of Marianna, Ark. In June the former Miss Thomas was chosen the most beautiful girl at the University of Arkansas, and Robert Austin, also a student, promptly fell in love with her.

1500 TO MEET AT CADILLAC

Teachers of the fifth district of the Michigan Educational association will meet here Oct. 18 and 19. Principal George H. Mills, assistant executive secretary in charge of local arrangements, says he expects about 1,500 teachers here.

Official headquarters will be at the Northwood. General sessions will be held in the Wesleyan Methodist auditorium on the lake front. Commercial exhibits will be in the high school gymnasium and sectional meetings in the various churches.

Traverse Pupils To Receive Reward

Forty dollars in gold will be awarded by the board of education in recognition of outstanding scholarship and citizenship at the end of the school year—$20 to a boy and $20 to a girl—and in the music department a scholarship to the National High School orchestra camp will be awarded, Supt C. L. Poor has announced. This year for the first time a silver cup will be presented to the valedictorian. The cup has already been ordered and will be displayed throughout the year.

Coloma Votes to Bond For $125,000 School

Coloma has voted to bond the school district in the sum of $125,000 for the construction and equipment of a new school building. The building will be erected soon as possible.

Leo Close, a former Bangor man, is superintendent of the Coloma schools.

Tucks and Pleats

Tucks and pleats play a prominent part in the fashions for the coming season. Horizontal tucks form the trimming of the tan velvet jacket worn by May McAvoy, illustrated. A pleated tan crepe de chine skirt and cocoa fox fur are worn with the jacket.

Lowell Boasts Fine Theater

Lowell boasts of having the finest theater in the state for towns of less than 2,000 population.

The theater, opened this summer, cost $50,000 and has all the latest theater features. The main floor will seat 514 persons in its comfortable chairs; a large lobby and beautiful foyer, 18x38 feet, give a city aspect; elaborate furnishings and velvet carpets and rich draperies give an air of luxury and beautiful lighting fixtures have been installed.

A feature which is a strong drawing card is the $12,000 organ, presided over by Miss Helen Lehman of Three Rivers, who was trained in the Eastman studios at Rochester. A movie tone is also a part of the equipment.

On the second floor are rest rooms, a beauty parlor, manager's office and picture booth containing the three projectors and the latest fire prevention features. Chris. Leonard, Ionia, is in charge. The entire building is hand decorated.

The theater was made possible through the enterprise of Harvey C. Callier, who for seven years managed the local movie house, all the time with the idea of some day building a modern house. Mrs. Callier is in charge of the ticket office.

Mr. Callier is a versatile man. Six years ago he reorganized a somewhat defunct ice company here and today he owns and manages the Northern Ice company—a modern plant. Six years ago Mr. Callier also purchased the Light and Power company of Saranac. At that time service was irregular and the power was only offered six hours of the 24.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

MENU HINT

Macaroni and Cheese
Tomato and Cucumber with French Dressing

Peach Shortcake

The shortcake will serve six people, allowing three of the six to have a second helping, or two peaches. Or I think the dough could be stretched to allow it to cover 12 peaches, and then two could be served to each person. The same recipe would be good with apples used in place of the peaches, provided the shortcake was not baked too long so that the apples would fall to pieces.

Today's Recipes

Peach Shortcake—Two cups flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup butter, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half cup milk. Sift flour, salt and baking powder. Add butter and mix as for biscuits, adding milk, a little at a time. Roll dough at least one-fourth inch thick. Peel nine peaches, but do not slice or remove pits. Cut dough in strips, two inches wide and of sufficient length to wrap about the peaches "middle." Place peaches thus wrapped side by side in baking dish. Pour over them syrup made by dissolving one cup sugar in one-half cup boiling water. Bake in moderately warm oven about 30 minutes.

SUGGESTIONS

Use Shaving Brush

An inexpensive shaving brush will clean the embossed or perforated glass or chinaware better than the nail or toothbrush. Incidentally, brushes made on purpose for cleaning all sorts of householdware may be had for small sums.

To Serve Spinach

If your family will not eat spinach after it is boiled, prepare it the following way: Wash and cut in small pieces one pound spinach. Cut about one-half cup ham or bacon into small pieces and fry. Have ready one beaten egg, vinegar, sugar, salt, pepper and cream to taste. Cook with the ham and while boiling hot pour over the spinach. Serve at once.

Zeeland Lad Is Young Business Man

Zeeland has one of the youngest established business men in western Michigan in Allyn Westenbroke, a lad of 14 years.

Before coming to Zeeland about a year ago Westenbroke lived on a farm nearby. He loved the taste of fresh buttermilk and also knew others liked it. As a pupil in the district school he learned of the food value contained in good buttermilk.

After moving to his present home he wanted to try out his idea of selling buttermilk. At first, as do all business men with small capital, the lad got a partner and the two boys borrowed a horse and wagon to begin the work of peddling the buttermilk about the city. The partner stayed in the game only two weeks and then sold out his interests to Allyn.

Allyn then made a contract with a rural creamery for all the buttermilk it would allow him on his small scale. This creamery was located several miles from town and it meant a long trip after a hard day's work to get the milk.

The borrowed horse was a feature the young peddler did not like, so with the help of his father, a smaller wagon was made and Rex, Allyn's pony, was given a chance to help his young master. Today Rex knows the route as well as Allyn.

When Allyn first started last April he was in competition with two other peddlers; today he has the field to himself. During the slack period when it is difficult to get buttermilk the young business man sells vegetables for his father, who runs a small truck farm. The boy with the covered wagon can be seen distributing his wares every weekday morning during the year. In the winter a small bobbed forms part of his equipment.

When asked how he happened to start young Allyn replied with a smile, "O, I just like peddling and I'm going to keep at it until I can have another type of business of my own, one on a larger scale."

Radio Used to Locate Dead Man's Relatives

Aided by radio broadcasting, local friends and the authorities are making an extensive search the country over, to learn the whereabouts of a sister and a daughter of Joseph Henderson, 60, who died recently. Henderson was a member of the Loyal Order of Moose, and the local lodge of the order enlisted the aid of the fraternity station at Mooseheart, Ill., in starting the search.

Grand Rapids Boy Wins Scholarship

Oswald Lampkins, 17-year-old Negro tenor of Grand Rapids, has won a year's scholarship at the Chicago Conservatory of Music. Daniel Boone Lampkins, 445 Lagrange avenue, S. E., Grand Rapids, was notified of his son's success Friday by officials of the conservatory. The youth appeared in a contest at the conservatory Wednesday. He has sung before many organizations. He was class soloist in the 1927 graduating class at Central High school, Grand Rapids.

Mesick Has Large Masonic Family

Conferring of the third degree upon August Anderson and his son, Harold, recently by the Mesick Masonic lodge culminated one of the most unusual events in Masonic history, for this gives the Andersons the honor of being one of the largest Masonic families in the state.

Mr. Anderson and his seven sons are all now active members of the Masonic lodge at Mesick. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are farmers of Wexford county, and all seven sons, Gus, John, Golden, Arthur, Ray and Roy, twins, and Harold, are employed in Flint.

Mrs. Anderson is a worker in the Eastern Star lodge.

The World and All

IN NEW YORK

"Aren't you afraid to ride in the subway after that dreadful wreck?" This is a favorite question asked of New Yorkers by visitors who have read of the horrors of the wreck of August 24.

And the answer invariably is, "Of course not!" Nothing heroic about the answer, either. New Yorkers know that one bad wreck doesn't make subways dangerous. And they have come to have great confidence in the safety of subway travel.

Up to about 1918 the subway trains had never killed a passenger. That was the best safety record ever made by any transportation system. Even today, with two bad wrecks on the debit side, and a few minor accidents in which passengers have suffered, the New York subway system remains the safest avenue of travel in the world. It handles millions every day, and it rarely hurts anybody except those who commit suicide by jumping in front of the trains.

Times Square subway station receives and discharges more passengers in a day than any other railway station in the world. Yet it possesses no building, in the usual sense of the word. It consists of long wide underground galleries, three and four deep, with stairways leading to the streets and into the basements of neighboring office buildings. At rush hours, morning and evening, the platforms and trains in this busiest station on earth are always jammed beyond the wildest imaginings of anyone who doesn't know New York. Shoving the passengers into the trains during rush hours has become a brutal occupation, engaged in by a small army of uniformed bruisers. As soon as a train stops and discharges its passengers, the thousands on the platform surge forward and try to get inside the cars. Ten cars make an express train. Trains cannot start until all doors are closed. The "platform men" throw themselves against the backs of those struggling to get in, and shove hard. When the last pound of flesh that the cars can hold has been squeezed through the doors, the hefty helpers see that the automatic doors do not jam, and the train is off.

It was such a train, thus loaded, that was wrecked while running at full speed. The confusion was pretty bad, of course, and the slaughter was awful. But trains were jammed just as much as ever the next morning, and will continue to be well patronized. For one thing, the subway offers almost the only means of transportation available to many New Yorkers. Also, it is fast, and it is safe for anybody whose ribs will stand a good deal of pressure.

LIVING AND LOVING By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

REAL HEROES AND HEROINES AROUND IN ALL WALKS OF LIFE

One of my correspondents wrote me one day that she believed most of her friends who seemed happy and smiling really were unhappy, concealing griefs of various kinds. It is so with most. And it is a constant wonder to me that people—who do not pose as being the least heroic, but are just as ordinary in most things as you and I—bear great sorrows so nobly. One woman who recently had a dreadful shock in the sudden loss of her son, told me that when the news first reached her she was stunned, but that after a moment she felt wave after wave of strength coming to her, and realized that she COULD bear it and would be sustained. It makes us ashamed of grumbling of ordinary troubles when we see these heroic souls.

Mrs. W.: If your husband has money and knows about the young man he might easily make it appear that you are not a fit person to have the care of your children. For their sake, therefore, it would be better to stay in your home for a time at least. Can this young man support you, and are you sure you are not so hungry for love and attention that you are infatuated with him rather than in love? You mustn't move hastily in a matter like this. Many husbands talk and act as if their wives had nothing to do when they really work very hard, as you do. Ask him what it would cost him to hire done all the work that you do. You see, even if your husband is not easy to live with you have a good home for your babies, and I would certainly hesitate to advise you to give it up without knowing what is before you. Can't you try to be happy in them and your home, making the best of things until they are a little older and you are more sure of yourself? It may be that your husband cares more for you and the children than he says, and if you try to see his good points and appreciate them he will be more affectionate and reasonable.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I need the advice of one who really understands love. Will you help me? I am 17 and in love with a boy who is 18. Do you think that is too young to be in love? But, Mrs. Lee, we are both jealous. Every time we go some place we have quarrels over another boy or girl. Do you think we really love each other when we quarrel so often? Mrs. Lee, I also want to ask you about our parents. My father does not like him and his mother doesn't like me. Is there anything we could do to make them like us?"

Anxious Montana.
You poor children, you are having a hectic time of it. Why don't you make a joke of this jealous business and both "snap out of it?" About the parents, isn't there some nice little thing you could do for his mother and he for your father?

When you are bent on revenge or are seized with the temptation to fight with somebody about something remember the bee. The bee, after stinging, may live 68 hours, but ordinarily doesn't live more than 10 or 15 hours. Stinging costs too much.

How to Achieve Beauty

SELECTING A HOME TREATMENT

The average woman has not the time, even if she has the money, to frequent beauty salons for daily treatment, and I have always believed that one of the most important things for a good operator to know is how to teach her client to care for herself. It is regular, simple, self-care which insures every woman real and lasting beauty.

Patricia had three outstanding faults. The first was blackheads, and this was corrected through the use of a blackhead wash, used from three to five times a day, depending upon just how her skin reacted. The second was enlarged pores and oiliness "bars sinister" to beauty. Refining these pores was quite simple, since her skin responded beautifully to the lotion I recommended.

The third problem was the pimples and blotches which no woman can possess and be really lovely. An acne cream took care of them and swiftly cleared them away.

The only other two requirements for scientific home care were cleansing cream to alternate with a wash to preserve the delicacy and softness of the skin texture, and an astringent tonic to use as both powder base and refresher.

Makeup was a subject in itself, for type and personality had to be seriously considered before we would teach Patricia how to make the best of herself.

It would be interesting to any one of you—almost as interesting as it was to me—to see how this despondent, unbeautiful young girl began blossoming into a healthy, fine-skinned woman. She seemed to develop self-confidence and poise with every treatment, nor is this at all unusual, for I have found through my entire career that the charming women of the world have always been the women conscious of the fact that they looked their very best.

Good grooming, particularly good face grooming, will make any woman pleasant to look at. Her eyes need not be large or dark, nor need they have any of the requirements poets dream about, and women do not, as a rule, possess. But long lashes, even, well-groomed eyebrows, the extraordinary depth which very frequently is nothing more than a faint touch of becoming shadow just under the eyebrow, these they may have at little enough cost. They may not have fine features, but they can have lovely complexions, and to my mind, and to the mind of many others like me, these really constitute beauty.

For working cream into the face, hold the cheek with bent forefinger and cushion of thumb. Rotate the thumb cushion, using the outer side of thumb cushion, and working in a circle.

WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 30

General Farm Outlook: The early plantings of wheat and rye will be germinating favorably this week as a result of weather conditions expected. This period will not, however, be a favorable time to sow because of the wetness of the ground in most sections of the state. Pastures and meadows will generally be in good shape during the week beginning Sept. 30, but the harvesting of late fall crops will be somewhat delayed by rainy weather. This will not be a favorable time to harvest sugar beets. Probably one of the good features of the weather for this week will be the seasonal to warm temperatures. Under this condition late developing crops will have a chance to catch up.

Detailed Weather Forecast: A storm center that will have developed in the west and southwest during the closing days of last week will have reached Michigan at the beginning of the week of September 30. With it will come a moisture laden atmosphere that will dump much of its material in the Lake region and Ohio valley. Michigan will get its share while the storm is present, which will be during the early days of the week. While there may be a clearing spell about Tuesday, we believe there will be a more or less unsettled condition with more showers and rain during the middle days of the week.

Temperatures will remain warm for the season during the entire first half of the week, but with clearing skies about Thursday or Friday the temperature will drop appreciably.

The closing days of this week in Michigan will see the return of normal temperatures and some wind and showers.

October Weather: For the month of October as a whole in Michigan we expect at least a normal amount of rainfall and perhaps a little more. Of the two halves, the last will probably be the most wet.

Newspapers You Like

An imperfect world offers ample opportunity for complaint. It appears to be a human trait to find greater interest in imperfection than in perfection. The latter cloy. Flaws beg assistance. Uncommon philosophical balance is required of the professional observer and reporter, lest the seamy side be exaggerated, or at least that brighter phases be neglected. It is equally important that there be no artificial mask for the face of the news. Find the true interest in all human activities and play them across your board. The newspaper you like is comparable to the man you like—well informed, penetrating, well-mannered, good natured, true to ideals, a fighter when pushed too far, but happy most of the time and headed somewhere in particular.

CHAPTER X

The roadster sped lightly through the outskirts of Ackland, past the rich truck farms of the Five Forks, by the placid river, on through the small settlement known for two centuries as Hunnewell's Corners, and over the railway tracks into the village. It was 9 o'clock in the evening. The elms spread their arching foliage clear across the roadway. The simple white houses nestled confidently in their surrounding shrubbery. Girls and boys walked along the gravel paths by neat fences and hedges. The scent of early summer flowers floated fragrantly on the still air.

"There's really a lot of charm about the old place," remarked Hallam. Stella didn't reply. The spell of the long ride and of their leisurely luncheon at a vine-clad roadhouse in Connecticut was still upon her. She was thinking, too, soberly, of the man by her side who drove so well, who did everything so well and so thoughtfully.

"It's odd," Hallam went on, "looking about you here you'd never suspect it of being the seat of a recent and rather famous murder."

They turned in around the Green. It was a Friday evening and most of the shops were lighted and open to the week-end trade. Cars were parked all about the open square. Breckenridge's drug store was gay with young people crowding about the soda fountain.

"Will you stop a minute, Ernie?" Stella spoke impulsively. "I want to take something to little sister. I haven't been home for a year."

He turned in to the curb; and then, while she went into the drug store, idly surveyed the pleasant village scene. A little beyond, on the front of one of the old gable-roofed buildings, he noted the sign, "The Age." There were lights within, and people working at desks. Reminiscently he smiled. Years back, in his teens, he had worked on a country weekly. They'd be at it most of the night, in there, getting the paper ready for Saturday delivery. Faintly, he could hear the rumble of a power press. His quick inner eye pictured the pressroom—a few grimy men stripped to their undershirts; the smell of damp paper and printer's ink; a devil, with smudgy face, darting about. And he recalled the troublous day when, as an eager boy, he'd been introduced to the mysteries of a pressroom, and made to bend over an old-fashioned imposing stone to look at the type-lice. The traditional initiation of a new boy. The printing business had its own folklore.

A coatless young man wearing an eye-shade came out of the Age office. Stella, emerging from the drug store with a two-pound box of candy, greeted him. Hallam heard her say, "Oh, Homer, I'm so sorry!" Then he recalled the blond head. It was the boy who had so amusingly imitated a country band.

"Stella was saying: 'Ernie, you remember Mr. Pew.' They clasped hands. The boy looked years older. Very grave and quiet."

"Ernie drove me up from New York." There was a throb of half-suppressed emotion in Stella's voice. "We've had a wonderful day."

Homer Pew stood in the road with one foot on the running board. He appeared disinclined to make conversation, even with the famous Ernest Hallam. Stella's eyes were taking him in. Rather eagerly, Hallam thought. He started up the motor.

"Oh, Homer." Yes, Stella's emotions were quick tonight; and there was a gloomy beauty in the dark eyes. "I've been sent up here to write that article. Perhaps I can help you. I hope so."

Hallam's brows drew slightly together. He opened the door. Stella stepped up into the car; then leaned out to add: "When will you be able to spare me a little time?"

"Oh, any day, Stella. These Friday nights are as good as any time. I have to be down here till 12 or 1."

"I'm afraid I'll have to get home now. The family will be wondering. But I'll look you up very soon. Tomorrow, perhaps."

He bowed. Hallam quickly backed the roadster out, and drove away. A little beyond the village, out on the state road, he turned off under a tree and stopped. Stella glanced up at him, and smiled.

"Parking, Ernie?"

"For a minute."

"Better be careful. They're rather watchful in this town."

"They don't know the car. And they won't identify you. Stella, I'm pretty torn up. Do you really have to go home now?"

"Oh, yes. Heavens, yes! They'll be sitting up for me."

"Haven't you anything to say?"

"It's just as I told you last night, dear. I've got to have time to think."

"How much time?"

She laughed softly. She liked his moods. Now he was impatient and somber, like an eager boy. She sobered, and sat thinking.

"You'll be settling back into this puritan atmosphere, Stella. Already you've let your family come between us. It will get you."

"You know what I want you to say."

"Please drive me home now. You'll hear from me."

Suddenly she chuckled.

"It's a queer time for laughing, Stella."

"I was just thinking how I'll have to watch my tongue. It's always a day or two before I dare speak a word. The old town has its own wavelongth, Ernie. They don't understand our New York way of thinking and talking."

CHAPTER XI

He left her at the gate, by the empty roadside stand, banged the car door, and drove away. There were lights on downstairs. Slowly she moved up the walk between the lilacs. She saw her mother's slender figure coming through the hall to the screen door. Then her father appeared from the living room, wearing his old alpaca housecoat. She thought they both looked grayer and older. They would close in about her. They couldn't help that. It was going to be pretty complicated.

"Stop a minute, Ernie. I want to take something home to little sister."

"Here I am!" she cried, gaily. She'd have to be gay. Keep on the surface. They were reserved; but she knew, excited. "How good the old place seems! Where's Martha?" She was kissing them both.

"She was tired and went to bed," said the mother. "She's been a little run down lately. She asked us not to disturb her. Said she'd see you at breakfast."

"How funny! Well, here's candy for her. How natural everything looks! Are you both well? She was looking about the living room."

"Oh, yes. Quite well. Your father's had a touch of lumbago, but..."

"Oh, Dad, I'm sorry!"

"It's nothing much," said he. "Slowed me up a little, but I'm all right now. Going to have a little time for this trip, Stella?"

"Yes. A lot. Several weeks."

"That'll be nice."

"I'm to do an article about Ham Pew." Stella, still with her hat on, sat on the edge of a chair. Their eyes were on her. It wouldn't do to sit around and talk much. They wouldn't be able to hide their feeling about her. They'd try, but... She was thinking quickly. "Be here several weeks. Maybe a month. I'll be busy... have to stay in Boston some (might as well pave the way for that plan, right at the start)... but I'll see a lot of you. You'll be getting sick of me."

"Hardly that, Stella," said her father, wistfully.

"You didn't come up by train?" asked her mother.

"No. Some friends drove me up."

"Anybody we know?"

"No. New York people. We left this morning and stopped for lunch in Connecticut. It was a delightful ride."

Mr. Bagot cleared his throat. "It's a pleasant way to travel," he said. "In a good car."

Yes, their eyes were on her. They were wondering about her. About her life. Curious how jumpy her nerves were. She'd have to keep busy. Keep them from closing in. Better begin now.

"I can't visit much this evening," she said. "Must get right to work. Is the Ford running, Dad?"

They looked at each other. "Why yes."

"Will you trust me with it? I've got to have a talk with Homer Pew. Saw him down at the Center. He said tonight would be a good time."

Mr. Bagot said, clearing his throat again: "I'll drive her down."

"Oh, no, Dad! I won't hear to it! You and mother go to bed. Just leave the door unlocked for me. I'll see you tomorrow. Oh, you're going to have enough of me this trip!"

"I'll get the Ford out," said Mr. Bagot, and left the room. How gray and colorless he seemed. Yet he was a dear. Stella's eyes filled. She got up and moved out to the hall.

Her mother followed. "Stella, dear," she remarked, in a manner less offhand than she wanted it to appear. "I'm going to ask you to be a little careful what you say before Martha. She seems to be passing through a restless phase. I... I wouldn't say too much about New York. Understand me, dear, we're proud of all you're doing, but Martha is young and none too well balanced. We don't want her head filled with exciting notions."

"Of course I'll be careful, Mother."

It seemed dim and peaceful, like the town. Homer sat at a flat-topped desk, near the door, quietly reading proof. Behind him, at other desks, were the flat-chested Miss Curry, whom she'd known from her girlhood, and a pale young man who breathed with a faint whistling sound. Her nostrils were sensitively responsive to the printing house smell. And the big press was throbbing in here, like the engine of a ship. Ben March and the devil were in and out. There wasn't much opportunity for talk. She heard herself saying: "I thought I'd run down tonight after all, Homer"; and he replied: "That's good"; and then she sat at the vacant desk close to Homer's. Ham's desk, doubtless. Homer was courteous. He said there'd be time enough for talk as soon as the forms were closed. She remarked: "Do you know, I wouldn't mind working on a country paper for a while. It brings you close to life." To which he replied: "Oh, yes, we're close enough." And added: "Look here, Stella, why don't you, while you're here, make the office your headquarters? As if you were on the staff. Answer telephone calls, meet people, just work along with us. I rather think it will give you a closer insight into our problem than any amount of looking around on the outside. The whole situation centers right here, in this room."

Her eyes lighted brightly. Curious how nervously eager and alive she was tonight. "Why, thanks, Homer," she said. "That's just what I'd like to do. I can read proof and all that, you know."

After 10 the work slackened. Homer drew his swivel chair over with a groan. "Now we can talk, Stella. Have you read the editorials I sent down?"

"Yes. All of them."

"Then you have a pretty good picture of poor old Ham. Of what was in his mind."

"Yes. And now tell me what you're planning to do."

"Oh, just carry on."

"Is there any light on the murder?"

"None." He sat looking ruefully at a pre-Revolutionary map of the town that hung on the wall. "The police don't seem to be making any headway. There's one good man on the case. Wilbraham, of the state police. But I notice he is pretty wary of the district attorney's men and of our little local force. He doesn't say a word. But it looks to me, and I think to him, too, as if there were some queer forces at work. Ham always rather liked our district attorney, Billy Wykeham. But I'll confess, right now, that I don't understand the way he's acting. Something evasive there."

"I'd better talk with him."

"By all means. You might learn something that would help us, Stella."

"The district attorneyship is a political office, of course," she mused. Her mind was excitedly quick. It was a pleasure to show Homer how keen she could be. New York had done that for her. He'd see. He was friendly and frank. Older, strangely older, but open. And he looked now as boyish as ever; with his curly blond hair brushed back in the same careful way. It was pleasant to be dealing so simply with a man who wasn't in the remotest sense an emotional problem. Just a nice boy. Nothing for Ernie to be jealous of here!

"Oh, yes. Subject to terrific pressure of one sort and another."

"And all tied up with the party organization."

"Of course. And these bootlegging gangs are tied up with it, too. I've seen that. Queer underworld ramifications. Considerable money involved. And conflicting influences. We never get the truth about all that. But you feel it, right here in town. You'll sense it, as you nose around. There's underground propaganda going on. A sort of smoke screen. I'll confess I don't really know where I stand, even with my own neighbors." He sighed.

"Homer, I'm going to ask you to tell me just what is known about the murder."

"Well, we have the various stories of the Jazzland people. Not much else. Horwitz and Neddy are the proprietors."

"Queer names, for Askland."

"And queer people. But they're plausible enough. They both claim that nobody in the place that night was personally known to them. And

A Sour Stomach

In the same time it takes a dose of soda to bring a little temporary relief of gas and sour stomach, Phillips Milk of Magnesia has acidity completely checked, and the digestive organs all tranquilized. Once you have tried this form of relief you will cease to worry about your diet and experience a new freedom in eating.

This pleasant preparation is just as good for children, too. Use it whenever coated tongue or fetid breath signals need of a sweetener. Physicians will tell you that every spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Get the genuine, the name Phillips is important. Imitations do not act the same!

none of the guests have come forward to speak since."

"Can't some of them be run down?" "It's difficult. You see, they all got away in a panic after the shooting. Wilbraham says that's natural enough. It wasn't a large crowd, apparently. And he points out that all the couples there probably were youngsters out on a sly lark or business men with their stenographers, or somebody else's wives, or else just frankly rough characters."

"But it is a little hard to see how they all could have slipped away."

"Well, here's the story. Neddy looks after the kitchens and claims not to have been in the dining room at all. Heard and saw nothing. Horwitz is the business man of the firm. He says he was in his office at the front of the building. He heard the shots, but supposed it was a truck backing on the state road. As he says, you hear a lot of sounds these days and don't think much about them. And it wasn't until the music stopped abruptly that he questioned these. There were no other unusual sounds, he says. No shouting or cursing, no screams; just a sudden hush. Then a noise of scuffling and people running. And the upsetting of a chair or two. He heard an automobile driving away. Then others. He says he got up then and went out through the front corridor to the dancing floor. That is a big central room with a few tables in the corners. The rest of the tables are on the two side porches. There are steps and parking grounds on each side of the building, so that it was easy enough for all of them to get away."

"According to Horwitz."

Empire Milking Machines Two Sold Last Week

Dairying is a business and as such there are a number of ways of making more profit. Take your particular business of milking. By laying off help you may make bigger profits but it will mean longer hours and more drudgery for you.

But there is a way for bigger profits by using the Empire Milking Machine. You can handle a larger herd and get greater production without increased labor cost, because one man or boy with the Empire can milk 20 cows in the same time required to milk 8 cows by hand.
