Iva Nettie Rhoades, daughter of James and Freelove Rhoades, was born in Bloomingdale township, April 24, 1885 and passed away at New Borgess Hospital in Kalamazoo June 20, 1929, aged 44 years, 1 month and 26 days.

November 6, 1906, she was united in marriage with Arch Holmes and nearly the whole of her married life has been spent north of Gobles, at or near her present home. To this union were born four children. Freelove Field of Chicago, Frank of Kalamazoo, Ralph and J. W. who live at home.

Besides the husband and children she leaves a twin sister, Iris Shryock and a brother, Riley Rhoades, who live west of Gobles, a brother, Orrin Rhoades of Kalamazoo, also a grand son, Vincent Field, and many other relatives and friends.

While Mrs. Holmes has not been in the best of health, she was not seriously ill until early in the week and her sudden death came as agreat shock to her many friends who unite in extending deep sympathy to the bereaved family.

When my last twilight sky I scan And I approach the river wide. I know I'll meet my Ferryman To take me to the other side.

Though still the eye and dim the sky, -

I'll catch a glimse of distant shoré; And beams of light that round me

Will shine while the land explore.

My Ferryman knows well the stream Which all have crossed at eventide: He ever sees the sunset gleam And lets the boat toward it glide.

DEER TAGGING PLAN FAILS AT HULBERT

The deer tagging experiment undertaken at Hulbert in Chippewa county last winter proved to be a failure. It was planned to trap and tag a number of deer in the widely known Hulbert yard, to learn the distance from which the animals came to this yarding area. The work was to be done by local sportsmen in co-operation with the state conservation de-

But one deer was taken in the traps, however, and it had to be released untagged because the door of the trap was too high to permit placing a seal on the animal.

Other deer on the feeding ground were frightened away by the falling of the door of the trap, but returned in an hour or so. When the captured deer was released it ran only about 100 feet before stopping to feed.

Evidently, however, the action of the trap had caused the entire herd to grow suspicious of the device. Although it was kept baited for several days with carrots, cabbage, grain and other delicacies prized by the deer, not one of the animals entered it and the trapping attempt was finally abandoned.

The deer in the Hulbert yard wintered in good shape and no dead does or fawns were found when the snow went off this spring.

City Railway Gets Taxicab Service

The Grand Rapids city commission, as a committee of the whole, approved the proposed report which will authorize the Grand Rapids Railroad Company to engage in a general transportation business, including taxicab service, group service and the like. The commission, through the report, agrees to protect the railroad company, operator of the street cars of Grand Rapids, from unfair competition and not to license further taxicab companies unless the railroad fails to provide ample service.

DR. CALDWELL'S THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. ### Japanese Giant Radish

This is the great Sakurijima Radish from Japan. The argest radish grown, often attaining the enormous weight of 15 pounds, and sometimes 20 or 30 pounds. pounds.

It is a real "nov-elty" to most Americans, and the taste will immediately

wi il i immediately convince anyone of the fact that it is not merely a currosity but a radish of extraordinary qualtive. The flesh is solid, firm and brittle, and of most excellent flavor. It will grow and thrive in any soil or climate.

This is a radish that can be planted in the spring and eaten all summer long, and can also be kept through the winter if dug in the late fall and buried in a box of dry sand in the callar. As a summer radish tis a wonder, and it will grow and thrive when it is so hot and dry that common radishes would be a failure. By all means try the Sakurijima Radish and you will be surprised at the real value of this monstrous wariety. Send for package of the seed today before it is all gone. Package, 10c; 3 packages, 25c; by mail, postpaid. Address Novetty Garden Club, 58 Market St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Vandalia, a little village in Cass county, promises to become celebrated on a smaller scale, of course, for its "swinging tower," in the center of the Vandalia Floral Park on the Christian church grounds in that village.

The swinging tower, as well as the beautiful flower gardens, is the handiwork of Rev. S. LeGran Randall, pastor of the church.

When not engaged in his pastoral duties Mr. Randall is busy with his flowers and Vandalia has even now more than local note because of the beautiful blooms that Mr. Randall has been growing there each season for several years.

This year the large plot of church ground in the center of the village that Mr. Randall cultivates and has named "The Vandalia Floral Park," will be on somewhat different design than in former years and bids fair to be more showy and beautiful than last

The central decoration from which the walks and arbors lead, is a winding staircase, enclosed, and around which will be clustered the beautiful Heavenly Blue" morning glories, which will also cover the four arbors.

Hundreds of dahlia and gladioli bulbs are already planted in the area surrounding the tower, as are also countless seeds of other flowers.

The citizens of Vandalia and the many outside friends of Rev. and Mrs. Randall are anxiously awaiting the blooming of the flowers and are anticipating a rare treat during July and August when the blooms will be at their best.

The platform will hold ten grown people with safety and when the person ascending is about half way up the tower begins to sway, giving a pleasing swinging sensation—hence the name.

Newspapers Will Get List of Game Violators Monthly

As a preventive measure the commission of the conservation department, and the director, George R. Hogarth, have ordered that a list of game and fish law violators be compiled and each month.

"We are interested primarily in prevention rather than punishment," said Director Hogarth, "and the net fines incurred by violators do not reimburse the state for the damage done to its resources. ### Postum to Change Name

A special meeting of stockholders of the Postum Company, Inc., has recommendation of directors to General Foods Corporation.'

Colby M. Chester, Jr., president, stated that the reasons for the change vere that "during the past few years Postum has brought together under its ownership and management 11 other food manufacturing companies. More than 20 products, representing many phases of the food industry, are made and sold by the company. During this period of growth the name of the larger organization has retained the name of its original product-Postum. The company has outgrown its name. ### Albion Adds Factories

It is estimated that by July 1 the total cost of building activities in Albion during the past year will have reached from $250,000 to $300,000, Officers were elected by the Michigan department of the auxiliary to merce of that city. Two factory buildings, with a total cost of over $50,000 are now under construction, are operating at close to capacity.

Efforts are being made by the Chamber of Commerce to interest new industries in locating in Albion, a number of desirable sites being available. They point to the phenomenal growth of several small industries which began operations during the past two or three years, and emphasize the possibility of efficient and economical operation in a small town with all the advantages and facilities of a larger one.

ficiary of increased tariffs, the Farm Bureau shows that the new tariff schedule gives the farmer an average failure of the project depends upon tariff of 29.9 per cent as compared the local leader, and Mr. Baldwin with the present average of 25.85 per cent, or an increase of 4.05 per cent, this class of extension work in Michwhile for all those products upon igan. which the processor would receive the prime benefit of an increased tariff, the new schedule allows an average of 47.07 per cent as compared with an average of 42.03 per cent now existing, an increase of 5.04 per cent on so-called industrials, or a gain of about one per cent.

Instead of these being the adjustment the farmers have been looking for, there has been only a general increase, leaving the spread between agricultural and non-agricultural commodities virtually unchanged, according to the Farm Bureau's viewpoint. It matters not from what angle the subject is approached, officials of this organization contend, whether a simple average of rates, with processed food products included in the industrials; a weighted average of rates on strictly industrials and strictly agricultural products or a weighted average with processed food products included in agricultural products, this spread remains practically the same.

The simple average of rates on industrials including processed food products and on unprocessed agricultural products shows a gain of one per cent to the advantage of industrials. The weighted average of rates on strictly agricultural and strictly industrial products shows a gain of close to two per cent to the advantage of the farmer, while comparison of the weighted average of rates on industrials and on agricultural products including processed foodstuffs shows practically no gain or loss for either group, according to the Farm Bureau's contention.

What organized agriculture has been seeking, officials of the Michigan Farm Bureau said, is a retention of practically the same schedule of tariffs on industrial commodities with a reasonable increase on agricultural products, including certain processed food products, with a resultant decrease in the spread between the average rate on agricultural and industrial products.

With this thought in mind, every effort will be made to have amendments worked into the bill through the ways and means committee as a means of rectifying the situation and gaining a point for the farmer, the bureau claims.

Light Color Shows Poor Quality Soil

Light colored Michigan soils may well be regarded with doubt as to their ability to produce bumper crops, because light color is indication that they are low in organic matter which supplies most of the available nitrogen in a soil, according to a statement by members of the soils department at Michigan State college.

In addition to its value as a carrier the water holding capacity of a soil, and soils high in humus are not as quickly affected by droughts as those which contain little. The working quality of soils, particularly those of a heavy nature, is also improved by a high organic matter content.

To furnish food for the plants growing on the soil the organic matter must decay, thus making soluble in the soil water some of the food elements which are then taken up by the plant roots.

The decay of the organic matter mallard feathers. produces certain chemical compounds in the soils which hasten the decomposition of rock particles in the soil. and this makes food elements such as phosphorus and potash available for the growing crop.

Soil bacteria which are present in countless numbers are the agents which aid the decay of the organic matter. A knowledge of the part which soil bacteria play in crop production is becoming of increasing importance in soil management prob-

Poultry

FLOCK

The removing of the low producing birds from the flock has become recognized as a practical thing and most poultry raisers cull their own flock or have it culled as often as once a year. However, only a small number of the poultry raisers cull their flock often enough. This is because there are birds dropping out of production in every month in the year. It is true that most of the low producing birds should be removed during the summer pecause it is during the months of June, July, August and September that the largest number of birds go out of production. However, culling should be done at other times throughout the year for the reason mentioned

Another good reason for handling he flock several times during the year is to remove birds that are not healthy. By handling the flock these birds are more readily detected. They should be killed and burned. At the same time the low producing birds that are in good health should be sold as market birds.

A practical program for sorting the farm flock is to handle it during February or March to remove the low producing birds that have not laid well during the winter nor have the production ability to lay very much during the spring. Such birds will be found in every flock. During June or early July the flock should be culled again because there are many birds that go out of production during late May and June. August and early September is another good time because there are only a relatively small

COOL EGGS AND KEEP THEM

Cool eggs as soon as they are gathered, and keep them cool until they are marketed. The principle of cooling milk is practiced by nearly every farmer, but on many farms it is still a common practice to pack eggs as soon as they have been gathered, while many of them are still quite warm. The fillers and flats of an egg case act as insulators and hold the heat present in the eggs for a considerable period. This procedure often results in spoilconsumer. From now until September

Janet Reached a Decision

By CORONA REMINGTON

A T LAST Janet Conrad came to a decision. With a sigh of relief she jumped up and started dressing. Only fifteen minutes in which to take ber bath, put on her war paint and don the new dress she had hurriedly bought on her way home from the

She did not whistle as she usually did while she splashed around in the tub-instead there was a little frown between her finely penciled brows and her ordinarily sunny face was clouded with thought.

"No, sir," she told herself, "no love in a cot for me. Jack Benton's a darling, but nothing can take the place of my freedom and my hundred and twenty per. As soon as he rings I'll go down and tell him 'no,' then he'll go away and it will all be over and I'll have escaped the noose and the kitchen sink once more. These millionaires that come around offering their heart and their bank account to little stenographers simply—ain't—except in 'movies' and novels!"

She thought back over the telegram she had received that morning. "Reach town via Chevrolet late this afternoon stop May I see you seven o'clock stop Something important to tell 'you, Jack."

She knew what the something important meant and at last 'she had reached her decision. She was glad, too, for Jack's frequent visits had caused her anxiety. She had always looked forward to them and at the same time she had dreaded them. He was so irresistibly boyish in his manner and so flatteringly infatuated that she had always felt the danger. If he had proposed to her without having given her the chance to reflect and think it over she would have probably fallen for him on the spot, but this way-thank goodness he had warned her. Now she had herself well in hand and it would be easy to resist his pleading. She wondered how he would take it. Of course, he would probably feel pretty well cut up at first, but that was natural. Nobody liked getting turned down. It must be a horrid feeling. She was glad that she wasn't a man; no one would ever get the chance to turn her down. Poor old Jack. She would be as gentle and considerate as possible.

Her thoughts ran along as she got into the little pink dress. It was alluring and feminine and accentuated her dark hair and eyes. When Jack saw her a few minutes later he gasped involuntarily, but much to her chagrin he did not propose. And you simply can't say "no" to a man who has not said "will you?" He merely remarked after greetings were over:

"Say, I know a road by the river. I've always wanted to explore it. Shall we take a little spin in the car?"

Janet was slightly irritated. However, there was nothing she could do but consent to the ride, so they got into the little waiting car and were soon hurrying along the highway. The river road was several miles out of town and by the time they reached it crept off into the woods and had given the world over to the moon. Jack slowed down his pace and they moved quietly along the sandy road. Janet had no idea how long they had been driving when Jack stopped the

"Now it's coming," she thought with a little shiver. "He's going to propose right here and now. What shall I say? Goodness, I wish it were over."

But he did nothing of the sort. He said nothing, not a word. He simply took her in his arms and she felt his gentle kisses on her hair. She was hypnotized. She could not resist or utter a word. There was something electrical, magnetic about his touch and her mind whirled around in a chaos of thought. "If only he hadn't brought me here. Thank goodness, he brought me here."

After awhile he spoke. "It'll be tough sledding at first, honey, but we'll get along.'

"Who cares about tough sledding as long as we're together!"

She heard herself saying the words, but still she could not believe her own ears. Then this new Janet said something else with a little lilting laugh: "Jack, I was beginning to be so afraid you wouldn't propose. You took so long to get to it.' As a matter of fact he never did actually get to it, but neither one realized it and just at that second the old dead Janet raised up her head for a last laugh as she chanted derisively: "Little trick nature plays on all of us." But her words were entirely drowned by the voice of Cupid singing. "There is no joy that can touch the joy I give. Sorrow and self-sacrifice may come with it, too, but he has not really lived who has not 66 HAVE no objection to your be-I ing athletic and independent," Caroline's mother spoke slowly, "but doesn't it strike you that you are intolerant of those who have other tastes?

"Maybe so," the girl answered lightly. "But this I know. I am going West to the mountains. I am going to see big strong men who fear nothing and who are of a different breed than those I have known. I am going to escape from the sissies and the highbrows and when I come back I -well, maybe I will have entirely reformed."

Caroline, in the mountain cabin, waited for the hero of the open spaces and the first man she saw, other than old Abe Potter, who with his wife owned the retreat, was Leroy Boone. Boone was tall and slender. He wore nose glasses and spoke in a low voice. Except for his woodsman's clothes he looked like a college man. Caroline was disappointed and yet Leroy was the only man within sight."

"I have been waiting to meet a man of the West," she said, giving him one of her best smiles. "I want to learn all about the customs and people."

"It is probable you will find us much like the men of any other place." He was amused at her enthusiasm.

"You don't understand. I come from a little town in the Fact. I am vigorous and independent, in a place where girls are quiet and ladylike and men are studious and timid. I wish to forget books and science, and live with the trees and the hills. When I meet a man I want him to be a miner, hunter, or even a stage robber. Can't you see?"

The man of the West removed his spectacles, drew out a handkerchief and cleaned the lenses with delibera-

"They don't rob stages out here any more," he said, "and most of the cowboys have gone in the movies." After a moment of deliberation he added. "Maybe, by hunting long enough, I could scare you up a man whose father had been a cattle-rustler?"

"I see," Caroline was offended. "You do not understand. But if life is so unexciting here why are you in the mountains?"

"I might be a tourist like yourself but I'm not. You see I work for the biological survey."

"Mercy that's a queer thing to have in the hills! It means college education and books; that you are a student and not a real wild westerner after all. he brought her a rare flower he had Coleman, deceased, found on the trail and the trai found on the trail and again he smiled oddly when he saw she was not pleased.

"Your western man," he said, "the one you have pictured, would not have picked a flower and carried it so carefully. No-I think he would have been shooting the lights out of a saloon or rescuing a leather-skirted girl from the hands of the villainous foreman of a rival ranch. It's too bad there isn't a motion picture house up here." He went his way, walking leisurely as a man with plenty of

"He's angry because I didn't thank him for his flower," Caroline decided. "Well, as soon as he understands I do not wish biological surveyors bringing me posies, I will be better satisfied. I can see plenty of men like him at, home." And when she returned to the cabin she said nothing to the l'otters of the man who had no place in her picture or scheme.

Several times more the girl met him and at last she admitted to herself there was something in his quiet, almost tolerant manner that attracted her even while it exasperated. But she would not surrender. She had taken the superior attitude and until he proved himself a hero, worthy of his environment, she would continue disdainful. By the time she came to leave they were as well acquainted as the peculiarly strained situation would allow.

"I am sorry you are going," he said, "sorry because I will miss you and because you should stay long enough to get the real values of our West." Was the man going to propose?

And what would she say? Caroline felt suddenly her values had changed and that she was going to miss him. Then came that tantalizing smile and the banter which enraged her. "If I were the sort you have been looking for I would kidnap you, throw you over a horse and take you to the parson. But as it is, I can only "Say good-by," finished Caroline and she hastened to the cabin vow-

As the week grows shorter the temperatures will go lower, but this negative summer status will soon be checked by a warm wave coming out

While we do not look for any great barometric depression to cross the country during the closing days of this week, we anticipate a wave of heat that will reach Michigan about Friday or Saturday. With this change will come showers and electrical storms; also strong winds.

A threatening change to cooler for the early part of next week we do not think will materialize as far east as the Great Lakes, so warm weather will continue through the opening days of next week also.

Resurrection Plant

The Genuine "Rose of Jericho"

These peculiar plants are found among the pines and cedars of Palestine. When you get the plant it will have the appearance of a ball of tightly folded leaflets, dry and dead. Put it in water and it will open up its handsome fern-like foliage, turn greer and begin to grow in about twenty minutes. Take it out of the water and it curls up turns brown and becomes dead again. It is capable of apparently dying and coming to life again repeatedly, and will keep in its dead or dormant state for years and reawaken directly upon being placed in water it is an interesting, curious and most beautiful house plant with fine fern-like leaves of very agreeable fragrance. If you want a "table fern" that will prove satisfactory under all conditions, don't fail to get one of these marvels of plant life. Grows and thrives in a shallow bowl of water, and is greatly admired by everyone. The Genuine "Rose of Jericho"

JACK and JILL

CHAPTER LIII

At sight of Jack Stuart and Tony ustin, the ruddy countenance of rancois Le Tarte went a dirty yellow, "She's fainted. I must get help!"

Then she turned to the hotel manager.
"Will you take me to my husband, great pity surging up within him. "She's fainted. I must get help!"

Clearly the results have a dirty yellow.

Clearly the results and the results are the results and results and results and results and results are the resu Justin, the ruddy countenance of Francois Le Tarte went a dirty yellow, while his eyes took on a panicky look parts of Michigan. There will also like the eyes of a cornered animal. Face to face with the man, Jack Stuart's pent-up feelings overcome him for the moment.

"You dirty cur!" he gritted, holding "What have

But the professor had noticed the federal men, evidently recognized them as officers, and knew himself to be in no immediate danger of a personal attack. He assumed at once an air of injured dignity.

"I don't know what you mean, Jack Stuart," he asserted, with a fine showing of righteous anger, "speaking to me in that manner!"

"Where's th' woman you brought here?" asked Detective Burke, pointblank.

blank.
"I don't admit your right, sir, in asking me such a question!" replied the professor, haughtly.
At this display of bravado Jack Stuart felt himself slipping. What a pretentious fool the fellow was. Could he he such a feel or to think he had he be such a fool as to think he had any chance of bluffing his way out of this? Before Burke had a chance to show the professor his authority, Jack again spoke.

"Where's my wife, Le Tarte?" He shot the question direct. There was no sense in beating about the bush, he told himself. But the professor was prepared, evidently, to meet all queries with straight denial.

"I don't know what you're talking about, Stuart," he said, insolently. "If you've lost your wife it's not my fault!"

"It seems to me a waste of time talking to this fellow!" spoke up the other federal man at this juncture. "I suggest we see the woman and get her statement."

He placed a hand on Professor Le

Tarte's shoulder.
"Bear in mind, young fellow, that we have a warrant for your arrest on a federal charge.''

Jack Stuart, suspicious of the pro fessor's every move, stepped over close to the booth. He heard Le Tarte call Room 330. Then: "Beat it, girl," he heard him say, in a low, distinct tone. "Jack Stuart's here. Also Tony Justin. They've got two dicks f'm federal office. On way up now. Duck quick down the fire-escape! Hurry!"

Jack had started at the first words of Le Tarte to call out to Burke. Then ti occurred to him to wait. The wait was fortunate, as it transpired. As Le Tarte hung up the receiver Jack moved quickly over to Burke's side.

'He was talking to her in Room 330," he swiftly informed the federal man. "Told her I was here with officers and for her to get away down th' fire escape. How'd it be if you three went up with him to th' room, while I intercept her at the bottom of the fire escape?"

Burke nodded. "Go ahead," he said.
Stuart strode across to the desk and spoke to the clerk.

"Where is th' fire escape connecting Room 330 located—on what side of the building?" he asked. "On Fifth street, near th' alley," the clerk told him. At that moment the professor emerged from the booth, noted the distance between himself and the two officers, and made a sudden dash for the stairway. Stuart saw the man's plan and ran to intercept him. He reached the foot of the stairs first, by knew, if he was going to do any good at that fire escape. To reach the spot by way of the street he would have to travel half a block on the main street and the same distance on Fifth. He knew there must be a rear exit, and started to locate it.

Luck favored him. He found the door opening into the alley. As he stepped out into the dimly lighted place and looked toward Fifth street, he could just distinguish the skeleton-like structure of the fire escape. Scarcely 30 yards divided him from where the fire escape's first story frame work hung suspended some eight feet in the air. He covered the distance with a cautious movement, and again looked up. Suddenly a form was outlined in the window opening from the third story. He saw it for an instant, and then it vanished in the darkness enveloping the structure.

Only the creaking of the iron stairs told him some one was descending. Just the thought of who that someone was sent the blood pounding through the veins in Jack Stuart's brain.

"God!" he whispered, as he waited in the dread suspense of the intervening seconds before he must dis-close himself to her. What an experi-ence for a man! Oh, it couldn't be possible! This must be a horrible nightmare from which he'd awake.

But it wasn't any nightmare. was real, too real, as he was to realize very shortly. Then he heard the clank of the frame work as it was released and dropped down within a foot of the ground. Before Jack Stuart could speak Nita Ravelle had turned to the federal men and was talking.

"If you men are officers," she said, and her tongue worked fast, "I beg you to protect me against this man—" flashing a vindictive look toward the still dazed Jack. "I had to run away from my apartments in Elliston to escape his attentions and threats. When my husband telephoned me a few min-utes ago that he was here, I knew my only safety was in keeping out of his sight. He is insane, I am sure!" She told it all with such apparent earnestness, and everything she said so fitted in with the circumstances, his assault on Le Tarte, and his dazed appearance at the moment, that both federal men and the hotel manager were quite sure Mr. Stuart was too dangerous a person to be at large.

And Jack further strengthened this opinion by his attempt to clear himself and explain his actions.

"You know there's not a word of truth in that statement, Nita Ravelle! he exclaimed, letting his temper again overcome his judgment. "You know very well you're not Le Tarte's wife—"

"Well, I'm not your wife, am I?" she cut in, swiftly.
"No, you're not my wife," he replied, "but you telephoned me that" "I refuse to parley any longer with you!" she again interrupted, and was easy for him to figure out her part in the kidnaping affair. What or fireplace, his health would benefit, names he called himself for his childish gullability regarding her. His belief in the lady had finally landed him

The restoration of that posted nim to be careful how he talked. The whole thing had been planned to mislead him. Seeing the registration at the G— hotel in W—, of "Professor Le Tarte and wife," he would naturally think it was Jill with the professor. Where the plot had missed was her failure to escape from the fire escape. Had she got away the fire escape. Had she got away he would still have supposed it was Jill, and when he couldn't find her, he would have returned to Elliston, where Nita would have been awaiting him with consolation.

But the scheme didn't work as planned. She knew the game was up, and then, true to form, she wanted to hurt him. Would she appear against him? No, he was sure she would not. Nita Ravelle would just disappear. Or, would she?

This was the question that agitated Jack Stuart's mind, as he waited, hour after hour of the following forenoon, for some action in the case. It was almost 1 o'clock when a turnkey opened his cell.

'You're wanted in the chief's office," he informed Jack, and the latter followed his conductor out and up the stairs into a large room.

And here the universe turned over for Jack Stuart. He had scarcely entered the room when his gaze became fixed on a face less than five feet Then a short, hysterical sob away. struck on his ear, and the next moment a pair of arms were flung around his neck.
"Jack, Jack!" the voice was crying

"Poor Jack" crushed the sobbing girl to him with a force that must have cracked a rib under less exciting circumstances.

It was Jill he had in his arms! How she came to be there was of no consequence just then. The mere fact was nd dropped down within a 100t of the ground. A moment later he saw the silhouetted form against the lights in the streets as it gained the bottom of the structure. He reached up and aught her in his arms.

A stiffed scream, a twisting attempt once more to Burke.

You!" she again interrupted, and turned once more to Burke.

to revert to normal, he saw Mike Sweeney and Pat and Peter and Tony. Then came the explanations.

Tony, it seemed, had sent a long telegram to Mike immediately after Jack's arrest the night before, outlining the whole story of Nita's plot and her charge against Jack. This telegram had reached Mike about an hour before Jill had called her up from her father's house, to which she had just returned from Pittsburgh, whither she had gone to renew her dancing con-

Mike immediately read the message to Jill over the wire. Twenty minutes later Jill and Dad Peter were at the Sweeney home and 30 minutes from their arrival the four, Pat, Peter, Jill and Mike, had started in the big limousine for Cleveland, to rescue Jack from the clutches of the law. The six Ellistonians sat at dinner

Then it was that Pat Sweeney

"Oh, dear!" gasped Jill, with an almost melancholy snake of her pretty bobbed head, "I hope to goodness that it doesn't bring another bundle of 'Easy Money'!"

"Don't worry, my dear," said Jack, patting her hand affectionately. "We've learned our lesson, and Easy Money' hereafter, will mean just 'Easy Living' for all of us."

(THE END)

How to Enjoy Vacation

The joke about the need of resting up from vacation is becoming hoary. However, it is not altogether a joke, especially as concerns children. To the small child in the first days after the close of school, in the first days at farm or summer resort, there is danger of over-fatigue. Exhilarated by his new freedom and by the novelty of release from school, the child is apt to play too hard, to exercise too violently, and to find himself in a short time in a state of exhaustion. Exhaustion leads to irritability and to a lowering of resistance that may be distinctly injurious.

The vacation is designed to so build up the child during the months of summer sunshine that he may better endure the strain of the cloudy months of winter. If, instead, he plunges into an orgy of play which results in exhaustion of his physical and nervous energy he will be unfit for the school months to follow. A succession of such summers and such winters will bring him to manhood with definitely depleted energy, with a relative unfitness for the burdens that will come to him with mature

USED CARS

Our policy in selling used cars is just what you would hope. When you buy a car that has passed from the hands of its first owner, you would like to be sure of two things: First, you want to know, of course, that the used car you buy has a generous amount of unused mileage in it. Second, you hope you are not being charged for an excessive trade in allowance the dealer may have made in order to sell a new car. In short, that you are paying just what the used car is worth Regarding the price of the used cars we offer, you can be certain there has been no inflation to care for excessive trade-in allowances, The new Ford car is priced right--so close to the cost of production and selling there is no mar gin, or leeway, for unreasonable trade-in concessions.

For these reasons it is worth your while to come to us when you are thinking of buying a used car. Nearly always we have a generous selection. Come in and look over the following bargains in used cars.
