Under Act of Congress, only those are awarded Medals of Honor who perform deeds of bravery when in action, and probably most of these escape notice and so few receive these medals to which they are entitled and others who perform actions as great in other branches of warfare receive little or no recognition publicly for the important work they accomplish.

An instance we have in mind is the case of our friend and former neighbor, Elias Nash.

He, with many others now gone was active in service during the Civil war and did well his part. His Major, James G. MacBride reports an incident near Solomon Grove, N. C. ### GARDEN CLUBS PLAN PROGRAM FOR MIDWEST

What the middle western states will be more than made up in artistic landscaping somewhat after the fashion of rural England, if the Garden Club of Illinois succeeds in a program just announced by Mrs. Frederick Fisher of Lake Bluff, Ill., president of the club.

The club plans an educational program throughout the middle western states, the object of which will be to have every home and apartment owner plan his property along artistic lines no matter whether his property as in the heart of a big city or along a country lane.

As an initial step in this program Garden and Flower Show to be heid at the mammoth Chicago stadium, milk April 4 to 13, 1930. The stadium, only recently completed by Patrick T. Harmon and associates, is the largest indoor arena in the world. It is to be transformed into a veritable fairyand of gardens and flower beds, country lanes and shaded walks, with exhibits from every state in the middle west and some from California and New England.

"We have already held three successful flower shows," Mrs. Fisher pointed out, "but never before have we had such an opportunity as will be offered in using the Chicago stadium. The opportunities for exhibits of all kinds, including the giant spectacles, could not possibly be surpassed in any other building.

"The show will be under the direction and management of John A. Servas, who already has established offices in the stadium to work out the multitude of details connected with such an undertaking, including the filing of entries which already are being received. Mr. Harmon and his associates of the stadium have promised the necessary financial support to make the show a complete success.

Mrs. Fisher then explained something of the magnitude of the club's program for beautification.

"The middle western states," she We have have great natural forest and the organic soils, muck and peats. lands, beautiful lakes, and lovely Light soils which are too droughty streams. We have cities which are unsurpassed anywhere for achitectural beauty and Chicago, with its tremendous new building program and its magnificent parks and boulevard system, is the natural center and lead er in this development.

"But the middle west is lacking in mountains, which are ever an appealing factor to tourists. And so to offset this one great lack, the Garden Club of Illinois proposes to make the landscape of the great central states a thing of such rare beauty and perfection that globe trotters from all over the world will be told by ali means, don't fail to drive through the middle west of America and see the beautiful gardens, country lanes, and public highways.'

"To do this, we must educate the great mass of home owners to the newant every man, woman and child to needed. sense the exquisite beauties of nature and to bring those beauties to War Is Started their homes and apartment buildings.

"That is the reason for the Central States Garden and Flower Show, and we anticipate that its influence for beauty will extend to all parts of the middle west so that our great central states will achieve something of lasting fame."

Whitewash Cow Stable Once or Twice a Year

It's a good plan to whitewash the cow stable once or twice a year. Good whitewash may be made with only lime and water. Ordinary hydrated lime may be mixed with water; or lump lime may be slacked with a minimum amount of water and then more water added to bring the whitewash to a proper consistency.

Only freshly burned lump lime should be used, and any that is air slacked should be discarded, as whitewash made from such lime will not stick. If the floor is kept wet while the whitewashing is being done, it will be easier to remove any that may be dropped on the floor.

The main value in the moist mash is that it is especially palatable to the hens and will keep them eating more food at a time when their appetite is likely to lag. In addition to the moist mash it is suggested that dry mash be kept continually before the hens. The moist mash is not a substitute but merely a means of getting the hens to eat more food.

The Johnson Oil company, Chicago, with about $1,500,000 invested in their well and other property in the Muskegon area, has obtained about 700 acres in leases in the vicinity of Allegan. The Read Oil company, represented here by L. L. Linton, is also adding to the many hundreds of leases secured.

Linton states his company will soon begin to drill a well. Charles Weny, who owns the property on which a well was sunk years ago and which was plugged up after oil was struck, has been asked to place a price on his holdings.

Ferry 125,000 Cars This Year Over Straits

One hundred and twenty-five thousand automobiles will be ferried over the straits of Mackinac this year, says the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau News.

That is the confident expectation of vehicles carried was over 1,300, and the gain in receipts was over $3,000. The estimated increase in receipts for June over last year was $5,000.

Ferry officials are watching with interest the progress of the four tourist bureaus in their membership cam-paigns. "The success of these efforts will undoubtedly have a good effect on ferry receipts at the straits," said one official. "If the bureaus can realize to the fullest extent the financial aid offered them by the state, the latter's investment should be returned in large measure to the state treasury through increased traffic at this

The Mackinaw city and the Straits of Mackinac were in commission throughout the month of June. it is believed that at least as many enter there as across the straits. If Eaton county at least would ever again the estimate is correct, it means that be taken in on this swindle. Several over a quarter of a million cars will in all probability enter and leave the peninsula this year.

In addition to the above, 40,000 cars came into the United States last year via the St. Mary's river ferry at Sault Ste. Marie. Of these, approximately 17,000 bore a Canadian license. Many of them were undoubtedly short trippers, but other thousands came here for a more or less were passing through from east to west in the Dominion, traveling the length of the peninsula length of the peninsula.

It will thus be seen that an estimate of 165,000 cars coming into the peninsula this year is probably a safe one. Of these, 62,500 will enter at the straits; the same number will come through the western gateways, and 40,000 will enter by way of Canada.

Our tourist traffic is developing into a gigantic business. Competent observers, however, believe that it has no more than started. Many counts have established the average number of persons in each car as 3.6. It is thus apparent that the upper peninsula will entertain more than half a million visitors this year, a number considerably in excess of its own pop ulation.

This number is apparently increasng at the rate of over 100,000 yearly. But little imagination is necessary to forecast the day not far away when Hiawathaland will greet a million guests annually. The prophecy is not at all a fantastic one.

May traffic cording to the sheriff's department. was approximately one-third heavier Root, widely known farmer of Chester township, who paid a pair of strangers $1,000 in cash for an alleged operation on his eyes.

Root at first offered the crooks some shares of a prominent stock for the treatment, but they declined to accept them, saying they worked only on a straight cash basis. Then, according to the officers, Root took the men to one of the banks in Charlotte, obtained the cash on a $1,000 Liberty bond and turned it over to them. That was the last he saw of them.

This transaction occurred May 23. The men told Root, whose farm is located on M-50, they would return later, but as they did not show up, he reported the circumstances to the officers about a month after the crime was committed. The officers decided perhaps the strangers would come back as they had said, and by keeping the story out of the papers there now it is nearly two months since they did the job.

TWO ADDED TO PROF. WHITE'S STAFF AT "U"

Increased research work for industries has made necessary the appointment of Dr. John Chipman and John D. Strong to the staff of the department of engineering research of the University of Michigan, according to a statement issued by Prof. A. E. White, director of the department.

Dr. Chipman began his work on Aug. 1 and is devoting his time to a study of steel melting practice for one of the largest steel industries of the country. He will come to the University of Michigan from the Georgia School of Technology, where he has served as assistant professor of chemistry since 1924. During the two years previous to that he filled a similar post at Illinois Wesleyan. Dr. Chipman took his bachelor of science degree at the University of the South in 1920, his master's degree at the State University of Iowa in 1922 and the degree of doctor of philosophy at the University of California in 1926. He will take the rank of associate investigator in the department of engineering research.

Mr. Strong, who began his official connection with the department as assistant investigator in the middle of June, received the degree of master of science at the University of Michigan last year, and has since that time been working for his doctor's degree in physics, specializing in the field of obsorption spectra. His research work for the department will take the form of a study of pyrometer practice, this work, like Dr. Chipman's, being done in the interests of one of the large steel industries.

QUITE SO

By THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICK

Of course that was not his name. Even in the state of Maine, where it is a custom to maim a child for life by christening him Arioch or Shadrach or Ephraim, nobody would dream of calling a boy "Quite So." It was merely a nickname which we gave him in camp; but it stuck to him with such burr-like tenacity, and is so inseparable from my memory of him, that I do not think I could write definitely of John Bladburn if I were to call him anything but "Quite So."

It was one night shortly after the rst battle of Bull Run. The Army of the Potomac, shattered, stunned, for-lorn, was back in its old quarters behind the earth-works. The melancholy line of ambulances bearing wounded to Washington was not done creeping ever Long Bridge; the blue smocks and the gray still lay in windrows on the field of Manassas; and the gloom that weighed down hearts was like the fog that stretched along the bosom of the Potomac, and infolded the valley of the Shenandoah. A drizzling rain had set in at twilight, and, growing bolder with the darkness, was beating a dismal tattoo on the tentthe tent of Mess 6, Company A. —th Regiment, N. Y. Volunteers. Our mess, consisting originally of eight was reduced to four. Little Billy, as one of the boys grimly remarked, had concluded to remain at Manassas; Corporal Steele we had to leave at Fairfax Court House, shot through the hip; Hunter and Suydam we had said good-bye to that aftermoon. "Tell Johnny Reb," says Hunter, lifting up the leather sidepiece of the ambulance, "that I'll be back again as soon as I get a new leg." But Suydam said nothing; he only unclosed his eyes languidly and smiled farewell

The four of us who were left alive and unhurt that shameful July day sat gloomily smoking our briar-wood pipes, thinking our thoughts and listening to the rain pattering against the canvas. That, and the occasional whine of a hungry cur, foraging on the outskirts of the camp for a stray bone, alone broke the silence, save when a vicious drop of rain detached itself meditatively from the ridge-pole of the tent, and fell upon the wick of our tallow candle, making it "cuss." as Ned Strong described it. The candle was in the midst of one of its most profane fits when Blakely, knocking the ashes from his pipe and addressing no one in particular, but giving breath unconsciously as it were, to the result of his cogitations, observed that "it was considerable of a fizzle."
"The 'on to Richmond' business?"
"Yes."

"I wonder what they'll do about it over yonder," said Curtis, pointing over his right shoulder. By "over yonder" he meant the North in general and Massachusetts especially. Curtis was a Boston boy, and his sense of locality was so strong that, during all his wanderings in Virginia, I do not believe there was a moment, day or night, when he could not have made a bee-line for Faneuil Hall.
"Do about it?" cried Strong.

When Strong had succeeded in restoring the candle to consciousness, the light fell upon a tall, shy-looking man of about thirty-five, with long, hay-colored beard and mustache, upon which the rain-drops stood in clusters, like the night-dew on patches of cob-web in a meadow. sirable things to them. Roll call morning and evening, guard duty, dress parades, an occasional reconnoissance, dominos, wrestling matches, and such rude games as could be carried on in camp made up the sum of our lives. The arrival of the mail with letters and papers from home was the event of the day. We noticed that Bladburn neither wrote nor received any letters. When the rest of the boys were scribbling away for dear life, with drum-heads and knapsacks and cracker boxes for writing desks, he would sit serenely smoking his pipe, but looking out on us through rings of smoke with a face us through rings of smoke with a face at the tent; and we all cheered and looked higher for Mary than a middle-and looked higher for Ma

"In the first place,' 'reflected Strong, "I haven't the heart to do it, and in the next place I haven't the moral courage. Quite So would placidly break every bone in my body." And believe Strong was not far out of

"Trust you left the old folks pretty comfortable?"

And yet, was he a simple-hearted country fellow? City bred he certainly was not; but his manner, in spite of his awkwardness, had an indescribable air of refinement. Now and then, too, he dropped a word or a phrase that showed his familiarity with unexpect-ed lines of reading. "The other day," said Curtis, with the slightest eleva-tion of the eyebrows, "he had the cheek to corerct my Latin for me." In short, Quite So was a daily problem to the members of Mess 6. "Thou he did run on!"

The next morning, when I opened the mean by eternally conning that tating grammar? And was his treed Latin grammar was h have gone by—as they go by in dreams—and among the scholars is a tall girl of sixteen, with serious, womanly eyes which I cannot trust myself to look upon. The old life has come to an end. The child has become a woman and can teach the master now. So help me Heaven, I didn't know that I loved her until that day!

"Long after the children had gone home I sat in the schoolroom with my —that he had been a schoolmaster some period of his life.

"Schoolmaster be hanged!" was Strong's comment. "Can you fancy a schoolmaster going about conjugating baby verbs out of a dratted little by the low chair, as I had stood hundreds of times. On the desk was a mile of books, ready to be taken away, and among the rest a small Latin grammar which we had studied to-gether. What little despairs and triumphs and happy hours were associated with it! I took it up curiously, as ly see them. Turning the pages, idly so, I came to a leaf on which some-Uning was written in ink, in the familiar girlish hand. It was only the words 'Dear John,' through which she had drawn two hasty pencil lines-I wish she hadn't drawn those lines!' added Bladburn, under his breath.

He was silent for a minute or two, looking off toward the camps, where the lights were fading out one by one.
"I had no right to go and love
Mary. I was twice her age, an awkward, unsocial man, that would have blighted her youth. I was as wrong as wrong can be. But I never meant to tell her. I locked the grammar in my desk and the secret in my heart for a year. I couldn't bear to meet her in the village, and kept away from every place where she was likely to be. Then she came to me, and sat down at my feet penitently, just as she used to do when she was a child, and asked what she had done to anger me; and then, Heaven forgive me! I told her all, and asked her if she could say with her lips the words she had writ ten, and she nestled in my arms all a trembling like a bird, and said them

"When Mary's family heard of our engagement, there was trouble. They aged schoolmaster. No blame to them. They forbade me the house, her red oak, persimmon and chestnut. The that day when the company raised in there were tears on the weather-night before we struck tents I climbed our village marched by the school-up to the crest to take a parting look house to the railroad station; but I side, but a tender heart. became great friends. He was a likely fellow, near her own age, and it was John' was written up in the corner, and my trouble was gone. Mary was sorrowful and pale these days, and I think her people were worrying her.

> Run. I had gone to the burying-ground to trim the spruce hedge set around the old man's lot, and was just stepping into the enclosure, when I heard voices from the opposite side. One was Mary's, and the other I knew to be young Marston's, the minister's son. I didn't mean to listen, but what Mary was saying struck me dumb. We must never meet again, she was saying in a wild way. We must say good-bye here, forever—good-bye good-bye! And I could hear her sobbing. Then, presently, she said, nurriedly, No, no; my hand, not my lips! Then it seemed he kissed her hands, and the two parted, one going towards the parsonage and the other out by the gate near where I stood.

> "I don't know how long I stood there, but the night-dews had wet me to the bone when I stole out of the graveyard and across the road to the schoolhouse. I unlocked the door and took the Latin grammar from the desk and hid it in my bosom. There was not a sound or a light anywhere as I walked out of the village. And now," said Bladburn, rising suddenly from the tree trunk, "if the little book ever falls in your way, won't you see that it comes to no harm, for my sake, and for the sake of the little woman who was true to me and didn't love me? Wherever she is tonight, God bless her!"

As we descended to camp with our arms resting on each other's shoulder, The words gave me a queer start, the watch fires were burning low in for I had been trying several days to the valleys and along the hillsides, and as far as the eye could reach the silent tents lay bleaching in the moonlight.

We imagined that the throwing forward of our brigade was the initial movement of a general advance of the army; but that, as the reader will remember, did not take place until the following March. The Confederates had fallen back to Centreville without firing a shot, and the National troops were in possession of Lewinsville, Vienna and Fairfax Court House. Our new position was nearly identical with that which we had occupied on the night previous to the battle of Bull Run—on the old turnpike road to Manassas, where the enemy was supposed to be in great force. fieldglass we could see the Rebel pickets moving in a belt of woodland on our right, and morning and evening we heard the spiteful roll of their snare drums.

Those pickets soon became a nuisance to us. Hardly a night passed but they fired upon our outposts, so far with no harmful result; but after a while it grew to be a serious matter. The Rebels would crawl out on all fours from the woods into a field covered with underbrush, and lie there in the dark hours, waiting for a shot. Then our men took to the rifle-pits—pits ten or twelve feet long by four or five feet deep, with the loose earth banked up a few inches high on the exposed sides. All the pits bore names, more or less felicitous, by which they were known to their transient tenants. One was called "The Pepper Box," another "Uncle Sam's Well," another "The Reb Trap" and another, I am constrained to say, was named after a not to be mentioned tropical locality.

Some of the regiment had discovered a field of late corn in the neighborhood, and used to boil a few ears every day, while it lasted, for the boys detailed on the night picket. The corn cobs were always scrupulously preserved and mounted on the parapets of the pits. Whenever a Rebel shot carried away one of these barbette guns, there was swearing in that par-ticular trench. Strong, who was very sensitive to this kind of disaster, was complaining bitterly one morning because he had lost three "pieces" the night before.

"There's Quite So, now," said
Strong, "when a Minie-ball comes Ping! and knocks one of his guns to flinders, he merely smiles and doesn't at all see the degradation of the Poor Bladburn! As I watched him day by day going about his duties, in his shy, cheery way, with a smile for every one and not an extra word for anybody, it was hard to believe he was the same man who that night before we broke camp by the Potomac had poured out to me the story of his love and sorrow in words that burned in my memory.

While Strong was speaking Blakely lifted aside the flap of the tent and looked in on us.

"Boys, Quite So was hurt last night," he said, with a white tremor to his lips.
"What!"

'Shot on picket."

"Why, he was in the pit next to mine," cried Strong. "Badly hurt?"
"Badly hurt."

I knew he was; I need not have asked the question. He never meant to go back to New England!

Bladburn was lying on the stretcher in the hospital tent. The surgeon had knelt down by him, and was carefully cutting away the bosom of his blouse The Latin grammar, stained and torn, slipped and fell to the floor. Bladburn gave me a quick glance. I picked up the book, and as I placed it in his hand, the icy fingers closed softly over mine. He was sinking fast. In a few "I believe not today," Bladburn Rising abruptly from the plateau, to would reply, as if he had written yesterday, or would write tomorrow; but hill covered with a stunted growth of after the old flag, and I hung my head amination. "My poor lad," he blurted out, "it's no use. If you've anything to say, say it now, for you've nearly done with this world."

Then Bladburn lifted his eyes slowly to the surgeon, and the old smile flitted over his face as he murmured:

(The End)

WEEK OF AUGUST 11

The early days of the week of Auust 11 in Michigan promises to be generally fair.

Temperatures during Sunday and Monday will be close to the seasonal normal, but by Tuesday will have risen somewhat.

During the middle days of this week there will be increasing storminess with a consequent rise in temperature. With the change to lower barometric pressure there will be storms of rain and wind. These may be of more or less local character, but will be somewhat severe where they do Storm conditions will last through the closing days of the week, but temperatures will show a marked change. In fact, readings of the thermometer will register normal to below in most parts of the state during Friday and Saturday.

At the end of the week there will till be storm conditions prominent throughout the state, but we believe there will not be as much rain as earlier in the week, although winds will be strong.

Best Time This Week For farming-Aug. 11 and 12 from :40 to 11 a. m.
